Barry Tells Of Law On Pornography

"We're not seeing in any particular individual," Atty. David Barry, Manchester town counsel, said last night while explaining a bill he drafted which would stiffen the state's anti-obscenity laws.

Barry, speaking to the Democratic Club of Manchester, emphasized that he was interested only in the legal aspects of obscenity, and had drafted the bill at the direction of the town's Board of Directors.

House Bill 6096, "An Act Concerning the Definition Concerning Obscenity," now in the General Assembly's judiciary committee. Hearings were held Jan. 10, and the committee is expected to act on the bill at an executive session next Monday.

Barry told Democratic Club members that the bill would make a relatively simple change in the state's existing law by eliminating one of three tests for obscenity.

The existing law, part of the state's 1971 Penal Code, specifies that obscene material must be shown to have a prurient appeal must be to prurient, shameful or morbid interest.

Barry said that the bill, although Barry emphasizes that the action isn't related to any particular individual, the director's instruction was apparently prompted by the opening of a House Bill 6038 would eliminate the third test — "utterly without redeeming social value" — and would make it easier to obtain convictions, Barry said.

"It's extremely difficult to get a conviction now," Barry said, noting that "almost anything has some social value."

In tracing the history of obscenity laws, Barry said that the three-pronged test was the result of a 1966 U.S. Supreme Court decision, "The Fanny Hill case."

A minority opinion in this case, written by Justice William Brennan, added the "social value test" to criteria set by an earlier decision.

"It's not at all clear that we had to include the third element in the (Connecticut) Penal Code," Barry said. "Our position," he added, "is that the state has gone farther than it has to go."

In December, the Manchester Board of Directors instructed Barry to prepare the bill, although Barry emphasizes that

Heads Dinner

Carl Zinner of 174 Ralph Rd. has been named chairman for the Lincoln Day Dinner, sponsored by the Manchester Republican Town Committee, Feb. 13 at the Manchester Country Club.

The event will open at 6:30 p.m. with cocktails, and dinner will be served at 7:30. The Dick Lewis Band will play for dancing from 9 to 11 p.m.

Joseph Burns, executive secretary of the State Commission of Special Services, will be the featured speaker.

Zinner will be assisted by A. Paul Berte, who is in charge of publicity, and Mrs. Roy Ann Kimmel and Mrs. Anita Murphy who will supervise the decorations.

Tickets for the Lincoln Day dinner may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Eliza Dobkin, 153 Shallow Brook Lane.

Full Gospel Christian Fellowship, Interdenominational, will have a Bible study and open discussion tonight at 7:30 at Orange Hall.

Meskill's Reverse On Suspensions

Governor Meskill's determination to head the state back toward the tough policy of automatic license suspension for every driver convicted of speeding is welcome.

To get back to the policy which had been in effect some 16 years, until it was set aside by action of the Legislature last year, it will be necessary for the Legislature to agree.

That last year, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles had been acting under an executive order originally issued by Governor Ribicoff.

What the Legislature did, in response to pleas that the automatic suspension rule imposed undue hardship on wage earners who needed their licenses in order to work, was to pass a new law specifically forbidding the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to enforce any automatic suspension policy.

In another major setback, the President went on the air Sunday evening, last Aug. 15, to announce his new economic policy, thus making sure he himself made so much big news that nobody would be wondering where Dr. Kissinger was that weekend.

After this legislative injunction with possible suspension left to the courts went into effect, the Governor reports, only six per cent of the state's convicted speeders had their licenses suspended.

The new all time high yearly record for automobile fatalities established in the first year of such leniency toward the speeding offense, is, as the Governor has been forced to judge, something too much of a coincidence. He is, we believe, correct in determining, against his own previous sympathies in the matter, that Connecticut cannot afford to experiment further with such leniency, and we congratulate him on having the courage to alter his convictions.

We hope that the individual members of the General Assembly, confronted with an equal chance to reconsider their vote, rearrange themselves on the side of safety rather than license.

Still Don't Like Passengers?

It seems almost irresponsible to try to pin a big national problem, involving both arms of government and huge corporations, down to such simple human terms.

Nonetheless, the Wall Street Journal, the other day, led off a survey of the operation of Amtrak to date by asking this question: "Could the public corporation depend for reliable train operations on the very railroads that saw no future for their own passenger services?"

And the Journal proceeded to give the following response to its question: "Now, nearly nine months later, it appears that the answer is 'no.' One official official, quoted at what he describes as resistance of the contracting railroads to Amtrak initiatives, snaps, 'They weren't successful in passenger business; they don't want anybody else to be successful, and they don't want anything to get in the way of their freight business.'"

That makes the whole problem seem very human. And aside from expressing the feeling that the wicked railroads don't have their heart in operating a better passenger business for the government, some Amtrak officials accuse them of even more dastardly behavior, this giving some freight route priority over the supposedly fast passenger trains, or like slipping some of their freight operation expenses into their passenger accounts with the government.

For whatever reason, the conclusion seems to be that the Amtrak operation of the nation's passenger service roads has, so far, proved a disappointment.

But, although the trains still seem to run on their old behind-time schedules, American public thought is continually accelerating itself toward the regrettable, but peaceful acceptance of a remedy which would once have been highly controversial - outright federal and state operation of transportation enterprises already being heavily subsidized by the taxpayers, but still being operated by private management.

The plain truth is that there is no private capital really anxious to fight for the privilege of continued operation of such stick enterprises, and no remedy enthusiasts for private enterprise can offer except that of closing down a service the nation probably should maintain for itself even though there cannot be any profit in it.

On another crucial weekend, the President went on the air Sunday evening, last Aug. 15, to announce his new economic policy, thus making sure he himself made so much big news that nobody would be wondering where Dr. Kissinger was that weekend.

After this legislative injunction with possible suspension left to the courts went into effect, the Governor reports, only six per cent of the state's convicted speeders had their licenses suspended.

Part of The "Cover" The disclosure of Dr. Henry Kissinger's 12 secret trips to Paris is turning itself into the key piece which is solving a whole series of puzzles.

There were, for instance, the special committee President Nixon's dramatic disclosure of the secret but now aborted U.S.-Hanoi peace negotiations was so completely unconvincing that it was almost a foregone conclusion that the President would be forced to announce his new economic policy, thus making sure he himself made so much big news that nobody would be wondering where Dr. Kissinger was that weekend.

Life Or Death Attorneys representing four convicts under sentence of death have asked the Supreme Court to declare the death penalty unconstitutional on the grounds that it is cruel and unusual punishment.

The death penalty is virtually unanimously repudiated by the conscience of contemporary society, argued Anthony G. Amsterdam, a Stanford University law professor. One opponent compared it to torturing a person in oil during the middle ages.

A California official maintained that capital punishment is a part of America's religious and moral heritage. The court may rule that the death penalty is indeed cruel and unusual punishment and therefore barred by the Constitution, or it may rule that it is not cruel and unusual punishment and is simply supported by precedents since the founding of the Republic.

Nine states have codified the death penalty and New Jersey's law has been set aside because it provided that if an accused pleaded guilty, life was the maximum sentence, but if the accused pleaded innocent and subsequently was convicted, the death penalty would be imposed. The federal government and 40 states still have capital punishment. No one has been executed in the United States for more than two years and 69% are now in scattered death rows in 13 states awaiting the final ruling.

No human being is what is generally considered normal mortality likes the idea of taking a human life, a crime since Cain slew Abel. But if the death penalty is discarded as outmoded and unconstitutional, what then can society do to protect itself against such intractable as the killer, who while serving a life sentence murders a guard or a policeman?

The defense claim of virtual unanimity of opinion against the death penalty is certainly open to question. Quite possibly, the authors of the Constitution sought only to exclude devices of torture, including boiling in oil, and did not have in mind the death penalty at all. Inside Report Nixon's Grand Strategy

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON - The central aim of President Nixon's dramatic revelation of the secret but now aborted U.S.-Hanoi peace negotiations was so completely unconvincing that it was almost a foregone conclusion that the President would be forced to announce his new economic policy, thus making sure he himself made so much big news that nobody would be wondering where Dr. Kissinger was that weekend.

Fourth Graders' Hobbies Show Variety

Almost every child has a hobby of one type or another but how about a 9-year-old girl who participates in quarter midget racing, or one who collects 100 knick-knacks, or a boy who has collected every greeting card he has received - almost 200 - since his first birthday?

These were only a few of the many hobbies displayed yesterday at Mrs. Nellie ManWarren's fourth grade Annual Hobby Show at the Hebron Elementary School.

The children arranged their displays in the gymnasium and from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. greeted visitors and explained their hobbies.

Perhaps the most unusual was Russian Ella's hobby of racing at quarter midget races. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Ella of North Ford Rd., Russam has been racing for over a year along with her seven-year-old brother Robbie.

Between them the two children have won almost fifty trophies racing their miniature cars on a track at the Russam home in North Ford Rd.

Another large collection was Rhonda Berry's knick-knack. The nine-year-old Rhonda, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Berry of Rt. 85, has been collecting animals of various sizes for over five years.

Many of the boys leaned toward model cars and miniature matchbox series. Christopher Ryan of Jones St. just started his hobby about a month ago - comic books - and already has collected almost 25 comic books.

Several of the girls in the class collected dolls. Ann Goehrs's choice was the Barbie doll, with Live Action P.J. her favorite.

Boys also were popular with the girls. Karen Radman's collection of Nancy Drew mysteries now totals 11 of the 17 published, and Melanie Bart-besult collects all types of books, boasting 70 in her collection.

Other girls in the class leaned toward arts and crafts and sewing and knitting. Kimberly DiStefano preferred crocheted, crocheted and knitted.

Hebron Snowmobilers Travel North Seeking Snow

The Tolland Snowmobilers Club has spent the past two weekends traveling to Vermont and Massachusetts in search of snow for their activities.

Last weekend the club traveled to Ludlow, Vt., where they stayed at John's Farm. Some of the members logged as many as 100 miles on their snowmobiles during the weekend's activities which had been planned by Ray Aubin, special events chairman.

Two weeks ago, 25 members spent a day snowmobiling at M. Savoy in Massachusetts using approved marked trails in Hawley State Forest.

Enthusiasm is growing among the snowmobilers with the exception of one problem - a lack of snow.

Club President Rudy Kowalski reminds members and all other snowmobilers to adhere to all rules and laws pertaining to the fast growing sport of snowmobiling.

If any residents are experiencing problems with snowmobilers Kowalski would like them to contact him or other club members. "Any snowmobile club is not willing to work with land owners, nursery owners, sod growers, and others to help protect their property," Kowalski explains.

The purpose of the Tolland Snowmobile Club is to stimulate and advance the general welfare and safety of snowmobiling and to serve the interests of all those who are interested in the sport.

Membership is still open to local families. Two money raising events have been scheduled for April. The lack of money has prompted postponement of the planned Family Day until Sunday, May 14.

Hughes Fund In Trust?

NEW YORK (AP) — Clifford Irving's lawyer says $800,000 in McGraw-Hill Book Co. stock intended for Howard R. Hughes but slipped in and out of a Swiss bank account by Irving's wife is being held in trust for the millionaire.

Henry Neesen said his client had given the checks to Hughes in payment for rights to his autobiography. Irving says Hughes authorized him to assemble—but that for "some reason" they were given back.

It was then, Neesen said, that biographer Edith Irving deposited them in an account she opened in the name of Helmut R. Hughes at the Swiss Credit Bank in Zurich. Discovery last week that the money had gone to someone other than Hughes started an international search for the mystery woman.

That ended Friday when Neesen announced that Irving had told the Manhattan district attorney's office the day before that the account-holder had been his wife.

McGraw-Hill, which had planned to publish the purported autobiography March 10, said it was "stunned" by the developments. Time, Inc., which planned publication of a three-part excerpt from the book in a magazine, said it was pressing its own investigation. Both have delayed publication indefinitely.

Hughes has said in affidavits he never got the McGraw-Hill money, never authorized any autobiography and never met Irving. Irving, appearing Friday outside the district attorney's office with his lawyer, repeated his claim that the autobiography was authentic.

Under questioning by investigators here, a source near the case said, Irving contended that Hughes himself had requested that the bank account be opened by the author's wife and that Hughes had handed him the false passport she used to open the account.

The source said Irving maintained he went along with Hughes' request because he felt it was part of the exclusive economic "whimsical ways" Irving admitted to.

Irving admitted to Leonard Newman, chief of the office's fraud bureau, that he had planned to appear before a county grand jury Monday and a federal grand jury at a later date.

"There is no fraud on the part of my client because the money has not gone," Neesen stated. "The money is still in Switzerland, being held in trust for Mr. Hughes. It has merely been taken out of one bank and put in another."

Last Dec. 7 McGraw-Hill announced it had acquired world rights to Irving's autobiography of Hughes. The firm said it gave Irving the $800,000 in three checks to turn over to Hughes in return for the publishing rights.

Subsequently, a furor arose over whether Hughes had created with Irving in providing material for the book. On Jan. 13 a telephone voice message as Hughes told a panel of reporters Irving's book was a fraud.

He knew as Hughes in interview seasons. McGraw-Hill says it believed the voice did belong to Hughes.

Jan. 14—New York State Supreme Court Justice Samuel N. Gold announces a temporary restraining order against publication of the Irving manuscript.

Jan. 15—Gold reads the order; another hearing in the case is set for Jan. 17.

Jan. 16—The Ladies Home Journal releases the Elton article which is accompanied by a letter bearing the signature of Howard R. Hughes and reading: "Robert—these notes are yours to edit them and arrange to have them published as my memoirs." McGraw-Hill says handwriting experts term the signature a fake.

Jan. 17—The court hearing on the suit against the Elton book is postponed until Friday.

Hijacker Jets East

NEW YORK (AP) — A jetliner with an armed hijacker and seven crew members aboard took off from Kennedy Airport today and headed east.

The hijacker had pulled a gun from a plaster case on his arm and commanded the plane earlier in the day when it was carrying 101 persons.

He demanded $200,000 ransom plus freedom for black revolutionary militant Angela Davis and a man held in Texas on armed robbery charges.

When he took over the flight, which originated in Los Angeles, the hijacker said he wanted to go to Europe, later specifying Spain.

The hijacker said he had a bomb, according to federal aviation officials. FBI agents and Port of New York Authority police warned of an air ground stop to meet the Trans World Airlines jet when it landed at Kennedy Airport at 7:13 a.m.

Law enforcement sharpshooters with rifles took up positions around the runway. The hijacker allowed all 84 passengers to disembark, but seven crew members were reported still aboard.

An FBI spokesman said he was believed Trappell had a history of mental illness. He says he has a bomb, but says something new every minute, the spokesman said.

Ribicoff Peking Berates Abandons New Nixon Plan Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's plan to reform family welfare assistance appears to be a prelude to a new Ribicoff announcement that he won't back it.

Ribicoff, D-Conn., had been expected to lead the Senate battle for Nixon's plan, after Ribicoff announced last week that he was carrying out a study of the proposal.

But Friday, he told the Senate Finance Committee, which was conducting a hearing on the plan, that he had changed his mind and would instead propose a pilot project for this session of Congress.

"The more I have listened to this testimony, the more I have become convinced we must have a pilot on this before we put it into effect," Ribicoff said.

"This plan would add millions and millions of persons to the welfare rolls. If it does not work out, it could discredit welfare reform for all time."

"It is certain now it is illucent to say it would take people off the welfare rolls, as the administration argues."

Nixon's plan featured a guaranteed annual income of $2,400 for the welfare rolls. It also would give a 10 percent increase in the minimum wage.

Air Warfare Creeps North; Missiles Fly Near Hanoi

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. jet fighter attacked a radar site on the North Vietnamese coast, the North Vietnamese said.

The command also reported that a GCI radar site on the DMZ while it was escorting bombers on raids against the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The aircraft took evasive action to avoid a missile attack. The GCI radar finds data on the air defense system which permits other radar to pick up U.S. aircraft more accurately.

Chronology of an Autobiography

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Here is a chronology of the events involved in the Howard Hughes autobiography case:

Dec. 7—McGraw-Hill Book Co. announces it has acquired world rights to a 230,000-word autobiography of the elusive billionaire written in collaboration with author Clifford Irving.

The Hughes Book Co. denies the authenticity of the book. McGraw-Hill says it convinced the volume is genuine.

Jan. 8—A man introduced as Howard Hughes says in a telephone interview with seven newsmen that the Irving book is a fraud and denies he has ever met Irving.

McGraw-Hill and Life magazine, which plans to serialize parts of the book, restate their belief in a letter bearing the signature of a handwritten letter from Hughes along with endorsed checks representing part of the money.

Jan. 10—Irving says the book on the telephone wasn't that of Hughes. The author claims the man failed to answer questions which had been thoroughly covered in discussions with the man he knew as Hughes in interview seasons. McGraw-Hill says it believed the voice did belong to Hughes.

Jan. 14—New York State Supreme Court Justice Samuel N. Gold announces a temporary restraining order against publication of the Irving manuscript.

Jan. 15—Gold reads the order; another hearing in the case is set for Jan. 17.

Jan. 16—The Ladies Home Journal releases the Elton article which is accompanied by a letter bearing the signature of Howard R. Hughes and reading: "Robert—these notes are yours to edit them and arrange to have them published as my memoirs." McGraw-Hill says handwriting experts term the signature a fake.

Jan. 17—The court hearing on the suit against the Elton book is postponed until Friday.

Jan. 18—A judge reserves decision on the suit against the Irving book.

Jan. 20—McGraw-Hill agrees to defer publication of the Irving book, pending investigation of a Swiss bank account in Hughes' name.

Jan. 21—Irving leaves New York for his home on an island off the coast of Spain.

Jan. 22—The Swiss Credit Bank says the three McGraw-Hill checks were deposited by a German-speaking woman in early 90s who used a forged Swiss passport in the name "H. R. Hughes." The money was withdrawn later.

Jan. 24—Swiss police issue a warrant for the arrest of the woman identified as Helga Hughes on a criminal complaint filed by McGraw-Hill.

Jan. 25—Investigators in Zurich appear to Irving and his wife to come to Switzerland to be interviewed in the police probe.
