Ford and Franco Discuss U. S. Bases in Spain

MADRID (UPI) — Cheered by thousands, heralded like kings by mounted trumpeters, President Ford and Generalissimo Francisco Franco entered Madrid in an open Rolls Royce today and held immediate discussions on the future of U.S. nuclear bases in Spain.

The President and Mrs. Ford flew to Madrid for an overnight visit from the NATO summit in Brussels, on the second leg of their weeklong visit to four European capitals.

Street crowds estimated at upwards of 400,000 applauded, cheered, waved flags and chanted "Franco, Franco" at the passing motorcade in a gay and sunny Spanish fiesta reception that also had touches of medieval splendor.

Franco's horse guard, resplendent in flashing silver helmets and flowing white capes, galloped ahead of the limousine parade as it cruised through the capital and blasted trumpet calls reminiscent of those used to herald old-time monarchs.

Ford and Franco stood side by side in the open Rolls, waving to the crowd in central Madrid streets decked with the U.S. and Spanish flags. Ford smiled and gestured heartily, while the 82-year-old Franco, who barely reached Ford's shoulder, trembled visibly as he returned the public salutes. He reportedly suffers from Parkinson's disease.

The cheering had hardly died away before Ford, Franco, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Franco's political aides got down to some hard bargaining on the U.S.-Spanish alliance and the future of America's nuclear outpost in that nation.

The motorcade took the two leaders to the Moncloa palace, Ford's guest residence, and then to an hour of opening negotiations over Franco's cluttered desk in the Prado Palace, his residence.

Spanish government sources said Franco and his political heirs would drive a hard bargain in the talks over the price they want in return for renewal of U.S. rights to use the nuclear submarine base in Rota and three Spanish airbases.

The Spanish were well aware that U.S. fears over the extreme leftward drift of neighboring Portugal—now the anchor of NATO's southwestern front—gives Madrid extra-strong bargaining power.

They said Franco therefore would press for a formal U.S. Spanish security treaty, a reduction in the 20,000 U.S. military men based in Spain and a fresh supply of modern weapons—including the latest tactical missiles.

The first session opened with a five minute private conference between Ford and Franco before the others joined them. The session lasted an hour and adjourned for a lunch hosted by Ford at the Moncloa.

U.S. officials said they expected no firm new agreement to emerge from the talks on the bases issue. The agreement governing U.S. base rights does not expire until September.

At the NATO summit in Brussels, Ford tried to gain acceptance of special alliance links for Spain and was rejected by such allies as West Germany, who shun Franco's Spain as the theocratic black sheep of Europe.

Ford sought to smooth over the NATO rebuff as soon as he met Franco at Barajas airport. "This is a time of rapid change and challenge worldwide," Ford said in an apparent reference to the Portuguese situation. "I have confidence in our proven ability to work together in our common interests."

Ford flies to Salzburg, Austria, Sunday for two days of exploratory talks on Middle East peace prospects with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat.

He flies to Rome for a meeting with Pope Paul VI Tuesday and returns home early Wednesday morning.

Cyprus Situation Topic at Meeting

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Premiers Constantine Caramanlis of Greece and Suleyman Demirel of Turkey met today to discuss Cyprus in their first face-to-face talks since fighting broke out on the Mediterranean island last summer.

Greek and Turkish officials said prospects for settling the Cyprus problem have improved, but not enough to expect quick solutions to come out of the meeting between the premiers.

Foreign Ministers Dimitrios Bitsios of Greece and Ihsan Sabri Caglayangil of Turkey accompanied the premiers to the meeting at Egmont Palace, a Brussels mansion used by the Belgian Foreign Ministry for diplomatic encounters. The foreign ministers held a preliminary meeting Friday.

Stressing the delicacy of the talks, a Turkish foreign ministry spokesman said: "If they meet for only half an hour, it's bad. Let's hope for two hours."

The spokesman said the ministers might issue a press statement after their talks "depending on what happens inside."

Both Greek and Turkish officials said Friday they felt more optimistic about prospects for resolving the Cyprus crisis after attending the just-concluded North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit meeting.

A high Greek official said he felt there was an "overwhelming desire by both the Greeks and the Turks to restore the southeast flank of the (NATO) alliance."

But Turkish Foreign Ministry spokesman Semih Akbil said, "the solution won't come tomorrow. You can't expect such problems to be solved in one or two meetings."

NATO Leaders Pleased With Summit Session

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The presidents and premiers of the Western alliance are so pleased with their summit meeting that some are talking about doing it often.

The meeting of the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations ended Friday with little concrete to show for two days of hard work at NATO headquarters outside Brussels.

But Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau suggested publicly that NATO hold more summits—a wish echoed privately by other leaders.

Asked about this, President Ford told newsmen, "I strongly support this. Contact at the highest political level is best."

The summit originally was called to give Ford a chance to assure his allies that despite the Communist victory in South Vietnam, U.S. promises to Europe remain good. But when he got here, he said he found the allies already "consider our commitment firm and vigorous."

Because of diplomatic niceties, it was hard to talk bluntly in formal sessions about some of NATO's most serious problems—the possibility of war between two NATO nations, Greece and Turkey, or whether a third, Portugal, will go Communist.

Faced with this, the leaders made set speeches, quickly approved a broad, bland communique and quit one hour ahead of schedule.

Yet, as Ford noted, there was plenty of valuable "contact at the highest level."

Even before the summit began Thursday, Ford had met six alliance leaders in private meetings. He saw more later on the summit's fringes.

Cuts Start

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dismissal notices will be sent out next week for 16,500 of the nearly 38,000 city workers Mayor Abraham Beame has ordered fired under his "crisis budget."

Beame announced Friday that he had ordered department chiefs to begin sending out pink slips for the first round of firings due under the $11.89 billion "crisis budget" he presented in an unprecedented, live television broadcast the previous night.

The initial round of firings includes police officers, sanitation men, firemen, prison guards, and transit workers.

In his televised address, Beame said his "crisis budget" would require the firing of a total 37,315 city workers on or about July 1.

New Violence Erupts

BEIRUT (UPI) — Premier-designate Rashid Karami, faced with a new outbreak of street fighting and spreading violence, today sought to break a political deadlock over representation of rival factions in his new cabinet.

Fresh shooting broke out Friday in downtown Beirut and spread south to Sidon, raising the toll in 11 days of urban warfare between rightwing militiamen and leftist-supported Palestinian guerrillas to 113 dead and 300 injured.

Gold Sale Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, trying to make a profit on its stockpile of gold, will hold its second public auction June 30.

The Treasury Department said Friday it will sell about one-half million of the 276 million ounces it has on hand. At the current free market price of about $167 an ounce, the sale could earn more than $83 million for the government.

Recession Nears End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eight million people will be on the streets seeking work for the rest of the year, but the nation's recovery from the recession will be stronger than originally forecast, the Ford administration said Friday.

One economist, Irwin Kellner of Manufacturers Hanover Trust, said recent indicators of economic activity provide ample evidence that the recession "is over."

"All available evidence suggests that the recession ended during the second quarter, as expected, and that a broad-based economic recovery is about to get under way," Kellner said.

Norwalk Teachers, Town Officials Advised to Keep on Negotiating

STAMFORD (UPI) — Striking Norwalk teachers and city officials are due back in court Tuesday for a resumption of hearings after Superior Court Judge William L. Tierney advised them to "have the good sense" to keep negotiating.

Judge Tierney Friday listened to four hours of testimony on behalf of the 900 teachers before recessing the hearing to 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Arguing to dissolve a court injunction ordering teachers back to work, a lawyer for the teachers tried to prove that Norwalk Mayor Donald J. Irwin carried out a "political campaign" against them.

Attorney Emmanuel Margolis quizzed Irwin, Robert Aldrich, Board of Education chairman, and June Carroll, head of the Norwalk Federation of Teachers negotiating team.

City officials did not have a chance to show films taken by Norwalk police of demonstrations and picketing by striking teachers. The films may be shown Tuesday.

The hearing was held after teachers, the

One Rebate Check Won't Be Used To Boost Economy

REDDING, Calif. (UPI) — A part-time truck driver says he may frame his $4 income tax rebate check because it will cost him $3 to cash it.

Tom Clough, who worked only five months last year as a truck driver, said he has been unable to cash the federal government check in Redding because he does not have a bank account.

Clough said he could drive 50 miles to Weaverville and cash it at a bank where a relative works. But he figures it will cost him $3 for gasoline for the 100-mile round-trip.

"I just might frame it," he said. "There's not much else I can do."

Norwalk Board of Education and the city's Common Council failed to reach a court-ordered settlement in a series of overnight contract proposals and rejections.

The Norwalk Federation of Teachers earlier Friday voted to reject the latest one-year contract worked out with the school board after an all night bargaining session.

The 2-1 rejection by teachers meeting came after the Common Council rejected a two-year contract agreed to earlier in the day by the teachers and the school board.

Tierney on Thursday ordered both sides to reach an immediate agreement and submit it to a special session of the Council.

Meanwhile, substitute teachers attempted to conduct classes in elementary schools where attendance remained at only about 12 per cent of the 7,400 lower grade population.

The strike has affected a total of 16,000 students in 25 schools.

State Worker Pay Hike Still in Limbo

HARTFORD (UPI) — A series of high level meetings has produced no apparent movement on the deadlock over pay raises for state workers.

Gov. Ella T. Grasso Friday met first with the union officials and then discussed the matter with the legislative leadership, but no changes were reported.

Later in the day, the House postponed consideration of a bill to grant public employees collective bargaining rights, an indication the measure was being used as a bargaining chip.

Another measure due for consideration would give state workers binding arbitration in contract negotiations.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, and the Connecticut State Employees Association have threatened to go on strike but they appeared to have tempered the threat. A mass rally was planned for Monday night at Hartford's Civic Center.

The Connecticut Public Expenditure Council, which opposes the raises, warned that the state would lose budgetary control over salary levels and fringe benefits for the state's 40,000 state workers.

"This would seriously diminish the legislature's historic power of the purse and restrict the legislature's ability to allocate limited tax resources," the private financial monitoring organization said.

At a news conference, Mrs. Grasso said she would not veto a measure given final approval Thursday which would remove from the lawbook annual increments for state workers. Nor did she say she would sign the measure, an indication she might let the bill lapse into law without her signature.

The legislature refused to go along with Mrs. Grasso's compromise plan to tap the state's pension fund for $5.3 million to give workers about three-quarters of the scheduled increases.

Mrs. Grasso reiterated as far as she is

Legalized Hitchhiking Criticized

HARTFORD (UPI) — A bill legalizing hitchhiking in Connecticut has been criticized as a boon to criminals. But, Gov. Ella T. Grasso says it will benefit the handicapped.

Mrs. Grasso said Friday she approved the law because it would enable the handicapped who can't drive, to get rides.

Mrs. Grasso signed the bill Thursday allowing hitchhiking on all but interstate highways, which amount to about 4,000 miles of Connecticut's 18,000 miles of rural, urban and suburban roadways.

But the law's merits were questioned by state police officials, an agency for the handicapped and the Connecticut Automobile Association of America.

State Police Commissioner Edward Leonard, who was appointed by Mrs. Grasso, said he opposed it.

State Police Lt. Vincent Brennan, commander of the Westport barracks, pointed to the escape Thursday of a murder suspect from the Bridgeport Correctional Center.

Brennan said the suspect, Bella Krajger, 42, of Stratford, might have hitchhiked out of the state. "This is another reason we frown up hitchhiking," he said.

Edward McLaughlin, executive director of the Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center of Fairfield County, said "I certainly wouldn't recommend that the handicapped hitchhike." He questioned how many handicapped people, in wheelchairs for example, "would even have access to highways."

The flow of traffic patterns would be broken by "stopping to pick up a handicapped person who would require a greater amount of time to get into a car and some drivers might feel it incumbent to get out and help the handicapped into the car."

Mrs. Grasso said the sponsor of the bill told her a sizeable number of handicapped persons have difficulty getting around because of the lack of adequate public transportation.

"People with some physical handicaps who are not permitted to have drivers licenses, who because of the fact that we do not have as well developed a system of public transportation as we would like, must often depend on the offer of a ride to get from one place to the other," the governor said.

"This group of people is substantial," she said.

The governor said she had assurances from the sponsor, Rep. William A. Collins D-Norwalk, that her concerns about traffic safety were not justified since the measure prohibits hitchhiking along interstate highways.

She said she also was concerned there were only three or four states which permit hitchhiking and that it would violate uniform procedures.

Alex Parley, director of public and government affairs of the Connecticut AAA, said he was "apprehensive, because many hitchhikers are victimized by motorists and vice versa, and it appears to be a growing trend."

Walk-A-Thon to Aid Crippled Children

Between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. Sunday, about 800 teenagers from Manchester will start on a 19-mile Walk-A-Thon for crippled children. The march will start from Manchester High School.

Money from the pledges supporting the event will benefit the year-round Hemlocks Outdoor Education Center for Crippled Children and Adults in Hebron.

Brad Davis, co-host of TV Channel 3's public affairs programs, "What's Happening" and "What's Happening-Update" will join the group.

Unlike most cases where walkers get sponsors to give so much per mile, former television sponsors and friends of Brad are betting he won't make the full 19-mile course. They're giving donations to Easter Seals in spite of his attempt to go all the way.

Davis, a former U.S. Marine, was the 1971 State Youth Director of Easter Seals and has worked closely with teenagers throughout the state the past five years to help the handicapped.

Many local and area persons are helping to make the 19-mile course easier and more enjoyable.

At the four major check points along the way, treats will be provided from hot dogs to ice cream by Smith and Fazzina, Grote and Weigel, McDonald's of Manchester, Hartford Rd. Dairy Queen of Manchester, Bess Eaton Donuts and the Manchester Ice House.

The Rotary Club of Manchester will man all the check points stamping the walkers as they pass through and dispense refreshments.

Red Cross aides will be available for any first aid needed along the way with a Civil Defense ambulance driven by volunteers of the Manchester, Town Fire Department.

Podiatrists Barney Wichman and John Fawcett will be available for any foot problems during the walk.

James Farr of Farr's Bike Store has contributed a 10-speed bicycle for the student who gets the largest amount of sponsor pledges for the Walk-A-Thon.

Waiting to provide free entertainment at the MHS parking area as walkers return from the long walk will be a six-piece jazz, blues, boogie band known as "Northern Comfort."

For information and registration forms, persons can contact local Manchester school representatives, or call the Connecticut Easter Seal Society at 682 Prospect Ave., Hartford, 236-3273.

NEWS FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

By WALLY FORTIN

He there. Well, the gang and I are back again, and although we didn't have all the sunny weather we wanted, the entertainment and food made up for it.

It took a little while to get started, and some busy moments getting everyone off the ship and into the buses. All in all, everyone enjoyed the trip and had a good time.

Our thanks to our friend Paul Ryan who, through the O'Keefe Agency, really did a super job in planning the whole trip. This was one trip in which I didn't have much to do but keep an eye on our members, and because it was an outside agency, they controlled the whole show and did an excellent job.

Now that the trip is history, we will get a chance to show some colored slides to you folks who didn't make the trip. It will also be for those who were on the trip and not going to Wildwood. The slides will be shown next Thursday afternoon and because some are going to Wildwood, we'll repeat the show the following week.

Our golfers played at the Red Rock Golf Course because of the holiday, and these are the results of their efforts: John Gibson, 45; Al Bolis, 47; and Henry Rau and Edward Scott both had 48.

On Wednesday we had nine tables for pinocle with the following winners: George Last, Josephine Schuetz, 59; Emma Russell, 57; Wesley Frost, 52; Ann Thompson, 56; Robina Carroll, 55; Lee Steinmeyer, 54; Edward Scott and Clara Hemingway, 54, and Martha LaBate, 53.

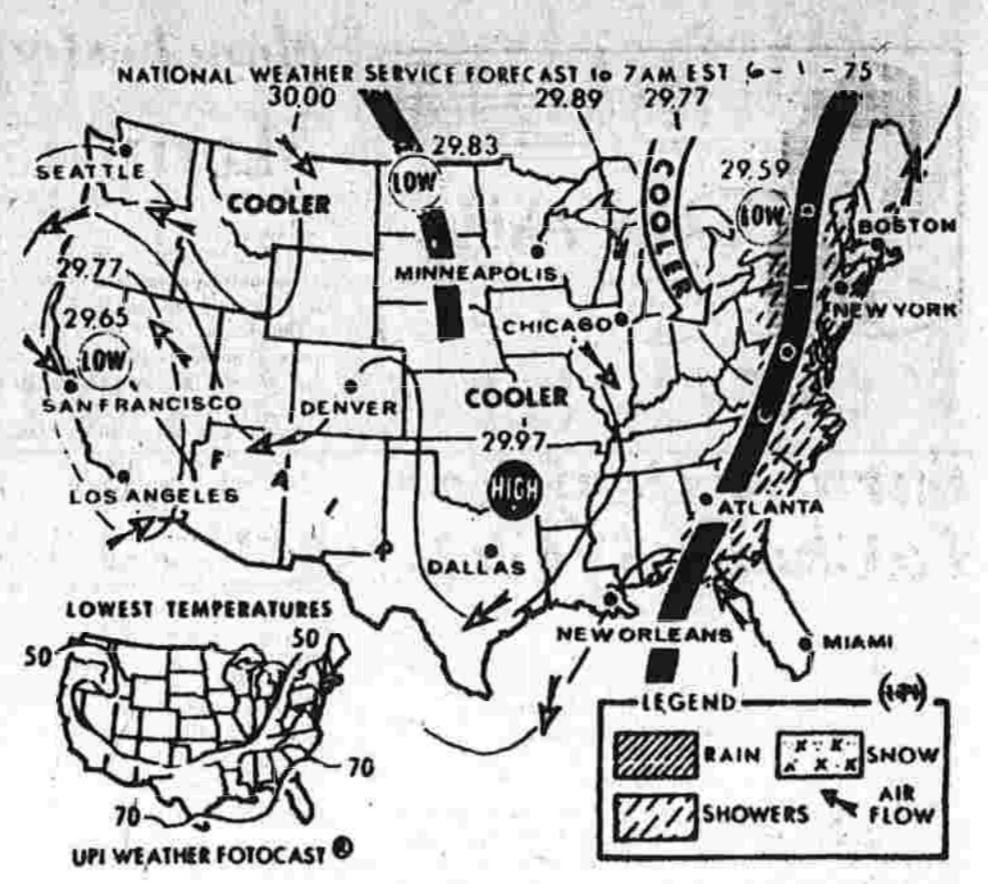

Lots of action is planned for the five days at Wildwood. We still have about four tents left for the second week, so if you would like to hop along with us, you can sign up until Thursday. You can't hardly get a trip like this for $92.50. Call us for information, and then sign up.

The group leaving on the second week, which starts June 9, will leave the Center at 8:30 a.m., and like the first week should be here at 8. Let's start with the happenings here on Tuesday. The news of our bowling league is limited now as the league ended last week. We are now forming our summer league, and any new bowlers are welcomed.

We would like to express our sincere heartfelt condolences to the family of Elizabeth Schulte who passed away last weekend. Elizabeth was staying on Long Island for the past few years, but before then was quite active here at the Center.

Now speaking of Wildwood, the first week starts Monday morning, and all going must be at the Senior Center at 8 o'clock as the buses will be leaving at 8:30.

Then came Thursday, and in the afternoon it was our Fun-Day entertainment of all our seniors who have been putting on shows for us all the past season. As you know, we have a tremendous amount of talent among our members, and they

Turn A Deaf Ear To Chatty Traveler

DEAR ABBY: I love to travel. I've been in 48 states, Mexico, Canada and the Holy Land. I especially like to travel by bus so I can get a close look at the scenery.

I have tried to escape from these nonstop talkers by burying my nose in a book or pretending to "nap"—but then I'm depriving myself of the scenery.

DEAR LIKES: Turn to your seat partner at the beginning of the trip and hope you don't expect conversation, because I am hard of hearing.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are Mormons who abstain from the use of tobacco, alcohol, coffee and tea.

DEAR PUZZLED: I am informed that the Church of the Latter Day Saints leaves it up to the individual. The church has no rulings.

DEAR HOPELESS: Nobody's hopeless. First, teach your children to hang up their clothes when they're old enough and put away their toys before going to bed.

Manchester Evening Herald OPINION

Why Sponsor Mayhem?

There were about 500 robberies and assaults and more than 80 people required treatment at hospitals. In one tragic accident a man walking was assaulted and stabbed in his left eye. Doctors say he will lose the eye. The occasion for this scene of mass violence was a rock concert called "Human Kindness Day," which is possibly the worst semantic distortion which it has ever been our misfortune to encounter. This ugly event took place in Washington, D.C., the nation's capital, and since we are taxpayers we may have had some part in paying for it, since it was partially sponsored by the National Park Service, a government agency. It was racist, according to all accounts, with gangs of roving young black hoodlums harassing white and committing criminal acts without interference from the police. Blacks in the crowd were not subjected to the terrorism. With a black population of about 75 per cent, Washington has the largest proportion of any major city in the United States. The city has been a focal spot of the civil rights movement. A whole generation of blacks has grown up since the landmark school desegregation decision of 1954. There has been a not so subtle change in attitudes since then. To a marked degree there is an adversary relationship between black and white. And authority has bent over backwards in leniency toward black offenders. There has been mauling and ill-founded sentiment of making-up for past injustices to the detriment of a development of equal social responsibility for all. We would presume that a rock concert or gathering of this sort had to take place with the permission of civil authorities. This in itself would be a mistake, acknowledging the propensity of rock festivals to breed violence. If permitted it should have been heavily policed to prevent the racial incidents which were almost inevitable given the make-up of the population and all other factors in the background. And we don't think the National Park Service should have been a sponsor, not with our tax money. These would be the short term steps which were needed. The long term ones of education, development of proper attitudes, and changes in human nature may take a very long time.

Harassment

The harassment of Americans in Laos, including kidnappings and the takeover of the compound of the Agency for International Development, is part of a carefully orchestrated program of discrediting the United States. With Laos now having a nominal coalition government of rightists and Pathet Lao, it is certain that the Communists will assume a greater and greater part in the country now that there is no United States presence in Southeast Asia. The Thai government, which blows like a reed in the wind, is also demonstrating the same trend with its ultimatum that all of our military forces are to be speedily withdrawn from that country. However, as usual, Thailand is playing both sides and was quick to accept our note of regret regarding the use of its base for staging the military effort which resulted in the return of the Mayaguez to its rightful owners. We find it a little unbelievable that we are still considering continuance of the U.S. Agency for International Development funding, even though it has been written plainly on the wall that our period of influence in Laos is ending. The demonstrating students, who are inspired, are demanding that we cease administration of the program and get our people out of the country. That ought to be good enough for us. But we also should stop immediately the $32.7 million appropriation for this agency as well as our $28 million per year for military assistance. Anything that we send to Laos now will be used by the Communists for their own purposes no matter what the State Department may tell us.

ANDREW TULLY CATV Has A Case

Tougher Lobby Law Pushed

By Alan Ehrenhalt
WASHINGTON - Common Cause and its allies in Congress want us all to know a lot more about lobbyists - not just who they are, but who they talk to, what they talk about, who they take to lunch and who pays for lunch. That may be more than a lot of people care to find out, but to the "clean government" forces on Capitol Hill it represents a step toward the open political process that has been part of reformist rhetoric for several years. The past year has produced new campaign finance disclosure requirements and open meetings of most congressional committees. A new lobby law may be next. Shortcomings: There are already a lobby law, but it doesn't work very well. For one thing, no one is required to register unless he considers lobbying his "principal purpose." Since those words defy precise definition, any lobbyist is free to interpret them in his own way and remain outside the law if he chooses. A lot do.

WASHINGTON - No one is likely to convince me that the cable television (CATV) industry is composed of altruists seeking only to improve the cultural quality of its working stiffs. But CATV undoubtedly has a case against the three major television networks. This must have been made clear to the nearest intelligence during recent hearings by commercial TV's official spokesman, Vincent T. Wasilewski, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, who told the subcommittee that the association last year budgeted $50,000 to mount a campaign against paid cable television. And there has been no denial of a statement that commercial TV in the past has successfully lobbied against CATV in Congress. That statement was made by David Foster, president of the National Cable Television Association, who quoted a speech given last year by Everett Erlich, senior vice president and general counsel of the American Broadcasting Co., to a meeting of network affiliates. Foster said Erlich told officials that the network had taken the lead in opposing relaxation of pay television rules, "with the result that key members of Congress made it known in no uncertain terms that they did not expect the (Federal Communications) commission to act on such a far-reaching policy matter" without Congressional guidance. "The commission got the message and postponed for several months reconsideration of this particular issue." Ten million American homes get their television by cable. Of these, about 175,000 homes pay an additional fee to receive movies and other programs not carried by commercial TV stations. But FCC rules and contracts between the TV networks and film producers have the combined effect of denying CATV the right to transmit hit movies to their customers. So far, FCC has sat on its hands. But the pressure on CATV's behalf has been considerable. Recommendations that pay television should be allowed to grow have come from the Committee for Economic Development, a Cabinet committee on cable communications, and an Alfred P. Sloan Foundation commission. Meanwhile, the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy has urged the elimination of some of the FCC's power over cable television in favor of state and local control. Wasilewski told the subcommittee the NAB opposed the offering of TV programs for a fee because the system might force the American programs to pay for their own distribution. "This industry has not developed either the alternative choice for consumer or the competitive contender many of us hoped to see." Because CATV cannot buy too many broadcast restrictions, it is having trouble getting the financing it needs. "The banks are not interested in dealing with a company that cannot obtain the product it intends to sell," said Miles L. Rubin, chairman of the board of Optical Systems Corp. "That just doesn't make sense in a country whose national policy has always been to resist and demolish unreasonable restraints of trade that result in higher prices for the consumer. There is a lot of dough to be made in the television dodge, and commercial TV has not yet been allotted the divine right to hog those billions of dollars. Besides, CATV seeks only to operate in the open market. That's supposed to be the name of the free enterprise game.

OPEN FORUM

Clarification
To the editor: As a well satisfied "Lamaze patient," I feel the need to clarify a few points after reading the article concerning Prepared Childbirth published May 24 in The Manchester Evening Herald. The Lamaze course consists of 12 hours of concentrated preparation for labor and delivery, taught by an ASPQ (American Society for Psychophysics in Obstetrics) accredited instructor in her home. The classes are kept small, usually four to six couples, in order to provide individual attention. Film showing and maternity tour are available in addition to the course. The instructor, required by the hospital for the use of the Lamaze Room, provides constant support throughout labor and delivery plus a "backup" for the husband. This Lamaze program was a wonderful experience for both my husband and myself. It may not be what every couple wants or needs however. I feel it is important that they are able to make the choice. Joel Dennison 142 Spruce St. Manchester

Wrong

In a recent column, I reported that CATV sees "public airwaves," and that there had been instances when X-rated movies were shown on CATV. I was wrong on both counts. In re the "public airwaves" bit, I knew CATV programs were transmitted by private wire. I must have been preoccupied with inventing peanut butter. As for the X-rated movies, my information was that various individuals in the bigger cities had seen such films on CATV. In fact, CATV does not show X-rated movies, but some hotels and motels have put them on TV systems within their buildings. Note: By FCC regulations, CATV is required to provide public access channels. It is prohibited from censoring any material on those channels. Yet, CATV also is prohibited from carrying any libelous or obscene programs. Crazy.

Wants Crusade Against Drugs

Sir: I would like to express my views and opinions on the drug problem. First of all, people say that people take drugs to escape reality (life hasn't been nice to me but I don't take drugs) which is ridiculous. They compare booze to smoking pot and say that drinking leads to bad kidneys and a bad liver, and that smoking pot is healthy or okay. When a person drinks a lot, they will have a hangover the next day. You don't know what might happen to you when you smoke pot or take drugs. Personally, I'd rather get drunk or "bombed" than get "stoned." There is no way you can compare the two. Everywhere you go, you find people on drugs. From Maine to California, you run into drug addicts, addicts who are hustlers. No one ever thinks of innocent people who live with these people, or who work with them (I worked in a warehouse with guys who were on drugs or who smoked pot) when the addicts were busted. I'm so afraid of being arrested that I don't keep drugs or pills in my room (sometimes you read in a newspaper that police broke into an innocent person's home and threaten them). Drug addicts should be put away for good, no second chances. I would like to start a crusade against drugs. Joel Dennison 142 Spruce St. Manchester

OBITUARIES

Mrs. Bazyl Ugolik
VERNON—Mrs. Anna Baldowska Ugolik, 82, of 2 John Dr. died Friday at a Rockville convalescent home. She was the wife of Bazyl Ugolik. Born in Poland, Mrs. Ugolik lived in Greenwich many years before coming to Vernon six years ago to make her home with her son, Richard Ugolik. She was a communicant of St. Luke's Church, Ellington. She is also survived by two daughters, Mrs. Josephine Knowlton of Lakewood, Fla., and Mrs. Ann Davis of Coronado, Calif.; nine grandchildren and a great-grandchild. The funeral is Monday at 9:15 a.m. from the Ladd Funeral Home, 19 Ellington Ave., with a Mass at St. Luke's Church at 10. Burial will be in Ellington Center Cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home Sunday from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

Before his retirement 12 years ago, he was employed as a dispatcher for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. He had worked for the railroad 48 years. He was a member of Second Congregational Church. He is also survived by a son, Raymond G. Halsted Jr. of Manchester; two daughters, Mrs. Malvern A. The family suggests that any memorial contributions may be made to Second Congregational Church.

Bank Charged
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department Friday charged the Bank of New Mexico and its former head with making illegal political contributions totaling $5,000 during 1972 campaigns. Attorney General Edward H. Levi said the department filed a three-count criminal information in U.S. District Court in Albuquerque, N.M., against the bank and its former chief executive officer, W.A. Clarke. The bank and Clarke were charged with making a $3,000 contribution to the senatorial campaign of former state Treasurer Jesse D. Konegay, a Democrat; $1,000 to the senatorial campaign of Sen. Pete V. Domenici, a Republican, and $1,000 to the campaign of Rep. Manuel Lujan, Jr., a Republican.

Classes of 1941 Planning Reunion
The 1941A-1941B combined class reunion committee will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Army and Navy Club. Work will continue on a reunion for the spring of 1976. Howard (Bub) Holmes and his wife, Marge, have been named cochairmen; Bill Moorhouse is treasurer and Betty Brown Peracchio is secretary. Any classmate interest is welcome to attend the planning meetings, Holmes said.

Salt Talks Set
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department has announced that the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to resume the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks in Geneva June 23. In accordance with the understanding reached between President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev at Vladivostok last November, the objectives of the new talks will be to work out an agreement limiting strategic offensive arms through Dec. 31, 1985, said department spokesman Robert L. Funseth.

Tiger Cub Runs Zoo
BOSTON (UPI) — A rare, new-born Siberian tiger is getting the VIP treatment at the Franklin Park Zoo. "Everybody's schedule is working around his," according to zoo spokeswoman Jennifer Beck. The tiny tiger was brought here shortly after being born at the Walter D. Stone Zoo in Stoneham, Mass., because it was the mother's first cub and officials did not know how the she would behave. "He's very healthy, very active and eating well," Miss Beck said. The cub weighed two pounds at birth a week ago and now weighs three pounds, seven ounces. The tigers are on the federal government's endangered species list. Miss Beck said there are 128 male and 168 female Siberian tigers in zoos and reserves and less than 100 are believed still roaming southeastern Siberia and northeast China.

Beating Alleged
CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A man who said he was beaten by Elvis Presley's bodyguard at a Las Vegas hotel has filed a $60,000 damage suit in District Court. Keijo Pajarinen, Las Vegas, brought the action against Presley, bodyguard Bobby West and the Hilton Hotel Corp. He alleged he arrived at a Presley party on the 30th floor of the Las Vegas Hilton Sept. 7, 1973. He said he was approached by West and told to leave until the person who had invited him arrived. Pajarinen said he was escorted into the hallway by an elevator where West allegedly attacked him. He said West was wearing brass knuckles and the asserted beating occurred in the presence of two other bodyguards. He said he suffered a broken nose and other injuries.

Police Report
Lawrence R. Morin, 19, of 12 Brent Dr., Vernon was charged with reckless driving in connection with a two-car accident Friday at 9:55 p.m. on W. Middle Tpk. east of Homestead St. Morin allegedly drove west on the turnpike at a high rate of speed before striking the rear of the parked car of Dominic F. Letizio, 55, of Hartford. A passenger in the Morin car, Brian Harris, 18, of 16 Brent Dr., Vernon, suffered minor injuries. Both cars were towed from the scene. Court is June 17. Bruce V. Demars, 23, of 20 Prospect St. was charged with reckless driving and evading responsibility in connection with a two-car accident Friday at 8:52 p.m. at E. Middle Tpk. and E. Center Sts. The car driven by Demars west on the turnpike went through the red light at the intersection and struck a curb. It then struck the front of the car driven by Mark J. Juliano, 18, of 149 Downey Dr., who was waiting on the turnpike heading east for the light facing him to change. Demars also flattened a sign post, tore up some grass at the park at the Green, and drove from the scene, police said. Both cars were operable. Court is June 17. Barbara A. Blanchette, 21, of Southington was charged with improper passing on the right in connection with a three-vehicle accident Friday at 11:57 p.m. on Center St. west of Broad St. The accident began when the car she was driving changed lanes and struck the van driven by Richard F. Pastizzo, 32, of 31 Laurel St. The van then struck a utility pole. The Blanchette car then struck the right front of the station wagon driven by Florian H. Bolduc, 39, of 86 Linden St. He had seven passengers but none were reported injured. Pastizzo was given first aid at the scene by Patrolman Gary Waterhouse. He was then taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital where he was examined and released. Only the van had to be towed from the scene. Court is June 17. Roy K. Winther, 30, of 64 Lyness St. was arrested Friday on a court warrant charging him with breach of peace. The charge stems from complaints of a prowler in the Tudor Lane apartment complex off Oakland St. in the last two months. He was released on his promise to appear in court June 9. Youths in a dark colored truck drove north on Greenwood Dr. and threw rocks at two neighborhood boys walking along the street Friday at 10:18 p.m. The truck then passed the parked car of Robert Magello of Rocky Hill. The youths threw more rocks breaking the rear window of the car. At about the same time Friday night, a truck with a noisy muffler drove by the parked, 1964 Rambler of Paul Neddon of 246 High St. Neddon heard something and went out to check. He found the rear window of his car smashed with a large rock. However, none were considered of a serious nature. Only one arrest was made and that for a stop sign violation. The complaints were "a little bit of everything," an officer said. They included barking dogs, noisy neighbors and similar complaints. Police found 22 golf and bowling trophies Friday evening in a trash can on top of Wickham Park's hill. The names on them were Dennis and Louette Whalen. Police are now trying to locate the owners of the trophies. The guitar case of Paul Miellette of a musical group playing Friday night at the Gaslight Restaurant on Oak St. was stolen from where he placed it in the restaurant kitchen. It is valued at $60. CORRECTION Ellington The Herald incorrectly reported a two-car accident in Friday's police reports. Stanley Szmela, 29, of Meadowbrook Apts., Ellington was driving southbound on Rt. 83 when his car collided with the car driven by Carroll Mason, 43, of Cider Mill Rd., Ellington at the intersection of Rt. 83 and Cider Mill Rd., state police said. Szmela was taken to Rockville General Hospital where he was given 16 stitches on a throat cut. Mason was given a written warning for failure to grant the right of way to a vehicle not obliged to stop. Both cars were towed from the scene. The error was in transposing the names of the two men. VERNON Police received over 30 complaints Friday night and this morning, many more than the usual.

Judicial Amendments Die in the Senate

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Connecticut Senate has killed two constitutional amendments dealing with judicial reform and postponed consideration of a third. One of the two constitutional amendments killed Friday would have provided for the merit selection of judges. The second dealt with the removal of corrupt or incompetent judges. The Senate deferred until next year a proposal giving the legislature powers to determine court jurisdiction. Sen. George Gunther, R-Stratford, said the decision to kill the measure on merit selection of judges meant it would not be on the ballot in 1976. A short time later, the upper chamber approved the nominations of two former legislators, Robert Satter of Newington and Paul J. Falsely of New Haven, to the Court of Common Pleas. Meanwhile, the House gave final approval to a measure to encourage local communities to make abandoned housing available for "urban homesteading." The measure now goes to the governor. Backers of the bill say it will help stem urban blight by allowing families to acquire housing at minimal cost on condition that they occupy the dwellings for a certain period of time and rehabilitate it. The House also approved a measure requiring proof of no-fault auto insurance coverage before a motor vehicle may be registered. The measure goes to the Senate. A measure prohibiting stores from increasing the price of foodstuffs already on the shelf got final approval in the House and was sent to the governor. Another bill getting final approval brings the state's federal highway program in line with revised federal standards. The bill, which now goes to the governor, would give local communities an increased say in highway projects.

$100,000 Winner Has Confused Day

COVENTRY (UPI) — "Complicated" is how 10-year-old Danny Stevenson described his day as a fifth-grader at Nathan Hale School after winning $100,000 in the Connecticut state lottery. "Everybody was saying, 'You owe me around ten hundred thousand dollars,'" Danny said Friday, "and I said, 'Well I don't have the money yet.' And they said, 'Well, what happened to ya,' and I said, 'I didn't win anything yet.'" No stranger to money matters, having occasionally operated the cash register at Tom's Five and Ten, his father's store, Danny planned to bank his winnings. He was unsure of what the interest come to. "Me and my father haven't checked that out yet," he said. Coincidentally, the bank which sponsors his little league team, Heritage Savings, is where Danny plans to put part of the money, which he will receive in $10,000 yearly checks. Thomas Stevenson accepted the first one for his son at the drawing Thursday night in Berlin because his Danny, the youngest of five children, is a minor. The whole family was on hand as Danny's name was the last to be called. "My father and my brother were saying, 'That's it, Danny, that's it,' and I said, 'No-o-o it isn't.'" He stuck it out. Danny's luck has been mixed. Last year he broke a foot falling off a bicycle, ending his first little league season prematurely. Primarily a third baseman this year, Danny is described as "a pretty good hitter" and a fast runner by his mother. He said after practice Friday that the money hasn't affected his game.

At the Bushnell

Ella Fitzgerald is featured with the Hartford Symphony Pops Orchestra tonight at 8:15 at the Bushnell Memorial Hall in Hartford.

For reservations, call 246-6807. "Art Deco at the Bushnell" and "History of the Bushnell" are special free presentations planned by the Bushnell Memorial in conjunction with the 1975 Greater Hartford Civic and Arts Festival.

Fifteen-minute guided tours pointing out the art deco highlights of the hall and taking a look backstage will be given at 11:30 a.m., 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. daily except Wednesday and Thursday, and at 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. only on Wednesday.

Opened in January 1939, the Bushnell is one of the few art deco auditoriums in the country, New York's Radio City Music Hall being another.

Every half hour from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., a narrated slide show about the history of the arts will be shown in the Bushnell Lounge daily except Wednesday and Thursday, and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. only on Thursday.

The Bushnell Memorial is stop No. 9 on the daily Super Looper shuttlebus schedule run by the Downtown Council in Hartford in cooperation with the Connecticut Co. and the Connecticut Department of Transportation.

Returns to city

The world's "prima ballerina assoluta," Dame Margot Fonteyn will return to Hartford in a performance with the Chicago Ballet June 17 at 8 p.m. at Bushnell Memorial.

Dame Margot has appeared twice before in this city, on both occasions with the National Ballet of Washington.

Her partner for this new program will be Ivan Nagy, solo dancer with the American Ballet Theatre. The duo will be featured in "Romeo and Juliet—Scene d'Amore" and the pas de dix from "Raymonda."

Dame Margot's dedication to her art, her public and life, has made her a legendary figure in the dance world. Her partnership with Rudolf Nureyev which began in the early sixties has only added to the legend which has surrounded her since she became England's leading ballerina in the forties.

Fonteyn's career has lasted far beyond the short duration usual in an art that depends on physical mastery.

Her most recent tours have included Australia, Hong Kong, Japan and Spain.

For reservations, call 246-6807.

Symphony series

The Bushnell Memorial Hall has announced its Symphony Series for 1975-1976.

It lists the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Boston Symphony, Cleveland Orchestra, Los Angeles Philharmonic, Houston Symphony, Monteverdi Orchestra and Choir of Hamburg, and, returning after several seasons, the Chicago Symphony—all with renowned conductors including Ormandy, Ozawa, Maazel, Mehta, and Giulini.

Subscribers may choose series of five, six or seven concerts.

The Bushnell Travelogue Series is also available and makes a fine way for the entire family to attend the Bushnell.

Next year will see filmed visits to Africa, Mexico, the great Northwest, Germany, Scandinavia, Portugal, and our own New England. Prices for this series range from $6 to $10.

For further details, call 246-6807.

Guest artists

American guest artists will be featured at the ten Wednesday subscription concerts by the Hartford Symphony Orchestra during its 1975-76 season.

A performance of an American work at each concert will also be a special event.

Forum of the arts

By June Tompkins

Pianist Ruth Laredo will be guest artist with the Hartford Symphony Orchestra at one of its ten Wednesday afternoon subscription concerts at Bushnell Memorial Hall, Hartford, during the 1975-1976 season, when the orchestra pays tribute to America's Bicentennial celebration.

Other drama

Among artists invited to appear by Arthur Winograd, music director of the symphony, are Tchaikovsky Competition prize-winner Eugene Fodor, violinist, who opens the season Oct. 8 with concerti by Bach and Glazounov; American violinist Isaac Stern; pianists Andre Watts Lorin Hollander, Garrick Ohlsson, and Ruth Laredo; violinist Charles Treger; and baritone Vern Shinall.

Besides the soloists, other special events will include the Hart College of Music Chorale and Chamber Singers, duo-pianists Anne Koscielnny and Raymond Hanson, and a duo-concerto performed by violinist Bernard Lurie and cellist Harry Clark.

Subscription brochures for the coming season are now available at the Symphony office, 15 Lewis St., Hartford, Conn. 06103, or by calling 278-21450.

Dinner theaters

At area dinner theaters, the musical comedy, "Where's Charley," is playing at the Coachlight Dinner Theatre in East Windsor through June 13. For reservations, call 522-1286 or 623-8227.

"The Fantasticks," a delightful musical for all ages, will wind up its engagement Sunday at the Four Seasons Dinner Theatre in Higganum. For reservations, call 345-8515.

Also playing its last engagement Sunday at the Chateau de Ville in East Windsor is Joan Fontaine in "Cactus Flower." For reservations, call 525-1488.

in "Good News," and Lord Brockhurst in "The Boy Friend."

In "Louisiana Purchase," Remme will play the focal role of Sen. Oliver P. Logansberry, a part originally created for comedian Victor Moore. When the Senator is sent to New Orleans on a top-secret, government assignment, he encounters many comical difficulties and several alluring ladies who have been hired to tempt him away from his work.

The Morrie Ryskind book concerns itself with the topical subject of undercover surveillance of big business by national security agencies.

And of course, humor and music prevail throughout.

For reservations, call 873-8668.

In repertory

"Romeo and Juliet" and "King Lear" are presently billed at the American Shakespeare Theatre in repertory for the Student Audience Season which concludes Friday.

"King Lear" continues throughout the summer in repertory with Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" which begins June 10 to be joined by Shakespeare's "The Winter's Tale" which will be added July 22. The three shows will play through the season, which ends Aug. 31.

For information and reservations, call 378-7321.

At the Atheneum

A concert entitled "Entourage," a music and theater ensemble, will be presented Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford. Comprising the group are: Rusti Clark, viola; piano; John Clark, clarinet, saxophone, keyboard instruments; Walt Matthews, acoustic and electric guitar.

The music has been composed by people from the group, primarily Rusti Clark, and will be accompanied by dancers.

The music of "Entourage" reveals Japanese, African and western influences and contrasts more on melodic line and rich texture than on overpowering its audience with sheer volume.

The concerts will take place in Austin Gallery.

At the Atheneum on Sunday at 3 p.m., Truda Kaschmann and her dancers will perform experimental dances entitled "Extended Images" and will welcome the participation of the audience in their celebration of spring. The public is invited to attend without charge.

The event will be in the Atheneum's interior sculpture garden, Gengras Court, or around the fountain in Avery Court if it rains.

Concert in park

Manchester will be treated to an old-fashioned concert in the park June 8 at 2 p.m. when the Sphinx Temple Shrine Band presents a concert of patriotic themes in Center Park at 2 p.m.

Bring a blanket, a lawn chair, and enjoy.

At Goodspeed

John Remme will star in "Louisiana Purchase," the first production of the Goodspeed Opera House summer season.

The Irving Berlin musical opened this week for a six-week engagement. Goodspeed's production of "Louisiana Purchase" is the first since the show's Broadway debut in 1940.

Remme has performed many varied roles for Goodspeed including Watty Watkins in last season's "Lady Be Good," Jim Deming in "Sunny," Bobby

Heralding homes

The way he wanted it

A covered well and stained slab siding give an early colonial appearance to the raised ranch of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lindberg Childress of Mile Hill Rd., Tolland.

"Lindy" hosts the bar in a jungle motif room in the basement. A shuttered pass-through opens into a recreation room.

PHOTOGRAPHED
By REGINALD PINTO

By JUNE TOMPKINS

A builder who is continually obliged to build houses the way his customers want them built his own home in Tolland the way he wanted it — with a modified rustic colonial look on the inside, and stained slab siding suggesting a colonial look on the exterior.

J. Lindberg Childress, known as Lindy to his friends, has achieved the effect of early American colonial with the use of stained rough beams as posts and beams in the living, dining and kitchen areas.

Situated on about 40 acres of land away from the main road, this modern home with all its conveniences has, literally, all the comforts of casual living one could desire.

Its furnishings and decor have been designed by Lindy and Linda with both children and adults in mind.

Except for the white walls which are soon to be painted, the shag carpeting in the hallway, living and dining room in a brilliant blue-green sets the color scheme for the various shades of aqua, hot pink, and gold that are used for accents, not to mention the various hues of green that abound in the many hanging plants in the house.

Plants are Linda's therapy. She is a coordinator and instructor for the Title I program at Tolland Middle School and after a hard day, finds solace in working with her plants.

A sun porch off the dining room has been enclosed, paneled, and equipped with shelves and hooks for the plant family.

There is even a corner for the sick plants where Linda gives them special care and treatment until they revive. There is also a far corner for the plants that are resting.

Asked if she talks to her plants as many do, she said no, but did admit to using piped-in music turned on at a low volume, "even when we're not here." She feels her plants do respond to music.

Small pots of cactus are arranged on a high beam ledge around the living room and the kitchen.

White wicker furnishings in the plant room look extra attractive with their green and print cushions.

In the living room, Mediterranean blue open weave drapes frame a lush hanging Swedish ivy at the paneled picture window.

In front of the long beige, blue and green print upholstered sofa is an attractive and very serviceable coffee table.

Covered with parkay squares of scrap flooring, its protective varnish permits it to be used for entertaining in many ways — eating, beverages, and as a stage for the children.

Linda has made other tables similar in design and purpose in the home. A white one with green and white Naugahyde surface highlights the plant room. The Naugahyde is easily changeable if necessary.

An antique stained oak dining set is enhanced by blue and green plaid seat covers which match the cross runners on the table — made by Linda. On the wall is a conversation piece in bright colored textured yarns created by Linda.

Overlooking the scene is a large wide-framed portrait of Linda's great-grandfather.

Enjoying casual living are the Childress family with Lisa, 7, left, and Jamie, 3, perusing the pictures in a National Geographic magazine. The four-foot square coffee table cost Lindy about $10 to make from scraps.

Linda "mothers" a plant in her plant sanctuary.

There is a large open way between the dining room and the kitchen which permits guests to mingle with those in the kitchen without actually being in it.

Bright large pink poppy wallpaper puts pep into a kitchen lined with dark stained cupboards. For whimsy, bright pink window beads at the window over the sink.

Once a year, Lindy is chief chef when he prepares a game dinner for about 15 of his friends. He is an avid hunter and has enjoyed wild boar, bear, venison and wild fowl, as well as fish.

The trophies of his adventures are exhibited mounted on the paneled walls of the downstairs den. A waterbed in one corner of the red carpeted floor serves as a comfortable retreat before a blazing fire on the brick hearth, a bed for guests, or even a wonderful tumbling center for the children.

"It's really tough," says Linda. Low Swedish tubular settees covered in a watch plaid are versatile and can be pushed together or arranged separately.

Another of Lindy's four-foot square tables covered in black Naugahyde fits perfectly in the den decor.

The master bedroom is colorfully decorated with green walls and purple drapes, and spread.

One of the children's bedrooms is furnished with custom made bunk beds fashioned from No. 3 pine. Matching built-in shelf and drawer units provide plenty of storage. The drawers are lined with scrap paneling giving a unique effect.

More blue-green carpeting is on the floor which gives a muted background for the yellow striped wall paper and yellow walls.

Drama pervades the bathroom with cherry red carpeting setting the stage for an entire long wall papered in a bacchanalian black and white nude print.

The combination of some antique, some contemporary, some handmade furnishings are tastefully blended in a home that provides an atmosphere attractive to all the Childress' friends, young and adult.

Every child should have a home

By MAL BARLOW

"Every child should have a home," says Mrs. Linda Cotter.

She and her husband, John, have made a home for three children. They are Matthew, 6, a natural son; Dorian, 3, a Korean orphan they adopted at age 1; and David, 4, a Vietnamese-American orphan they welcomed earlier this month.

David is the name the Cotters gave him.

He answered to his name within a day. He had been called Din Din at least one of his previous homes since he was born with a birth defect in Vietnam.

The defect is that he was born with his right arm over his head. Without treatment, the arm never gained strength.

Buddhist monks received David at their orphanage in DaNang when he was about two months old. He stayed there two-and-a-half years.

He has marks on his ankles, indicating he may have been too restless and was tied in a crib.

The monks may have felt David was retarded, and they put him in an adoption program.

David went to a foster home in Saigon with about 10 other orphans. His foster father, a demobilized Vietnamese soldier, also had five children of his own.

The Cotters are the area coordinators for the Open Door Society of Connecticut. Open Door members are foster and adoptive parents of "hard to place" children.

Such children are older, often of races different from the parents, handicapped, or in some way hard to place, Mrs. Cotter said.

Two years ago, they adopted Dorian Cotter, a Korean orphan.

Six months ago, the Cotters felt ready to adopt another child and applied. They didn't apply for a Vietnamese child due to the expense at the time, she said.

The application was pending when the latest crisis in Vietnam erupted. Thousands of Vietnamese orphans were flown to America until Communists took Saigon.

The Cotters' social worker called them a month ago and asked them if they wanted to adopt David.

"It took us a couple of weeks of thinking," Mrs. Cotter said. We even talked to people at the Newington Children's Hospital. They helped us decide David's handicap was something we could cope with."

Doctors said David's defect was common in undeveloped countries. They suggested muscle transplants might help the arm.

A psychiatrist in Saigon said David has normal mental abilities. He may have appeared retarded in the orphanage due to the war and crowded conditions.

David also has shrapnel wounds on his head and scattered over his back. He appears not to have suffered permanent damage from the wounds.

"He's a little afraid of playing outside," Mrs. Cotter said.

The details of what happened to David in Vietnam will always be a mystery to us," Mrs. Cotter said.

David arrived in San Francisco about a month ago. After the Cotters decided to adopt him, he was put on a plane for New York.

He traveled by jet with three other orphans in the care of three airline stewardesses.

Before discussing David's arrival at Kennedy Airport in New York City, Mrs. Cotter recalled the first months after they took in Dorian.

For about nine months the little girl had terrible, screaming nightmares, she said. She also had an obsession with food, never seeming to get enough.

"But I don't think I once thought, 'Why did we do this?'" she said.

Dorian was a member of the family right away and has been such ever since. She is now tall and healthy, outgoing, and sure of the love of her family.

"We felt the same way that Wednesday night about David. He stared at the lights along the highway and talked and talked. We didn't know until later he was speaking fluent Vietnamese," she said.

"I am Vietnamese-American," David could say in Vietnamese. He could also say "thank you," "okay," and "cereal," in English.

The family got to their home at 73 Mather St. by 2 a.m. David slept in the room with Dorian and Matthew so as not to be alone.

Neighborhood children had been told of David's coming, and the next morning they were in the Cotters' back yard to say hello.

David confidently stepped out on the back steps and began a lengthy speech which sounded like gibberish to the kids. He swung both arms making his impressive speech.

"He's been the neighborhood darling ever since," Mrs. Cotter said.

Not all was smooth going for the child from the war-torn land.

"He has gorgeous, four-star temper tantrums. I suppose it's better for him to get it out of his system. He sleeps soundly every night."

David shows signs of having suffered from malnutrition. He is small, has a larger than normal belly, and his legs are rubbery, she said.

He enjoys being cuddled but appears to find it hard to return affection. The family's cats steer clear of him.

By swinging his right shoulder, he can get his right hand where he needs it.

John Cotter, an appraiser for the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority is a quiet man, the kind children take to well, his wife said. David was no exception.

Their son, Matthew, went through all the planning for adoption with them. He thinks David is cute. David holds Matthew in awe.

"It's Dorry who has born the brunt of David's adjusting," Mrs. Cotter said. Dorian is just a year younger. Due to her physical development, she's bigger than David.

She is well known in the Cotters' neighborhood and likes to visit. Now she keeps an eye on David as he tags along after her.

Both children are "survivors" in their toughness. Despite their ages, they have survived a good deal. They are both aggressive and competitive, Mrs. Cotter said.

"We might not want them to go through school together," she said. They are now debating starting both children in Matthew's old nursery school in the fall.

A sore point with the Cotters is much of the talk and writing in America about "kidnapping" Far East children to bring to the U.S.

She noted the stigma attached to orphans in Korea. The word, "Orphaned," is stamped on a Korean's identity card. It stays there all his life.

Eastern cultures lay great emphasis on blood lines in families. This may explain their poorly developed adoption systems there.

The children she knows about who were brought here from Vietnam needed a home, David included.

"Every child should have a home," Mrs. Cotter said.

Bette Davis is featured in Atheneum film series

Bette Davis never quite fit the standard image of a Hollywood movie queen.

Lacking both great beauty and smoldering sexuality, Davis has a far more lasting quality — the elusive charisma, composed of a long, slow process which was eventually to free many stars from the system and brought her the respect she wanted.

In tribute to her extraordinary career, the Wadsworth Atheneum will present "Bette Davis: A Retrospective," beginning Wednesday, June 4, and ending on Saturday, June 28.

In addition to evening performances at 7:30 and 9:30 every Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday throughout the month, there will be matinees at 1:30 and 3:30 on Wednesdays and Thursdays and two special screenings of "All About Eve" on June 10, at 7:30 and 9:45 p.m.

Twenty-five Bette Davis films will be shown including such triumphs of her career as "Of Human Bondage" (1934), "Jezebel" (1938), "Now, Voyager" (1942) and "The Corn is Green" (1945), covering the years 1931 through 1965.

Like Katharine Hepburn, Bette Davis began her acting career on the stage but went to Hollywood in 1930 and made a few indifferent films before catching Warner Brothers' eye with her performance opposite George Arliss in "The Man Who Played God."

Warners signed her to a contract and in the next few years the young starlet appeared in 14 films, most of which are better left in the film archives.

In 1934 she convinced Warner Brothers to let her play the slatternly Mildred in "Of Human Bondage," opposite Leslie Howard, and she was on her way.

With the security of her first Academy Award behind her (for "Dangerous" in 1935), Bette Davis shocked the movie world by taking legal steps to break her contract with Warner Brothers in 1936. She wanted better scripts and more control over her career, ambitions which were seldom realized within the form of peonage that characterized film companies' relationship with the actors.

She lost her suit but it was the beginning of a long, slow process which was eventually to free many stars from the system and brought her the respect she wanted.

Between 1937 and 1950 Bette Davis was unquestionably one of the two or three top film stars. Her versatility was extraordinary. She played in underworld melodramas, sophisticated comedies, historical dramas, superior romantic dramas, and made several films which stand out as perfect vehicles for the Davis style.

After 1950, there have been few films which measured up to earlier standards, although Davis herself earned almost universally good reviews. With the exception of "Payment on Demand," made in 1951, the later Davis films have been either melodrama or outright horror, as in "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane" (1961) and "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte" (1964).

Some critics complained that the Davis mannerisms had become almost an institution in themselves, and it is true that impersonators invariably included them in their repertoire. But Davis still had the power to immerse herself in a part and her sustained performances made her a solid box office draw as well as a critical success.

The Atheneum program's first week:

Wednesday, June 4, at 1:30, "That Certain Woman" (1937) with Henry Fonda and Ian Hunter; at 3:30, "All This and Heaven Too" (1940) Charles Boyer and Jeffrey Lynn.

Wednesday and Thursday, June 4 and 5, at 7:30, "Dangerous" (1935) with Franchot Tone, and at 9:30, "The Letter" (1940) with Herbert Marshall.

Thursday, June 5, at 1:30, "Dark Victory" (1939) with George Brent, and at 3:30, "Juarez" (1939) with Paul Muni and Brian Aherne.

Friday and Saturday, June 6 and 7, at 7:30, "Dark Victory," and at 9:30, "Juarez."

Tickets may be obtained at the Atheneum Theatre box office or, in advance, at the Atheneum Shop during regular museum hours, Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

For weekly film schedules, call the special Atheneum events telephone number 247-3695, at any hour.

Pictures by Evans displayed

An exhibition of photographs by Walker Evans is on view at the Archetype Photographic Gallery, New Haven, through June 29.

Evans, one of the greatest American photographers, died April 10 at the age of 71. He had been teaching a seminar on photography at Yale University.

He is perhaps best known for the photographs he made for the Farm Security Administration during the Depression. The apparent simplicity and straightforwardness of his photographs lent dignity and meaning to the lives of the poor and suffering individuals he photographed.

Evans was primarily motivated by an esthetic sensibility for the camera image, rather than by a political commitment to his subjects.

The photographs on display at the Archetype span the five decades of Evans' work. A number of the photographs are vintage prints, and all are for sale.

To complement the exhibit of photographs, the gallery has scheduled two showings of the film, "Walker Evans: His Time, His Presence, His Silence." The screenings will be June 12 and 13 at 8 p.m.

Archetype Photographic Gallery is located at 159 Orange St. in New Haven.

Walking tours scheduled

The Hartford Architecture Conservancy has scheduled walking tours, with stops at the Greater Hartford Civic and Arts Festival, June 1 and 8, starting at 1 p.m. in front of the Wadsworth Atheneum on Main St.

Aim of the tours is to demonstrate Hartford's 200-year history through its buildings.

He has an ear for music

By BETTY RYDER

F. Norman Banta has an ear for music.

He can play a piano, tune it, and in a flash tell you why the ivories are not reverberating the melodious sounds you were hoping for.

No major accomplishment, perhaps, except F. Norman Banta is blind.

The 23-year-old Windsor man, well-known to area piano owners, knows his limitations, has his motivations, and feels secure in the fact that he is living a rewarding and fulfilling life.

Banta, who attended Oak Hill School for the Blind in Hartford for 17 years, has been interested in the piano since he was in the eighth grade.

"We had a piano at home and I have always been fascinated with the idea of tuning. When I was in the eighth grade I asked if I could be part of the piano tuning course, they signed me up, and I continued the course through the full four years of high school," Banta said.

"It gave me a general background about the basics. Later I found that being blind doesn't really matter to people who hire you — it's your mechanical ability that counts."

A soft-spoken man, Banta really does have an ear for music.

Keen Hearing

"I guess it takes a certain ear to be able to hear beat rates — you find you have a keen sense of hearing — and whether you are blind or not you just want to hear them," he said.

Banta has his own business; he services many area homes, and through his work has increased his business contacts immensely.

"I worked as a jobber for stores doing work on display pianos. After I left Oak Hill I took a full-time job doing nothing but piano work."

He speaks highly of the Piano Clinic and Training Center in Batavia, N.Y. which he attended.

Prove Yourself

"You really have to prove yourself. Ninety per cent of what you do, you do on your own — you have to be blind or otherwise handicapped to get in there," he said.

Banta graduated from the center in 1973 and has two years out in the field.

F. Norman Banta, a blind piano tuner, listens for just the right tone as he services a piano for a Manchester resident. (Herald photo by Pinto)

He worked for the Boston Organ Co. in Springfield, Mass., and Clavier Inc. in Avon. He services customers in Rockville, Vernon, East Hartford, Glastonbury, and Manchester.

Sometimes, Norman says, customers get hang-ups when he shows up to work on their piano.

"They become very critical of the job and sometimes the employer will not give me a chance at the job. But I can take a piano and make the action as close to the original as is possible," he said.

Banta admits he has much to learn. But also agrees that a challenge can be one of the most inspiring aspects of every day life.

"There is always going to be something new to learn — you have to work hard and ask questions."

Some Bad Days

He has had his bad days.

"I remember once when I took an old Steinway apart at a church and couldn't get it back together. There was just one piece that had been twisted and it took me a while to figure out what was wrong — but I got it back together and it sounded great," he said.

Another time he was tuning a piano only to find there was a great deal of construction going on outside.

"Men were drilling, hammers were banging, and it took a while to get a silent moment to hear the piano beats I was searching for."

Clocks, music, and hard work comprise a large part of F. Norman Banta's life.

"I love clocks," he said, "and have over 2,000 records, reels and cassettes which include a little bit of everything in the music field."

He lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin N. Banta of Windsor.

"My mom is my chauffeur and drives me to all my appointments," he said.

An Inspiration

Obviously not disturbed with his lot in life, Banta is an inspiration to those around him. He readily faces new challenges and, in fact, welcomes them.

"I enjoy playing the piano, but I don't play by ear — I play by Braille."

In a warm, humorous manner, Banta added, "my dad says I play the radio best."

Mission: Friendship Spaceship

The Soyuz is scheduled for a July 15 launch from Russia.

7 1/2 hours later, the Apollo spacecraft will be launched from Cape Kennedy.

The ships will link up two days later and stay joined together for two days.

After they undock, the Soyuz will stay in orbit for two days and land in Russia.

The Apollo will stay in orbit for about five days and will land in the Pacific Ocean.

An artist's drawing of the Apollo and the Soyuz docking.

Aerosol Test

One of the Russian-American joint experiments will measure the amount of aerosols far above the earth. Aerosols are the gases released in hair sprays and other spray cans. Some scientists feel that these gases might be breaking down a special layer in space that protects us from the sun's ultraviolet rays.

In the middle of July, three American astronauts and two Russian cosmonauts will hold a two-day meeting in space.

This will be the first time that spacecraft built and launched in different countries will dock together.

The mission is a part of "detente." Detente (day-tant) means a relaxing of strained feelings between countries.

It is hoped that by working together towards the same goal, both the United States and Russia will learn to understand and cooperate with each other better.

"If you are afraid of the big, bad wolf, it's only because you don't know the truth about them." This is what experts at the Wolf Sanctuary in St. Louis, Missouri, told The Mini Page.

"Wolves do not eat people. They prey on sick deer or caribou. Each animal plays its part in the delicate balance of nature.

Wolves don't howl to frighten us. Howling is their way of talking, and it keeps them in contact during a hunt.

There are very few wolves left now. Millions of them were killed because they sometimes ate livestock when their natural prey was pushed out of the grazing land."

What Would You Do?

You are at a dog show. Your mother and older sister are having a grand time. You are very bored and want to go home. What would you do?

Larry Clinton, now 65 and enjoying life in Florida, snorts contemptuously at the mention of today's pop music. During the Big Band Era, his name was a household word with "The Dipsy Doodle," regarded as a classic of the swing era. He's shown at right at the top of his career in a 1939 photo. (UPI)

Yesterday's Dipsy Doodle now prefers golf to music

By DAVID LANGFORD

DELTONA, Fla. (UPI) — Tall and mustachioed Larry Clinton looked more like the Hollywood characterization of a British army officer, sitting on the patio in his walking shorts, sipping a glass of ale and snorting contemptuously at the mention of today's pop music.

"I don't even own a stereo anymore," he said, looking out over the fairways of a nearby golf course. "I'd rather be out there hitting that little white ball."

That would not be a surprising comment coming from one of Clinton's gray-haired neighbors in this quiet retirement community near the St. Johns River. But music was his life from the time he started playing Greenwich Village speakeasies as a teenager until he reached the top as a composer, arranger and leader of his own orchestra during the Big Band era, circa 1936-1942.

And if Clinton, now 65, thinks "Dead Skunk in the Middle of the Road" is a sad commentary on the route modern music has taken, he is the author of such forgettable ditties as "Molasses, Molasses, It's Icky Sticky Goo," which made a lot of money for him and Ella Fitzgerald.

The Brooklyn-born, self-taught trumpeter, during his years as an arranger for such big names as Glen Gray and Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, also wrote such wacky titles as "Wading at the Waldorf" and "Dusk in Upper Sandusky."

Then Clinton's name became a household word with "The Dipsy Doodle," regarded as a classic of the swing era, which he wrote for Jimmy Dorsey after the brothers split, and is occasionally revived by various rock groups.

His own favorite was "My Reverie," a hit by anybody's standards.

Today Clinton's comfortable living room is bare of any mementoes of his past triumphs.

"I'm like a drunk who goes to AA," he said. "Don't tempt me anymore."

Clinton, who lives alone with his wife and has a 33-year-old son in San Francisco, finds today's rhythms "very exciting," but adds, "I can't say much for the chords."

"Forget about the electric guitars, organs and the Moog thing," he said. "It's merely a lot of notes put through a bunch of filters and vibrators and things. That's the trouble with today. The kids have no real soloists with their own styles. Thus, the music is too patterned. There's no humanity in the playing."

Then, with a grin, he asks, "Did you ever stop to think what would have happened if Elvis (Presley) played a trombone instead of a guitar?"

As a boy of 14 in Brooklyn (his grandfather was a director of the Aeolian Organ Company) Clinton played with small bands in the New York speakeasies. At one time he worked for Dutch Schultz. "There was a row of bullet holes over the bandstand," he said.

He rose to fame penning hits for the big bands — "Stan Takes a Holiday," "Study in Brown" and, of course, "The Dipsy Doodle."

"In those days radio and remotes were the big thing," he said. "Records were insignificant for commercial or artistic success. Sometimes as many as 400 stations would play 'Dipsy Doodle' on one broadcast."

Clinton performed with Bunny Berrigan for a time; then in 1938 he formed his own band and soon signed a contract to appear on the prestigious RCA Victor radio show.

He remembers the endless road tours, the one-nighters in college towns and weekly stints at such Big Band landmarks as the Glen Island Casino in New Rochelle, N.Y., the Paramount Theatre in New York and Meadowbrook in New Jersey. He flew his own plane while the band traveled in a chartered bus.

There were regular appearances on such radio programs as "The Old Gold Hour," "The Quaker Oats Program" and "The Tommy Riggs Show."

From Maine to California they were doing the Shag, Westchester, the Lindy Hop and the Susie Q to Clinton's bouncy tones.

While Clinton wrote some 200 songs during his career, his favorite — and the most profitable — was "My Reverie," which was recorded by about 500 artists.

During World War II Clinton joined the Army Air Corps and "flew the hump" on missions to Burma.

Unfortunately, he said, "the war killed boys like me professionally."

"By 1948, the Big Band era was dead and gone," he added. "We had to drag couples onto the dance floor to do rumbas and congas. No more jitterbug and swing. It got so you had to go to Arthur Murray's to have a good time."

The musician pondered the reasons: "Any time you take 10 million Americans and put them in uniform, you have to lose some of the individuality that marked our music and its listeners. And, let's face it, there wasn't much to dance about in those days, either. It was a sad progression — from jazz to swing to bop to oblivion."

Clinton doesn't believe the Big Band era will ever return.

"Americans these days have no real heroes anymore, no idols," he said. "Our music was played over radio in homes several times a week. We were like members of the family. All that's over now. 'I'm not a natural ham; the creative and the analytical aspect is completely finished. To tell the truth, nowadays I'd rather play golf.'"

TV notes

A 2 1/2-hour fundraising telethon has been scheduled for the weekend of July 26-27 by the Democratic Party. Last year's Democratic telethon raised more than $5 million.

Dick Cavett will star in a weekly summer series on CBS-TV, the first assignment under an exclusive contract he signed Jan. 1.

Ask Kleiner

By JICK KLEINER

DEAR DICK: I am in a quandary. My parents named me after a character named Jody in a June Allyson movie from 1952 or so, but no one in the family can remember the movie's name or anything about it. Can you help? A READER, Adrian, Mich.

I asked June for help on this one and she can't remember playing a character named Jody. The closest thing to it was Jo, in "Little Women," which dates from '49.

DEAR DICK: Is it true that Ringo Starr and his wife are heading for a divorce? And what is George Harrison's view on his wife's departure to Eric Clapton? — A.G., Chattanooga, Tenn.

From left to right — Ringo, if you believe Hollywood's gossip, is definitely heading for a divorce although his Hollywood rep would only say, "I'm not going to answer a question like that." Harrison has been quoted as saying that he wishes happiness for both his wife and Clapton. Bully!

DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me if either Elvis Presley or Johnny Cash has been in a federal government prison? — LOUISE HALL, Galena, Kan.

Presley has never been in jail. Cash's legend about his prison experience is somewhat larger than life. Years ago, he was held briefly in a Texas prison for carrying pills, according to his spokesman, but never served time. Incidentally, both Presley and Cash got their start with the same small record company — Sun — and went on to RCA and Columbia records, respectively, only a year apart, in '55 and '56.

DEAR DICK: Why doesn't Elton John get married? I'd jump at the chance to meet him. I plan some day in my life to meet him (I hope). — ELIZABETH HAIRSTON, Daphne, Ala.

If you did meet him, you'd find he is a man so wrapped up in music that he wouldn't be much fun. His friends say he lives, eats and sleeps music and has no time for anything else.

DEAR DICK: I contend that the stars of the old musical, "The Firefly," were Jeannette MacDonald and Allan Jones. Am I right? — DELORIS WHITE, Salinas, Calif.

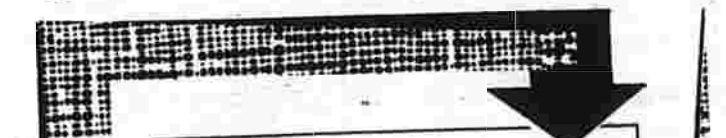

You contend correctly. MacDonald and Jones (the father of Jack Jones) did, indeed, costar in that '37 musical.

DEAR DICK: I was sure that I read that Charlie Weaver had died. Now many times I see him on The Hollywood Squares. Is he alive or am I seeing old reruns? — MRS. F. BECKMAN, Hettlinger, N.D.

Those are old reruns, because Cliff Arquette, who used the Charlie Weaver character, did die.

DEAR DICK: My friend says that Burt Reynolds was not the blacksmith on Gunsmoke, I say he was. Tell her how many years he was in the series. — W. REYNOLDS DUARTE, Roseburg, Ore.

Yes, Burt was the Dodge City blacksmith, but only for one season.
