

Light Agenda for Directors

A comparatively light agenda faces the Manchester Board of Directors for its October meetings (Oct. 1 for conducting public hearings and Oct. 8 for taking action on public hearing items and on new business.)

To be aired Oct. 1 is a repeat request for sanitary sewers on Linwood Dr., at an estimated cost to the abating property owners of about $25,000. The town would finance the construction by temporary notes, to be paid from sewer-assessment income. The original request was rejected Aug. 20 on three tie votes by the directors.

Also to be considered Oct. 1 is a proposed $15,000 allocation from recurring funds — for improving entry and exit at Charter Oak Field.

Scheduled for public hearings the same night are five proposed appropriations to the Open-Space grant for 17.3 acres of Manchester Water Co. land.

A proposed $2.25 million appropriation for purchasing all assets of the water company is also on the agenda.

Approval of a new two-year referendum item for the Nov. 5 voting machines. Town Manager Robert Weiss has hopes are slim for the Open-Space grant. However, he recommended applying for it in the event funds become available.

Consideration of a repeat request from the Manchester Youth Hockey Association — for town funds toward the cost of ice time at the Bolton Ice Palace.

By a 6 to 3 vote on Aug. 20, the directors rejected a request for a $5,000 town contribution.

Appointing a member to the Advisory Board of Health, to fill a vacant term to November 1976.

The board's meetings Oct. 1 and Oct. 8 will be at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building Hearing Room.

At 7 p.m. Oct. 1, the board will meet with the public works director and the water and sewer administrator. They will review and discuss the operational problems at the Sewer Treatment Plant.

Off-Track Betting Board Topic

Manchester's Board of Directors will learn the pros and cons of off-track betting Oct. 8 at 7 p.m. in the Municipal Building Hearing Room. They will be briefed by William Wade, director of the Off-Track Division of the Connecticut Commission on Special Revenue.

Should the board decide there is merit in pursuing the possibility of an off-track betting parlor in Manchester, it would be required to schedule a public hearing on the proposal. The next step would be to place it on its agenda for discussion and vote.

At present, six Connecticut municipalities have authorized the betting parlors — Bridgeport, New Haven, New London, Eastford, Newington and Killingly. The Off-Track Division is striving for 20 branches in the next three years.

The division would supervise the operation and would furnish the cashiers, clerks, maintenance and security. The actual facility would be bought, leased or constructed by the Totalizer Co. of Towson, Md. The company would install all the equipment.

Towns with off-track betting parlors would receive one-quarter of one per cent of the gross handle (amount bet).

Oil Suit
HARTFORD (UPI) — State Attorney General Robert K. Killian says Connecticut's suit against 20 major oil companies may be boosted by a study showing the bidding system of obtaining heating oil for Michigan schools has been upset by the energy crisis. Killian said Tuesday the study will be a valuable contribution to the buildup of our case in investigative record.

In 1832 the state of Iowa was 85 per cent prairie and 15 per cent forest. Today it is seven per cent forest and less than one per cent prairie.

RUNNY NOSES
LINNERS PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Histamine, the substance that causes runny noses, may also be a contributing cause to heart diseases, says Dr. Theodore M. Hollis, a Pennsylvania State University biologist.

Hollis says there may be a connection between the production of histamine and atherosclerosis, a disease that obstructs blood flow in the arteries.

Economic Summit Conference Convenes

President Gerald Ford opened his long-heralded Economic Summit Conference personally this morning at the Washington Hilton Hotel. He

Steele Reported Getting Free Campaign Help

HARTFORD (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Robert H. Steele, who wants to "Drive Big Money Out of Politics," has been getting some free campaign help from state employees at Connecticut taxpayers' expense.

Steele's lawyer in the state capitol has been working on state time and using state equipment to advance the congressman's campaign, UPI has learned. It's illegal.

Use State Equipment

Two state employees were seen on separate occasions addressing Steele campaign envelopes and using a state typewriter to print campaign material on Steele letterheads, while drawing state salaries.

One of them was Susan Agostinelli, the pretty blonde receptionist in Republican Comptroller Nathan Agostinelli's front office. She is his niece and he is Steele's running-mate, the GOP candidate for lieutenant governor, a Manchester resident.

Reported to Meskill

State Auditors Henry Becker, a Republican, and Leo Donnelly, a Democrat, informed by UPI Tuesday, verified the transgressions and reported them to GOP Gov. Thomas J. Meskill Thursday.

As required by law, the auditors wrote Meskill about the illegal activities and criticized him for setting a UPI Assembly bill they initiated which would have required the state to tell all its employees about laws regulating their activities.

"It is clear that there is a pressing need for better understanding of the limitations of political activities on the part of state officials as well as classified and unclassified employees," the watchdog auditors wrote.

Agostinelli Minimizes Allegation

State Comptroller Nathan Agostinelli today acknowledged that 42 campaign letters had been mailed from his office by members of his staff. He said he has put a halt to the practice.

Agostinelli said the letters were written by non-classified employees during office breaks and lunch hours and the envelopes had stamps from his campaign funds — and state funds.

The letters, he said, had nothing to do with the candidacy of Robert Steele for governor. The stationery, he explained, reads Agostinelli for Lieutenant Governor, with Steele for Governor trailing it.

Agostinelli said he had issued a written directive on April 18, 1974 to all employees in the comptroller's office — informing them specifically of what they could and could not do in the election campaign. He said he issued a repeat order today.

Meskill Confirms Plan To Appoint Gaffney

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Thomas J. Meskill said today he would nominate former state Republican Chairman Brian Gaffney to the Superior Court bench this weekend despite Connecticut Bar Association opposition.

The governor told newsmen that the conflict centers on what level of judgeship Gaffney is qualified for and that he is standing behind Gaffney's qualifications.

The Bar Association has twice declared Gaffney unfit for the Superior Court bench but has okayed him for a lower court judgeship. Meskill pledged four years ago that he would not nominate anyone to the bench not found qualified by the association.

"I expect I will appoint him over the weekend," the governor said.

On another matter, Meskill said he has forwarded a complaint that state employees in the state comptroller's office have been working for GOP gubernatorial contender Robert H. Siele to Comptroller Nathan G. Agostinelli.

The governor said, however, he is issuing no specific directive for state employees since it already is a matter of law.

"They know what the rules are and what the law is," Meskill said.

Democrats Challenge President's Optimism

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford opened his inflation summit today with optimism that the willingness of Americans to sacrifice would see them through the worst economic situation of a generation.

But his optimistic assessment was challenged immediately.

Addressing 800 of the nation's economic leaders at 100 observers in the grand ballroom of the Washington Hilton, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield expressed dismay with the way the economy is being handled and the results of the pre-summit conferences that led to today's mass meeting.

Controls Urged

Mansfield, original author of the summit concept, pleaded for mandatory wage-price-rent and profit controls and warned Ford that the simultaneous combination of inflation and recession has become "social dynamite."

Ford opened the meeting by declaring that the hardest of setting the American economy right must be shared equally.

"No group should be called upon to carry an unfair share of the load," he said.

But he expressed optimism that curtailment of the worst inflationary boom in many years ultimately would be achieved. His chief economic advisers have estimated it will take 18 months to three years.

"I have unlimited confidence in America," the President said. "The battle against inflation will not be an easy one. It will require sacrifice and common effort. It will require discipline. But we will win."

In response, both Mansfield and House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., expressed misgivings.

Albert complained that the Democratic Congress had been excluded from deciding the participants and the agenda for the series of 21 meetings which led to the two-day summit.

Mansfield said he was discouraged that so far the sessions have produced nothing but words and theories which offer no relief to a nation bruised by rising prices and rising unemployment.

"The public knows that little has been done," he said.

Senators Visit Cuba
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two U.S. senators, Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., leave for Havana today to meet with Prime Minister Fidel Castro. Although their trip is the most concrete step by U.S. officials toward extending detente to Cuba, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has disapproved of it.

Nixon Fund Cut
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The general government subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee voted unanimously Thursday to cut former President Nixon's request for the transition period from $850,000 to $220,000. A high administration source says Nixon is irritated over government actions he feels deny him the privileges extended to other presidents when they left the White House.

Calley Release Delayed
FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (UPI) — William L. Calley Jr., who was convicted of murder in the My Lai massacre, will wait until Monday to learn whether a federal court order that he be released from military custody is upheld. Chief Judge John R. Brown Thursday granted a four-day delay while the Army prepares an appeal of a lower court ruling.

Labor Split Alleged
LONDON (UPI) — Conservative party leader Edward Heath, campaigning to return as prime minister, charged today that the ruling Labor party is split over British membership in the Common Market. "The myth of Labor unity has been blown wide open," Heath said.

Vows to Battle Leftists
BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentine President Maria Estela Peron has vowed to wipe out leftist guerrillas trying to topple her government. The armed forces promised to shed "the blood of its members" to uphold constitutional rule.

Flanked by uniformed officers as she delivered a nationwide television address Thursday, Mrs. Peron said, "We will not rest until we have completely eradicated subversion in this country."

Earlier, the Senate had approved tough new legislation cracking down on guerrillas accused of assassinating two army officers Wednesday.

Rockefeller Confirmation Not Expected Before Nov. 5

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An intensive investigation of Nelson A. Rockefeller's finances will apparently delay his confirmation as vice president until after election day.

Senate Rules Committee Chairman Howard Cannon, D-Nev., ended public hearings Thursday, but said he was against the committee acting until the Internal Revenue Service and Joint Taxation Committee make their reports — which committee sources say will not be complete until after Congress takes its October recess for election.

House Will Wait

The House has already indicated it would not act on the Rockefeller nomination until after the elections, but the Senate had planned to complete its work before then.

Committee sources said the delay did not necessarily mean problems. Cannon said Rockefeller would be recalled if he was needed to explain any new evidence.

A leader of the Attica prison riot, Frank Smith, also called "Bomber Bob" Black and under indictment for murder and kidnaping in the uprising, told the committee Rockefeller was "directly responsible" for the death of 43 persons because he ordered an assault by sharpshooting state troopers.

Blamed For Attica

Black militant Angela Davis criticized Rockefeller's refusal to negotiate personally with the Attica inmates. "The most powerful man in New York State, Governor Rockefeller, turned a deaf ear," she said.

FBI Said to Know Plotters of Threat Against Kennedys

BOSTON (UPI) — The FBI is investigating kidnap threats against one of the children of the Kennedy family and believes it knows who hatched the plot, United Press International learned today from a reliable source.

It was not known, even by top law enforcement officials which of the children was the target, so all of them required protection.

This source said the whereabouts of several of the about nine persons involved in the plot was known and they reportedly are under surveillance. The person who tipped the FBI is under protective custody.

There also was a report that three of the suspects had been arrested on other charges and were in jail elsewhere in New England, but a highly placed law enforcement official said he did not believe this was true.

It also was reported police confiscated some weapons, but this too was denied by the officials.

The source said the group that made the threat was believed made up of about nine persons, most of them from New England — at least two from the Boston area and one from New Hampshire.

The plot against "Kennedy blood" was believed to be that of a professional, organized group — not one of the estimated 60 threats which Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. receives weekly against himself and other members of the Kennedy family.

The source said the threat was made against "Kennedy blood" — specifically against Kennedy children including those of Sen. Kennedy, his two late brothers, President John F. Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy, and those of the Sargent Shriver, Stephen Smith and the divorced Peter and Patricia (Kennedy) Lawford.

Manchester Evening Herald OPINION

Building Bargaining Power

The stage is being set for a resolution of the world oil supply issue. The oil producing nations, in concord and individually, are reinforcing their positions basically around the failure of oil-consuming industrialized nations to bring inflation under control.

In essence, their major economic contention is that unless inflation is brought under control they must increase prices to compensate for erosion of their income.

On the other hand, the industrialized nations are building up their case also, mainly stressing that an economic collapse caused by artificially contrived high oil prices threatens the oil-producing nations as much as it does their customers.

We feel that the economic aspects can be and will be resolved after all the pre-negotiation propaganda has been fully aired. We say this because both sides want to negotiate from the strongest position possible and this means many economic sabers being rattled are primarily for home consumption and do not represent hard and fast positions from which there is no retreat.

The real fly in the ointment toward a reasonable and early compromise on the issue is political.

If the matter could be solely confined to economic issues, resolution could be achieved rather quickly.

The Arab oil producers are divided with more than a few seeking to tie any economic agreement on oil prices and distribution, a settlement of the long-festering Arab-Jewish conflict as personified by the Israeli State.

This is further complicated by a division among the industrial nations, which do not place the same high priority on Israel's continued existence that the United States does. It is because of this political undercurrent that the United States has been thrust in the forefront of bringing the issue to a head at this time.

While far from a permanent solution, it should be remembered that it was the United States through the unstinting efforts of Henry Kissinger which brought about the first concrete steps toward a political solution in the Mideast. The United States apparently is the only western power in whom the Arab world has confidence to mediate this issue fairly.

In the economic field, generally through the Marshall Plan and other foreign aid programs over the past several decades, the United States has been the leader in sharing its wealth and technology with undeveloped nations, including almost all of the oil-producing nations as well as most other resource-rich but technologically poor nations.

Granted that our efforts in both areas — economic and political — have not been flawless but it cannot be disputed that we didn't try to help out other nations less fortunate than ourselves.

And another point to be considered is that while we are not totally self-sufficient in our energy needs, we are perhaps the least dependent of the major industrialized nations on petroleum imports and therefore can lead the bargaining ahead from a position of relative strength.

President Ford and Kissinger have both taken a more aggressive stand on the oil supply and price issue in recent days.

While specifics seem to be elusive, it appears to us the United States is attempting to bring the matter to the negotiation stage as quickly as possible knowing that further delay only hardens opposing viewpoints.

In the days ahead we can expect many suggestions on how to cope with the situation. The oil producers may more openly discuss possible boycotts, price increases, and production cuts beyond actions already taken in these areas. The oil consumers will talk more of conservation, alternate sources, sharing of supplies, and other tactics to counter the oil producers.

But underlying it all, we should remember both sides know there must be some point in time when mutual interests will transcend self-interests and a long-term agreement can be achieved.

Economically speaking, this point in time is now at hand, and it is in the political preparation period we now find ourselves.

The outcome may hinge on which side, the oil producing nations or the oil consuming shaky alliance, can display the most solid unity on the political issues involved.

The real stake is whether the oil using nations can rally into a solid front to meet this specific situation. If they cannot, the hope is truly dim for any solution to the other problems which confront the world community.

It may well be our ability to stand up to the oil producers as a united front will be the assurance they need that the industrialized nations, through a continued united effort, can control inflation which is their avowed economic concern. Such unity could do much to get the Mideast political issue off center also.

It may well be the relations between the haves and have nots on the oil issue have not reached their worst stage. However, the interdependence of the world community as demonstrated by this need for oil, gives us optimism that there is now quietly at work reasonable men on both sides seeking mutual compromises despite some of the extreme alternatives being voiced to the press.

'We Are Responsible'

To the editor: I was reading a magazine today when I came across this passage from the Shame of the Cities (1884) by Lincoln Steffens. It was interesting to note that apparently not nearly as much human nature has changed as has technology. The new, as such, technology has just created more ways to cheat and hide it. How many people reading this paper can honestly say that they have not in any way contributed to the American spirit. Few, from what I've witnessed in 27 years.

"We are responsible, not our leaders, since we follow them. We let them direct our loyalty from the United States to some party; we let them boss the party and turn our municipal democracies into autocracies and our Republican nation into a plutocracy. We cheat our government and we let our leaders loot it, and we let them bribe and wheedle our sovereignty from us. We break our own laws and rob our own government, the lady at the custom house, the lyncher with his rope, and the captain of industry with his bribe and his rebate. The spirit of graft and of lawlessness is the American spirit."

Lincoln from 1894 makes this passage fit precisely to the American spirit of today and the way business as usual is conducted and allowed by the majority of the American people. Blame only they who have made the choice but chastise those who disagreed but said nothing. No legislation could be as strong a deterrent to freedom of expression as is the social stigma of rocking the boat of complacency.

Two Can Play Blackmail

WASHINGTON — President Ford made a speech on energy and food to the United States the other day, but it was left to a couple of his hired hands to get down to the nitty-gritty of U.S. relations with oil-producing nations.

Ford made a point to remind his audience that "it has not been our policy to use food as a political weapon despite the oil embargo and the recent oil price and production decisions." But he let it be known he didn't threaten or warn, preferring to permit the oil peddlers to contemplate the implications of his remarks.

On the other hand, Federal Energy Administration chief John C. Sawhill in effect spelled out what the U.S. could do if the oil producers continued their policies of squeezing every last dime out of their customers. The U.S., Sawhill told the Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee, did not now contemplate embargoes on food or military supplies to oil-producing countries. Then he added a big, military "but."

To wit, Sawhill noted that "there comes a point where the conditions under which oil is supplied lose their commercial character and become issues of national survival. At that point — and we have long since passed it — we must explore the full range of options at our disposal to protect the national interest."

Translated into street-corner terms, Sawhill was telling the oil peddlers that Washington is not without the capacity to do a little blackmail on its own. Let's have a little cooperation on oil prices and production, Sawhill was saying, or we may have to do some squeezing ourselves.

At the same committee hearing, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon warned the oil countries to look to their future economic well-being instead of fooling around with get-rich-quick pricing gimmicks. "The oil countries' future, Simon pointed out, depends on "maintaining good relations with industrialized nations," whose technical assistance is vital in helping members of the Oil Producing Export Countries (OPEC) achieve their goal of becoming advanced industrial and agricultural communities.

What Simon meant was that OPEC is sitting pretty now, and getting richer every day — but only in the short run. In the long run, the world market for oil is sure to decline, and then — as Simon predicted — "even lower prices will not bring it back."

All of which brings us back to President Ford's determinedly measured approach to the oil countries. Ford reminded the UN that "every nation represented in this room" is in this mess together. Inflation is an international colosseum, not a domestic aberration, and Ford was simply stating the obvious when he declared that "Failure to cooperate on oil, food and inflation would spell disaster" for the whole world.

Moreover, while he eschewed threats of U.S. retaliation, Ford was properly stern with the oil-producing countries. His speech had the tone of a fed-up parent when he predicted that "by confronting consumers with production restrictions, artificial pricing, and the prospect of ultimate bankruptcy, producers will eventually become the victims of their own greed."

All this offers small comfort today for the oil-consuming countries. At this writing none of the oil peddlers seems inclined to cut prices which have increased fourfold during the past 12 months. But were I suddenly elected emir of an oil-rich nation, the statements of Ford, Sawhill and Simon would be a reminder that two can play at the game of blackmail.

Loosen, Tighten, Spend, Cut — Pray

The important thing to note is not the solution, which no president in his right mind would adopt — but the confession of ignorance. Economists, once supremely confident of their powers, now reluctantly realize that what they've been preaching as theory doesn't fit the real world.

These men thus had little faith in the proposals they offered Mr. Ford. They talked about budget cutting — as a gesture. Some favored a $3 billion program of public service employment and reduced taxes for those earning less than $15,000. These would ease the pain for those hard hit; they wouldn't solve inflation. Other economists proposed wage and price controls and government action to channel loans into industries or projects considered desirable. Again, these are palliatives, not solutions.

Some men present said they knew how to cure inflation if only they didn't have to consider what their solutions would do to millions of people. Everyone present bowed to the desirability of increasing productivity. They could not agree on how that could be accomplished. There was seemingly strong agreement that productivity would not grow appreciably in the next year or two regardless of what they propose or the government does.

They talked in mammoth overall solutions like tightening or loosening the supply of money. But they confessed this "meat axe" approach doesn't seem to work. Tight reins tightens money for those you don't want to hit as well as speculators, wastrels, overly ambitious expenders and the producers of nonessentials. A blanket stringency which induces consumers to tighten purchases also forces production cutbacks which lead to unemployment and must be countered by government payouts. This leads to further budget deficits which spur more inflation — and so on around the circle. It is now clear the simplistic proposals of the Keynesian disciples and other economic schools are similar in perception to the physics of Aristotle. They are predicated on a theoretical economic model which has never existed and "laws" which bear little relationship to the way people act. They assume all industrialists, farmers, government officials and consumers think and act in the same predetermined patterns. What is remarkable is that some of the most prominent of the economists present at the White House openly admitted the withering of their faith in conventional economic wisdom. This is the beginning of knowledge and bears promise for the years ahead.

The present Gay City State Park was once the site of quite a busy community. Besides the foundations of the Mill O.C. can now recall the exact location of eight house cellar holes he found white a boy. There probably are more, forgotten now.

It was usually fire that destroyed the old houses because the chimneys had poor cement and no linings and there was no fire fighting equipment or organized crews. The last house to go down by itself just collapsed into the cellar. O.D. salvaged many pecked full of old handforged nails from the rotting boards and timbers. They were interesting to see many people that he only has a small quantity left.

An old salt-box house still stood between the old center and Rt. 85 on the north side of the road which is now the entrance to the park. It was said to have been the home of the Summers who owned the mill. Such houses are not common now, and O.C. believes, should be preserved but the state Park and Forest Commission had it razed without leaving a trace.

O.C.'s mother could remember seeing ox carts hauling loads to and from the mill when she was a little girl. There was a very old and large white pine tree beside one of the roads. We were told it was supposed to have been the village whipping tree where wrongdoers were punished.

The pond dam is still there but has been repaired some since it became a park. When O.C. was a boy there was a ditch which seemed to have been to turn the course of a stream that had entered the river (Blackledge) below the dam. That ditch extended diagonally across the face of the hill west of the pond to empty into the pond. O.C. never found any water in that ditch.

The mill race head gate was at the southeast end of the dam. From there the race way followed the contour of the hill at a level to obtain enough head for power at the mill. On top of the embankment between the race and the mill quite a pile of metal and other hard things like tinnons and buckles that had to be cut off from rags before they could be made into paper. O.C. took home pocketful of ancient buttons that would be antiques now if he had saved them.

A little south of the mill was what seems to have been the main street of the village. It went almost straight from what is Rt. 85 to the Birch Mt. Rd. A branch from it went south then turned west and came out just south of the state fire tower on Birch Mt. Rd. Another branch went north until it became what is now French Rd. that passes out below the dam of Sperry's saw mill pond, now Sperry's Glen on Camp Meeting Rd.

A road (now impassable) branched to the east just below a low dam in the river. It crossed the Rt. 85 road. It was also impassable (when O.C. remembers) east of 85 but in recent years has been reopened

Waterbury Couple Stabbed to Death

WATERBURY (UPI) — Police say a 72-year-old attorney and his wife have been found stabbed to death in their Fern Street home on the north end.

L. Sal Bochicchio said Irving Pasternack and his wife Rhoda, described as being in her late 60s, were stabbed "more than once."

Waterbury Couple Stabbed to Death

WATERBURY (UPI) — Police say a 72-year-old attorney and his wife have been found stabbed to death in their Fern Street home on the north end.

L. Sal Bochicchio said Irving Pasternack and his wife Rhoda, described as being in her late 60s, were stabbed "more than once."

It was usually fire that destroyed the old houses because the chimneys had poor cement and no linings and there was no fire fighting equipment or organized crews. The last house to go down by itself just collapsed into the cellar. O.D. salvaged many pecked full of old handforged nails from the rotting boards and timbers. They were interesting to see many people that he only has a small quantity left.

An old salt-box house still stood between the old center and Rt. 85 on the north side of the road which is now the entrance to the park. It was said to have been the home of the Summers who owned the mill. Such houses are not common now, and O.C. believes, should be preserved but the state Park and Forest Commission had it razed without leaving a trace.

O.C.'s mother could remember seeing ox carts hauling loads to and from the mill when she was a little girl. There was a very old and large white pine tree beside one of the roads. We were told it was supposed to have been the village whipping tree where wrongdoers were punished.

The pond dam is still there but has been repaired some since it became a park. When O.C. was a boy there was a ditch which seemed to have been to turn the course of a stream that had entered the river (Blackledge) below the dam. That ditch extended diagonally across the face of the hill west of the pond to empty into the pond. O.C. never found any water in that ditch.

The mill race head gate was at the southeast end of the dam. From there the race way followed the contour of the hill at a level to obtain enough head for power at the mill. On top of the embankment between the race and the mill quite a pile of metal and other hard things like tinnons and buckles that had to be cut off from rags before they could be made into paper. O.C. took home pocketful of ancient buttons that would be antiques now if he had saved them.

A little south of the mill was what seems to have been the main street of the village. It went almost straight from what is Rt. 85 to the Birch Mt. Rd. A branch from it went south then turned west and came out just south of the state fire tower on Birch Mt. Rd. Another branch went north until it became what is now French Rd. that passes out below the dam of Sperry's saw mill pond, now Sperry's Glen on Camp Meeting Rd.

A road (now impassable) branched to the east just below a low dam in the river. It crossed the Rt. 85 road. It was also impassable (when O.C. remembers) east of 85 but in recent years has been reopened

New Town Not Mystical, Visiting Planner Says

Tom Harris, planning director for Howard County, Maryland, told about 30 residents last night that there was nothing mystical about new communities. They are just planned growth that you know about in advance, located in a single area rather than scattered about, and developed in a short time.

Harris, who has been Howard County's planning director since 1959, graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with a degree in planning.

Harris is considered one of the nation's foremost experts on new communities since he has dealt with the new town of Columbia, Maryland since its beginning.

In comparing what happened in Howard County and what is happening in Coventry, Harris said, "We are a county with 30 square miles and with 36,000 people in 1960. We had four small shopping centers, three of which are smaller than your shopping center. You are basically in the same position that we were in when the Rouse Company presented their idea. We had a great many questions."

"Would the new town put a tremendous financial burden on the existing population of Howard County? Could the county gear up to meet the South Windsor Fire Chief Philip E. Crombie has submitted preliminary specifications for a replacement building for Fire Station One to Town Manager Terry V. Sprinkel.

The existing Fire Station One, located at Ellington Rd. and Foster St. was the first fire station built in town. It was originally constructed in the late 1830's as a town garage with a one-stall fire station attached. Later a second stall was added.

In recent year repairs necessary to keep the building operational have become excessive. Because of the space and repair problems, the Town Highway Department moved several years ago to new quarters on Strong Rd., leaving the entire building to the Fire Department.

Chief Crombie explained that six years ago the second stall was began to sink and separate from the main building, necessitating major repairs. The ground conditions causing that situation still exist.

In addition, the plumbing, heating and electrical systems are all in need of major repairs. A new roof is needed.

The Fire Department has grown rapidly in recent years. "There are now 120 firemen and 20 Explorers in the Fire Department," said Chief Crombie, "and we have just run out of room. We need office space and meeting rooms badly. The existing building has many mechanical problems and does not lend itself to economical repair and renovation."

Chief Crombie emphasized that no change in fire station coverage is contemplated. The existing station on Sullivan Ave. and Beebehub Rd. will remain. Ideally Station One will be replaced on or near the present site.

By FRANK ATWOOD

There were 12 candidates from 12 states for the honor of being chosen the Star Farmer of the region in the Future Farmers of America. They came, with delegations from their states, to a day-long program at the Eastern States Exposition on the first Saturday of the fair.

Saturday morning a group of judges went to work, studying the detailed written entries of the 12 candidates for Star Farmer and narrowed their choice to four - from Connecticut, Vermont, New York and Pennsylvania. In the afternoon they called the candidates in, one at a time, for interviews. They chose Steve Dearborn, 21, of Warehouse Point.

More than 300 Future Farmers, in their blue jackets, marched through the grounds in the Saturday afternoon parade, and then formed ranks in front of an earth mound that served as a platform for daily presentations in the exhibition's "Salute to Agriculture." It was close to the entrance to the Coliseum.

The 12 Star Farmers formed a line across the platform, each carrying his state emblem, and each was introduced with a brief biography. Then Connecticut's candidate was asked to step forward as the name of the winner was taken from an envelope in which it had been sealed by the judges.

He accepted congratulations from two national officers of the FFA, and was handed the lead rope attached to the halter on a purebred Holstein heifer calf, given by Sears, Roebuck & Co., which underwrites a substantial part of the cost of this annual FFA event. He could keep the calf or exchange it for $500. Since his farm enterprise consists entirely of crops, he'll take the money.

With Steve at the Exposition were his vocational agriculture advisor from Rockville High School, Stanwood Pullen Jr., and Frank Christola of Agawam, who let him have his first tractor when, as a high school sophomore, he started growing vegetables with no land, no money and no established credit but with an honest face, an abundance of determination and willingness to work.

Steve had been about ready to drop out of high school at East Windsor when he learned that it was possible for him to transfer to Rockville and study agriculture. The only thing he wanted was to be a farmer and the biggest attraction for him in the Rockville vocational agriculture program was the chance to work in the school's well-equipped farm shop. He still takes his farm machinery to the school shop to make his own repairs, in his third year out of high school.

"That's one thing I thought we could do for him," says Pullen. The teacher no longer has to tell Steve what to do or how to do it.

"As a mechanic he is terrific," says his former instructor. "When he wants to build a piece of new equipment

Bar States Gaffney Not Qualified

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — A Yale Law School professor who is an American Bar Association official has said Gov. Thomas J. Meskill should not nominate J. Brian Gaffney to the Superior Court if the state bar deems him unqualified.

Prof. Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr., a reporter for the association's Commission on Standards Relating to Judicial Administration, said Thursday the bar "doesn't apply unreasonably high standards."

The Connecticut Bar Association has not approved Gaffney's name for nomination, but Meskill has confirmed he will nominate his fellow New Britain resident and political ally.

Hazard called the method of selecting judges in Connecticut "a kind of retirement program for people in politics."

The system here has not produced a bad judiciary," Hazard said. "It's reasonably good. But wouldn't it be outstanding. We've been lucky."

longtime friends and political allies, are from New Britain.

The Republican governor also would be reneging on 1970 campaign pledge that he would not try to push anyone for the bench who is opposed by the association's 17-member Judiciary Committee, comprised of prominent lawyers and past Bar Association presidents.

Bar Association President James H. Greenfield of New Haven says he can think of no Connecticut governor who made a judicial appointment contrary to the association's judgment.

Days before the 1970 election, Meskill put his word in writing to the lawyers' organization. The pledge was on Meskill campaign stationary emblazoned with the slogan, "Because the Governor Can Do So Much to Help."

The letter, a reply to a Bar Association inquiry, said "I am pleased to advise that, if elected Governor on November 3rd, I would pledge to: 1. Seek the assistance of the Judiciary Committee of the Connecticut Bar Association in making sound selections of appointees to the Bench; and 2. Refuse to nominate for judicial office any individual who is found not qualified by the Judiciary Committee of the Connecticut Bar Association."

The aspiring candidate, who became Connecticut's first Republican governor in 16 years, closed his letter: "Thank you for giving me an opportunity to present my views on this important matter."

A spokesman for the governor said Thursday, "Sure he's going to appoint Gaffney. Why not?" Gaffney and Meskill.

He was nominated by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., but a Senate Judiciary Committee vote on Meskill has been stalled, reportedly until the Nov. 5 election to neutralize growing pressure on Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., to take a stand on the controversial nomination before election day.

Ribicoff is up for re-election and could be hurt at the polls for taking any position on the Meskill judgment.

Rogers Teaches Black History With the Navy

Dr. John Earl Rogers of 1163 E. Middle Tpk. has completed another project in his long list of accomplishments as an authority on black history.

He fulfilled an assignment in the Program for Adult College Education (PACE), part of a U.S. Navy contract to conduct college courses.

Dr. Rogers, a consultant to the University of Hartford in black history and culture, and teacher of credit courses in the subject, spent two weeks in August on board the U.S.S. Little Rock, flagship of our 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean under a special contract with the USN.

The ship was based in Gaeta, Italy, a great port about 40 miles north of Naples. During that time, commission officers and plain seamen were taught black history by Dr. Rogers.

"It was a diversified group," said Dr. Rogers. "There was about one white to two blacks on board ship from all over the United States."

"Their interest was great, we had good, free open discussions on racial and cultural differences and I just couldn't find everything during the 2-hour classtimes," he said. Among some of the many favorable observations of Rogers were the "tender" feelings of his class members as he taught them, and the efficiency of the U.S. Navy.

He was impressed with the friendliness of the residents of Gaeta. "It is a very warm town with a park in the center," he said.

The University of Hartford had participated in a pilot program of 16 courses with the U.S. Navy in 1973. The program was awarded a contract to conduct up to 50 college courses under the navy's PACE program during the 1974 fiscal year.

The object of PACE, according to James Murdock, associate director of the USNHF-based division of continuing education, is to provide college-level education for career navy personnel.

Last year, the USNHF offered 16 PACE courses at the New London-Groton submarine base. Under its PACE contract this year, the USNHF, through members of its full-time and adjunct faculty, will conduct college courses in the natural sciences and mathematics, the humanities and social sciences.

Courses have been assigned to the U.S. Naval Support Force in Antarctica, and to navy personnel participating in "Operation Deepfreeze" at McMurdo Sound in Antarctica as well as to ships and submarines with homoports in the United States.

As the USNHF program expands, PACE courses will be available to sailors whose ships call at ports in many places in the world.

Dr. Rogers would gladly accept another assignment for PACE, he said, if he were invited.

The man who has been a student of Negro and American history for more than 40 years, and who has set up and introduced courses in Afro-American history throughout the schools in the Hartford area and who has received many honors and awards for his contribution to education and society, is a strong supporter of the American tradition.

Summing up his experiences in teaching for PACE and meeting so many "wonderful" and "inspiring" people, he said, "I feel proud to be an American because we have so many good things going."

He said profits dropped from $1.57 per share at the end of 1972 to $1.42 per share at the end of 1973. Sillin said profits reached a record low level of $79 per share for the 12-month period ending Aug. 1974.

Until rate levels and returns are sufficient to support our capital improvements, we have no choice but to take these actions," he added. The project cost for both plants had been estimated at $1.5 billion. Ground breaking had been set for the fall of 1975, but now has been deferred until fall 1976.

DR. LAMB

All Calories Are The Same

DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband and I have an argument concerning calories. He claims one can eat even 500 calories in fat, butter, or sweet cream, and not get fat - sick maybe, but not fat. I disagree again. Some days he doesn't eat at all, drinks coffee all day, to cut his appetite he says I think this is wrong also. It's bad for your nervous system. He's very irritable when he drinks all that coffee. Who is right?

DEAR READER - I don't think he is going to lose much weight on 3,000 calories regardless of what kind of food it is, unless as you say, it makes him sick. He will probably need to eat well below that level unless he is far more active physically than I would guess he is. The important thing in losing weight is how many calories you eat (whether it is a carbohydrate or protein), and how many calories your body uses (whether it is a calorie account. The balance, what you weigh, is always the accumulation of what you have eaten and absorbed into your body against the amount you have used.

Those crash diets on a diet are not a good approach. The goal of a diet is to lose excess fat safely and keep it off. Your husband would do much better to lose weight in a planned, balanced diet, low enough in calories to cause a slow but steady loss of fat. Then he should stick to that diet or add a few calories for maintenance once he has gotten down to the desired level. Too much coffee can be harmful.

DEAR DR. LAMB - About 30 years ago a doctor advised my brother-in-law to stop smoking or else his legs would give out on him. He refused to quit so now after walking one block he must stop to rest, and he is unable to drive his car because of his weak legs. Did cigarettes really cause his legs to get that weak? If so how?

DEAR READER - Probably, there is a particularly rapid form of obstruction of the opening of the arteries that is stimulated by tobacco. It is called Burger's disease. As the opening in the arteries and the legs fills up it becomes impossible to increase the blood flow to them.

When you walk or run or use a macele you must increase the blood flow to deliver oxygen and more nutrients. When you can't do that, it's a disaster.

She received a choice assignment by being based in San Francisco. "We are mostly just numbers," she says. "Your number is called and you just go out. Out of San Francisco, I am No. 906."

"It was rough work," remembers Jessie Carter. "One of the first girls got sick and had to quit in two weeks. Her run was from Oakland to Cheyenne, Wyo. There was no airport in San Francisco. She commuted across the Bay in a Coast Guard cutter which had been a rum runner."

Kris Thomsen has read a duty list of the early stewardesses: dust the window sills, make sure the curtains are pulled back and clean, etc. "I think it would have been more glamorous at that time," she muses. "There is a standard joke in this business: a stewardess or passenger is pulled back and is looking around on the floor. Someone asks her what she's doing. 'I'm looking for the glamor in this job,' she answers."

"A stewardess can work only eight hours in 24, but her duty time hanging around the airport, etc. can amount to 15 hours. They're not allowed to drink 12 hours before a flight. They were given 11 hours and 20 minutes," smiles Kris. "That's the company rule."

She worked one charter flight for a national service club in New Orleans in which 174 men went through 650 miniature whiskey bottles, 300 bottles of wine and two cases of beer.

"You can imagine what condition these people were in," she says. "You're sober and they're breathing on you and patting you. They wait till you start serving a meal and they try to put those pins on you. I was carrying five trays and this guy hands me his and says, 'Here, dummy, take this.'"

"We sit around and have a few beers and invariably it gets around to airline talk and you're bored and go back to your room."

Her monthly base pay is $588 for 65 hours of flying time, but she can fly to 85 hours at an extra $1 per hour and clear $700. "As a teacher," she grins, "I figured out for the time I put in I was making less than a dollar an hour."

She maintains a normal social life. She is divorced and lives alone, by choice, in a studio apartment. She drives a Volkswagen, the only item she took out of her marriage.

Pioneer Stewardesses Recall

Those Friendly Skies Weren't Always

By Murray Olderman

MINERAL, Calif. (NEA) - Soon the snows will leave a deep fluff of white to isolate this little community that sits on State Highway 26 in the lap of the big mountain. Mr. Lassen, and Jessie Carter Bronson - Jaye to her few neighbors - will have the long winter again to contemplate that excitement of many years ago.

When she was an airline stewardess, the very first of the airline stewardesses. There were eight and the year was 1920 when commercial air travel was in its infancy. Young Jessie Carter, who came out of a little farm community in the upper Sacramento Valley called Los Molinos where her first mode of travel was a horse and buggy, was a newly registered nurse in San Francisco.

"I had a nurse friend," she recalled, "who said she was going to go out and take an examination to be a stewardess. I had never heard of the word. I just went with her, and they hired me. They hired only nurses."

"I had never been in an airplane in my life," Kris Thomsen, who is model slim with flashing dark eyes and a compelling smile, is a "pioneer" stewardess. She is one of 47,000 who fly just for United Airlines alone. She lives in Foster City, a bedroom community of split levels, condominiums and manufactured units of law-dredged out of San Francisco Bay.

She taught third grade in her native Wisconsin for a year and a half until "I decided I'd like to be a children's teacher." She became a stewardess because she wanted to travel and went through Inflight Training School in Chicago for five-and-a-half weeks early in 1973. There were 63 girls in the class and most, like Kris, had been to college. She was the third oldest in the class at 28. "It was extremely awkward for my age," she says. "There was a lot of giggling and running around."

"You left in the evening," she says, "and you flew all night and got to Cheyenne in the morning." There were stops in places such as Reno and Salt Lake City to drop off the mail.

"In Reno," she recalls, "the people would come out and hang over the fences to watch us land. It was a big event." The planes were Boeing Tri-motor 80A's which clung close to the tree tops. There was only one stewardess. The most passengers she had were five. "People on emergency trips or businessmen," she said. She remembers President Herbert Hoover's son was on one trip.

Mall bags were piled in the cabin and sometimes she didn't get a seat so she sat on a mail bag. "We had a chest which carried cocktails with a little sherry in them," she says. "And we provided sandwiches. They brought their own booze."

Kris Thomsen has read a duty list of the early stewardesses: dust the window sills, make sure the curtains are pulled back and clean, etc. "I think it would have been more glamorous at that time," she muses. "There is a standard joke in this business: a stewardess or passenger is pulled back and is looking around on the floor. Someone asks her what she's doing. 'I'm looking for the glamor in this job,' she answers."

"A stewardess can work only eight hours in 24, but her duty time hanging around the airport, etc. can amount to 15 hours. They're not allowed to drink 12 hours before a flight. They were given 11 hours and 20 minutes," smiles Kris. "That's the company rule."

She worked one charter flight for a national service club in New Orleans in which 174 men went through 650 miniature whiskey bottles, 300 bottles of wine and two cases of beer.

"You can imagine what condition these people were in," she says. "You're sober and they're breathing on you and patting you. They wait till you start serving a meal and they try to put those pins on you. I was carrying five trays and this guy hands me his and says, 'Here, dummy, take this.'"

"We sit around and have a few beers and invariably it gets around to airline talk and you're bored and go back to your room."

Her monthly base pay is $588 for 65 hours of flying time, but she can fly to 85 hours at an extra $1 per hour and clear $700. "As a teacher," she grins, "I figured out for the time I put in I was making less than a dollar an hour."

Those Friendly Skies Weren't Always

By Murray Olderman

MINERAL, Calif. (NEA) - Soon the snows will leave a deep fluff of white to isolate this little community that sits on State Highway 26 in the lap of the big mountain. Mr. Lassen, and Jessie Carter Bronson - Jaye to her few neighbors - will have the long winter again to contemplate that excitement of many years ago.

When she was an airline stewardess, the very first of the airline stewardesses. There were eight and the year was 1920 when commercial air travel was in its infancy. Young Jessie Carter, who came out of a little farm community in the upper Sacramento Valley called Los Molinos where her first mode of travel was a horse and buggy, was a newly registered nurse in San Francisco.

"I had a nurse friend," she recalled, "who said she was going to go out and take an examination to be a stewardess. I had never heard of the word. I just went with her, and they hired me. They hired only nurses."

"I had never been in an airplane in my life," Kris Thomsen, who is model slim with flashing dark eyes and a compelling smile, is a "pioneer" stewardess. She is one of 47,000 who fly just for United Airlines alone. She lives in Foster City, a bedroom community of split levels, condominiums and manufactured units of law-dredged out of San Francisco Bay.

She taught third grade in her native Wisconsin for a year and a half until "I decided I'd like to be a children's teacher." She became a stewardess because she wanted to travel and went through Inflight Training School in Chicago for five-and-a-half weeks early in 1973. There were 63 girls in the class and most, like Kris, had been to college. She was the third oldest in the class at 28. "It was extremely awkward for my age," she says. "There was a lot of giggling and running around."

"You left in the evening," she says, "and you flew all night and got to Cheyenne in the morning." There were stops in places such as Reno and Salt Lake City to drop off the mail.

"In Reno," she recalls, "the people would come out and hang over the fences to watch us land. It was a big event." The planes were Boeing Tri-motor 80A's which clung close to the tree tops. Jungle Gardens of Louisiana's Avery Island come alive with a flush of green. Reining over these 200 landscaped acres of gardens is a 10th century statue of Buddha, housed in the above pagoda, which is nestled among moss-dripping live oaks and giant elephant ear plants. Avery Island, a bird sanctuary, is also a salt dome and plantation for the peppers which make the world-famous taste delight, Tabasco.

Hotel Guests Take Memories Leave Various Items Behind

SEATTLE - Guests who stay in Western International Hotels usually take with them fond memories of the time spent with their hosts. But some days, they leave behind more than just memories.

At the Antlers Plaza hotel in Colorado Springs, Colo., for instance, the forgotten items frequently are animate. Billie Joann King executive housekeeper at the hotel for six years, tells of finding chipmunks, a rabbit and even a pet skunk left behind by departed guests.

Forgotten clothing probably takes up the most space in the hotel's attic of abandoned items. A typical maid at the Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City can count on finding a bathrobe behind a bathroom door or a nightgown rolled up in a bedspread almost daily. Guests at the Continental Plaza in Chicago each month leave behind clothing valued at more than $1,000.

At least one marriage license a month is found in a room somewhere in one of the 55 hotels in 13 countries which comprise the hotel family in the U.S. and overseas.

False teeth are also frequently forgotten. One hotel manager received a frantic call from a Detroit automotive executive, who had reached the airport on route home before discovering he'd left his teeth back in the room. His dentures were en route to the Motor City on the next jet.

In the case of dentures, eyeglasses, pajamas and such items, Western International managers generally keep them until the owner contacts the hotel.

"We are eager to return items to their rightful owners," Mullikin said, "but we've learned that the best policy is to wait for a letter or phone call." Guests frequently have moved on to a hotel in another city and want the item before returning home, he pointed out.

Western International managers do make a serious effort to contact a guest who has left behind an item of substantial value, Mullikin said.

Black Book Jottings

Through the generosity of the Manchester Racquet Club last Saturday's Women's Doubles Tournament finals were played indoors due to the inclement weather. Former Manchester High gridders, Steve Samotis is a running back again this fall with the Western Connecticut college football team... No one was happier at the Manchester Country Club's banquet for Junior members Wednesday night than Jeff Koelsch when called front and center to receive a plaque for his assistance this season. Koelsch is now completing his third season as the course ranger... Dom Galli eagled the 328-yard 11th hole this week at the Country Club course... The three sons of Bob Noren — Dave, Bob Jr. and Bill — are all fine golfers at the Elyria, Ohio Country Club. Dave capped the Class AA Elyria City Golf Tournament this season in a playoff. Bob Jr., for years a member of the Manchester Country Club, has been living in Ohio 13 years. He may be recalled as one of the members of the Dawn Patrol that launched the annual Manchester Open each year. The quartet consisted of Noren, Max Schubert, Bill Stevenson and Ricky Anderson. Noren is a special agent with Beacon Insurance in Columbus, Ohio... Men's finals in the Town Men's Doubles Tennis Tournament will be staged Saturday morning at 11 at Memorial Field courts with Mike White and Tom McDonald facing Paul Groebert and Jim Moulton. The Mixed Doubles finals will take place Saturday afternoon at 1 at the same site. Mike White and Marti Farmland will meet Linnea Everett and George Bozer.

Balls 'n Strikes

Talking retirement again is Rico Petrocelli of the Red Sox. The veteran third baseman didn't utter one word along these lines until he went into a batting slump along with his teammates — just a month ago when the Sox started on their skid from first to third place. Petrocelli's season ended rather abruptly when hit by a Jim Slaton pitch Sept. 15 in Milwaukee... Boston hit only three homers in Shea Stadium this season against the Yankees, one each by Rick Miller, Carl Yastrzemski and Bernie Carbo... The Red Sox won the series with the Yanks, 11-7... Yankee manager Bill Virdon has not signed his contract for next year... If the Red Sox can pick up two stolen bases in the remaining games it will mark the first time since the 1919 club turned in the feat... During the month of September, Rico Petrocelli didn't drive in one run and Carl Yastrzemski has just five. The latter has drawn over 100 bases on balls six times in the last seven years, proof that he's still considered dangerous by opposing managers and pitchers... Luis Tiant has made 37 starts, tying his all-time high when with Cleveland in 1969... Bobby Murcer's 19 assists tops all American League outfielders this season... Lou Piniella and Elliott Maddox each has 18... Connecticut baseball scouts, Porter Blinn and Dick Teel who work with Cincinnati and Philadelphia took in the Yankee home finale set against Boston. Blinn resides in South Windsor.

Time Running Out on Red Sox

DETROIT (UPI) — It isn't time that's running out on the Boston Red Sox so much as it is the Baltimore Orioles and New York Yankees. The Red Sox pulled one out against the Detroit Tigers Thursday night, 5-3 in 10 innings, but that isn't hard because everybody seems to be trampling on the Tigers' toes these days.

It was the third straight game Detroit has blown in the final inning, a fact little known because of the publicity surrounding Al Kaline's 3,000th hit.

But, whoopee, you'd have thought Boston had muffed the game for the lack of joy in the clubhouse afterward. Manager Darrell Johnson didn't even waste time offering any of the standard drowning man cliches, knowing they'd look just as silly in print as they would sound coming out of his mouth.

"It doesn't look good," veteran Dick McAuliffe said. "We've got too many games to make up and not enough left."

The Red Sox are four games behind the Orioles and 3½ in back of the Yankees but have only six games left.

Mets' Duffy Dyer Scores Hands Down

Pirates' Catcher Manny Sanguillen Late With Tag

Pirates Bury Memory And Mets in Process

NEW YORK (UPI) — It took the Pittsburgh Pirates exactly four batters to bury the memory of the night before. The Pirates, who suffered an exasperating 13-12 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals in 11 innings Wednesday night to fall out of first place in the National League East, regained a share of the lead Thursday night when they routed the New York Mets 11-5 behind a lustrous 14-hit attack that featured a pair of two-run homers by Al Oliver and a three-run shot by Willie Stargell.

The Pirates and Cardinals each have identical records of 63-73 with six games left to play.

An infield hit by leadoff batter Rennie Stennett, line singles by Manny Sanguillen and Oliver and a drive by Stargell into the rightfield mezzanine and, bingo, it was 4-0 before Mets' starter Jerry Koosman could get an out. A single by Stennett and Oliver's first homer of the game made it 6-0 in the second and the rout was on.

Oliver, who has not gone more than two games in a row this season without getting a hit, enjoyed one of his most productive days of his career with five hits, four runs scored and five runs batted in. It was his third five-hit game of the season and his five RBIs gave him nine in the last two games.

In the only other NL game, Los Angeles reduced its "magic number" for clinching the NL West title to two by beating San Diego 5-3 in 10 innings and Cincinnati a double. Cesar Cedeño had a three-run homer for Houston.

NFL Roundup

Reds 10, Astros 6
Ken Griffey collected four hits to spark the Reds' triumph over the Astros. The Reds, trailing 6-4, sent 10 batters to the plate in the fifth inning to score five runs as Johnny Bench, Griffey and pinch-hitter Merv Rettenmund each collected a double. Cesar Cedeño had a three-run homer for Houston.

College Football Roundup

Two Suspect Clubs Meet on Gridiron

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two of the nation's surprise college football teams of 1974 have a golden opportunity to prove if they're for real Saturday...but for two quite different reasons.

Unbeaten Wisconsin and winless Colorado, who off preseason predictions would have had those roles reversed, run into each other at Boulder, Colo., and judging by the narrow point spread offered by the oddsmakers, one's quite sure whether the perennial downtrodden Badgers are really that good or the perennial Big Eight power Buffaloes are really that bad.

Tenth-rated Wisconsin, surprise victors over Purdue and Nebraska the first two weeks of the season, are a three-point favorite over the Buffs, who dropped a pair of one-sided decisions to LSU and Michigan on those same two Saturdays.

"No way are they as bad as their record," Wisconsin Coach John Jardine said of Colorado earlier this week. "I am very concerned about them. They have some excellent football players."

Colorado, in its first season under Coach Bill Mallory who came over from Miami of Ohio, has had its problems on defense after yielding 42 points at Louisiana State and 31 last week versus Michigan. In addition, the offense has also sputtered with last year's standout tailback Billy Waddy averaging just 1.8 yards per carry with a net mark of 40 in two games.

Elsewhere across the country, top-ranked Ohio State is an off-the-board pick against SMU, as is No. 2 Notre Dame against Purdue and No. 3 Alabama against Vanderbilt. No. 4 Michigan is a three touchdown choice to sink Navy's suddenly buoyant ship (after last week's stunner over Penn State) and No. 5 Texas is an 11-point pick over Texas Tech.

Even if Boston wins the rest of its games, the Red Sox will be eliminated if either Baltimore or New York can come up with three victories between now and season end.

Bob Montgomery, a substitute pitcher because starter Tim Lincecum was removed for a pinch-hitter, created a John Hiller pitch for a two-run home run in the ninth for overtime and then decided it by ripping Hiller for a two-run single in the 10th.

Montgomery said the Red Sox were going to keep trying despite their imminent elimination from the pennant race.

"You never know," Montgomery said. "Let the other people win it at least."

Dick Drago (7-10) was the winning pitcher for Boston. Carl Yastrzemski's bases-loaded walk in the seventh inning brought in the first Red Sox run.

Boston sends Reggie Cleveland (11-14) against Woody Fryman (6-4) here tonight.

Sain Gives Thanks For Having Kaat

NEW YORK (UPI) — Offhand, 1974 hasn't been a banner year for Johnny Sain, the Chicago White Sox pitching coach whom many baseball observers regard as the best in his trade.

For despite that spacious White Sox Park, Chicago hurlers have fallen upon hard times lately, finding it increasingly more difficult to keep that little white ball out of the grandstands. As it is, they rank 12th among the rest of the league's pitchers and at least one of them, Wilbur Wood, has gone home for a possible second straight 20-loss season.

All of which probably brings Johnny Sain to sigh quietly, "thank God for Jim Kaat."

Kaat, a Sain protégé dating back to both of their heydays at Minnesota in the mid-1960s, became a 20-game winner for the second time in his career Thursday night, stopping Texas 5-1 in the opener of a doubleheader that was eventually swept by the Chicks, virtually sealing up the AL West race for defending World Champion Oakland.

With Jim "Catfish" Hunter hurling Oakland to a 2-1 win over Minnesota, the Rangers now stand six games back with the A's' magic number down to one.

"If you just listen to him (Sain), he'll offer you some good ideas," Kaat said after reaching the 20-win plateau by yielding only the second run in his last 43 innings.

"I've said this before. He's had a lot of influence on my career. He's the best in the business. He has a lot of good ideas and my record around him has been better than at any other time."

Kaat also picked up his 2,000th strikeout in the opening game victory. Jorge Orta drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a double. In the nightcap the Rangers' Jim Babbey went after his 20th triumph but was outduelled by Bart Johnson, who gained his 10th win. Rookie third baseman Bill Stein had four hits and drove in four runs in the 7-2 White Sox victory.

In the only other American League games, Kansas City drubbed California 10-1 and edged Detroit 5-3.

While Kaat was cementing his credentials as a serious candidate for "Comeback of the Year" honors, Hunter, long the ace of the potent Oakland staff, was making his bid for the first Cy Young award of his career by becoming the winning pitcher in the majors.

Hunter, 25-12, was touched for a ninth inning solo homer by Bobby Darwin while pitching his 23rd complete game — a career high. The A's, meanwhile went their five hits off loser Dave Goltz' count.

With two out in the first, Claudell Washington singled, stole second and came home on Sal Bando's single, his 103rd RBI. The other A's' run came in the fourth when Eric Rudi singled and came all the way home when Eric Soderholm threw away Gene Tenace's grounder.

Royals 10, Angels 1

Steve Busby, who earlier failed five straight times to win his 20th game, picked up his No. 22 on a five-hit effort. Busby's grand slam homer in the second inning provided the brunt of the KC scoring and rookie George Brett had four hits for the Royals.

Silk City Finals Staged Tonight

Action in the Silk City Softball Tournament last night saw Pet Car work its way into the finals with three wins, 9-4 over Keegan, 15-1 over McPheter's, and 4-1 over J. Kane.

Pet Car will meet Gaerhaus in the finals tonight beginning at 7:30. If Pet Car wins the opener a second game at 9 will be needed to decide a champ.

Top Players Hurting For AFC Grudge Match

Greenwood, also were injured in a bruising 35-35 overtime tie in Denver last week but should be ready for Sunday's grudge meeting between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Oakland Raiders which could be the team decider.

Both teams have top players banged up and just how well they're patched up for Sunday's battle in Pittsburgh could determine who comes out ahead.

The Raiders' top two running backs — Merv Hubbard and Charlie Smith — have leg problems. Hubbard is especially effective against Pittsburgh in the American Conference playoffs last season when the Raiders crushed the Steelers 33-14.

Clarence Davis in the top reserve back for Oakland, 1-1.

Pittsburgh, meanwhile, has both its starting wide receivers, Frank Lewis and Ron Shanklin, listed as doubtful starters because of injuries. Lewis, the injury-prone lightning bolt, has a hamstring injury and Shanklin, the club's most consistent receiver the past few seasons, has a bruised hip.

Two of the Steelers' top defensive linemen, Al Pro Day and L.C.C.

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The University of Connecticut will try to beat Yale for the second year in a row Saturday when the UConn travel to the Yale Bowl. They have beaten the Elis only three times in 25 games, including a 27-13 win last year.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Cougars' top runner include Larry Woykovich, the premier runner in the NCAA last year. Others are Captain Jeffrey Gowen, Tony Lupachino, Billy Shea, Doug Anderson and Steve Smakulis.

State Inter-Club Golf Champions

Walking off with the Inter-Club Adams Cup in the Connecticut Women's Golf Assn. Tournament at Pautaug Country Club in Baltic this week was the Manchester Country Club entry. Forming the winning unit were, left to right, Sue Eggleston, Joan King, Florence Barre, Dorothy Sauer and Isabelle Parciak. Entries were from Old Lyme, New London, Willimantic, Wethersfield and Pautaug, Manchester last year in 1970.

MacLean's Marker Gives Locals Win

Behind Billy MacLean's sixth goal of the season, Manchester High registered its fourth consecutive shutout win, 1-0 over East Hartford High yesterday at the Hornets' field. The win boosted the Indians' overall ledger to 4-1 with a 3-1 docket in the O.C.L.

MacLean's marker came at the 8:47 mark of the third period on a free kick. It was a 25-yarder which broke through the East Hartford defense, which fell back every time the locals gained possession of the ball. Manchester outshot its hosts, 33-2.

Bob Odell had 15 corner kicks and put every one of them in the front of the net setting up opportunities. Also playing well were senior Co-Captain Mike Lombardo and junior Bruce Ballard.

Manchester's next clash is Monday against league foe Conard High of West Hartford. Game time is 3:30.

Payless Blazers Whitewash Fire

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — In the flush of a shutout of the tough Chicago Fire, Florida Blazers Coach Jack Pardee alluded to the money problems which left his players without paychecks last Friday.

"I could be prouder of this team," Pardee said after his 8-4 Blazers posted a 29-0 victory and held onto the lead in the East Division of the World Football League. "They have overcome so much."

The front office's money shortage didn't bother veteran quarterback Bob Davis, who hit 18-of-25 passes for 297 yards and three touchdowns.

And the defensive unit didn't seem distracted, holding Chicago to 99 yards on the ground and 11 in the air.

"We shut out a great defensive team," Pardee said. "We put our entire team together. They showed the whole country how the Blazers play football."

The game, which left Chicago with a 7-6 record, was televised nationally as the WFL's "Game of the Week" with 16,679 fans, 14,136 of them paying, watched in the Tangerine Bowl.

Chicago Coach Jim Spavital said his star quarterback, Virgil Carter, who connected on only 2-4 passes for 21 yards, was playing with a "badly jammed" finger.

Leo Hart gave a good shot but he has a long way to go. Spavital added, Hart hit 9-of-22 passes for 119 yards.

"We've got to get ourselves together," Spavital said. "We gave them a couple of easy touchdowns on mistakes in our secondary."

Davis, normally stingy with his passes, found a new target in Hobie Bryant, a recent arrival from Detroit who hauled in two long passes on the way to Florida's first touchdown.

Rookie Tommy Reuning, who gained 71 yards rushing and threw a 41-yard pass himself to set up one score, grabbed Davis' second TD strike.

And Matt Maslowitz hauled in a 19-yarder for Florida's fourth touchdown.

The bruising Blazer defense, ranked the best in the league, gave up only 230 yards. Others are Captain Leslie Young, Tony Lupachino, Billy Shea, Doug Anderson and Steve Smakulis.

EC Booters Drop Fifth

Playing its best game to date, the East Catholic soccer team couldn't prevent its fifth straight loss, 2-1 to St. Thomas Aquinas yesterday at Cougar Field.

Bud Krystak scored for the visitors in the first period but St. Thomas' Frank in the second stanza on a penalty kick. Skip D'Addato's third quarter marker proved to be the difference.

The Eagles displayed an offense finally taking 12 shots on net with everyone playing well according to first year Coach Tom Malin. Next game for East is Tuesday at New London High.

Long Hitter

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Jo Anne Carner has zeroed in on the five par fives at Columbia-Edgewater Country Club, making her a strong favorite in the third annual Portland LPGA Golf Classic beginning today.

She was really betting the ball, 290 and 270 yards, down the tree-lined fairways, then picking nine irons and wedges to the greens for second shots on the par five.

"She's like a female Jack Nicklaus," mumbled a man in the gallery following her in Thursday's pro-am play.

She made the three par fives on the front side, which she was playing as the back nine, easy birdie holes.

"But you don't stay in the fairway," said a fellow pro to Mrs. Carner when she stepped up to the 47-yard first hole, which was No. 10 in her pro-am round.

"It was a nice team win and a total team win," Pardee said.

Tie Registered By Indian Girls

Deedocking Enfield High, 1-1, yesterday was the Manchester High girls' field hockey team. The decision left the Indian maidens with a 1-3-1 mark thus far.

"We had a couple of opportunities that I feel we could have turned into touchdowns if Spavital had been in there," Virgil said.

"It was a nice team win and a total team win," Pardee said.

Saturday Football Tests For Eagles and Indians

The tailback slot is alternated between Blair Boucher and Dave Hauck. Other top personnel includes two-way performers Ron Trinks, Jeff Small and Matt Dubiel.

"What we have to do is control the ball. We expect to and come out of there very happy," Olsen stated.

Controlling the ball also is the objective of Eagles' second year mentor John LaFontana. East, 0-1-1 and still scoreless, has moved the ball at times but has found trouble hanging onto it, fumbling 13 times in the first two outings.

"What we're hoping for is good weather. Then maybe we can get our running game going. The blocking has been improving and we've been getting good yards but the offense hasn't been clicking," LaFontana calmly stated. "The team still believes in themselves. But we want this game otherwise the players might start having doubts. They've come a long way. One of these days they'll explode getting all the scoring out of their system."

Information about Kolbe is sketchy other than that it is winless also. It does have good young breakout style runners so the East pursuit and containment will have to be good. The Eagles' defense has done well the first two outings. Now is the time for the offense to exert itself.

BACK TO SCHOOL Harriers Start With Two Wins

Exciting Soccer Season Begins

Marking Dick Danielson's 23rd year as coach of the second year team against Erico Team of Eastford. Along with having strong fullbacks and halfbacks we also have one of the best net tenders in the entire league, which makes for a real tough defense.

The MIS cross-country team started the 1974 season well in the first two meets, the Harriers surprised Hartford.

Public and then went on to beat South Catholic of Hartford. Both races were held in Hartford's Goodwin Park and after perfecting the course the second time around, every single runner improved his time of four days before.

The Harriers have a new coach this year in the person of George Salter. He has coached very successful living cross-country and track teams. MIS has a large squad this year with over eighteen runners.

The Harriers are led by Dave Lemieux and Kevin Schoisky, both seniors. Matt Wallace is a very strong third man, and a senior. Seniors Scott Moffat and Jeff Martin round off the top five. Adding depth to the squad are sophomores Bob Lyon, Rich Telgner, Jeff Orbach, and Jeff Cote. Juniors on the team are Lew Hirschfeld and Tracy Phillip. Seniors on the team are Phidly Snow, Jeff Lampkin, and Bob Thomas.

The top Harriers were trying to set a new record of better than 16:01 by Jeff Geyer. Then came the first home meet with East Catholic. Their lead runner, Jim Guilletti, blasted out at the start of the race and couldn't be caught. He broke the track record by 13 in a time of 15:48. The Harriers lost to East Catholic, 19-40.

The MIS runners' toughest meet are all at home this year so there is a great chance of an MIS runner owning the track record by the end of the season. — Jay Martin

Interviewing Manchester High School's principal had a two-fold purpose. As a senior, who will soon be leaving MIS, I wanted to have the opportunity to meet our chief administrator. Now, after having become further acquainted, I feel it vital to report to you my experience with the student body and reveal what I learned about our principal — George Emmerling. I am grateful to Emmerling for sharing his views and thoughts with us.

Discussing his early life, Emmerling cites scouting as a major influence and activity throughout his teen years. After growing up with the Boy Scouts of America, Emmerling became the assistant director of a New Hampshire troop. This was an experience that was very meaningful to him.

The Evening Adult Study Courses are very popular. This year Emmerling introduced a high school equivalency program, showing his concern for, and assistance to, the dropouts interested in completing a high school education in Manchester.

Emmerling's "humble philosophy" education is regular attendance, good behavior and expansion of knowledge.

His advice to teachers is summed up in "three F's" — long list of responsible positions

Friendliness, Firmness, and Fairness." Strict discipline in Emmerling's opinion, is a necessary ingredient to a well functioning school.

In the near future we will no longer be obligated to house the 250 junior high students. This will allow for the space our 2,000 senior high students need. Emmerling plans to enlarge the MHS' curriculum, further emphasizing his belief that students are different, and their different needs must be met. A media center (with up-to-date material) and an independent study room are other goals in MHS' future.

To grow in a healthy way, any functioning unit needs to change. Open communication and acceptance of responsibility by all is vital. A smooth running, top-notch school is not the result of a principal alone.

Emmerling's superiors, MHS teachers, parents, and students must communicate and work together to continue to improve our educational programs. One often associates change directly with financial sophistication, verbal communication and Emmerling encourages such communication.

A major concern of Emmerling and a gripe among students is the lack of direct communication between administration and students. I was happy to hear that Emmerling expressed his concern with the lack of school spirit. Perhaps, if the feeling of imposed control was lifted our halls and classrooms would be a more vibrant and creative which all people and especially young people possess.

Emmerling treasures his position as advisor to the Senior class. However, he is dismayed by the fact that persons who are students are acquainted with their principal. During the coming year he plans actively to solve this. In assistance, large students to invite Mr. Emmerling to any school activities and club meetings where discussion would be out in the open and communication enhanced.

I appeal to my fellow students to not be afraid. Don't store up problems or gripes concerning MIS, but walk down that corridor, be greeted by the friendly officer, secretary, knock on that door, and speak to the man who can help bring about those changes. Our principal — George Emmerling — strives to help himself. Together we can help bring about those changes. Our principal — George Emmerling — strives to help himself. Assembly Meeting Successful Optimism, dedication and self-motivation are but three words to describe Student Assembly members this year. With only two weeks having passed in the school year, Student Assembly has already had its first meeting. It began the planning of some fall activities, accumulated a large membership (about 100 students), and investigated the possibilities of Teacher Evaluation by students.

The first meeting, which was held on Thursday Sept. 19, was very successful. Not only were committees given the approval of the Assembly to begin finalizing some early and upcoming activities, but the Social Committee, chaired by Sue Camilleri and Bill MacLean, will begin organizing a pep rally and dance for Friday night, Oct. 4.

The SAA committee this year will be headed by Wendell Horwitz. SAA is a general fund which sponsors just about all school activities. Students who are in the planning is a card which would then play for a couple of hours. However, this year the committee recommended that in place of the band, Dick Booth, a disc-jockey, would come and play his "Oldies-over-eighteen" runners.

The Harriers are led by Dave Lemieux and Kevin Schoisky, both seniors. Matt Wallace is a very strong third man, and a senior. Seniors Scott Moffat and Jeff Martin round off the top five. Record Reviews

"Pretzel Logic" Steely Dan
Just because everyone you turned on your car radio this summer you hear "Pretzel Logic" Don't Lose That Number" twice every half hour, till you're so sick of it you bought an FM converter, then there are a few temporary notes to be paid from anticipated income from sewer assessments in accordance with Section 7-289A of the Connecticut General Statutes revised.

Record Reviews

"Who Came First" Peter Townshend
For those of you who don't know who Peter Townshend is, he's the songwriter, lead guitar, back up vocalist for the Who. If you don't know who he is, you are a fool. Who are, go read another column. If you are familiar with the Who, then you know that this album has got to be good.

Record Reviews

"Realisation" Johnny Rivers
Rivers' voice, soft at times and gutsy at others, coupled with Hendricks' live guitar work, produce hit after hit, including "Hey Joe," "Look to Your Soul," "Summer Rain," "Whiter Shade of Pale," and "Positively 4 Street." If you are not a fan of the Who, you are a fool. Who are, go read another column. If you are familiar with the Who, then you know that this album has got to be good.

Record Reviews

"Holiday" America
America has its fourth straight great album in two and one-half years. Holiday, produced by George Martin, East River producer for The Beatles, follows in the footsteps of all previous America albums. The three members of the group, Dan Peek, Dewey Bunnell, and Gerry Beckley, play bass, keyboards and guitar, and have backing help on drums, horns and strings. Add these talents to some skillful songwriting and you get hit after hit including "T.M. Baby It's Up To You," and another Try So, come on old fashioned Holiday with the latest sounds of America — Joe Damon

"Somanhis Needs Help!"
A cover is needed and anyone interested in designing one should submit it to Miss Salvo in room 235 as soon as possible. Also appreciated would be photographic contributions. Both candid and scenic shots would be needed. Don't feel you need expensive equipment or vast knowledge to take pictures. Just get out and snap away. The more pictures we get, the bigger and better our yearbook will be. Short, student-written poetry is also requested.

REAL ESTATE CORNER

By RALPH PASEK

There is common agreement that suburban land has increased in value in recent years faster than any other kind of real estate investment... The advice to "buy on the fringe and wait" has paid off handsomely... Landholding offers tax shelter and the opportunity to develop "capital gains"... However, the land must be carefully chosen so that substantial appreciation in value will take place within 10 years, in order for the investor to break even... Land investments throughout the U.S. have doubled in the last ten years... Many especially promising and rapidly developing areas like Cape Cod, Massachusetts, have experienced a 300 per cent increase in value over the last ten years...

Contractor To Revise School Bus Schedules

COVENTRY
Coventry's school bus contractor has been told to work out an entirely new busing schedule by Oct. 10 which the Board of Education hopes will resolve problems that have been drawing complaints from residents.

An agreement to devise the new schedule was reached in an executive session attended by board members, school officials, and representatives of the contractor Thursday night at Coventry High School.

It was announced by Joan Lewis, chairman of the board, at the outset of a board meeting at the school.

Several of the problems came up for discussion at the meeting, most of them for at least a second time.

Mrs. Lewis said the objective of the new schedule was to achieve a constant pickup time for students.

Mrs. Lewis said a minibus or van would be tried as a means of picking up students from Riley Mountain Rd. where it is apparently dangerous for a full-sized bus to maneuver.

She said two members of the board, Robert Walsh and Anthony Pelice, both bus up the road and concluded it was dangerous.

Mrs. Charles White, who has complained about the situation there, told the board that unless the problem is solved she will petition for a hearing under terms of state law.

Suzanne Brainard wondered about the possibility of using Hindman Rd. as a means of getting from Springdale Rd. back to Rt. 31.

Dr. Ashley later moved that the transportation committee's recommendation for using a van or minibus on Riley Mountain Rd. be accepted. The board did accept it.

The board also voted in favor of a safety plan for such a route on the Springdale road which was delayed until the town explores the possibility of road improvements there.

And the board voted to ask the town manager to develop a safety plan for such a route on the Springdale road which was delayed until the town explores the possibility of road improvements there.

Some members of the board suggested alternatives. Thomas Hill said he isn't convinced some way cannot be found to turn a bus around on Springdale Rd. Dr. Richard Ashley said one recommendation of the board was that the town explore the possibility of reconstruction there and he said he would like to wait for a reply from town officials on that point before a decision is made.

Some members of the board suggested alternatives. Thomas Hill said he isn't convinced some way cannot be found to turn a bus around on Springdale Rd. Dr. Richard Ashley said one recommendation of the board was that the town explore the possibility of reconstruction there and he said he would like to wait for a reply from town officials on that point before a decision is made.

Mrs. Charles White, who has complained about the situation there, told the board that unless the problem is solved she will petition for a hearing under terms of state law.

Suzanne Brainard wondered about the possibility of using Hindman Rd. as a means of getting from Springdale Rd. back to Rt. 31.

Dr. Ashley later moved that the transportation committee's recommendation for using a van or minibus on Riley Mountain Rd. be accepted. The board did accept it.

The board also voted in favor of a safety plan for such a route on the Springdale road which was delayed until the town explores the possibility of road improvements there.

Economic Consensus Unlikely As Summit Meeting Nears End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's inflation summit winds up today, so far without any consensus except that the Fed must not raise rates until the solution to the nation's most vexing economic troubles since the Depression.

Ford planned to preside for a second day at the conference, but his wife's hurried trip to the hospital might cause him to change his mind. Betty Ford was hospitalized for the removal of her breast.

Stoically puffing his pipe, Ford heard one economic interest after another petition him Friday for relief in a long day of hand-wringing oratory. He heard no agreed-upon solution, but instead listened to a determined attempt by the Democrats to blame the Republicans for the country's stubborn bout of rising prices and rising joblessness.

By mid-October, three weeks before the congressional elections, Ford was expected to address the nation with a program for combating inflation. But until news arrived of his wife's personal troubles, the delegates had expected the President to at least give a hint of his intentions at the conclusion of the conference.

More than 700 guests and 800 leaders of business, labor, agriculture and education were expected to attend a precision blow-up of a bank in the heart of the city's gambling casinos Friday night while thousands of persons outside watched a parade.

Instead of the consensus he wanted when he started the process of consultation, he was left with a lower interest rate than he had hoped for.
