Drivers Set Vote On Bus Contract

HARTFORD (AP) — Bus drivers and mechanics of the Connecticut Co. will vote today and Sunday on a contract settlement which could avert a bus strike scheduled to begin at midnight Sunday in three of the state's largest cities.

The tentative agreement with the Amalgamated Transit Union, AFL-CIO, was reached Friday night and union leaders recommended that the drivers and mechanics accept the pact.

Terms of the agreement were not revealed. Union members in Hartford will vote at 7 tonight and members in New Haven and Stamford are scheduled to vote Sunday.

The negotiating session Friday was called by federal and state mediators after the contract talks had broken down Thursday without settlement.

Earlier Friday, Gov. Thomas J. Meskill had scheduled a meeting at the State Capitol for this afternoon with representatives of the Connecticut Conference of Mayors. There was no immediate word on whether those talks would result in a settlement.

The governor also had ordered the state Transportation Department to begin preparations for a possible court injunction to stop the strike, said Atty. Gen. Robert K. Killian.

"We shouldn't give any false hopes to the public that some miracle is going to take place. We can't stop the strike," Killian said.

Union leaders also said there is no legal basis for an injunction against the union.

The 10-day battle for Ham-burger Hill on the western edge of the A Shau Valley in May cost the 101st Airborne heavy casualties and stirred a controversy in the U.S. Congress. The assault on the hill was spearheaded by the 3rd Battalion, 18th Infantry, the division which stood down today.

The U.S. Command said 1,500 troops of the 101st were pulled out of combat in today's initial phase and stood down in preparation to phase out of the northern battle some below the demilitarized zone.

But some of the men won't be going home. Only those who have completed the major portion of their 12-month tour of duty or are being discharged early will return to the United States. Others will be transferred to U.S. units still active in South Vietnam.

The first units to stand down included the headquarters of the division's 3rd Brigade and an infantry battalion, the 3rd Battalion, 18th Infantry; and an artillery battalion, the 2nd Battalion, 319th Field Artillery.

The U.S. Command also announced the phaseout of four other units outside of the 101st Division which will cut strength by another 400 men. These included an air defense artillery battalion and three engineer companies.

President Nixon has ordered U.S. troop strength cut by 45,000 men over the next two months to an authorized ceiling of 139,000 by the end of January.

The 101st was not scheduled to begin phasing out until early next year, but its schedule was moved up after Nixon announced a week ago that he was increasing the rate of withdrawals from 14,300 a month to 22,300 a month for December and January because of Christmas and New Year's holidays.

The latest available summary of U.S. weekly strength, as of Nov. 11, lists 138,300 American troops in Vietnam. A new summary will be issued Monday.

U.S. strength in Vietnam dropped below the 184,000 ceiling Nixon set for the end of this month.

Sources said that while the 101st has been phasing out, it likely will be early next year before the entire 15,000-man division completes the move.

The start of the pullout of the 101st comes at a time when there is a reported buildup in the A Shau Valley near the Laotian border and to the north of the valley, a vast region that the division once patrolled.

More than 8,000 Cambodian troops oppose the two North Vietnamese regiments just to the west of the capital. An Rng ruled out the use of South Vietnamese allies near the capital.

Cambodian forces launched two new clearing operations north and south of Phnom Penh in efforts to ease North Vietnamese pressure on the capital.

At the same time, military headquarters reported 60 Cambodian troops killed in the first two days of a third drive on Phnom Penh's western outskirts. The Cambodian command claimed 100 North Vietnamese troops were killed.

The new operations are centred on a 20 km. stretch of the command's chief spokesman said that a South Vietnamese thrust into enemy bases along Highway 1 and 7 in eastern Cambodia would help ease the pressure on Cambodian forces near Phnom Penh and on the northeastern front.

Informants returning from the border area said that some Saigon forces already had been moved from Mekong Delta in South Vietnam across the border into Cambodia.

South Viets Poise Near Cambodia

By ROBIN MANNOCK PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Thousands of South Vietnamese troops and armed vehicles were seen marching through Cambodia's border areas today, poised for a possible attack against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong bases.

The Cambodian command's chief spokesman said earlier in the day that a South Vietnamese thrust into enemy bases along Highway 1 and 7 in eastern Cambodia would help ease the pressure on Cambodian forces near Phnom Penh and on the northeastern front.

Informants returning from the border area said that some Saigon forces already had been moved from Mekong Delta in South Vietnam across the border into Cambodia.

Monastery Scrutinized By British

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops carried out new searches today around a Roman Catholic monastery following the arrest of two of its monks on charges of sheltering guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army.

The British first searched the monastery at Portlengua, 30 miles northwest of Belfast, on Friday but found nothing.

Leaders of the Trappist monastery said they had no complaints about the search.

But Ivan Cooper, a Protestant member of Northern Ireland's Parliament who sits for the mainly Catholic Social Democratic party, assailed the search operations.

"It was sacrilege to carry out an operation like that in the name of the law," he said.

Meakill promised state funds to help keep the buses running, but only on the condition that the cities served by the Connecticut Co. share in the total costs. Municipal officials have said they do not have any money to help the company.

BURGHOPFEN (AP) — The Connecticut Railway and Lighting Co., another major Connecticut utility, has announced it will end passenger service on its line between New Britain and Waterbury areas.

Paul A. Rust, CRAL president, said in a letter to the town's Friday, "We have no desire to cease bus operations, but we must do so without government financial aid."

Rust said his company, which carries 26,000 passengers daily, is losing 500,000 a year "and we just can't continue doing this without speedy subsidies."

Hundreds of philatelists waited in a dozen lines to go deep Friday to make first-day purchases of a commemorative stamp issued by the U.S. Postal Administration.

The $1.95 stamp, more than 30 times the regular assessment for all but eight member nations, was used to reduce the total amount of money the United Nations sought through assessments.

"You never can tell how much these may be worth some day," a neatly dressed man said after purchasing about $50 worth of stamps.

He put some stamps on first-day envelopes and set others aside in clusters of six. "No, I'm not a dealer, I'm a collector, but I can't talk any more now—I've got work to do," he said.

Buyers could take stamps on envelopes to tables, where U.N. postal workers hand-cancelled the stamps. Many then used blotters that were provided to keep from smudging the ink.

The new stamp, the eighth and last U.N. issue this year, shows a painting of Picasso's daughter Mala, then a child, watching a winter's first storm.

The stamp is available in three denominations—8 cents, 21 cents (the basic rate for most U.S. overseas mail), and a Swiss franc amount equivalent to 28 U.S. cents.

Senate Sets Vote Date On Campaign Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has broken its deadlock over a bitterly controversial presidential campaign-financing plan and agreed Monday as the day to vote whether to let it to the $27 billion tax-cut bill.

Republican leader Hugh Scott made the proposal Friday night for a Monday vote and won the acceptance of his Republican and Democratic colleagues.

It would be particularly attractive to Democrats, who have had many problems since the 1968 election.

The Senate in the fund would come from taxpayer checkoffs designating an income tax return to get a Senate rejection.

Democrats continued to insist they had the votes to tie the plan to the tax bill which is a key part of President Nixon's economic program.

He declared they were voting for a "dash fund" which could benefit them personally and that speakers would be out in the campaign "going from one end of this country to the other and pointing out this colossal interest."

"All this does," he shouted, "is to bail out a political party from its own shortcomings and from its inability to raise its own funds."

Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., chief sponsor of the plan, said Scott's remarks were "pure baloney."

Scott, in proposing his agreement to vote late Monday, took another shot at various Democratic senators contending for the presidential nomination.

Nixon Cancels Weekend Rest

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon canceled his weekend rest and returned to the White House for a group photograph.

The youth asked Nixon after the ball, "Could you come to the Kennedy Center for Performing Arts to attend a performance by the Classical Ballet of Cincinnati and pose with our class?"

Nixon said he was sorry he couldn't, but if the class would like to bring his class to the White House for a group photograph.

The Advertising Was Honest... What happens when an honest product is erroneously accused of being dangerous?

There is now another answer to this question in the news.

A year ago, the Federal Communications Commission preferred a charge against Du Pont, as manufacturer of an anti-freeze product, making the allegation that the company's television commercial demonstrating the product was not, as represented, "evidence which actually proves that Zerex will stop leaks which actually occur in automotive cooling systems under normal operating conditions."

Du Pont denied the charge, and continued to use the commercials in question several times by a sharp retortment, with each hole soon closing itself.

What has now happened, a year after the FCC leveled its original charge, is this: The Commission dropped its charge, with the following announcement: "This charge was withdrawn because in the Commission's judgment the demonstration was accurate and not deceptive."

While bending itself into such a semblance of apology, the FCC still persists in a claim that the product was marketed by Du Pont with intent to defame, really knowing it might not damage automobile cooling systems. But it does not carry forward with its original effort to have Du Pont include any warning of such possible danger in its advertising.

In this connection, the Commission says that it "has insufficient evidence at the present time that Zerex as formulated subsequent to the initial marketing of the product, is capable of causing damage to automotive cooling systems."

We pay attention to this instance of delayed justice, of a sort, because we are convinced that one whiff of suspicion, as contained in the Federal Communications Commission original charges, has a terrible advantage, for spreading itself and creating a lasting impression, over what may have been, all along, honest producing and honest advertising.

The business of guarding the public interest is a sacred obligation which ought not to be abused, either by governmental authorities or by volunteer crusaders.

A Broadminded Pair... When Mayor John Lindsay, who hasn't been able to run New York City, spent 42 minutes the other day with Mayor Richard J. Daley, who does run Chicago, there was no particular pretense that they were getting together in order to compare notes on the problems of municipal government.

Rather, it was to be presumed that Mayor Lindsay had no rather wishful possibilities in mind. First, how could he possibly learn to control Democratic National Convention delegates from New York as Mayor Daley controls them from Illinois?

Second, if Mayor Lindsay can't get delegates from New York, how would Mayor Daley like to give him some from Illinois?

Such political questions may remain unanswered, but unanswerable.

But one thing the duration of the meeting has already done. It has testified to the broad-mindedness of both men.

Civilization

Over in what sometimes seems to have been the original nursery for man, in Kenya, archaeologists have now uncovered what seems to have been the first really sophisticated stone tool, made by somebody, it is estimated, about 2,000,000 years ago.

The discovery of this tool, with a carefully flaked cutting edge, leads to the conclusion that the human beings living there, at that time, were "far more competent than we give them credit for."

Over in France the other day—France being sometimes thought of as the great center for the archeologist of man as a highly civilized being—the government auctioned off, to a private bidder, a formidable concrete and steel fortress which was part of a thing called the Maginot Line.

The Maginot Line doesn't know what he will do with it, but he may just leave it there, for the archeologist of some future age to discover and marvel upon.

Over in China, the other day, — China being renowned as the place in the world which had a highly developed civilization ahead of most other localities, and which proved it by inventing gunpowder — that nation's military scientists exploded another nuclear bomb, the sharp-edged top of our generation, the marvel for military offense the Maginot Line was once supposed to be for military defense.

The same genius which put an edge on the tool in Africa, which designed the concrete bastions in France, and which has now produced the capacity for nuclear explosion by the United States, Britain, France, Russia, and China, has other chapters of new accomplishment ahead of itself, we may be confident of that.

There is, however, one question which keeps floating along, from one age to another.

In our genus working for, or against, a civilization? Who was happiest, the fellow who finally got an edge on that stone, or the scientist who first saw the mushroom over the desert? Or the fellow who paid $2,400 for a huge bunker in the Maginot Line and who may move into it and try to hide the thing out?

An Example Of Decency... Senator Edward Kennedy provided a fine example of fundamental decency the other day in cutting off a left-wing amendment directed by someone Court nominee William H. Rehnquist.

Clarence Mitchell and Joseph L. Rauh Jr. were representatives of the Leadership Conference on civil rights before the Senate Judiciary Committee. The purpose of the exercise was that they disagreed with some positions Mr. Rehnquist had taken in the past, and to incant the litany about this meaning the nomination was an "insult" and "the foot of racism is placed in the door of the temple of freedom."

It happened that the night before, a talk-show guest some place had accused the Rev. Martin Luther King of being a member of that group. This had not at all pleased Mr. Rehnquist, and he said the latter, "What of all the possible relations sort of membership?" Mr. Rehnquist was flabbergasted.

"Your suggestion is completely unwarranted and uncalled for," Senator Kennedy said. "I am flabbergasted."

Senator Kennedy clearly recognizes that smug tactics can be used on both sides of the ideological fence. Such tactics, in fact, come with particular ill grace from those who see themselves as special guardians of civil liberties. From those who would be most outraged if the tables were turned. If, say, someone objected that a nominee's affidavit denying Communist Party membership did not cover all the possibilities, no doubt Mr. Rauh would be not merely flabbergasted but appalled.

Southern California's Hollywood Hills are fine mountains, lovely. But stand down on one of the streets below and look back up at them. They are covered with houses that do not look either significant or appealing from any distance, and the hills are gone. From the hills you see the bustle, filling up residentially with immense ghastly buildings.

It is just at this time that architecture fails to fascinate as creative activity. Americans have not much to learn about the problems of building. Miss Van Der Robe is dead. The last plan he left behind after turning into towers in Chicago. And the future? The Whitney Museum is always depicting, only for opposite ideological purposes. So you have Mr. Rauh taking the time to ask Mr. Rehnquist was accused he must prove himself innocent beyond any conceivable objection.

In blowing the whistle on such tactics by his natural ally, Senator Kennedy has set the example. The manner, that we frequently disagree with him is no secret, but we must say he clearly recognizes that making more of one should; that excessive charges are good neither for the case they are intended to serve nor for the political health of the nation. — WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

It may well be, as reported, the Meadell political machine has decided to allow John Alsup reelection to the state legislature as Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut, thus appointing a Republican party struggle over the post.

Such an arrangement may indeed produce a semblance of party peace, in that an open fight is avoided.

But it cannot guarantee that the Meadell regime will do something it has seemed consistently constitutionally unable to do.

The Meadell regime has not until the Germans just walked around the Belgian and it in the spring of 1940, supposed to be man's highest achievement in the science of military defense. The eccentric who bought this particular section of the Maginot Line doesn't know what he will do with it, but he may just leave it there, for the archeologist of some future age to discover and marvel upon.

Over in China, the other day, — China being renowned as the place in the world which had a highly developed civilization ahead of most other localities, and which proved it by inventing gunpowder — that nation's military scientists exploded another nuclear bomb, the sharp-edged top of our generation, the marvel for military offense the Maginot Line was once supposed to be for military defense.

An Example Of Decency... Senator Edward Kennedy provided a fine example of fundamental decency the other day in cutting off a left-wing amendment directed by someone Court nominee William H. Rehnquist.

Clarence Mitchell and Joseph L. Rauh Jr. were representatives of the Leadership Conference on civil rights before the Senate Judiciary Committee. The purpose of the exercise was that they disagreed with some positions Mr. Rehnquist had taken in the past, and to incant the litany about this meaning the nomination was an "insult" and "the foot of racism is placed in the door of the temple of freedom."

It happened that the night before, a talk-show guest some place had accused the Rev. Martin Luther King of being a member of that group. This had not at all pleased Mr. Rehnquist, and he said the latter, "What of all the possible relations sort of membership?" Mr. Rehnquist was flabbergasted.

"Your suggestion is completely unwarranted and uncalled for," Senator Kennedy said. "I am flabbergasted."

Senator Kennedy clearly recognizes that smug tactics can be used on both sides of the ideological fence. Such tactics, in fact, come with particular ill grace from those who see themselves as special guardians of civil liberties. From those who would be most outraged if the tables were turned. If, say, someone objected that a nominee's affidavit denying Communist Party membership did not cover all the possibilities, no doubt Mr. Rauh would be not merely flabbergasted but appalled.

Southern California's Hollywood Hills are fine mountains, lovely. But stand down on one of the streets below and look back up at them. They are covered with houses that do not look either significant or appealing from any distance, and the hills are gone. From the hills you see the bustle, filling up residentially with immense ghastly buildings.

It is just at this time that architecture fails to fascinate as creative activity. Americans have not much to learn about the problems of building. Miss Van Der Robe is dead. The last plan he left behind after turning into towers in Chicago. And the future? The Whitney Museum is always depicting, only for opposite ideological purposes. So you have Mr. Rauh taking the time to ask Mr. Rehnquist was accused he must prove himself innocent beyond any conceivable objection.

In blowing the whistle on such tactics by his natural ally, Senator Kennedy has set the example. The manner, that we frequently disagree with him is no secret, but we must say he clearly recognizes that making more of one should; that excessive charges are good neither for the case they are intended to serve nor for the political health of the nation. — WALL STREET JOURNAL.

The City Of Man

By D.J.R. BRUCKNER

NEW YORK—Save the cities? It depends on what you mean. Some things Americans cannot preserve. Louis Sullivan's magnificent old stock exchange in Chicago is coming down. It will be replaced, but not by anything that grand. But it was built for a function and the function has grown away from it.

My neighbors here are trying to save the Ansonia Hotel, a towering, turreted and balconied old wonder at 78rd and Broadway. It is not great architecture but a thrilling thing to see in a drab world. When the man who first owned it, Anson Stokes, was an undergraduate at Yale, he is said to have wived his mother, who lived then in the largest private house in America, that he intended to bring home with him his entire Yale class of '98. He wived back Regret. Here are sheets for only $8. That tells you as much about the spirit of the Ansonia as any description of it.

Its huge apartments are lined with cork (it always courted a clientele of musicians) and its windows are vast; its ceilings high. Curio lived there; many musicians still do. Sentiment incites people to want to save it, but also the certainty that whatever goes up in its place will be flimsy and ugly.

Housing has been deteriorating — new housing — in size, quality and durability for many years. High rise or otherwise. This is much more important than the effects on people living there. The Left Bank Paris had 30,000 people per square mile 15 years ago when I knew it, and it was comfortable. There were no high rises; spreading out like 5,000 people per square mile. Chicago at less than 1,000. Los Angeles at almost 1,700. Spreading out has done nothing for Americans and it has cost many chances to be together — for recreation, washing clothes, exercising, dining.

There is a different, and worse problem: Replacing housing with offices. This happens in all cities, but it is most obvious here. The population of Manhattan has been declining for 20 years. Life becomes unmitigated. At night the cities die, but at there life in the suburbs where people burrow into private homes and leave the streets empty. What have Americans gained? Only distance.

Southern California's Hollywood Hills are fine mountains, lovely. But stand down on one of the streets below and look back up at them. They are covered with houses that do not look either significant or appealing from any distance, and the hills are gone. From the hills you see the bustle, filling up residentially with immense ghastly buildings.

The entire Women's Auxiliary of the Manchester Midget & Pony Football Association, Inc., extend their "Thank You" to the newspapers, professional men, merchants, parents and factors, for their generous donations and support of our "Angels Harvest Dance." This program, without the help of the new regime moved into the office of State Chairman Howard Hausman who had accepted to take-over personnel of its own and had soon, at least by the new observers read it, gently pressured Hausman into accepting his present post on the Board of Public Utilities Commission.

The subduers with which this was accomplished spread some consternation among those who had been in the Republican organizational picture before Harrower, but the immediate answer was the heartening spectacle of Rep. Brian Gaffney, the new State Chairman, giving joyous reassurance to Mrs. Tina Harrower, a Republican National Committeewoman who had made it under the old order, that she still lived undisturbed in her home.

In the months that followed Mrs. Harrower indeed found herself never disturbed by any call to take part in any party decisions, and this was probably, to a lady of her willing mind and intelligence, the most disturbing of things possible.

There continues to be chronic absenteeism, however, the most serious of which minutes are available in the mental health commissioner's office.

The problem, however, is not simply one of poor attendance, according to Hartran Strook of Newtown. Strook, one of the most faithful and active members of the board, resigned two months ago, saying the board was an ineffectual body which had little power to do anything.

Market in Small Decline In Dollar, Phase 2 Mystery

By LINDA RUBEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices dropped sharply in the latter part of the past week but registered a small decline for the week as investors continued to show concern about international monetary problems and Phase 2 economic aid.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 2.27 to 810.67.

Volume was 40.56 million shares compared with 61.82 million shares last week. The largest turnover in the week was Tuesday's 13.29 million shares. The smallest was Monday's 9.28 million shares.

"The stock market has continued to operate in an atmosphere of disquiet. Prices and volume both reflect that psychological forces still outweigh improving fundamental data," Reynolds & Co., an analyst at Reynolds & Co., said.

The market's one day of real strength was on Tuesday, 10:30 a.m. when it climbed in anticipation that Treasury Secretary Connally would make some sort of policy statement in a speech Tuesday night, regarding changing the price of gold, realigning currency value and raising trade barriers.

His speech was more inspirational than specific yet stocks did not collapse on Wednesday. Prices were a good sign, Stovall said.

Wednesday, bargain hunting continued to dominate the market. A plastic package containing a carbon-dioxide cartridge which, when pierced by a sharp object, emits a brightly colored gas.

The report also said that the number of wells drilled in Venezuela last year was 625, compared with 352 in 1969.

The Bible Speaks

By Eugene Brewer

Are you constantly besieged by doubts, uncertainty, insecurity? If so, no one need tell you of the resultant emotional unease, the attitudinal disturbance, and the consequent conflicts. Much unacceptable behavior of people springs from their feelings of insecurity—disregarding what another does, grasping for advantages with unfair advantages, using their own happiness and breeds its victim's own unhappiness.

Christian faith is the only permanent solution. It recognizes that all men are sinners, but no matter how secure they may seem, they will fall. It accepts the evidence for the immortality as the only permanent reality. It is the only way to escape the uncertainties of this world.

Thus the pressure of acquiring the comparative of others, and the fear of failure are diminished. One can confidently say with Paul: "I can do all things in him who strengthens me." Phil. 4:13. Only then can a man truly understand and discover happiness.

Herbert Quiz 'Blacked Out'

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — An apparent technical failure on WHYY-TV's lines to a transmitter on Mt. Tom in Holyoke blacked out the station's interview on the Dick Cavett Show Friday night with Arny Olden, 42, of Springfield, who has accused service superiors of harassment.

The Springfield Union newspaper said it received about 25 calls within 15 minutes inquiring why the Cavett show of Arny Olden, 42, of Springfield, was blacked out.

Olden said it was only a coincidence that the Herbert interview was on the air at the time of the power failure. "I have absolutely no reason to think or suspect sabotage at this time," he said.
