Village Craftsmen Teach Others Art of Creating

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
LAYTON, N.J. (AP) — In an old, northwestern New Jersey village, the federal government and a handful of young craftsmen have joined forces to preserve and promote traditional American arts and crafts — many with a modern design.

Working in 10 old buildings — including a country store, several farmhouses, a barn, and a restored 1830s manor — on land owned by the National Park Service, potters, wood sculptors and jewelers, among others, are creating works of art and teaching others to follow in their footsteps.

The group, known as the Peters Valley Craftsmen, has formed a nonprofit, tax-exempt organization. Their homes and studios are owned by the government and are part of the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

The craftsmen's village, termed in its brochure a "pilot project," represents a new direction for the park service, attempting to open up national parkland for day-to-day use, expanding the scope of its recreational facilities.

The program began several years ago when the wife of the district director of the National Park Service hit on the idea of trying to preserve a New Jersey village, with its mixed architectural styles, as it originally stood, without turning it into a museum.

She decided the government might preserve the village and open it up as a work center and display case of the arts and crafts that have been part of American culture since colonial days.

Thus, the Peters Valley Craftsmen eventually was founded in the Peters Valley section of Layton in Sussex County.

The resident craftsmen have studio spaces here in several woodworkers share a barn, equipped with sanding machines and lathes, potters, with their clay and potters' wheels, are in a garage, and hand-weavers, using looms and handwoodworker for a number of years, and has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Virginia.

"There is no free ride but the edge is taken off of the economic need," he said.

Willner and the other craftsmen produce their works for sale in the group's store and on commission from private customers. Prices range from 25 cents for a musical string toy to $1,400 for a quarter-globe-shaped wood desk made by Willner's colleague in the wood-working barn, Karl Seemüller.

Many of the crafts — hand-woven fabrics, ceramic cups made by a kiln made by the craftsmen, silver earrings and leather bags — are in the $25 range.

The designs are original and many reflect a modern bent.

The craftsmen set the prices for their products. The group takes a 10 per cent commission on products made and sold to order and 25 per cent on products made in the store.

The residents pay $30 a month in studio fees, they rent their cottages and homes, and receive 50 per cent of the $50 weekly tuition costs paid by each of their students.

Many of their raw materials come from the surrounding area. Large logs and trunks are piled outside of Willner's studio, and Janet Decker, a resident in crocheting, explained that she was growing flowers — marigolds and daisies — to convert to natural dyes for her fabrics.

Some of the large pieces of equipment are owned by the school and some belong to the individual craftsmen.

The second painting is an acrylic work by Bernard J. Boucher of East Hartford — a 1963 graduate of the Hartford Art School. Boucher has accumulated a number of awards in the two years he has been exhibiting.

LATIN OPTIMISM GETS BAD RESULT

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

People tend to play bridge according to their temperament, or even according to their national character. You can see this most clearly in the Bridge Olympiad, and today's hand may illustrate the difference between the classic Latin and the classic Nordic character.

Opening lead—Two of Hearts

In the first room of the match between Australia and Italy, Camillo Pabis, Tiel was the heart opening lead with the queen and optimistically led the queen of spades, being to the ace.

Declares a heart to the ace, and the Italian declared to lead a spade to try a finesse with dummy's ten. East won with the queen and optimistically led a third heart to dummy's king.

Declares could cash the rest of dummy's spades, but he was then stuck in the dummy with no way to reach his own hand. When declarer led the queen of clubs, West won with the ace of the fables faithfully.

Board Okays Staff Shifts

The Board of Education, Monday night, approved these faculty appointments for next year.

William Crimmins, a resident of Rockville, as a part-time industrial arts teacher at Hing Junior High School. He received a BS from Central Connecticut State College last year, taught metalworking at Rippon High School in Stamford one year, and last year in Glassboro.

Mrs. Rose Marie DeBartolo, to teach Spanish at Bennett Junior High School. A Glassboro resident, she received a BA from St. Bonaventure University and taught three years in Manassas, N.J.

Parker Morgan, to teach biology at Manchester High School for the first semester. He received a BA from Central Connecticut State College. He lives in Plainville.

Mrs. Janet Sterling, to teach the new learning disabilities developmental kindergarten. She has been a teacher of the preschool handicapped class at Keeney St. School for the past three years and was previously a teacher aide in the Bennett mentally retarded class one year, both on a part-time basis. Before coming to Manchester, she taught kindergarten one year in Cornwall, Pa.

The following resignations were accepted:

Mrs. Violet Shump, social worker, for retirement purposes.

Mrs. Ethel Hawkins, teacher of the perceptually handicapped at Bentley School.

Miss Laine Koenig, mathematics teacher at Hing.

Mrs. Claire Kuzmik, language learning disability teacher at Bowers School.

Dr. David Winer moved that the administration study the feasibility of modifying the present sick-leave policy and report at the first October meeting. He recommended consideration of a policy that would grant a teacher 120 days leave a year, with no accumulation. He reported that several Long Island districts experimenting with such a plan found that absenteeism declined. On the other hand, he said, towns using the traditional system of a limited number of days, plus accumulation, remained stable over a period of years.

On recommendation of the State Department of Education, the board rescinded an earlier action and voted to put out for bid, windows in the Robert Robertson School being renovated for central administration offices.

Subject to budget review, to ascertain if authorization had already been voted, the board instructed the administration to pay for the burglar alarm system that was installed a few years ago at Verplanck School on a trial basis.

General Motors Sees Decline In Car Sales

DETROIT (AP) — A sales decline by General Motors Corp. nearly wiped out strong gains reported by the three other major U.S. automakers in the middle 10 days of July. But industry sales for the year passed the five million landmark during the period.

General Motors sold 142,203 cars against 165,000 last year, a decline of 26.1 per cent on a daily selling rate basis.

Mack Warden, GM vice president-marketing, said the decline was due in part to a lower level of sales incentive campaigns during the period this year.

Ford, Chrysler and American Motors all had very strong results in mid-July.

Ford sold 111,600 cars, up 19.3 per cent; Chrysler sales were up 26 per cent at 44,346 and AMC sold 9,579 cars, up 32.7 per cent.

Israel Happy with Soviet Expulsion

JERUSALEM (AP) — Pre-peace, the significance of which Mrs. Meir said should not be underrated, welcomed Egypt's expulsion of Mrs. Meir said, "but it is early as yet to appraise its consequences."

The premier praised the Soviet government for refusing to "let us meet as equals and on a joint supreme effort to which, if met, would have caused and made possible the renewal of the war." She said the Soviet refusal to give Egypt offensive weapons helped save the Egyptians from another defeat.

Mrs. Meir appealed to Sadat to "strike out on a new path, never to return to the course which has led to death, destruction and frustration without bringing peace."

"It would seem that this hour in the history of Egypt can, may, should be the appropriate hour for change, if it truly is an upheaval has taken place."

Protestants Halt Work In Belfast

BELFAST (AP) — Thousands of Protestant workers walked off their jobs this morning to observe "a day of mourning" for victims of Irish Republican Army violence in Northern Ireland.

The work stoppage shut down many offices and factories but did not paralyze the city because it did not affect such essential services as electric power or public transport.

British troops bulldozed into another Roman Catholic stronghold in Belfast to smash IRA barricades. They claimed their seizures of the guerrillas' arms had cut their operations in half. Soldiers with armored bulldozers and mechanical diggers tore up 10 earth-and-steel barricades in the Andersonstown section. The only resistance was a barrage of gasoline bombs, bottles and stones from youths.

The day of mourning was called by two Protestant groups, the Ulster Defense Association and the Loyalist Association of Workers.

It was specifically designated as a tribute to the victims of last Friday's bomb blitz in Belfast, but also was called in remembrance of all who died through Irish Republican Army violence in the three years of sectarian strife.

A fire badly damaged a three-story office building in Belfast. It had been started by two armed men who poured gasoline on the building and set it ablaze. No one was injured.

The second blaze broke out in a block of offices in the center of Belfast and also caused heavy damage.

In another sweep into the New Barnsey area, troops arrested one man and captured 80 rounds of ammunition, including some armor-piercing shells. Again there was no IRA fire.

An army spokesman reported 30 shooting incidents in Belfast and 13 in Londonderry in the previous 24 hours, a 50 per cent drop from the nightly average of more than 100 last week.

Downtown Traffic Plan Still Alive, Says DOT

In June of 1970 the Manchester Board of Directors unanimously approved installation by the state of a new traffic-lighting-parking plan on Downtown Main St. Because Main St. is a highway — Rt. 83 — the entire $100,000 estimated cost of the traffic-control system, to include walk phases, was to be at state cost.

State Rep. N. Charles Boggin said he had been asked recently by Manchester officials and businessmen to check into the status of the project. Boggin is a member of the legislature's transportation committee.

He said Robert M. Williston, director of traffic for the state Department of Transportation, assured him the project is still alive and that he thinks it will go through as planned.

Boggin says he has asked Williston to send him a letter to that effect, and that as soon as the letter is received he (Boggin) will make it public.

The state plan mixes angle parking with some parallel parking. Estimates in June 1970 were that 47 parking spaces would be lost on Main St. The purpose of parallel parking, state experts had explained, was to increase the traffic flow on Downtown Main St.

Boggin said those making him check into the status of the project were Town Manager Robert Weas, Mayor John Thompson, Police Chief James Reardon and several Main St. merchants. Weas, when the Board of Directors approved the project in June 1970, estimated it would be two or two-and-a-half years before the new traffic system would be in operation.

Exactly one year ago this week, Weas and Reardon reviewed preliminary plans for the proposed new traffic light-parking system.

The plans were prepared for the state by Morton S. Fine & Associates of Bloomfield. Frederick S. Hesketh, the Fine engineer handling the project, told Weas and Reardon his firm had been given considerable leeway by the Department of Transportation to develop a plan that incorporates recommendations by Manchester town officials.

HEW Launches Study Of Death Experiment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has launched a full investigation of a federal agency experiment in which some Alamo black men died because they were denied proper medical treatment for syphilis in the nation at the time.

The investigation was announced Tuesday night by Dr. Morris K. DuVal, assistant secretary of HEW, who said he was shocked and horrified by the results of the experiment. The announcement followed a letter from the state by Morton S. Fine & Associates of Bloomfield. Frederick S. Hesketh, the Fine engineer handling the project, told Weas and Reardon his firm had been given considerable leeway by the Department of Transportation to develop a plan that incorporates recommendations by Manchester town officials.

"I especially want to determine why the study was permitted to continue past the 1948 college dropout, has graduated from the Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science.

HEW oversees the Health Service, which, in 1932, initiated the Tuskegee Study, an experiment which withheld the proper medical treatment from group exposed to disability and death.

The doctor responsible for initiating the experiment was identified by HEW officials as Dr. J. R. Heller, assistant surgeon general in the service's venereal-disease section who later became division chief.

Current PS officials say they have questions about the morality of the study, particularly the post-World War II decision not to treat the syphilitics with penicillin, then a proven readily available cure for the disease.

Originally, HEW officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta told The Associated Press that the study involved 600 black men divided into three groups; 200 not suffering syphilis penicillin became the effective drug of choice against the disease," he said. "I can know at the time and 200 not say with certainty that such a study could not be launched today."

Hanoi has not come forward with more dramatic proof of what some figures as Secretary General Waldheim fear, or what some Swedish diplomat in Hanoi alleges, or what some American religious leader, abundant, in our opinion, be taken as assurance that we have not yet set out to open North Vietnam's skies.

That will not and should not cure our uneasiness over the possibilities involved.

There is a general danger that President Nixon's policy in Vietnam may be veering toward a pattern in which a bomb-bomb flood may become the next step.

But if Hanoi proves obstinate, and President Nixon is indeed engaged, as the continuing intensification of bombing raids on North Vietnam might indicate, in what is merely the latest and fiercest effort to bomb Hanoi to its knees, then the general spread of bombing which would incidentally open the dike system could become merely the next turn of the pressure screw and, therefore, appear necessary and inevitable for President Nixon.

What President Nixon is steering close to is a revival of the first try put into operation by President Johnson and his advisers — the theory that North Vietnam could be bombed into submission.

One difference between now and then, which sits well everywhere, is that President Nixon has been taking land troops out whereas President Johnson was sending them in.

But the other difference is that, in both the fury and the wide expansion of targets for our bombing attack, President Nixon is making the Johnson era bombing effort look like gentle raps on the wrist. He is bombing North Vietnam, at last, pretty much the way the Air Force generals would have liked to be able to bomb it under Johnson.

If it works, and Hanoi comes to peace, he has won, by making a strong-man gamble.

If Hanoi proves still obstinate, so that the dike has to become the next target, and if Hanoi then still proves obstinate, President Nixon has lost a gamble, and the United States has lost this war one more time, this time most disastrously of all. Let us hope a combination of Hanoi sense and Nixon restraint keeps the present chance of peace from a tragic transformation into the deeper, bloodier deadlock which will be worse for everybody.

Everybody from the Catholic hierarchy to the organizations dedicated to separation of church and state should be involved.

But after enough people have become involved in examining it, the big question is going to be in order.

The big question will be whether this proposal may be, at long last, not only a partial answer to the increasing burden of financing college education on the average American family, but also an answer, following that line, to the question, which is not religion-oriented at all, to the problem of how to make it possible for parents who desire to do so to buy private education for their young children.

If it is found to be a clear, harmless principle, a clean constitutional formula, and something no American of any class or affiliation has any real reason for opposing, it could turn one of the most divisive issues on our domestic scene into an area of healing. Let the examination of its possibilities continue.

Not Yet, But They May Be Next

Perhaps one immediate way to dispose of the controversy over whether American bombs, intentionally or incidentally, have been destroying the dikes without which much of North Vietnam would become a drowned country is to say that, if the general flooding had been unleashed, we should have no lack of plentiful proof of the same. If a general collapse of the dike system were taking place, Hanoi, we can be sure, would be inviting the world's newsmen and the world's camera men in by droves, to record and certify and spread the tragic fact.

Instead, what we have is a smattering of reports and surmises that here and there some dikes have been hit, or weakened by newsmen. When such isolated reports and surmises are denounced as false by our own officials, including such a respected figure as Secretary of State Rogers, we Americans know what and whom we ought to believe, but find it difficult. The whole history of the Vietnam war has been such a record of false fronting by our own officials that words of denial no longer have the power to make us sure of anything.

For the moment, however, the fact that

Inside Report

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — Although many political realities dictated President Nixon's decision to run again with Spiro T. Agnew, the most important was probably Democrat John B. Connally's all but total refusal to run for Vice President himself.

"Connally just didn't want it," a top-level confidant of Mr. Nixon told us, "so the discussion came down to one thing: the absence of serious alternatives."

With Connally unavailable to anybody else, the choice, President Nixon's decision to keep his explosively controversial Vice Presidential pick for many weeks ago, but his announcement of that decision last Saturday definitely was not.

To the contrary, Mr. Nixon desperately wanted some element of uncertainty to enliven what looks to be the dullest nonbattling convention in this century. So he quietly passed word to political advisers that he would say nothing until mid-August — or the very eve of the Aug. 21 Miami Beach convention.

What disrupted that President Nixon's decision was the sudden, uncontrollable surge of "anybody but Agnew" appeals from moderate and liberal Republicans.

These public attacks on Agnew came from such obvious sources as liberal Sens. Jacob K. Javits of New York and William Saxton of Ohio. But the anti-Agnewites actually embraced a far wider political spectrum, reaching into the White House staff itself: a silent minority of Republicans fearful that Agnew will exploit the Vice Presidency to gain control of the party and the Presidential nomination in 1976.

Jumping the gun on his timetable, President Nixon effectively stopped this anti-Agnew tumult before it picked up momentum. In doing so, he sidetracked a potentially divisive struggle between the party's left and right wings which could have left debilitating wounds.

Containing that left-right split, in fact, has been one of Mr. Nixon's enduring political occupations since last December, when right-wing Rep. John Ashbrook of Ohio contended the White House and announced his own Presidential candidacy.

Ashbrook's decision to offer himself as a rallying point for conservatives unhappy about Mr. Nixon's welfare reform plan and his nuclear arms control negotiations with Moscow triggered secret negotiations between conservatives and top White House political aide Charles Colson.

Using the threat of all-out support for Ashbrook, the conservatives in a 4-3 vote demanded: first, keep Agnew on the ticket; second, drop the welfare reform package; third, step up arms spending. Some of the President's chief advisers, notably former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, counseled acceptance of all three.

Although the President refused to budge on welfare reform, he quickly caved in on the other two demands. That was the real explanation of his reaching into the White House staff itself: a silent minority of Republicans fearful that Agnew will exploit the Vice Presidency to gain control of the party and the Presidential nomination in 1976.

Hi Neighbor. Burl Lyons, Publisher

Why Spiro?

The pace is quickening at The Herald these days or nearly so. The launch into the completely cold type or nearly all electronic method of composing news stories and advertisements for the printed page.

For a while we will actually be producing a large part of the newspaper in the area that once served as our entire editorial department. We're hoping for a gradual transition into the electronic method of production. By beginning shortly, it is our feeling we can have the new process mastered before making the move into our new addition in early October.

To help us accomplish the task better, a number of our personnel will be visiting other newspaper installations for a first hand look.

Thus, we're looking forward to a few hectic weeks and they are likely to be just that. One thing we're going to do is to do everything possible to be on time with your daily newspaper. There will be times when we will certainly appreciate your patience and understanding.

However, we strongly feel that the new equipment and the new addition will enable us to be of more and better service to the community and in essence that is the real reason for our existence.

We shall burn a lot of midnight oil in the weeks ahead. That's why we would appreciate receiving copy earlier than usual from our many fine news correspondents. Neither do we wish to delay the stories of weddings, engagements, or about Tony Items, but in the beginning of our conversion program to a new type setting method, we're going to need all the lead time we can get in processing them before they appear in the newspaper.

A short time ago we conducted a shopping survey for a store in the Manchester Parkade and you may recall that the average number paid for a shopping trip was $10.00. Of those shopping the Parkade, the survey revealed that 77 per cent are from Manchester compared to 80 per cent who shop Downtown Manchester.

Of those shopping in the Parkade, 62 per cent have incomes exceeding $10,000 per year. The survey in Downtown Manchester revealed that 83 per cent have incomes under $10,000.

One should probably realize, of course, that if ever an untruth is told it probably relates to what he or she takes home in salary.

Perhaps a surprising factor in both interviews though is that the shopper or shoppers had specific purchases in mind and there was little comment that they were simply browsing.

Getting back to take home pay, we once knew a fellow who operated a small firm and paid all his employees in cash.

At the pay window, the employee's check was broken into cash in five divisions. Each one was explained thoroughly; here's what you are paying in federal income tax, here's state tax, this is Social Security, this is health insurance, and here's what is left for you to take home.

Since John Mitchell has quit politics, a colleague suggests that perhaps Martha should be considered for the centerfold of the next telephone directory.

Something to think about: Why is it that we are in such a hurry to get up when we fall down? You might think we would lie there and rest awhile.

President Nixon's selection of the All-Time Baseball Team drew both praise and criticism from the nation's sports writers. We can surmise that George McGovern will name his team any day now in keeping with the equal time, equal space provision.

In the case of President Nixon though, he's lucky his selections didn't have to be confirmed by the Senate.

Coleman, 46, graduated from Columbia College in 1946 and joined the faculty two years later. He was appointed assistant dean of the Graduate School of Journalism, said McKinley had argued the matter with other university officials Tuesday and then announced he was going to see Dean Coleman.

A search of university buildings failed to turn up a trace of McKinley, who had just completed his sophomore year. Chicago police were also hunting for McKinley, police here reported.

A popular figure on campus, Coleman won a reputation for calmness and sympathy during the violent confrontations between students and police in 1967-68, when he was acting dean.

He and his wife and three children live in New Canaan, Conn.

Heralding Politics

By Sol R. Cohen

West Hartford Deputy Mayor Arthur Fay has announced his intention to run for the 21st-member State Commission to Plan a Department of Human Resources.

Fay has appointed Mrs. Turza Perry of Vernon to the position of chair. Mrs. Perry is a candidate for the GOP nomination for State Representative in the 1st District.

Rittenland defeated Fay by an 88 to 67 count on July 8, the first time First District Republicans held their nominating convention.

Since then, a federal court reappointed the state's six congressional districts and new conventions were ordered for Aug. 5 for both parties. The Democrats had held their first nominating convention on June 24.

No surprises are anticipated on Aug. 5. All six Democratic nominees were named July 8. Republicans nominated July 8 are expected to be named again, including Democrat William Cotter of Hartford and Republican Rittenland in the first district, and incumbent Republican Robert Steele of Vernon and Democrat Roger Hillman of Lyme in the second district.

The First District Aug. 5 Republican convention will be at 10 a.m. in William Hall High School, West Hartford, and the Democratic convention will be at 2 p.m. in Bulkeley High School, Hartford.

The Second District Aug. 5 Republican convention will be at noon, in Schaefer Auditorium, Eastern Connecticut State College, Williamstown. And the Democratic convention will be at 2 p.m. in Joseph's Polish Hall, Colchester.

The same delegates who attended the previous conventions will be delegates again Aug. 5. Manchester State Sen. David Odgard has been named a mering, MHS principal, and others on the subject of student representation. He also suggested a fairly specific set of guidelines under which student representatives would function.

Following up a printed set of six objectives distributed at the meeting, Rick Gowen, YC chairman, said that he would like to see two young people on the board in ex officio positions, one elected by his peers of the SA and the other by the YC. The precedent has been set for local representation, he continued, with students currently on the boards in East Hartford and Enfield.

Glen Cooper, SA president last year, said that he sees students on the board functioning as advisors and establishing a direct line of communication between the board and the senior and junior high school student bodies.

He added that he didn't feel youth members would burden the board with too many problems, since most would be worked out with the school administration.

Digan expressed a personal concern to provide representation for those young people who have dissociated themselves from school as an institution. If the board looks favorably at the plan, it would be a higher rung: From crack high school and college debater to professor; from party organizer to congressman; from Food-for-Peace administrator to senator.

And then, after a last-minute try in 1968 to liberate the fallen Robert Kennedy's legions, McGovern began the careful planning and the rigorous work of summoning people to his presidential cause. He did it from his back-bench, a liberal senator from a conservative state ranking 46th in population.

And he pounded home that same theme again in 1972, when he won the prize: "During four administrations of both parties, a terrible war has been charted behind closed doors. I want those doors opened and I want that war closed. And I make these pledges above all others—the doors of government will be opened and that war will be closed."

McGovern had been a senator only eight months, in 1967, when he became the first to denounce the Vietnam war on the floor of the Senate. It was for WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a grateful George McGovern who took the reins at Miami Beach to accept the Democratic party's nomination for President of the United States.

"I have been the beneficiary of the most remarkable political organization in the history of this country," he said. "It is an organization that gives dramatic proof to the power to love and to a faith that can literally move mountains."

George McGovern had worked and planned and won for this moment since the Democratic convention of four years earlier, and who knows how much longer than that.

The history of this son of a poor, pious preacher of the plains was always one of reaching to a higher rung: From crack high school and college debater to professor; from party organizer to congressman; from Food-for-Peace administrator to senator.

There is a vain side of McGovern, a concern for status. In May 1969, arriving at San Francisco airport for a speech and other activities, McGovern was not only put out when no official of the state Democratic party showed up to greet him. "I am a United States senator," he muttered, before halting a taxi.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB But It Takes Strength This Exercise Can Be Done

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—in one of your recent columns you recommended an exercise to strengthen the lower abdominal muscles. You suggested putting your feet on the couch and then doing sit-up exercises. Did you ever try this? I have tried it and I find it impossible.

Dear Reader—it is impossible for some people. But in specific answer to your question, yes. Not only have I tried it, I do it every morning. The reason for putting the feet up is literally to bend the thighs at the hips so that you won't be using the high muscles for sit-up exercises. In this way the principal load will be put on the abdominal muscles and strengthen them. This exercise is particularly good for the upper abdomen and not so effective for the lower abdomen.

Some people have trouble doing this exercise because their abdominal muscles are so weak that they are not strong enough to lift the body. For individuals with this problem I would suggest that they start with the legs stretched out on the floor with the legs extended. This means they will be using the hip muscles some for an assist, but after all their abdominal muscles are as light as they can and hold the muscle in for a few seconds and then relax them. This can be done either while lying, sitting, or standing.

The holding of the abdominal muscles in a tense position for a few seconds and then relaxing and then repeating this helps to strengthen these muscles appreciably.

Court Stops Priests' Show

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—U.S. District Judge Robert C. Zampano granted Tuesday a motion to enjoin three Roman Catholic clergymen from Stamford from showing their road production of "Jesus Christ, Superstar."

The motion also prohibits advertisement of the show.

The suit was filed on behalf of the holders of the copyright to the rock opera. It maintained that the production infringed that copyright, according to the copyright holders' lawyer, John Clancy of Bridgeport.

The three Stamford men referred to in the suit were identified as John T. O'Reilly, Jack Coffey and Robert Cassidy. A spokesman for the U.S. District Court in New Haven said they were affiliated with a Stamford organization known as the Contemporary Mission.

Mother to Mother Message

It was case of women's intuition all the way and it really paid off for a lost cat when it appeared on the scene on Tuxis Road in Bolton Monday.

The female cat, described as black and white and beautiful, was aroused the suspicion of three women who live on Tuxis against their woman's intuition. Mrs. Penny Taylor, Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts and Mrs. Allison Bolsonman. The ladies surmised that the cat was trying to tell them something and went to look for it. They found it in a sewer.

So... Mrs. Taylor trotted left perhaps for food and then didn't know how to get back. Undaunted, the women moved the very heavy grating from the sewer by themselves, put a ladder down and brought the kittens up to a very grateful mother cat which, if it could have talked would probably still be expressing gratitude to her rescuers.

The cat family is now nesting comfortably on the back porch of the Roberts' home being well fed and getting much attention.

A really happy ending to this "tale of the cat" would be to have its owner claim it. The women feel it is not a cat that was dropped off by anyone as it was wearing a flea collar which indicated someone cared about its comfort.

Singer Ordered To Rest

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP)—Ella Fitzgerald appeared at the Montpelier jazz festival last week. She was ordered to rest in her hotel room because of a recurrence of eye trouble, she said.

A concert by the singer scheduled in Saint Tropez from the eye and called in a local physician who consulted through the streets asking ticket holders to apply for a return to Boston for treatment.

New England Fish Are Disappearing

By PHIL CANNADAY
The waters of the New England coast no longer hold the lucrative catches they did a decade ago, leaving the area's fishing industry in a state of affairs...

The brightest spot in the industry is the lobster, which handles about 32 million pounds of fish a year. Just a decade ago there were 21 companies lining the pier to handle 115 million pound annual catch...

Many New England fishermen are urging Congress to expand the country's territorial water limit from 12 to 200 miles to protect supplies of various species...

The committee of the New England Fisheries Advisory group said the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries, the agency charged with setting catch quotas for 15 member nations...

In addition to extending the territorial limit, the fishermen's association is also urging Congress to seek new species of fish to replace declining stocks...

The group also urged the State Department to declare 150 miles from the Massachusetts coast as a "creature of the sea" zone, in which the vessels were seen. They have ruined the most seas could not cast their lobster trawling fishing area in the pots.

Having a sticky time of it is little Darya Hirschfeld as she squirts glue onto a piece of cloth to which she will attach colored pipe cleaners to form a pattern. Camp activities have attracted some 50 campers daily.

Linda Washburn, director at Robertson Park Day Camp, joins David Gutman in a game of "Sockeye," while interested campers look on.

A Fun Place For Kids

In Manchester, the 6- to 12-year-old set have it made this summer. And it's all happening at the Robertson Park Day Camp, sponsored by the town's recreation department. The day camp, open to youngsters from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., is staffed with trained adults who supervise and instruct the young campers. Parents, who are charged a minimal fee of $15 per week, may drop their children off anytime during the day that is convenient for them. Linda Washburn, camp director, said, "Many working mothers are taking advantage of the day camp. It keeps their children busy, gives them a pleasant way to spend a summer day with other youngsters, and they know they are well supervised. We have some 50 children attending now, and many of them have repeated week after week."

Eastern Connecticut State College, has worked for the recreation department for six years. "The children bring their own lunch, and we provide milk," Miss Washburn said. "Our daily activities include drama and puppetry, arts and crafts, modern dance, baton lessons and swimming lessons. Some days we go over to the Community Y and bowl," she added. Some of the other counselors staffing the day camp are William McCarthy of Manchester, a teacher in the Bolton school system; Sam Manser, a guidance counselor from Willimantic; Barbara Garrison, a teacher in the "Head Start" program in Manchester; and Margaret Bangasser, a student at Eastern Connecticut State College. "The counselors organize softball games which the youngsters especially enjoy. Swimming lessons are held in the pool from noon to 1 p.m. just for the day campers, and they have free swim time usually between 2 and 4 p.m.," Miss Washburn said. Day camp activities are held near the swimming pool and a large green building on the grounds is used to store equipment. "We also have refrigerators inside," Miss Washburn commented. "So youngsters can store their lunch and keep it cool and fresh." Every Wednesday is field trip day. Highlight this week was a trip today to Hammonasset State Park. Other trips already taken this summer include a visit to Mystic Seaport, a sight-seeing trip to Tatcott Mountain, and a tour of the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford. Parents interested in giving their children some summer fun can have them join the "happy camp" at Robertson Park Day Camp by stopping in at the camp grounds and registering with Miss Washburn. Registrations are taken on Thursdays and Fridays for the following week of camp.

Residents Ask Light At Center-Roosevelt

Residents of the Roosevelt St. area of Manchester off Center St., concerned with apparent hazardous traffic conditions on Center St., are circulating a petition asking for more police protection and installation of another traffic light.

The petition, initiated by Mrs. Jean Brown of 8 Lincoln St. and Mrs. Barbara Bligod of 16 Lincoln St., was prompted by a motorcycle crash at Center and Roosevelt Sts. last week which sent four young people to the hospital.

Roosevelt St. area residents have been trying for years to improve traffic safety at the intersection. Mrs. Brown says, with little success. Many of the problems, she says, are due to illegal parking and "drag racing" on Center St.

Motorcycles and cars are continually racing down the street during the early hours of the morning, according to Mrs. Bligod. "I make my life in my hands every time I go to work on Center St.," Mrs. Bligod said.

Each woman says there are more accidents at the Roosevelt and Center St. intersection than in any other part of town. Police records, while showing there have been several accidents at the location, do not show the intersection more prone to accidents than other places in Manchester.

Police logged at the Roosevelt and Center St. intersection five accidents so far in 1972; four in 1971; six in 1970; three in 1969; and four in 1968. About half of these accidents involved injuries, police said.

Police do admit that traffic conditions are hazardous in the area. Center St. is a state highway and a main thoroughfare, and there are a number of "traffic generators" in the area, such as drive-in restaurants, gas stations and stores.

Mrs. Brown doesn't think a traffic light would solve the problem, but she thinks one would alleviate the situation.

Police Capt. George McCaughy said there wouldn't be much chance of getting a traffic light at the intersection, due to the high cost of installation as well as other factors.

However, the women are still circulating the petition, hoping that it will bring some kind of action. The petition reads:

"We, the undersigned, as residents of the area of Center St. and Roosevelt St., Manchester, Conn., request that action be taken by the Town of Manchester regarding the hazardous traffic conditions which exist now and have for some time.

"Cars and trucks parked on the north side of Center St. in no parking areas make it impossible to see the oncoming traffic on Center St. in either direction.

"In addition, cars and motor-

Island Delays Remap

HARTFORD (AP) — Secretary of the State Gloria Schaffer said Tuesday an unanticipated delay in remapping the island of Rhode Island is creating problems in her efforts to draw new Congressional district lines.

Ambliguette in the census tract map make it unclear whether Rhode Island is in either of the four blocks in either direction to cross at a stop light. "We are in need of more police protection and stop lights in this area, and if necessary, intervention by town officials," she said.

Portland is one of five towns split by the new congressional redistricting plan ordered last week by a federal district court.

The problem is whether to put the island in the 1st District or 2nd District, she said.

Mrs. Schaffer said the problem of accurately pinpointing the island's location in terms of enumeration districts on census maps is just a small example of what will happen when redistricting for the state legislature becomes a reality.

GOP Tonight Will Hear Rittenband and Almquist

The Manchester Republican Town Committee will hear two speakers tonight — Atty. Richard Rittenband and Rep. Almquist of South Windsor.

Rittenband was nominated July 8 to be GOP candidate for First District congressman. Almquist is a district coordinator for the Connecticut Committee to Re-elect the President. The chairman of that committee is State Comptroller Nathan Agostinelli, former Manchester mayor.

Tonight's meeting is at 8 in the Municipal Building Hearing Room.

Rittenband, who was advisor, campaign aide and speechmaker for Ann Uccello in her campaign for Hartford's First District congressman, will be the first speaker.

Mrs. Schaffer said the problem of accurately pinpointing the island's location in terms of enumeration districts on census maps is just a small example of what will happen when redistricting for the state legislature becomes a reality.

Open Burning Highly Restricted

Regulations for the abatement of air pollution which went into effect June 1 strictly control open burning in Connecticut. Burning of many types of materials are prohibited and even when burning is permitted, a certificate of open burning must be obtained first either from the town's air pollution officer or from the air compliance unit of the State Department of Environmental Protection.

James (Dutch) Fogarty, Manchester's civil defense director, has been appointed the town's air pollution officer.

Under the new regulations, materials which can be burned include leaves, paper, cardboard, tar paper, garbage, asphalt shingles, rubber and plastic products, automobile parts, and paint and paint related solvents.

There are certain types of fires which are allowed and do not require burning certificates provided they do not create a nuisance. These fires include barbecues or other outdoor fires for the cooking of food; camp fires, bonfires, and other fires for ceremonial or recreational purposes; fires in salamanders or other devices used by construction or other workers for heating purposes; and fires to abate a fire hazard provided such a fire is properly controlled.

Fogarty may issue permits for fires to train personnel in a practical and reasonable alternative method of disposing of the material involved exists.

Fire Destroys Law Library At Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A five-alarm fire has virtually destroyed the 180,000-volume Charles Klein Law Library at Temple University. The collection of Warwick and Cranston, R.I., was valued as high as $1 million, set up new districts with new boundaries, and on the fire, which apparently started in a storage room at the rear of the building, raged for more than an hour before it was brought under control Tuesday afternoon.

The cause of the blaze is under investigation.

The library included rare volumes dating to the 1600s and priceless manuscripts.

Stench Over Rhode Island

PROVIDENCE (AP) — Rhode Island Health Department spokesmen are unable to explain the cause of a stench which has lingered over parts of the state since the beginning of several days, but did say the problem is not being caused from sewage treatment plants.

Raymond R. Lavoie, a sanitarian with the department's division of water pollution control, said Tuesday, health inspectors can't pinpoint its source or cause.

Lavoie said the smell is strongest near the Cranston R.I. sewage treatment plant, but added, "We don't feel it's coming from there."

Oil In Harbor Damages Boats

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A Coast Guard pollution barge Tuesday blamed storm drains for an oil slick that stained boats and docks in Bridgeport Harbor.

Richard Seagrave said the spill Monday of light oil, similar to paint thinner, did not come from the Hoffman Fuel terminal nearby. He said the oil came from up the Pequonnock River, but he could not determine the exact source. He said the state Department of Environmental Protection had been called in to make an investigation.

Seagrave said the spill appeared to be "quite extensive, but most had evaporated by midday Tuesday.

Several boats in the Pequonnock Yacht Club were damaged.

The humming bird, Loddogastis, found in the Andes in Peru, has four tail feathers as compared to 8-12 in other species. The tail feathers on the male are long filaments three times as long as the bird's body. The bird can raise these over his head.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

"Greatest Show on Earth"

Day after day after day in a Los Angeles courtroom, an elderly gentleman sat attentively in a back row seat. He had no stake in any of the cases. He knew none of the participants. But when asked why he was there, he had a ready reply:

"Because this is the greatest show on earth."

Courtroom scenes do provide the central drama in countless movies, plays, and television programs. Yet, surprisingly few people go to see the real thing. Unless highly publicized, trials often take place with no spectators at all.

Why don't more people visit courtrooms? Perhaps they feel reluctant to "listen in" on the private lives of others.

But in the eyes of the law, the anonymous spectator, far from intruding, actually plays a useful role in our scheme of justice. It is his very anonymity that makes him effective. Judges, lawyers, witnesses, and jurors, not knowing who the stranger might be, have an extra incentive to be conscientious.

People may also be court-ly because they do not realize how remarkably open our courts are. The United States Supreme Court once observed:

"We have been unable to find a single instance of a criminal trial conducted (in secret) in any federal, state, or municipal court during the history of this country."

True, access may occasionally be limited for some special reason: to prevent overcrowding, to keep order, to protect children, or to check your name or ask your business. When the judge in a murder trial ordered that "respectable citizens only" would be admitted to the courtroom, his order was thrown out by an appellate court as "preposterous."

Of course, around Law Day each May many people go to court to watch justice in action. But the courts are just as open (and just as interesting) all year long. In a sense, that is what Law Day is all about.

Social Security Q & A

Q. My husband died three years ago. I will be 60 in a few months and I want to apply for monthly Social Security widow's payment. Must I wait until I'm 60 to apply?

A. No. You should apply two or three months before you reach 60. You will need your birth certificate, marriage certificate and your husband's Social Security number when you apply. You should not delay contacting the Social Security office because you don't have all the items listed. The people at the office may be able to help you obtain them.

Q. I started getting Social Security checks in January and at that time I estimated my earnings would be $2,500 for 1972. However, I have just been laid off and I won't earn $1,680 this year. Should I notify Social Security of the change in my estimated earnings?

A. Yes. You should do so right away since it may be possible that you are entitled to more payments this year since your earnings have dropped from $2,500 to $1,680.

Q. I'm a homemaker. I've never worked outside my home except last summer when I worked in a friend's store. Could I get a refund of my Social Security contributions from that job?

A. Social Security contributions cannot be refunded. But the work credits remain on your record, and if you take another job covered by Social Security, you'll continue to build your Social Security protection.

Q. I'm a 52-year-old widow getting a monthly Social Security check for myself and my son, who is now 17. He plans to enlist in the service. Should I report this to Social Security?

A. Yes. Since you are receiving payment because you have a child under 18 in your care, your payment will stop when your son enters the service. Your son's check may also stop depending on when he enters and his estimated earnings for the year. You should notify Social Security as soon as you know the date your son will enter the service.

Have a question about Social Security and its retirement, survivors, disability or Medicare benefits? Write to Questions & Answers, Social Security office, 607 Main St., East Hartford 06108.

Stamps In the News

The Falkland Islands, steeped in international controversy, are also famous for flowers which bloom where horticulturists say they shouldn't.

Such anachronistic national flowers appear on a new set of multicolored stamps issued by the Falklands—and we can see where this set will be welcomed not only by collectors of British Colonies but also by topical philatelists who specialize in flora on stamps.

Here is an island group located 300 miles east of South America and 400 miles north of the Antarctic, where tropical and polar climates clash. And the flowers are a mixture resulting from this interrelated weather.

Many nations have laid claim to the islands since 1592 when British Capt. John Davis first navigated the area. Argentina says it belongs to them via discovery by Magellan in 1520.

Even the French tried to establish possession and the U.S. sent naval vessels to protect sailors who were taken prisoner by the Argentinians.

Stamps have helped wage these wars of possession as the various nations have issued stamps showing their right to the Falklands.

These new stamps depicting beautiful flowers, rainbows of halidescopic blossoms, are available at your local dealer or stamp department.

The 1972-73 edition of the "United States Specialized Catalog of First Day Covers" (Washington Press, Maplewood, N.J.) is now on the market. This 30th annual volume has 154 new listings and $81 price increases.

Included is a comprehensive compilation of all known U.S. first-day covers supplemented by dozens of postmark illustrations. Also featured is a section for U.N. first day covers, including U.N. Geneva issues.

The booklet sells for $1 at your local dealer, or you can order directly from The Washington Press, Maplewood, N.J. 07060 (adding 20 cents to cover postage).

Another catalog for U.S. collectors is the "Harris U.S./BNA" for stamps of the United States, British North America and United Nations. Featured are all major U.S. postage and airmail issues, special delivery, parent post, revenue squares, postal cards, officials, revenues, postage dues, plate blocks, booklet pages, line pairs and other specialties. Also listed are U.S. possessions, Confederate States, United Nations and all British North America.

The 1972 edition with its 2,361 illustrations, can be purchased for just $1 from H.E. Harris & Co., Catalog Dept., Boston, Mass. 02117.

U.S. Steel Notes Decline In Earnings

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. Steel Corp. has reported that second quarter earnings and sales declined sharply from year-earlier levels. Edwin H. Gott, chairman of U.S. Steel, attributed the decline in part to strike hedge buying that inflated last year's figures but did not occur this year.

Book Review

JOURNEY BETWEEN TWO CHINAS. By Seymour Topping. Harper, 400 Pages, $10. The "Two Chinas" of Seymour Topping's title are separated by 21 years. In 1949-50 as an AP correspondent he saw the downfall of Chiang Kai-shek in mainland China and the upsurge of Mao Tse-tung's forces. In 1971 he went back to China as a news executive eventually summoned to a rare interview with Chou En-lai. In the intervening years Topping worked in Indonesia, London, Moscow and New York.

IN CRITICAL CONDITION: The Crisis in America's Health Care. By Edward M. Kennedy. Simon & Schuster, 252 Pages, $6.95. This book is an outgrowth of hearings held by the Senate Subcommittee on Health, of which Sen. Kennedy is chairman, and it presents the testimony of a great many witnesses on their troubles with health care. The opening chapter gives examples of catastrophic injury or long-term illnesses which have driven families into bankruptcy and loss of their homes because the bills ran into thousands of dollars.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The idea of an abused environment striking back by eliminating its tormentor—man— isn't a unique one. Science-fiction writers have been dealing with the theme for years. But Wylie gives the old theme some new twists in this novel—his last—that keep the reader interested enough to wade through page after page of turd prose. The worm bit, for example. By polluting the seas man destroys the organisms which had kept these nasty, little bloodsuckers in check. Unchecked, the worms have a population explosion. With insufficient food left in the ocean, the worms naturally turn to shore and, emerging in great blankets, eat all the living matter in sight—people included.
