neglected to make a second phone call and give directions for delivery of the $300,000 he demanded for having his supposed accomplices defuse the bombs allegedly on board the great Omardor was responsible for the fact that the price was not paid.
 Huge prices of another kind were paid, regardless. The lives of the 2,300 people on board the ship were subjected to a kind of terror which does not become any more acceptable because they themselves happened to bear it with admirable poise and calm. The expensive and heroic business of parachuting bomb experts into the Atlantic alongside the Queen, the harrowing search through the ship, the final uneasy conclusion that the whole thing may have been a hoax—all these were the interim prices.
 But the biggest price to be paid is that one more field for the threat of violence — this into the hitherto peacefully dwindling luxury of the passenger ship — has now been opened, and will surely be mined, again and again, by all the initiators the sensational news of this current episode will surely breed.
 At the moment, the only cure we can think of — since, practically speaking, there is no way to see safeguard planes, ships, buildings, or cities and no way we can prevent plots and schemes and phone calls — is to try to organize some formula for stopping the world for a while in order to let some people get off. If we can't be that fanciful, the only alternative is to wait, patiently, and dangerously, for every variation of the hijacking game to make its appearance, produce its initiators, and eventually lose its novelty, until, all the possibilities having been exhausted, and perhaps the game itself having begun to seem stale and showy, those who have nothing better to do won't bother doing it.

Inside Report

The Message From Michigan

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — Obscured by the attention of the Episcopal Diocese of New York for its thirteenth bishop, a newspaper article about this event drew on the problems which the bishop in his new office. They are many and serious. But one bright note is the fact that the diocese has sufficient income. This can be said of all dioceses or of all parishes of whatever church.
 The income of most Catholic dioceses, like that of most Catholic parishes, has declined in recent years. Various reasons are cited when an examination is attempted.
 One is a falling-off in church attendance which is suggested by statistics which sample opinion and practice among Americans today. It is verified by rank-and-file head-counts when these are compared with counts made in the past. That church attendance is lower is, then, a fact.
 Another reason offered is that there are people who, while not ceasing to go to church, are displeased by music that the Church is doing or not doing. In the matter of doctrine, for example, some are watering down which almost amounts to a denaturing of the religion they were brought up in. Others maintain that the Church continues to cling to peripheral elements which are outmoded and inappropriate.
 Still another reason, some find distasteful the changes which have been made. They complain of noise, distraction, the loss of beloved familiar features. Others, however, think that the changes have not gone far enough. They want more forms, greater variety in the conduct of the service, not obviously or specifically religious.
 Similarly, a sizable number of people quarrel with the Church's response to current problems. Some feel that forthright denunciation of the Vietnam war is not enough. Others say that the war cannot evade. Others say that the war is simply one of the Church's business, and that the Church is not to be involved in it. The Church is too deeply involved in social action, is the cry of some; the Church is too little involved, is heard from another.
 Critics of whatever stripe are inclined to withhold financial support. This they threaten openly and angrily, and there are indications that not all the threats are empty but some are made good—or bad, given the effect on church income planning, he will not enter the Miami Beach convention with delegates in any way commensurate with his popular support. The delegate-selection system works in such a way that Wallace can not rely on many of his first-ballot delegates. He cannot be nominated.
 Moreover, the Wallace voters in Michigan were not for Wallace so much as they were against the Democratic establishment. A variety of polls showed Wallace last in credibility and potential job performance.

Consider two Michigan
Herald Yesterdays
 25 Years Ago
 Ernest Morse, superintendent of Manchester Water Co. is advised by company to vice president.
 Board of Education favors hiring women to assist custodians in caring for town school buildings.
 Town's mixing plant is moved from Earl St. to Olcott St.
 10 Years Ago
 This was a Sunday. The Herald did not publish.

But in so doing, McGovern's men fear losing his liberal constituency and Humphrey men fear losing the black support that has kept him in the race. Beyond that lies ideology. Even in Michigan, some prominent Democrats tell us they would rather be right on busing than win elections—a syndrome usually connected with a fatal political malady.
 The motion that Tuesday's vote was an idle protest seems wishful thinking. A pre-primary poll taken by Oliver Quayle for NBC News showed 61 per cent of Wallace's Michigan support would vote for Mr. Nixon against Humphrey in November. If the Democrats cannot shape their views on busing to popular demand, they can only hope that Federal judges will do no more about school integration until after election day.
Current Quotes
 "To ban something, you don't just wave a magic wand." — Dale C. Miller, compliance officer for the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Food Safety, on moves to outlaw fireworks.
 "There was some shame, too, over the fact that we had waited so long to begin to keep that promise." — Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, U.S. Senator, on to elect a Catholic to the Senate.
 "Some of these are in the Grandpa Means style. We call them the Grandpa Means style." — Labor mediator Theodore Kheel, on paintings done by AFT-CIO president George Meany.
 "The whole thing about George is that he must have a challenge and what God has given him is the challenge of his life." — Cornelia Wallace, on the injuries suffered by her husband, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, in an assassination attempt.
 "The grim tidings for both McGovern and Humphrey far transcend the success of the stricken Wallace. Thanks to Wallace's own failure to anticipate his future success and his consequent lack of advance planning, he will not enter the Miami Beach convention with delegates in any way commensurate with his popular support. The delegate-selection system works in such a way that Wallace can not rely on many of his first-ballot delegates. He cannot be nominated.
 Moreover, the Wallace voters in Michigan were not for Wallace so much as they were against the Democratic establishment. A variety of polls showed Wallace last in credibility and potential job performance.

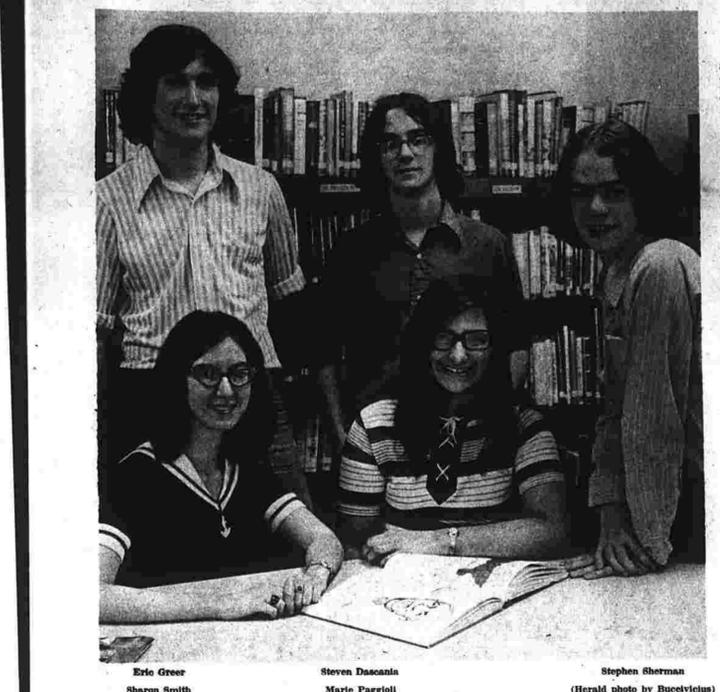

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

When this reporter began covering Connecticut state politics, there had been an unbroken Protestant rule of the state. No Catholic had ever been elected Governor. No Catholic had ever been elected to the United States Senate. If the Democratic party had nominated a Catholic for either office, that was regarded as a deliberate double-barreled tactic to insure a Democratic defeat.
 Then, in 1962, a serious, non-double-barreled Democratic party led by Governor Wilbur Cross nominated, and elected, Augustine Lonergan to the United States Senate. And, in 1960, Robert A. Barley was elected the first Catholic Governor of Connecticut.
 Each of these landmark events was received, by what we believe to have been a great majority of the people in Connecticut, as a matter of joy and pride. They were satisfaction that religious affiliation was no longer disqualifying public talent. They were fulfilling, in Connecticut, our own obligation to one of the basic premisses and promises of American democracy.
 There was some shame, too, over the fact that we had waited so long to begin to keep that promise.
 To be able to elect United States Senators, or to elect a Catholic to the Senate, today the automatic assumption is that it must be wish and will of the Catholic culture which will be honored. We don't think we can establish that the Protestants, in their era of unchallenged supremacy, ever practiced very much charity, but in the end enough restive, concerned Protestants did cast their votes which helped and that supremacy. The highest hope one can have for the new supremacy is that it will not fail to develop, in its time, comparable virtues.

And there shaped up, in the 1967 session of the General Assembly, a battle on a specific proposal which, as it progressed, transformed itself into the symbolic issue of whether or not the Catholics were still only second class citizens of the state.

 The specific measure on which this symbolic test was made was a bill permitting individual Connecticut towns to vote by local referendum to provide bus transportation for children attending parochial schools. There came the dramatic moment when House Speaker Nelson Brown, a Protestant Republican, broke a tie vote in favor of the passage of the bill. That moment marked the psychological end of the whole previous era of Connecticut public life. By the nature of the vote, the bill was a decision of importance far beyond its own direct subject matter.
 The old Connecticut order of unchallenged Protestant supremacy was dead; a new order of equality had been brought forth. It was a great and solemn and inspiring moment in Connecticut history.
 What we wonder today, some 15 years after, is whether the Catholics realize how potentially mighty and dominant they themselves have now become. Where there once was an unwritten law that a Governor had to be Protestant, now there is almost a similar law which says that a Governor must be Catholic. The Catholic culture which was once the tenets of the Protestant culture which seemed automatically in control of legislative decisions and directions, today the automatic assumption is that it must be wish and will of the Catholic culture which will be honored. We don't think we can establish that the Protestants, in their era of unchallenged supremacy, ever practiced very much charity, but in the end enough restive, concerned Protestants did cast their votes which helped and that supremacy. The highest hope one can have for the new supremacy is that it will not fail to develop, in its time, comparable virtues.

The Bible Speaks

By Eugene Brewer

So-called "liberal" give much lip-service to broad-mindedness, fairness, objectivity. They often claim fees from closing their minds to the other side of the aisle, charging them with being archaic reactionaries. But their plea is for their own safety, as evidenced by efforts to prevent contact with speakers and by planned and deliberate disruption of opposing meetings.

Surely colleges should be a bastion of philosophical freedom and balance. Yet a survey of the intellectual life of our country showed that during the past academic year, 55 percent of the speakers in 25 conservative appeared on those campuses. Both sides are exposed, exploits youth in their encounters rather than educating them.

Similar tactics are seen also in the liberal-conservative confrontation in theology, as the Institute of Religion, rational science rather than intelligent reasoning. Demagogues is not the sole property of either. The liberal side has its own demagogues (47) and conservative Pharoahs (47) were equally guilty in their encounters with Jesus.

Coops, who joined the Manchester Bank in 1964, heads the bank's installment loan department.

Like puppets on imaginary strings controlled by the deft movements of the puppeteer's hands, so do the members of the Manchester Civic Orchestra and Choral respond to the signals of the conductor.

With a look, a movement of a finger or the swing of an arm, director Dr. Jack Heller calls for the crash of a cymbal, the zoom of a bass viol, or a diminuendo from the Choral. — all a part of the preparation for Sunday's concert to be held at 7:30 p.m. in Bailey Auditorium at Manchester High School.

Caldwell was issued for the alleged break in November 1968 and although the state insists it followed him across the country and part way back, Simpson denied any knowledge of it and argued a motion to dismiss for lack of a speedy trial. This was denied.

Kasko Can't Say Too Much After Latest R Sox Loss

NEW YORK (AP)—A runner in position to score on "There's no such I can say about that one," shrugged Red Sox manager Ed Kasko after Boston's 10th straight loss to the Yankees.

The victim was Marky Probert, who was ejected from the game in the eighth inning.

Tom Prigmore, manager of the Sox, who started a two-week road trip with a bang, beat the Yankees, 4-3, in Milwaukee, dropped a make-up game in Detroit Thursday night, and lost to the Yankees, 4-3, in Philadelphia Friday night.

They are now 5-0 on the trip, with three games scheduled this weekend with the Yankees. Kasko named Gary Peters 1-0 to start this afternoon. The Yankees were counting with Eric Blinn, brother of Piniella, who pitched in the second game of the Boston hurler Marty Patten put

The Herald Angle

By EARL YOST Sports Editor

Full Cooperation Asked

Several times in recent weeks Herald photographers, out on assignments from this desk, have been given the run-around by parties who requested that their articles be covered.

This is nothing new.

Each time, in the specific cases referred to, the photographer waited around 45 minutes later than the assignment first night and 30 minutes the second before being told to come back an hour later.

The time of the inman on assignment, day or night, is valuable. Many times he has been on assignment on week-ends to cover. He has a schedule to meet and he has to get home.

The policy in this department, and with the other editorial departments, is for the photographer to wait no more than 15 minutes at the site of the scheduled assignment. If the person, or persons, or groups, are not ready, the photographer will go on to the next job or return to the Herald.

"We do not like to expect a photographer to wait no more than 15 minutes at the site of the scheduled assignment. If the person, or persons, or groups, are not ready, the photographer will go on to the next job or return to the Herald."

By MAMUEL YENSA, who rode Riva Ridge, and Joseph Stavola, who rode the 97th running of the $100,000-added Preakness today from his vantage point as an expert Meadowcroft insider in the Pimlico Inn.

As soon as the result becomes official, and even as the winning owner, trainer and jockey are being honored nearby, Ennis will begin his ceremonial task.

On a weathervane, which stands atop the replica of the old Pimlico clubhouse, which was destroyed by fire in 1966, Ennis will paint the colors of the winning owner on a metal horse and jockey.

"I mix all the colors up for each ilk," Ennis said, "and go out there, as soon as the race is official, I throw away all but one, and start painting. I fill in the number on the middle cloth, and then color the silks."

"The only time I had any trouble," Ennis said, "was in 1971 when I was painting the silks of the winner, who was a dark bay, and then color the silks."

Coventry Dinner Given For McKusick

State Forester Harry McKusick, South St., was honored this week at a testimonial dinner marking his retirement after 31 years.

In his position, McKusick has had the responsibility of administering the state forests during a period of extension and increasing public use. In addition to a number of Coventry residents, others present at the dinner included Governor Thomas Meskill and Dan Lufkin Commissioner of the Department of Environmental Protection, both of whom offered tributes to McKusick.

Others present also include McKusick's associates in other state forestry departments in the Northeast, Federal officials, representatives of forestry organizations and many citizens and state employees who have served with him during his work.

Special tribute was paid by former Dean George Garratt of the Yale School of Forestry, who was for many years chairman of the State Park and forest Commission and cited McKusick for his long and valuable service.

The Recreation Commission, meeting this week, voted not to put rafts in the water at Liscie Beach during the approaching swimming season, because the rafts are considered unsafe, and the funds for the purchase of new ones was cut from the 1972-73 budget.

Commission members plan to attend the Town Council meeting on May 22 to discuss the situation and see if some solution can be reached.

The RC has announced that 86 girls and 40 women have signed up for the girls' and women's softball program, now underway.

Gordon Jensen of Storrs, a member of the Penn State swimming team, has been hired by the RC as a lifeguard for the swimming season.

The RC has set registration nights for the annual swimming program, which is co-sponsored by the Mothers Club.

Both sessions will be from 7 to 9 p.m., on June 2 at Robertson School, and on June 5 at Coventry Grammar.

The Coventry Historical Society will meet on May 23 at 8 p.m. at the Society House on South St.

George B. Armstead of Glasbury will speak on antique tools and their uses. His talk will be illustrated with items from his collection. At least 500 Coventry residents attended the open house held at the police station, Wednesday and a large group of school children and town officials attended a special open house later, according to Police Chief Robert Kjellquist. Chief Kjellquist said the open house, the first held, was received so well he plans to hold one again next year. The wives of the police officers acted as hostesses the two days.

Herald

Michele McDonald, Miss U.S.A. 1971, will conclude her year's reign and crown the new Miss U.S.A. in the final moments of the "Miss U.S.A. Beauty Pageant," via satellite from Puerto Rico Saturday at 10 p.m. on CBS (Channel 3 in Hartford).

Joanne Woodward, an active conservationist, narrates the ABC news special, "The Eagle and the Hawk," a vivid portrayal of America's great predatory birds. The Monday Night Special will be aired at 8 p.m. on Channels 8 (New Haven) and 40 (Springfield).

Wildlife with Captain Bob

In the Age of Aquarius, where "conservation" and "ecological balance" have become catchwords of the times, Bob Cottle — better known as "Captain Bob" on WTIC-TV (Channel 3) — instills children and adults alike with respect for the wildlife that roam our land and dwell in its waters. It is this New Englander's legendary regard for the land and sea, plus a desire to impart this regard to future generations that accounts for the success of "Captain Bob's" weekly television program.

Cottle, who speaks with a distinct Downeast flavor, even looks like a white-haired sea captain, the kind who sailed Yankee clippers out of Gloucester for San Francisco or Cathay. But in working out the format of his program, Cottle's outlook is definitely contemporary and in tune with the times.

"The main objective of the Captain Bob program," Cottle said, "is to infuse an appreciation of wildlife into children and adults, for that matter. Each program deals with a different subject, not just one particular animal. One program might be devoted to the subject of seagulls, and the next to the many types of antlers and horns found on different animals around the world. I usually start the program by showing a nature film on the subject I'll be dealing with, then draw a picture of it on the drawing board, while giving viewers various little-known facts about the subject.

Cottle owes his interest in nature to his grandfather, "a seafaring New Englander. When I was a youngster, I would just sit at his knee for hours, enthralled by his stories about deer and squirrels, or his adventures while sailing a ship out on the ocean. As he continued to talk, I could just picture them as vividly in my mind's eye as if I had been there, or had watched the animals he was talking about."

For children who have never had the experience of listening to a grandfather tell them stories collected from the far corners of the globe, "Captain Bob" combines the dying art of storytelling with that of fine art.

Studied Art

Cottle was born in Brockton, Mass., and graduated from the Vesper George Art School in Boston, and also studied art in Provincetown.

"Then World War II broke out, and temporarily interrupted my career, as it did the careers of many others. I served in the Air Force as a flying instructor, and once that stint was over, I decided to use my artistic training as a newspaper artist."

"They were a combination of nature fact and fantasy," he recalls. "We created a little fellow called 'Jasper,' and tried with little success to place him in a newspaper as a comic strip. "In 1953, we discovered television, and now it seems that these little stories actually did fit into a television format better than a newspaper. I created little nature stories and illustrated them, but a professional actor would deliver them on the air.

TV Auditions

"Then it was suggested that instead of having an actor do the show, I do it myself. After six auditions for a large television station in the Boston area, I finally sold them the idea of the 'Captain Bob' show," Cottle said.

"Captain Bob" spent the next 12 years on the New England air waves, gaining invaluable experience directing, producing and acting in his own show.

By utilizing a background rich in nature lore, his own boundless creative imagination, and careful research, Bob Cottle and "Captain Bob" prove to thousands of captivated viewers that an educational and informative program can easily be entertaining as well.

"I think a great many people still feel that an educational program must be dry and uninteresting. That may have been true years ago, but certainly not today, with programs such as 'Sesame Street' debunking that theory," Cottle said. "And I hope that's what we're achieving with 'Captain Bob.' Although I'm teaching viewers about the world around them, I hope I'm entertaining them as well. That's what's most important."

The plants Hopi Indians use for weaving are being killed by emissions from strip mining operations in Arizona. A PBS special examines the problem in "Black Coal: Red Power," Monday at 8 p.m. on (24).

Supply Outweighs Demand In TV Talk Show Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Cavett's show is on three it. The same pattern, he believes, is making the other end of the broadcasting day a battle ground now. The "Tonight" show on NBC became popular with Steve Allen and went on to be the most talked-about show on the air during the Jack Paar day. Now it has nailed down a big and apparently unmovable audience with Johnny Carson.

"There has been lots of competition," the executive continued. "ABC tried with Jerry Lewis and Joey Bishop before Cavett, CBS had Merv Griffin. The truth is that there are just a certain number of TV sets that stay on in the late evening. When too many shows compete for the same audience, and for the advertisers' dollars, it is a set-up for financial disaster—for the networks and for their affiliates."

Another student of television, a former network vice president, brushed off Cavett's troubles as "a cyclical phenomenon of television."

"It is not unusual," he said. "One type of show does well and then the networks or the packagers think they can get advertisers for another show like it. Then the field gets crowded and the most recent ones or the marginal ones drop off."

"Compare it with shelf space in a store: When there are a lot of brands of cereal crowding limited space, the ones that don't sell well or come along too late don't make the shelf."
