Israel Holds Onto Control Of Suez Road

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS - Israel is refusing to turn over to the U.N. peacekeeping force full control of the highway to the town of Suez and the Egyptian 3rd Army across the Suez Canal until Egypt fixes a prisoner of war exchange, a high-ranking Israeli official reported today.

The official said Finnish U.N. soldiers set up a roadblock on the Cairo-Suez highway outside Suez Monday evening, but Israeli soldiers took it down, and he said they would set up a checkpoint of their own nearby.

Today's Thought

Psalm 86:7 of trouble I will upon thee.
 "In the day of trouble I will upon thee."
 The psalm describes what goes on in the quiet hours as men and women drop into an open church for a time of meditation as the world presses in upon them and they need their faith strengthened. In God's presence they find it. In every place of worship are memorial, carvings, windows testifying to man's need, all carefully enshrined in the very place where the answers to that need were found.

Town Skydivers Win 8 Of 15 Jumping Awards

Members of Connecticut Parachutists Inc. (CPI), a Manchester-based sport parachuting club, took half of the awards in an invitational parachute meet at Ellington Airport Sunday. The local skydivers took eight of the 15 honors in Sunday's meet, in which 64 jumpers competed in five events. The meet, held only on Sunday because of bad weather Saturday, involved members of CPI, the Ottawa (Canada) Parachute Association, the Monroe (Conn.) Skydivers, and the Pioneer Valley Sport Parachute Club of Massachusetts.

About 50 Canadians made a nine-hour trip to Connecticut Friday night to compete in the CPI-sponsored meet. It was the second time the Canadian parachute club came to Connecticut; CPI members have also traveled to Canada twice for parachute meets there. The Sunday meet at Ellington consisted of five events: Expert accuracy jumps, advanced accuracy, intermediate accuracy, novice hit-and-run, and a POPS (Parachutists Over Phorty) "hit-and-rock" competition. The accuracy jumps were all made from an altitude of about 3,000 feet, and the parachutist tries to land on a four-inch plastic disc in the drop zone. In the novice hit-and-run event, jumpers also leave the aircraft at 3,000 feet and aim for the four-inch target, but the competitors are judged on the accuracy of their landing. Public Advocate Not Needed

The idea of a public advocate's office for Connecticut has been voiced in some quarters.
As a concept, the idea is that a special agency would be created to represent citizen interest before regulatory agencies like the Public Utilities Commission and the new Hospital Cost Commission.

Maybe somewhere along the line we got lost and we always thought the PUC existed and the Hospital Cost Commission was created to protect the public interest.
Now it may be that in the case of PUC, this idea hasn't been followed as strictly as it could have been. And it may be that the new Hospital Cost Commission may be more pro-hospital than pro-citizen.

But the problem is not going to be solved by creating another agency.
We would suggest that if the criticism of certain regulatory agencies that they are not being truly concerned about the public interest is valid; the problem should be corrected at the point.

After all government, and this includes appointive and administrative agencies, is supposed to be conducted in the public interest. If it is not, or if some portion of the government is "captive" of a special interest group, then we need more than the creation of a public advocate to combat it. We need a housecleaning.

We think the public advocate concept is just as susceptible to "captive" as any of the agencies it would be charged in dealing with. Instead of arriving at decisions quickly in the public interest, and at the same time being fair to those subject to government regulatory agencies, we could be opening a can of worms which would prolong litigation and cause unwarranted hardships on our citizens.

We admit it is politically popular to support lower utility rates and make a concerted effort to hold the lid on hospital costs. These are pocketbook items that affect everyone of us.
But in regulating rates, for example, the state has a responsibility, not only to restrict unjustified increases but to insure a rate structure which will maintain a reasonable quality level of service.

Too often in assessing PUC actions we see only the dollar sign. There is evidence to indicate nationally that much of the current energy crisis, for example, can be related to over regulation and white rate costs were kept down, all signs now indicate the times is at hand when costs will go up or we will go without.

Just as any business can price itself out of business; so can we regulate certain essential services out of business.

No, a consumer advocate is not needed at this time.
What is needed are less politics and some hard economic decisions which strike a balance between maintaining an acceptable quality of service at a reasonable cost and at a reasonable profit.

This can be done within the framework of existing laws.

Not Getting The Message

We noticed, and the state police have confirmed, that during the past weekend, at least, motorists have all but ignored the pleas of President Richard Nixon and Gov. Thomas Meskill to slow to 50 miles per hour.

both indicating that the so-called energy crisis message has not reached the men and women on the road.

But we are in an awkward position to moralize on this because how can we ask:

"Is this speed and is this trip necessary?" without asking it of ourselves.

The Nation's Gas Pain

The fiendish scheme of the Arab countries to deprive America of its desperately needed oil had a drastic effect on the Nation's culture and economy.
By the spring of 1974, the Government had no choice but to invoke a complete ban on private automobiles.
The cultural shock to the country—long described as "a nation on wheels"—was staggering. Indeed, a few less stable members of the society failed to survive.
"What I can't stand," screamed a distraught housewife, being dragged across New York's deserted Fifth Avenue to an ambulance by sympathetic attendants, "is this deafening silence!"
And in Los Angeles, the mind of 84-year-old Elbert Quimby snapped when the life-long resident of the downtown area looked out his window one morning and for the first time clearly saw the City Hall 14 blocks away.

But despite the absence of horns, shrieking tires, roaring engines and gas fumes, most Americans managed somehow to make do.
In fact in some families the ban created occasional flashes of elation. "Imagine," said son, Irving, has learned to walk a proud Mrs. Wilbur Wasp told her bridge club. "And he's only 18."

Thus, soft, flabby Americans had no choice but to walk, roller skate or bicycle to get where they were going. In six months they had lost a gross total of one million tons of total gross flab.
Without among their eyes turned white and their lungs clear. Without vinyl roofs overhead, their skins bronzed. Without cars as status symbols, it was difficult to tell rich from poor and a new democratic spirit swept the land. And in the quiet streets, the art of conversation flourished once again.

Parking lots were turned into parks, parking garages into bowling alleys. And by simply adding white lines, fences and nets, the Pasadena Freeway was converted into 21,842 tennis courts—thus assuring local residents an average wait of only 17 minutes in order to play.
Of course, the effects of the ban on the economy were enormous. Detroit converted to bicycle production, but owners of auto repair shops went bankrupt, which won them the sympathy of their immediate families—if no one else.

On the other hand, every former motorist saved a good $100 a month on car upkeep. And Government save billions on highway repairs and construction, making for tax cuts.
With this giant leap in personal disposable income, the economy boomed.
"So America almost overnight became the land its Founding Fathers had dreamed of—a nation of lean, muscular, alert, narrow-eyed, prosperous, democratic citizens.
The lesson was't lost on the Masterminds of the Kremlin, no fools they. Following Moscow's 324th unstarlike traffic jam and 61st smog alert, they called in the Arab leaders.
"You want more desperately needed oil?" asked the Arab negotiator.
"No," said the Masterminds, "we want you to take what we're getting and sell it to the Americans."
In six months, America returned to normal.

WASHINGTON — Pollster Louis Harris had some ghastly news the other day for Republican members of Congress running for reelection next year. Harris reported that his latest survey showed Democratic candidates with a 53 to 31 per cent lead over Republicans in the contests for House seats.
The margin was the biggest since Harris Poll was recorded in a decade. Meanwhile, other polls have shown President Nixon's popularity at a new low.
All this has a significance beyond the 1974 elections. The accuracy of public opinion polls and the effects of the Watergate scandal are being questioned. It is being said that the Watergate scandal may be safe to vote for Richard Nixon's impeachment, now the subject by the House Judiciary Committee.

At any rate, the House should go forward with its preparation for impeachment proceedings. At this stage, no other action can clear the air. In fact, in no other way can Richard Nixon be held accountable for his actions. True, there is the favor of disgrace to impeachment proceedings. After Andrew Johnson, Nixon would be only the second President made subject to Congressional indictment. But the alternative is to condemn him to three years of purgatory.

Regicide

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The killing of the kings in the sacred grove in Frazier's classic of anthropology, "The Golden Bough," is well known. Yet it has remained for Page Smith, an American history professor in California, in a Los Angeles Times piece, to set down one of the few original insights into the tortured business about President Nixon.

There he is—administration head, chief if not sole agent of foreign policy, commander-in-chief of the armed forces, constitutional symbol of American direction and purpose—and at the same time, the House Judiciary Committee is weighing whether to remove ahead with impeachment. And Stuart monarchs, and who had written their great works—the Declaration, the Federalist Papers—as a manifesto against the chance of tyrants. They had also been nourished in their youth on the whole literature of Greek and Roman tyrannicide.

In a constitutional republic, to keep from actual killings, provision was made for the ritual of dismissing an erring President. This has never happened, although the Senate missed doing it by a single vote in the case of President Andrew Johnson.
The British had a far more bitter experience with getting rid of a President as the king, Charles. Since they couldn't brook being frustrated, yet had a passion for the constitutional niceties, they ended by executing the King in the name of the King.

Perhaps that was why President Nixon fired former prosecutor Cox. It must have seemed an absurd contradiction to him that the man who held whose early leaders had grown up on English heroes, who had fought to check the Tudor and Stuart monarchs, and who had written their great works—the Declaration, the Federalist Papers—as a manifesto against the chance of tyrants. They had also been nourished in their youth on the whole literature of Greek and Roman tyrannicide.

The right to slay the king constitutionally, if need be, is important in a republic which revolved against a British king, who was a monarchial republic, an imperial democracy. We cannot get rid of a President as the king, Charles. Since they couldn't brook being frustrated, yet had a passion for the constitutional niceties, they ended by executing the King in the name of the King.

Well, politics is often a crude, dog-eat-dog business. It is characterized by an endless search for the safe position. If the Republican who votes to impeach his chief is accused of disloyalty, he can strike an unambiguously heroic stance and claim that he is faithful to the higher loyalty due the will of the people—as reflected in the public opinion polls. Besides, his own neck is at stake.
At any rate, the House should go forward with its preparation for impeachment proceedings. At this stage, no other action can clear the air. In fact, in no other way can Richard Nixon be held accountable for his actions. True, there is the favor of disgrace to impeachment proceedings. After Andrew Johnson, Nixon would be only the second President made subject to Congressional indictment. But the alternative is to condemn him to three years of purgatory.

of Consumer Concern

Connecticut Department of Consumer Protection
Barbara B. Dunn
Terry Higgins, Director of Consumer Education

Good housekeeping and teaching the proper use of toys are just as important as wise toy selection. Playthings carelessly dropped can be tripping hazards to youngsters and grownups alike. Stepped on and broken, the toys become more hazardous.

Toys should be friends, bringing delight, learning, discovery. But outside their "proper place," they can be something else again! Hot line operators will take names and addresses of interested consumers and send brochures and leaflets on toy and crib safety. If a consumer has a question about toys or cribs, a commission staff member knowledgeable about the subject will return the call. Our department is offering free single copies of the "Banned Product List" (mostly toys) and our booklet, "What You Should Know About Toys." For copies write: Drug Control Division, Department of Consumer Protection, State Office Building, Hartford, 06115.

Are all toys dangerous? Not at all! But proper supervision is always necessary. Check toys periodically for the development of potential hazards such as sharp points, jagged edges, and loose small parts. Don't leave indoor toys outdoors overnight. Moisture may cause damage.

Check outdoor toys and games periodically for potential hazards. Remember, rusting leads to structural weakening of components. Toy chests can be dangerous if they are not made correctly. Whether bought or homemade, toy chests should have adequate ventilation, no automatic locking devices, and a cover that can be easily opened from the inside. A child enjoys climbing into an empty toy chest. Be sure that the chest is structured so it is just as easy for him to get out as it is for him to get in.

Electrical toys present a special problem in teaching proper usage. Children should be taught the proper way to connect electrical toys by holding onto the rubberized plug, rather than by tugging on the cord itself.

Connecticut consumers now have an extra, fast, and free access to toy safety and crib information via the Consumer Product Safety Commission's new product safety information line.

Who's Little Dog Are You?

Our children wanted a dog so much they promised to take over the complete responsibility.

"If you'll get us a dog you won't have to do one single thing," promised Kate.

"We'll feed it. Water it. Walk it and LOVE it," assured Sara.

"We'll have it trained in no time," said Tom confidently.

"And, when it has to be cleaned up after," added John with the face of a man making the ultimate sacrifice, "we'll do THAT too!"

Now my husband and I are not easy-marks, but how can parents resist an appeal like that?

So we bought a puppy, a little black squirming bundle of licks and wiggles and we named her Ebony. When our neighbor saw the new puppy she shook her head at me and cried, "You'll be sorry!"

"Sorry?" I questioned. "The only thing I'm sorry about is that I never get a chance to pat Ebony."

And it was true. The children completely monopolized their new puppy. They hugged her, cuddled her and brushed her so often I feared that her coat would get thin.

They were exemplary parents. They read the dog care manual and followed it meticulously. Ebony wanted for nothing. She was given her food and vitamins right on schedule and her water dish was kept full of crystal clear water. If Ebony so much as LOOKED in the direction of the back door, one of the children took her outside and said "Good dog. Good dog" until she was.

When my husband watched the children playing with their new puppy his face got all soft and sentimental, "getting that puppy was the smartest thing we ever did," he said.

About a week after Ebony arrived, I was aware of some subtle changes. For example, Ebony seemed to be paying attention to ME. She was always under my feet and when she was hungry it was me she looked at with her big soulful brown eyes.

One day I found her water dish empty. Another day the children "forgot" her vitamins. The full significance of what was happening didn't hit me till yesterday.

I came home to find that Ebony had chewed up a foam rubber pillow and spread her "chewings" all over the floor. The children were in the dog watching a football game.

"Look," I cried stomping into the den waving the remains of the pillow before me. "While you've been in here glued to that television set, YOUR puppy has been eating everything in sight."

"Help me with Ebony!" I repeated sharply and emphatically.

No one moved. Not an eye shifted from the television screen. It was as though there was nobody there...but Ebony and me.

Salvation Army Plans One-Day Seminar

The Salvation Army Corps will conduct a one-day seminar Saturday at the Citadel on Main St. to explain the question "What is the Salvation Army?"

The seminar will strive to explain this part of the Christian church which flies its own flag to the needy, and holds ordered religious worship in the great cities of the world. The tambourine, open air service, a nurse attending a leprosy arm on the banks of an Indian river, a mass Salvationist Rally in London with Queen Elizabeth in attendance are among the facts to be discussed.

Commissioner Edward Carey will be one of the guest speakers at the seminar which begins at 9:30 a.m.

Commissioner Carey was a member of the Salvationist Boy Scout Troop in Cleveland, Ohio in 1924, and later became the international secretary for the Salvation Army based in London from 1964-1968. Prior to his recent retirement from active service, he was the national commander for the United States. Educated in Cleveland and Schenectady, N.Y. school systems he received his B.S. degree from cum laude from Columbia University in New York City. He was later awarded an honorary doctorate for his service to humanity from the same university.

Other speakers for the seminar will come from various departments of Salvation Army Service. The public is invited.

Tickets may be purchased from Mrs. Carpenter, 21 Brent Rd. or Mrs. Shaw, 28 S. Hawthorne St., or at the door. All room mothers are requested to make ticket returns by Wednesday. Publicity posters for the event were made by gifs of grade 6 at Waddell.

Vernon Phone Conduit Being Laid

An $80,000 telephone conduit project is under way on Vernon Ave., Vernon. The project involves the excavation of trenches for 10-inch conduit in the sidewalk portion of the street from a point south of Linden Pl. to South St., a distance of 150 feet. Richard Rose, area manager for Southern New England Telephone Co. (SNETCO), said the work is not expected to cause any major delays to the flow of traffic. The conduit structure will make possible the eventual removal of aerial cable and telephone poles along the route. Telephone cable will be pulled through the conduit to provide for increased telephone growth in the area for years to come, Rose said. The sidewalk will be replaced when the work is completed sometime before the end of the year. Rose said cable is put underground wherever practical. Rose said the underground cable is to represent the company's efforts at beautification and reducing visual pollution. He said it is also protected from the elements, giving longer and more trouble-free service life than aerial cable.

Lagging Productivity Could Bode Problems

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Near the top of the list in the bad news department is the nation's lagging productivity, or the time and cost involved in producing goods and services. When the productivity rate declines, or rises more slowly than usual, it means that upward pressure is exerted on prices. And as everyone knows, the country has had enough of that.

In the year's third quarter, the productivity increase amounted to only 1.7 per cent, compared with a long-term average of about 2.7 per cent.

Stated in another way, unit labor costs are rising. That is, it costs more to produce goods today than it did yesterday. So far this year, in fact, the increase has been 5.9 per cent, double last year's rate.

If improvement doesn't develop soon, the consequences could be a continuation, and conceivably a worsening, of inflation.

At this time of year many Americans sit down with paper and pencil to figure out the tab—that for Christmas gifts and that for Uncle Sam. In each case the payment can be delayed, but not the pain.

The pain of paying taxes is usually considered the more intense, especially by those who feel their burden is outrageous. Any attempt to convince them otherwise is a formidable challenge.

However, a set of figures just released by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development constitutes a challenge to the popular notion. Only seven of the 22 OECD countries, the figures show, have lower tax rates.

Including Social Security or its equivalent, the U.S. total tax revenue as a percentage of Gross National Product was only 27.77 per cent in 1971, compared with 43.99 per cent in Denmark, the most heavily taxed country.

The tab was only slightly lower in The Netherlands, at 42.30 per cent, in Sweden at 41.8, and in Norway at 41.53 per cent. Austria, the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, Finland, Germany and Luxembourg ranged between 34 and 37 per cent.

Canada's bite was 32.26 per cent, Ireland's 31.54 and Italy's 30.92.

Only Australia, Greece, Switzerland, Turkey, Portugal, Japan and Spain reported rates lower than the United States. The latter two had percentages of 20.06 and 20.02, respectively.

David Has Good Reason To be a Doctor

WALLINGFORD (AP)—Five-year-old David Camp has a good reason for wanting to be a doctor.

When he was six months old he made medical history as the first victim of a death-carrying blood defect to be saved by a transplant operation.

Today, in perfect health, David already is "practicing" medicine.

"Doctor is in" or "doctor is sleeping" signs convert his bedroom into a doctor's office when the fancy strikes him.

"Of course he's still young," said his father, Francis, a machine-tool operator at the Wallingford Steel Co. "But we'd be delighted if that actually became his choice."

Five years ago the mood around the modest, ranch-style Camp house was much different. It had been apparent shortly after David's birth that he, like 12 males who had died on his mother's side of the family, was a victim of hypogammaglobulinemia, a lack of white blood cells which fight off potentially fatal infections in the body.

David's case was referred to Dr. Robert A. Good, a world renowned immunologist then on the staff of the University of Minnesota Medical School and now director of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City.

Using research developed by Good, physicians in Minneapolis performed the first successful transplant of bone marrow, using David's sister, Dorcas, as the donor.

The operation gave him normal immunity by producing white cells to fight infection.

Since then, 25 marrow transplants on others with the same birth defect have been successful, Good said in a recent telephone interview.

Of the 250,000 infants born each year with some form of the disease, many can be treated with drugs, he said. A David's innocent fascination with medicine has grown with the notability of his case.

The March of Dimes, which financed the research of Good's team with a $750,000 grant, has made two short movies of David.

He also was photographed with Good after his selection for an Albert Lasker medical research award and subsequent operations.

Looking back on those days of doubt in 1968 before the results of the transplant were known, Camp and his wife find difficulty expressing their gratitude to both the March of Dimes and the 52 physicians who had a part in saving David's life.

If it weren't for the March of Dimes, Camp said, "I'd be a poor man."

Camp gives blood regularly, and David insists on going along to watch.

Meanwhile extensive research has been performed on David's four sisters, aged 9 to 17, to learn if they could transmit hypogammaglobulinemia to their offspring. And David is kept under careful scrutiny at home when he becomes ill.

Because David is the oldest survivor of the transplant operation, "we're still on uncharted seas," said Good. "The projection, however, is that he is perfectly well."

PZC Approves Student House

The Planning and Zoning Commission conditionally approved the application of Sterling MacPherson to use his property on Main St. to house 10 students from Mansfield Training School. The condition was that Coventry would not be responsible for the cost of their education.

The State will have to pick up the total cost of sending these children to Talcottville for special classes.

Of the 35 residents that the Mansfield Training School plans to return to the community, only 25 need the special education classes.

Representatives from the Salvation Army and its planner, Mr. Charles Stott, presented a preliminary site plan to the commission for the camp the Army is proposing in North Coventry.

The Army has now secured the deeds to 275 acres. This will be for a camp that would be 2 to 5 years before the new camp would be completely functional. He also felt that the Army would prefer to retain some of its present property so that it would have the use of the lake for sailing and swimming for campers.

Major Donald Sailer stated that it would be 2 to 5 years before the new camp would be completely functional. He also felt that the Army would prefer to retain some of its present property so that it would have the use of the lake for sailing and swimming for campers.

The preliminary plan calls for part of the camp to be wintered and for an indoor swimming pool so that the camp could be used year round.

Major Sailer stated that non-profit groups in town may be able to use the facilities when they were not being used by the Army.

Stott said that he felt in the future the area would have to be declared a permanent wildlife sanctuary to prevent hunters from hunting there. He said that there was very little in the way of wildlife in the area now.

High Court Turns Down Bid To Set Death Penalty Guides

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court has agreed to rule whether political advertisements can be banned from government-run media and has passed up a chance to set guidelines for levying the death penalty.

The high court said Monday it would hear arguments on whether the city of Shaker Heights, Ohio, was within its rights in refusing to post campaign ads by Ohio Rep. Harry J. Lehman in municipally owned transit cars.

Lehman asserts that, once the city made advertising space available on the cars, it was bound by the First Amendment right of free speech to accept such ads.

The city argued successfully before the Ohio Supreme Court that it had a compelling public interest in preventing Lehman from using the transit cars as a free platform for his political or otherwise and therefore the First Amendment did not apply.

In the capital-punishment case, the high court rejected Lehman's comment that a plea by the Onondaga County, N.Y., district attorney that it issue new and more definitive guidelines for the imposition of the death penalty.

The Supreme Court ruled last year that the death penalty was unconstitutional as usually imposed, but the tribunal did not spell out ground rules.

U.S., China Move Toward Closer Ties

TOKYO (AP) — The United States and China moved closer today to full diplomatic relations while pledging that neither nation would try to dominate the world.
In a joint communique following the four-day visit to Peking by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the United States acknowledged that "there is but one China and that Taiwan is part of China."
The communique said scientific, cultural and business exchanges between the two countries will be accelerated. Their liaison offices in Washington and Peking will be gradually upgraded.
A senior U.S. official in Kissinger's party said the "principle of one China," which the Chinese stressed in the document, will be explored through diplomatic channels over the next few months.
Seeking to reassure the Chinese that the Nixon administration's policy of détente with the Soviet Union is not directed at Peking, the United States declared in a declaration opposing efforts by any other country or group of countries "to establish domination in any area."
The United States and the Soviet Union reached a similar agreement during Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev's visit to the United States last spring.
The senior U.S. official described the document as "an attempt to move forward along the road toward normalization."
The liaison offices were opened in the two capitals this year as a result of the mutual pledge after President Nixon's visit to China to "build a bridge" across the Pacific after two decades of hostility.
Kissinger and the Chinese now have agreed to step up the activity by these offices. They may soon be embassies in everything but name.
Taiwan, the home of the Nationalist Chinese government with which the United States still maintains diplomatic relations, remains a "delicate matter," the official said.
In the 1972 communique signed in Peking by Kissinger and Premier Chou En-lai,

Out Of Frying Pan And Into The Fire

JUNE TOMPKINS
(Herald Reporter)
When Mrs. Bertha Chapin retired after 43 years from a supervisory job at Hartford Electric Light Co. last January, she jumped from the frying pan into the fire. Instead of getting a rocking chair to sit in and rock for six months after retirement (as she always said she'd do), she enrolled at Manchester Community College at the suggestion of her sister so she would have something to keep her busy and active.
"It frightened me to think of not having anything to do," she says.
The course she chose was oceanology. In contrast to the previous course which was predicted on the earth's past, this subject deals with life as present, and maybe the future.
"There's so much life in the world, more than I ever dreamed," she says. "It's the web of life."
She has no immediate plans for deep sea diving, but she is planning to go on a dune buggy camping trip of Ireland in June with her sister.
Studying has become a challenge for Mrs. Chapin. It's

End-Of-Week Passage Goal Of Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., pushing for Senate action on the emergency energy bill, says he hopes the legislation will be passed by the weekend.
"Time is of the essence," Jackson said in asking senators to limit their amendments so the legislation can be approved this week.
"Every day we delay in settling the matter, the greater the shortfall," said Jackson, chairman of the Interior Committee.
Jackson commented as the Senate Public Works Committee planned a closed meeting for today to consider amending the Clean Air Act to authorize the president to waive emissions standards designed to protect public health and safety. The amendment would allow the president to place in reserve leases held by oil companies in California's Santa Barbara Channel.
A moratorium on development of the oil leases has been in effect since the massive 1969 oil spill, which caused extensive environmental damage to the Santa Barbara area.
In addition to rationing, the Jackson bill would lead to such energy-saving steps as reduced speed limits, lower thermostats and shorter school and business hours. In an effort to increase fuel supplies, the measure would allow the President to tap naval petroleum reserves for emergency energy bill could cut fuel consumption by 25 percent within four weeks of enactment.
The Senate vote of 80 to 5 sent the pipeline measure to President Nixon.
Among other things, the Jackson bill would direct President Nixon to implement rationing programs for scarce fuels, including gasoline and home heating oil.
Before the debate on the measure, the Senate was expected to pass and send to the White House a bill that would require mandatory allocation of all fuel products from crude oil to gasoline. Designed to ensure that all sections of the country share the burden of fuel shortages equally, the bill passed the House Tuesday by an overwhelming margin.
The Senate could also vote today on legislation mandating year-round daylight saving time, according to Commerce Chairman Warren C. Magnuson, D-Wash. Both Senate and House Commerce Committees approved such legislation Tuesday.

Speed Limit Asked

HARTFORD (AP) — Less than a week after urging motorists to curb their speed to conserve energy, Gov. Thomas J. Meskill said today he would ask the Connecticut Traffic Commission to set a maximum 50-mile-an-hour speed limit throughout the state.
The commission is scheduled to meet next Tuesday.
Meskill previously said the commission didn't have the authority to limit speeds simply to conserve energy. He said it could limit speeds only when safety factors were involved.
Meskill said such safety factors now existed because some people were complying with his request to slow down while others were not.
The governor said he had received several complaints about noncomplying motorists who lagged and recklessly passed those who were observing the voluntary 50 m.p.h. limit.
Meskill also said he would reconsider calling the legislature into special session to deal with the energy crisis. He said, however, that such action wouldn't come until after Congress had acted on President Nixon's requests for emergency authority to deal with the problem.

Scrap Wood Section Created
Due to the energy crisis and at the suggestion of the Manchester Conservation Commission, the Town of Manchester has set aside a section of the landfill for scrap lumber which residents may take for burning in their fireplaces.
The landfill, located on Land Fill Way just past Thrall Rd., is open daily except Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Area builders who would like to donate scrap lumber are requested to bring it to the landfill for use of the general public. Residents may also bring their newspapers and glass to the landfill for recycling.
However, technical service

Downtown Angle Parking To Be Restored

Plans for the restoration of angle parking must be approved by the State Traffic Commission but transportation officials said this morning it should present no problem. The commission is set to meet next Tuesday but there were indications that a special session may be called before.
It is estimated that the changeover may require about four or five days. Technical personnel from the state will begin meeting with Town of Manchester officials Friday so the possibility is that angle parking will be restored shortly after Thanksgiving.
In the Chamber delegation this morning were Robert Weiss, town manager; William Sleith, chairman of the Mayor's Downtown Action Committee; and representing the Chamber, Richard Clark, executive vice president; Everett Lavery and Burl Lyons, Chamber vice presidents; Irving Bayner and Robert Weinberg.

Education Board Acts To Cut Gasoline Costs
JUNE TOMPKINS
(Herald Reporter)
The Board of Education Tuesday night passed on a resolution to save the board $21,000 on gasoline cost.
The savings constitutes the fourteen cents state and federal tax on gasoline passed in legislation last August. Wilson E. Deakin Jr., assistant superintendent for administration, explained to the board that, in the past, the bus contractor provided the fuel for the buses and secured gas at a private station. He said the law requires the Board of Education purchase the gas and not a private contractor — if the board is to save the fourteen cents.
Since the Board of Education uses approximately 150,000 gallons annually of gasoline in its buses, this consumption when multiplied by 14 cents per gallon will realize a substantial savings to the board.
No gas supplier responded to the board's bid as they were not adding any new customers because of the fuel shortage.
Through the efforts of Raymond Demers, school business manager, the Chevron Co. through a Portland dealer, the Red Wing Oil Co. Inc. agreed to supply the board's gasoline needs. Elmer Thrall, bus contractor, has agreed to share the cost of fuel storage facilities with the board. The cost to the board for this increased service will be $9,500 and the cost to the

Princess Anne Marries Commoner
LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne, the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, married a commoner cavalry captain today in a televised spectacle that gave Britons a brief respite from economic crisis and threats of an oil shortage.
Anne, 29, became the bride of Capt. Mark Phillips, 25-year-old son of a wealthy food company executive. The queen did not give her a new non-royal title, at his request, and her daughter became "The Princess Anne, Mrs. Mark Phillips."
Anne still is fourth in line for the throne, but with three healthy brothers she's not likely ever to occupy it.
Fifteen hundred guests jammed into Westminster Abbey for the ceremony, and more than 50 million persons around the world were expected to tune in to the live telecasts. British schoolchildren were given a holiday, and cheering crowds watched the royal family drive to the Abbey in state coaches — the queen with Prince Charles, her eldest son, and Anne with her father, Prince Philip, in a glass coach. contractor will be $1,500. Superintendent of Schools James P. Kennedy updated the board on the energy crisis that schools now operate daily at a temperature of 68 degrees. At first, after the energy crisis had been declared, the school thermostats were turned back to only 66 degrees at night, but after consultation with Ted Fairbanks, buildings and grounds supervisor, and heating engineers, it has been decided to maintain night temperatures at 62 degrees. Kennedy said service engineers will calibrate all thermostats as some have been found to be faulty.
School principals have been asked by Kennedy to stress with their teachers and students the need of electricity conservation in school and at home.
Kennedy reported any recommendations of fuel cut-back would be on a state or regional basis rather than from the local Board of Education. The No. 2 grade fuel oil which is used for home heating is the prime fuel used in most of the schools. This is the area in which there is greatest concern, Kennedy said, and may be the area which is hit first. Barring severe cold spells, there should be an adequate supply of the No. 4 and 6 grade fuels which are the heavier grades of oil, said Kennedy.
The cost of No. 2 grade oil has increased 30 percent, and Nos. 4 and 6 grade oil have increased 25 percent, said Kennedy.
