Supreme Court Upholds Saden Remap Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Supreme Court today upheld the Saden reapportionment plan for the Connecticut legislature by a 6-3 vote, assuring continued Republican control of the current General Assembly.

The plan, which previously had been ruled unconstitutional by a federal district court after a Democratic challenge, was used as the basis for last November's legislative election. The election gave the Republicans control of both branches of the legislature.

If the Supreme Court had found the plan unconstitutional, an emergency legislative election might have been necessary. Legal opinions differed about whether a finding of unconstitutionality would have invalidated the acts of the legislative session that concluded this month.

The plan was developed by a panel of three state Superior Court judges, headed by Judge George A. Saden. It was overturned by a U.S. District Court in March 1972 in a case filed by state Democrats. The lower court said the plan violated the "one-man, one-vote" principle of the U.S. Constitution.

Democrats had claimed that the plan was also politically gerrymandered in favor of the GOP. But the lower court paid more attention to the "one man, one vote" issue than the question of political advantage.

"It is quite possible that if the sole question were political gerrymandering, it would be non-justiciable (outside the court's jurisdiction)," the court said at the time,

Four Men Trapped On Ocean Floor Off Florida Coast

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Navy divers raced against time today to rescue four men, their air supply dwindling rapidly, trapped in a midget submarine 351 feet down in the Atlantic.

At first, Navy officials believed the men, whose research sub was wedged in the wreckage of a World War II destroyer, had enough air to last them until noon, EDT. But later a spokesman said "now, it looks like it may be even shorter than that."

Among those trapped was Clayton Link, son of the sub's designer, Edwin Link.

Two of the trapped men were in a front compartment of the sub. The other two were in a rear compartment.

Rescuers were faced with the prospect of having to draw on the vital oxygen supply to increase the temperature in the submarine and enable chemical canisters to absorb more carbon dioxide.

Asked about the buildup of carbon dioxide in the back section of the vessel, a Navy spokesman described it as "a baby putting a plastic bag over its head and slowly being strangled."

Shortly after daybreak Cmdr. William Smith said there had been radio contact with two men in the front of the sub and they had reported the men in the rear were still breathing.

"But there is still no response from the two in the back," Smith said, explaining this indicated the two were unconscious.

Smith said "the critical thing is not the air supply but amassing carbon dioxide. The colder it gets the less effective the chemical absorption is."

Adm. John Maurer, commander of Key West Naval Station, said two teams of divers had been down, one to within 10 feet of the sub. But "neither one was able to completely reach the submarine because of the wreckage involved and they were in danger of entangling themselves."

The elder Link was helping to direct the rescue attempts 20 miles east of Key West.

Link, who was aboard the Sea Diver, mother ship of the minisub, alerted the Coast Guard to the emergency Sunday morning.

The first attempt to lower an air compression bell chamber with two divers aboard in an effort to free the craft believed trapped in cables dangling from the wreck of the USS Fred T. Berry failed.

It was the first operational test for the bell, an aluminum chamber topped with a plastic bubble designed to give the divers a panoramic view of the situation.

The submarine became trapped about 10 a.m. Sunday while it was on a fishing research expedition for the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C. The trapped men, in addition to the younger Link, are Archibald "Jock" Menzies of Scotland, the sub's pilot-commander, and Robert Meek, 27, a marine biologist from Santa Barbara, Calif., and Albert Stover, a diver and submarine pilot from West Palm Beach, Fla.

Dr. Buckley Writes Lively Town History

June B. Tompkins

"He was born in Manchester. It has been home to him all his life, with all the happy connotations of that word. He fervently hopes that coming generations will find it as pleasant a place to live as he has."

In his own words, Dr. William E. Buckley closes the final chapter of a book he authored and which has recently been published by the Pequot Press.

The book's sale has been arranged to coincide with Manchester's Sesquicentennial celebration, for appropriately enough, the book is all about Manchester.

Entitled "A New England

Pattern, The History of Manchester, Connecticut," the dust jacket is designed with an overall gold mulberry tree motif on a dark green background, symbol of the silk industry which brought prestige and success to the town.

Dr. Buckley has taken an historical fact and made it an exciting account full of adventure, romance, nostalgia, and humor. As he says in his introduction, "the historian must be free to comment and interpret at times."

But never has Dr. Buckley deviated from the truth of Manchester's story. Besides chapters on such civic subjects as the town's geography and geology, the Indians, early land grants, church history, economic developments, industrial and political development, he has added frequent vignettes on individual person or incidents which make the book a live and vibrant account.

It would not be possible to write one chapter on the Cheney family and let it go at that. The early members of the family who came to Manchester not only established a thriving silk industry which gave Manchester world-wide recognition, they literally set the pace of living standards for its citizens. As their influence was made manifest in the fields of education, labor standards, employment benefits, culture, — so Dr. Buckley has woven the name of Cheney throughout his historical narrative. He has made a permanent record in which future posterity will recognize the inestimable benefits of a great family to a

Summit Begins

WASHINGTON (AP)

President Nixon welcomed Leonid I. Brezhnev to the White House today for summit talks intended to cement U.S.-Soviet relations and accelerate negotiations on lasting nuclear arms curbs.

Brezhnev's helicopter landed on the lawn south of the White House. Rain and fog forced cancellation of plans for Brezhnev and his party to leave the Camp David presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains by helicopter. They had spent the weekend there.

The Soviet Communist party chairman and his party were driven eight miles to Thurmont, Md., where they boarded two helicopters at the Catoctin High School baseball field for the flight to Washington.

The rain had stopped when they arrived in the nation's capital.

The talks scheduled for the White House, the Camp David presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains and the Western White House at San Clemente, Calif., come against a backdrop of continuing domestic controversy over the Watergate scandal.

Jewish groups also have announced a series of demonstrations protesting Brezhnev's visit and Nixon's efforts to increase economic ties with the Soviet Union. Because of the threat of demonstrations tight security has been arranged for the Brezhnev visit.

A rally urging Brezhnev to permit free emigration of Soviet Jews to the West was held on the steps of the Capitol Sunday afternoon, with police estimating the crowd at 10,000. Members of the Young Americans for Freedom, a conservative group, demonstrated outside of the office of the Soviet newspapers Pravda and Izvestia.

The general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party arrived Saturday on his first visit ever to the United States and went immediately to Camp David.

There he conferred for three hours Sunday night with presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger, who had met earlier in the day with Nixon before the President returned to the capital from a weekend at his Key Biscayne, Fla., home.

Students Play Major Role In Tolland Rites

VIVIAN V. KENNESON Correspondent

In what has apparently become a policy, the third graduating class of Tolland High School yesterday continued as in previous years — the students playing the major part of the ceremonies while school officials took a "back seat."

The 133 graduates marched in the blazing sun to the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" played by the Tolland High School Band, under the direction of musical director Henry Kreske. The Rev. Robert Tallent of the First Baptist Church gave the invocation.

The female graduates wore white caps and gowns and each carried a long stem red rose, while the male graduates wore royal blue caps and gowns. Hundreds of friends and families of the graduates filled the chairs and banks of the lawn behind the school.

Miss Joan Chorches delivered the salutatory address which scorched the present American education system. She charged that the emphasis is off education and on discipline, that students are under too much pressure.

Stating that schools are disciplinary organizations rather than learning, she continued that learning should be a process that will be carried out throughout a lifetime. Quoting from published works of educators, she continued that there should be an active exchange between student and teacher.

John Weigold III, valedictorian, presented an elaborate original story about the transition of a fictitious agricultural hamlet, "Vladistalningradistok," into a boomtown. The story even noted that after the residents built a highway into "Megotropolis" and began commuting to work, the town's little bank, unable to handle the volume of money coming into town, had to move to a "new and larger building."

the typical life of an adolescent, "Vladimir," who lived all his life in the small town and now attended the "all atomic" high school.

Wegold sees Vladimir as basically intelligent with a clear perception of the world around him, upset by the pettiness of his family and, to a lesser degree, the school, where nothing is required and students may take whatever courses interest them. Vladimir would like to major in environmental science, however, because the people feel their environment is perfect, no such course is offered.

The story ends tragically as the "gray haze," gone unrecognized as smog, destroys the surrounding mountain greenery and causes rocks to loosen and create a landslide to envelope "Vladistalningradistok."

Dr. Kenneth L. MacKenzie, superintendent of schools, congratulated Joan and

A Manchester Boy In The 1880s

The request to contribute reminiscences of old days to the Sesquicentennial of my beloved home town takes me back to a happy boyhood.

I was born here in 1882 (Dr. Whitin's charge was $10); but I was taken off to New York in 1892. So these notes reflect only a boy's recollections of how different life was here and then.

In those days there was North Manchester, Manchester Center where the town hall stands, South Manchester, Manchester Green, Oakland and Buckland — separate neighborhoods — mutually remote to a populace in which few had their own horses and carriages.

A spur railroad from North Manchester to South Manchester was the only internal transportation. The trip 8 miles to Hartford was by railroad; if we took our buggy or the two-horse surrey, the horses must be given liberal rations of oats the night before. Many of my schoolmates had never been that far.

So it is just North Manchester that I am telling about, and the social life that centered around the North Congregational Church on Main Street.

The Cheney colony with its fine homes, spacious lawns and impressive well-kept factory buildings were in another world which we could drive through when we were showing the sights to visitors. But when I got to Yale, the classroom seating was always alphabetical, so, for four years, I sat next to Russell Cheney. I told him that my mother's mother had helped out the original immigrant Cheney family with old shoes and clothes.

Culture was brought to town by lecturers and singers in Cheney Hall, Apel's Opera House furnished occasional vaudeville, and amateur entertainments included "Tableaux"; for example, my mother read excerpts from "Evangeline" in a loud, clear voice, and the curtains parted from time-to-time to reveal changing scenes posed rigidly by actors behind a row of big kerosene footlights.

My playmates were John Fitch; the Robertson boys, William and Herbert; William Ferguson, Charles Hughes, Laurence Dart, Harlan White, Ernest Hilliard, Arthur Griswold, Ned Barber.

There were in Manchester in the 1880s no telephones, no bicycles, no automobiles, no public water supply, no bathtubs or flush toilets, no cameras (except in the portrait studio), no safety razors, no electricity, no street lights, no phonographs, no movies, no wars, no income taxes.

My statistical expectation of life was 46 years (vs. 70 now).

Thirty-six members of Unit B of the Manchester Green School Chorus have staged and produced their own version of Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore". Their efforts were culminated with the presentation of the opera on Friday, which will be repeated at the school Tuesday evening.

Rehearsals have been held every Friday afternoon during the school's activity period. Once the musical had been introduced to the chorus members by their leader, Mrs. Phipps, the rest was done by the children. Choreography was planned by Jill Borgida and Beth Thompson. Judy Wilson was props chairman, and Larry Krupp was in charge of programs.

The scenery was originated and constructed by the Unit B scenery committee, which is also a Friday afternoon activity, under the direction of Mrs. Steinhagen and assisted by Miss Beverly Schnell, Unit B aide. Sailor hats used in the production proved a problem, until Mrs. Joy Thompson, mother of a chorus member, discovered that hats could be purchased for $1 each. Chorus mothers offered to make cupcakes to offset the cost, and conducted a bake sale in June.
