Watching the General Assembly in session in this interim year, one gets the impression that the legislators are just going through the motions.

And, that "whatever cost" is the passage of bills that would never have been passed if they had never been drafted.

One gets the feeling that everyone and everything is just marking time—waiting for the real business of the session—appropriations, taxes, no-fault, and maybe a revamp of the state statutes dealing with the courts.

Everything else the legislators are doing seems to be to "keep their hand in," to let the folks back home know they are "on the ball," and that they are looking out for their interests.

Among the 750 Republicans at Monday night's 1100-plate GOP dinner in New Haven were the following from Manchester:

State Comptroller Nathan Agostinelli, State Sen. and Mrs. David Odger, GOP Town Chairman M. Adler Dobbin, Deputy State Comptroller and Town Director William D'Amico, and former assistant town clerk Thomas O'Mara.

Agostinelli sat at the head table, next to Gov. Thomas Meskill. The main speaker was Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Announcement has been made of a new group concerned with welfare in Connecticut. It is "The Black Sash Movement."

Nicknamed the "Covfieded Milk Bill," it drew the following comments from three Republican legislators.

Ronald Sarasin of Seymour — "I think we're beating a dead cow."

William Lyons of Norwalk — "I have a way to resolve the debate. Perhaps we should stamp the date on the cow."

And Morris Hogan of Burlington, noting that the bill received a favorable report from the committee on general law — "I think the lawyers are more familiar with the bill than they are with the cow."

A four-page pamphlet, "Bill Cotter Reports," has been received in the mail by every home in the First Congressional District.

In it, the Hartford Democrat reports on his first year in Congress and lists his goals for the future. Protection of existing jobs and the creation of new jobs in the First Congressional District is called by Cotter his top priority.

"Las Vegas Nights," which raise money for charity through games of chance, would be legalized under a bill proposed by Democratic State Sen. Charles Altano, president pro tem of the Senate.

The State Police recently issued warnings that "Las Vegas Nights" are illegal and that those operating them would be subject to arrest. Altano has asked the legislature's general law committee to draft a bill that would explicitly allow gambling for good causes by non-profit organizations.

Extraordinary security precautions were in effect on TWA and other airlines after a sophisticated bomb exploded in the cockpit of an unoccupied TWA jet in Las Vegas Wednesday.

A TWA spokesman would not comment on a report in the New York Daily News that negotiations were under way. Barlier the company refused to say whether, or under what circumstances, it would agree to pay ransom.

Despite the company denial, New York police said a private jet that landed mysteriously at Atlanta Tuesday night carried the $2 million ransom money demanded but that "no actual turnover was made." The plane returned to New York four hours later.

TWA Chairman Charles C. Tillghast Jr. refused to discuss the case with newsmen at a dinner Wednesday night. "It would only prejudice our position what we are doing," he said, it what we are doing," he said, it "is a very delicate case and must be dealt with discreetly."

Investigators continued to work on the theory that the bombs were planted by one or more persons who were present or former airline industry employees because of their obvious intimate knowledge of airline operations.

Commenting on the Las Vegas blast, a TWA spokesman said, "Whoever put it on the airplane had to know his way around the industry. He would have to know a considerable amount about the aircraft."

Charles Wyre, TWA general manager in Las Vegas, said the plane had been searched in first time since 1970, and South Vietnamese pilots claimed two plane spotted one tank and a truck in Cambodia, moving to the Ben Het border camp.

The U.S. Command also announced that an Air Force F4 Phantom was shot down Tuesday while attacking the Ho Chi Minh supply trail in southern Laos, and the two fliers are missing. The command said the announcement was withheld two days because a search was "I would have to assume that it was located in an area inaccessible to normal search," Wyre said. "The plane was thoroughly searched for several days."

The still-missing story began Tuesday when TWA received an anonymous call warning that a bomb was planted on a 707 jet that had just taken off for Las Vegas. The plane turned back and a trained dog sniffed out the bomb in a brief case in the cockpit.

The caller also directed TWA officials to an airport locker where they found two duffel bags. (See Page Fourteen)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is preparing one-two regulatory punch that could send consumers streaming to toy stores for a small fortune in refunds.

The controversy pits lawyer against lawyer within the FDA, and threatens to invite a lawsuit no matter which camp prevails.

The fight revolves around a soon-to-be-published regulation reducing the maximum amount of lead allowed in paint on toys and children's furniture, to be followed within a few weeks by a revised proposal guaranteeing consumer refunds for toys and household chemicals banned as hazardous substances.

In effect, the lead-paint regulation could force toy manufacturers and importers to buy back most painted toys now in American homes.

"It's fantastic," said an FDA lawyer familiar with both issues. "The ramifications could be unbelievable. Millions and millions of dollars are involved."

The key question is whether there will be a retroactive time cutoff for refunds.

FDA sources said the paint regulation will attempt to set a precedent by allowing refunds only for items purchased after its effective date. That could be expected to draw challenges from consumers.

But a harder line it said to be prevailing on the refund regulation. Malcolm W. Jensen, director of the FDA's Bureau of Product Safety, favors refunds "back to the beginning of time," without regard to when a toy was manufactured and when it was banned. That almost certainly would provoke a court suit by the toy industry.

Fourteen months ago the FDA proposed a refund regulation.

The law orders repurchase of any banned hazardous article or substance "whether or not it was such at the time of its sale."

Jensen said, "Congress seems clearly to say, 'Forget when it was made and the state of the art when it was made. Require buy-back even if the manufacturer couldn't have avoided the problem at the time.'"

At the end of January Irving admitted that his German born Swiss wife was the elusive money and attributed to a secret bank account by a second degree.

The county grand jury accused them in a 25-count indictment of grand larceny in the second degree, which covers larceny where exaction is not involved and with conspiracy in the third degree.

They were also charged with possession of forged instruments, for documents they allegedly handled.

Despite his disclaimers, acting Atty. Gen. Kleindienst played a major role in settlement of three indictments against the international TWA.

Anderson's column, based on a memorandum attributed to ITT lobbyist Dita D. Beard, suggested that the Justice Department agreement to settle the suits against ITT was linked to the conglomerate's purported $400,000 commitment to the Republican National Convention.

Kleindienst has denied the suggestion and says the memo is a false statement.

Kleindienst told the committee the IIT cases were handled and negotiated exclusively by Richard McLaren, former chief of the Justice Department's antitrust division.

Anderson said Kleindienst's "version of events departed from the whole matter. It was a false statement."

BELFAST (AP)—A big explosion shattered a house in a Roman Catholic section of Belfast today, killing three people and injuring four. Police said they believed a gelignite bomb had exploded as men of the Irish Republican Army were priming the charge.

Security forces closed off the area of the Lower Falls enclave as they searched the wreckage. They won't be able to work even if they want to," he said.

The organizer said his group was reviving of the 3-Special Constabulary, a Protestant vigilante force disbanded in 1969 in Northern Ireland.

Meanwhile, Protestant vigilantes called for a four-hour strike and electricity cutoff today to protest terrorist violence and concessions to the Catholic minority which the British government is considering.

"We're just about taken enough," said William Hull, an organizer of the Loyalist Association of Workers. "I warn the politicians here and in London that we will bring the country to a complete halt if any political emergency police work, said William Hickey, a representative of Chapter 174 of the Connecticut State Employees Association which represents more than 600 state policemen.

Hickey said the slowdown is a protest of new work rules in p.m.

"This will mean there will be no juice for factories at all so they won't be able to work even if they want to," he said.

The explosion rained to 287 months of communal warfare in Northern Ireland.

DECEPTIVE BID
MAY BOOMERANG
 By ALFRED SHEINWOLD
 Deceptive bidding is a very delicate art. If you pick the wrong time to steal an opponent's lead out of his hand, you may wind up needing dentures of your own.

North dealer.
 North-South vulnerable.
 Opening lead—Two of Clubs.
 When North raised to three hearts, South wanted to be in a slam, but he was afraid of a club lead. South therefore made the fake cue bid of four clubs. Normally, this sort of bid shows the ace of clubs and slam ambitions.

North was pretty sure that his partner was throwing a spitball since the ace of clubs was in plain sight in his own hand. Having no more to add to his previous bids, North signed off at four hearts.

South thereupon jumped to six hearts and waited with a calm face for West to make the opening lead.

Dead Giveaway
 South's bidding was a dead giveaway to a really expert opponent. When South bid four hearts, his partner gave him no encouragement at all, but South still jumped to six hearts. What had South found out by bidding four hearts? Obviously South had not been trying to give information to his partner; he had been trying to give misinformation to the opponents.

West came to the correct conclusion that South didn't want a club lead. Therefore West definitely led a club. This deflated the slam. The defenders were sure to get a club and the ace of spades.

South had jumped all the way from three hearts to six hearts. West would have opened the queen of diamonds. South would win, draw trumps and develop the spades to make the slam contract.

It doesn't always pay to be crafty.

Daily Question
 Partner bids one spade and the next player passes. You hold: Spades, 9-7-4-3; Hearts, 8-4; Diamonds, 9-8-3; Clubs, K-Q-7-4.

What do you say?
 Answer: Bid two spades. You have good trump support in high cards and a doubleton. In any reasonable system you should be able to raise your partner's major suit with a hand of this kind, partly to keep the opponents out.

Cyrus Stevens Shows Skill As Violinist

By JOHN GRUBER
 Cyrus Stevens, not long ago a student at MIT, more recently a student at Hart, presently a member of the Hartford Symphony, was featured soloist last evening at Millard Auditorium in a concert by the Hart Symphony Orchestra. Vytautas Marjotus conducted.

Mr. Stevens was heard in the Second Violin Concerto by Prokofiev which he played with excellent intonation, good tone, and capable technique. He showed the results of fine training and serious application on his own part. In short he is a very good violinist.

He is not, however, a virtuoso, and this concerto demands a virtuoso of more experience than Mr. Stevens has yet attained. Artistic performance demands more than accurate performance of the notes and Cyrus is still too young to know just how to bring this about. There was little individuality about the performance and I had the feeling that there was not always complete understanding of the composer's intent.

Still it was an interesting performance which demonstrated that Mr. Stevens has the equipment to be a first rate orchestral player, even as young as he is.

Mr. Stevens was heard during the last half of the program. The first portion was devoted to the Ninth Symphony of Dmitri Shostakovich. This is a far cry from the more famous Ninth by Beethoven but it is a pretty good symphony just the same. The composer did not have a great deal to say, but mercifully he didn't drag it out in the telling.

The student orchestra played extremely well. There are some miserable spots in this work for the double basses, and they negotiated them with accuracy and aplomb. These are places where you may normally expect some trouble, but all went well. The rest of the strings have difficult parts but not quite such mean ones as do the basses.

There is quite a little woodwind work in this symphony as well, and the students were quite impressive in these passages. Altogether it was a fine performance which Mr. Marjotus guided with firm understanding.

Thursday, March 9 ... Peter Flynn, Master Compositor

Forty-three hours of devoted service to this newspaper came to an end yesterday, when Peter Flynn, compositor, and a master of his trade, finally departed to take to the advice of his physician and yield it easier from now on.

"Peter" Flynn was, for loyalty and for talent, a wonderful employee. His touch was on the appearance of this newspaper when, during the years that the national Ayer awards for excellence in typography were being made, The Manchester Evening Herald repeatedly distinguished itself in and beyond its own circulation class.

There were, through the inevitable, often unpredictable emergencies involved in the production of a daily newspaper, many moments when "Peter" Flynn, with his technical know-how, his patience, his willingness, thoughtfulness, and his ability to deal with each other seeking whatever overlapping interests they can find. President Nixon is a man who has little doubt that his present mood will prove permanent.

None of this means we need to think of "Peter" as a man who should be replaced. He has been a part of the period of China chic that seems to impend in the smart department stores and apartment buildings. He has been a part of the political polarization and indoctrination carried to appalling lengths in the name of political policy, education reduced to mindless chaos, even family relationships reduced to a series of children for the greater glory of the state.

This is the picture that the Chinese leaders want to portray to the world; presumably the idea is that China is united and has little doubt that the future is bright. And that Mao-ism has produced a new, unselfish, higher form of the human condition. It is a picture that is being painted in the minds of the Chinese people and that Mao-ism has produced a new, unselfish, higher form of the human condition.

It would appear, from some of the discussion about conditions at the Connecticut State Prison up at Somers, that the desires of the inmates and the aims of some outside crusaders are to make life inside a prison as much like life outside it as possible.

Even after all this has been said, the question of how to judge today's China and its leaders is no easy one. Mao and the rest, after all, extended the effective rule over 800 million people where chaos or near-chaos reigned before, they are not feeding their huge population better than it has been fed before, and they have restored to a great people some measure of their historic pride.

Certainly this marks Mao and his followers as one of the most remarkable groups of men of our century. Whether their methods were necessary to their achievements we shall never know. A good part of the achievement owes to the native ability of the Chinese people; while the problems of Taiwan were obviously far less the achievements have been dramatically better. But the enormity of the problem China has come through should give us at least some pause in applying to it the standards that came naturally to anyone reared in Western civilization.

It is this middle course which represents the goal toward which Connecticut's prison policy has been evolving. It is a middle course which represents the goal toward which Connecticut's prison policy has been evolving. we are going to maintain and operate institutions, the prison administration which calls the tune of life inside a prison. We would say that the more imminent threat to Connecticut progress is not the substance nor the conservation of state officials, on any level, but the avid tendency of over-declared reformers to encourage inmate contempt for the progress that is being made.

China Chic? In sorting some sense out of the images and impressions flooding out of China this last week, it helps to pose two questions. The easier one is what relations the United States should seek with the People's Republic. The more profound one is what judgments we should make about Communist China as a culture and civilization.

Keeping these two questions separate is of course difficult, especially, it seems, given American history and habits of mind. There is a natural tendency to assume that judgments about whether a given state is ruled by good guys or bad guys ought to be the controlling factor in our diplomatic relations with it.

In fact, policymakers are wiser to pay fairly little attention to the internal character of a regime, whether Chinese or Greek, and to concentrate instead on how its foreign policies affect the world order and American interests. That China builds a domestic system with its own resemblance to Orwell's "1984" is not in itself of crucial importance. What is of crucial importance is whether China wants to export that system by force, or whether it is willing to live side-by-side with far different societies.

The significance of the presidential trip to China has much to do with the fact that the Americans recognize as much. There are those who argue that the Chinese were all along interested purely in internal development, and that their apparent designs of world revolution were a figment of the American imagination. We are far from convinced of that; nor, given the history of instability in China and the unresolved problems of succession, are we entirely confident its present mood will prove permanent.

Still, it is a great leap forward if China and the United States do deal with each other seeking whatever overlapping interests they can find. President Nixon is a man who has little doubt that his present mood will prove permanent.

Connecticut Yankee

By A.E.O. The surface shape of the news might give one the impression that the legislative branch of Connecticut state government is now turning its back on the Legislature, the Auditors of Public Accounts.

The headlines indeed do say that it is Rep. Francis J. Collins, Republican floor leader in the House, who, in a letter to Henry Becker, the Republican State Auditor, has demanded that the legislative branch be given some power of screening any findings about to be announced by Becker and his Democratic counterpart, Leo Donohue, in their joint functioning.

And if, as the headlines might seem to say, the Legislature, or even just the Auditor, is seeking to restrict the operation and the independence of the State Auditor, then it is the Auditor who depends upon the continued support of the members of their own party in the Legislature, in their reappointment, that is news of serious and regrettable import.

No one has ever dared accuse the State Auditor of trying to sensationalize anything. But, although their disclosures have always been gentle and clear, they could be relied upon to see that the essential facts about Connecticut government were in the public domain.

It was precisely because the Legislature felt the need to have reliable independent watch dogs in the state government, that the bipartisan office of State Auditor was established.

That this status and function should now be threatened by the Legislature, that the State Auditor be asked to restrict his independence, is a development that is hard to believe.

With all deference to the status of Representative Collins as Republican floor leader in the House, we think the complaint to Becker actually came from the office of the Governor.

In our opinion, it was a complaint from the executive and not from the legislature. And we would classify the action of Minority Leader Collins in chiding Becker more an act of loyalty and service to the Governor than a representation of sentiment to be found among the legislators themselves.

We find it difficult to believe that the Auditor is restricting his independence, but we really do not know. He really is a man who is really doing a very good job. We find it very easy to believe that their very existence with the constant threat that they or their accounts may be cut off, is something of an annoyance to a Governor's office which is constantly working for a lighter discipline in the way the state is being run.

Andover School Board, Libby Working on Budget

Andover's school board and the Andover Elementary School principal Donald Libby have been going over budget costs item-by-item in recent budget work meetings, in an attempt to keep costs down while still trying to come up with a reasonable budget, according to Libby.

At Tuesday night's meeting, the board once again went over the entire budget, comparing figures with those of previous years.

The board voted to appoint two committees, one to conduct negotiations with the teachers, and the other to conduct salary negotiations with the non-professional personnel. This will enable negotiations to continue at a more rapid pace than the board's work with other years.

The item of salaries is by far the biggest item in the budget, last year amounting to over $200,000 out of a total of some $311,000. This item, if not completed by budget time, is usually the last item to be discussed by the Board of Finance.

At the previous meeting of the school board, Libby pointed out that the board is currently running a deficit operation in many areas already, and that the budget for this year is estimated to be over $400,000.

More Inmates At Danbury Jobs

DANBURY (AP) — As a result of talks between state prison inmates and officials of the Federal Correctional Institute, more of the inmates were back on the job, bringing the total to 90 per cent, Warden J. Norton said today.

It appeared to come to an end Monday when the inmates presented a list of 67 grievances to prison administrators. Norton said today the list was still being considered by the local institution and by the U.S. Bureau of Prisons.

Admitted Wednesday: Roland Desrochers, South St., Rockville; Constantine Dutton, Tumblebrook Rd., Vernon; Donald Wick, Valley View Lane, Vernon; Liboria Zack, Ellington Rd., South Windsor; Judy Quinn, Wagoning Wood Rd., Rockville; Judith Dewry, 872 S. Rockville.

Discharged Wednesday: Ronald Paulo, Pine St., Manchester; Regina Morris, Pinnacle Rd., Ellington; Margaret Barker, Broad Brook; Anthony Dembek, Lawrence Rd., Vernon; Dr. Vernon; Margaret Barber, Lawrence Rd., Vernon; Judith Morris, Enfield; Benjamin Kane, Thruway Rd., Vernon; Keith Schiavetti, South St., Rockville.

Questionnaires put out by the chamber asked opinions on such items as taxes, unemployment, education, highways, recreation and school busing.

On the question of personal income tax, as opposed to a sales tax, the Chamber and the public were 90 per cent in favor of the income tax while about 48 per cent of the chamber members and 48 per cent of the public favored increased sales or other "pay as you go" taxes.

While the public thought taxes should receive the highest priority, the Chamber ranked it at state schools with the public 78.8 per cent in favor and the Chamber 80 per cent in favor.

The board voted to appoint two committees, one to conduct negotiations with the teachers, and the other to conduct salary negotiations with the non-professional personnel. This will enable negotiations to continue at a more rapid pace than the board's work with other years.

The item of salaries is by far the biggest item in the budget, last year amounting to over $200,000 out of a total of some $311,000. This item, if not completed by budget time, is usually the last item to be discussed by the Board of Finance.

At the previous meeting of the school board, Libby pointed out that the board is currently running a deficit operation in many areas already, and that the budget for this year is estimated to be over $400,000.

Manchester School Board, Libby Working on Budget

Manchester's school board and the Manchester Elementary School principal Donald Libby have been going over budget costs item-by-item in recent budget work meetings, in an attempt to keep costs down while still trying to come up with a reasonable budget, according to Libby.

At Tuesday night's meeting, the board once again went over the entire budget, comparing figures with those of previous years.

The board voted to appoint two committees, one to conduct negotiations with the teachers, and the other to conduct salary negotiations with the non-professional personnel. This will enable negotiations to continue at a more rapid pace than the board's work with other years.

Assembly To Weigh Tuition Deferment

HARTFORD (AP) — The legislature will consider this session several bills designed to provide more financial relief to college students, including a deferred tuition program.

The deferred plan would be similar to one provided by Yale University, according to the legislature's education committee co-chairmen.

The committee approved the plan in bill form Wednesday. It would permit a student to postpone payment of part of each semester's tuition until sometime after graduation.

The committee also voted to report favorably on a bill that would require that half of the total tuition income be returned to students in the form of aid, most of it through state scholarships.

A third bill approved by the committee would direct the State Scholarship Commission to award assistance mainly on the basis of need rather than school performance.

A fourth part of the financial aid package is a bill that would permit state colleges to waive tuition for students with financial need. It is similar to a measure vetoed last session by Gov. Thomas J. Meskill.

Meskill, in calling for a large increase in tuitions last year, proposed that half of the income be set aside for scholarships. The legislature approved the lesser increases and the assistance payment of part of each semester's tuition until sometime after graduation.

This year the governor proposed keeping the same fee while raising the level of assistance 11 per cent, which coupled with added federal aid would mean a 20-per-cent increase, he said.

Coventry Grand List Revised To $40,404,868

Assessor Ernest Barkat has released the final grand list figures, including revisions and various assumptions. The figure of $40,404,868 includes deductions to Board of Tax Review action.

The final figure is about 20 per cent above the grand list for last year. The $10 million increase is accounted for mainly because of revaluation of property, a process required every ten years by state law.

The preliminary grand list figure was reduced by about $2,180 by the Board of Tax Review, which heard 103 appeals this year.

Exemptions for the blind, elderly and veterans also lowered the preliminary figure announced in February.

Taxes for the next fiscal year, starting July 1, will be based on the new grand list. Voters approve the budget in May.

Rham District Region Board Okays Staff Increase of Five

The Regional District 8 Board of Education Monday night approved the addition of five new staff members at Rham High School for the 1972-73 school year.

Based on the estimated enrollment for 1972-73 of 1,180 students, the administration had requested seven new teachers, including one counselor, to handle the number of sections in each subject each week.

Principal J. Colin Pushee explained that at least one additional full-time teacher would be needed for each of the social studies, science, mathematics, and reading - English classes.

The four other additional staff members would be used in the foreign language, business education, art, music and health programs, and for a counselor.

In cutting the administration's request, the board felt that additional staff for music and business education would not be necessary mainly because proposed programs in these departments will cause by the end of the year to be a total of $11,750 for the proposed budget.

The music department is proposing for next year a new electronic laboratory, at a cost of $2,000, of which 50 per cent will be reimbursable by the state.

The board felt that this equipment would be more for vocational application.

Although the proposed reduction of advanced data processing equipment would be a great asset in keeping updated to go into the business world immediately, it was felt that the $5,000 rental, less 50 per cent reimbursement from the state, would again be too much of a capital expense at this time.

The board also questioned the addition of staff for the foreign language program, particularly Latin and Spanish where the total enrollment in these languages advanced courses for next year are seven and six students, respectively.

Board member Harry Magnusson questioned Pushee on the advantages of the fourth year of French and Spanish to the student if they are not gaining college credits.

Pushee said that it would not benefit a great number of students but it would benefit those who are planning to go on with it.

The board felt strongly that an additional counselor should be included in the additional staff although it did not obligate the administration in any way to hire one.

In spite of the approval of the five additional staff members, board member Charles Phelps believed the board should also believe at least six and possibly the seven.

"Our prime responsibility is to the kids," he said. "We are not here to see how low a budget we can get but to see that the kids get an adequate education."

Although it was Magnusson who made the motion for the five teachers, he warned the board that if the 1972-1973 budget got any "static," this will be an

Cool Recovery Patient Peril, Surgeon Claims

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — at once begins burning up energy to keep warm, Moncrief said in an interview Tuesday.

"The body temperature is dispersed very rapidly," he added.

"If his heart isn't able to heat by radiation—he'll try to heat the room with his body heat," Moncrief said.

Moncrief, professor of surgery at the Medical University of South Carolina, said chilly hospital rooms also create problems for burn patients.

The former commander of the burn center here at Brooke Army Medical Center, Moncrief said the heating process in burn patients requires tremendous amounts of energy.

In other types of patients, the increase in energy demand may rise 50 per cent above normal for three or four days after surgery; in severe injuries such as a gunshot wound to the stomach, it may increase by 100 per cent, he said.

But in the case of a seriously burned patient, he added, this demand for energy may jump 200 per cent for six to eight weeks.

"When they turned the lamps back on, their temperatures floated back up," he said, so the lamps were kept on all the time until the patient healed sufficiently.

The ideal temperature, he said, would be just below the "sweating point," or about 98 degrees Fahrenheit.

Moncrief was here to address the state legislature on the importance of funding the more important functions of healing wounds and combating infections.

State Exploring Growth of Bradley

The Connecticut Department of Transportation (DOT) is preparing a full-scale marketing plan which may result in an all-out effort to bring more business to Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks.

The transportation department has already begun a public relations effort to attract foreign airlines to Bradley, said a DOT spokesman.

The DOT is already at work on a public relations program for Bradley with a limited budget, and the three-year marketing plan would seek additional funds to promote the airport, the department spokesman said.

Leaflets and literature bearing Bradley's facilities and location are being distributed to airlines and travel agents. As well as promoting Bradley as an "Airway Action Point," the brochure also is trying to sell Connecticut to travelers and businessmen.

The DOT is also planning additional facilities and improvements at Bradley, including a 1,000-foot runway extension to comply with safe take-off requirements for newer and bigger planes.

Other currencies planned include a commercial bank for foreign currency exchange, multilingual information staffs, and more baggage containers.

The DOT said federal funds are available for some of the improvements, estimated to cost under $200,000.

The proposed DOT plans do not seriously consider a proposed airport near the Connecticut shore, a DOT spokesman said.

A report feasibility study prepared by Charles A. Marston & Associates of Waterbury examined three sites in northeastern Connecticut and northeastern Rhode Island, but the study did not constitute a recommendation.

Directors Plan To See Drug Center

The Board of Directors will probably meet with representatives of Crossroads, the town's drug counseling center, to tour the 33 Park St. facilities and be briefed on the center's operation.

Mayor John Thompson Tuesday night asked Town Manager Robert Welas to investigate the possibility of such a meeting.

The meeting would be held in the town's new drug counseling center, at 33 Park St., which is currently under construction.

The center is being built on a 15-acre site near the airport, a DOT spokesman said.

The land was purchased by Hospitality International two years ago.

Plans for the center, according to the DOT spokesman, include a 15-acre site near the airport, a DOT spokesman said.

Immature's Early Release Eases Father's Routine

One tired father of a member of the twenty-first century is getting more sleep mornings and an earlier drop-off because of court action taken yesterday.

One month was cut off of the father's routine because of the court action. The young inmate of Brooklyn jail was put on a work-release program at the same job which was held before his arrest last fall.

It was a vivid example of the lengths to which parents will go for a son, and Judge Joseph P. Dainoff agreed to suspend the father's work-release program for a month.

Ellington was sentenced in Nov. to the minimum 6-6 years in prison, suspended, for sale of narcotics; one year, suspended with probation for sale of controlled substances; and another year to be suspended after six months for possession of narcotics, according to his attorney.

"Dabbling in drugs" was cut short even before his arrest, from now on the dabbling will be in pudding and pie.

This course is open to expectant mothers and adopting mothers. Mothers may also attend.

HI, NEIGHBOR!

Lots of people, my wife included, have purchased lottery tickets since they went on sale and a few have been lucky enough to win. However, the number of sad-faced losers would make a more impressive picture than the newspaper photos of the winners. Not shown are the smiling faces of the winners. Not shown are the smiling faces of the winners. Not shown are the smiling faces of the winners.

The point is - in many transactions there are lots of losers for every winner. Except here at the Glorious Emporium. We go to great pains (we even take Excedrin sometimes) to be sure that every purchaser gets complete satisfaction. We offer both the product manufacturer's guarantee plus our own 80 day "no hard time" money back guarantee. If he or she is displeased in any way. We think customers are precious and want to assure that they're all winners here.

This weekend we offer apologies before telling you what we'll be peddling. Bob hurt his elbow last week while I was peddling golf down South, so the advertisement items weren't ready. This weekend we'll be and here is the 100% incomplete list: Scott's Turf Builder; nuts, bolts and hardware; truck salvage; lot of stuff I don't know yet; vinyl sofa sets and upholstered chairs; carpet remnants; ladies' wear; bedding; and come look. The coffee, as usual, will be free, hot and delicious and my wife hopes you won't forget your wallet.

Manchester Not Hit Hard By Gypsy Moth Defoliation

Defoliation due to gypsy moths from the ground or from the air and spans most of the year, but Manchester was not hit hard with the pest, chemical control has been limited, Deputy State Entomologist George Schuessler told the Town Conservation Commission last night.

About 655,000 acres in Connecticut were defoliated last year, Schuessler said, with the most for the pest in the western part of the state, but "it sure has problems in Manchester."

Schuessler, reporting the results of a survey of gypsy moth aerial spraying causes "hysterical" in Manchester, said that the insects are concentrated along the eastern and southern borders of town this year.

Another control, Bacillus Thuringiensis (BT), is a bacteria which kills caterpillars and is harmless to beneficial insects, animals, plants, and people. Applied as a conventional ground spray, BT has had a ratio success in controlling the insects, although it is the least expensive method.

BT's major drawback is its cost, Schuessler said — about $100 per acre. Schuessler declined to specifically recommend which method to use, but he said that the maintenance of Dr. Fredrick Spaulding, commission chairman, should be of help in making a decision.

Tolland Disciplinary 'Closet' Discontinued at THS

The suspension closet used for disciplining chronic students at Tolland High School has been closed, according to Principal Richard Olson.

"If I put a kid in there now, he would be coming out here," Olson said last night following a meeting with the Board of Education.

Olson has received the support of the high school teachers in the recent controversy over the use of a 2-by-8 foot lighted closet in the school office for the disciplining of about six recalcitrant students.

According to the teachers, this represents only one-half of one percent of the school's student population.

Olson has found himself the target of widespread publicity over the closet, culminating in a televised interview last night over Channel 5, New Haven.

Reports of coverage of the night, which originated in the school paper, "Echo," have become wire service material, and even appeared in the New York Daily News.

The original story was carried by the Herald as the result of the Board of Education's reaction upon learning of the use of the closet.

The teachers claim use of the closet has been in existence for at least five years under three different administrations.

The school board, however, indicated shock over its use as shown in the Echo article.

The closet is used to give the student an opportunity for individualized study or silent reflection in a well ventilated, well lighted area, the teachers explain.

Pupils Display Skills at Hobbies

The products and skills, made and developed as a result of efforts that began in November, were placed on display Tuesday during Club Activity Night at Buckley School. Reports indicate that the exhibit was a huge success, with about 350 adults in attendance.

The idea to provide an opportunity for pupils in Grades 4-6 to develop an interest in hobbies was already started by Miss Sheila Browne, fifth grade teacher.
