Shriver Asks For 'Human Impact Statements'

HARTFORD (AP) — "The time has come to protect the environment for human beings," Democratic vice presidential candidate R. Sargent Shriver said today in a speech to former employees of the Royal typewriter plant which was moved from Hartford to England.

"Before a company can close down in Hartford and move to England," said Shriver, "it should be required to make a showing of what the impact on human beings is going to be."

If the federal government is going to be concerned about the effect on Caribou of the proposed Alaskan pipeline, it also should be concerned about the impact of corporate decisions on working people, Shriver told a crowd of some 200 persons at a United Auto Workers union hall.

"Since 1945, 8,000 United States subsidiaries and corporations have moved from the U.S. abroad," said Shriver during a two-day visit to Connecticut.

Shriver said that huge conglomerates, which purchase firms and then close them down, "are able to treat the people of Hartford like a hit and run driver."

He called for "human impact statements" similar to the environmental impact statements required by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Sunday, Shriver visited New Haven, Ansonia, Waterbury, Roxbury and Hartford to boost the national Democratic ticket, the re-election bids of Democratic congressmen and the morale of party workers.

Shriver was greeted by 3rd District Congressman Robert N. Giaimo at Tweed-New Haven Airport, praised 5th District Congressman John S. Monagan at a "Monagan Day Picnic" at Warsaw Park in Ansonia, and wound up the night's work with a rousing speech in Hartford with 1st District Congressman William R. Cotter at his side.

Today was 6th District Congressman Ella T. Grasso's turn. She was to appear at a news conference with Shriver at Bradley International Airport just before the vice presidential candidate took off for his next campaign stop in Buffalo, N.Y.

The eagerness of the Democratic congressmen to be seen with Shriver contrasted with their reluctance earlier in the year to be identified with Sen. George McGovern, the presidential candidate. Not one of the four even wanted to be a delegate to the national convention in Miami Beach where McGovern won the nomination.

Shriver concentrated largely on attacking President Nixon in his speeches, blaming him for what he said was the continued war in Vietnam, continued inflation, continued unemployment, continued federal budget deficits and continued crime in the streets.

Under Nixon, said Shriver, crime even moved "from the streets to the executive suites."

In his lively, applause-punctuated speech at McGovern-Shriver campaign headquarters in Hartford at 10 o'clock Sunday night, Shriver said he had been told by politicians, pollsters and newsmen across the country that the issue of corruption had failed to arouse much excitement among the voters.

"I hope you are still capable of outrage," he told the group of party workers. And he urged them to emphasize the issues of the "bugging" of Democratic offices at the Watergate, and Nixon's $110 million in secret funds."

At Ansonia, where a crowd of about 1,500 had waited in chilly weather for the hour-long candidate, Shriver bore down hard on the unemployment issue.

"If you want a job, vote Democratic!" he said

In Waterbury, where he was too late to attend 5 o'clock mass at the Church of the Immaculate Conception—where his late brother-in-law, President John F. Kennedy, once worshipped during the 1960 campaign—Shriver contented himself with hand-shaking at a reception.

In Roxbury, where he mingled with a well-heeled group of well-wishers at the home of novelist William Styron, Shriver gave a cerebral dissertation on the nature of bureaucracies—the bureaucrats in Moscow and Washington, he said, have more in common with each than they do with their own constituents.

Actor Frederic March and sculptor Alexander Calder were among the group at the Styrons'. The affair wound up with pledges of an undetermined amount of campaign contributions.

McGovern Gains In Polls But Still Trails Nixon

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern has gained nine percentage points on President Nixon in the latest Daniel Yankelovich poll, but still trails the President by 30 points with only about three weeks to go before the election.

The poll, taken for Time magazine and The New York Times and released Sunday, showed Nixon was preferred by 57 per cent of those polled to 27 per cent for McGovern, with 16 per cent undecided.

But this was an improvement for McGovern from the previous poll in mid-September which showed Nixon with a 39-point advantage, 62 to 23 per cent, with 15 per cent undecided. The new poll showed McGovern leading among Democrats.

The Gallup poll, also published Sunday, showed Nixon was preferred 58 to 26 per cent as being best able to handle the Vietnam conflict.

In campaigning Sunday, President Nixon said in a paid political broadcast that his administration has "fought the frightening trend of crime and anarchy to a standstill."

Sen. McGovern was on his fourth campaign trip to Texas today hoping to get enough labor, black and Chicano votes to win its 28 electoral votes, despite polls which show Nixon well ahead in that state.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver expressed frustration at Hartford, Conn., that voters aren't more concerned over what he termed "criminality" in the Nixon administration.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew planned to resume campaigning on Wednesday in Michigan. He was in Washington today.

Pat Nixon, the wife of the President, marched for a mile at the head of the Palaski Day parade in Buffalo, N.Y., Sunday. She later sat in the reviewing stand for more than two hours.

Eleanor McGovern, wife of Sen. McGovern, was released Sunday from Georgetown University Hospital in Washington where she was treated for painful abdominal spasms. She is scheduled to deliver a speech in Woonsocket, S.D., Tuesday at a dinner in her honor.

Nixon, in his radio speech, pledged more money, more manpower and tougher laws "to maintain our momentum in the war against drugs and crime."

He said he would ask Congress "to require stiff mandatory sentences for heroin traffickers, and to amend other federal statutes so as to keep these peddlers of death off our streets after their arrest."

He also pledged to work to halt "the denial of accountability for individual actions." He said "the citizen's first civil right" is "the right to be free from domestic violence."

Sen. McGovern, who relaxed Sunday at the Beverly Hills, Calif., home of actress Shirley MacLaine, said in a statement that the Nixon administration has "cheated" American children.

He said each American is taxed about $400 a year for military spending and only about $12 for elementary and secondary education. He also criticized Nixon's veto of a child-development bill.

In Texas today, McGovern planned to address the Texas Legislature in Austin and speak at rallies in Houston and San Antonio.

Shriver, who went from a fundraising picnic in his own backyard in Maryland to central Connecticut Sunday, said "hardly a day goes by when there isn't some new form of criminality alleged against the top people in the administration."

"But today in America it appears no one is concerned," he said. President Nixon "is saying he can do anything and you won't care."

Only three per cent of those polled in the Yankelovich survey said corruption was a national issue in the campaign and 23 per cent said Nixon should be held responsible for the break-in and attempted bugging at Democratic National headquarters in Washington in June.

The survey showed that McGovern was favored by 45 per cent to 36 per cent among Democrats polled. Nixon led in previous surveys 43 per cent to 40.

Spending Limit Bill Delays Adjournment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress went into overtime today with members, itching to hit the hustings, facing the possibility of long debates over two of the biggest bills of the dying session.

Senate Democratic Whip Robert Byrd of West Virginia predicted lengthy debate on the compromise versions of the Social Security bill and one giving President Nixon extraordinary powers to cut spending.

Both houses had set their sights on adjourning last Saturday. But the Senate had to carry over business to today and the House is to return Tuesday after frantic but futile efforts to finish their business in sessions that lasted until early Sunday.

Conferees sent to the two chambers for action a compromise version of the Social Security bill, stripped of all welfare reform but expanding some benefits and increasing payroll taxes to pay for them.

The payroll-tax boost provided by the bill would mean that a person earning $10,800 in 1973 would have to pay $631.80 instead of the $468 maximum withheld this year.

The bill also would: —Raise from $1,680 to $2,100 the amount a retired person could earn without reducing Social Security benefits.

—Set a new $170-a-month minimum for persons who worked as long as 30 years in covered employment.

—Slightly increase benefits for men by extending to them an unintended advantage women enjoy under present law in calculating their old-age insurance payments.

—Raise widows' payments from 82 1/2 per cent of their husbands' basic entitlement to 100 per cent.

—Extend Medicare to persons retired for disability as well as for age, and federalize, with national payment standards, the programs for about 3 million aged, blind and disabled persons.

The estimated total price tag of the conference bill would be about $6 billion compared to the $18.5-billion toll carried by the Senate-passed version.

Deleted from the Social Security ty bill was the entire section on welfare reform, meaning Congress once again has deferred taking on the present chaotic system.

Conferees also agreed to put substantial limitations on sweeping powers which the House voted to give Nixon to enforce a $250-billion ceiling on government spending for the fiscal year ending next June 30.

Under the compromise, Social Security and other retirement payments, veterans' benefits, judges' salaries and several other items would be exempt from cuts.

The bill would permit reductions up to 20 per cent in 50 categories of programs. It would allow funds for specific programs within a category to be deleted entirely.

Although administration spokesmen indicated dissatisfaction with the compromise, a presidential veto was seen as unlikely since the bill also contains a $15-billion increase in Treasury borrowing authority that is deemed essential.

Also delaying congressional adjournment is the possibility of Nixon's vetoing a $24-billion water-pollution bill which the administration regards as too expensive. Nixon has until midnight Tuesday to act on it.

If Congress adjourns before that hour, Nixon could kill the bill by taking no action at all.

Cleaner Air Week Stresses Bus Use

The Hartford County Tuberculosis-Respiratory Disease Association, as part of its observance of Cleaner Air Week (Oct. 16 to 20), today started a campaign to promote use of the Manchester-to-Hartford commuter bus service.

The campaign is being conducted to encourage automobile commuters to try the bus for a week, and to thank the commuters who already use the express bus service.

Volunteers from the association and from ecology groups greet commuters boarding the buses each morning at Manchester's Burr Corners Shopping Plaza. Commuters are being given a "Go Mass Transit" button as part of the promotion of bus service.

The Tuberculosis-Respiratory Disease Association is concerned with the high level of vehicle exhaust contributing to air pollution in the Hartford area, according to Philip Woodrow, the association's executive director.

The association "urges every automobile commuter to try mass transit for at least one week," Woodrow said, adding that "Cleaner Air Week is a good time to get the habit and go mass transit."

The Manchester-to-Hartford bus project started July 10 as a 90-day experiment, and has recently been extended through January. The state transportation department guarantees the Connecticut Co., which operates the buses, against financial loss.

The financial break-even point for the service is 278 passengers a day. This morning the buses leaving Burr Corners carried exactly 276 commuters, according to the transportation department.

Buses, running Monday through Friday, leave Burr Corners at ten-minute intervals between 7 and 9 a.m. The buses make the return trips between 4 and 6 p.m.

Free parking, a bus shelter, and a bicycle rack are provided at Burr Corners. The one-way fare is 50 cents.

'Seceders' Seeking Seclusion

GLASTONBURY (AP) — Trying to preserve their homes from encroaching "progress," 180 residents of South Glastonbury have "seceded" from Connecticut and proclaimed Nayaug the 51st state of the union.

The tongue-in-cheek revolution is the result of 10 years of good natured feuding with Glastonbury, says Nayaug Social Director Ruth Witherspoon.

She said the decision to "pull out" was made because Glastonbury is threatening to extend sewer lines and other forms of progress to Nayaug, which has been "by-passed by civilization and blessed by the Lord."

In addition to creeping sewer lines, the Nayaugians also were persuaded to pull out because "Glastonbury winters are very rough," she said.

Nayaug is named for an Indian tribe that once lived in the area. Although its "declaration of independence" could cost him some constituents, Glastonbury Town Manager Donald C. Peach says the concept of an independent Nayaug "is a tremendous lot of fun. It's a kind of state of mind in South Glastonbury."

Nayaug has made some concessions to modern life. The community has telephones, cars and television sets. But many people take seriously the attempts to prevent further growth.

A recent proposal to pave a dirt road prompted a protest by residents.

Another crisis was precipitated by a proposal to build a housing project. Nayaugians dressed in old-fashioned costumes and paraded in the street with goats to block that idea.

Many area residents fear that better roads and improved sewers would bring in thousands of new people, destroying Nayaug's rustic life.

To Suspend Operations Oct. 29 Bus Service Hinges On Subsidy Solution

HARTFORD (AP) — The Connecticut Co. lit a 15-day fuse on another bus bomb over the weekend, prompting hurried conferences by government officials and renewing old political charges about blame.

"I wish the problem would go away," said Samuel Kanell, deputy transportation commissioner, after the state's largest bus company announced it would suspend service Oct. 29.

"I know we'll be reviewing this at the highest level Monday," Kanell said, but he would not comment on what action the Department of Transportation might take to save bus service in Hartford, New Haven and Stamford where ConnCo operates.

ConnCo's move came one week after Connecticut Railway & Lighting Co. buses stopped running in three other major metropolitan areas, Bridgeport, Waterbury and New Britain. Both bus companies say they must have subsidies to continue operating without losses. When the Amalgated Transit Union refused to take a pay cut, the talks deadlocked and the buses stopped.

Stamford Mayor Julius Wilensky, saying it would be a "big blow" to the city if buses stopped, said he would call the city Board of Representatives into special session this week to set up a transit district to run a local bus system.

"I saw this coming, it's no surprise," Wilensky said, adding that he had been trying to set up a transit district for more than a year.

Wilensky agrees with Gov. Thomas J. Meskill's philosophy that the bus problem should be handled at the local level. The Stamford division of ConnCo., he maintains, has never lost money, unlike the New Haven and Hartford divisions. Under local control, he says, a bus system in Stamford would provide better service and never have to ask for a subsidy from the city.

Hartford Mayor George Athanson, however, demanded that the state provide an interim subsidy until cities can arrange a long-term settlement. He pointed out that the only two transit districts in the state, in Hartford and Bridgeport, are still in the infancy stage and could hardly be expected to set up operations by the end of October.

"Right now, I'm not optimistic," said Athanson. "I think the next move is up to the state of Connecticut."

Democratic leaders in the General Assembly and the mayors of Waterbury and New Haven said they would sue Gov. Meskill today in Hartford Superior Court to overturn his veto of a bus subsidy plan passed by the legislature.

The Meskill administration has offered to help local transit districts buy new buses and pay 25 per cent of operating deficits, but it has refused to okay any plan that would make bus transportation a state function.

After the ConnCo announcement Saturday, Meskill said loss of service was likely because the state "won't pour money into a hole." He blamed the mayors of Hartford and New Haven for not doing anything to resolve the problem.

ConnCo and CR&L are the two largest bus lines, serving 115,000 commuters daily in the six biggest cities.

If Not 51 How About 50 1/2?

Arising out of good-humored controversy between residents of South Glastonbury and the Town of Glastonbury, this float was entered in a parade Sunday proclaiming the State of Nayaug to forestall road paving and improved sewer systems in South Glastonbury which will end the area's rural character. (AP photo)

Wallace Irish Jr., a GOP candidate for Manchester justice of peace, has been named campaign manager for State Rep. Donald Genovese. GOP candidate for re-election in the 12th Assembly District, Jack Hedlund, a local banker, has been named campaign treasurer.

Irish, a member of the Republican Town Committee, is president of the Exchange Club of Manchester and is a member of UNICO.

The Manchester Committee for the Re-election of Bill Cotter will present the incumbent U.S. representative with an $1,000 check, the net profit from a reception in his honor eight days ago at the K of C Home on Main St. Over 30 persons attended the event for the Hartford Democrat — running for re-election in the First Congressional District.

Henry (Bud) Michalak, chairman of Manchester Republicans' transportation committee, has issued a call for drivers on Nov. 7, election day. He said his committee will use about 45 motor drivers and has asked volunteers to contact him at Republican Headquarters on E. Center St.

The Hartford Area UAW (United Automobile Workers) Council has endorsed Estelle Flanagan of Glastonbury, the Democratic candidate for state senator from the 4th District. U.S. Rep. Cotter has been endorsed for re-election by the National Education Association's Political Action Committee.

The committee, in informing Cotter of its action, wrote, "We have reviewed your voting record on education issues which have come before the 92nd Congress and we appreciate your continuing support for sound school legislation."

Three Schools To Take Part In Joint Study

HARTFORD (AP)—Three school districts have agreed to participate in a project sponsored by the Connecticut Education Association (CEA) for evaluating teachers and school administrators.

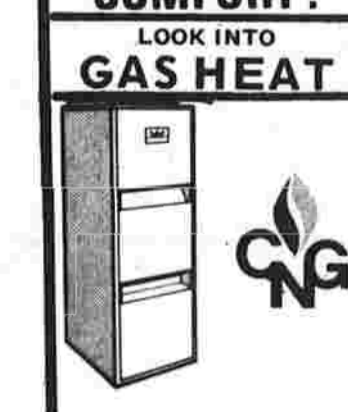

The CEA project was developed independently last year, after the State Department of Education and the Commission for Higher Education proposed a similar annual evaluation procedure using locally elected professional committees.

The State Department of Education has scheduled four public hearings in the state to get reactions to its own evaluation proposals. The first Education Department hearing is scheduled for November eighth at the Thames Valley State Technical College in Norwich.

The CEA project will be tried out in Newington, Wallingford, and Regional District 4, which includes Chester, Deep River and Essex.

Topic of MCC Panel Majority Law

"The Rights and Responsibilities of the Young Adult Under the New 18-Year Majority Law" will be the topic of a seminar at Manchester High School Oct. 24. It will be held in the cafeteria at 7:15 p.m. Parents, students, and other interested persons are invited.

When Sen. George McGovern went on national television last night, for the third time, his appearance was financed by 16 Connecticut residents. They provided the $75,000 needed for the paid NBC program.

The 16 residents loaned the money at no interest. Their loans were to be repaid by contributions sent in following the broadcast. McGovern's first coast-to-coast broadcast netted $140,000 and the second over $1 million. The Democratic candidate for President is planning a Hartford appearance three or four days before election day, according to Democratic State Chairman John Bailey.

State Comptroller Nathan Agostinelli, who is state chairman of the Connecticut Committee to Re-elect the President, has given his support to Elwood (Sonny) Metz, indicted last Wednesday on charges he misused union funds. Metz, business manager of Local 478 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, is chairman of Connecticut Labor for Re-election of the President. Calling Metz "a great American, interested in the future of America," Agostinelli said he saw no reason for Metz to give up his GOP campaign post.

Tribe Win Streak Ends On TD in Final Minutes

We gotta start all over again, there is nothing you can do now," said one Manchester High football player after the Tribe absorbed a 14-7 defeat Saturday afternoon at Memorial Field from Conard High of West Hartford. A crowd of 1,600 viewed the action.

Both clubs entered the game sporting identical 3-0 records and shared the top spot in the CCHL with Bristol Central. Conard and Central now sport 4-0 marks while the Indians are 3-1.

Manchester doesn't have time now to cry over the loss. Saturday at Muzzy Field in Bristol the Indians face Bristol Eastern at 1:30.

"Our corners broke down, when we needed them. Conard rolled off of them and moved the ball," commented a dejected Tribe coach, Dave Wiggin.

Conard, a ball control team, used its game plan to perfection by running off 73 offensive plays to only 51 for Manchester.

In the first quarter when fullback Tom Vinick carried the pigskin over from the three-yard line, the Chiefs called 12 plays and covered only 55 yards. The longest gain was a 10-yard sweep around right end by Vinick.

Manchester became the first club to score on Conard's defense this season. Entering, play Conard had only two points scored on them and that was a safety.

Hard-running Dave Fleishman, broke a tackle on the 25-yard line, sped past the safeties, and sprinted to the goal line, 79 yards away to put Manchester on the scoreboard with 9:46 remaining in the second period. Fleishman's extra point attempt was good and MHS held a 7-6 lead.

Conard's TD came with 4:26 showing in the first period. The two point conversion attempt failed.

In the third quarter, Conard again dominated the play calling 19 plays while Manchester, feeling the effects of Conard's stingy defense, ran off only eight plays.

The turning point came at 5:58 when Manchester was penalized 15-yards for piling on after a punt. Instead of the line of scrimmage being the 32 it was the 47. Using perfect ball control, the Chiefs marched downfield on all running plays. Twice they converted fourth down and long yardage situations. With 1:08 showing on the clock, Vinick took a handoff from quarterback Quentin Bradley and instead of bulking his way up the middle, ran around left end for the score with 1:04 left. The two point conversion was good and Conard held a 14-7 advantage.

Manchester, needing a score, put the ball in the air, but Conard's defense was good and Manchester stalled on the 47-yard line as time ran out.

Fleishman was again the leading ball carrier with 117 yards in 14 carries. Manchester rushed for 198 yards and passed for 23 for a total of 221 yards. The locals had five first downs.

Conard's Vinick tooted the pigskin, 34 times for 89 yards. They rushed for 185 yards and passed for 18 for 203 yards. They recorded 11 first downs.

To find out why we say "Thanks to you it's working" ask Ulises Garcia

Ulises is growing up in a generation where drugs are too often a part of growing up. A lot of kids in his age area are already experimenting with narcotics. And national statistics tell us drug experimenters are getting younger all the time. Because at a very early age, they're bored with life.

But not Ulises and his buddies. They're into Scouting instead of drugs. They're involved in unique new programs for inner-city Scouts as well as traditional nature, camping and craft activities. Year 'round programs that provide valuable learning and growing experiences.
