The Norman Brief, by Clive Kington. (Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, $6.95)
World War II lacks the historical patina of the Civil War but despite its newcomer status it is approaching the attractiveness of writers and historians.

Landmarks of the Revolution, by Mark M. Boatner III. (Stackpole, $10). Here is an incomparable picture story of the American Revolution, a detailed description of the actual places where the battles were planned and fought...

The Tower, by Richard Martin Stern. (McKay, $7.95). The World's tallest building goes up in flames in this story of its dedication and many of the city's leading figures are trapped in its tower...

The Plundered Past, by Karl Meyer. (Atheneum, $12.95). The voracious appetite of museums, private collectors and dealers for great art has resulted in the pillage of archaeological sites, thefts from museums, private collections and churches...

Alexander Woolcott, by Edwin P. Hoyt. (Chilton, $6.95). Detractors can point out that Woolcott's writings proved as durable as yesterday's newspaper copy, and his personality, a creation of willful, indulgent pre-World War II society, seems more appalling than appealing now...

Unemployment In Perspective

With the growing concern in Connecticut and elsewhere about unemployment that is occurring and anticipated from the energy crisis, it is interesting to comment on a recent Wall Street Journal story which helps put the nation's unemployment statistics in a perspective often ignored.

The article, while stating there may be little solace in the figures for the person who has been laid off or is unable to get his first job, points out the unemployment rolls are a bit deceptive.

First, that magic 5 per cent level of unemployment is less alarming than it appears because it does not reflect the hirings that take place.

The national labor work force has grown from 78.6 million in 1970 to 85.3 million in January of this year. A significant point is the increase of 3 million jobs since January 1973. Also of interest in the January 1974 figure is the fact that 678,000 more people are at work than when the Arab oil embargo began.

The thesis of the article is that we should keep in mind, as we read about job layoffs and unemployment, that it is in relation to an extremely high level of employment.

Since many forecast a recession, the article also notes that the decline in employment during five slowdowns in the past 25 years was 2 per cent in 1948-49, 3 per cent in 1953-54 and 1957-58, and less than 1 per cent in 1960-61 and 1969-70. While the impact is great to the man who loses his job, statistics show that recessions have not had a catastrophic effect on employment.

Another factor to keep in mind when evaluating unemployment is that the total figure, when broken down, gives a different perspective too.

According to the latest seasonally adjusted estimate of 4.7 million people unemployed; 2,068,000 had lost their last job; 731,000 had left their jobs for various reasons; 1,252,000 had re-entered the job market and 682,000 had never worked before.

Therefore we should keep in mind that the total number of people seeking jobs can be substantially above the number who have actually lost their jobs.

We agree unemployment is a continuing problem in our industrial society. In Manchester we have the impact of the Iona closing.

But when we assess unemployment statistics, we should not panic due to overall numbers. The federal statistics cited by the writer seem to bear out that American business and industry is doing a better than average job of maintaining high employment, creating new jobs and overall is in a fairly strong position to keep at a low level, recession-caused job cuts, as it has in the past five economic downturns.

While this doesn't mean we can ignore those who have lost their jobs, or who are seeking gainful employment, it indicates that perhaps the biggest asset we have is a free economy able to adapt and adjust to changing conditions without major disruption of the overall economy.

To us it indicates that despite some weak spots, the overall economy of the country is strong and flexible enough to weather out the energy crisis, if given a chance.

There Are Other Issues

In the wake of Democratic victories in elections to the House in scattered parts of the country, the issue has become Watergate.

The issue is perhaps inescapable but if the pattern continues, and in the campaigning recently for other House vacancies it appears it will, we should be concerned.

Not that Watergate and all its implications are not a bona fide issue but because there are so many other issues facing the nation and the Congress.

We have become too hung up on Watergate and we fear that in drifting toward making it the paramount issue in House elections we may wind up short-changing the nation.

We are well aware that politicians feel it is important to win and that, with the exception of the Watergate-type of tactics, all is fair in love, war and politics.

But we are concerned with the effort of prominent Democrats of national stature hitting the hustings on behalf of candidates and making Watergate the major issue.

The full impact of this effort could distort the coming congressional campaign when we will vote on a new House and one-third of the Senate. We know Watergate will be a factor

Can Court Rewrite Constitution?

WASHINGTON — What would happen if a minority group student were refused admission to a state university law school although he had a better academic record than 38 of the 44 white applicants who were accepted?

You guessed it, baby. The university campus would be besieged and probably seized by civil rights advocates, and extra guards would be placed around the White House. The university president would skip town under cover of darkness and a few days later would announce he had been granted asylum in Yugoslavia.

To now the Supreme Court is considering the case of one Marco DePuis, white, who was twice denied admission to the University of Washington Law School although he had a better academic record than 38 of the 44 minority group students who were accepted.

The reason: Washington U's Law School has an "affirmative action" program (wouldn't you know it'd be called that?) designed to promote qualified applicants from racial minorities.

Yet, in a case that reeks of reverse racism there has been no audible protest from the professional civil rightsists who jump up and down and scream at the slightest suggestion that a black is being mistreated. Indeed, Washington State's attorney general is in charge of the university's defense, the premise being that a state has a duty to furnish legal talent for minorities.

His salary, of course, is paid by the state's taxpayers.

DePuis' lawyer, Josef Diamond, wrapped it up rather neatly, "If he (DePuis) had been black, he would have been in." Diamond told the Court. "He was kept out because he was white."

It is difficult, if not impossible, to disagree with Diamond's argument. Presumably, the 14th Amendment and varied civil rights laws apply to all Americans — including whites. If that Amendment and those laws have not been violated by the law school's rejection of DePuis, then I am Alice B.

Toklas and the English language must be proclaimed obsolete.

State Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton offered what must be entered in the annual whoopee for a member of the legal dodge. Gorton said DePuis was only "marginally qualified," and that his marks were below those of numerous white applicants who also were turned down.

One never is sure what a lawyer means, of course, but Webster's is at my elbow, and it certainly seems as if Gorton was saying DePuis had no case because he was not the only white applicant with higher marks than some minority group students, who were told to get lost. Ergo, racism is constitutional if more than one individual is discriminated against. Crazy.

I fear I was also underwhelmed by a question raised by Justice Lewis F. Powell, ordinarily a sensible fellow. Powell asked whether race could not be considered, along with other factors in addition to raw scores, by admissions committees armed with broad discretion.

Well, I suppose race could be considered, but what would Mr. Justice Powell say if a state university, in any state, had decided it preferred whites in its law school? Something trenchant, no doubt. Good night, nurse. Even Justice William O. Douglas, who has been championing minority rights for three decades, would not seem to feel a need to overcome the effects of past discrimination by substituting another form thereof.

Today's Thought

God's goodness and mercy follows me wherever I go. But when I go leaving my footprints, do I leave the ways of goodness and mercy?

Joseph F. Kennedy Foundation approves grant of $5,000 for summer day camp for retarded children in Manchester.

Town Planning Commission appoints Joseph Tamsky, graduate city planner, to fill post of planning director.

The other day we received an opportunity available only to a few: at least that is what the literature said.

It all sounds pretty good but what the company wants is your biography for listing in a book. Then, we suppose, they will try to sell you a book. The ultimate result is that you get on nearly every mailing list and are available for all those fabulous offers ranging from investment plans to housewares.

Our creditors know our background and they are the only ones who need the information.

We would appreciate more lead time on letters to the Open Forum. Two days prior to yesterday's Democratic District 9 Primary, we received three letters, all of which dealt with town personalities. If we would have published the letters there would have been no time to reply prior to the primary.

The date of the primary had been set for some time. Why the last-minute letters?

Estimating the size of a crowd is difficult. There was one report that 1,500 attended the Democratic dinner in Hartford, another report said 1,800, and some folks we talked to said there were more than 2,000.

The best crowd estimator we ever knew was Winfield Welch, one time traveling secretary for the Harlem Globetrotters, since the Trotters generally receive 50 to 90 per cent of each ticket sold.

At the opening tip off of one performance, we recall he looked around the field house that seats 7,000 fans and estimated the crowd to be 6,175. The final recap showed he had over estimated by 35 fans. He smiled, "As long as I am within 100 any way, I don't call for a ticket accounting."

We understand the Republicans want $250 a seat to hear California Gov. Ronald Reagan. You can watch him on the late, late show from time to time for a lot less.

Gov. Reagan is a personable fellow. We met him at a regional governor's conference. During the conference, the responsibility of the highway patrol of that state was to chauffeur the governors anywhere they wanted to go.

One afternoon, the governor left the conference and had the patrolman drive him out to a quiet spot where he could think and view the scenery. For two hours, Reagan sat in the back seat of the car and never uttered a word. Little of us know, or appreciate, the strain that a person in public life endures.

Drawing much comment among the news media these days is the decision made by the wire services and other media in San Francisco who delayed news of the Hearst kidnaping for 12-1/2 hours. The delay was requested by police who feared publicity might jeopardize the girl's life.

Some feel the wire services shouldn't have agreed to withhold news of the kidnaping at all while others believe that a temporary delay in the disclosure was the responsible thing to do.

We believe the girl's safety is the main consideration and the disclosure delay was an expression of a responsible press. We don't think freedom of the press was endangered in any fashion by the delay.

The Herald and all newspapers receive information that is "off the record" or not available for publication. We weigh each information case on its own merits before making a decision. We generally get up light when information is deliberately hidden from us.

Car sales are reportedly setting a new record in Canada where incomes are rising and gasoline is plentiful. Small cars claimed 50 per cent of the Canadian market but sales of standard-size autos dropped only 1 per cent behind their year-ago pace in January in contrast to the down turn in this country.

One business that doesn't seem to be hurting due to the energy crisis is the package store.

We've had reports that business is good as people seemingly are staying home more and entertaining more. As one office cog commented, perhaps they are drinking and trying to forget the energy problems, inflation, and all the other trials and tribulations that face us.

While many people are struggling with the family food budget, the pet dog or cat is living pretty high.

Pet foods and supplies experienced their greatest sales yet last year. Dollars tons of dog and cat foods alone was up an annual rate of 15 per cent for the last five years, according to Progressive Grocer. Shelf space in a great many stores is being expanded to meet the demand.

One of the wire services showed excellent judgment awhile back.

It seems the British Health Education Council has a new anti-smoking campaign and has come up with a poster of a nude pregnant woman. The photo was transmitted by private circuit to New York but the wire service refused to put it out on the general network.

We attended our first X-rated movie the other night and it will probably be our last. It was worse than we had even imagined.

Though the film is an award winner, the story plot was terrible, the acting superb, but the language beyond anything we had ever expected.

We couldn't count more than four or five people in the audience who were past the age of 30. Most of the audience appeared to be in the 18-21 age group.

You can be certain that higher gasoline prices are in the offing.

One operator told us he has been notified by his company that his next tank of gasoline, around mid-March, will be increased seven cents per gallon.

Hinchliff Asks Public's Advice On School Plan

NANCY DRINKUTH Correspondent 228-3970 More than 50 people attended a public hearing to discuss proposed amendments to the regulations for recreational facilities held by the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night.

Getting up in the world is no easy matter, even with the aid of a "quadricycle." It requires some expert balancing. Chris Walker, top, and John Harris, both of Valparaiso, Fla. try out their creation, which could be the ideal vehicle for an elope-ment.

Two Variances Granted by ZBA

NANCY DRINKUTH Correspondent Tel. 228-3970 The Zoning Board of Appeals has granted two variances and tabled a third request which were subjects of a public hearing last Wednesday.

Zullo Urges Discussion Of Specifics

BRIDGEPORT (UPI)—Democratic gubernatorial hopefuls have been missing the boat by failing to get down to specifics in their attacks against Gov. Thomas J. Meskill, says Frank N. Zullo.

Revised Rec Zoning Draws Comment

NANCY DRINKUTH Correspondent 228-3970 The need for the change was seen when considering the Lions Club's Hebron Harvest Fair held every fall on the club's recreational property.

Killian Endorsed

HARTFORD (UPI)—The Teamsters Business Association of Local 871 has endorsed the Democratic gubernatorial candidacy of Attorney General Robert K. Killian.

It was suggested that perhaps the number of campsites allowed in any recreational facility should be based upon the amount of acreage involved.

Increased Fee Finally, the newly proposed regulations outline the procedure for approval of a recreational facility before the Zoning Board of Appeals and raise the cost of the permit from $25 to $50 per year.

Number of Campsites Members of the Odd Fellows organization who own about 100 acres of recreational land in Hebron were concerned about the proposed change in the regulations limiting the number of campsites from 50 to 25.

Gasoline Tax Cut Bill Introduced

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Two congressmen have introduced legislation to give a $1.5 billion tax break to the gas buying public by reducing the federal gasoline tax.

They said the bill was offered to partially offset recent increases in gasoline prices. "The American people must have some relief from the rising cost of living, especially as it relates to the cost of gasoline which most people can't afford even if they could get it," the congressmen said.

Welfare Living Costs Studied

HARTFORD (UPI) — Changes in welfare benefits will depend on what Connecticut legislators can learn about how far a welfare recipient's money goes these days, says a leading legislator. "We're waiting for detailed studies on rents and utility costs, which we're supposed to get this week," said Sen. Samuel B. HELLIER, R-Stratford, co-chairman of the legislative Corrections, Welfare and Humane Institutions Committee. No major action was scheduled for the weekly full session of the state Senate and House of Representatives today. Legislative business this week, the fourth of the current budget session, has been confined to meetings and public hearings such as the welfare committee.

The committee held a hearing Tuesday on several measures designed to upgrade welfare benefits for Connecticut residents, but HELLIER said lawmakers have to avoid the emotional side of the issue and make changes in a "businesslike manner." "We want to know what kind of buying power the welfare recipient has in terms of both cash and food stamps," HELLIER said. Adjust Standard

Mass Transit Bond Issue Of $460 Million Proposed

HARTFORD (UPI) — Sen. Lawrence J. DeNARDIS, R-Hamden, has proposed a $460 million mass transit bond issue which he wants placed on the ballot this November. "The time has come for the people of Connecticut to decide directly and personally whether they want state government to undertake the responsibility of a balanced system of mass transportation," DeNARDIS, co-chairman of the legislative Finance Committee, said Tuesday. Under his bill, 13 different capital projects would share in the $460 million authorization over a five-year period. Gov. Thomas J. Meskill has asked the legislature for $100 million in bond

Gas Crisis Cuts Down Accidents

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut's traffic accidents and highway fatalities have lessened and one state safety official thanks the energy crisis. "There's no question about that," William ADINT, executive director of the Public Safety Commission, said Tuesday. Motor Vehicles Department officials are more cautious about attributing the decline in accidents directly to the gasoline shortage. A department spokesman, Joel HARGRAVES, said there were "a number of things happening, it's hard right now to pick out one variable."

Auto Insurance Rate Controls To be Requested

HARTFORD (UPI) — Insurance Commissioner Thomas C. White is seeking power for his department to approve or disapprove private passenger automobile insurance rates. White will ask the legislature's Insurance and Real Estate Committee Thursday to support him in a quest for powers he says the public assumes his department already has. He told UPI Tuesday he is powerless to deny the Insurance Company of North America a physical damage rate increase of about 10.3 per cent recently, although "if there was any reasonable way I could have made that increase ineffective, I would have done so."

The Athletic Fund Was the Winner

Youth battled age Saturday in Coventry when the Coventry High School varsity team played an Over Forty team in a charity game. The young men were very charitable. They allowed 35 points for the opponents against their 58. As a result of the game the high school athletic fund is $200 richer. Here the competitors are Bryan Wipple, 17, and Joe Locke Sr., 51 — ages, not jersey numbers. Wipple is 9 feet 3 inches tall when his feet are on the floor and Locke is 6 feet tall. His feet do not leave the floor often. Three of the high schoolers were playing against their fathers. They are John Kissane, Brian Carlson and Paul Edmonson.

Charter Change Suggested For Cemetery Operations

VERNON

BARBARA RICHMOND

A suggestion to amend the town charter so the Grove Hill Cemetery Association in Rockville can operate within it without changing its procedures, and a recommendation that the town purchase additional land for the cemetery, were made at the Town Council Monday night.

The recommendations were made by a subcommittee appointed by Mayor Frank McCol and made up of Councilmen Morgan Campbell, Thomas Wolf, and James McCarthy.

The association does not function as a town department and this has been the procedure since long before the town had a charter.

The charter, which came into effect about nine years ago when the town government were consolidated, provides that all fees due the town be paid to the town treasurer. The auditor for the town pointed out that fees are collected directly by the association and to pay the expenses of operating the cemetery.

The committee said it feels the present method of operating the cemetery is highly efficient and results in satisfaction to the public and in low operating costs to the town.

The association employs non-union help and the committee fears if the operation was to become a town department or part of the Public Works Department, the help might be unionized.

Using 1972 operating figures, the committee said salaries for the association totaled $33,146. The operating budget totaled $34,063 of which the town contributed only $8,000. The other income came from invested funds ($33,569), lot sales, lot care, and interment payments.

The committee further said it feels the present method of operation creates a high level of incentive for all personnel to do an outstanding job for the people of the town.

During the course of its investigations the committee said that there are other "decentralized" funds in operation in the town and the auditor is being asked to check on these and report back to the May meeting of the council.

Town Attorney Abbott Schochet said there are two possible ways the charter can be amended, either by ordinance or by referendum vote.

In recommending that the charter be amended, the committee also suggested that the

Vernon—Killian Hits at Fuel Status

BARBARA RICHMOND

Although Atty. Gen. Robert Killian is campaigning for the Democratic nomination for governor, that was not the hat he wore when he spoke to the Greater Rockville Board of Realtors Tuesday noon.

His topic was his pet peeve, "The Energy Crisis." He said his life is complicated somewhat by the fact that he is a candidate for another office and commented that unfortunately it has come to pass that when a person is seeking office the integrity of what he says is diminished.

He added that he has never parted company with his own integrity or honor.

"The energy situation bears hard on our lives and I think it should be put in perspective as much as it can," Killian said. He said about ten years ago he began reading about the oil companies and what makes them tick and "what I saw interested me and frightened me."

He said he recognizes the fact there has to be some belt tightening but administration oil companies because that factor never affected them — just the consumers — while the oil companies' profits went up.

"There is sufficient gas supply in America today so there doesn't have to be a line anywhere," he commented. He further noted that everything the Federal Energy Office prints is furnished by the American Petroleum Institute and that's why the government hasn't been able to cope with the petroleum situation.

He said there has never been the will and determination to confront the major oil companies. He questioned why it should be that Connecticut and Florida are the only states to bring an anti-trust suit against the oil companies. He said, "The federal government should have done this."

"The prospects are not as grim and bleak as you think," Killian said. He would be because other parts of the country do not want to be held up.

He said, however, he did not think there would be any refinery in Connecticut suitable for a refinery as the state's ports would not take it.

He said what he saw was that we are almost totally dependent upon the combined integrated oil companies for our future.

The attorney general said he went all over this state and all over this country trying to arouse people in and out of government of the fact we were on a slow slide. He said he did not predict just how serious the situation would be.

He repeated what he has said before, that the supply of fuel oil in America today totals almost 50 million barrels ahead of where we were last year at this time. He said nothing could happen that could imperil our safety or comfort for the rest of the year. He added, however, that people won't find this product coming to the marketplace because it would have a depressant effect on the price.

He said, "We are over the hump and have a big, big start on next year with fuel oil.

He added that the gasoline situation is different, noting that we have 221 million barrels in stock, we had 99 million as of July 4 and 222 million on Labor day. He said the stock for distribution is 10 per cent more than we had all summer long.

To another question concerning his stand on a study to regulate and control petroleum products from their source, Killian said he would not be in favor of this other than for the pipeline itself. He said he feels this could be the only process subject to public utility control.

He said he hopes research continues on the depauperation and dematerialization of coal so it can become a major source of energy.

News Commentary Wallace Now Cooperating With Democrats

By George J. Marler

WASHINGTON (UPI)—There was Democratic Executive Committee meeting to make crucial decisions for the 1976 presidential campaign, and there were the Wallace delegates cooperating. It was a new twist for Democrats.

The representatives of Governor George Wallace of Alabama look to the sidelines by their own choice.

That was a new style for the Wallace people, represented at the Washington meeting by old-time political professional Robert Vance, the Alabama State chairman, and Michael Griffin, the young man personally picked by Wallace to represent him in national committee affairs.

What it's all about is that Wallace is now inside the Democratic National Party working to get the presidential nomination in 1976 as he never has before.

New Tactics

In earlier days, when Wallace representatives showed up, they were looked upon by the national Democratic bigwigs as trouble-makers, out to stir the fires of party strife so Wallace could.

Out loose and go his third party way;

Or help scuttie his Democratic opposition.

Not so anymore. The Wallace agents do not want to mix it for trouble's own sake. When a tough vote comes up where there's nothing to gain for the

While the others are just closed. Of the remaining 104 retailers, the study said 20 have filed Federal Energy Office form No. 17, requesting increases in gas allocations.

Callahan said after reviewing the form for retailers he was convinced that it is so complex and the instructions so vague that many of the applications will not be acted upon favorably.

He termed Form No. 17 another "device to put the small, independent operator at a disadvantage, while the large, supplier-owned outlet receives expert help" from district sales representatives.

Callahan said further that many dealers who are now in business expect to close or be forced out within the next few months as a direct result of the federal allocation system.

He said his office would meet weekly with city gas retailers and take steps to prove to the state Energy Emergency Agency that Hartford's retailers are being treated unfairly by the present allocation system.

Service Station Loss Tabulated For Hartford

HARTFORD (UPI)—More than one-third of Hartford's gasoline stations have gone out of business since July 1973, the city's Department of Civil Preparedness reported Tuesday.

Of those 104 remaining in business, a department survey said, they are trying to handle customers on supplies running 20 to 25 per cent below supply levels in 1972.

"Independent service station operators are being forced out by the big suppliers," City Preparedness Director Joseph H. Callahan said.

Even during the energy crisis, Callahan said, the large company-owned stations seem to have inelasticity of supplies along on drastically cut quotas.

The city-wide survey, made at the direction of City Manager Edward M. Curtin Jr., showed that of the 163 stations in Hartford in, or 38 per cent, have gone out of business since July 1973.

The survey said 23 of them no longer have pumps or the buildings have been leveled

Tolland County Superior Court

Vaicunas Enters Not Guilty Plea

Richard Vaicunas, 24, of Windsor Locks, pleaded innocent to charges of injury or risk of injury to a minor and third-degree assault, in Tolland County Superior Court, Tuesday.

Vaicunas was charged on a Stafford Springs girl off on a warrant with pulling a bicycle in Stafford on Sept. 4 and pushing to the ground.

The charged offense occurred the day before Vaicunas was started as an industrial arts teacher at Stafford Springs High School. He was dismissed from the post when he failed to appear on opening day of school, police said.

Vaicunas requested a trial by jury but trial date was not set Tuesday by Judge Joseph F. Danahy.

A Windsor man, charged in November, with second-degree kidnaping was sentenced to five to 10 years by Judge Danahy.

Doar Says Nixon Refused Some Data

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House Judiciary Committee was told today that President Nixon has refused to yield all the evidence sought for his impeachment inquiry.

John M. Doar, special counsel for the committee's impeachment proceedings, reported that Nixon was willing to surrender only material dealing with Watergate but has rejected - at least for the time being - requests for other material, including some White House tapes.

Doar made his report after the committee voted unanimously to insist that it be given a sealed grand jury report on Nixon's handling of the Watergate case.

In advance of Doar's report, some members said they were ready to vote to subpoena the materials sought by the committee staff for its investigations. Doar said Tuesday the committee was looking into 25 separate areas of activity having no relation to Watergate.

Doar said James D. St. Clair, Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, rejected some of the committee's request for material in a letter dated Wednesday.

He said St. Clair made three points: "That 'case against the President' involved Watergate alone."

"That the committee needed no White House evidence other than materials furnished special Watergate prosecutors Leonard Jaworski."

"That he was confident the House panel, after examining the evidence, would exonerate Nixon."

The committee voted to tell Federal Judge John J. Sirica that it needs the sealed report for its inquiry into whether grounds exist for impeaching Nixon.

The President has ordered that a committee White House materials - including tape recordings and written documents - that he gave the Watergate prosecutor's office and also said he was willing to answer both written and oral questions.

President Says He Barred Clemency, 'Hush Money'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Richard M. Nixon today said he barred clemency for the defendants in the Watergate burglary case. His statement in effect contradicted a grand jury which had indicted his former aide, H.R. Haldeman for testifying under oath that he rejected as "wrong" payments of hush money or offers of executive clemency to the original seven Watergate burglary defendants.

"I know what I said, I know what I meant, I know what I did," Nixon told a news conference Wednesday night.

"The President was cool, confident, sometimes sarcastic and at times displayed humor as he submitted to a variety of questions for the second time in 10 days. He touched on the energy crisis, politics, the Midwest, the economy and food prices, though most of the conference dealt with Watergate."

He discussed the meeting last March 21 when he had first learned of the Watergate coverup. He said he recalled Haldeman and former White House counsel John W. Dean at the meeting that "it was wrong, that's for sure."

The grand jury indicted Haldeman for perjury after listening to a tape of the meeting, and Nixon conceded that others listening to the tape or reading a transcript could reach a different conclusion.

"But, Nixon declared: 'I never at any time authorized clemency for the defendants. I never at any time authorized payment of money to any of the defendants.'

"He said he recalled Haldeman and former White House counsel John W. Dean at the meeting that 'it was wrong, that's for sure.'

"The grand jury indicted Haldeman for perjury after listening to a tape of the meeting, and Nixon conceded that others listening to the tape or reading a transcript could reach a different conclusion."

Chamber to Keep in Touch With Events in Legislature

By SOL R. COHEN

"Legislative Insight," the newest program of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, was initiated today with a breakfast meeting at the Manchester Country Club.

Sponsored by the Chamber's newly created Legislative Affairs Council, the kickoff event was attended by about 30 of the area's businessmen. The guest speakers were State Sen. David Odgers, R-4th District; State Rep. Donald Genovesi, R-12th Assembly District; and State Rep. Muriel Yacovone, D-9th Assembly District.

Cliffing the many instances when legislators are "out of touch" with the needs of business and when businessmen are "not of touch" with what the legislators are doing in Hartford and in Washington, George T. LaBonne Jr., the council's chairman, remarked, "The Chamber has become revitalized and is becoming more and more interested in public affairs on a state and national level."

Chamber president Richard G. Hart remarked, "Today is our time of challenge for the survival of our business community and the energy crisis has disclosed our need to play a greater role in legislative matters."

LaBonne said the first decision the council must make is how best to communicate its consensus opinions to state and national legislators. He asked Odgers, Genovesi and Mrs. Yacovone for their suggestions.

Odgers said he considers public hearings "ineffectual" and that they become formal for legislators and lobbyists to project their views.

"Personal contact is the best method," he said. "A person or group expressing an opinion directly to a legislator has to be noticed."

Genovesi agreed. "Direct communication by an individual on a one-to-one basis is extremely important." He said he believes, however, that it might be wise for the Chamber to send out a letter to the

Gas Lines Shorter, Dealers Puzzled

By CONNIE TUTTLE

Gas lines may be shorter, or sometimes not at all, but dealers in the area disagree as to the reasons.

Peter Listro, president of the local affiliate of the Auto Service Council of America and owner of Peter's Cigo at W. Middle Tpk., and Adams St., attributes the shorter lines to a greater supply of gas flowing into the state. Listro said that as independents such as Gas Land reopen, pressure is relieved on company stations since people have more places to buy gasoline.

According to Clyde Conrad, owner of a Shell station on Oakland Rd. in South Windsor, the independents seem to be getting more gas than company stations. Though they (the independents) are forced to charge more since their cost for gas is higher, the public will buy from them simply because of availability.

Though Listro's supply of gas has increased from last month, other dealers are not as fortunate. Conrad's supply has in fact decreased 15 percent from last month, and he can only pump about 150 gallons of gas daily in order to keep a supply on hand from one delivery date to the next.

Gas prices in the area range from 50.7 cents to 67 cents for regular and 54.5 to 70 cents for premium, according to Listro.

Simon Promises More Gasoline

WASHINGTON (UPI) - William E. Simon, federal energy chief, said today that states will get an increase in gasoline supplies this month.

Simon said the national average would be 89 percent of March, 1973, levels. The national average on a state-by-state basis in February was 83 percent of 1973 level.

In a speech to the National Governors conference, preceding announcement by his office of March allocations, Simon said he was considering ending a Sunday-closing order for gasoline stations.

Emergency allocations by the energy office over the past several days had a major impact in reducing long lines at gasoline stations in some metropolitan areas, especially around New York and Washington.

Simon said he had a letter more about allocating gasoline now than we did in February. "When the program was put into effect," the Simon aide said.

Simon has said that the allocation system - much criticized by some members of Congress and other calling for nationwide rationing - would prevent itself and make rationing unnecessary.

President Nixon told a news conference Wednesday night that "the back of the energy crisis has been broken."

Simon previewed the new gasoline allocations for governors at their winter meeting, and an aide of the energy czar echoed his confidence that the system would work increasingly better.

Pair Reports Plan For Hearst Release

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) - Two suspected Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) members, held on murder charges, have drawn up a proposal they say could lead to the safe release of kidnapped Patricia Hearst.

Joseph Ramirez, 27, and Russell Little, 26, demanded that they be allowed to outline the program at a nationally televised "live press conference." They said they would not provide details until granted permission to meet with reporters.

In a letter dated Feb. 27 and broadcast Wednesday night by Berkeley radio station KPFA-FM, they charged that U.S. Attorney General William French Smith and FBI Director Clarence Kelley actually "want Patricia Hearst to die."

"They are desperately trying to discredit the SLA in the eyes of this nation's hungry, oppressed people," the letter said. "We feel it is of the utmost importance to disclose this callous plan to the public in the hopes of averting the deaths of Patricia Hearst, those holding her and ourselves."

"A warning to the FBI: Even you kill us and/or slaughter Patricia Hearst and those holding her we have made provisions to ensure that our suggestions (for her release) will be made public."

"Miss Hearst, a 20-year-old art history major and daughter of San Francisco Examiner Editor and President Randolph A. Hearst, was kidnapped by the SLA Feb. 4 from her apartment near the University of California in Berkeley."

Hearst said Wednesday she hoped to receive another communique from the SLA soon. The last communique, was received 15 days ago, when his daughter said she was in a tape recorded message.

Land Trust Seeks Members

The Manchester Land Conservation Trust, Inc. (MLCT) officially launched its second annual membership drive Wednesday.

Mayor John Thompson was presented with a recently completed brochure describing the MCLT by Dr. Alan Krupp, its publicity and education chairman.

A townwide mailing of the brochure, designed by E. H. Hoyak working with Dr. Krupp and his committee, is illustrated on the front cover with a charcoal sketch of the building at the Oak Grove Nature Center by artist Frank Lefevre. Reproductions of the sketch, 11 by 14 inches, suitable for framing are obtainable at the MCLT office at a nominal cost. They are printed on quality, textured white paper without any advertising message.

The purpose of the brochure is to inform the community of how and why the MCLT was formed, how it functions, and to explain why donating land to it can be beneficial to both the donor and the community.

Memberships are available as follows: Regular $5, life $200 or more, associate non-resident $3, sustaining $25 to $50, and junior (under 18) $2.

The annual meeting of the MCLT has been set for May 9.

Child Taken By Kidnappers

DIX HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) - Three kidnappers abducted the 8-year-old son of a wealthy Dix Hills tire wholesaler as the child was walking home from school Wednesday. The kidnappers later telephoned the boy's family, but a ransom demand was not made, police said.

The abducted child, John Calandria, was lured into a black car, near his home in this Long Island town about 20 miles east of New York City by a woman with two men, who called him by name. A 10-year-old companion who had been walking with John described the incident to police. The 10-year-old boy was not identified.

The kidnappers child is the son of Michael Calandria, 36, a naturalized U.S. citizen from Cuba and co-owner of the Irving Tire Co., one of the biggest wholesale and retail tire outlets on Long Island.
