Coventry Tax Deadline Aug. 1

Tax Collector Audrey Bray is reminding Coventry residents and property owners that tax returns for the first quarter of October 1, 1971 are due and payable either at her office in the Town Hall or by mail, in which case they must be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope with their payment.

Mr. Bray will hold additional office hours for the convenience of taxpayers beginning July 22 when her office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to noon. The same hours will apply also on July 29.

On July 26, hours will be 7 to 9 p.m. in addition to the regular business hours. Bills amounting to $50 or less may be paid this month, those exceeding more than $50 may be paid in this month and the second in January 1972.

No bills are sent out on the Monday payment.

Persons who recently purchased property in town and who did not receive a tax bill should contact Mrs. Bray at her home, 35 Westfield St., in Coventry, or at her office, 70 Westfield St., Coventry, R.I. 06220. She will be glad to help them if they did not receive a bill and have taxes due, or if they are responsible to contact her.

Coventry All-Stars The Coventry American League All-Stars of the Little League have been invited to participate in the Toiland Tour, which was directed by "All the way" U.S. servicemen involved in the Vietnam conflict. The tour will be held from August 11 to August 13 at the U.S. Servicemen's Club in Hawaii. The club is currently training for the tour. The club is currently training for the tour. "What is the name of the pretty flowers?" This is a question asked many times a day at the checkout counters in the Highland Park Market on Highland St. at Wyly St. The answer is "Lantana".

A row of eight Lantana plants in hanging baskets extends across the front of the store under the edge of the porch. Gracefully drooping vines bear a profusion of small flowers in a color that has been described as rosy lilac against a background of green leaves.

Lantana is a tropical plant and thrives in hot weather with strong, full sun. These flowers will continue blooming and the vines will grow longer until fall.

John (Jack) Devaney, owner of Highland Park Market was attracted to Lantana when he saw it at Rockport, Mass., where it hangs from light poles along the street and where he also saw it across the front of a Rockport grocery store.

He bought his first plants three years ago, learned how to take care of them and makes it his personal responsibility to see that they are watered and fertilized regularly and turned occasionally so that all sides of the plant get the benefit of the sun.

Frequent watering is essential. Watering, he learned quickly, is most important in a hanging basket exposed to the breeze as well as to the sun; the plants need watering twice a day, in the morning and late in the afternoon. On a very warm day they are watered a third time, at about noon.

Mr. Devaney does not try to make them grow too fast; rather, depending on how rapidly they are growing.

Jane Fonda On Red Radio

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda gave a radio broadcast and denounced the U.S. bombing of cities in North Vietnam.

The local team of the Vietnam News Agency press corps, which was directed by U.S. servicemen involved in the Vietnam conflict, heard her voice on the radio. She denounced the U.S. bombing of cities in North Vietnam, which she said was "senseless and barbaric."

She also urged the U.S. to stop bombing and to start negotiations for peace in Vietnam.

South Windsor Town Eyes Cluster Housing For Reduced Budget Impact

Whether it will be known as Planned Unit Development (PUD), Planned Residential Development (PRD), or referred to as Cluster Housing, zoning regulations in South Windsor are about to take on a new look with the potential for many new residents about to become South Windsores.

The town fathers, while eyeing the innovation with skepticism and trying to prevent an upsurge of new people while maintaining the town's character, are being paid off, also.

Secret Talks

Le Duc Tho Returns to Paris

PARIS (AP) — Hanoi Politburo member Le Duc Tho returned to Paris today and said he is prepared to hold new secret talks with Dr. Henry Kissinger if Kissinger has "something new" to discuss.

Tho, returning from Hanoi by way of Peking and Moscow after an absence of about two months, spoke briefly with newsmen at Le Bourget Airport.

His immediate resignation of South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and the setting up of a coalition government in Saigon.

The semipublic play was held. Tho and Kissinger met for a second time on July 13 in Paris, but no apparent results.

Bombers Rattle Quang Tri Area

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. B52 bombers killed nearly 300 North Vietnamese troops and smashed their equipment in massive air strikes on two sides of Quang Tri City, North Vietnam, announced today.

The bombers flew over 100 strikes across South Vietnam from Thursday to Sunday, unleashing more than 2,500 tons of explosives on Quang Tri and its surrounding areas.

Two-thirds of the strikes were concentrated in the northern part of the province, where U.S. forces were probing around the area to prevent North Vietnamese troops from reaching Hanoi.

They said the river to the west forms a natural barrier on that flank and it was being watched closely for infiltration by small groups that might try to swim across during the night.

Wage Control Cuts Ordered by Courts

WASHINGTON (AP) — An hour and a half was granted today in the first successful court challenge of President Nixon's economic stabilization program, as a federal judge has ordered a halt to the wage controls.

The court's decision is a major victory for those who oppose the controls.

Connally Takes Swipe At Democrat Candidate

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, a Democrat, has fired a verbal barrage in what promises to be a continuing White House campaign against a Democratic presidential nominee.

Connally, who recently lost the Democratic nomination for his own party, took aim at the Democratic nominee.

Meskill's Division of a Surplus Did He Miss Political Bonanza?

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — One big city Democratic mayor says Republican Gov. Thomas J. Meskill has lost a political chance to pick up "some political clout" by not using the $9 million state treasury surplus for direct aid to municipalities.

"If we got that $9 million in revenue sharing from the state we could reduce our property taxes by one mill. The people would go bananas and think the governor is the greatest guy to ever come down the pike," Mayor Bruno said.

Town Aid

But Democratic leaders had a different view of what resulted in the surplus.

"That surplus wasn't raised by economy on its part; it was just a balanced budget," said Senate President Pro Tem Charles T. Alfano, Jr., of Suffield.

"The announcement was just a gimmick by the governor," he added.

"This is nothing surprising. We've been saying all along there would be a surplus of $2.8 million and it was before July 1," he added.

Nominees Open Campaign Race On a New Note

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A new coalition has given leadership to the Democratic party — and George McGovern and Thomas P. Eagleton have less than four months to shape it into a national majority to win the White House from Richard Nixon.

The coalition is being built by McGovern, who is the Democratic nominee for president, and Eagleton, who is the Democratic nominee for vice president.

McGovern Tries Out Powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate George S. McGovern has taken a major step in testing out his powers as president-elect by signing an executive order to strip Andrews Air Force Base and says he likes the feel of it.

"We've got to get used to that," McGovern said, stepping into the office of the base's commander, Brig. Gen. DCS, at 10:30 a.m. McGovern said he was "going to be in charge of this base."

Then, turning more serious, he said he knows he has a long way to go before he is using the two presidential jets parked near his charter aircraft.

Improvement With Room For More
 There is the television network, we think, some measure of complacency for their performance in the first round from Miami Beach.
 There was an improvement in style and content of coverage, over four years ago.
 By that we mean that the network, on the whole, kept themselves closer to their own proper business and to the real business of the network than they did four years ago.
 Or, to put it another way, they gave the convention a little more chance to enact itself, and not become merely another TV-managed production.
 What criticism we have of the first 1972 performance lies in the same area as our praise, and concerns the same problem of what the cameras should most properly be offering.
 And in this respect, we buy what John J. O'Connor, television critic, of the New York Times, had to say.
 "Trivial," wrote O'Connor, "is allowed to hinder basic coverage of the convention itself."
 "Wednesday evening, for example, I. W. Abel, leader of the United Steelworkers of America, went to the podium to second the nomination of Senator Henry M. Jackson. Mr. Abel was the first major national figure to be heard from the podium and, predictably, his speech turned out to be one of the convention's strongest statements against George McGovern. Surely it could have been anticipated as of interest to the viewer."
 "The speech was carried in full, however, only by the American Broadcasting Company, The National Broadcasting Company, and CBS was getting inconsequential reports from its floor staff, and CBS was on a long commercial break. Both networks recovered near the end of the speech. Mr. Cronkite briefly explained: 'I. W. Abel is making one of the best speeches yet. Let's listen. I'll tell you in later.' He much for the much-awaited impact of live television."
 "Pulling the camera away from the central events in the convention hall," O'Connor continued, "was sometimes justified, most notably in Senator McGovern's appearance before radical demonstrators in his hotel lobby. And, admittedly, a good many viewers may not be interested in nominating speeches."
 "But a good many are and, given the limited and controlled situation for the convention, the network's coverage, more TV exposure might have been provided for the few serious viewers interested in the various candidates. If nothing else, sticking more closely to the core of the convention would have reduced the amount of trivia being energetically produced on the program."
 "More concentration on the convention itself might, to be specific, have enabled the knights of the microphone to be a little more chivalrous and a little less insistent with the families of candidates. They could have thrown away some of the microphone to the camera. They might not have had time to let themselves become the eyes pawns of the propaganda act which came along."
 "I suggest, therefore, that if you, the viewers, who anything at all is going on the podium, even if it is official trivia, pass up media-conscious official trivia."
 What? No? No?
 We kept hearing the Democratic National Convention, congratulating itself on its own inclusion of all the minorities in existence, the young, the poor, the female, the blacks, the Indians, the Chinese.
 We were surprised as well as pleased, therefore, when, for its nominees, it came up with a well-of-white-washed white Methodist male, all as if it were really no fault disqualification at all to be middle-aged, to be white, to be male, to own a swimming pool, to be a Methodist.
 We would have waded among the nominee of such a truly open and representative convention could turn out to be some poor young Indian maiden.
Earle Lock Perseveres
 Not only was it good news for Terryville but for all of Connecticut to learn that the venerable Earle Lock Co. had emerged from bankruptcy. Its affairs cleared of financial entanglements, the firm should now be restored to a firm place in the market. The firm was a success story in the annals of business.
 No company deserves its first tour through the courts than Earle Lock. It was the nation's first television manufacturer. Its products were internationally hailed. Almost 100 years ago (1870) it was being honored at the nation's Centennial in Philadelphia.
 At the peak of its industrial might, it employed as many as 3,500 employees. Like so many other home-based industries it has been abandoned by a larger firm, but there seems to be every indication that Terryville and Earle Lock will long be linked. For all of this it is good to hear that Earle Lock, a Connecticut-conceived plant in our midst.—WATERBURY REPUBLICAN

Back Home To Politics, Too
 For a time, there was an uneasy, but interesting, possibility that the Democratic nomination at Miami Beach might wind up its affairs and go home as basically different and new as it itself claimed to be.
 That was before the convention reached the long awaited, but still convoluted, oratorical admiral provided by Senator Kennedy.
 That was before the nominee turned to "Happy Days Are Here Again" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."
 That was before the Convention made religion the key factor in its selection of a candidate for Vice President.
 That was before the various defeated candidates for the Presidential nomination had posed, within moments of having cut him in pieces in down-on-the-floor conversations, before the arena of eternal fellowship draped around the shoulders of the nominee.
 That was before the nominee himself delivered himself of that immortal pledge, central to every campaign since 1840, to provide the American people with "peace and prosperity."
 That was before the nominee, decrying excessive defense spending in one breath, was pledging himself, in the second breath, to another classic promise—not to allow America to become a second rate power militarily.
 By this time, the delegates themselves, and the watching and listening public, were beginning to find themselves on familiar ground.
 A convention is still a convention is still a convention is still a convention. And the new politics is still, perhaps, politics.
 The fundamental difference between one campaign and another may still be more a matter of her lines and television sparkle and sound of tones and the shouting slogans and the anger and perplexation in crescendo than it is a matter of real difference in principles and aims and programs.
 Sometimes some of these campaign slogans obtain an inordinate popularity because they seem to promise many things to many people, and in such instances they can be regarded as dangerous.
 One heard, at Miami Beach, the first trial flights of a new slogan about "bringing America home" in various ways — not merely in the matter of troops from Vietnam, but in a sense of returning America to some simpler, purer, nostalgic domestic yesterday which is to be discovered, happily, at the end of some new trail of revolutionary adventure.
 We would all like to be "home" again, but one thing that ought to be said at the start of this campaign and that ought to be repeated so long as this theme lingers is that this country cannot fulfil its own promises and obligations to itself nor its responsibilities to mankind if it indulges itself in some shallow philosophy of comfort and isolationism withdrawn from a troubled world. What we need is not to be less in the world, but to be in it in a different way, following different principles and patterns of responsibility. Candidate McGovern speaks of peace, as all candidates do. But peace does not come in a cheap wine; it can only be built by participation in the troubles of the world, by abstaining from them. Senator McGovern's seeming invitation to a spell of just taking care of ourselves is potentially more reckless than any of the fiscal proposals for which he is considered vulnerable. Not to come home, but to go forth in the right way — that is still the real key to peace and security, for ourselves, for everybody.

Inside Report

The Wallace Specter

By Andrew Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

MIAMI BEACH — The underlain during primary campaign to be turned aside by factor workers who said they could not back McGovern because they were for Wallace. McGovern's upturn battle, were revealed by the remarkable scene on the convention floor late Tuesday night when Wallace made his dramatic appearance.
 The widest demonstration came not from Alabama, Florida or Texas but from Michigan, symbol of liberal-labor power. Michigan delegates representing Wallace's May 18 sweep there erupted in a frenzied, arm-waving demonstration. Such sentiment in the industrial North is the rationale for a new Wallace strategy of campaigning this fall in carefully selected Northern areas for Democratic candidates fearful of being dragged to defeat on the losing issue.
 "George remembers Richard Nixon's 1960 campaign for a Republican Congress," a key Wallace strategist told us. Similarly, Wallace plans to campaign for embattled Northern Democrats to "save" them from the pre-bucking party platform and simultaneously accumulate IOWAs for Wallace's ambitious design to run for President in 1976.
 Under no conditions will Wallace endorse either the McGovern or Nixon Presidential tickets. He will publicly treat McGovern as a renegade Democrat who has deserted his party, with Wallace campaigning as a national Democratic fighter to safeguard the party's traditional base among blue-collar workers. McGovern confronts an active Wallace autumn campaign spouting the same line that gave him the Michigan Presidential primary victory and a total vote in all the primary states approaching McGovern's own.
 Moreover, Wallace's failure to endorse the Democratic Presidential nominee threatens Democrats from Wallace's Democrats even if Wallace never leaves Alabama this fall. That explains elaborate efforts by McGovern agents here, and during preliminary work on the platform and credentials in Washington, to another Wallace with all the national attention and support he has.
 For example, McGovern's operatives privately told Wallace's flustering second visit to the hotel in Wallingford. McGovern is getting the answer to this question: How could Wallace win an absolute majority of the primary vote in liberal Michigan? In his hour at the hotel, McGovern told Wallace he has dangerous to McGovern than Wallace leading a third party. White Wallace's return to the Democratic fold is a move that Wallace Democrats to vote for Richard M. Nixon, thirty-party candidate Wallace would predictably detract many more voters from the President.
 How much active campaigning Wallace actually does depends on his escape from assassination, has given him even more national prestige than he gains by his amazing primary victories.
 Whether anti-McGovern Democrats, Wallace is convinced McGovern faces disaster in November and wants to lead in "restructuring" the party. Whatever the accuracy of those predictions, the party's coming campaign will promote just that result.
 This time the complaint is that they are too much in evidence.
 You can see them all the time at the State Capitol.
 You can see them openly operating to try to buttonhole and influence legislators.
 And now, one short ear after the lobbyist has been forced out into the open, the legislators are beginning to entertain proposals which would, by barring the lobbyists from rooms and floors where they can reach legislators, and thus keep out of public view, and make them subterranean characters again.
 The object of driving the lobbyist back into their holes, like the object of forcing them out into the open, would be to create a purer Legislature.
 And it seems to be the theory of some of the legislative crusaders, like Representative Vella of Enfield, and House Speaker Reichford of Danbury, that even the mere visual absence of the lobbyists from the central arena of legislative activity would have a benevolent result.
 But one of the most venerable of all political laws is that which looks cleaner and purer isn't necessarily that way.
 Unlike the more sensitive members of the present Legislature, this amateur guardian of the public weal always feels better when he can see the lobbyist at work than he does when he doesn't know where they are and whom they may be wooing in some dark corner.
 There used to be a time when the lobbyists never really bothered to show up at the Capitol itself, but could content themselves with the proper kind of briefcase visit to certain key offices in downtown Hartford—offices where, in those dark and wicked days—most legislative decisions were accomplished.
 Since then, the law-making process itself has been brought out into the open, relatively speaking, that is, and so has such of the lobbying. And, although there are certain days when the lobbyist do cluster in the halls, we think the typical legislator feels more flattered than harassed.
 However, if Speaker Reichford's sense was to accomplish something all defenders of purity can hail, let him devise some means of compelling these gentlemen, in their official recesses, to list the actual amount of client money involved in their hiring and their work.
 If these gentlemen really spend that much time working on legislators for such small fees, they ought to be haled before their Grievance Committee, for undercharging.

In New York last month that the hall made noise studies and the competition would be announced that the noise level was limited and Fischer at the time was about the same, with no seemed interested only in hour without the cameras running.
 The Reykjavik public, meanwhile, appeared to be losing patience. Fischer traits 0/2 in the 24-game competition. Spaskey needs 10 more points to retain his world title, Fischer 12 1/2 to take it. A win counts one point, a draw half, a loss nothing.
 A four-member international committee presiding over the championship voted 3 to 1 to Fischer to reject Fischer's appeal of the referee's decision that the American had forfeited his second match.
 Protesting for the decision to disallow a match and no such excuse had been provided.
 Fischer's lawyer, Andrew Davis of New York, argued in vain to the committee that if a player offered to conditions it would be enough to halt the play.
 Fischer's attitude complicated saving the financial arrangements for the competition and threatened to cost him much of the money he had piled from the organizers in draw-out negotiations precedent the match.
 Thoralfson said the organizers do not intend to pay the loser's share of the purse if Fischer's nonappearance Thursday causes his disqualification.
 The loser has been scheduled to get $48,000 from the chess federation, $48,000 from a $10,000 purse offered by London investment banker James Blaker at 10:30 a.m. at Westbill City. He also had $100,000 from the city.
 Removal of the cameras could eliminate the television prize of $10,000 and $10,000 and move cash.
 Thoralfson said, a New York promoter who bought the film rights, said "the whole financial structure of the match" depended on the filming.

Mayer John Thompson will be leasing a statement Monday on the Board of Education's request for an additional allocation of $305,000 to the $10,175,000 education budget of the Board of Directors approved in May.
 The nature of the statement was not disclosed.
 The education budget continues to be the topic of conversations in many places.
 At the directors' meeting Tuesday night, Dr. Salvatore Squatro Jr., a Manchester dentist, asked that the program absorb the School Health Program, one of the many programs cut from the education budget by the Board of Education. The program cost about $25,000 and provided dental examinations for children in the primary grades and dental health education programs.
 Thompson told Dr. Squatro to not his request in writing and he would refer the matter to the Advisory Board of Health for its recommendation.
 The letter, written in part by Squatro, was a pleasant break from most communications the directors receive. The letter, written in part by Squatro, was a pleasant break from most communications the directors receive.
 Both Mrs. Sadlovi and Harold Pohl, president of the Manchester firefighters union, questioned the proposed contract with the Manchester teachers union. Pohl wanted to know if the proposed contract met the guideline of a 3.5 per cent increase which Thompson mentioned in his budget message in May. Thompson said, "It is our understanding that it meets these guidelines."
 Thompson explained that the proposed pay increase is 3.5 per cent plus salary step increases due to teachers.
 Board secretary Anthony Petranzoni read a letter Tuesday's meeting which was a pleasant break from most communications the directors receive. The letter, written in part by Squatro, was a pleasant break from most communications the directors receive.

Mets' Newest Member, Instant Hero

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Until Friday night, everyone had managed to resist the temptation to call Dave Schneck a hero. He was the 66th player to be drafted into the New York Mets organization in 1968. He was the 66th player to be drafted into the New York Mets organization in 1968. He was the 66th player to be drafted into the New York Mets organization in 1968.

With five outfielders adrift before the Mets' home run, Schneck had a 300-pitcher's record and a 300-pitcher's record. He was the 66th player to be drafted into the New York Mets organization in 1968. He was the 66th player to be drafted into the New York Mets organization in 1968.

Oakland Sweeps Pair from Yankees A's Quick Change Has Kline Talking

NEW YORK (AP)—"It was painful. That's for sure. It happened so fast." Steve Kline, New York Yankees right-hander, was talking about the dramatic quick turn that changed him from a perfect, no-hit pitcher for six innings into a 9-0 loser for the Oakland A's Friday night.

Twins Jinx Red Sox, Fisk Belts No. 13

MINNEAPOLIS—St. Paul (AP)—The Boston Red Sox apparently are having trouble with the Minnesota Twins. "We win a lot of games and we don't gain any ground. We lose one game and we lose ground."

East Hartford's Legion Wins over Manchester

By PAUL GLIHA and score runs, we have no doubt that East Hartford's pitcher Jim Intravvia had things very much under control as he allowed Manchester's Legion only three hits in the first three innings, after which he pitched ball, he stole second. Ken Hawley walked, didn't even let a Manchester batter reach first. He struck out only three batters but had enough on the ball to get Coach Wally Fortin's club right at someone. East Hartford went on to post a 2-0 victory over the locals. The winners now sport a 5-2 record, while the local nines record slipped to 4-5.

Shortstop Sets League Mark Error-Plagued Benquez Problem Child for Kasko

MINNEAPOLIS—ST. PAUL (AP)—Eddie Kasko faced the decision today of whether to give Boston Red Sox rookie Ben Benquez a rest. "Maybe he'll come out of it if he gives him a rest," said Tom Yawkey, manager of the Red Sox. "But getting him out of the lineup could hurt him, too."

Perry Hurls 15th Victory, Orioles Dump Chi Sox Twice

Big Brother was watching and little brother couldn't have been happier. "I think there was a little anxiety over what might happen, but I was delighted. It finally came to me," Detroit catcher Tom Haller said Friday night after his older brother, Umpire Bill Haller, had spent the evening looking over his shoulder.

Moriarty's Triumph Behind Johnson's Bat

Gene Johnson won 3-4 and knocked in four runs for Moriarty Brothers bombed the Vernon Orioles, 11-4, last night at the St. Thomas Seminary Field. Moriarty's new sport is a 5-6 record, while the Orioles dropped to 4-6.

Kelley Injured

After pitching six strong innings against the International League's Norfolk Tides last night in Norfolk, Va., Tom Kelley of the Atlanta Braves returned his ankle. Kelley started for the National League against the St. Louis Cardinals last night and one run. He walked three and struck out five and left with a 2-1 edge, which was also the final score. Kelley was the winning pitcher.

CPTV Special Wins Award

"Because He Hears a Different Drummer," a CPTV documentary film on the utilization of educational innovation in Connecticut under Title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, has received an Educational Pacesetter Award, one of twelve awards given nationally by the President's National Advisory Council on Supplementary Centers and Services.

The award was given jointly to CPTV; Dr. Roger Richards, Title III coordinator, State Department of Education; and Dr. George Kinkade, Title III consultant, State Department of Education.

"Because He Hears a Different Drummer" focused on classrooms throughout the state to document new teaching methods which stress the individuality of each student. The film was telecast last November.

Copies of the film are available for loan from the State Department of Education film library.
