Voters May Make $8.4 Million Choices

By GLENN GAMBER (Herald Reporter)

Some $8,386,000 in proposed bond issues may be on the voting machines this fall. Hearings on proposed bond issues for alterations and additions to the town's two junior high schools, renovation of the Cooper Hill Water Treatment Plant, selected highway reconstruction, and various new sidewalk installations will be conducted by the Board of Directors Tuesday, Aug. 1 beginning at 8 p.m. in the Waddell School on Broad St.

If the four proposed bond issues were authorized by the directors for a referendum vote, Manchester voters would be considering whether or not some $8.4 million should be borrowed to build additions and make alterations to both Bennett and Irving Junior High Schools. The cost would be $3.4 million for each school.

Also to be considered would be a proposed bond for $500,000 for water system improvements. Most of this, between $500,000 and $600,000, would go to pay for renovations to the Cooper Hill Treatment Plant. The treatment plant is believed by town officials to be the source of taste and odor problems in West Side water.

Another estimated $100,000 would pay for the installation of a new well in the town water system. According to Town manager Robert Weiss, the new well would be dug either at Charter Oak Field or along the Hocknum River.

The remainder of the bond money would be spent on improvements in the water distribution system, Weiss says.

The sidewalk and road proposals are outgrowths of so-called "mini-bonds" first suggested some time ago by Deputy Mayor Pascal Prignano. It was his idea to start on a program of small bond issues to make needed improvements in town roads and sidewalks.

The road bond would be for $536,000, included in that would be some $300,000, the estimated town share for work on Adams St. and W. Middle Tpk. which would be done under the federal Urban System program. Under the program, designed to upgrade local intertown roads, the federal government pays half the cost of roadwork, the state one quarter, and the town one quarter.

Adams St. would be reconstructed from Center St. to the bridge over the Hocknum River. W. Middle Tpk. would be reconstructed from Green Manor Blvd. to Cheney Technical School.

Other roadwork included in the proposed bond is the reconstruction of Hillard St. from Broad St. to the railroad tracks at an estimated $195,000.

Sidewalks would also be installed along one side of Hillard St. The sidewalk cost is included in the $195,000 estimate.

The fourth project included in road bond would be improvements to the Spruce and Charter Oak Sts. intersection at an estimated $41,000.

A $200,000 "mini-bond" would be used to install sidewalks along one side of Hackmatack St. from S. Main St. to Keeney St.; along a small section of Keeney St.; from Hackmatack to existing sidewalk there; along Oakland St. from South St. to N. School St.; along N. School St. from Oakland St. west; along all of Autumn St.; and on Wells and Oak Sts. where gaps in the sidewalk now exist.

According to Weiss, it has not been decided which sides of these streets the walks will be installed on.

Rescue Try Delayed, Hope Dim for Miners

BLACKSVILLE, W. Va. (AP) — Rescue workers encountered problems today which delayed drilling of a five-inch hole into a burning coal mine where nine men have been trapped since Saturday night.

Meanwhile, hope faded that the miners would be found alive.

A pre-dawn equipment breakdown caused one delay in the drilling. Then, later in the morning, the bit became stuck and the drilling again came to a halt.

When the bit stuck the shaft had been drilled to a depth of 624 feet, and a hole 730 feet deep was needed to intercept the mine at the point where the men were believed to have been trapped.

There has been no word from the mine since shortly after the fire started. Officials of the Consolidation Coal Co.'s Blacksville No. 1 mine said Sunday night chances the men would be found alive were "quite dim."

"I don't think I am stating anything but a fact," said John Corcoran, Consolidation president. He called the situation a tragedy.

Officials said 31 of the 40 men doing maintenance work in the four-mile mine reached safety within minutes after the fire broke out.

The bore hole was being drilled in an attempt to reach the men or possibly communicate with them. Failing that, officials hoped to learn something about conditions in the mine 350 feet below the rolling hills of this West Virginia-Pennsylvania border community.

An official of the U.S. Bureau of Mines said temperatures in the immediate area of the fire probably were between 2,500 and 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

Corcoran said at a news conference he felt conditions for rescuing the trapped miners were not favorable.

Rescue efforts have been hampered by the fire which continues to burn in the soft coal veins that underlie the area.

Efforts to put the fire out with foam have been stymied because workers were unable to get behind the flames.

The fire started when a heavy piece of mining machinery being relocated in the main corridor about a mile from the mine elevator shaft hit a live electrical wire, generating sparks.

The fire had been localized Sunday night in an area of about 400 square feet less than a mile from the mine entrance, Consolidation officials said.

Corcoran told newsmen that some members of the missing men's families were keeping a vigil around the entrance to the mine.

Officials said more than 100

ERTS in Good Orbit, Pictures Awaited

By BILL STOCKTON AP Science Writer

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — Their long-awaited satellite tucked in a perfect orbit over the North and South poles, scientists are checking out systems aboard the ERTS spacecraft in preparation for receiving first pictures of the earth Tuesday.

The $176 million spacecraft was launched Sunday from Vandenberg Air Force Base here to begin a year of global environmental measurements that scientists hope will usher in a new era of using space technology to monitor earth's natural resources.

ERTS, which is short for Earth Resources Technology Satellite, thundered aloft atop a white Delta launch rocket that flawlessly boosted the 1,900-pound spacecraft 500 miles above the South Pole and into a circular orbit.

"Everything looks fine—in fact it looks excellent," said Dr. John Clark, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Spaceflight Center at Greenbelt, Md. The center will control ERTS during the year in which the 10-foot-long satellite will circle the earth every 103 minutes.

Equipped with three television cameras and a special radiation-sensing device, the spacecraft will photograph the entire globe every 18 days.

Scientists hope to use the pictures to monitor natural resources such as crops, forests, schools of fish, water supplies and grasslands.

They believe the picture, taken through filters that measure radiation reflected from the planet, can help in mapping, spotting earthquake fault systems and locating mineral and oil deposits.

"This is probably the most important launch of an unmanned satellite NASA has ever made," Clark said after ERTS was separated from the Delta rocket's second stage over the coast of East Africa.

"This mission has more potential to bring direct benefits to the average man than perhaps anything we've done so far in the unmanned space program."

Flight controllers at Goddard plan to spend today and part of Tuesday checking spacecraft systems before the first pictures are taken later Tuesday. They will be made as the butterfly-shaped spacecraft sweeps southward across Canada's Maritime Provinces.

Pot Shots Traded By Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic and Republican vice presidential candidates are getting in some target practice in advance of the official beginning of the election campaign.

And the new chairman of the Democratic party says the party's financial position is much improved for the 1972 campaign, although they still haven't figured out how to pay all of the multi-million dollar debt left from the 1968 campaign.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who was named Saturday by President Nixon as his running mate for November, criticized Democratic positions on amnesty, the draft and marijuana in a speech at Anchorage, Alaska Sunday.

He said voters will have a "clear voice" between candidates for the first time, adding, "It would be a tragedy if, after four years, the voters did not return Richard Nixon for another four years."

Protest Firing

British Dock Workers Shut Down All Ports

LONDON (AP) — Striking longshoremen shut down all major British ports today to protest the jailing of five London dock workers for defying the nation's new labor court.

Prime Minister Edward Heath, scheduled a meeting with leaders of the 9-million-member Trades Union Congress, seeking a solution for the growing crisis.

The leader of the truck drivers' union predicted a total stoppage of motor freight with in 48 hours. Nearly 5,000 miners walked out in South Wales, Scotland and Yorkshire.

Striking printers prevented publication of London newspapers Sunday and again today. More than 400 fish market porters walked out in Grimsby.

The pound dropped sharply on foreign exchange markets, and prices tumbled on the stock exchange. The dock strike was certain to reduce the exports which Britain needs to bolster her ailing economy, and the sympathy strikes will cut production if they continue.

The five dock workers were ordered to London's Pentonville Prison on Friday for refusing to obey an order from the National Industrial Relations Court to halt the illegal picketing of a container freight company. They were the first union members jailed by the court, which was set up earlier this year under the new Industrial Relations Act.

New Lines Bringing Fuel to North Viets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon sources report that fresh supplies of motor fuel apparently have started flowing into North Vietnam through a new pipeline from South China.

In addition, U.S. reconnaissance planes recently located a new petroleum-storage depot lying into the pipeline. The depot is said to be relatively near the Chinese border, which might inhibit U.S. bombing attacks against it.

For weeks, U.S. photo planes have been monitoring construction progress on the new pipeline that could be vital in keeping North Vietnam's war effort going.

Recent intelligence reports have spoken of petroleum products being discharged from railroad tank cars at Pingshiang on the Chinese side of the border.

From Pingshiang the new pipeline runs across the North Vietnamese border and reaches Haiduong, east of Hanoi.

U.S. minefields have stopped Soviet tankers from reaching North Vietnamese ports where they used to unload about 50,000 tons of motor fuel and oil monthly.

There have been reports that Peking has agreed to allow Russian tankers to discharge their loads at Chinese ports for transshipment overland to North Vietnam.

While the new pipeline is considered unlikely to compensate entirely for the closing of North Vietnamese ports to Communist tankers, U.S. experts say it could keep North Vietnam's supply trucks and armored battle vehicles rolling.

McGovern

Love of Debate Led Him to Senate

Editor's Note—this is the first of three articles on the life of Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern.

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a boy, George McGovern was that nice kid, the one who preferred the piano and his stamp collection to playing kick-the-can. He was a shy one, in his neat, plain clothes and handsome-down shoes, this slow-speaking, serious son of a minister.

His shyness and a conviction that it was a fault to be conquered propelled young McGovern into becoming a crack high school debater with its demands on logic and facts, commitment and the ability to listen.

And everything that followed sprang from that, as if by some unseen plan for ever-widening horizons: McGovern would learn to revile war while flying bombers, he would try the ministry and be disillusioned by its businesslike ways, he would be a professor for the give-and-take with the young.

And he would turn a social conscience to practical politics, first in the House of Representatives, then as a food-for-peace administrator, then as antiwar senator, and finally—in the shambles of 1968 Chicago—decide unhesitatingly that 1972 would be his year to lead a dramatically different Democratic Party back into the White House.

The George McGovern, turning age 50, who stood before the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach and said "come home America," is the issue and product of small-town, middle-class America of the Depression, the son of a Methodist preacher who followed the hard credo of John Wesley.

Joseph McGovern, the father, had followed the Dakota-fever pioneers who settled the northern prairies. He was so successful in a spiritual, but not financial, way that he built a half dozen churches in South Dakota.

Joseph's first wife died childless. He was 48 when he was married again in 1919 to a woman 20 years his junior and Frances McLean McGovern bore him two girls and two sons. George, delivered by Dr. James Hollingsworth in the bedroom of the Avon, S.D. parsonage—was the oldest boy.

"He was a bright and curious child and often wandered off from the others—usually in the company of some stray dog," says Mrs. Grace Kiehlbach, whose children played with George McGovern. Mostly, those who knew McGovern then, remember him that way: a nice, moral withdrawn youngster.

George was 6 when the family moved to Mitchell, a South Dakota town of 14,000. His father was a stern disciplinarian, one who earned respect more than love, requiring that his children learn to read aloud from the Bible, even before they entered school.

"His was not a message of fear or a gospel of retribution," writes Robert Sam Anson in "McGovern," a biography.

"McGovern dwelled instead on the meaning of faith. He saw faith as a builder of character. Fear and temptation, he told his children, were the same; both could be overcome by faith and discipline."

It was in such an atmosphere that the future nominee spent his youth. In the first grade, although he could already read, George shied from reading aloud. His teacher, mistaking withdrawal for slowness, almost held him back.

But as a high school sophomore, his intelligence and application caused an English teacher to encourage George to try out for the debate team.

His high school history teacher and debate coach, S. Robert Pearson, recalls that "the most Swapping The Issues?

The Presidential campaign has barely opened, but already there are signs that the two opposing camps are beginning to get to one another.

We don't know which sign is the more important and encouraging, that which says that Vice Presidential Candidate Eagleton is going to crusade on the theme of law and order, or that sign which tells us that the Nixon Administration's top tax policy expert has suddenly come out in favor of tax reform which would lighten the law to make sure that all wealthy persons pay at least some reasonable amount of income tax, and not escape it altogether.

When Vice Presidential Candidate Eagleton reaches for the law and order issue, complaining that our streets are not safe, and promising to make them so, he is, of course, reaching to steal some of the thunder which Vice President Agnew unleashes with such reverberating gusto.

And when Under Secretary of the Treasury John B. Conroy comes out for tax reform to nail the big fat cats who have been evading the income tax, he is, of course, reaching to nullify Presidential Candidate McGovern's promises to share the wealth by several devices, including the income tax.

Beautifying Broad

One can see the importance of having the Chamber of Commerce have a committee concerned with the appearance of Manchester when one welcomes the proposals of Dr. Douglas Smith's committee for the improvement — we hesitate to jump all the way to the word beautification — of Broad St.

The "strip," as we now think of it, stands, at this stage in its development, as the best example of what happens when welcome commercial enterprises are allotted a territory and allowed to expand itself without any concerted standard of taste or sense of civic responsibility.

The trouble with such development is that such a great burst of commercial activity and prosperity tends to take on, for all its bustle, the appearance of a scattered kind of waste land, whereas the best possible protection of the large and expensive investments various enterprises have made in the area would be that relatively small additional expenditure needed to give the appearance of a well planned and attractive town.

The benefit of such an improvement would be to us all, and to the community as a whole, and to those who have already made their investment in the area. It would be nice to see both public and private action combining into a swift transformation.

Not One, But Two!

The towns of Portland and Clinton will have the dubious distinction of being represented not by one but by two congressmen if the unanimous decision of the U.S. District Court's three-judge panel Tuesday stands.

In effect the court ordered Connecticut's six congressional districts repositioned along lines proposed by Democratic Rep. James E. Foley, who has introduced legislation to amend the 1960 Reapportionment Act.

The court decision is a refinement of a plan the Democrats pushed through the General Assembly only to run into a veto by Governor Meskell.

There is no quarrel with the mathematics of the plan which divides the state into six districts with an average population of 600,000 each, and with a maximum of 200 persons or less. Where the problem arises is in the shifting of towns from one district to another as proposed in the court decision.

Mr. Register, executive director of the NAACP, said he is not sure that the plan is a refinement of a plan the Democrats pushed through the General Assembly only to run into a veto by Governor Meskell.

Inside Report McGovern Vs. His Own Staff

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — A telegram from Sen. George McGovern apologizing for an "unauthorized and ill-advised" letter sent to the National Association of Retail Grocers (NARG) by McGovern's signature is raising fresh questions about the Democratic presidential nominee's control over his own staff.

The telegram, dated June 23, started with this forthright apology: "The letter you received from my office under date of June 12 was unauthorized and ill-advised. I very much regret the concern it caused."

"That 'regret' is understandable in view of the offensive language in the June 12 letter to Frank D. Register, executive director of NARG. Register's complaint about McGovern's support of the lettuce boycott, the letter scolded Register: 'You should know, Mr. Register, that I have competent legal advice and the other part will remain in the Second District. As for Clinton, it will be partly in the Third District with New Haven County and partly in the Second District.'

McGovern obviously never read that language, and much more in the same vein, when he routinely signed the June 12 letter. But when NARG circulated it to 40 state grocer associations, representing 40,000 grocers with 110,000 independent grocers in the complete reversal from hawkish to dovish line in the June 23 telegram. Frustrated independent grocers, McGovern called them "one of the last remaining bastions of private enterprise" and said the Federal government should "encourage" their economic stability.

Who composed the original letter, with its hints that retail grocers were guilty of "monopoly pricing practices," is a secret locked in the files. But critics of McGovern's free-wheeling staff, including some of his closest party supporters, noted an unhappy similarity in the case of the grocers and the much more important case of Lawrence E. O'Brien, who was named as Democratic national chairman by fast McGovern staff foreword over McGovern's private wishes and best interests.

The Jewish Troubles: A post-convention meeting of Jewish delegates called by Sen. George McGovern's forces partially backfired when a top adviser, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, suggested that anti-McGovern Jewish Democrats are worried more about tax loopholes than best interests.

About 100 national convention delegates met at the Doris House in New York City, McGovern's headquarters for the convention. The delegates met at the Doris House in New York City, McGovern's headquarters for the convention.

The idea of giving the Democratic presidential nominee closed-door support before his inevitable press conference, according to House Democratic leaders, has no precedent. McGovern himself became concerned about the "McGovern drag" during the Miami Beach convention when Congressional Democrats began expressing fears that, with the South Dakota Senator leading the ticket, they might lose their seats. In certain cases, that fear has produced panicky forecasts of a Republican takeover of Congress.

The Democratic caucus chairman, Rep. Olin Teague of Texas, apparently had fears of his own. Independent of McGovern, Teague went out through the Democratic national chairman Lawrence O'Brien suggesting that McGovern make his case to House Democrats.

A footnote: McGovern may be questioned hard on the two policies most disturbing to Democrats: His military-foreign policy and his welfare-tax programs.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB It's a Serious Disease Tobacco Provokes Emphysema

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D. Dear Dr. Lamb—Recently, I had pneumonia and an X-ray revealed I had emphysema. I was told to quit smoking (easier said than done) and now I find if I quit smoking there isn't any guarantee it will arrest the emphysema.

To tell the truth, I'm not even sure what emphysema is or what happens to your lungs. Is this a serious disease or is it over-dramatized? Could you tell me exactly what it is and what happens if it continues to get worse and how a person would know how it progresses rapidly?

Dear Reader—Yes, emphysema is a very serious disease. To understand emphysema you need to consider the lungs. The main windpipe, or trachea, divides into a right and left bronchus. These two main airways continue to branch into smaller airways until they terminate in numerous little blind sacs called alveoli. Think of these as little bottles. The bottle neck is the main location where emphysema strikes. In emphysema, this opening becomes constricted so that it is difficult for air to pass in or out of the lung. The nature of breathing is such that this obstruction tends to trap air in the air sacs, causing them to be overdistended.

This causes too much stale air to be kept in the small sacs. Characteristically, the lungs of a person with emphysema are over-inflated, partially filled with stale air. Despite vigorous exhaling, an excess amount of air remains in the lungs. The accumulation of old air without enough oxygen makes it difficult for the circulation to get enough oxygen to the body. The severity of symptoms depends on increased evidence of shortness of breath with physical exertion. It's impossible to say how rapidly such a disorder will progress in an individual. The most important factor, though, is what you do about yourself. This specifically means staying completely away from cigarettes forever and following carefully the advice your doctor gives you in reference to breathing exercises, weight control and possibly medicine.

Cigarette smoking aggravates the obstruction at the bottle neck to such a degree that stopping smoking will eliminate the problem for someone who already has emphysema, in many individuals it results in marked improvement and essentially causes the disease to stop progressing. Your doctor will advise you on what to do about it. Most people who stop smoking progressively lose their REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP)— Bobby Fischer, the world chess champion, led the Soviet team to victory in the first game of the Reykjavik chess tournament today.

Fischer, who is playing against Boris Spassky, took the lead in the sixth game and forcing Spassky to resign.

They go into the seventh game Tuesday with Fischer leading 3½ to 2½. With 18 games still to be played, Fischer needs a total of 12½ points to take the title, while Spassky needs only 12 to retain it. A win counts one game point and a draw a half point.

Fischer had never beaten Spassky before they came to Reykjavik, but he did it for the third time Sunday, winning roars of applause from about 2,000 spectators.

Playing with the white chessmen, the American challenger opened with a move he had rarely used. Arriving in minutes after his clock was started, Fischer moved his queen's bishop pawn two squares forward. In all of his important games, Fischer had seldom opened with anything but his king's pawn.

Experts were surprised. Many said this must have jarred Spassky but the Russian did not show it if he was rattled.

International grandmaster Isaac Kashtan said in an analysis for The Associated Press that "it was Fischer on the way of using one of Spassky's favorite offensive known as the Queen's Gambit Declines."

From the seventh move, Fischer was able to build an advantage in a series of exchanges that left Spassky with hanging pawns. He attacked Spassky's weak queenside pawns, then switched the attack to the king's side.

Fischer was able to exchange his knight for the black bishop and advanced quickly on the king's side. With Fischer's queen and bishop able to operate on the king's side, Spassky was soon reduced to helplessness, Kashtan said.

After Fischer's move, the American's rooks joined the attack. Spassky slowed down his rook and his knight. He had lost his chance of a draw.

With 20 minutes playing time left, Fischer moved his king's rook to the center. Spassky stopped his clock and gave Fischer his hand, meaning he was conceding.

The American briskly signed the score sheet and left the board while Spassky, looking dejected, chatted a few moments with the referees.

Some of the experts felt Fischer has now succeeded in out-playing Spassky in the war of nerves accompanying the match.

The Russian champion had appeared genial and collected in the early stages in Iceland, when Fischer delayed the match for nine days to demand more prize money, then lost the first two moves, the first on an error and the second by forfeit while protesting filming of the competition.

Spassky has been losing his cool since then, many of the top chesswatchers are saying. He lost for the first time to Fischer in their third game, drew the fourth and dropped the fifth with a mistake on his 27th move.

Accidental Deaths Mar State Weekend

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three highway fatalities and a drowning marred Connecticut's sunny weekend.

In addition, a Torrington girl seen swimming in Norton Bay fell to her death at a Massachusetts beach at about 11:30 a.m. Friday.

SCUBA DIVING SUBMARINE

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—Robert Woods, a 20-year-old University of Virginia student, has designed and built a submarine which looks like an airplane without wings. The vehicle is intended for scuba diving.

Woods said he built it on the lines of an airplane because that is "the best design for fluid flow." It is composed of fiberglass, aluminum and a Plexiglas shield.

Another passenger was hospitalized in good condition.

Daniel J. Crowley, 21, of New Haven, died at about 1:30 a.m. Saturday when the motorcycle he was riding hit a truck in his home city, police reported.

Richard West, 18, of Torrington, was fatally injured early Saturday when his car hit a tree on Route 99 in Bristol, police said.

The drowning occurred in Bloomfield early Saturday. Police said Christiana J. Berall, 17, of Torrington, was swept under a waterfall when she went under.

Richard Bell, 19, of Torrington fell to her death Saturday at Blah Falls State Park at Mt. Washington, the apparently slipped while standing at the edge of a cliff and fell about 80 feet to her death in shallow water below the falls, according to police.

A search for Robert Schmidt, 7, of Pratt Island, Darien was called off Saturday afternoon.

Hamilton Had Role In ERTS

WINDSOR LOCKS (AP)— Connecticut technology played a part in the launching of the Earth Resources Technology Satellite now in orbit to survey crops, water supplies, forest expanses and other features around the world.

The satellite launch atop a Delta rocket was guided for the first time by an inertial guidance system built by the Hamilton Standard Division of United Aircraft Corp. in Windsor Locks.

A company spokesman said Sunday the unit, steering the satellite into orbit, "precisely sensed changes in the Delta booster's position and velocity and fed the information into a computer which sent steering commands to the rocket engines."

Consumers Remain Cautious

NEW YORK (AP)— Consumers think the country's economy is getting better, but they want to wait before putting their dollars where their confidence is, according to a nationwide poll.

In a May-June survey of 10,000 families, National Family Opinion, Inc. found that 16 per cent of those checked thought business was "bad," a decrease from 21 per cent in the previous two months.

"Jobs were hard to find" according to 34 per cent of the May-June sample, another decrease from the 40 per cent in the March-April survey.

However, 28 per cent of those questioned thought an economic improvement will come within six months—a drop of three per cent from the March-April survey. In addition, plans to buy new items, except for cars, were being postponed or deferred.

Fabian Linden, director of consumer economic research at the Conference Board, noted that the current presidential campaign and said the consumer is "holding his breath," as was said in the 1968 campaign pertained to the future," he said. "elections, of course, are not certain."

"Then, as now, current best-guess change, and the threat of recession, but there was uncertainty."

Man Trapped In Sofa Bed
SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP)— When firemen arrived at Thomas Burdell's home, they found him trapped in his sofa bed.

It was a sofa-bed, actually, the kind that folds out into a bed and folds back up into a sofa. He was lying on it as a bed when it suddenly folded up into a sofa, Burdell explained to the firemen Sunday, only his head showing.

One end latched but Burdell's head and shoulders kept the other end of the sofa from latching.

A friend who was with Burdell was unable to free him and called the firemen. Burdell, 18, wasn't hurt.

Cheney Brothers Trains Weavers

By SOL R. COHEN (Herald Reporter)

"There's no substitute for knowing the job," says Charles Knobel, assistant superintendent of weaving at Cheney Bros. "A person who knows his or her job is a happy person."

Consequently, Knobel and Durward Miller, personnel manager at Cheney's, about four months ago instituted a formal training program for weavers.

According to John Robinson, president of Cheney's, "The program was initiated to provide untrained workers with a skilled job — one which will assure them of job security and advancement. We know from experience that many unskilled workers often get discouraged and give up. Proper training does the opposite."

Actually, there's nothing new in Cheney Bros. offering training programs. The firm dates back to 1838 and was a national leader in silk manufacturing. Now owned by the family operated Gerl Co. of New York, it has a shop in Manchester, N.H., and a comparatively sound program, with only two looms — away from the noise in our visual manufacturing section. Visual aids are used in the step-by-step process.

Incidentally, one of the two looms used in the training program is a 1914 model, built in the Cheney shops and, except for some variations, identical to the newer looms.

Miller said that six people already have gone through the training program and are now on looms, and that four others are going through the school. He said the program will continue and that those seeking to apply may contact him at 31 Cooper Hill St.

Students are under full-time supervision for six weeks. After that, they are assigned to a loom and on their own, except for part-time supervision, until four months have passed since they entered the school.

"They are paid learners' rates to start and then their pay rate increases for part-time supervision until they assume full responsibility. They then go on piece-work."

"If an individual finds during a training that weaving is not for him," said Miller, "then we make every effort to place him elsewhere."

Where Cheney Bros. once manufactured silk cloth, it now specializes in velvets, jacquards and velours — sold throughout the world for use in apparel, draperies, upholstered furniture, display cases, caravats, and the rest of other items.

And where once about 3,500 workers were employed at a time, when in a job more compatible with Cheney popularity was at its height, today there are about 275 working on looms and in the plant, but they become absorbed only in what they're doing. For example, if a thread breaks, they might learn how to tie that particular one, and nothing else. They wouldn't know the names, let alone the location, of the machine parts.

"They wouldn't know what to do when trouble occurs. Workers near them, because they are on pieces work, don't have too much time to help them. Eventually, they get discouraged and quit the job."

"In the training school," he explains, "we can cause things to happen. We have a full-time instructor, who knows what things usually happen. She can teach the trainees through simulation of real troubles. She can cause a thread to break or a machine to break down. In addition, the school is held in a comparatively sound program, with only two looms — away from the noise in our visual manufacturing section. Visual aids are used in the step-by-step process."

Direct Descendant

For those who don't remember who or never knew, Howell Cheney Technical School is a direct descendant of a textile apprentice school set up about 1800 in Cheney Bros. Mills. Now owned by the family operated Gerl Co. of New York, it has a shop in Manchester, N.H., and a comparatively sound program, with only two looms — away from the noise in our visual manufacturing section. Visual aids are used in the step-by-step process.

Apartment Project Okayed

By DOUG HEVINS (Herald Reporter) A 174-unit apartment complex on 33 acres of land off the go-ahead from the Manchester Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) last night.

The PZC unanimously approved revisions in the Stage II plans for the west section of the project, and approved the Stage II plans for the east section.

The development, known as Squires Village, is being planned by the Capitol Region Development Corp., the land acquisition arm of the Greater Hartford Housing Development Fund.

Plans for the apartment project were reviewed earlier this month by the PZC, which decided at that time to await revised plans before taking action.

The revised plans, presented to the PZC last night, showed elimination of tennis courts and a swimming pool; addition of a community building requested by HUD (Housing and Urban Development, a federal agency); and addition of a road connecting the east and west sections of the complex.

The revised plans also included changes requested by the PZC—changes in planter beds, walls, omission of a retaining wall, and design of proposed roads.

The roads, which do not meet town standards for width, concern PZC members scattered this month, but Town Planner J. Eric Potter last night reported that the road plans have received approval of the town's fire chief and police chief. The roads will be private; the developer will not ask the town.

Old Pavilion Burns, Former Social Center

By BARBARA VARRICK (Herald Correspondent) A fire destroyed the social center pavilion behind Robert's Electric stand in Hills Grove, a one-time Co. on Ellington Rd., Sunday night.

For more than eight years, Hills Grove has been abandoned and, because of its secluded nature, hidden in the wooded area behind homes on Sullivan Ave. and businesses on Ellington Rd., the fire department had difficulty getting water to the scene.

The blaze burned for 20 minutes and destroyed the pavilion, which was used for social gatherings and picnics.

Senate Kills Arms Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — After voting for the first time to force U.S. withdrawal from Indochina, the Senate has killed the military-foreign aid authorization bill on Tuesday.

The bill was the first step in continuing for this fiscal year the U.S. military-aid program to the South Vietnamese.

The House has yet to act on a military-aid authorization; the Senate vote does not necessarily mean the program is dead.

South Viets Enter Citadel

QUANG TRI, Vietnam (AP) — About 400 South Vietnamese paratroopers fought their way into the Quang Tri Citadel to capture it on May 1.

Despite official claims in Saigon that the paratroopers won control of the Citadel and the occupation of Quang Tri City was completed, fighting raged in the 19th century fortress through late afternoon.

Most of the North Vietnamese defenders of Quang Tri had retreated into the Citadel.

The Citadel was the last bastion of resistance in the devastated North Vietnamese province.
