

Students Take 'Strike' Recess Over Nation

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negotiations remained deadlocked today in the Philadelphia teachers strike, but Kansas City youngsters were back in class and there were signs of progress in several other school walkouts across the country.

Spokesmen for both the teachers' union and the Philadelphia School Board expressed doubt Sunday that the walkout by 13,000 teachers affecting 285,000 students would be settled this week.

William Ross, school board president, said the union was prepared for a three-month strike. Union President John Ryan said the board, $52 million in debt, wanted a long strike partly to save money.

The teachers struck last Tuesday after refusing a board demand that the work day be increased from 5 hours to 5 hours, 40 minutes.

The union has demanded that starting salaries be raised from $8,900 to $12,000, but the board has offered only normal seniority increments except for a $330 annual raise to top-scale teachers, who make $17,000.

Another 50,000 students were out of school in a dozen districts in the western part of Pennsylvania, where teachers are protesting contract terms.

Some 68,000 students were back in Kansas City schools after missing classes Thursday and Friday because custodians and maintenance workers were on strike and trash had accumulated at the schools.

The union members voted approval Sunday of terms of a new contract, and all the schools were ordered reopened.

Negotiators for teachers in Rockford — Illinois' second largest city — reached a tentative agreement Sunday that could end the three-day-old strike involving 693 teachers and 12,359 pupils.

Elsewhere in Illinois, a Circuit Court judge issued a temporary injunction late Sunday ordering striking teachers in Champaign back to work. Some 700 teachers and 11,381 pupils are affected.

In the Chicago suburb of Bensenville, teachers set a walkout for today after working for two weeks to show "good faith." Nearly 3,000 students are involved.

Strikes continued in three Detroit-area suburbs, affecting 28,400 students, but teachers in a fourth district reached a tentative settlement Sunday, and 7,600 pupils could go back to class Tuesday if the pact is approved.

Georgia City Hit By Firebombings

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Attempts to calm outbreaks of violence were interrupted by firebombings and curfew violations Sunday night, and state and federal officials were called in.

Mayor Joe Stargel and city commissioners met at midnight with Cloyd Hall, special assistant to Gov. Jimmy Carter, assistant Civil Defense chief Bill Clark, and two representatives of the Justice Department.

Stargel said state Public Safety Director Co. Ray Pope was scheduled to be in the city Monday morning for an investigation.

Police said 30 state troopers were called into the city Sunday night as sporadic violence which broke out Friday night continued. In addition, 28 more troopers were placed on standby.

The violence followed when a fight between a white youth and a black youth erupted at a southside high school football game.

City commissioners and black leaders were in conference Sunday night discussing the weekend violence when two fires broke out on the predominantly black southside and a rash of firebombings were reported.

In the next 90 minutes firemen investigated more than a dozen firebombing reports and said they found evidence of firebombs in at least five small blazes. No serious damage was reported.

Police reported 30 arrests for violations of a citywide, dusk-to-dawn curfew, imposed by Stargel Saturday night when more than 60 persons were arrested in an outbreak of violence.

Amendments Stall Push Of Revenue Sharing Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders are pushing for final passage of the $34.8-billion revenue-sharing bill but first must consider a couple dozen amendments, including one that would help finance the program.

The Senate acted on 22 amendments in four days of debate last week but at least as many are pending, including a tax-reform measure and a series to increase Social Security benefits.

The tax amendment, sponsored by Sens. Frank Church, D-Ida., and Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., would raise $3.7 billion in revenue to help offset the more than-$6-billion annual cost of the revenue-sharing program.

It would raise an estimated $1.9 billion by beefing up the minimum tax plan adopted in the 1969 tax-reform act, to get some payments from wealthy persons who are able to use various preferences to reduce or eliminate their tax liability. The rate of the minimum tax would be raised from 10 to 50 per cent.

U.N. in Rare Veto At Security Council

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States cast its second veto in the history of the U.N. Security Council Sunday night. It killed a resolution demanding a halt to Israeli reprisal raids but making no mention of the Arab terrorism that provoked the raids.

The veto came after an all-day debate on the Palestinian guerrilla massacre of Israeli Olympic athletes in Munich Tuesday and Israeli air strikes Friday at reputed guerrilla positions in Syria and Lebanon.

China and the Soviet Union earlier had vetoed amendments that would have applied the resolution to terrorist activities as well as military operations.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush said his vetoes killed "a very important passage that could have made the resolution more acceptable."

realities and "looked to effect but not to cause." Its "silence on the disaster in Munich" invited more terrorism, he said.

"We seek and support a world in which athletes need not fear assassins and passengers on planes need not fear hijacking," Bush declared.

Bush got applause from the gallery for his veto. And Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah, absent because of the Jewish New Year, told newsmen by telephone that the U.S. vote would be "applauded by the people of Israel."

Soviet Ambassador Jacob A. Malik spoke of "the distressing events which occurred in Munich" but said to put them on the same footing as the new Israeli raids would be "condoning the aggressive policy of the Israeli maniacs."

Chinese Ambassador Huang Hua, presiding over the council for the first time since Peking entered the world organization late last year, also referred to "the unfortunate incident" in Munich but then said that the Palestinians and other Arabs had been "compelled to take up arms to recover their homelands" from Israel.

Ambassadors Haissam Kelani of Syria and Edouard Ghorra of Lebanon, who had asked for the meeting, registered dissatisfaction. Ghorra said he was "deeply disappointed" by the U.S. veto and could not let the matter rest. But both he and Kelani called the resolution that failed too weak.

The resolution, sponsored by Somalia, Guinea and Yugoslavia, noted "the deteriorating situation in the Middle East" and called on "the parties concerned to cease immediately all military operations and exercise the greatest restraint."

Cong Sounds Peace Overture

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong issued a new peace statement today saying it is "prepared to accept a provisional government of national concord that shall be dominated by neither side."

U.S. sources in Saigon interpreted this as a concession that neither side can win the war militarily. But Viet Cong and North Vietnamese spokesmen have said repeatedly in the past—for public consumption, at least—that the coalition government they proposed would be a coalition of equals, with none of the factions dominating.

The Viet Cong termed the three-page declaration "an important statement on ending the war in Vietnam and restoring peace." But at first reading it appeared to be no more than a reiteration of previous Communist peace demands.

Once again it called on the United States to withdraw all its troops from Vietnam, to stop supporting the regime of President Nguyen Van Thieu, and to halt the bombing and mining of North Vietnam.

"Should the U.S. government really respect the South Vietnamese people's right of self-determination and seriously negotiate to peacefully settle the South Vietnam problem," the statement said, "the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam is prepared to reach agreements to the effect that neither a Communist regime nor a U.S.-stooze regime shall be imposed on South Vietnam."

"It is prepared to accept a provisional government of national concord that shall be dominated by neither side."

The Viet Cong also repeated its previous formula for the makeup of the government of national concord—a three-segment coalition composed of (1) members of the Provisional Revolutionary Government, (2) members of the Saigon administration excluding Thieu, and (3) representatives of other political forces in South Vietnam "including those who, for political reasons, have been compelled to live in exile."

"These three segments of this government are on the same footing and equal," the statement said. "The Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam and the Saigon administration without Nguyen Van Thieu must appoint their men on each side to participate in the national concord government. As for the nomination of the third segment members, this must be carried out through negotiations."

Kissinger In Moscow, Tho Arrives

MOSCOW (AP) — Henry Kissinger began meetings with Soviet officials today, but speculation that he would also talk peace with Le Duc Tho of North Vietnam collapsed when Tho flew on to Paris.

The North Vietnamese said on his arrival in the French capital that he had not seen Kissinger in Moscow, but he did not rule out an early meeting with him in Paris.

"You will know in a few days," he told newsmen.

Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser on national security, arrived Sunday. He told newsmen that "We are here to continue talks," an apparent reference to Nixon's meeting with the Russians in May.

Bombers Smash Hanoi, Suburbs

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. jets made some of the most devastating raids on the war against Hanoi and its suburbs Sunday, wrecking North Vietnam's biggest and most important bridge and smashing four military installations covering more than 300 acres, the U.S. Air Force announced today.

But the Air Force's report of heavy damage in North Vietnam was offset by a revised field report that explosions Sunday at a bomb storage dump at Bien Hoa Air Base, 15 miles northeast of Saigon, destroyed or damaged 70 South Vietnamese helicopters.

It was the worst aircraft loss of the war for the South Vietnamese and will severely restrict their operations at a critical time, when renewed North Vietnamese offensive action is expected.

On the political front, the Viet Cong issued a new peace statement saying it would agree to a coalition government dominated by neither the Communists nor the Saigon regime provided the United States gets out of Vietnam completely and takes President Nguyen Van Thieu with it. U.S. analysts were studying the statement to determine if it contained anything new.

The Viet Cong termed its statement a "clarification" of its previous proposal for a coalition government.

A spokesman for the 7th Air Force said the U.S. air attack on the Paul Doumer Bridge at Hanoi, the biggest in North Vietnam, was "the most damage we've ever done to it in the war."

Vermont Girds for Foliage Flock

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Vermont's population will double for a few weekends this fall as the woody state cashes in on its leaves.

The hills will be red and gold, the air sharp and the apples crisp. And tourists will flock by the thousands to take it all in.

But unless they plan carefully ahead, state officials warn they will probably run into the two biggest problems of the fall foliage season—crowded roads and no place to stay.

The state's department of information and travel development, Donald A. Lyons, said that only about 10 per cent of Vermont's tourists come when leaves are turning. But because the season lasts just five weeks, from mid-September to mid-October, it's really the busiest time of the year.

"We guesstimate" the population rises 25 to 50 per cent on any given weekend," Lyons said, "and over the five-week period it can match or exceed the population of the state" which has 450,000 year-around residents.

The huge influx of people, particularly on weekends, creates "almost an emergency situation" in lodging, according to Rodney A. Barber, director of parks. Tired and frustrated people often pull onto the side of the road and sleep in their cars; in some towns gymnasiums and churches are set up as make-shift dormitories, and private homes sometimes take in tourists.

Vermont's state campgrounds with 2200 campsites will be open until Oct. 12, but Barber advised tourists to call ahead to see if space is available because overnight sites are not reserved, and all-night parking in interstate highway rest areas is illegal.

One of the reasons for the crowded conditions is that everyone wants to see the leaves at their peak of color.

"People are always asking, 'When is the peak?'" said Lyons. "We can guess, but frankly, it's really a matter of interpretation. People don't have to wait until October; it's just as vivid in September, especially the reds while they still contrast with the shades of green.

Tourists with general questions of special problems have several places they can seek help. Three visitor welcome centers on interstate highways leading into Vermont and local chambers of commerce are natural points of information on lodging, scenery and the many county fairs, music festivals and special events coinciding with the turning of the leaves.

If an emergency arises, these tourist facilities or the state police can offer assistance.

Lyons gives three tips that he says can make the difference between an enjoyable trip to Vermont and a miserable one—get advance room reservations, avoid the weekend crush by sightseeing during the week and take the "shunpikes," the secondary and unmarked roads that criss cross the countryside.

Maps showing back roads are available from the department of highways and from some chambers of commerce, but Lyons adds that travelers should ask local residents for help if they get lost.

"We natives are friendly," he said.

Fall foliage season is harvest time in Vermont and gives the visitor a chance to top his trip with a home-cooked New England meal at one of the many "harvest Suppers." Held throughout the state as fund-raising projects by churches and local organizations, traditional New England boiled dinners offer travelers a way to combine authenticity and economy.

Roadside farm produce stands abound in rural Vermont, offering the ingredients for impromptu picnics—home-grown fruit and vegetables, cheese, apple cider and homemade preserves. The roadside stands also give the visitor an introduction to that almost legendary creature, the New England farmer. Traditionally pictured as people of dry humor and few words, Lyons noted, "they're apt to be friendlier when you're buying something from them."

Attraction at the Wapping Fair

Bored with all the fanfare, prize poodle, "Champion Stormy Lane To Sir With Love" takes time out for a yawn, while his owner, Miss Barbara Cook of East Hartford, puts him through his paces in the breed and obedience program at the Wapping Fair, Saturday. Show was rained out, but demonstration of poodle cuts was presented. The three-day fair, an annual event ended Sunday. (Herald photo by Pinto)

Sheinwold on Bridge

BRIDGE BOOK OF YEAR WELL WORTH READING BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The book of the year thus far is "The Bridge Sheinwold," by James S. Kauder, a young man who writes as well as he plays—which is very high praise indeed. Kauder is the son of Mary Jane Farrell, winner of two world championships and a highest ranked woman player in the records of the American Contract Bridge League. (If he writes any more books as good as this, the columnists of the future may have to explain that Mrs. Farrell is related to the famous writer.) The first hand in Kauder's book

"I win the jack of hearts with the king and lead a low diamond to dummy's queen, which holds." Kauder reports in telling the story of his encounter with this hand. "Could East be ducking with the king of diamonds? Hardly. For all he knows, the queen of diamonds might be my ninth trick."

"The normal way to continue the diamonds is to play the ace and follow with a diamond toward my jack-ten. That loses only when West started with four diamonds, king-ten."

"But I'm wondering if there could be any merit in re-entring my hand and running the jack of diamonds through West. I'm tired, but I should be able to determine which is the better play."

Case by Case

"Let's see. Either play will win three tricks when the diamonds are divided 3-3, when West has the doubleton king and when East has the doubleton ten. But leading the jack of diamonds will gain an extra trick when West holds K10-x and East has the doubleton eight, for if West covers the jack of diamonds, I can later lead dummy's seven, making three tricks unless West started with K10-x."

As you have surely noted, the decisive card is dummy's seven of diamonds. If dummy had the deuce or trey of diamonds, you would play the suit normally.

turning the ace on the second round.

Most of the hands in the Kauder book are amusing, but when my young friend chose he takes a very close look indeed at a hand. Those students of the game should make sure to read "The Bridge Sheinwold."

Daily Question

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: Spades, 10-7-5-2; Hearts, Q-7-4-2; Diamonds, 8-3; Clubs, A-5.

What do you say?

Answer: Bid two hearts. You would jump to four hearts if you had a singleton or void in a side suit, but the actual distribution is not strong enough for this jump to game.

"THE WAY I HEARD IT"

by John Gruber

Rudolf Nureyev will appear at the Babbalanza Theatre on Sept. 14, and judging by the early demand for tickets you'd better get yours right away or you won't be able to attend. Originally he was only expected to be here for the Saturday night performance, but the demand was so great he sandwiched in another appearance on Sunday night.

He is the sensational Russian dancer who defected from the USSR some years back and has appeared before frenzied audiences all over Europe and now in the U.S.A. Actually he is now the National Ballet of Canada, a group established shortly after "World War II" and now more than a score of years old. It is a first rate company, headed by Erik Bruhn, who used to be principal dancer with the Royal Danish Ballet some years back and was almost as famous in his day as Nureyev is now.

Saturday evening's program is divided into two parts. During the first half there will be three relatively short diversions. I don't have a complete breakdown on this but I should expect Nureyev to appear in two of these, the first and third. These are both duets or "pas des deux" as the ballet terminology has it. The first is from "The Nutcracker" and comes in the second act of that famous ballet. The second "pas des deux" is from "Corsaire," a ballet with which I am not familiar.

In between comes a diversion called "Fandango" choreographed by Anthony Tudor, with music by Soler. Tudor is more famous for his ballets, "Lilac Garden" and "Pillar of Fire" but both of these are rather lengthy and would not fit the format of the program. Don't expect flamenco style dancing; Padre Antonio Soler who composed the music lived from 1729 to 1783 and his music generally sounds like a rather somber Mozart.

The second half of Saturday evening's program is devoted to "La Sylphide," which people always get confused with later "Les Sylphides." Eric Bruhn restaged this one for American Ballet Theater last year with Ivan Nagy and Cynthia Gregory as principal dancers.

It is the first of the "Romantic Ballets," and was the first in which ladies danced "les pointes," or on the toes. In order to make this visible, the skirts were shortened, but they are still halfway down the calf, so don't expect the brief little "tutu" with which you will be more familiar.

The plot is crazy and really only serves as an excuse for the dancing. Oddly enough it was suggested by a tenor at the Paris Opera. Originally choreographed by the incumbent ballet master at the opera it was revised and revised by Bourmoinville who was to become associated with the Royal Danish Ballet. Since then it has rarely been out of the repertoire at Copenhagen, which is where Bruhn learned it.

Sunday evening brings "Swan Lake," which always draws a full house. It is the first of the three great ballets with music by Tchaikovsky and choreography by Petipa. Actually the synopsis of the ballet was presented to Tchaikovsky in the first place and he was well advanced in the music before Petipa ever knew about it. In the two later ballets

St. Louis (AP) — A planning session is set for Sept. 12 for discussion on the merging of the two parts of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

About 100 persons are expected to attend. The sessions are billed as "networks of support" for the merger of the Southern Church and the United Presbyterian Church, divided during the Civil War.

The Southern Church has about 950,000 members in 16 southern and border states while the United Presbyterians have about 7 million members.

The merger effort is expected to be completed next spring.

Columbia Firemen Get $400 From Women's Group

The Women's Auxiliary has presented a $400 check to the Columbia Volunteer Fire Department's president Charles Sanborn, according to Mrs. Barbara Kellher, president of the auxiliary.

Sanborn thanked the group on behalf of the department and suggested the money be used for the new Engine Tank I. Because of unexpected expenses, he said the department could not get the equipment it had planned. A new well had to be installed last fall. The Women's Auxiliary was organized in the fall of 1965 by 13 women, primarily the wives of firemen.

The main function of the auxiliary is to assist the fire department in any way possible. The membership is open to any woman 18 years or older.

By May 1964 there were 26 charter members. Incorporation papers were filed in 1965 and the membership now numbers 35, 20 of whom are active.

Officers for the current year are Mrs. Kellher, president;

Boyle Opens His Mail

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail.

Fire fighting has now replaced mining as the most dangerous U.S. profession. Last year 211 firemen were killed and 36,583 injured while on duty, raising the industry's mortality rate to 115 for every 100,000 firemen.

The long tasks of the walrus aren't used only to fight fires or scare away enemies. They make handy tools to gouge up clams from the floor of the sea.

When it comes to wheels, no other country yet comes near the United States. With only six per cent of the world's population, it has 49.5 per cent of its motor vehicles. California alone has more cars than Europe and Asia combined. We're doing pretty well in bicycles, too. About 67 million Americans own them.

As recently as half a century ago, labor was fighting an uphill battle to get the standard work week cut to five days. Now employees of more than 300 firms are working a four-day week of 40 hours or less.

Modern war leaves vast scars on the land as well as in the spirit of man. Scientists estimate that years of heavy aerial bombardment have left more than 26 million craters in the soil and cities of Indochina. The area of the craters is the equivalent of 400,000 acres.

Turnabout: In the New Hebrides, according to the National Geographic Society, the native islanders scold their children by saying, "Be good, or the white man will get you."

Scarcity makes value: During the reign of King Edward III of England, the iron pots and pans in the royal palace were so highly valued they were classified among the crown jewels.

An unfair trade: It is said that the white man gave the Indians tuberculosis and firewater and that the Indian got even by giving the white man the tobacco habit. But the Indians also taught the white man to grow such new food crops as corn, white potatoes and sweet potatoes, kidney beans, peanuts, lima beans, tomatoes, peppers, squashes and pumpkins, avocados, coconuts and pineapples.

Another poor deal: To get rich all you have to do is invent a common cheap gadget that almost everyone needs or uses. So one theory goes. It didn't work, however, for Walter Hunt, the early 19th century New York City Quaker who invented the safety pin. He sold all the rights to it for a sum which left him, after paying his debts, with just $385 in cash.

Brazil's No. 3 City Has Urban Woes

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer
BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil (AP) — The planned capital of Brazil's Minas Gerais state, inaugurated 75 years ago as a model of urban foresight, is struggling to head off an urban calamity.

Built from scratch on a former cattle ranch, Belo Horizonte was designed as the eventual home for some 300,000 people who would enjoy the fresh air and relaxed good life of the Brazilian interior. Today the city has a population of 1.3 million, among slums, traffic jams and a lack of schools, hospitals, telephones, drinking water, sewers and green space.

It is now Brazil's No. 3 city, after São Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, and the eighth biggest in South America.

The current administration of Belo Horizonte — which means "Beautiful Horizon" in Portuguese — Brazil's national language — is working fast to "humanize" the city before it's too late.

"Growth is a good thing," Mayor Oswaldo Pierecetti said, pointing toward the impressive skyscrapers that dominate Belo Horizonte's downtown area. "But in our case the growth perhaps has exceeded our ability to keep pace."

In 1950 Belo Horizonte had a population of 352,724. By 1960 it had jumped to nearly 700,000 and today it has practically doubled again. In less than a generation, the city exploded from the size of a Louisville or Oklahoma City to a Houston or Detroit.

"Tremendous areas were devastated in the name of growth. Trees were cut down to make room for more traffic. You can't imagine how many shade trees Belo Horizonte once had," the mayor observed.

NEW LOOK — Efforts are being made to "humanize" Belo Horizonte, Brazil, which nearly quadrupled in population in the past 20 years. Trees are being planted along Alfonso Pena Avenue and work is being completed on a pedestrian mall which features plants, walkways, benches and helmet-like phone booths.

"recreation walkways" for pedestrians.

Other plans: build new parks, increase the size of the zoo, take the railroad tracks out of downtown. A project to extend the city water supply to 27 more neighborhoods finally is nearing completion — after dragging on for 15 years.

Belo Horizonte is seeking federal aid for a massive slum clearance program, and the city has improved its traffic flow by covering several streams and making expressways out of them.

"There should be government incentives to help people in rural areas, to make life satisfying for them in their own environment and eliminate the need for them to migrate to the cities," Pierecetti said.

Dr. Dean Will Head Long Lane

HARTFORD (AP) — Dr. Charles W. Dean, superintendent of the Connecticut School for Boys in Meriden, was named recently to administer both the new facility and the Long Lane School for Girls in Middletown, according to Commissioner of Children and Youth Services Francis H. Maloney.

Dean's official title is acting director of institutions for the department in the first step toward a merger of the boys' and girls' facilities, Maloney said.

Rearing Show Business Kids Discussed By Lucy

(During Cynthia Lowry's vacation, the column was written by invited guests, each of whom was asked to respond to specific questions. Here is a report on bringing up show business kids by television's, if not the entertainment world's most beloved comedienne.)

By LUCILLE BALL
Q. With both your children making successes in your field, you obviously have done something right. Did you nudge them, urge them or just let them come into your orbit on their own? Did they aim in the direction of the theatre from the beginning?

A. No parent is ever 100 per cent certain that he did everything right in raising his children, but I do believe that no parents spend at least 50 per cent of their time working at it, the results can be gratifying.

It's a full-time job, though, equipped with responsibilities and challenges, any one of which could give you a migraine.

I am reasonably sure that I did a few things right in raising Lucie and Desi. First, I spent as much time with them and on them as I could. Because our "I Love Lucy" schedule in those early days, Desi and I were able to devote almost as much time to the children as any other working parents. We had long weekends and spent time with the kids. We also had time off during spring and early summer, which gave us a chance to take regular vacations.

I loved vacation time when I was a child — no school, fewer chores, just time for dreaming, relaxing and being with those you loved. My father died when I was very small, but my mother, Della, certainly filled the gap by making our vacations enjoyable and as meaningful as she could.

I think sometimes I worried a little too much, loved a little too much or perhaps admonished a little too much. But that's part of a parent's job, isn't it, and the time comes all too quickly when you've got to let them fly a little on their own. It's not an easy time and you spend a lot of hours biting your tongue.

But you'll be surprised how well they can solo. Oh, they may wobble a bit, but they straighten out and fly steady, you feel wonderful.

I did urge, nudge and encourage, but in slow stages. If they wanted to put on a backyard play, we helped. We built a playhouse, provided some wardrobe and props and let them go. I think it was those backyard performances that gave Lucie and Desi their first taste of show business. They always loved performing.

Through the years, they watched all our shows on television and recreated some of the scenes I did with performers as Red Skelton, Maurice Chevalier, Jack Benny and Bob Hope. I was pleasantly surprised at their timing and mimicry.

When I returned from New York after "Wildcat" (which Lucie and Desi saw 17 times), I decided to do "Here's Lucy." Meanwhile, I had married Gary Morton, executive producer of the current series. The format called for me to have two children. When time came to cast the roles of two teenagers, Gary and I discussed using Lucie and Desi. We reminded the kids that school came first and warned them that if they did the series it meant having a special teacher and going to school on the lot. They voted to try it — and their grades improved and both were able to graduate with their high school classes.

Desi has since left the series and is pursuing a motion picture career. Lucie is still with me on the show, and, speaking as a fellow performer, I am proud to have her at my side.

I'm happy to report that family vacations are still going strong. Last winter at our home in Snow Mass, Colorado, Gary and I were delighted off and on by her and her husband, Paul Vandervort. Desi and Liza Minnelli and mother Della, and all their friends. Vacations are like family reunions and I love it.

Admiral Says Mines Working

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
YOKOSUKA, Japan (AP) — They're sprucing up the 7th Fleet flagship, so Vice Adm. James L. Holloway 3rd is finding a little time to get in some squash.

The fleet commander normally spends 70 or 80 per cent of the time with his units in the Gulf of Tonkin off Vietnam. He was there, aboard the heavy cruiser Newport News, a couple of weeks ago when American warships and planes sank two North Vietnamese torpedo boats off Haiphong. Holloway called it a "daring raid into strongly defended enemy territory."

"Everything we had worked the way it was supposed to," he says now. Gunfire was intense but not unexpected. "We are every time. The PT boat reaction was most unusual, and the PT boats were quite aggressive."

"We were able to get aircraft on target just like that," he added with a snap of his fingers.

Holloway, the son of retired Adm. James Lemuel Holloway Jr., feels the mining of North Vietnamese harbors last May has "very well bottled up" shipping in that area.

"There is no indication that any shipping has gotten through the fields into Haiphong," he said in an interview aboard the flagship Oklahoma City. "I have a high level of confidence that we have completely stopped all major traffic."

"It is hard sometimes to put it into perspective. Little fishing boats are going to get through almost anything we do. All we're trying to do is stop the flow of war material going into North Vietnam."

A Navy flier in the Korean War, where he served two combat tours and won awards, Holloway says Navy planes today are finding "lucrative targets" in their strikes over North Vietnam. Pilots are seeing war material in the open and he tends to believe the North Vietnamese are taking "desperate measures to move the stuff."

Asked about what is being hit and the charges that dikes or non-military targets are struck, Holloway replied: "We are scrupulous about our targets. Every round is addressed to a specific target. We only want to hit targets that contribute to the war in South Vietnam."

Admiral

"You can't write the North Vietnamese off as an adversary," he added. "Our job is to stay ahead of them. I think our people are doing a magnificent job. In the years I have spent in service, I have never encountered a more professional group of military naval personnel than I am associated with today in the 7th Fleet."

In 1968 the fleet built up to a peak of 228 ships and 87,000 men — 44,000 of them in the Vietnam combat zone. When the war slowed down, the fleet dropped to 86 ships in March 1972, with 40,000 men and only 15,000 of those in the immediate combat zone.

The Easter weekend offensive against South Vietnam brought a quick buildup. This month the fleet had 145 ships. Seventy were in the combat area, including 35 destroyer-type vessels, four carriers and three cruisers. The number of men increased to 97,000, with 39,000 in the combat theater.

With the cutoff of U.S. ground forces in South Vietnam, Holloway said he sees increased use of Navy and Air Force power.

"Under the Nixon doctrine, we support our allies with mobile forces — air and Navy," Holloway said. "This is kind of the way it is going to go, the trend."

Born in Charleston, S.C., Feb. 23, 1922, Holloway left the Naval Academy in 1942 and served aboard destroyers during World War II. He took command of the Enterprise in July 1965 and took the carrier into action in the South China Sea — the first time a nuclear-powered ship engaged in combat. He became 7th Fleet commander last May.

Eskimos Do Have Refrigerators

By GEORGE BOUTWOOD
GODTHAAB, Greenland (AP) — You'll have to give up that old joke about the smart salesman who sold a refrigerator to an Eskimo.

In Greenland some Eskimos have refrigerators as well as washing machines, garbage disposal, a supermarket around the corner. All were provided in low-rise apartment blocks built by the Danish government.

The Danish taxpayers have been spending $100 million a year since 1970 to push Greenland's 41,000 descendants of the Eskimos out of the Stone Age. And little Denmark, with only five million people, plans to pay out that amount every year until 1985.

The government's intention is that the Greenlanders will have a standard of living comparable to that of their fellow citizens in Denmark. This is a formidable undertaking because Greenland is one of the most daunting areas ever inhabited.

Man first came to Greenland about 4,000 years ago. Its Scandinavian links go back 1,000 years to the landing of the Norsemen led by Erik the Red on the southern tip. Erik got the misleading name in the hope of attracting other settlers.

Greenland is the world's largest island. Its 840,000 square miles make it three times the size of Texas. All except one-sixth of the area is permanently under an icecap nearly two miles thick. Danes like to frighten visitors with the calculation that if the ice melted the oceans would rise 24 feet.

Only the 24,000 miles of coastal fringe is habitable. Even there huan an expanse of bare, ice-free ground with temperatures as low as 94 degrees below zero in the north and wild gales in the south during the six months of winter.

Until 1953 Greenland was virtually closed to the outside world, to protect the Eskimo culture.

Then it was proclaimed an integral part of the Kingdom of Denmark. Policies had to change when it became obvious Greenlanders could no longer exist in the traditional way as hunters of seal, walrus, polar bear and arctic birds from sealskin kayaks.

One in three Greenlanders died of tuberculosis and the life expectancy was 32 years. Tuberculosis has now been conquered — the last death was in 1967.

A successful health program brought about a population explosion.

In 1921 the population was 21,000. Now it is 48,000, including about 7,000 people from Denmark. Half the Greenlanders are under 15 and half the young mothers unmarried.

Claus Borsemann, head of secretariat of the Greenland Ministry, says family planning, including use of the loop, is expected to slow population growth to a 4 per cent per year. The planners anticipated a population of 55,000 by 1985.

An enormous modernization program was needed to provide work and housing. The fishing fleet was expanded, modern apartment blocks constructed in the west coast townships with ice-free harbors.

The Danes cheerfully shouldered the cost, although there is criticism of methods.

Moving of people from hunting settlements to towns is controversial. Uprooted from their traditional ways, many Greenlanders fell for the temptations of civilization. Alcoholism and venereal disease are problems. There has been an increase in crime.

Moses Olsen, 34, Greenland's member of the Danish Parliament, says some things have gone wrong on the human level because a Danish style of living is being imposed on the Greenlanders. He wants more decisions taken by Greenlanders instead of the Danish capital 2,500 miles away.

Throughout the colonial period from 1774 trade was a monopoly of the Royal Greenland Trade Department. It supplied the population and exported such products as frozen salmon, cod fillets, catfish, lamb, reindeer, shrimp, salted fish, lampfish, seal and skins of polar bear, seal and arctic fox.

Now the territory has been opened up to free enterprise, but 80 per cent of the new business is in the hands of Danes.

Landowners Fight Development of Maine's Ocean Islands

By PHYLLIS AUSTIN
SEAL HARBOR, Maine (AP) — Peggy Rockefeller, a member of one of the nation's richest families, is turning her money and influence toward saving Maine's wild ocean islands from haphazard development.

She and other well-heeled outsiders who spend their summers along the cool, rugged coast have set up a trust that now shelters 27 sea-swept islands from realtors whims.

Eventually, they say, they hope to gain easements on all 2,500 of Maine's coastal islands, where weekend cottages have begun sprouting randomly as mainland property gets increasingly scarce.

Mrs. Rockefeller, 56, wife of David Rockefeller, took a leading part in setting up the Maine Coast Heritage Trust a year ago and is its board president.

Partly because of her influence, other members of the coast's wealthy summer colon—people like artist Andrew Wyeth, Boston businessman Thomas D. Cabot and Philadelphia banker Nathaniel Bowditch—have joined in the campaign to save the isolated islands.

The dots of land are exposed to development pressure by a growing northeast megalopolis and lack of zoning ordinances.

All of the islands brought under the trust's wing so far have been turned over to Acadia National Park. The park, half of it donated to the federal government by John D. Rockefeller Jr., David's father, encompasses a large part of Mount Desert Island, where Seal Harbor is located.

A few years ago, according to Mrs. Rockefeller, most of the islands off Mount Desert in the Gulf of Maine were uninhabited, used only by birds and seals as rookeries.

But now wild life being crowded off by summer cottages, and islands off Maine's 3,000 mile shoreline sell for $2,000-$3,000 an acre.

"David and I started growing alarmed about the situation," she said, "talked it over with other summer people and year round residents and eventually went to an attorney to see what could be done."

"We all felt strongly that the islands, as much as possible should be left in private hands and stay on the tax rolls."

"So we formed a trust to act as a counseling agency to property owners on the Maine coast," she said. "We're not interested in buying property but rather obtaining easements to turn over to government agencies.

"With easements, you're not giving away land but asking the agency to police your restrictions in perpetuity," Mrs. Rockefeller said. "It's writing a will for the future of your land."

Mrs. Rockefeller owns two small islands off Seal Harbor and has granted easements on both to Acadia.

She does not favor restricting all development.

"People do have to have a place to live and work," she said. "But some want to see no humans on the islands."

"Generally, we're just trying to keep a green belt along the coast, especially along boating thoroughfares."

Easements do allow for changes, she said. For instance, a landowner can provide for heirs adding more dwellings or a pier.

"The landowner has an idea of how much future development could be allowed while still protecting the scenic and natural character of his land," she said.

The Rockefeller name associated with the trust has brought it prestige and financial backing it might not otherwise have received.

Mrs. Rockefeller admits that the trust's financial backing is from a handful of affluent friends and neighbors and says "we have to have wider base of support."

The first year's budget for the trust was $52,000 and the 1972 figure was $60,000.

Mrs. Rockefeller relies partly on her cocktail parties as fundraising affairs. Talk is fun, she said, and she said generous checks are usually forthcoming in the mail.

Because the crowded northeast is expanding close to Maine's borders and zoning is scattered among coastal communities, she said the trust's work is of some urgency. Only a fourth of the 125 local town governments on the coast have any zoning, and islands are virtually wide open to development.

However there are still two barriers working in favor of preservation—the scarcity of fresh water on the islands and the fact that about 80 per cent of the islands are in single ownership, mostly by out-of-staters.

"Somehow, we've got to win here," Mrs. Rockefeller said. "This is a unique place in the world, and I'm not willing to sit back and see it ruined."

New Program Aimed at Helping Infants Slow in Development

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An infant is three to six months behind in development — he isn't walking at an age when other children are.

Usually, the parents of this child can only wait to see if he catches up with other children.

But now, there is a program at Ohio State University aimed at helping "developmentally delayed infants," as these children are called.

It is now serving seven such children in an effort to develop a model program for early identification of the problem and training.

"Developmentally delayed means the children are slow or show a lag in areas of development," says Dr. Ann S. Bardwell, program director and an associate professor of home economics. About 10 per cent of all babies born may fall in this category, she said.

"After these children are found in the population, then programs could be started to help them more fully develop their mental and physical abilities at an early age," she adds.

Lloyd Inglis, the program's assistant director, said: "We need to work with parents and doctors to find infants that are developing slowly. If they are found before they are 2 years old, there is real hope that they can learn quickly and possibly catch up to other children their age. The longer we wait to find them, the less help we can give. The old practice of waiting until they go to school is like something out of the Stone Age."

Whether a child is developmentally delayed can be determined through screening and infant testing, says Ellen Nash, coordinator of the infant learning center. "We would like to develop recognizable signs of this condition so pediatricians, parents, and others can detect it," she said.

In the current program, the children, who are between 12 and 24 months, take part in a 2 1/2 hour learning experience on weekdays, Mrs. Nash said.

"In addition, the mothers come in once a week to learn stimulation techniques for their infants. We also make a home visit once a week to determine any specific needs the family and child might have."

Designs for Soap Bar Show Many Variations

By AP Newfeatures

In the future, non-polluting products may get a start at the design school level.

Students engaged in a fashion visual program at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn recently were given an assignment to design a bar of soap.

They came up with some intriguing ideas in form, texture, usefulness, even as they maintained the requirements that included achieving a concept that was pleasing to the eye and a basic ingredient that was organically grown.

In addition the soap had to clean the skin naturally without burning the user's eyes, it could not slip out of a user's hands, and it had to float in water. The package had to be soluble or reusable and made of organic ingredients so it could be recycled.

There were the easy to use soaps — one that was easy to handle with either the right or left hand, an apple-scented bubble bath soap that could be broken into four pieces and a bunch of soap grapes with each grape designed to be used individually.

A grapefruit soap had eight sections, but it also filled another requirement — it was wrapped in soluble paper and packed in a reusable clear glass globe, and there were soapy cookies too — fruit scented and in reusable jars.

SOME STUDENTS USED DISPENSERS. One student used a dispenser which drops one piece at a time. An easy-to-use hand soap is packed in a wash cloth of dehydrated sponge compressed to paper thinness. Soap balls in fruit shapes were packed in clear jars which could become fruit preserve jars later.

Metal Detector Finds Treasures

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Two years ago Harry Woods, a retired park board employee, bought a metal detector and began hunting for treasure.

He's been at it ever since, and makes an average of $3 a day.

But Woods doesn't consider this a low return.

"Not only do I find many surprises with my detector, but I get exercise, travel, the wonderful fresh air, and meet people from every country in the world. It's a great pastime."

Woods says his metal detector fascinates people wherever he goes.

"I chat with everyone I meet on the highways, beaches and parks. Every living soul is my friend, and I get great pleasure explaining my hobby, my adventures, my great life of happy hours, detecting and finding metal and mineral objects."

"I've had my picture taken while using my detector, and people from all over talk to me, asking questions such as: 'What are you hunting for?'"

He says his reply that he is looking for permits is the signal for hordes of youngsters to tag along behind him. As a penny or a nickel turns up, he passes it on to his followers.

His usual haunts are beaches, parks and playgrounds, "also around abandoned shacks, mines, trails and in wooded areas."

He uncovers treasure in many forms, including coins of all denominations and from all countries, and jewelry, watches and medals. He estimates he has found 8,000 coins and tokens, some dating back to the 18th century.

Woods tells of the time his detector picked up a promising reading between two trees in a wooded area adjoining a Vancouver beach. Although the ground between the trees was covered with undergrowth, his detector insisted a large metal object lay below.

Woods began shoveling. When he looked up a bit later he saw two policemen approaching.

One of them asked what he was burying.

"I replied I wasn't burying anything, that I was digging something up," Woods said, and went on to explain how the detector worked.

He found himself with two eager assistants to help excavate the find.

"It was quite deep and had obviously been buried for a long time as it was completely rusted. It was an old city of Vancouver water meter box."

Woods' detector consists of an instrument panel mounted at the top of a long handle, at the bottom of which three interchangeable heads can be attached. Two of these are waterproof and sensitive to metals to a depth of two feet under water and the third is designed to detect gold and silver.

Canada Starts Election Campaign

OTTAWA (AP) — The campaign for Canada's Oct. 30 election is starting this week. The two main candidates, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and Robert Stanfield, will travel coast to coast over a seven-week period after preliminary meetings Tuesday in their home districts. Trudeau, as leader of the Liberal party, has been in power since 1968. The man seeking to topple him leads the Conservative party, whose last prime minister was John Diefenbaker. Stanfield is a former premier of Nova Scotia. Trudeau is from the Quebec district of Mount Royal. ### TV Shows Broadcast in Spanish

NEW YORK (AP) — "Buena Vista" is the name of a new Spanish-language television network that is set to launch in the fall. The network is the result of a merger of the Spanish-language television stations in New York, Miami, San Antonio, Tex., and Los Angeles and Fresno in California. And it's trying to open another one in Corpus Christi, Tex. SIN also has 13 affiliates, four of them in Mexico along the California and Texas borders, according to Boston-born Rene Anselmo, president of SIN. He says he's aiming for 20 affiliates in all. But right now, SIN isn't yet a network in the sense of an NBC or ABC. Its shows aren't controlled or sent from a New York headquarters, although SIN stations can link up by phone line for simultaneous transmission from one point. Usually most of its shows are taped at any of five SIN-owned stations, duplicated, then sent to the other stations for airing at times those points are available. Anselmo is waiting for Western Union to get federal clearance for a domestic satellite that may be sent aloft in 1974. If he and the company agree on terms, SIN's network broadcasting would come from one point, with its stations joined electronically from space instead of via conventional land lines. He says at that point, SIN's programming basically would be a Spanish-language mix of what major U.S. networks now offer. But all shows would be specifically tailored for the Spanish-speaking, and include major Latin sports events rarely seen on U.S. television — soccer, bullfighting and the like.

U.N. in Rare Veto At Security Council

Bush introduced a resolution to have the council condemn the Israeli attack in Munich on Sept. 5 by terrorists of the so-called Black September organization and call upon countries "harboring and supporting such terrorists" to stop doing so.

The voting stretched the council's 26-hour string of votes to 124, including 109 by the Soviet Union and two by Communist China.

The United States' first veto came on a resolution to condemn the Israeli attack on Oct. 17, 1970, to kill a resolution ordering all communications between the Israeli and Syrian borders with Syria and Lebanon.

Replying to Arab claims that the Israeli raid was a retaliation not only for the Munich massacre but also for a rising wave of attacks against Jewish Israelis, Elazar said that more terrorist attacks could be expected. He said they would be met by further counterattacks.

The resolution itself went down on the U.S. veto on a vote of 13-1 with Panama abstaining. The yes votes were by Britain, France,

Zone Change Sought For Condominiums
First Hartford Realty Corp. planning a luxury condominium project, has applied for a zone change on 28.8 acres of land on the south side of Lydall St. adjacent to Greenwood Dr. in Manchester.

The requested zone change, from Rural Residence to Residence A, is scheduled for a public hearing tonight by the Manchester Planning and Zoning Commission. The hearings will start at 7:30 at the Municipal Building hearing room.

The proposed condominiums would be "completely different" from Green Manor Construction Company's condominium complex under construction on Lydall St., according to First Hartford's Carmine Filiziano. Green Manor is affiliated with First Hartford.

Filiziano said the new proposal involves "higher-priced" units. He said details of the condominium plans are not yet available.

Green Manor's condominiums, known as Northfield Green, are still under construction. About half of the 214 units are complete. Also on tonight's public hearing agenda is a proposed amendment to Manchester's industrial zone regulations.

The amendments would allow increased non-industrial use of industrially zoned land by special exception only. New car dealers, tennis and badminton courts, skating rinks, and health and recreation clubs are provided for the proposed amendments.

Survivors, besides his wife, are two sons, Jared Talbot of Andover and Thomas D. Talbot of California; and a sister, Mrs. Elsie Williams of Long Branch, N.J.

Funeral services and burial will be at the convenience of the family.

A memorial service will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Andover Congregational Church.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions may be made to the Roscoe P. Talbot Memorial Fund at the Andover Congregational Church.

Zoning Changes Fought

Proposed amendments to Manchester's zoning regulations, which would allow increased non-industrial uses in residential zones, came under heavy fire from one speaker at last night's public hearing before the town's Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC).

Atty. John LaBelle, representing developer Alexander Jarvis, attacked many of the requirements proposed in the amendments, claiming they are "totally inadequate and totally discriminatory."

PZC members took no action on the amendments last night. The new complaint alleges that Stans, now finance chairman of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, and High Sloan, former committee treasurer, gave $114,000 in unreported Republican campaign funds last year to G. Gordon Liddy, a former White House and GOP campaign aide, to finance the activities of men charged with breaking into the Democratic party offices.

The complaint named Liddy, E. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy as "malicious prosecution and abuse of process."

The allegations are false and Mr. O'Brien and his friends are well aware they all are false," said MacGregor.

Stans called the accusations "a scurrilous pack of lies."

Several opponents, including Mrs. Murphy, and her husband William, said the area should not be developed in order to preserve open space land in that area of town.

Atty. Shea responded, "Everybody likes to see open land around them, but if you are the owner, paying taxes, it is a basic right to be able to develop it."

Mrs. Marrian Lynch of 325 Vernon St., Mrs. Ann Conti of 83 Overlook Dr. and Mrs. Catherine Johns of 250 Greenwood Dr. spoke against development of the land saying that a population increase in the area would cause further overcrowding of Buckley School.

PZC Chairman Wells said over-crowded schools were not within the realm of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Richard Meister of 6 Overlook Dr., Mrs. Gladys Gantion of 431 Lydall St. and others mentioned traffic safety would be enhanced.

Atty. Allan Thomas, board chairman, commented that the chairman may exercise his prerogative to allow a student representative to speak if a subject arises on which there was no time to prepare.

4. Program and policy issues are to be the focus of communications. Personnel issues are to be handled through existing channels at the school level.

5. Student liaison representatives to present student-related issues before the board by prior indication of a desire to speak. It is to be understood that the issue has previously been discussed with the high school principal or his designee or other members of the school administration.

Democrats Push Bugging Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for the Democratic party try again today to file allegations that former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans played a key role in the bugging and burglarizing of Democratic National Committee offices last June.

The charges are contained in an amended complaint to the civil lawsuit filed by the Democratic National Committee and Lawrence F. O'Brien, its former chairman.

But when attorneys tried to file the complaint Monday, the clerk refused to accept it because it was not accompanied by a motion asking U.S. Dist. Court Judge Charles Richey's permission to amend the original filing.

The new complaint alleges that Stans, now finance chairman of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, and High Sloan, former committee treasurer, gave $114,000 in unreported Republican campaign funds last year to G. Gordon Liddy, a former White House and GOP campaign aide, to finance the activities of men charged with breaking into the Democratic party offices.
