labor Joining The Establishment Give George Meany a little more polishing in the department of grammar and elecution, and put him at a microphone voicing the sentiments he normalexpresses these days, and you would have the very image of the crusty captain of industry conservative who would have been the natural opponent for Meany himself back in his less complicated youth.

But if it is sometimes difficult to recognize Meany himself as a labor leadon the war in Vietnam, and the directions he takes in domestic politics, it would be inaccurate to assume that Meany gets where he is all by himself, merely as a result of certain personequired to guard itself against come, these days, from different directions. One of these threats is foreign competilievers in high tariffs inside labor than there used to be, and which also casts its indirect influence into foreign policy con-

Another of the threats to organized labor comes, on the home scene, from those minorities down below, who are seeking union status in order to make their own climb up into their share of the American dream. Where organized labor once feared the top of the American social and economic and political order, it now fears mainly the bottom of that order. The bottom is demanding and reckless and importunate, whereas the top is calm and full of bargaining concessions.

The same change of circumstance which tends to make organized labor hawkish and conservative in foreign policy, and a defender of the social and ecnomic and political status quo on the domestic scene can also be detected in present day attitudes toward the income

The income tax was once considered the instrument of liberal political policy, a sort of share the wealth instrument But today it gains more and more support from captains of industry while ordinary wage earners begin to turn against it, suspicious that it is now be coming a share the burden gimmick directed against them.

All these changes have their claim on our attention because these are days in which Mr. Meany, the biggest single individual in American labor today, is frequently seen making public confession of his dislike for Senator McGovern and his most typical supporters and public intimation of his more equable regard for the Republican who is already in the

Senator McGovern may be going to pick up and weld together some new kind of coalition in American politics, founded in discontent with the way we have been doing everything up to now, but that section of us which can be classified as organized labor is not going to provide a very large proportion of that coalition. Labor, having fought its way to a share of American life worth keeping and defending, is now beginning to find its way toward the politics of keeping and defending. So far as Mr. Meany is concerned, the great revolution is over, and he can't imagine any good reason why he should join Senator McGovern in proclaiming that a new one has to begin.

How many of us, suddenly challenged to tell the truth about something that might be considered a revelation of our own inner character, find a treacherously irresolute little quaver working its way into the operation of our vocal chords as they struggle to make a quick, impressive, innocent answer?

As many of us as have ever experienced the infinite capacity our own voices have for sounding guilty when we turning shifty at the very moment we are supposed to look straight into those of a questioner, or felt our blood pressure calls for calm — as many of us as that will render an instant, unequivocal, firm - voiced, eye-to-eye but calm negative verdict on any proposal that our society accept the use of a new kind of He detector which analyzes fluctuations

McGovern's Sunday Punch

In addition to offering voters integrity, Senator George McGovern also has an offering for the politicians: organization. The centerplece of the McGovern camsign has now surfaced and it involves the launching of a youth army to lead a massive registration assault which would vastly change the shape of the American electorate. The aim is to pull in 18 million young voters, register them and then get them to the polls. Because young people usually have the lowest participation rate in political campaigns, the McGovern plan amounts to a minor political revolution. It aims to convert the young voters from the lowest to the highest participation rate. This fall, there will be 25 million poten ial first-time voters between the ages of 18 and 24. If past patterns prevail, less han half of them will vote. The McGov ern plan is to raise that participation level to 70 per cent, and the expectation is that 75 per cent of them will vote the McGovern ticket. Because the new federal registration law requires the states sign up new voters as late as October th for the November election there is time to get the massive registration drive underway and have it pay off. don't wake up to a campaign until well into the fall, and then in the past, it has been too late to register. The new date hanges all that. In addition, a marked shift is underway amongst students They are registering at a rate very comparable to older citizens. It is the youngr non-students who are not registering and it is this vast group, aged 18 to 24, which must be sold on becoming part of the electoral process. Some 190,000 volinteers would be turned loose right after the convention, and the hope is that young people can persuade young people Whether this massive conversion possible may be open to question, but if t can be done, the chance of a McGovern victory will be highly enhanced. The ld pros don't think the plan will work, out so far they have a perfect record in misconstruing the force of the McGovern campaign. They could be wrong again. — MIDDLETOWN PRESS.

Their office reported that their records survived the fire because they were stored in fireproof files.

Dr. Robert Karns, one of four doctors associated with Man-chester Radiologists said this morning that patients requiring X rays should call the Xray department at Manchester Memorial Hospital where this work will be handled by appointments. He said that his of fice's records are intact and no patient will have to have X rays taken over again because X rays are processed the same day they are taken.

There are some people who have reasons other than their diet for having 1 o w blood sugar. These include such things as an abnormal function of the pancreas and glands, but I assume from your statement that you have had an examination that these problems have been eliminated.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb— The first time I wrote you I didn't tell you what was really bothering me, but I will this time. I had a blood sugar test in the hospital and it went down to 40 so I have low blood sugar and I nearly passed out.

How low can it go? My temperature is always a point lower than normal, about 97 degrees and I have a headache most of the time. Is this part of low blood sugar? One doctor put me on a sugar free diet and the next said no special diet.

Bike sugar in coffee, syrup on hot cakes, and try to eat a diet based more on lean meats, lean poultry, and an adequate amount of vegetables and fruit. In brief, avoid the sugars and starches and be sure that you get sufficient protein and vegetables with roughage. This will go a long way toward helping your problem. Avoid sweet liquids. These pass directly through the stomach and are absorbed almost at once into the blood sugar to go up sharply, then rebound to low levels.

There is a wide variation

Formal Policy Asked On Health Measures

Mrs. Dorothy Coleman, who is also head nurse for Manchester schools, presented her report to the school board this week. She emphasised the need for a formal policy, adopted by the board and compiled as rules and regulations to be enforced. She cited the many times when principals, teachers, and even murses, followed different paths in similar health problems or in accidents by pupils. She said it is time rules were spelled they become too large to cope with."

Noting that Dr. Robert Galwin. "is doing a fine job" for the school system, even in his part-time capacity, she said she agrees with a statement by school board member Dr. Walter Schardt, "All the things now mandated by law are too much to do with only a part-time physician."

Wallace Backer Says Red Tape Hampers Him

EAST HARTFORD, Conn.

(AP) — Charles Burke, who wants to run for Congress in the 1st District under the George Wallace party, said Wednesday that bureaucratic red tape discriminates against minority party candidates.

"I feel that I have been discriminated against a minority party candidates." criminated against as a minor-ity political party," he said.
"As usual, the bureaucrats have succeeded in taking a simple matter and made it so complicated that over half of the toyn clerks cannot under-stand the procedure of the petition forms I have turned in." Burke said he has turned in about 1,500 of the 1,800 signatures needed to get his name on the ballot in November. 'I am beginning to wonder if there is a conspiracy on a town or even on a state level to keep me off of the ballot," he said.

Burke said that though he had until September to get the red tape unraveled, the complicated procedure is time-consuming and burdensome. "It seems that when a candidate tries to get on the ballot and represent the middle-class taxpayers, he is either shot with a gun or killed by bureaucratic red tape," Burke said. Signatures must be collected separately for each of the 13 towns in the district, he said, and the petitions must be filed with the individual town clerks.

Closing the gap seemed like a long task, but with every second we inche closer to the front-running pair. On the 13th lap, misfortune hit Joe Elmore in the No. 62 when he spun and blew a tire. This gave us the opportunity to close the gap. On the restart, which was con fusing, we started in the fourth position. ourth turn, Fox pulled the 33 to the outside and passed the leaders as they got over-anxious and crashed. We escaped the melee. On the ensuing start, we were sitting outside of the front row and it seemed like a drag race between Foo 14th circuit but on the backstretch, Fox gave it everything he had and overtook him. The reward, the first feature win in one and a half years of trying. The run from the pit to the starting line where Greg and the car were seem-
