Americans Leave Cambodia

United Press International
Waves of U.S. helicopters airlifted Americans from war-torn Cambodia to an aircraft carrier in the Gulf of Siam today before the expected fall of Phnom Penh to Communist-led insurgents.

Three dozen Air Force and Marine helicopters flew 250 persons, a third of them Americans, to the carrier Okinawa circling off the Cambodian coast.

The choppers, guarded by a 346-man Marine battalion and a squadron of 20 warplanes, also flew out 159 Cambodians, including Acting President Sam Khnam Khoy.

The dramatic, mid-morning airlift in the midst of rebel shelling climaxed the collapse of a massive, five-year U.S. effort to keep the Khmer Rouge from taking power in Cambodia.

The military situation around the war-torn Cambodian capital was deteriorating hourly and the fall of Phnom Penh appeared imminent.

A UPI Cambodian correspondent, filing from Phnom Penh after the evacuation, said rebel gunners hit the landing area with rockets during the pullout, killing one Cambodian civilian and wounding another. The correspondent reported that Radio Phnom Penh said Prime Minister Long Boret met with his advisers after the evacuation and decided to form a "revolutionary committee" to rule the country.

There was no immediate indication exactly what the committee will do or who will serve on it.

The capital was calm as dusk fell. Much of the population was unaware of the American departure.

The State Department had vowed to use force if needed "to protect the lives of evacuees," but the Pentagon said the withdrawal took place without any American shots fired.

U.S. Ambassador to Cambodia John Guther Dean arrived today at the U.S. air base at U Tapao, 100 miles southeast of Bangkok, with a dozen members of the embassy staff.

Dean carried the U.S. Embassy and Cambodian flags as he stepped from a "Jolly Green Giant" helicopter. He was greeted by his wife and Air Force Lt. Gen. John J. Burnes.

The officials said the rest of the evacuees, including 62 Americans and 159 Cambodians, would travel on the carrier to the Thai port of Sattahip near U Tapao. They also carried the ship's crew and other members of the Chamber's task forces.

Miss Thomas, commenting on Watergate, said, "It is still in some ways impossible to put it behind us. One thing we do realize is that it diminished us all. It had a life of its own, the inexorable momentum of a Greek tragedy — played out before our very eyes."

"But," she insisted, "out of the ashes has come the reaffirmation that no man, not even a President, is above the law. And, in the words of Supreme Court Justice Potter, 'May this always be a government of laws.'"

She said she was glad to see President Richard Nixon, "He believed, and still does along with his family, that the press and his political detractors did him in."

Pointing out, "Nixon's antipathy for the press is not unique," she gave examples of other presidents and their "presidential umbrellas" protecting them from the press.

She said she was glad to see President Franklin Delano Roosevelt once handed the Nazi iron cross to a soldier who had served in World War II. "I'm most proud to be chosen to serve the Chamber in the coming year. I recognize the challenges and I accept them. I'll do my utmost."

He praised retiring chairman Burl Lyons for his hard-working and dedicated service the past year and presented him with a plaque, "in recognition of outstanding service to the community."

Lyons, in brief remarks, credited the dedication of a fine Chamber staff, and the contributions of Chamber officers and directors for any successes during his term.

Suzanne Flocken, chief executive officer of the Chamber, presented certificates of appreciation to the retiring directors and us or Greek-American congressmen's opposition to Turkish aid. These were two things Ford asked Congress for Thursday night.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "the Congress is not unhappy with the restraints it has placed upon the president and for the first time in years feels like taking a more active role in foreign affairs which have long been the exclusive domain of Presidents. The power is flowing back to the Hill."

She also defended the press reporting of CIA abuses stating the press has never exposed a secret that has resulted in damage to the nation; but many in government have kept secrets which have damaged the country.

"It is important for the people to know what is going on in the White House and in Washington and we, as reporters, are the conduits for this information. Presidents cannot isolate themselves because what they do 24 hours a day can affect each of us. Isolation hurts the president and the public," Miss Thomas said.

Overrun Defense Post
SAIGON (UPI) — Government positions were overrun by Communist troops north of the key defense town of Xuan Loc early today. Other Communist forces, backed by tanks, pushed to the northwest, northeast and southeast edges of the provincial capital. The Saigon command is treating the battle for Xuan Loc, 30 miles northeast of Saigon, as a major test of the South Vietnamese fighting ability. Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces also overran a militia base 65 miles southwest of the capital and cut Highway 4, the rice road to the Mekong Delta.

Blast Kills 11
SANT ANASTASIA, Italy (UPI) — Twin explosions tore through a fireworks factory Friday, killing at least 11 persons. The first explosion erupted in a warehouse containing hundreds of pounds of explosives and chemicals used in making fireworks and ammunition for cnp pistols. As employees fled from the factory the second blast collapsed the packing room burying some workers and hurling others from a nearby workshop. Flames erupted. Officials accused the factory management of ignoring safety precautions.

Former Mayor Harold A. Turkington is greeted by applause and a standing ovation as he makes his way from his seat to receive the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce award. (All Herald photos by Dunn)

Chamber 'M' Awarded Harold A. Turkington

Former Mayor Harold Atkinson Turkington is the 1975 recipient of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce "M" award.

The honor recognizes his contributions to his native Manchester where, for more than 50 years, he has been involved in the business community, the educational and cultural life of the town, and for more than two decades was involved in public service through the political arena and the administration of town affairs.

He received the award Friday night at the Colony, Talcottville, during the 74th annual meeting of the Chamber.

Burl Lyons, junior past chairman of the Chamber board, made the presentation.

Mr. Turkington received a standing ovation as he was escorted to the podium by Judge of Probate William FitzGerald, chairman of the banquet and a former president of the Chamber.

Obviously moved and with his voice quivering, the 73-year-old popular former mayor said, "I think this is the first time in my life I've been lost for words, and it's been my life's career talking to people in business and politics."

He said the award was "nothing I ever expected and I was really surprised."

He said, "I feel very good about everything that's happened to me and the friends I've made. I was born here and I was raised here, and the town has been very good to me. If I live, and I think I will, July 12 will be 55 years on Main St."

Mr. Turkington said it was because of 50 cents he became a furniture salesman, after graduation from high school.

"The Savings Bank of Manchester offered me $12 a week and Watkins offered me $12.50," he explained. "I guess I wouldn't have made a good banker anyway."

He told of the many changes, improvements and periods of growth in Manchester during his years, noting, "The first school budget with which I had anything to do totaled $494,000 — this year it's $13 million."

He concluded with thanks to Watkins Bros. for seeking him out for employment again.

"It's nice to find out you're still remembered and needed," he said in conclusion — to a second standing ovation.

Mr. Turkington's political career began almost by chance rather than by choice. In 1945, when departing upon a vacation trip, he answered, "sure, why not?" more in jest rather than truth when a neighbor asked him if he would consider running for town selectman.

He returned from that trip to learn petitions had been filed in his behalf. His political trademark thereafter

There was something for everyone Friday night at the Colony, Talcottville, when the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce conducted its 74th annual banquet.

There was the "M" award, given to popular choice Harold A. Turkington; there was the intimate look at the White House and the Presidency by Helen Thomas, the UPI's chief White House correspondent; there was the moving performance by gifted and hard-working Betty Rhodes, nationally known singer and comedienne; there was the fine music by the Ken Margerter Orchestra; there was the delicious meal and there were the brief remarks by Chamber officials.

Miss Thomas, the featured speaker, has had the White House "beat" since 1969 and has followed the doings of four presidents — John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. Her 24-minute, 10-page speech covered highlights of the administrations, their differences and, of particular interest to the women in Friday's audience of about 200, the first ladies in the White House.

Miss Thomas is the first woman assigned to the White House by a news-wire service. Before, the first woman White House bureau chief and the first woman officer of the White House Correspondents Association.

Three Rhodes, who played the lead in the New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco productions of "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," completely captivated her audience in her 45-minute show.

Best described as tiny, pert and effervescent, she sang melodies, imitated top women singers, delivered patter and comedy and wound up her performance with a plaintive French tune which won her the starring role when she auditioned for "Jacques Brel."

Miss Rhodes, with her blue eyes and short red hair setting off to advantage a white gown trimmed with sequins above the waist, received warm applause and gave several encores.

The invocation and benediction were delivered by the Rev. Stephen Jacobson of St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

The master of ceremonies was Judge of Probate William FitzGerald, a former president of the Chamber. He kept things moving swiftly and smoothly and introduced the Chamber officers and directors and the personages in the audience.

Among the latter were: State Sen. David Barry, State Reps. Francis Mahoney and Ted Cummings, former State Comptroller Nathan Agostinelli, Town Director Matt Moriarty Jr., Town Manager Robert Weiss, and Lester Boardman, director of administration in Manchester, England.

Boardman visited here in 1973, when he accompanied the Lord Mayor of Manchester, England during the Sesquicentennial Celebration by Manchester, Conn.

Mayor John Thompson brought greetings from the people of Manchester on the occasion of the Chamber's 74th annual meeting.

Conceding his isn't a popular stand and the occasion not the best forum for presenting it, he repeated his support for a state income tax and called on the business community to back it also.

"I must share with you my continuing concern for the high cost of education," he said, "and I must call your attention our insidious tax system — led by a property tax formula — financing that just doesn't meet our needs."

He insisted only an overhaul and a drastic revision of state and local tax structures could provide the needed municipalities with funds needed to give adequate services.

William Hale, incoming chairman of the Chamber's board of directors, said, "I'm most proud to be chosen to serve the Chamber in the coming year. I recognize the challenges and I accept them. I'll do my utmost."

He praised retiring chairman Burl Lyons for his hard-working and dedicated service the past year and presented him with a plaque, "in recognition of outstanding service to the community."

White House Reporting is a Job for Generalists

By FLOYD LARSON

An insight into the life of a White House news reporter emerged Friday afternoon at the Colony when Helen Thomas, chief White House reporter for United Press International, fielded questions from representatives of Manchester area media.

"We are generalists," Miss Thomas said, "who try to put together all the many things that happen in the White House which affects all the people. Because things move so fast and are often so varied it is not often that a White House reporter can do in-depth reporting."

The press corps members try their best to find out what the people want to know, she said, and this means a lot of digging at times because there are still barriers to overcome such as some officials who do not want to talk to the press.

She also defended the more or less exclusiveness of the White House Press Corps on the basis that it should be open only to practicing journalists who cover the White House on a regular basis. She also said there had to be some basic considerations given to the physical protection of the President and his family also.

"The President's life-style sets the White House life-style," she said, "and President Gerald Ford is very outgoing and likes the press." She contrasted the Ford White House with that of Nixon pointing out that Nixon isolated himself whereas Ford may pop up anywhere in his shirt sleeves.

"The President's daughter, Susan, will visit the press corps offices frequently where Nixon's children never seem to trust the press," Miss Thomas said.

Admitting she was a woman's libber, Miss Thomas told of the ways women reporters have overcome discrimination against them because of sex but said she felt UPI judged her on her work and that is why she is now chief of its White House contingent.

When asked if she would consider the job of press secretary to the President, she said,

"No President would want me to speak for them. I am too outspoken. A press secretary has a tough job because he must be able to speak for the President and at the same time he has a responsibility to the people to maintain a dialogue. Jerry Terhorst (Ford's first press secretary) had this quality which I think came from his 29 years as a reporter. And I am a reporter and I want to continue to be a reporter."

Asked if there was a woman who met the qualifications, Liz Carpenter of the late President Lyndon Johnson's staff was suggested.

In other questions, she said she believes Martha Mitchell, who used to telephone her regularly, "was telling the truth and I hope she will continue to call me."

President Ford's requests for more military aid to South Vietnam will probably be rejected by the Congress.

She has seen no change in Sen. Henry Jackson's position on the need for the USSR to ease restrictions on Jewish emigration to set trade concessions from us or Greek-American congressmen's opposition to Turkish aid. These were two things Ford asked Congress for Thursday night.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "the Congress is not unhappy with the restraints it has placed upon the president and for the first time in years feels like taking a more active role in foreign affairs which have long been the exclusive domain of Presidents. The power is flowing back to the Hill."

She also defended the press reporting of CIA abuses stating the press has never exposed a secret that has resulted in damage to the nation; but many in government have kept secrets which have damaged the country.

"It is important for the people to know what is going on in the White House and in Washington and we, as reporters, are the conduits for this information. Presidents cannot isolate themselves because what they do 24 hours a day can affect each of us. Isolation hurts the president and the public," Miss Thomas said.

During his early years on the Town Board of Directors, Manchester experienced unparalleled growth in its education system. New schools built were Verplanck, Bowers, Waddell, Keeney St., Buckley, Martin, Hing, Manchester High, and there were renovation programs at Robertson, Keeney St. and Washington schools.

He was first elected a selectman in 1945, and again in 1946; he was a member of the first Board of Directors when Manchester changed its form of government in 1947.

Mr. Turkington served on the charter commission that drafted Manchester's present charter right after World War II when Manchester had grown from a village to a town.

By the late Judge William B. Hyde, the committee decided the town meeting form of government no longer could meet the challenges of a fast growing community. It organized a modern representative form of government that has served Manchester for 28 years.

He also later served on the first charter revision commission to amend and update the charter in 1958.

In 1960, the Board of Directors elected Mr. Turkington its chairman, with the ceremonial title of mayor.

Before his political career was over, he had been mayor for five full terms, deputy mayor for two terms, and secretary of the board for three terms.

He did, in effect, have two political terms, because he was re-elected in 1959—a retirement that lasted one full board term.

When he retired in 1969, more than 500 townspeople gathered at the State Armory, a 21-member non-political committee that crossed party lines planned the evening League's 1930 p.m., return trip from shopping.

The late State Supreme Court Justice William J. Shea, a speaker at that testimonial, said of Mr. Turkington, "He is a man of dignity and understanding, qualities which are not often brought to offices of this size and standing in this area. He was Manchester's mayor in the period of its most intense growth and pressing problems. He dealt with them with credit to himself and honor to the community."

The road that connects Haynes and Alpine Sts. behind Manchester Memorial Hospital with S. Hawthorne St. was named Turkington Dr. in his honor by the Board of Directors when the road was built several years ago.

His leadership qualities were early discovered. He was president of both his junior and senior classes in high school. In sports, he was captain of both the baseball and basketball teams. In those days one player shot all the fouls in basketball, and he was the SMHS foul shooter.

Mr. Turkington's musical abilities were more from natural talent and heredity rather than formal training. He early learned to play the brass instruments and the piano, and became an accomplished cornet player. He learned the other instruments, too—the reeds, woodwinds, and strings—and taught most of them.

Mr. Turkington composed many pieces of music still used in Salvation Army circles, both instrumental and vocal arrangements.

Manchester Evening Herald OPINION

The Economy? It's Tough All Over

If misery loves company, Americans, caught in the twin tolls of inflation and recession, have plenty of it.

Last year was not a very good year anywhere in the world, except possibly for those countries sitting on top of lots of oil, according to a survey by the International Labor Organization, a specialized agency of the United Nations.

Rising unemployment, which affected one country in three in 1973, hit two in three countries in 1974, sometimes abruptly. In several of the industrialized nations, unemployment on such a scale had not been seen since the end of World War II.

The biggest increases in unemployment were recorded in Cyprus and Denmark, where the number of jobless quadrupled. In Australia, Chile and West Germany, the number of people out of work about doubled.

France, Greece, Israel and the United States had a rise in unemployment of more than 40 per cent over the latest 12 months for which figures are available. There were noticeable increases in Belgium, Ghana, India, Ireland, Japan, Malta, the Netherlands, Nigeria, Pakistan, Puerto Rico, Spain, the United Kingdom and Yugoslavia.

Somewhat offsetting this was a slight decrease in unemployment in some 15 other countries and territories, mostly in the Third World.

As for inflation, figures from 126 countries and territories showed much sharper price increases in 1974 than in 1973, and there had already been unusually rapid price increases in 1973.

Food prices were largely responsible for the increase in developing countries, whereas in most industrialized countries these went up less than other consumer prices.

Consumer prices went up by more than 20 per cent in 44 developing countries and exceeded 30 per cent in 17 countries and territories. In the United States, prices went up by 12 per cent from November, 1973, to November, 1974, making the biggest one-year jump since 1945.

A dozen countries fared better, registering price increases of from 5 to 10 per cent, including Austria, West Germany, Iraq, Poland, Switzerland and Tunisia. Hungary, Niger and Congo saw their consumer prices increase by only 3 to 5 per cent. The smallest rise, less than 1 per cent, was in Czechoslovakia.

But nowhere in the world was a fall in consumer prices reported. Fortunately, average wages in all of the reporting countries generally keep pace with inflation, says the I.L.O., so that workers' purchasing power was not reduced in most of the reporting countries. Interestingly, average wages for women went up faster than those for men nearly everywhere.

Paper Everywhere

There's little danger of recession in the paper industry — not that part of it turning out the stuff on which government forms are printed.

Last year, the average businessman had a total of no less than 2,178 mandatory federal forms to fill out, says the Water Quality Assn. Although this was an increase of only 159 forms since 1967, the paperwork is getting more complicated. At any rate, the multitude of government reports, applications, compliance reports, statistical questionnaires, tax returns, etc., etc., etc., is taking longer to process.

In 1974, businessmen were spending 35.6 million manhours a year to complete these forms, up 11.9 million manhours from 1967. This doesn't include time spent on state and local forms.

Expanded federal programs such as the Occupational Safety and Health Act, Social Security, manpower training, environmental protection and equal employment opportunity compliance have accounted for most of the increase.

Vassar Curbs Pornography

ANDREW TULLY

WASHINGTON — Vassar College, the former all-female learning factory, may have found a way to curb the pornography which periodically floods certain campuses in the name of freedom of the press. Or something.

Vassar's authorities have deleted 25 pages from the school's yearbook and fired its editor, Terry D. Gruber, 22, of Pittsburgh. The administration acted according to Jack Duggan, Vassar's vice president for student affairs, because of "an unauthorized and excessive expenditure and to remove material that was clearly obscene by anyone's definition."

Well, one man's obscenity is another man's avant garde art form. But on that score, it is significant that the president of the Student Government Association, Erica Ryland, agreed that the yearbook was "full of libelous statements that were clearly obscene and could cost us a libel suit."

What intrigued me, however, was Duggan's and Ryland's emphasis on obscenity. It is not that the president of the Student Government Association, Erica Ryland, agreed that the yearbook was "full of libelous statements that were clearly obscene and could cost us a libel suit."

Now that is an argument asserted pious and mamas across the land can understand, because it is they who foot the bill for more or less educating college students, a tab that includes such fringe costs as producing yearbooks and athletic association memberships. A more liberated parent might think it broadening for his sprout to be exposed to a certain amount of smut, but he does not wish such exposure to threaten his check book.

This is a fact of life too many college authorities have ignored during the past permissive decade. They have stressed sexual high-jinks is better and more satisfyingly practiced behind closed doors — and no cameras, please. Ninety-nine per cent of today's young 'uns will discover this, as they will arrive at the realization that even work is preferable to starvation. In short, I retain my confidence in time, the great healer. Meanwhile, let's hear it for Vassar's Jack Duggan and Erica Ryland.

Sam? ... The name sounds suspicious ...

Citation for John Moran Bailey

Last June, I was asked to write five citations to accompany honorary degrees given at a university commencement. Among them was the citation for John Moran Bailey's honorary law degree.

At this time of mourning him, it seems fitting that these words of acclaim, conceived from testimonials of his observers, be shared with readers:

"As a man who inspired others to become statesmen, John Moran Bailey has become prominent from the city of his birth, Hartford, to nation's capital. Because of his strong sense of man's imperfections, as well as of man's need for human dignity, he has, more than most, mastered the art of compromise. He has created harmony out of political chaos and advanced himself from state to national chairman of his party."

This illustrious Democrat has been the leading actor, a knight-errant of a kind, in some of the greatest political adventures of our day. Among them his most successful, the winning of the campaign that made John Fitzgerald Kennedy the 35th president of his country and the first Roman Catholic to father it. Among other successes are the campaigns of Abraham Ribicoff to the Governor of Connecticut and the transforming of his bold platform into legislative reality; also the victories of John Dempsey, resulting in his record ten-year tenure as Governor of our state. John Bailey is a partner in the law firm of Bailey & Webster and serves on the Board of St. Francis Hospital, Guaranty Bank & Trust Company and Connecticut Bank Federation.

He was unanimously elected Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, serving in this capacity during the administrations of the late John F. Kennedy and the late Lyndon B. Johnson, until 1968.

With a keen eye for charismatic powers in his fellowmen, an innate sense of strategy, and an accurate antenna, John Bailey instantly picked up what was unclear, cloudy, unspoken among his friends as well as his opponents. He has, like a computer, recognized signals that have been lost to his rivals and associates. This sensitive movement of mind, together with a patient penchant for peace, accord, or John Bailey's way of life.

His romance with the entire political process; his passion in his partisanship to his party. To this realist, the ultimate goal of this process is not much to change, as to preserve our society — to keep us aloft. To this experienced teacher, the great lesson is to make friends, not enemies. His handshake is his contract, his word is his bond.

A lawyer, a judge, a politician, a private citizen, John Moran Bailey's total commitment to the scene of selecting and electing to public office men and women of his party is legend. We honor him for his devotion to the causes of so many who have relied on his direction."

Ambassador Shirley Temple Black Comments On Her African Job

Editors Note: Lee Roderick is on a fact-finding tour of Africa and the Middle East. The following is another of his exclusive reports.

ACCRA, GHANA — Shirley Temple. The name oozes with nostalgia for tens of millions of middle-aged Americans and other movie-goers around the world. The bright-eyed little girl who starred in over 40 major motion pictures, however, now would like her fans to appreciate her for new reasons.

"I hope you know I'm very serious about this job," said that little girl, now all grown up and in West Africa as U.S. Ambassador Shirley Temple Black, at the end of an interview. "It's not a glamorous job. It's a lot of hard work."

Because of her obvious desire that Americans know the seriousness of her work, Ambassador Black was mildly perturbed at my report that the CBS television show "60 Minutes" had intermingled film clips of some of her old movies in a recent report on her life as ambassador to Ghana.

"However," she brightened, "at least people knew what I was doing as a child. I wasn't stealing hubcaps. They knew exactly every move I was making. You don't have any public figures whose you really know when they got a gold, the measles, and all."

Whatever other worlds she conquers, however, there is little doubt Shirley Temple will always be best remembered — and the best loved — for allowing us to affectionately share, however vicariously, the dreams and triumphs of a beautiful child.

Today, as the wife of marine biologist Charles Black for nearly 25 years and as ambassador here for three months, she laughingly confesses that her child-star background has helped open diplomatic doors.

"Most Ghanaians haven't seen my films, and know me only for my work at the United Nations and as ambassador here. This is a help to me, actually," she explained. "I do meet older Ghanaians here at the University or in the law field who have seen the films in London or in other countries where they've been students. They act kind of misty-eyed and sentimental for a moment, and then get on with the work."

Ambassador Black continued: "My husband has made more of an impact in other parts of the world. Anwar Sadat of Egypt said his favorite film was 'Heidi,' which I made. He saw it in London when he was a young man in school."

"When I was at the U.N. (as U.S. representative to the General Assembly in 1969-70), I welcomed the Peoples' Republic of China on behalf of our country. And — would you believe — the man I talked to was the first secretary of the P.R.C. delegation, and he said he'd seem me in several films in Peking. So it does help."

The ambassador added that, "The thing that's good about it for me is that other countries think of me as a friend — or a distant relative, and that helps in my diplomatic work."

Since arriving in Accra Dec. 2, Ambassador Black has paid individual courtesy calls on each of the 30 other ambassadors to Ghana, as well as to each congressman in the military government of Col. I.K. Acheampong. She still is required to attend a diplomatic function almost every evening. ("This is one part of the job that frankly gets me a bit.")

Acheampong was the leader of a revolutionary coup that toppled the previous government in early 1972. "This government is a fairly stable government," said Ambassador Black. "This is the first time I've been involved in a military government, and sometimes I forget I'm in a military government. But I don't notice anything that particularly bothers me. At the moment, our relations with Ghana are very good," she added, knocking softly on a wooden coffee table.

The ambassador, still pretty at 46, was decked out in a bright orange patterned dress, with her hair styled in a matching scarf. She was pleased when told she fit in well with the traditional costume worn by Ghanaian women in a matching scarf. She was pleased when told she fit in well with the traditional costume worn by Ghanaian women in a matching scarf.

She presides over a staff of 60 Americans and nearly that many Ghanaian helpers. The embassy was designed and patterned after a native chief's house and built to be the U.S. Consulate in the city. It is a large, modern and attractive, but is far too small for the present staff, which is currently inconveniently spread out at several locations throughout the city.

"All U.S. embassies are basically furnished alike," she explains. "They're live. Applied to meticulously, but I'm going to add some colorful cushions and some plants, and I now have music piped in. I've also had an office chair shipped here from one of my husbands' offices in California. It replaced a gigantic, deep-seated leather chair with a high back. The last one fit the previous ambassador — he was 6'3". But I'm only 5'9"."

Turning to her work, Ambassador Black said, "We have a very important job to do; not just giving money. We have to extend our hands in friendship. We've to become known for the kind of people we are; and we're good people."

"My job is to represent the United States interests in Ghana — in black Africa. So my job is to bring companies together with counterparts in Ghana; to encourage the exchange of journalists and of students. This effort is already underway, but I'm trying to put a little more life into it."

She added that, "We have some important business here, such as Kaiser Aluminum and Firestone Rubber, among others. I've tried to encourage U.S. business to 'don't just take,' but even if it's something small it's nice to give, too, through scholarships and so forth."

"We do quite a lot in this line, but we don't talk about it. And I've accomplished a tremendous amount since I've been here, but I can't talk about it, either, which is unfortunate."

Discipline And Punishment

Dear editor: This is in reply to the letter of Mrs. Jean Campbell, appearing in The Herald April 5.

Mrs. Campbell, no one that I know wants inadequate human services. No one to my knowledge desires to shut off communication with our youth. Indeed, our town has shown itself quite progressive in that respect. Church and municipal facilities for our young people are available. Rabbis, priests, and ministers give of themselves ungrudgingly, as do social work people of all types, and others. I believe sincerely that what you suggest in these respects is already being done and done well.

Let me, however, take direct issue with your statement concerning discipline and punishment being "temporarily" effective. Applied to mindlessly, fairly, and in a "no nonsense" matter, they are always effective. A person of our past will show you, I am sure, that as our society has become more permissive, our crime rate has soared in direct proportion.

While no one advocates a return to the stocks, it is very apparent to anyone looking at crime statistics that the "pendulum of permissiveness" has swung far too far in one direction.

We in Manchester have an excellent police force, dedicated public servants, and, in the main, fine young people. However, there are flagrant offenders who should be punished and very definitely incarcerated. Mrs. Campbell, we neglect to punish them at our peril and no amount of rationalizing can change this.

Our history shows that our people, in their innate wisdom, have a faculty for counting swings to one extreme or the other. I humbly submit to you that the current groundswell of concerned citizens in Manchester and elsewhere is a definite manifestation of this. I would further point out that this groundswell has no political boundaries.

William E. Bellore

Dear sir: March 31, I attended the public hearing of the Joint Committee on Education of the Connecticut General Assembly in Hartford. Observing the democratic process at work was an exciting experience. Teachers from across the state came to the State Capitol and proclaimed to the members of the Legislature their views on a wide variety of upcoming legislation.

As a teacher and citizen, I was impressed with the above yet appalled by the blatant violation of the statutes of this state by the very people who created them. I address myself to Public Act 74-128 which bans smoking at public meetings.

This law was enacted by the 1974 General Assembly and is now being violated by the current Legislature. In this era of mass citizen apathy and a disregard for the political process, I now find it very difficult to justify in my social science classroom (the American way) when an arm of that institution disregards a law which protects the rights of all citizens.

I thereby call upon Reps. St. Pierre, Francis Bertolini and other legislators who felt they had a license to violate the laws of this state, to cease their activities and demonstrate to the youth and public at large that democracy as a political process is and should be responsive to the needs of all.

WINGS OF EVENING BY CLIFF SIMPSON

A Sound of Gentle Stillness
If you were asked what part of the church service made you feel most aware of God's presence, would you reply "The altar and the chalice"? This is a question I used to ask the Confirmation Class members when I was minister at Center Church. The majority of them answered that they felt closest to God during the prayer, the "preparation poem" before the prayer, or the moment of silence after the spoken prayer.

THE Bible Speaks by Eugene Brewer
Man's restless quest for truth often is hindered by human relations. Jesus was armed with loyalty to devotion or children above prevention to Christ. Reliance upon certain respected persons as the source of truth, stifles one's initiative to seek.
When confronted with a conflict between a cherished position and apparent truth, people often react by referring to teachers, preachers, and theologians. Their reasoning: How can such scholars be wrong? Aristotle is credited with saying: "Plato is dear to me, but dearer still is truth."

A Versus B Bowler
One of the successful qualifiers in the first Men's Handicap Duckpin Bowling Tournament at the Holiday Lanes to determine the 1975 champion was Don Mathews.

Don penned a note to this writer after I expressed my opinion that a true town championship tournament should be rolled on a scratch basis.
Mathews made several fine points.

...As a class B bowler please consider the matter if you were probably are on the side of the fence.
"Probably 95 percent of the entries in the town tournament are B bowlers, and that means almost all money to be given out is from B bowlers. Now, what chance does a person have who bowls once a week, or twice, against a professional who travels the circuit, bowls five or six times a week and carries a 140, or better, average?"

"True, it's not my fault that my average doesn't compare to a class A bowler, but still the fact remains, why should they walk away from a tournament with B bowlers' money when the percentage is with them to win it from the start?"

Mathews had a suggestion. "Why doesn't Holiday Lanes (sponsor) have a town A tournament and a B tournament? — the winners to bowl against one another from scratch. I doubt this will ever happen because there aren't that many B bowlers who consequently many class B bowlers must be included with the A's to sweeten the pot for them."

There are perhaps a dozen, at the most, Class A bowlers residing in Manchester and several hundred B bowlers. Any male bowler with a 120 or better average is listed in the A group — 124 and less in the B category. Paul Correnti, Holiday Lane manager reported.

I can see Don's points, which are no doubt shared by many, especially B bowlers, but I still maintain the town championship should be on a scratch basis open to all. This year's tournament will be the official Men's Division handicap champion, and will not carry the same prestige if scratch rules applied.

Notes Off the Cuff
Nice to hear that at the recent Knights of Columbus Sports Night, Fran Mahoney was honored for his 20 years as general chairman of the event. Gerry Williams, a one-time time line baseball and basketball player, now the grand knight, made the presentation. Jack Repass, UHafford sports information director, reports the bar girl for the varsity baseball team this spring is Robin Case, daughter of former Washington outfielder George Case. The latter was the perennial American League base stealing champion for nearly a decade. Westy Tech's tennis team has found a home court, the Cheney Steeple. Thanks to Sol Cohen of The Herald, who won four cases of tennis balls in Brown's Tire contest, Cheney's tennis squad picked up the balls a gift before winning its first match.

There are some 10-pin followers who feel Ken Thomas is ready for the tough professional bowlers' tour. Currently he ranks with the best big pinners in New England and he rates a salute for achieving the first perfect game ever rolled at the Parkade Lanes in its 15-year history. Thomas turned in the feat last Thursday night. Have a nice weekend.

of the visiting Eagles. Senior right-hander John Koepsel went the first seven innings for Manchester and notched the victory. He allowed three hits, two of them homers as Eagle centerfielder Tom Cleary forgot a cardinal rule — touch first base — enroute to an apparent fourth inning double. Cleary boomed a one bounce shot to the snow fence in right and arrived at second. He failed to touch first, Manchester caught it and appealed, and Cleary boomed a one bounce shot to the snow fence in right and arrived at second. The pitchers were ahead of the hitters, as expected, and the nine runners getting three in four trips to the plate along with two RBIs and two stolen bases. Victor Nunez had two hits for the visitors and two RBIs. Prince scored the only run it really needed in the fourth inning, adding two in each of the fifth and seventh innings and a single run in the eighth.

Pete Ostashev went the distance for Cheney and absorbed the loss, which evened his ledger at 1-1. Ostashev's teammates didn't support him as they had in the opener, committing six errors against the Hartford-based winners.

facéd, and exhibited excellent control walking only one before giving into the eighth inning to junior flamethrower Bruce Ballard. Ballard completed the shutout, getting four of the last six outs on strikes.

The Indians got both runs off starter and loser Steve Butler in the bottom half of the third inning. The same of all hurlers — bases on balls — led to Butler's downfall. One of the three runners he put on scored, the third out down stealing. Ray Sullivan drew a one-out free pass, took second on a wild pitch and moved to third on an infield out.

MacGovern charged with an error for allowing the second run to score.

Only one other time did either side have a threat going — that by the Silk Towers. The Indians had men on second and third in the opening inning with one out but failed to push a marker across. The farthest any Eagle base runner advanced was to second.

Wethersfield put two men on in the sixth, but Maloney made a fine grab just in front of the backstop fence to end the frame.

One Question For Nicklaus

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus has demolished the entire Mastersfield and the only question left is will he be the hero?

It's virtually certain no one else is going to if he keeps playing today and Sunday the way he did in the first two rounds when he got off to the fastest start of anybody in Masters' history.

Nicklaus moved into a commanding five-stroke lead at the midway point of the tournament Friday by putting together a 68-67 — 135, nine possession record for the lowest score ever posted here for the first two rounds.

And, to quote Tom Watson, "I think it looks like he is going to be pretty hard to catch." Nicklaus has the cut with before and let them get away, said Nicklaus. That happened in 1971 and was by nine strokes. Heritage Classic, when he led by six after two rounds and fell back into a tie with Tom Watson (Glasgow 13-16) at the end of the first round.

But just about everyone else appeared ready to concede Nicklaus his record fifth Masters title and his 15th major championship right now.

"I've got you, never know about a golf tournament, but I'd like to believe he's going to win," said Jerry Heard, his Friday playing partner.

Mrs. Ruoff was born in Manchester and had lived in East Hartford for 35 years. For the past few years, she spent several months each year in Ormond Beach. Topping the Manchester news this week was the Wednesday afternoon slaying of a young man on a downtown Manchester sidewalk, outside his mother's place of employment.

Within an hour after the fatal shooting, State Police had a suspect in custody. Donald J. Pascale, 23, of Somerville, N.J., was charged with murdering Leo E. Gauthier, 22, of 80 Summer St.

Police investigation is continuing while Pascale is being held without bond. Police said the suspect knew the victim, but authorities haven't offered a motive for the incident.

Budget Hearing

The first highlight of the week was an event that takes place in Manchester every year at this time: The public hearing on the town manager's proposed budgets and tax rates.

About 275 persons crowded into Waddell School Auditorium Monday night and heard pleas for a restrained budget. Frustrations over the economic situation were evident as 21 of the 30 who spoke delivered a clear-cut message to the Board of Directors — hold the tax line.

Earlier in the day, the three minority directors said they'll work to hold the line, and Friday, Democrat Phyllis Jackson said she'll work toward holding the line.

In Government

On Tuesday, Mayor John Thompson said he's backing a state income tax, as one way of helping towns and cities presently being strangled by property taxes.

At its Tuesday meeting, town directors gave the Manchester Rec Swim Club the go-ahead for operating as it has since 1971 — by collecting fees and disbursing them by hiring whom it wishes for swimming coaches. Directors agreed to review the status of Rec Director Mel Siebold, who receives about $3,000 annually as the club's chief coach.

Also on Tuesday, the Board of Directors rejected a request from Manchester Community College for operating a day care center at the old Nike Site and tabled a decision on forming a Manchester-South Windsor Health District.

Business News

A low bid from Hartford National Bank and Trust Co. on an interest rate for Manchester to borrow $1.4 million was said to represent considerable savings over original estimates. The money is being borrowed by the town to finance the planned Regional Occupational Training Center for the handicapped.

The town Planning and Zoning Commission gave the green light, zoning-wise, for a new Plywood Ranch Industries' home improvement center at Manchester Green. Approved by the commission were a zoning boundary change and special exception.

People...

Former Mayor Harold A. Turkington received the prestigious "M" Award of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce at the organization's annual banquet Friday night. The guest speaker was Helen Thomas, chief White House correspondent for United Press International.

Sadness and a sense of loss over the death of John M. Bailey, long-time Democratic state chieftain, were expressed Friday by Manchester political figures.

Manchester Police Sgt. Patricia Graves, head of the local department's youth services program, was accepted this week to the summer session of the FBI Academy, Miss Graves, the first New England policewoman to be accepted to the prestigious school, will attend with Detective Sgt. Raymond Mazonne of Manchester.

Candidates for a new Manchester police chief took oral examinations Tuesday, and announcement of a new chief by Town Manager Robert Weiss is expected soon.

Members of Manchester's Organization of the Handicapped (OTH) are conducting a walkathon today from Manchester to East Hartford and back. Donations will aid OTH.

In Sports...

Wednesday night in the East Catholic High School gym, Manchester Democrats and Republicans played basketball for charity. The Cancer Fund and the Republicans emerged the winners. The score was 28-19.

In his debut as a basketball coach, Len Auster led The Herald squad to a 77-74 win over the Journal-Inquirer in a second Cancer Fund charity game Wednesday night.

The biggest news on the local sports scene this week was the accomplishment of Ken Thomas. The 24-year-old bowler, current town men's 10-pin champion, turned in the first perfect all-strike 300 game in the 16-year history of the Parkade Lanes.

Town duckpin bowling tourney action in both the Men's and Women's Divisions was launched at the Holiday Lanes. Play continues this weekend.

The season's first hole-in-one was recorded this week at the Manchester Country Club when 14-year-old Brian Charlebois, a member of the East Catholic High squad, turned in the feat on the 18th.

Suspicious Fire Destroys Portion Of Vacant House

A fire of suspicious origin destroyed the second floor and the roof of a vacant house at 183 New State Rd. Friday night.

The fire was phased into the Manchester, Eighth District firehouse at 11:37 p.m. As the house is about on the border line of the areas covered by the district and the Manchester, Town Fire Department, district firemen called the town firehouse.

Both departments responded but found the house fully engulfed in flames, a spokesman for the district said this morning.

Deputy Fire Chief William L. Stratton of the town department and the police began an investigation of the cause as soon as the fire was put out early this morning.

The house was considered totally destroyed, firemen said.

Bench Warrant Sought In Murder of Gauthier

A Hartford County Superior Court bench warrant, charging a New Jersey man with the murder of a Manchester man Wednesday, is expected to issue by Wednesday, Manchester Police said today.

Detective Capt. Joseph Sartor said today he expects a judge to act on the warrant Tuesday or Wednesday morning. Local authorities applied for the warrant Friday.

Police are seeking the warrant against Donald J. Pascale, 23, of Somerville, N.J., who is accused of the fatal shooting of Leo E. Gauthier, 22, of 80 Summer St., shortly after 3 p.m. Wednesday in front of Shoor Jewelers, 97 Main St.

Pascale, apprehended by State Police within an hour after the incident, was arraigned in Court of Common Pleas at East Hartford Thursday, and is being held without bond at the Hartford Correctional Center. He is scheduled to appear in the East Hartford court Wednesday morning.

Police continued their homicide investigation Friday, and today, after virtually around-the-clock work, said the evidence is coming together. Sartor still wouldn't offer a motive for the slaying.

It was confirmed Friday that the suspect (Pascale) had been acquainted slightly with both the victim and the victim's wife, Regina Cashman Gauthier.

The victim's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Gauthier, who worked at Shoor Jewelers, said she had never met the suspect until the day of the shooting, but her son and daughter-in-law each had had one-time brief contact with the suspect.

Mrs. Gauthier said her daughter-in-law (the victim's wife) had met the suspect briefly about three years ago while she was in college. About one year ago, after Gauthier had married the former Miss Cashman, the suspect reportedly came to the couple's home but was turned away.

On the day of the fatal shooting, the suspect apparently went to the victim's employer — International Associates Inc. of 333 E. Center St. — looking for Gauthier, and learned that Gauthier might be reached at Shoor Jewelers.

Mrs. Gauthier said she met the suspect for the first time when he came into the jewelry store looking for her son. When Gauthier arrived at the store to see his mother, the suspect went outside on the sidewalk and the shooting occurred, Mrs. Gauthier said.

Laraia Emcees for KofC

FRANK LARAIA

Frank Laraia of 74 School St., past grand knight of Campbell Council, will be master of ceremonies when the Knights of Columbus present a Grand Night of Music April 25 and 26 at East Catholic High School.

The KofC produced ten annual Nights of Music presenting their tenth in 1972. This will make their first appearance since then.

Laraia has been with the Grand Night of Music since its beginning. He has sung with the orchestra at benefit performances and has directed many shows at St. James.

He will sing a 1960 song medley arranged by Enrico F. Reale, director of the orchestra.

Rounding out a program of varied entertainment, Ray Fike and Paul Gagnon, both past performers on the KofC program, will be featured vocalists.

Playing a group of ragtime tunes will be Paul Bourque, a local insurance agent, who has been pianist with the orchestra since its beginning.

Performing some specially arranged saxophone solos will be Dr. I. Kove. He is also scheduled to play a saxophone duet with Paul Grobert, attorney.

A newcomer to the program this year will be Jill Coleman of Rockville who will dance a rock number. She is a student at the Mary Dunphy School of Dance.

The orchestra is comprised of business and professional men from Manchester and the surrounding area.

The proceeds from this year's Grand Night of Music will benefit the Manchester Scholarship Foundation in memory of the late Rt. Rev. Msgr. John F. Hannon who was pastor of St. James Church for nearly 14 years until his death in 1963.

The entire production is under the direction of Enrico F. Reale.

'Studio Theatre' Formed in Town

A new and unusual acting group, "The Studio Theatre," has been formed in Manchester.

Spearheaded by Mildred Dana, the group plans to create a permanent acting troupe that studies and performs as an ensemble unit.

Ms. Dana says, "The Studio Theatre is a non-profit, non-Equity, professional theatre group."

The founding group of about 20 Hartford area actors and directors is drawn from former students of Mildred Dana, a professional actress who has coached individuals and acting groups in New York City, in Lyme, and at Manchester Community College.

Additional Studio Theatre actors will be selected by auditions; directors and technicians, by credits.

Unlike community theatre customs, The Studio Theatre will not cast each public production by general auditions, but will draw its casts entirely from its regular members, in the manner of such renowned New York theatre groups as The Group Theatre and the Actors Studio.

Also, in the style of the latter groups, productions will be rehearsed "until ready," even for an entire year, if necessary.

The Studio Theatre members, however, may at any time take part in a more highly-paid theater job and still maintain their membership in The Studio Theatre, and later return to work with it.

The Studio Theatre will perform both published plays and original scripts, both dramatic and musical works.

Attendance at monthly meetings and laboratories is open only to members, and their regular attendance is mandatory. New members are to be on a three month probation.

Officers of the new group are: Mildred Dana, director; Richard Dana, assistant director; Joan Coates, secretary; Ruth Treat, treasurer; Debi Burt, newsletter editor; Debbie Popillo, publicity chairman; Ellen Kaplan, playreading chairman.

Annual Show

Manchester public schools will present their annual art exhibit in Watkins store window on Main St.

The works selected by elementary art teachers will be on display April 15 through April 29.

International Fair Set At UConn Tomorrow

An enlarged entertainment program and carnival amusement rides are the added features of this year's miniature World's Fair at the University of Connecticut Sunday.

Because of its added features, the International Fair will be open four extra hours, from 1 to 9 p.m., at the ROTC Hangar in Storrs. A nominal admission will be charged at the door, but children under-10 will be admitted free with parents.

The fair consists of 30 booths representing as many countries, nationalities, and ethnic groups. These will feature exhibits - some with slides or films - while others will offer various native crafts or food delicacies. Representatives of each group will be on hand to answer questions.

Twenty music or dance ensembles are scheduled to entertain. Included will be belly dancers, a Chinese chorus, and dance groups representing Ireland, Lithuania, Portugal-Brazil, Puerto Rico, Poland and India, among others. The audience will be invited to participate with the Arab, American Indian and Greek dancers.

One of the newest additions to the Cheney Tech baseball program is a pitching machine which is being put to use to get the hitters' eye and stroke down pat. If you don't hit, you don't win on the diamond.

Spring Practice In Manchester

By Len Auster

Spring is now upon us and with its arrival comes another scholastic baseball season. Manchester High, East Catholic and Cheney Tech began spring training in Manchester March 10 readying themselves for the upcoming campaign.

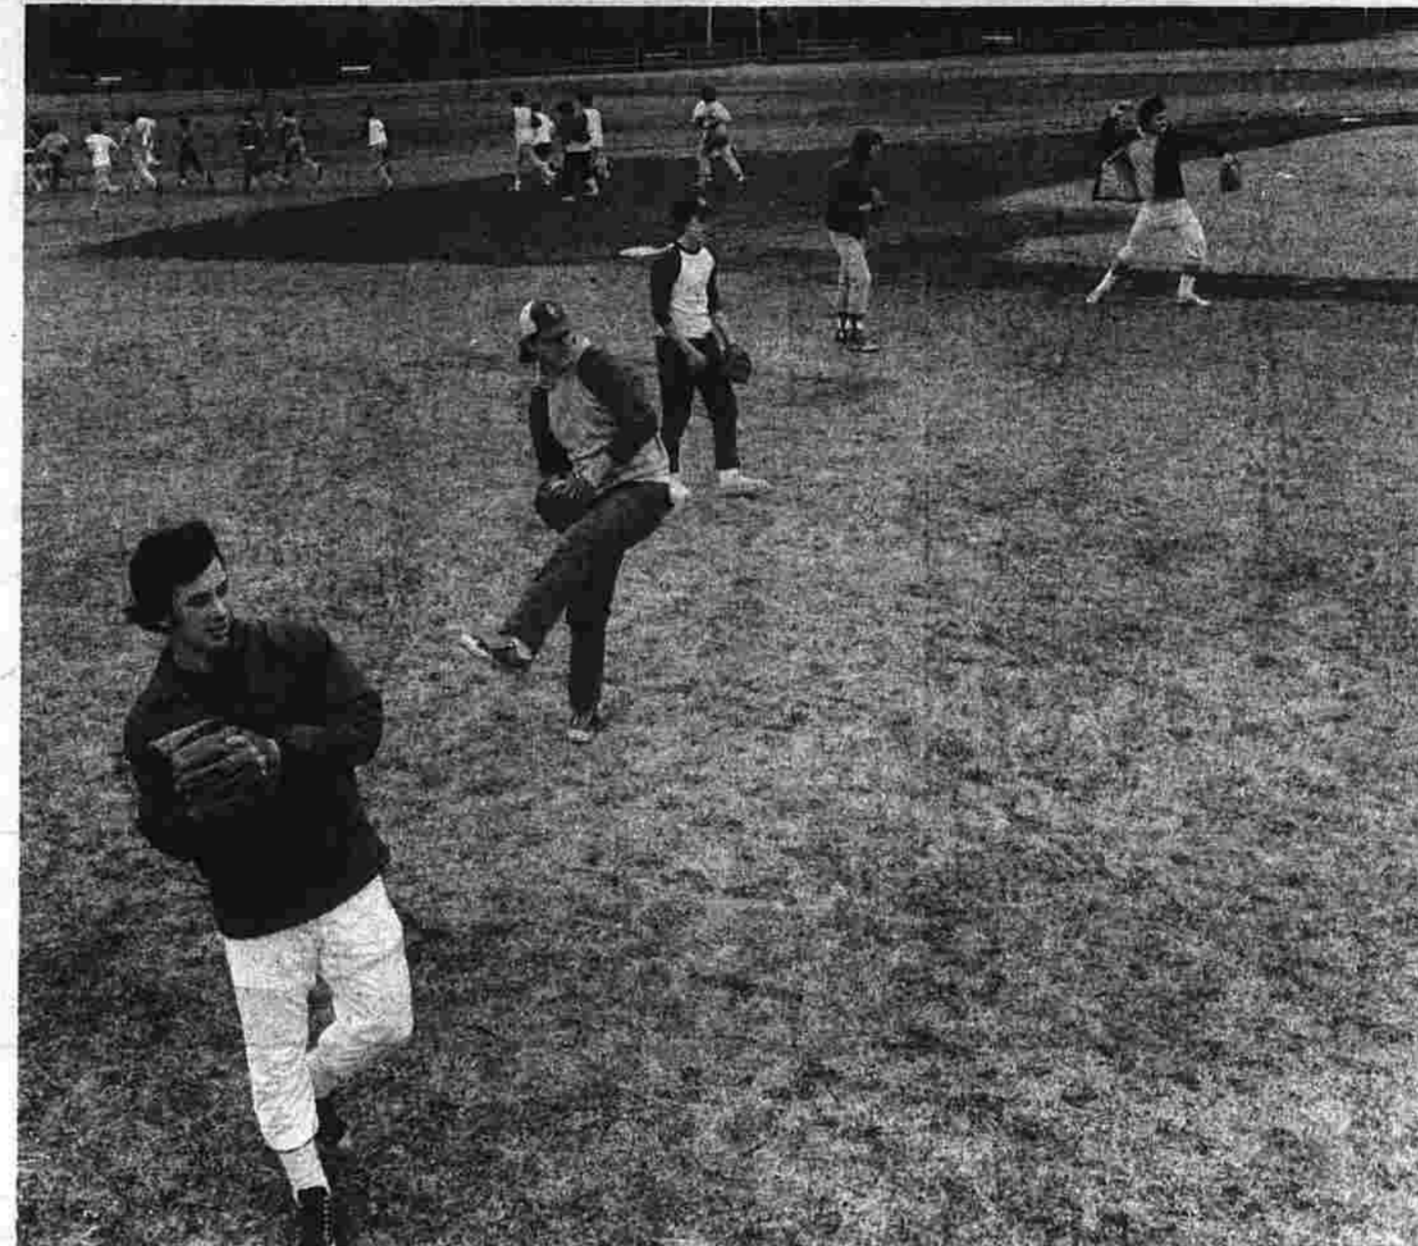

The Indians hope to duplicate or surpass last year's fine season of 15-6-1 when they advanced to the Class AA quarterfinals before being eliminated. East had its finest year since 1965 going 14-4 over-all while hope springs eternal at Cheney Tech with Jim Krone taking over the coaching reins.

Each team hopes for the best when it begins but before that, they have to get in a little training. The photos illustrate some of the preparations made before the first pitch is thrown.

When weather doesn't permit a team to get outdoors and practice, it must revert to other locations. Coach Harold Parks couldn't get his Manchester High team outside this day, but he still had them running wind sprints to get the legs in shape.

← East Catholic infielders, pitchers, outfielders get their arms in shape for the upcoming baseball season.

One important aspect of the game is to learn the right moves in the right situations. Here, two Cheney Tech players get in some infield practice on one of the few balmy spring days we've had this year.

East Catholic baseball coach Jim Penders hits a few to his infielders to get his club ready for the 1975 season which begins in just a short time.

Shrine Circus Coming

Circustime is here, and once again the Shriners Circus will open the big top performances in Connecticut.

The "big top" in this case is the State Armory in Hartford, where Sphinx Temple Shriners will again stage their annual circus — this the 43rd annual show.

This 22-act, three-ring circus will open Friday, April 18, generally known as "Shrine Night." Weekday show hours will be at 1:30 and 7:45 p.m., and Sunday hours will be 2 and 6:30 p.m.

It's not just another circus, says Harold McCallister, general show chairman for the Shriners.

"The happy-happy Shrine Circus will bring enjoyment for the entire family, he said. "There will be the lions and tigers in a combined ring, aerial acts, high-flying motorcycle act, elephants, dancing dogs, orangutan to spice up the chimp act.

"Lou's Lizzie is an ornery and clever car; and Lou, looking slightly Chaplinesque, corners a huge thunder of circus laughs as the object of the machine's wrath," McCallister said.

Al Youngman is the renowned circus band leader who will furnish music for the entertainers.

Baron Julius Von Uhl brings his lions and tigers to the center ring.

In the thrills and chills department, almost all of the aerial performers deliver at least a few spine tinglers, McCallister said.

La Bella Raquel swings out over the audience, minus a net.

Tony Steele hurls himself from a tiny platform near the top of the domed ceiling onto a balloon cushion that catches him.

And what's a circus without clowns! There will be plenty of them, McCallister said.

Drawing the show to a close will be the famous human cannonball, Hugo Zucchini, who flies through the air at jet-like speed from the cannon into a net on the other side of the armory.

Sphinx Temple Shrine Band, with many Manchester-area musicians, will entertain with a pre-show concert opening night and again at the Monday, April 21 evening show.

Show prices are unchanged, McCallister said; they are $2 general admission, $3.50 balcony admission; and $4.50 reserved seats.

Reserved seat tickets are now available at Room 100 on the first floor of the State Armory on Broad St. in Hartford.

Miners' Strike Topic Of Free Film at MCC

"Salt of the Earth," a classic film account of a strike by Mexican-American miners in New Mexico, will be shown April 17 at Manchester Community College.

The free film will play at 9:25 a.m., 1:45 p.m., and 7 p.m. at MCC's main auditorium on the Bidwell St. campus. The showing is sponsored by MCC's Women's Center and a Latin American History class.

"Salt of the Earth" was filmed in 1954 by Herbert Biberman, with screenplay by Michael Wilson. The film chronicles the changes in consciousness which enable miners and their families to succeed in a struggle against a powerful zinc company. It looks at working conditions, labor organizing, women's rights, the politics of housework, myths of male supremacy, class struggle, and racial tension.

Most of the cast are members of Local 890 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Biberman was one of a group of 10 Hollywood artists who went to jail during the McCarthy era for refusing to discuss their political views. The film was forced out of circulation shortly after it was released.

Learning With Toys

Three-year-old Yelitza Torres of 321 Spencer St. is learning to count the round pegs as Mrs. Eileen Tupper, teacher, places them in the holes. Yelitza is also learning shapes, colors, and number concepts all through a new program of "learning toys" introduced this year by the Manchester school system.

In this particular instance, Yelitza, who is a member of a Puerto Rican family, is also sharing her learning experiences with her mother who speaks little English.

In the photo at right, Yelitza is developing her own coordination by trying to put the pegs in the holes by herself.

This program will provide Yelitza with the basic learning fundamentals and knowledge of English which will help her in kindergarten.

Authors, an Award and a T.V. Show

Author

Laura Ingalls Wilder

At the remarkable age of 65, Laura Ingalls Wilder began writing her series of "Little House" books that have become children's classics.

"I lived everything that happened in my books," she wrote. Mrs. Wilder lived from 1867 to 1957. She wrote warm and inspiring books about the hardships and joys of pioneer life.

T.V. Show

Michael Landon plays "Pa" Ingalls

The T.V. series, "Little House on the Prairie," is based on Mrs. Wilder's "Little House" books. Although it has been criticized for not being a true picture of pioneer life that the books are, the show is popular with young viewers.

The Award

The Laura Ingalls Wilder Award is presented every five years to the author or illustrator whose books have made a lasting contribution to children's literature.

Beverly Cleary, winner of the Wilder Award.

Winner Beverly Cleary

The Laura Ingalls Wilder Award is presented by the Children's Services Division of the American Library Association. The membership votes for their choice. This is a very big honor. Mrs. Wilder was the first to receive the award back in 1954.

Beverly Cleary, whose stories have delighted millions of children, is the winner of the 1975 Wilder Award.

"Henry Huggins," "Ramona the Pest," "Henry and Ribsy" and "The Mouse and the Motorcycle" are only a few of the books she has written for the 8 to 12 age group.

Mrs. Cleary, who used to be a librarian, lives in Carmel, California. She is the mother of 19 year-old twins. Her hobbies include travel and needle work.

Q. Your books are very funny. Don't you laugh and chuckle as you write?

A. "Oh, yes. I laugh with my characters and cry with them, too. When Ribsy, a dog in the Henry Huggins books, barks, I bark, too."

Q. How long does it take you to write a book?

A. "I think about books for years before I write a word. Actually putting words down takes from six months to a year. I write my first draft in long hand. Then I copy it on the typewriter. I work in the mornings. I work in a small study off my living room."

Q. What advice would you give people who would like to write children's books?

A. "Read widely while you are growing up, so you will have standards for judging books."

A mouse named Ralph is a famous Cleary character. He rides a toy motorcycle and wears a crash helmet made from half a ping-pong ball.

Angie Narrates

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Angie Dickinson and Greg Morris will narrate two "Under the Law" features, an education series funded by the U.S. Department of Justice.

"What Is Noise? What Is Music?" is the subject May 10 when Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the New York Philharmonic in a special for children on CBS-TV.

Networks Announce Children's Programs

The three major television networks have announced their Saturday morning lineup of children's programs for this fall, each of them promoting several new, "quality" shows. Here's a rundown of the new series, as described by the networks:

ABC
 • "Uncle Croc's Block," a one-hour comedy-satire combining live action and animation in a spoof of other children's programs.
 • "The New Tom and Jerry Show," a half-hour animated program featuring new versions of the "stars" created 20 years ago at MGM.
 • "The Great Grape Ape," an animated comedy starring a 30-foot ape and his sidekick, a dog.
 • "The Lost Saucer," a live action, comedy-science fiction series about two characters from another planet who mistakenly land on Earth.
 • "The Odd Ball Couple," an animated comedy series about Fleabag and Spiffy, a sloppy dog and a neat cat.
 • "Speed Buggy," an animated comedy-adventure show about three teen-agers and their remote-controlled car.

NBC
 • "Westwind," a half-hour action series about a family traveling around the world in a sailboat.
 • "Beyond the Planet of the Apes," an animated version of the successful ape series movies. It's produced by the same people who did "Pink Panther."
 • "The Secret Life of Walter Kitty," a combination live action-animation show starring a timid kitten who often slips into a world of fantasy.
 • "Josie and the Pussycats," a Hanna-Barbera production returning to TV after a two-year absence.
 • Returning NBC shows include "GO! USA," "Sigmond," "The Pink Panther," "Land of the Lost," "Run Joe, Run," and "Emergency Plus Four."

CBS
 • "The Bugs Bunny/Road Runner Hour," a one-hour mixture of the title characters, plus Daffy Duck, Sylvester and Tweety, Elmer Fudd, and others.
 • "The Shazam!/Isis Hour," a back-to-back live action series of adventures with prosocial values.
 • "Far Out Space Nuts," a comedy adventure series starring Chuck McCann and Bob Denver who are accidentally catapulted into space.
 • "Ghost Busters," a live action series starring Larry Storch and Forrest Tucker. It's a broadly played farce in the Abbott and Costello tradition.
 • Among CBS' continuing series are "The CBS Children's Film Festival," "Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids," "Pebbles and Bamm Bamm," "Scooby-Do," "The Harlem Globetrotters," "Valley of the Dinosaurs," "The Hudson Brothers," and "In the News"

Coming Up on Public TV

Lord Peter Wimsey returns to the scene of a jewel robbery after 18 years and discovers a gruesome murder, an orphaned heiress, and eight sinister bells as Masterpiece Theatre presents "The Nine Taylors" April 13 on public television. The show, hosted by Alistaire Cooke, is in four parts and will be seen on successive Sundays. The story is an adaptation of a mystery by Dorothy L. Sayers. Public television will present the story of the birth, decline, and death of the most massive and magnificent railroad terminal ever built in America on "Died Young," Tuesday, April 15. It was a masterpiece — the Cincinnati Union Terminal — built in 1933 at a cost of $41 million and dead 40 years later. Actress Shirley MacLaine hosts "The Other Half of the Sky" — a film account of her visit to mainland China — this Tuesday on public TV. The emphasis of the film is on the people of China and their daily lives, particularly the role of women in Chinese society. On April 17, public television presents a special, two-hour program — "Quarterly Report: The Last American Supper" — which examines the implications of rising food prices, the declining quality of the American diet, and the severity of domestic and world hunger. The program, produced by the National Public Affairs Center for Television, coincides with National Food Day (April 17).

Ask Kleiner

By DICK KLEINER

DEAR DICK: Does Dinah Shore live with Burt Reynolds or are they just good friends? — M.D.B. GRAY, Waynesboro, Miss.

Is there no middle ground? Actually, Burt and Dinah maintain separate homes so I guess you'd have to stick them in the "good friends" category. Only more so.

DEAR DICK: I've heard a rumor that Burt Reynolds wears a teepee. Is it true? I'm very upset. — PAM ALLEN, Spartanburg, S.C.

Calm yourself, Pam. It's all real — hair and all.

DEAR DICK: How did Barbara Walters ever get on the Today program? She must have something on somebody — she has no talent. — DORAMI PARKER, Grove Hill, Ala.

Like every person in the public eye Miss Walters has her fans and her haters. I find her voice annoying but think she asks pretty good questions. Her forte, however, is getting good people on the show because she knows everybody. She started with Today in '61, as a writer, and gradually worked her way up to her present spot.

DEAR DICK: Tony Orlando is a super-talented guy but there is so little informative publicity about him. Please tell us about him. Is he a New Jersey boy? Also does the thin gold bracelet he wears constantly have any significance? — JEAN MARCUS, Parlin, N.J.

Tony is a New Yorker, of Spanish-Greek ancestry, who began singing at 13. For a while, he quit performing and was a successful music publisher. Then, in '70, he started singing again, with the two girls who make up Dawn. He's married and has two sons. That bracelet? It's a golden copy of an African elephant-hair bracelet his wife gave him.

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me whatever happened to Dawn Wells, who played Mary Ann on the Gilligan's Island series? — ED SPENCER, Steubenville, Ohio

She's still acting, but it's a very competitive business and parts are hard to come by. You can see her in the new movie, "Winterhawk."

DEAR DICK: What has become of Bing Crosby's children by his first marriage: On TV, you only see his children by his second marriage. — JOSIE AIRLA, Salinas, Calif.

Gary is very active, often on Adam-12 and other TV series. Phil sings but only in small clubs. The twins, Dennis and Lindsay, are out of show business.

TV Notes

Joanna Lee makes her debut as a television producer at MGM with "Babe," a CBS-TV special starring Susan Clark as famed woman athlete Babe Zaharias.

Flip Wilson, a long-time fixture at NBC-TV, will star in four television specials for CBS-TV during the 1975-1976 season.

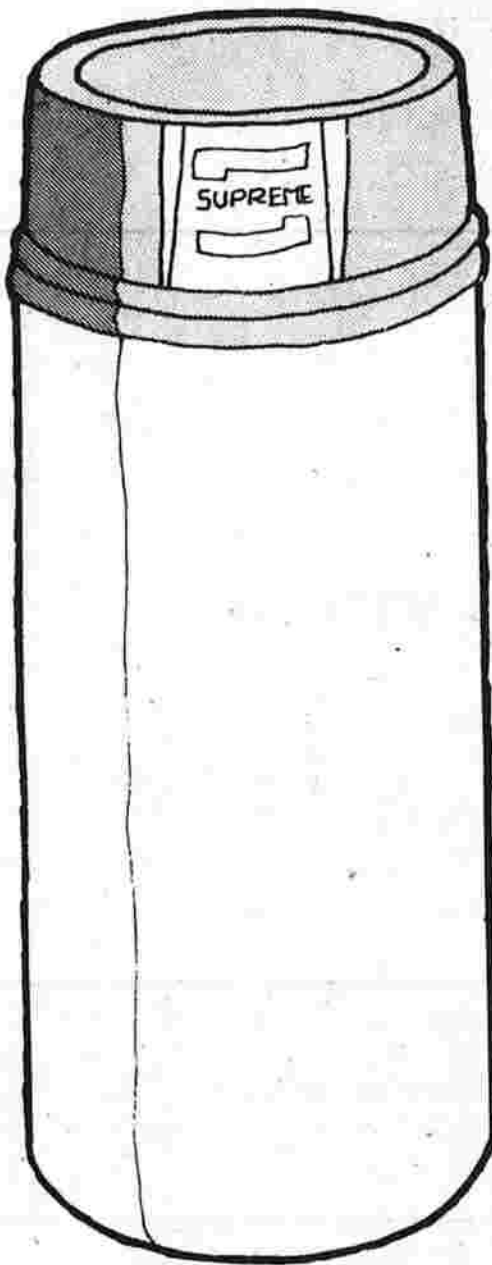

John Gavin and Shirley Jones will star in the television movie-series pilot "The Lives of Jenny Dolan" for NBC-TV.

Bob Hope will headline seven hours of prime-time NBC-TV specials during the 1975-1976 season and several more in the following two years.

"Danny Kaye's Look-In at the Metropolitan Opera" — a special for children — airs Sunday, April 29, at 5 p.m. on CBS-TV.
