Women's Lib Credit May Go To Typewriter

When the history of women's liberation is written, a few words ought to be said about the lowly typewriter.

Not only did this invention, less than 100 years old, transform commerce and industry by freeing personnel from the drudgery and illegibility of handwriting, it freed great numbers of women from their traditional house-confined roles by bringing them into the work force for the first time.

That was the beginning of a lot of other changes. A good case can also be made that the entry of women into the world of business transformed offices from dank, spittoon-littered places into the clean, carpeted, colorful and well-lit offices we know today.

Boys Will Be Boys

This thing about "sexism" in the schools works two ways.

It may be that teacher expectations, peer-group pressure and textbooks extolling male achievements force little girls into "inferior" feminine roles they would not otherwise have chosen.

But the dice aren't entirely loaded in favor of boys. Grade school teachers reprimand boys more frequently than girls, charges child psychologist Bruno Bettelheim.

"One can imagine how a boy feels about himself, the school and the teacher," he writes in Ladies' Home Journal, "when he observes that boys are reprimanded nine times as frequently as girls.

A Good Buy

WASHINGTON—This study cost the taxpayers only $2-million, which is a bargain these days. But you get what you pay for, and the report of the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice, Standards and Goals suggests that the commission's study ranks with the Edsel as a good buy.

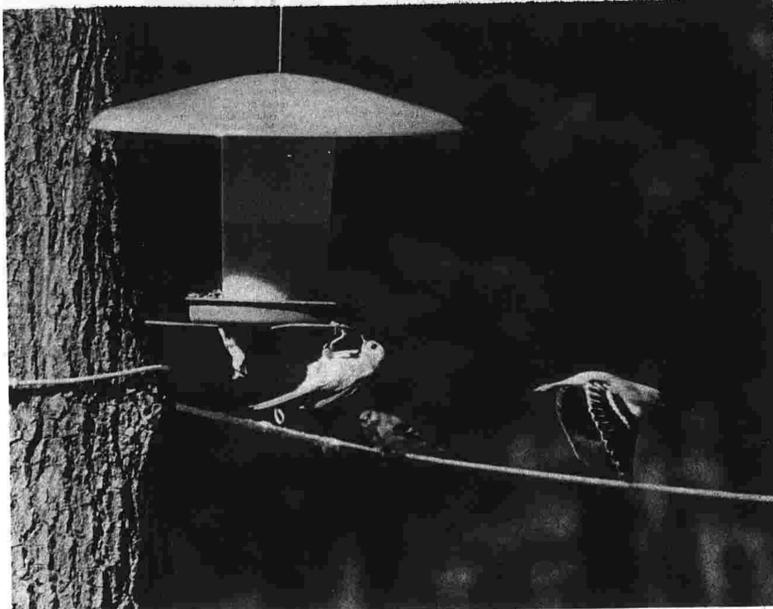

Set up by the Nixon administration, the commission concluded that incarceration is "a miserable failure" in combating crime and urged a general reduction of sentences and an eventual total cutback in the nation's prison systems.

Citizens who live in high crime districts, which is practically everywhere, will be particularly bemused by our problems. Most inmates are not dangerous. They are judges should be required to consider "the least restrictive alternative" possible in sentencing a person convicted of a crime, and those serving time in prison should be eligible for parole at any time.

so incidentally, because a child with a bent pin could bust out of some of our hosonogons. But I would not advise Peterson to go into the ghettos of our big cities and tell their captive residents that "Merchants close their doors at sunset, even though many of them are armed and some conduct business behind bullet-proof glass."

Yet after more than a year's study, the President's commission urged the states to concentrate instead on "a range of alternatives... residential treatment homes, pre-release programs, and non-residential supervisory efforts." By 1975, the commission hopes that "sentencing councils" will be developed, appeals will be reviewed on appeal, and both sentencing "institutes" to further their understanding of the criminal.

Says Russell W. Peterson, former Delaware governor, who headed the commission, the correctional system "just hasn't been working. It may be contributing to our problems. Most inmates are not dangerous people."

Who Runs the Pentagon?

WASHINGTON — Whether Elliott Richardson will really run the Pentagon as Secretary of Defense will be partially answered soon in a potentially stormy confrontation between him and the White House staff over a major appointment.

The question—whom will President Nixon appoint as assistant secretary of Defense for Internal Security Affairs (ISA)? Richardson wants Jonathan Moore, his aide and intimate political adviser, regarded by the influential defense community as too dovish. The White House wants Helmut Sonnenfeldt, senior staffer under Dr. Henry Kissinger at the National Security Council (NSC) and a medium hard-liner on foreign and defense policy.

Although the choice between Moore and Sonnenfeldt surely involves ideology and personality, at bottom it represents a classic power struggle between Richardson and the White House—the most important test of the White House palace guard's grand design to absolutely control the federal government during Mr. Nixon's second term.

That design calls for appointments at the assistant secretary level by the White House, not cabinet members—a major break with tradition.

Richardson, a liberal Republican, did not publicly complain when the White House itself picked his deputy secretary—conservative Dallas oil man William Clements, as a campaign foreign policy adviser to Govs. George Romney and Nelson Rockefeller and as assistant to under secretary Richardson at the State Department four years ago.

In contrast, Sonnenfeldt, an abrasively brilliant former service officer of 20 years' experience who joined the NSC staff in 1969, is viewed by Capitol Hill hardliners as a conservative influence on Kissinger in arms limitations talks with Moscow.

Then, too, there are personal factors. Top White House domestic staffers feel Kissinger took a dislike to Moore during the old Rockefeller campaign. But Moore has one powerful friend inside the palace guard in Nixon political aide Charles Colson, who worked with him in the office of then Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts.

Sonnenfeldt's supporters argue that since anti-Kissinger forces at the State Department will not accept him back, his high talents should be put to work at the Pentagon.

The ISA appointment is symbolically critical to Richardson considering his overall difficulty taking control at the Pentagon. Busy winding up as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, he had been only a sporadic visitor to Defense. Moore, his transition officer, has also been in-and-out. However, Clements, confirmed by the Senate as deputy secretary, has been put in routine 12-hour days at his Pentagon desk.

"He's learning the building," says one street source because "a veteran who is amazed at Richardson's absence. But Richardson, a shrewd, energetic, bureaucratic operative, is not to be underestimated. Realizing he must reassure the defense community, he took a relatively hard line during his confirmation hearings. Testifying with an American flag emblem in his lapel, Richardson satisfied most hawkish members of the Armed Services Committee, including Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

Against that backdrop, the defense community is left with mixed emotions. It is totally sympathetic with Richardson's battle against unworkable White House control of the Pentagon bureaucracy. These advocates of strong national defense only wish he had not selected Jonathan Moore as a test case.

Field Work Starts Monday On Town Tax Revaluation

BARBARA VARRICK
Correspondent
Tel. 643-2774

Avery Heights and Woodland Park sections of South Windsor will be appraised first, beginning Monday, for revaluation of all real estate and taxable personal property in the town.

Town Manager Terry Sprekel and Tax Assessor Bert McNamara said the contract with the United Appraisal Co. of East Hartford has been signed, and field men will begin inspections first on Benedict Dr., Pine Tree Lane, Manor Lane, Raymond Rd., High View Rd., Pond Lane, Peach Tree Lane, Diane Dr., and Spruce Lane.

As the project progresses, residents will be kept informed where the appraisers are working by the assessor's department.

The South Windsor program will be under the supervision of Thomas Azara, job supervisor for United Appraisal, who will work along with a staff of five or six experienced company personnel.

According to Sherwood Vermyla, president of the appraisal company, the revaluation program will be handled in a 10-step process and will take approximately 24 months to complete.

First, new appraisal record cards will be prepared and will contain current owners' names, addresses, property locations and descriptions. Second, all buildings will be measured and inspected. All recent building costs, land sales and real estate sale information will be collected to develop a revaluation pricing schedule to properly reflect current town values.

Also, all new land values will be established by analyzing sales; pricing of all buildings from pricing schedules developed for the town will be done; review of all established values to eliminate errors in facts and judgments; inspection of inventory, furniture and fixtures, machinery accounts of industrial, public utility and commercial buildings; and owners to establish new values for all personal property along with setting up a reporting system for the future.

Alphabetical ownership record cards will be set up to show new assessments and notices of new assessments will be mailed to all property owners.

Informal hearings will be conducted to allow all interested South Windsor property owners the chance to discuss and review new assessments with the appraisal company.

Unlisted Appraisal is a nationally known firm, has handled reappraisals of some 75 cities and towns in Connecticut in the last ten years, town officials said.

Mrs. Rose Pastula of South Windsor looks over assortment of bottles she and her husband Frank, have collected over the past two years. (Herald photo by Bucevicius)

South Windsor Couple Dig For 'Treasures'

BY BETTY RYDER
Shovels, potatoe hooks, and bare hands are among the "tools" used by a South Windsor couple in the pursuit of their hobby.

Rose Pastula and her husband, Frank, of 889 Pleasant Valley Rd., collect old bottles, but unlike many other collectors, who purchase them, the Pastulas dig for them.

"During the Christmas holidays, I went out for awhile," he said, "but the ground was so hard digging was just about impossible."

According to Mrs. Pastula, one of the most tedious jobs is washing the bottles.

"Some of them must soak three or four days. Others take even longer, especially those that have been stained by rusty cans while under the earth."

"It's almost impossible to get a shape, color and embossment. It's always amazing to find bottles that have been buried for years, still intact. Sometimes we find one that is cracked or chipped, but for the most part they are in good condition - only dirty," she said.

"We have many catalogues on old bottles and when we get a few spare minutes, we sit down and compare what we have found."

Among the many bottles in their collection are some from Manchester drug stores. "We have one with the name 'Cheney Drug Store' embossed on it, another one marked 'Charles Rose Drug Store' and still another with the name 'Smith Drug Store' she said.

Careful of a variety of problems were embossed on several bottles such as, "Non-poisonous won't stain, 'Dead Stick' for bug, Gottlieb Marshall & Co., Cassel, Germany and Phil. Pa." Another using an embossed safe as a trademark reads "Warner's Kidney and Liver Cure," and to be sure all ailments were cared for, The Hernia Cure Co. of Westbrook, Minn., prepared a "rupture and hernia cure."

Clark Stanley offered a "Snake Oil Liniment for Rheumatism and Neuralgia" purported to be the "best horse liniment in the world." Still other bottles offered such cures as "Ocean Weed for Heart Disease," "Father John's Medicine from Lowell, Mass.," and "Mdm. Yale's Excelsior Hair Tonic-price $1."

A large number of bottles made by the Carter Ink Co. of Sanford in cobalt blue, tops of the list of Rose's inkwell collection. This particular bottle was used by the school master to fill inkwells in students' desks and dated to 1863.

Perhaps the most unusual bottle in the collection is one that is shaped like a turtle. "This is a baby's nursing bottle, flat on the bottom so it could be propped up for feeding, and the turtle-like head was where the nipple was attached," Rose said.

Collecting bottles has proven to be a lot of fun for the Pastulas, despite the work involved. Rose, the former Rose Shirshack of Coventry, remembers when her family

When O.C. was a boy there were not many Christmas trees used compared to present times. No trees were exposed for sale. No one had Christmas tree plantations. Now they are not all rare in Connecticut.

No trees were brought in from north. The few families who desired a tree in their home got permission to cut one from some one's woods. Probably some were stolen but O.C. never heard of anyone being hauled into court for it.

Of course, now the Connecticut law provides for penalties for removing trees of any kind and even greases or flowers from anyone else's property without written permission which must accompany the article while being transported.

Churches, schools, stores, clubs and many other organizations sent their members to get their trees or had them delivered by farmers on order.

The Hillard family owned woods on both sides of W. Middle Tpk. from about where Broad St. is to Love Lane and they always gave permission to take trees when requested.

Over that part of W. Middle Tpk. the road through the woods was not improved and since no one lived there the snow was not plowed.

O.C. can remember going there for a tree with horse and sleigh numerous years. Hemlocks were preferred and were usually taken from the land adjoining the R.O. Cheney property.

My father was born in that house. He grew up and married Rose Keating in 1894. Ten years later he built his own house on his father's land just east of the old house. When the road was widened in early 1900s the old house was torn down to make way for progress. In later years my father's house was razed to make room for the property of the State Trade School.

The swamp where you found your big bullfrog was also the habitat of some pretty big snapping turtles.

There was in those days a certain Mr. Gilman who delighted in turtle soup, which he always made himself. My father would hunt turtles for him. Also that swamp produced the biggest huckleberries ever.

Along the banks above the swamps and on the hillside among the pine were beautiful beds of trailing arbutus.

I have a map of Manchester with the names of the early settlers on it. D. Logan is one of them. The map, I believe, dates back to 1800.

In winter the hills of the R.O. Cheney property made an ideal sliding place for the youngsters. Matthias Spies, I think, once wrote a history of early Manchester. A picture of the old hill-house is in it. At one time the book was in the Mary Cheney library. Perhaps it still is.

Vernon Few Judge Condition Of Schools

The Vernon school system has 12 schools in it plus some buildings used for kindergarten and an open invitation to parents and any townspeople to view the crowded conditions only drew about two dozen interested people Wednesday.

All schools were open to visitors during the hours schools were in session. The board wanted taxpayers to see how the classrooms are utilized and then make a decision as to whether or not they want to take the question of expanding Rockville High School to a referendum.

It has already been turned down at two previous referendums even though the public was given a multiple choice at the most recent one. The question was divided so voters could approve the core facilities with or without a new gym facility and an indoor pool. The second time the question lost by a very narrow margin and made it necessary for the board to plan to put the high school on double sessions next fall.

The board said any further action for again putting the extensive high school expansion program to a vote must be prompted by the townspeople. Meanwhile the board is discussing plans for a far less expensive proposal.

Darling in 'Yankee'

A brief account about Leonard W. Darling of 8 Wadwell Rd., finish carpenter by vocation and wooden plate carver by avocation, appears in the "Small Business and Crafts" section of the February issue of "Yankee" magazine. It was written by Mrs. Margaret Hayden, former photo reporter. The photograph of Darling with a collection of his creations is by Reginald Pinto, Herald photographer. A more complete account of Darling and his craft appeared in the Jan. 6, 1972 edition of the Herald.

On his basement lathe, Darling cuts the plates from white pine boards. The geometric designs are carved in, and the plates are then stained various shades of red and brown.

Town Negotiates For Purnell Lot

Members of the Downtown Action Committee have agreed that there is an immediate need to improve the parking situation downtown, particularly in lots behind stores on the east side of Main St. The town of Manchester is negotiating for the purchase of the Purnell Parking Lot, owned by the Purnell family. The town has offered to purchase the lot for $180,000 annually, to be paid in 12 equal installments of $15,000 per year. The Purnell family has agreed to sell the lot for $180,000, with the town paying $15,000 per year for the next 12 years.

Model Block Plan Is Being Revised

The Model Block Plan proposed for downtown Main St. is being revised, according to a report from the Manchester Zoning Board. The board has received feedback from the public and has decided to make several changes to the plan. The revised plan will include a new set of streets, a new set of buildings, and a new set of parking spaces. The board expects to have the revised plan ready for public review in the next few weeks.

Jobless Claims Decline

HARTFORD (AP) — A 6 per cent decrease in the number of claims filed for unemployment compensation was reported in the two-week period ending Jan. 27, the state Labor Department reported Thursday. The average number of weekly claims for the period was 64,516, down from 68,376 the preceding period, the department said. The insured rate of unemployment was 3.5 per cent, down from 3.7 per cent during the same two-week period last year, according to the department.

Today's Thought

If instead of trusting in God I trust only my own intelligence, my own strength and my own pride, I will not find my way to Him and His help. He has offered me the gift of faith. In accepting it, I must put aside my own human will and trust in Him. Dante, in the Divine Comedy, wrote: "In His will is our peace." Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not unto your own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths." (Proverbs)

Young Hebron Hobbyists Show and Tell

ANNE EMT Correspondent
It might have been a good idea if the school administration had requested a contest to be held on last week's hobby show put on by Mrs. Nellie Mackay's fourth grade at the Hebron Elementary School. Among some of the interesting hobbies displayed were a model collection worth over $1000, antique doll furniture, a rock collection with stones from all over the world, Africa, and a 1921 book collection of "The Chronicles of America Series."

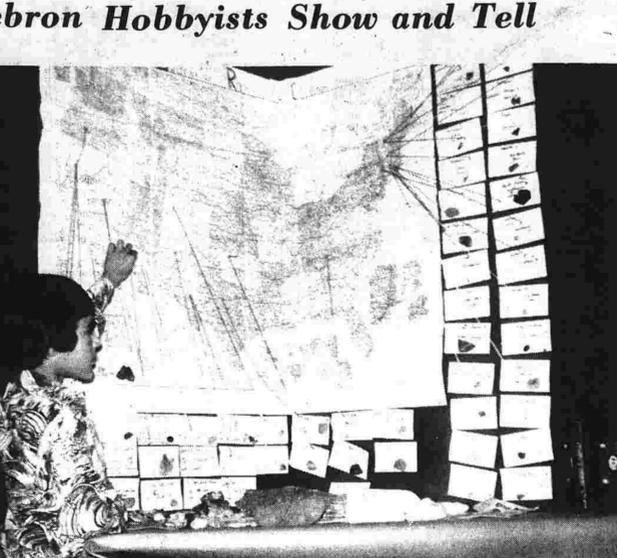

Young Peter Porter, an avid "money" collector, displayed some of the $1,285 in coins and bills he has collected from Japan, Italy, Africa and the United States. Even with all his foreign money, Peter seemed to be most proud of a U.S. penny with 13 stars which his father found in their home when they lived in Missouri.

Two other children in the class, Marie Swiney and Lisa Carrier shared in Peter's enthusiasm for coin collecting. Marie Swiney, along with collecting silver dollars, also has some Queen Elizabeth I coins from England. Lisa, on the other hand, collects half-dollars and has 112 in her collection. "Coins," she said, "are interesting to save as well as to spend."

Pets
Cats, dogs, rabbits and horses. What child doesn't love animals? Robert Pownski, 10, of 1000 Main St., has a collection of 300 "England" cards from Robert Pownski and his friends. Most impressive, however, is a collection of almost 100 books of "The Chronicles of America" series copyrighted in 1921 and edited by Allen Johnson. These books originally belonged to the Andrew Mellon School and were a gift to his grandfather in Vermont who gave them to John. Robert Pownski doesn't really collect books but enjoys reading especially "horror" books, comic books and animal books.

Young Judeas At Convention
Members of Manchester's Young Judea Chapter will participate in a three-day regional convention opening today at Beth El-Keser Israel Synagogue in New Haven. Young Judea, a national youth movement, is a branch of Hadassah. The Manchester group plans some sort of activity nearly every weekend. Those wishing more information about the chapter may contact members of Manchester Chapter to Hadassah or Mrs. Harold Krantz of 12 Dorset Lane, youth activities chairman.

Get a health checkup. Find out the lump in your throat is only emotion.
One of the best things you can do to keep in good health is to have a checkup. The reason's simple. Cancer — if detected early enough — can often be cured. So even if your checkup does reveal a problem, you've probably caught it early enough to do something about it. Your checkup probably won't reveal anything serious. Most people who have checkups discover they're in pretty good health. So have a checkup. Regularly. Find out you're in better shape than you think you are. We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime. Give to the American Cancer Society.

Dwayne Kopacz points to one of the spots on his maps where he found a rock for his collection.

large map of the United States with pointers indicating the exact position of where they were located. Among his favorites were a quartz from Central Africa, a geode from Ohio and a fern fossil from Rocky Hill. Tammy Say's collection of rocks may not be quite as impressive as Dwayne's but her enthusiasm is just as strong, especially for one that is petrified and one that is half gray and half white.

Books
Vampire books and football books are among some of the 100 books owned by Jon Albee. Most impressive, however, is a collection of almost 100 books of "The Chronicles of America" series copyrighted in 1921 and edited by Allen Johnson. These books originally belonged to the Andrew Mellon School and were a gift to his grandfather in Vermont who gave them to John. Robert Pownski doesn't really collect books but enjoys reading especially "horror" books, comic books and animal books.

Creatives hobbies, such as soap carving, cooking, painting and photography were the pride of Kenneth Flanagan, Chris Rodrigue, Darlene Dupuis, and Mary Nigro, respectively. And young Daniel Hutchins, a C-Team player for the Hebron Rhamis Middle Football team last year, carries his hobby into this field. His collection includes football pictures of many professional stars as well as helmets and shirts. The children's teacher, Mrs. ManWarren, didn't display any of her hobbies, but I guess you could say her hobby is just trying to keep up with the children.

Columbia Fornals Get Zone Variance

VIRGINIA CARLSON Correspondent
Tel. 228-5224
The Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) unanimously agreed to grant a side yard variance this week in executive session to William and Olive Fornal. The variance would allow the Fornals to subdivide their property on Rt. 66, containing The Wheelock Homestead and the building formerly known as Smith's Store. Atty. Omar Shepard, who represented Charles and Gladys Keegan who propose to purchase the parcel containing the store, told ZBA members during the public hearing that the total parcel contained 92,000 square feet. The subdivision would leave 40,000 square feet for the lot with the Wheelock dwelling and 52,000 for the lot with the store. This would create a shortage in the side yard. However, according to Shepard, this was the only practical way to divide the property. Shepard showed the notice of assessment that the Fornals received when they bought the property two years ago. It showed the property was assessed as two separate parcels. He then said "revaluation did a job on the place and his assessment was 200 per cent."

Shepard said it would be a practical hardship on the Fornals and it was the duty of the ZBA to grant relief as long as the public welfare was not in jeopardy. Peter Beckish of Lake Rd. owner of the Landmark Store, spoke in opposition to the variance. He said he was opposed to any business operation in the building, only to the variance. Beckish said he couldn't see how it could be considered a hardship, but rather a convenience to the seller. He said other arrangements could be made which would mean more expense and less profit to the seller. Fornal said he thought he did have a hardship. He explained that through a private agreement between himself and Mrs. Laura Robinson, Mrs. Robinson had chosen to sell the house and she had a lifetime use of the house and the children.

Resignation
Lucius Robinson Jr. has resigned from the Board of Tax Review (BTR) just days before it is scheduled to begin its work. First Selectman Howard Bates said the position will be filled immediately. Robinson said he planned on going on vacation the last two weeks of February, and at that time it was thought the BTR would meet then since the assessors had asked for a two week extension to complete their work. However, the assessors completed their work last week which enables the BTR to have its meeting the first week in February as usual.

Statistics Show Snead Top Passer

NEW YORK—Norman Snead's 12th National Football League season turned out to be a special one as he won the league passing championship in his first year as quarterback for the New York Giants.

Ironically, the last three Giants quarterbacks finished one-two-three in the integrated APC and NPC passer ratings. Earl Morrall of Miami was second-trailing Snead by one point in the NFL's four-category rating system—and Fran Tarkenton, who returned to Minnesota in the trade that sent Snead to the Giants, finished third.

NFL passers are rated on a conference basis throughout the season—meaning they are rated only against performances by other passers in their conference. In the integrated ratings, each passer is rated against the performance of each other qualified passer in the entire league. This year, 27 passers met the qualification standard of 140 or more pass attempts. The 27 passers then were rated from one to 27 in each of four categories—percentage of completions, percentage of touchdowns passes per pass attempt, percentage of interceptions and average yards gained per pass attempt.

On that basis, Snead ranked first in percentage of completions, fourth in percentage of interceptions, and ninth in both percentage of TD passes and average gain per attempt. His total points on the rating scale were 23, one lower than Morrall and six better than Tarkenton.

Critical Period

The next three weeks are critical for the leading teams in the Southern New England Hockey League. The East Hartford Canadians, New Haven Flyers and Colchester Jets are all tied for first place in the SNEHL standings.

Saturday's twinbill at the Hartford Arena in South Windsor opens with the Hartford Canadians meeting the New Britain Frontenacs. The second match pits the Flyers and the Bristol Champions. Face off for the first match is set for 7:30.

Northview Ski Slope Beehive of Activity These Nights as Tow Line Shows

Oscar Robertson Medium-Sized O

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Of the avalanche of accolades that has fallen upon Oscar Robertson, perhaps the best was the one by the doctor in Cincinnati who had crippling arthritis. He said that the only time he did not experience pain was when he sat in Cincinnati Gardens and watched Robertson play basketball.

This was several years ago, when Robertson played for the Cincinnati Royals, was the greatest basketball player to ever string up a sneaker. (Less inspirational than the doctor's testimony, but also significant.)

But for the third straight season Robertson's scoring average is less than 20 points a game. A purist laments that the first 10 years could not be continued.

"I'm happy to be winning and scoring 16 a game," Robertson said. "For years he did not win a championship, not until he and Abdul-Jabbar teamed up. (And in a rare moment of exultation, in the locker room celebration after the Bucks won the NBA title in 1971, Robertson exclaimed, "They can never say I'm not a winner.")

He says he may play one more year, "unless I'm injured so bad I can't go on. Then I'll call it quits after this season. I don't think I'll be a Johnny Green. Although I think it's great Johnny is still playing at what's 40? It's a great thing to make a living of doing what you love. Johnny does it. So do I."

"But I've got other things I want to do. I'm thinking about real estate, when I'm finished getting poor people into good housing and at the same time creating jobs for people. And I want to be a success at it. By success I mean being happy. And no, I won't stay in basketball as an executive. I've worked too hard and too many years on the other side (as NBA player representative) to go into the front office."

Returning to his basketball records, Robertson said, "I don't feel too bad that they are dropping. It's to be expected. I'm getting older, my career is almost over."

"But you know, it happens to everybody."

"What's that, he was asked: what happens to everybody?" "Autism," said Robertson.

We arrive early at Magic Mt. and are met by Arthur Thorne, co-director of Magic. Soon I was on my way to the summit on the mile long double chair. The snow was hard-packed as I came down the long two and half mile Magic Carpet.

The interlacing of well-marked trails to take you all over the mountain was a delight. They have three double chairs and the one for the novice skier which makes him feel comfortable, as he has his own separate ski area away from the heavy ski traffic. The 2,200 foot T-bar serves three wide-open slopes where one can practice and not be disturbed. The uphill capacity at Magic is 4,000 per hour and tickets are limited to 1,800 daily.

Chat with Hans Thorne, president, who tells about the enlargement and addition of the three-story base lodge. They can seat 800 diners at one sitting and still not be crowded as the upstairs lounge cares for many.

Back to the mountain the snow was good and I tried other trails to satisfy my ego until I came to the Bromwich. I turned to cross country on this one as it was a tight tough chute. I finished the day by skiing under the B chair as there were very few there.

A great day of skiing closed as I wound our way through the Swiss-like chalet village of Magic.

Frank Ferris, of Sports Mart in Rockville, gave a talk to the Hiling Jr. H.S. Ski Club displaying skills, ski wear and bindings.

Recently the Hiling Ski Club was at Magic Valley.

Ken Bond, Marcia Gunther and Ted Arnold will head the Manchester part of the Bonnie Bell-sponsored Junior National Ski Patrol. Boys and girls from 14 to 16 years of age are eligible. A standard ski test will be required and it will be given at Northview Sunday.

See you on the mountain.

Ivy League Colleges Reaffirm Old Standard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—The eight Ivy League colleges have re-affirmed their 19-year-old policy of de-emphasizing sports and relating to offer athletic scholarships, a Harvard University spokesman said.

In a "common statement" approved by the presidents of each college at a December meeting, the colleges—Brown, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Princeton and Yale—said they "provide financial aid only on the basis of need" and admit athletes, like all other students, only through each institution's admissions office.

In the original Ivy League agreement written in 1954, the colleges said "Neither athlete nor applicants should put the coaches in the difficult position of trying to estimate the chances of admission for a particular athlete. That is the sole responsibility of the admissions personnel."

"An applicant should consider or accept an offer of financial aid from anyone else associated with the institution to which he has applied. The agreement added that in the matter of admissions and financial aid, "the same standards are used for everyone."

Art Rooney gave the National Football League $2,500 when he organized the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1929.

Area Educators Agree on Problems Discuss Problems
By Barbara Richmond (Herald Reporter)

Space needs, what to do about them; instituting a family education course; are 12-month-schools feasible, school officials discussed these problems during a panel discussion sponsored by the Rockville Area Clergy Council.

Such problems are not unique to any one town, at least in the Tri-Town area of Vernon, Tolland and Ellington. Discussing their related problems were Dr. Raymond Ramsdell, superintendent of schools in Vernon; Dayton Shepherd, Ellington's superintendent, and James Corish, chairman of the Tolland Board of Education.

A responding panel made up of the Rev. John Lacey, pastor of the first Congregational Church of Vernon and two laymen, Munroe Palmer of Vernon and Murray Wheeler of Tolland, directed questions to the educators.

Starting the ball rolling was Palmer who asked Shepherd what he sees as the basic need of the Ellington education program. "The greatest need in Ellington that affects the education program, is facilities," Shepherd said. He explained the lack of space is the biggest problem not only in keeping existing programs going but in trying to start new programs.

Ellington voters about a year ago turned down a request for the Student Center on the high school. Vernon experienced the same problem when its high school expansion program was twice rejected by the voters.

The Rev. Lacey quizzed Dr. Ramsdell as to the good that might come out of double sessions which Rockville High School will be going on next fall or the problems which might arise from them. Conceding that the program will bring about double sessions, Dr. Ramsdell cited as one of these problems the fact that the students will be limited in their selection of courses. He also expressed deep concern with the amount of free time the students will have. He agreed that some students will be gainfully employed, some will study, but the great majority will be "hanging around."

Dr. Ramsdell said he has heard many people express concern about the effect the double sessions will have on the athletic program. While agreeing it would affect this phase of the program and admitting he was concerned, Dr. Ramsdell was firm in his conviction that "it comes second to the education program."

In answer to questions from the audience, all three educators agreed that a 12-month school program is not a solution. "In spite of all of the things against it, I think the time will come when we will have it," New England said in making changes.

CHEC Will Meet On MCC Campus
The Connecticut Higher Education Coalition (CHEC) will meet tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the Student Center on the Manchester Community College main campus. Faculty deans and speakers from the University of Connecticut, state colleges, and community and technical colleges are expected to attend.

"CHEC has two major issues before it," according to Robert W. Lacey, executive director of music at MCC and CHEC chairman. "The first is to obtain adequate financing for public higher education in Connecticut; the second is to preserve both the integrity and autonomy of the sector units in the state's system of public higher education."

The group will sponsor a public hearing on the subject of vocational in Hartford next month. Many prominent state and local legislators will have been invited to attend and participate. Tomorrow's agenda will be devoted to completing convocation plans.

Storm

roadway. The accident occurred near the Bridgeport Stratford boundary, State Police said.

After the early January Presidential action, large oil companies, which were running short of home heating fuel, immediately bought up "almost every drop" of oil on the European market, said Donald D. Criss, president of New England Fuel Institute.

"Those refineries in Europe are in the business of supply and demand," Criss said Thursday. "The biggest hinderer of oil is the date the President set for re-imposition of the quotas compounded the problem," said Raymond Langfield, president of the Connecticut Petroleum Association. He said the action meant that oil companies couldn't sign long-term contracts, agreeing to buy oil during the summer when prices are lower.

"They couldn't approach those guys and say 'give us so many loads now at reasonable prices and we will buy so many loads this summer when you're buyers' with the 'you're not' attitude," Criss said.
