KILLER. By Joey, with Dave Fisher. Playboy Press. 318 Pages. $2.95.
Joey, not his real name, is a professional killer. It's a job most people wouldn't care to apply for. But to Joey, who the reader is assured is a very real person, it's just a job. Or, as he puts it, "I don't even call it murder. To me it's a way of making a living... It's my profession."

Regardless of society's feeling toward Joey's work, his story is a moderately interesting one. A desperately poor kid who grew up tough, it was natural for Joey to turn to crime as a livelihood. As he is quick to point out, there really weren't any alternatives.

Joey's explanations as to why he does his kind of job are interesting, as are his views of contemporary society. But there are times when he gets carried away by subjects that aren't of all that much interest to the reader, and goes on for pages about the different types of gambling there are and how fences operate. It's an uneven book but worth a look if the reader is willing to plow through a lot of unnecessary detail.

That's the question confronting Lt. Tromple Kramer of the South African police force and his Bantu assistant, Sgt. Zondi, and they answer it in a most ingenious manner. But not until they've led the reader through some of the most interesting terrain to surface in a detective novel in a long time.

James McClure writes not only about crimes and solutions. He writes about people and their relationship to each other as well as to their place. In this case it's South Africa, a place where a white cop and a black cop can work together as a team but only while preserving on the surface the relationship of boss and servant. A strange relationship, but McClure brings it off well, as he does everything else in his book.

For those interested in a good mystery, this is a superior one. For those who want the mystery plus a powerful look at the way of life surrounding it, this novel more than does the job.

Committee To Seek Court Test State Files Suit Against Oil Firms Nixon Offers Some Papers But No Tapes

Inspect Ruptured Hose

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut Atty. Gen. Robert K. Killian has filed a federal lawsuit against 20 major oil companies and three subsidiaries, charging them with violating federal and state antitrust laws.

The suit claims that monopolistic practices over the past four years have forced the state and its residents to pay a quarter billion dollars extra for gasoline and other petroleum products.

The suit seeks triple damages for its losses.

Mobil Oil Corp., one of the companies named in the suit called Killian's charges "false and totally without foundation. We are confident that the facts determined under rules of law will establish that we have done nothing that violates the spirit or the letter of the antitrust laws."

A company statement said, "Unfortunately, the energy problems facing this industry are very real, and ridiculous allegations such as these — far from protecting the consumer and public interest — serve only to deceive and mislead the public about the causes and solutions to the energy problem."

The suit also asks that the companies be made to: —Divest themselves of all crude oil holdings and exploration activities. —Refrain from future joint ventures for offshore leases. —Refrain from bidding for oil and gas lease acquisitions. —Refrain from selling crude oil to "preferred" customers. —Refrain for 10 years from acquiring stock or assets of refineries.

The suit also asks the court ensure equal allocation and distribution of petroleum products throughout Connecticut.

Named as defendants in the suit which was filed Wednesday in Hartford's U.S. District Court, are: Amerasia Hess Corp., Ashland Oil Inc., Atlantic-Richfield Co., Cities Service Oil Co., Clark Oil and Refining Co., Continental Oil Co., Exxon Corp., Getty Oil Co., Standard Oil Co. of California, Mobil Oil Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., Shell Oil Co., Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, and its subsidiary, Amoco Oil Co.

Similar suits have been filed by the state of Florida and the Federal Trade Commission.

Killian told a news conference today, that for the past 20 years the oil companies have worked together at every level of the industry, including exploration, transportation, refining and distribution.

"These companies have enjoyed a virtual stranglehold on gasoline and petroleum products that has long meant inflated prices and more recently, a supply shortage," Killian said.

"For too long, these giants have enjoyed an inappreciable shelter from serious antitrust inquiry, while at the same time they have enjoyed shelter from the most federal oil and gas laws. Killian said the major companies control 85 per cent of all domestic crude oil and 97 per cent of all domestic offshore crude oil production. He also said there was interdependent or joint control of at least 60 per cent of crude and refined oil pipelines, joint ownership of most federal offshore leases, combined ownership of nearly 75 per cent of total domestic refining and combined domestic ownership of 75 per cent of the retail gasoline market through branded distribution and sales.

Killian has spent the two years gathering information in preparation of the suit. But only one attorney has worked fulltime on the case.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee voted unanimously today to challenge in court President Nixon's refusal to supply tape, recordings and documents sought for its inquiry.

The chair recognizes that there is no precedent for litigation of this nature," Committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-D.C. said. "I think this litigation is essential if we are to determine whether the President is above the law, and whether the President is immune from the duties and responsibilities of this kind that all evolve upon all the other mortals that dwell in this land."

Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., vice chairman of the committee, said the motion, which would refer the case to the Supreme Court, should be made as soon as possible.

Ervin reiterated his call for both the tapes and all Watergate-related White House documents which Nixon previously has refused to supply on grounds that to do so would violate the doctrine of separation of powers.

"The Constitution wouldn't collapse and the heavens wouldn't fall in it," Nixon turned over the material, Ervin said.

As for the tapes, he added, "Here the President of the United States has informed us that some of these recordings do have reference to the matters that we are investigating, but he can't furnish them to us because we might misconstrue them."

Nixon's letter said in response to a subpoena demanding five specific conversations with former counsel John W. Dean III that, "I must respectfully refuse to produce the recordings" for reasons cited in previous presidential statements.

"It is quite possible," Nixon added, "that there are other records in my custody that would be within the ambit of that subpoena and that I could, consistent with the public interest and my constitutional responsibilities, provide for the Select Committee."

Nixon did not specify which of the thousands of Watergate related presidential papers might be available to the panel but said, "All specific requests from the Select Committee will be carefully considered."

Balance Of Trade Improves

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. foreign trade almost was in balance during June and there also was a sharp improvement during the second quarter of the year, the Commerce Department reported today.

The administration has said a favorable trade picture is vital to helping stabilize the U.S. dollar in world financial centers.

The trade deficit for June was $15.5 million, a big improvement over the May deficit of $17.9 million.

For the second quarter, the Census Bureau said its seasonally adjusted figures show a surplus for the April, May and June of $22.9 million of exports over imports and distribution.

"These companies have enjoyed a virtual stranglehold on gasoline and petroleum products that has long meant inflated prices and more recently, a supply shortage," Killian said.

They also plan to buy a new Mrs. Ehlers is a part-time employee of a Fairfield department store.

The $15,000 prize winner today was Pasquale Fiorito, 56, of East Hartford. He and his wife Helen, who is a keypunch operator, have three married children.

President Will Accept Supreme Court Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, rejecting subpoenas from the Senate Watergate committee and special prosecutor Archibald Cox for Watergate-related tape recordings, promised today he "would abide by a definitive decision" of the Supreme Court in the case.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said he spoke for Nixon in telling newsmen: "The President is very confident of his constitutional position as outlined in the letters to the committee and to the U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica. The President fully expects his position to be upheld in the courts."

Following Nixon's refusal to turn over tapes to the special prosecutor, Cox moved immediately to obtain a court order requiring the President to comply and Sirica set 10 a.m. EDT, Aug. 7 as the deadline for Nixon to honor a Supreme Court decision should that body rule against his position.

The effect of Nixon's rejection of subpoenas for the White House tapes was to join the President and the Congress in unprecedented constitutional battle. And there promised to be a skirmish with Cox.

"The President, just as in other matters, would abide by a definitive decision of the highest court."

Until today, the White House had declined to say flatly that Nixon would honor a Supreme Court decision.

Cambodian War Ruling Appeal Set In Motion

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government has filed a notice of appeal to overturn a court decision that calls the U.S. bombing of Cambodia unconstitutional and orders it halted.

Hours after the ruling was announced Wednesday, U.S. Atty. Robert A. Morse said appeal papers were being prepared and that he would seek a stay of the order that takes effect Friday. He said the case would be carried to the Supreme Court if necessary.

In Washington, the White House had no immediate comment.

The permanent injunction against bombing and other military activities in Cambodia was issued by U.S. Dist. Court Judge Orrin G. Judd in a suit brought by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and three Air Force fliers.

Judd said that because Congress had never voted its approval, the government lacked the necessary authority "to order military forces into combat in Cambodia or to release bombs over Cambodia."

Rep. Holtzman, a freshman Congresswoman, said in Washington that she was "extraordinarily pleased" by the decision.

"It reasserts the constitutional requirement that no American lives can be risked and that no American taxpayer's dollars can go to a military effort that has not been approved or authorized by Congress," she said.

The unprecedented decision came exactly three weeks before the Aug. 15 date by which President Nixon previously agreed to stop the bombing raids after both houses of Congress voted to cut off funds.

One effect of Judd's order, according to a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union, which represented the plaintiffs, might be the dismissal of cases against persons facing courts-martial for refusing to bomb Cambodia.

The lawyer, Burt Neuborne, cited the case of Air Force Capt. Donald E. Dawson, who is under charges for refusing to fly bombing missions over Cambodia on June 19 last.

In arguing against the suit on July 6, the government claimed that the Cambodia operations were "part and parcel of a war that has continued for many years. Now one phase of that war is continuing."

In his 36-page memorandum on the basis for the decision, the government said it was the one put by the government, "but whether Congress has authorized bombing in Cambodia or the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam and the release of prisoners of war."

The Congressional action before and after the beginning of hostilities in Cambodia does not include authorization to bomb Cambodia in order to achieve a Cambodian cease-fire or even to protect the Vietnam cease-fire as urged by the defendants.

Meat Industry Leaders Seek Beef Price Thaw

CHICAGO (AP) — Meat industry leaders are predicting that the retention of the price ceiling on beef will create soaring prices in pork and poultry and spur black market buying of cattle.

A Brooklyn, N.Y., wholesaler who claims he will run out of meat by Monday says, "The slogan in our business has become 'black or broke,'" referring to black market sales.

A Texas meat packer who can't find steers to slaughter says, "We have three choices: close our doors, buy on the black market or continue losing money by taking a loss on dressing beef."

A representative of the nation's food chain stores declares: "We are swamped with calls about beef."

An industry spokesman defined the black market as the sale of beef "out of the normal distribution channels."

About 100 representatives of producers, packers, processors and wholesalers met Wednesday in Chicago at a conference called by the American Meat Institute, a trade association of 30 packing houses.

The group asked for an immediate meeting with Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and officials of the Cost of Living Council in an attempt to dissuade the administration from

Senate Committee Approves Broad Rail Service Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill calling for development of a comprehensive rail-service plan for 17 states was approved Wednesday by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., who heads the Senate surface transportation subcommittee, said he will try to get Senate action on the bill before the Aug. 3 congressional recess.

The measure directs the Interstate Commerce Commission to develop the plan to reorganize the railroads in the Northeast and Midwest within 12 months.

Hartke said the system would be operated by private rail companies, and offers an alternative to nationalization of the railroads.

The bankrupt rail carriers represent the biggest portion of the nation's entire transportation system by land, sea and air. To allow it to dissolve in

TB Testing Banned By Farm Owner

WINDSOR (AP) — The owner of a local farm labor camp has barred public health nurses from testing migrant farm workers for tuberculosis.

The Shute Tobacco Growers Agricultural Association Executive Director Anthony Amenia has denied permission to the Hartford County Lung Association to administer free Tine tests for 600 camp residents.

"We are following procedures which have been part of our regular routine for 20 years," Amenia said Tuesday. He said camp health officials are adequately protecting the farm workers from tuberculosis.

The lung association was invited to administer the tests June 11 by the New England Farm Workers' Council, a farm workers' organization.

Philip Woodrow, executive director of the lung association, said Amenia refused permission to make the test that day and later formalized the denial in a letter dated June 26.

Woodrow said similar screening tests at another camp in the area showed 33 per cent of the workers had positive Tine tests. He added, however, that the association could not legally enter the Windsor camp without the owner's permission.

Sam, You're Making The Pants Too Long

The question of executive privilege vs. legislative privilege under the quasi-doctrine of separation of powers has come to a head.

As issue is whether or not the President can or should withhold from the Senate Watergate Committee certain tapes and documents the committee feels necessary to its probe of the scandal.

As a layman, we cannot pretend to assess this so-called "constitutional crisis" from a legal point of view.

However, in the light of Watergate revelations to date, the ability of some members of the legal profession to correctly interpret law can be disputed also.

The question, as we see it, is one of motive and intent.

There can be no question that presidential documents and tapes should be protected from fishing expeditions, whatever the source.

There is no question that a legislative body, acting in a legal and authorized capacity, has the right to examine whatever documents and tapes it can prove germane to its legally authorized area of inquiry.

The issue then, as we see it in a layman's sense, is whether committee examination of presidential documents and tapes of conversations pertaining to Watergate testimony already offered is necessary.

Committee members have made it quite clear by the issuing of their subpoenas that the committee feels it essential to have these documents.

The strongest reason thus far advanced is that the tapes and papers could presumably assist the committee in deciding conflicting testimony of several witnesses.

In other words, if someone has been lying, who is the guilty person or persons?

As laudable as this may be, the role of the committee as originally chartered by the Congress was to conduct an inquiry toward the end of producing legislation to prevent any recurrence of any crimes the inquiry may have uncovered.

That the break-in of Watergate was a crime has been established. That there was a cover-up attempt partially accomplished has been established.

That vast sums of campaign funds were solicited and disposed illegally has been established. That White House personnel were involved in various aspects of these crimes has been established.

The haggling of recent weeks has not been to uncover any new crimes (taping of the White House apparently is a sin shared by other tenants in varying degrees); but to find out how much, if anything, President Nixon knew about the cover-up attempt.

The point, we Americans must now remember, is that the question of the President's guilt or innocence, involvement or non-involvement in the cover-up, is no longer germane to the scope of the committee's inquiry. It now has sufficient information to proceed and legislate to hopefully prevent a future Watergate. It can do this, we believe, without White House tapes or documents.

Whether or not, the Watergate cover-up was known to the President or not, does not contribute one iota to legislative action to resolve the issue. The fact remains, under present laws, men so disposed to commit crimes could do so with or without presidential blessing. The President several weeks ago admitted that while these acts were not authorized by him, nevertheless, he must assume responsibility.

The task facing the Ervin Committee is not one of pinning the goods on Nixon. The task is what it can and will recommend to the full Congress in the following areas which White House tapes and documents cannot alter either way:

1. A workable, realistic and independent auditing of national campaign funds.
2. Periodic independent accounting to the public of campaign sources and expenditures.
3. A congressional act defining specifically the roles of the nation's intelligence forces; namely, the FBI, CIA and the military intelligence units.

4. Full and public disclosure of the financial assets of all elected and appointive officials in the federal government — including the Congress — on a uniform basis upon entering the federal service, upon departure, and every two years thereafter for 10 years.

5. An exhaustive study of the issue of executive privilege and legislative privilege to reduce, to absolute minimum, secrecy in both branches of government. (After all the difference of an executive session of the Watergate committee and a private presidential meeting in the White House Oval Room is only one of degree since the public is only apprised of what either wishes the public to know.)

Let us remember, the White House horrors are not an original sin. (There are few of us who remember millions of Americans voting for a dying man because certain men around him believed America's resolve to wage and win World War II would vanish if it knew Franklin Delano Roosevelt might not be at the helm.)

As Sen. Ervin stated sometime ago, the purpose of his committee is to get at the truth. We believe the truth is apparent and whether President Nixon is linked directly to the cover-up or not does not alter the truth.

That truth is that in America, political life is highly susceptible to corruption, regardless of party affiliation. The information needed to minimize these opportunities for corruption is at hand.

The question before the committee today is whether it wishes to address itself to this task or continue to venture into areas we believe are more political than pure in motive and intent.

Dear Sen. Weicker:
All right Dear Senator, you and your associates on the Watergate committee have and are proving that there has been much skulduggery in the political arena, particularly among the Republicans. However, "enough already" and won't you please stop your money in areas that will benefit the taxpayers.

Certainly this investigation is costing all of us a great deal of money and wasting valuable time which could better be spent in solving some of our pressing problems such as the gasoline shortage, the spiraling food costs as well as the crime situation. We only hope that you will see fit to dedicate the same effort (though it might not appear on TV) towards, for example, investigating the large oil corporations.

You may rest assured that, while you are getting a great deal of exposure, this dragged out, costly investigation is not getting you and your fellow politicians any points with the man on the street. Let it be known that we are sick and tired of watching you people demonstrate your ability to launch sanctimonious attacks on others. This is not to say that the people involved are any less guilty or that they should be whitewashed, but we see shades of the late Sen. Joe McCarthy in your "performances."

If you insist in draping yourselves in the American flag, won't you please wear a pork chop on your lapel (you and your colleagues are among the only people who can afford such luxuries) and demonstrate to us that you are really doing something for the good of the citizens and not just for LOWELL WEICKER.

Your answer, if any, to this expression of indignity is predictable and it should go something like this: "As a representative of the people of the United States it is our duty to uncover wrongdoings among any group whether it be among our colleagues or anybody else. It is our sworn duty to uphold the constitution and to protect the rights of all citizens etc."

Max Lerner Comments Who Thought You Up?

NEW YORK, N.Y. — It must have been a prankster with that booz phone call to Sen. Sam Ervin about the Nixon tapes, and left Ervin, Sen. Howard Baker and the committee staff feeling glibly. For here were the hounds of the law and the Lord, watched by millions of eyes, hunting down the makers of great stealth, tracking down clues, sifting out the genuine from the spurious. And suddenly they were shown as frail humans helpless to deal with a fraud on themselves, unable to sift the fake from the authentic on a matter of high moment of state.

It is healthy to know how human a democracy's legislative sleuths can be, just as it is healthy to track down the not-so-prankish devils of a group in the executive offices. As a footnote to the all-too-real story of the Watergate carryings-on, the hoarse siren of the constant invasion of reality by illusions. Everything we know about Mr. Nixon's mind, character and modes of operation should have warned the committee members against their too ready acceptance of a story which was simply not in character for the President.

Along with everything else it is doing, the committee will have to tighten its screening procedures, sharpen its lines of command and think harder about the relation of personality to political decisions. The hearings offered another instance of the interplay between illusion and reality. It was in the reaction to the language, diction, sleuthing behavior and personal style of Anthony T. (Tony) Ulasewicz, the ex-New York cop. Many of the committee, staff and spectators found the Ulasewicz narrative hilarious. But it was Sen. Howard Baker who uttered the line that must have expressed what many felt. "Who thought you up?" he asked Ulasewicz. "I don't know," was the reply, "but maybe my parents." Baker followed it with another playful line about impugning to them "the element of intent."

It was all in the spirit of railleury and good clean fun — and just as invented — as that sordid assemblage of dirty political tricks. But many in the larger TV audience must have felt, as I did, a degree of condescension in the "Who thought you up?" — in fact, the whole response to this glib product of New York's sidewalks. The writer who came to mind among the reporters as they listened to Ulasewicz was of course, Damon Runyan. But why single out Ulasewicz and ask who thought him up, when the same unreality was there about every previous witness before the committee, any one of whom could have been invented by a savvy satiric novelist or short-story writer? Runyan's and Ulasewicz' New York seems to me just as real — and just as invented — as Ross MacDonald's and H.R. Haldeman's Orange County, Calif. And a lot less depressing.

What has depressed me about the hearings, almost as much as the skulduggery they showed up, has been the dreadful mediocrity of so many of the men who held high posts around the President and on his legislative committee. They seemed to have had most of the individually flattened out by some dehumanizing steamroller that rolled right over them, leaving them mostly calculators of power and pain.

An AP News Analysis Birth Control Encyclical Five Years Old

By EDWARD MAGRI
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Sunday is the fifth anniversary of Pope Paul VI's encyclical on birth control, and Vatican circles acknowledge that it is widely disregarded among the world's 600 million Roman Catholics.

The encyclical "Humanae Vitae" — "Of Human Life" — maintained the Church's ban on the use of any type of contraception, including the pill, except the rhythm method of periodic abstinence from sexual intercourse. The Pope ruled that violation of the ban is a sin for Catholics, stating the Church's traditional stand.

The encyclical issued on July 25, 1968, stirred a worldwide challenge to the Pope's authority. It ran counter to the hopes of millions of Catholic couples that the Church would ease its stand on birth control and at least accept the pill as a morally legitimate contraceptive device.

The Pope ignored the recommendations of a majority of a 75-member birth control commission that he permit contraception. Many priests, bishops and even cardinals said either privately or publicly that they disagreed with Pope Paul, and Catholic couples went on using birth control devices despite "Humanae Vitae."

One Jesuit theologian, the Rev. Marcelino Zalba of Gregorian University in Rome, contends that the encyclical has been "totally twisted both in its interpretation and application." "You simply cannot say that Roman Catholicism is one mind on the subject," he declared. "When the pill on a moral issue is so deep, you can hardly expect a majority to be binding on couples. I think you can say the vast majority of couples commit no sin when they turn to contraception."

The first bicycle was introduced into England from France about the year 1815 and was known as the velocipede. It was propelled by the feet of the rider being pushed against the ground.

Bring Cancer Into Open, Noted Author Pleads

By Henrietta Jelm
"When you can say the word 'cancer' (and not the softer term, 'malignancy') the same as you would 'alices' or 'fracture', then you have the battle half won."
So says Mildred Gordon, the distaff side of the husband-and-wife writing team of "The Gordons." She knows, because she recently had a bout with cancer.
"One day I noticed when I held my left arm high, the contour of the breast changed slightly," she relates. "I examined it carefully. I could feel no lump, no pain. It was nothing, I told myself. I felt too good. I was too busy."
At the time she and her husband, Gordon Gordon, were copy reading the final version of their latest novel, "The Informant," just before it went to the printers at Doubleday. They were planning a trip to Florida. They were in the midst of a busy lecture schedule. Nevertheless, when she went to her family doctor for her annual flu shot, she mentioned the breast. Less than a week later she underwent surgery. Cancer.
"Our doctor's announcement that there was something there" sent us into shock at first," she admits, "but we got hold of ourselves. We went to a basketball game the first night. The next we gave a talk. The next day I entered the hospital. My recovery was nothing short of a miracle. I give full credit to a very fine surgeon and to early discovery. I was in the hospital a short week. I never required a single pain pill or shot, not even a sleeping tablet.
"The very day of my operation I was on the telephone talking to my friends. They asked if I were going to tell people I had had a breast removed. I was not panicked. I still had my life and thanked God for that. I still had the faith I live by.
"I believe the psychological factor is more frightening for most women than the actual surgery. Women's breasts have been fostered as a sex symbol by our culture, and when a woman loses one she tends to think she has lost her sex appeal. Non-sense.
"We should bring another point out into the open. A woman may worry about how her husband may react. Is he going to love her as much as before? Is their physical relationship going to be the same? Why, of course, it will be if their love has any depth at all. The husband adjusts the same as his wife — and a disaster such as this often draws couples closer together.
"Then I was told that if I hurt my career. More nonsense. I believe most people like candor and admire you for facing up to a bad situation. But even if they didn't, I'd talk about it because I might possibly be saving a few lives. A troubled woman here and there might hear me and get to her family physician in time. Maybe it's an ego thing with me. I don't know. But I feel good letting other women know that one can have a mastectomy — that it isn't the nightmare one might think — and go on living quite normally.
Normally? The Gordons leave soon for Europe to launch "The Informant" in England, France, Germany and Denmark. When they return they start work for Doubleday on a sequel to "That Darn Cat," the award-winning novel (1,600,000 copies to date) that became the Disney film starring Hayley Mills. The two have collaborated for 20 years in the writing of 17 novels.

Mildred Gordon, collaborator with her husband of 17 novels under the name of The Gordons, thinks people should discuss the disease more frankly. She herself underwent a mastectomy recently and says it is not the nightmare one might think. The Gordons' latest novel is "The Informant." They live in Encino, California.

Mr. Mayor

Bristol's Mayor Frank J. Longo faces a tough challenge from members of his own party for the nomination as Democratic candidate for mayor of Bristol. Ever since taking office, Longo has waged a constant battle with his City Council all six members of which are Democrats. One of them, Donald Cassin, is challenging him for the party's nomination and Longo has indicated he will seek a primary election if Cassin gets the nomination in party caucus. (AP photo)

Bristol's Mayor Faces Opposition

By DICK WARNER
The Bristol Press

BRISTOL (AP)—Mayor Frank J. Longo, who has often sailed a different course from his city council, appears headed for a primary.

Already campaigning for a second term under the slogan "Re-elect Longo, He Keeps His Word," the volatile mayor is in serious trouble with his own party. Since taking office Longo has waged a constant battle with the six members of his City Council, all Democrats. Now, one of them, Donald Cassin, is challenging Longo for the party nomination. Preliminary indications show Cassin with about 30 of the 43 town committee votes—six more than necessary for the endorsement Aug. 21.

Longo edged into the mayor's chair by a 62-vote margin in 1971. He pledged "to cut taxes without cutting services." In spite of a $600,000 surplus inherited from the previous Republican administration, the tax rate in Bristol increased 1.5 mills during his first year. But in the second, thanks to $2 million in revenue sharing and higher state educational grants, taxes were cut 2.8 mills. Thus, he feels he has kept his word, and thus his campaign slogan. If Cassin gets the town committee endorsement, Longo has threatened to take the party to a primary Sept. 25. In the battle for the endorsement, Longo himself is the major issue. At the outset of his administration he let it be known that he would like all members of city boards and commissions to resign so he could fill those spots with his own people. That didn't work.

Then he made headlines battling with the news media. He criticized reporters for printing stories without first clearing them with his office. He barred a reporter from one news conference and threatened a photographer with physical ejection from his office.

The mayor voted against adoption of police and fire union contracts, but they were ratified by the council over his objection. He is still negotiating with two other city unions that have been operating without a contract for more than a year. When some 100 members of the two unions suddenly became ill one recent day, Longo docked each of them a day's pay—unless they brought a note from a doctor. Most of the employees have filed individual grievances over the last pay.

Mayor Longo also sidestepped the city charter when the Board of Fire Commissioners named a new chief not Longo's choice. The mayor nominated his own candidate and gave him the job. His action is still in the courts. Public reaction has been mixed under the Longo administration. Some people see his independence as the act of a strong man committed to cutting government costs. Others see him as a man consumed by his own ego.

In Memoriam In loving memory of my husband, Harry Stever, who passed away July 26, 1967.

A pleasant smile, a heart of gold. No finer husband this world can hold. He troubled no one, his wants were few. Take care of him, as he takes care of you. For the husband you gave me was one of the best.

Mayor Says Surplus Could Reach $259,000

The unaudited closing financial figures for the town of South Windsor for the close of this fiscal year show a surplus of close to $259,000. Abraham Glassman has informed the Town Council. Glassman said unexpended appropriations amount to some $48,000. He said this figure is significant in view of the fact that the general government budget provided funds in excess of $7,000 to meet a deficit in the Board of Education budget.

The mayor said actual revenues exceeded estimated revenues by some $215,100 during this past fiscal year. The increase of revenues, over estimated revenues, was in several categories.

These areas were listed as: Interest on overdue taxes, $11,300; General Government Departmental revenue, $54,000; Interest Earned on Treasurer Investments, $94,000; and State of Connecticut to Board of Education, $64,000. Glassman said the town's efforts to undertake programs of all town fiscal operations.

Board Ready to Name Blue Ribbon Committee

When the Manchester Board of Directors meets Aug. 7, it will consider action on a list of 15 names for appointment to a Blue Ribbon government-study committee.

The list will be presented by a three-member board subcommittee of Jon Norris, chairman; John Tani and Charles McKenzie.

Norris said his group screened the names of over 40 persons, "some from organizations, some from the general public, but all highly recommended."

The list his subcommittee is recommending, said Norris, represents a cross-section of the community - males and females, persons of various ages, and representatives of the different political factions.

"We believe," said Norris, "we were successful in recommending a group well qualified to serve on this important committee. The actual appointments will be up to the entire board."

The Blue Ribbon committee will report to the Board of Directors in November 1974.

Rate Increase Hearings End

HARTFORD (AP) - With 6,000 pages of testimony piled in file cabinets, boxes and desks, the state Public Utilities Commission is nearing the end of the hearing phase of a utility rate case.

The three-man commission must now begin plowing through the records to decide whether the Connecticut Light & Power Co. (CL&P) and the Hartford Electric Light Co. (HELCO) should get higher rates.

CL&P requested a 5.9 per cent increase in electric rates and a 13.4 per cent increase in gas rates. The rates would raise company revenue by $17 million. The PUC granted an interim increase of $8.5 million which can be revoked, increased or decreased.

HELCO requested a 3 per cent increase in electric rates and a 2.4 per cent increase in gas rates, to raise revenues by $4 million. No interim was granted.

The PUC must decide on the rate requests by Sept. 10 or the company's requested rates take effect automatically.

During the hearing, Gov. Thomas J. Meskillo made an unprecedented personal appeal, appearing twice before the PUC as an intervener.

Opposition came also from a 16-year-old high school student, the cities of Hartford and New Haven, several citizen groups and university professors.

The two utilities said they needed more money for future building programs. In Wednesday's testimony, economist Thomas Staudish, testifying for the city of Hartford, asked the PUC to change its rate policy for large electricity users. Connecticut utilities charge less per unit of electricity to larger users.

Staudish said the PUC should "flatten out" the declining rate policy by charging all electric customers exactly what it costs the electric companies to serve them.

UConn Library Additions Get Top Priority

GROTON (AP) - Trustees of the University of Connecticut have given top priority to plans for $19.3 million in additions to the library at the Storrs campus.

The trustees approved Wednesday a request for capital funds to finance the library additions, citing the most urgent need of the university.

Ageless Challenge

State Man Heads Up Urban League

WASHINGTON (AP) - Donald H. McGannon of New Canaan, chairman of the Connecticut Commission for Higher Education and president of the Westinghouse Electric Corp., was elected Wednesday as president of the National Urban League.

McGannon succeeds James A. Linn, chairman of the executive committee of Time, Inc. He was elected to the post by the league's board of trustees. He was a former vice president of the national organization and a member of the board.

The Urban League has a "unique potential" and is the "most effective organization in the human rights field," McGannon said. He added that he hoped he could lead the organization "into another stage, a forward stage in the civil rights movement."

Clint White, who termed a "vacuum" of national leadership, McGannon told the League's annual conference dinner Wednesday night that the "idealistic activism of the 1960s is gone and so has its promise and hopes and the activist spirit which embraced almost all sectors of our society."

The federal government has been paralyzed by the "High Noon confrontation between its executive and legislative branches," he said, adding that McGannon must use the remaining three years of the Nixon administration to "consolidate our position."

"We will use this occasion to penetrate the workings of local, county and state governments so that revenue sharing will not become a political football and so that our needs will be blatantly clear to the political establishment."

"In addition we will selectively seek out those seats in Congress, in state legislatures, on city councils, on schools board and corporate boards..." he said.

"If we utilize these next three years effectively, productively, creatively, militantly, we will come into the new administration with momentum and clout that will let us secure programs and funding reminiscent of the 1960s," McGannon said.

McGannon will be replaced by a half-time resource teacher who would have worked with special education children. He will work one day a week as a specialist in behavior modification, working with the teachers and the children.

None Hurt In Blaze

Three persons were evacuated by ladder from the second floor of a two-story building at 333 E. Center St. when a fire broke out in the basement there. No one was injured in the early morning blaze.

Smoke was the reason for the evacuation of Mrs. Elizabeth Gauthier, her son, Lawrence, and her mother, Mrs. Ida Douville, in the fire which occurred at 3:50 a.m. today, according to Deputy Fire Chief Roy Stratton.

Stratton, who was the officer in charge at the scene, said that only the basement and some support beams were damaged by the fire, but that second and third floors of the building received some smoke damage.

The building is owned by International Revenue, a real estate firm comprised of Mrs. Gauthier, Atty. Anthony Gryk and Edward Dupre. Stratton estimated damage to the building at $5,000 to $7,000 in fire damage and another "several thousand" dollars in smoke damage.

Stratton said that the origin of the fire is at this time "undetermined, but not suspicious."

Grand Jury Indicts Three Men For Fraud

HARTFORD (AP) - A federal grand jury indicted three men on fraud charges in an alleged scheme to swindle an East Hartford investment company out of $20,000.

Warrants were issued Tuesday for the arrest of Joseph Labin, 55, of Yonkers, N.Y.; Dominic Mantell, 41, of 505, of North Beach, Fla.; and Ronald Kotler, 37, of Miami Beach, Fla.

The indictments allege the trio bilked the R.C.T. Investment Corp. in 1970 after offering to finance a housing project for the East Hartford company through a non-existent bank in England.

Authorities said R.C.T.'s operators sought financing for the housing project in Springfield but were unable to obtain the necessary funds through banks in Connecticut.

The men were put in touch with New York City man who in turn helped them contact Labin. The indictments identify Labin as an associate of Kotler and Mantell.

Labin asked for a 10 per cent finder's fee and was later paid $2,500, the government contends.

Kotler and Mantell issued phony bank drafts to R.C.T. and were paid $17,500 in finder's fees, the indictments allege. The fraud was discovered when R.T.C. officials tried to cash the bank drafts and found they were worthless.

Labin is charged with one count of using the telephone and telegraph to defraud, Mantell and Kotler face three counts each of the same charge.

In Tolland Woods Area Volunteers Search For Missing Child

BARBARA RICHMOND
(Herald Reporter)
More than 300 volunteers, headed by State Police from the Stafford troop, continued combing woods in Tolland at noon today for seven-year-old Janice K. Pickett who has been missing from her home since yesterday afternoon.

Janice, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Pickett of Anthony Rd., Tolland, reportedly told her parents she was going into the woods near her home to search for a butterfly. Her bicycle was later found on the side of the road and a searching party was set up to comb the woods in search of the girl.

also arrived on the scene this morning to aid in the search. Janice is described as being about four feet tall, weighing about 65 pounds and with blonde hair and blue eyes. When last seen she was wearing blue shorts, a blue and white striped jersey and sneakers, police said.

Getting Ready to Move Out

Area Guardsmen Leave For Camp

SUE KLEMENS
(Herald Reporter)
It's back to Army shoes and a m. revieille for 200 Manchester and Rockville area National Guardsmen who left today for a two-week summer training program at Camp A.P. Hill in Bowling Green, Va.

A motor convoy of over 90 vehicles is transporting members of 1st Battalion, 109th Infantry on the 55-mile trek to the camp.

More than 600 Connecticut Guardsmen are assigned to this battalion.

Steps are being taken by the Connecticut Army National Guard to conserve fuel during the training program.

The majority of the brigade will be traveling by commercial buses on Sunday, with an overnight stop at Fort Dix, N.J.

The plans to conserve gasoline, which were formulated last November, will include attaching trailers to trucks; restricting the number and use of private vehicles; making arrangements for public transportation; and reducing the use of fuel on the base.

Also, the brigade will be able to use the machinery at Camp Hill, which will eliminate the need for transporting cumbersome equipment.

Jeeps will be carried onto the camp.

Col. Richard Logli will command the unit, Maj. Joseph Taricani will serve as executive officer and Capt. Angelo Fiorentino will be the company commander.

The job of the Manchester and Rockville Guardsmen will be to support the battalion in logistic, medical and administrative training operations. Field instruction and defense readiness procedures will shape much of the two-week schedule.

Two Army National Guard recruiters were on hand in Manchester and Rockville for the purpose of securing additional enlistments into the Guard.

Next year's training period will be at Fort Drum in upstate New York.

Wood Resigns State Post

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut Transportation Commissioner A. Earl Wood today submitted his resignation "for personal reasons" to Gov. Thomas J. Meskill, effective Aug. 1.

After meeting with the commissioner, Meskill praised Wood's years of public service.

Meskill said he was confident the Transportation Department would continue to function well under Deputy Commissioner James P. Shugrue.

Wood, 67, a career Transportation Department employee, came out of retirement in February, 1971, to become commissioner under Meskill.

A native of Irvington-On-Hudson, N.Y., he joined the former Highway Department in 1928 and rose to become deputy commissioner under Gov. John Davis Lodge from 1961-1966. He retired in 1968.

During his career, Wood was involved in designing various highway design projects including the Merritt Parkway.

Shugrue, who will be acting commissioner until a permanent successor is named, has been a department employee for 31 years. He is a registered professional engineer who lives in Waterbury.

Watergate Hearing Committee Told Of Spying On Sen. Muskie

WASHINGTON (AP) — John D. Ehrlichman said today he was told that a Nixon campaign spy worked as the personal driver for Sen. Edmund S. Muskie last year.

He said he was told the spy became a personal friend of the Maine Democrat during the presidential campaign, and once had dinner at Muskie's home.

The spy, not named, carried Muskie's mail and photographed it for the Nixon campaign, the former aide to President Nixon said.

Ehrlichman, testifying for the fourth straight day before the Senate Watergate committee, said he was told the spy by a lawyer, Paul O'Brien, who heard it from former campaign deputy Job Stuart Magruder.

"Bear in mind this is hearsay twice removed," Ehrlichman said. "This is Magruder, telling O'Brien, telling me."

Ehrlichman said he heard the story from O'Brien last April 5. He said at the time he was conducting an inquiry for the President into what actually happened in the Watergate wiretapping.

It had been revealed in previous testimony from campaign aide Herbert L. Porter that Muskie's mail was photographed and sent to Magruder. But Ehrlichman's account was the first indication of how deeply the Nixon agent had penetrated the Muskie campaign.

Ehrlichman said he was told the spy was a cab driver recruited by a friend of Ken Reitz, who was youth director for the Nixon campaign. Reitz resigned from a post at the Republican National Convention earlier this year when the Watergate case blew up.

Burt Neuborne, assistant legal director for the American Civil Liberties Union, said he would fly immediately to Washington to ask the Supreme Court to vacate the stay.

Discussed the flight plan with space agency officials, but generally they planned to relax in their crew quarters five miles from the launch pad. They'll retire early tonight and awaken at 2 a.m. EDT for a final physical exam. Then they'll suit up for the orbital trip, which is to start at 7:11 a.m.

The countdown continued on schedule, with crews getting ready to pump tons of fuel into the Saturn 1B rocket tonight and early Saturday. No problems were reported.

Skylab 2 Liftoff Tomorrow

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Anxious to get started, Skylab 2's astronauts had a physical examination today and made final preparations for their launching Saturday on a record 59-day space voyage.

Alan L. Bean, Dr. Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma discussed the flight plan with space agency officials, but generally they planned to relax in their crew quarters five miles from the launch pad. They'll retire early tonight and awaken at 2 a.m. EDT for a final physical exam. Then they'll suit up for the orbital trip, which is to start at 7:11 a.m.

Superhighway Deflation

WATERBURY (AP) — Service stations in the vicinity of the Meadow Street ramp of I-84 did a land-office business in tire repairs Thursday after three barrels of glass and metal debris was spilled from a passing truck.

State police said more than 20 flat tires were reported by motorists who encountered the debris on the roadway before a highway department crew was summoned to clean up the mess. The eastbound lane of I-84 was closed for nearly an hour, causing a minor traffic jam, troopers said.

Appeals Court Says War Ruling

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals today issued a stay in a government appeal at the lower court injunction that would have halted United States bombing of Cambodia by 4 p.m. this afternoon.

The three-judge panel, hastily assembled over the past 24 hours, granted the stay requested by government attorneys pending an appeal set for Aug. 13, two days before the bombing out-of-date set by Congress.

Burt Neuborne, assistant legal director for the American Civil Liberties Union, said he would fly immediately to Washington to ask the Supreme Court to vacate the stay.

Plan Recommends More Community College Funds

By GARY LUHR
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD (AP) — More money for community colleges and a two-year moratorium on new institutions were among recommendations of the Connecticut Commission for Higher Education today as it unveiled half of its preliminary five-year master plan.

The plan also calls for additional graduate courses at University of Connecticut (UConn) branch campuses, a greater emphasis on non-traditional learning methods and an over-all increase in per-student expenditures through 1978.

Additional recommendations will be discussed Aug. 14 and the entire preliminary draft will be presented to the commission in September.

Following a series of public meetings, the final plan will be submitted for approval by the commission and passed on to the 1974 General Assembly.

Guiding Policy
It accepted by the legislature and Gov. Thomas J. Meskill, it will become the guiding policy statement for future decisions pertaining to higher education. The plan will be updated periodically.

One of the key recommendations released today was that the state should provide immediate money for the community colleges to acquire permanent facilities. Inadequate facilities have threatened the accreditation of at least two schools—Hartford and Amherst—community colleges.

The plan also calls for expanding curricula at the two-year colleges to include more technical training.

Other recommendations along the same lines included: —Initiating additional graduate programs at UConn branches, particularly at the Stamford branch.

—Allowing state colleges to provide undergraduate professional training as well as teacher training and liberal arts.

—Incorporating state colleges in cooperation with UConn to provide courses leading to a doctorate degree.

At their meeting Wednesday, members of the UConn Board of Trustees objected to the first and last of these recommendations. They said the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education was against new graduate programs and noted that UConn was the only institution currently permitted to grant doctorate degrees.

Pilot Projects
The plan recommends that the commission be authorized and given funds to contract with one post-secondary institution for pilot projects using non-traditional instruction methods. In many cases such instruction involves the use of cable television, video cassettes, computers and other forms of modern technology.

The plan also calls for the commission to issue regulations for having non-traditional undergraduate degree programs accredited. The state reverse the present "downward trend" in per-student appropriations through annual increments to a per-student level of $2,327 by 1978. This assumes a 4 per cent annual increase in the Consumer Price Index and would represent 7.1 per cent of the anticipated total state budget for 1978. Last year, net appropriations for higher education accounted for 6.7 per cent of all state spending.

The figure is closer to 10 per cent when expenditures for the commission and UConn health center are included plus tuition payments, which are channeled through the general fund.

New Student Aid
The plan calls for a totally new student aid program that would assure access to higher education for anyone who wants it. The program would be designed so that grants wouldn't end abruptly once a student's income exceeded a certain income level.

Once an adequate aid program is developed, tuition at UConn and the state colleges should be set to equal approximately one-third of the total instructional costs while tuition at the community colleges should not exceed one-third of the total instructional costs.

Allende Aide Assassinated

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Salvador Allende's chief military aide, navy Capt. Arturo Araya Peters, was assassinated this morning, police reported.

The police said Araya, 45, was shot at his home by a group of men who had not been identified so far.

The captain was chief of the presidential military hospital.

Araya was shot about 1 a.m. and died an hour later at a military hospital.

A local radio station, Radio Balmaceda, gave this account of the killing:

About 10 men in two cars drove up to Araya's home shortly after midnight. The captain, who was dressed for bed, thought he heard shots, took a submachine gun and went out into the garden to investigate.

He apparently saw nothing suspicious, went back into the house, and went out on a second-floor balcony to get a better view. When he came out, the assassins opened fire.

Police and navy intelligence agents opened a large-scale search for the killers.

Allende was among the first visitors to arrive at the hospital after his hospitalization. He was told of the attack as he was driving home from a party at the Cuban Embassy celebrating the anniversary of the start of the Castro revolution.
