Three Leaving Illing Staff

Three members of the Illing Junior High School staff were honored at a dinner-dance Thursday upon their retirement from the staff at the school.

They are Elmore Putnam, teacher; Mrs. Mary Klein, cafeteria manager; and William Sacharak, custodian. Putnam has taught in Manchester since 1947, but has been in the field of education more than 40 years. Putnam's future plans include travel, spending time at his other home in Maine, and working with his stamp collection.

Mrs. Klein has been in charge of the Illing cafeteria for 14 years. She has worked in other Manchester schools for more than 12 years. Mrs. Klein plans to take a trip to California.

Sacharak has been a custodian at Illing for 15 years. A devotee of skiing, fishing and camping, he plans to continue his active sports life.

He further said that if the council restored $100,000 of the cut and the saving of the some $60,000 on the budget. He suggested that both groups go along with the total $200,000 cut even though he would be the $80,000 shortage, "But I still feel it's a compromise. We're not getting what we want and you're not getting what you want," he told the council. Council member Gretchen Mason said she could support going with the $200,000 cut if the board turned over the current surplus, "but I couldn't swallow both."

The two boards then separated to caucus for 20 minutes and returned and agreed on the $200,000 cut and the return of this year's surplus with the promise of the school board that no abnormal spending will be done from now until the end of the fiscal year, June 30, so some $100,000 can be returned to the general fund.

The council then met briefly to adopt the $8,859,000 figure and set June 12 at 8:15 p.m. at the Middle School for the second special town meeting.

Asked after the meeting what this new figure would mean as far as the mill rate is concerned, Mayor McCoy said he couldn't say at that point but he speculated the new budget figure would probably mean an increase in excess of the one mill increase he originally thought there would be.

He explained that four out of six salary contracts have been negotiated with a saving of about $42,000 and another should be settled soon and reflect a $200,000 saving.

He explained that a $370,770 increase has been projected in the teachers' salary account and added that the increase offered and rejected by the teachers was 6.5 per cent and would cost about $200,000.

U.S.-Made F16 Fighter Selected by Belgium

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The United States clinched the multi-billion dollar "arms deal of the century" today with Belgium selecting the General Dynamics F16 fighter jet over the French Mirage F1E for its air force.

Prime Minister Leo Tindemans announced the Belgian decision following a cabinet meeting that lasted more than three hours.

The deal, worth an estimated $2 billion eventually, was delayed for months because of military conditions and politics.

At one point the Northrop Corp. had entered its YF17 Cobra as a contender. A U.S. Senate subcommittee issued a report saying that the former head of the French air force, Gen. Paul Stahlin, had received more than $60,000 to promote the Cobra.

Stahlin said last November that either American plane was technologically superior to the Mirage and the resultant favor in France forced him to resign as vice president of the French Parliament.

Stahlin was struck by a bus in Paris Friday and was reported in serious condition today in a hospital after undergoing surgery.

The Netherlands, Norway and Denmark entered their YF17 Cobra as a contender. A U.S. Senate subcommittee issued a report saying that the former head of the French air force, Gen. Paul Stahlin, had received more than $60,000 to promote the Cobra.

Portuguese Press Crisis Heightens LISBON (UPI) — The editors of Republica today rejected the government's terms for reopening their newspaper, heightening Portugal's press freedom crisis.

The communique is unacceptable," editor Raul Rego said. "It solves nothing. We are standing firm in our position to defend freedom of the press."

One of Portugal's few remaining independent papers, Republica was closed May 20 when the government refused to invoke the nation's press law and order back to work striking printers who were demanding a change in the socialist editorial policy.

An official communique Friday night said the paper could resume but that neither the administration would be changed, as the Communist-led printers demanded, nor workers discharged, as the editors wanted.

It meant, according to Rego, that the basic dispute had not been settled, leaving the rebellious printers still in a position to continue their disruptive job action.

Even though the communique invoked the press law prohibiting such strikes to disrupt the economy, it said the law was not in tune with the revolution and must immediately be revised.

The printers had issued a statement of their own prior to the military regime's decision. They vowed their strike would continue for "direct and true participation" in editorial policy "for the good of the revolutionary process."

It left the Socialist party to decide once more whether to renew its threat to pull its two ministers out of the 21-man military-civilian cabinet unless Republicans reappears.

The government announcement that the paper would be allowed to publish on Tuesday was made three weeks ago.

Rockefeller said Friday night the final report of the commission he headed to investigate the CIA will be made public in the next week or two after it has been read by President Ford.

The report was to have been made public this weekend, but the White House blocked that plan, saying the President had not had an opportunity to digest the 300-page study.

Rockefeller told newsmen earlier that the filing was unrelated to a decision by the commission not to include in the report its findings on charges the CIA was involved in foreign assassination plots.

"The decision not to include assassination plots was made three weeks ago," Rockefeller said.

The evidence gathered by the commission on assassination plots was turned over to the Justice Dept. last week and also will be given to the Senate committee investigating intelligence activities.

After testifying at a closed meeting of the committee Friday, former CIA Director John McCone told reporters there were U.S.-sanctioned plots against Cuban Premier Fidel Castro in the early 1960s, but that they were "minor" and ultimately abandoned.

He said the nature of the times should be considered in judging the events, recalling that Castro allowed the Soviet Union to attempt to install missiles in Cuba that could hit the United States and "destroy every city east of the Mississippi."

Committee Chairman Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said still-secret evidence shows the assassination problem was "not confined" to Castro, and that "I really think the subject cannot be simplified or dismissed in that manner."

The groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Poy, of Vernon, Conn., said Friday they were surprised to hear of the plans. Mrs. Poy said she first learned of the wedding when she read the newspaper, but was unable to contact her son, whose Stamford home was disconnected.

"I don't know the location and I don't have a wedding invitation," she said. Her brother, retired Navy Capt. Hugh Tate, in Orange Park, Fla., where Miss Fyodorova's father lives.

Her mother, Mrs. E. Tate, 77, a retired admiral, saw his daughter for the first time March 23 when she arrived from the Soviet Union. Miss Fyodorova, 29, is the offspring of a wartime love affair between Tate and Soviet actress Fyodorova.

Her mother's liaison with the U.S. naval officer led to a charge of espionage and a 25-year sentence in Siberia, where Victoria was born. The sentence was commuted after eight years upon the death of Josef Stalin.

Tate's son said the admiral wouldn't be at the wedding to give his daughter away. He is in frail health in Florida.

Agency Cites Indicators Of Recession's Ending

By MIKE FEINSLIBER United Press International

Despite the highest jobless rate since before Pearl Harbor, 8.2 per cent in May, other figures indicate the economy's plunge is ending, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The 9.2 per cent unemployment rate, highest since 1941 — announced by BLS Friday — meant 8,538,000 Americans were out of work.

As the unemployment news was announced, however, First National City Bank of New York, a trendsetter, said Friday it has cut its prime interest rate to under 7 per cent, to 6 1/2 per cent, the lowest in over two years.

BLS Commissioner Julius Shiskin told Congress' Joint Economic Committee Friday that employment-related statistics which usually move up early when a recession is hitting bottom have started behaving that way.

He cited: —An index of 172 industries which measures the breadth of the recession. For the first time since last August the index showed more industries with rising employment than with declining employment.

—The factory layoff rate. For the third consecutive month, it declined in May.

—New claims for unemployment compensation are "well below levels reached earlier in the year."

—"Involuntary" part-time workers — those who would rather work full-time — declined for a third month in a row.

Shiskin emphasized that a recession's hitting bottom is not the same as its ending.

When the Senate, which earlier had approved $110 million in research and development funds for the high-accuracy manueverable re-entry vehicle (MaRV), voted 43-41 to forbid the Pentagon from actually testing the weapon.

Cranston said the vote was "a sensational turnaround victory" and claimed it "saved us $40 billion to $60 billion in a wild and costly new round in the nuclear arms race."

Other senators expressed concern that the MaRV, a missile warhead that can change course while coming down on its target and would be capable of destroying Russian missiles in their silos, would create a "counterforce" weapon that could spark another nuclear arms race.

Manchester Evening Herald OPINION The Ball Is Over

The masquerade ball is over. The conservative raiment of the Democrats has proven to be a rented costume needed to get public assent to an increased state budget calling for $800 million more in taxes.

The much-publicized austerity was more cosmetic than a real conversion to fiscal restraint.

What started as a token compromise to placate state worker union leader unrest turned into almost total capitulation. We say union leader unrest since no concrete evidence was offered substantiating worker unrest. A much touted poll of worker support for a possible strike has never been revealed which says something the administration and the legislature chose to ignore.

The evaluation of the legislature and Gov. Ella Grasso's first budget session, depends on your point of reference.

Our disappointments are not measured by what we wanted as much as by what Gov. Grasso seemed to be promising earlier in the session but reneged on at the last minute.

We feel like we were manipulated. We were told as the budget was being debated that it was a bare bones budget that precluded any pay increases or increments for state workers. The implication was the pay freeze would hold, if we, the taxpayers, accepted a cent increase in sales taxes and other tax increases to balance the budget.

The workers were all but told that they could get either a raise or a guarantee against layoffs — a guarantee which every non-state worker would like in these times of recession.

But the worker leaders did not accept this and after the budget had been adopted the power play began.

They want both and more.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

"Spare the rod and spoil the child." Proverbs

What a primitive thought! Or is it? Maybe there is a basic understanding and acceptance of human nature behind the words that simply needs refining and rewording. The understanding I'm referring to is that there is a side to human nature that requires discipline; at times it may very well require firm, physical discipline.

That, in no way infers evil on anyone's part; it only means that for all of us to be as free and happy as is possible, men, women and children must have certain boundaries beyond which they cannot go.

That insight has many levels — the dullest sounding, easiest to ignore, and probably most far reaching in its consequences had to do with teaching children to make reasonably well ordered use of their time.

Security and accomplishment to some degree are necessary for the well being of any child just as for any adult. Security requires knowing what is expected of you, knowing you are held in high esteem that good is expected, and knowing there is a stronger wisdom than your own that you can count on when you are tempted to give yourself over to feelings that even a child senses are not honorable.

The educational climate in recent years has helped make many feel that learning and accomplishment are largely the result of motivation. That is not true. The necessity for motivation is clear but accomplishment also requires order and persistence to a degree that spells discipline from all of us.

Confusion, frustration, resentment are some of the fruits of our denying the need for active discipline in the lives of our children. Not for a moment would I favor marching children hourly through a schedule someone sets up for them, but they simply cannot be expected to automatically handle wisely large amounts of time on their hands. They, too often, grow up to be young adults who feel it is their right to indulge the impulse of the moment, housewives who feel trapped and resentful at the boring but necessary details of living, and fathers who can't tolerate the tedious, day-by-day task of making a living.

The technical fields have made progress because each generation has left a body of fact for the next generation to begin work with. There is an almost miraculous body of fact about human nature recorded in the Bible which we would do well to accept and act upon rather than use such an enormous amount of our intellectual energy desilting, rationalizing, justifying and then trying to start all over again.

Rev. R. E. Haldeman
St. Mary's Episcopal Church

NEW YORK CITY — There is a struggle going on in Portugal which is one for the history books. Basically it is the struggle of the Socialists with both the left military junta and the civilian Communist Party — a struggle to maintain a democratic frame for Portugal's revolution and to salvage some freedoms from the encroachments of the military and the Communists, who would both feel much better without the Socialists.

This isn't a paper war, and the Socialists — who continue to speak out and demonstrate and put their lives on the line — are more than summer soldiers. Even though they are the largest party in Portugal today, and had their strength renewed and confirmed by the recent elections for a Constituent Assembly, it takes courage to be a Socialist in Portugal and demand a showdown. For the army is in charge, and the Communist toughs for the dirty work they don't want to do themselves, like the takeover of the Socialist newspaper, Republica, as a prelude to shutting it down.

The Socialists got three times the vote the Communists got in the elections — 37 per cent to 12.5 per cent. Yet the Communists have moved into the control of the trade unions and of the local governments. This is power in fact as against power under the law. If the Communists can also destroy the last residues of a free press, and by their trade union takeovers, they and the military will have strategic control of the channels of opinion. They can then complete the process of the "correct political education" of public opinion as compared with the "superficial" popular judgment expressed in the elections. (The language I quote comes from statements made both by Communist and military spokesmen in the past month.)

Agony Of The Socialists

The Socialist leaders — Foreign Minister Mario Soares and Justice Minister Francisco Salgado Zenha — have few weapons to fight with. They threatened to resign from the cabinet. But while it prefers to use the coalition cabinet as a front, the military junta can get along without it.

The one resource which Portuguese Socialists may be able to throw into the balance in the struggle for survival is the weight of Socialist opinion in Europe and in the larger world. If Europe's Socialists could unite behind Portugal's, it would serve notice on the Communists and military that the whole European Socialist world is watching the course of the revolution in Portugal. It would exert a mighty leverage against whittling away the very existence of the Portuguese Socialists as a party.

But, alas, Europe's Socialists are anything but united. They are split into a French-Mediterranean group and a German-Swedish-Austrian group. One is a popular-front combination, one would expect that the Mitterand group would give them strong support, with actual pressures as well as formal words. But I suspect that the sturdier support will come from the Brandt group, which is more sophisticated about the nature and tactics of the Communists, and more concerned about the whole centrist spectrum of European parties, rather than about the ideological left as an abstraction.

A Voice of Reason

WASHINGTON — A black voice of reason is heard across the land. It belongs to the Rev. Jesse Jackson, former street activist of the Sixties, who is now urging that blacks return to the old-fashioned virtues as a means to a better life.

Jackson, a spellbinding orator with organizational skills, is using square words like "discipline" and "responsibility" and campaigning to persuade his brothers and sisters to do their own personal uplifting. He has rejected the old cant that whites are responsible for all the blacks' troubles, and dares to come right out and say that "We now must be honest and take the blame for our own shortcomings."

For one thing, Jackson is preaching abstinence from narcotics, alcohol, nicotine — and the other vices that have sapped our individual strength to cash in on the civil rights victories of a decade ago. "We're free to do a lot of things we couldn't do before," he says, "but we don't have the discipline to do them."

Jackson even contends that vices and misplaced priorities are proportionately greater in the black community. "More blacks die from alcoholism than sickle cell anemia," he notes. "And most black-on-black crime is caused by someone trying to get money to get high." He criticizes blacks for meeting their wants first and their needs second: "We pay for dope, then beg for shoes."

What Jackson is doing, it seems to me, represents a milestone in black leadership thought. For the most part, that leadership has been careful not to criticize blacks, but has emphasized the so-called "root causes" that get their brethren into trouble. And the term "root cause," after all, is a kind of reverse racism that reaches "way back to the days of slavery. It is not surprising, therefore, that some black leaders take a dim view of Jackson's crusade against vice. "Let's remember there are many success stories with all the potted plants have been planted at the National Urban League in an interview with a Washington Post reporter. That statement is right up there with the leading irrelevancies of the year.

Our Thanks

To the Editor

The Grammar School children of Manchester brought an abundance of flowers to school on May 23 for Memorial Day. Ladies from the patriotic organizations and Girl Scouts helped arrange the flowers. The Park Department assisted with the pick up work. The potted plants have been planted at the Spanish American War Monument as a "Memorial Garden."

We thank Dr. Kennedy, principals, teachers, parents, and all who helped make this project possible.

We also thank the Army and Navy Club for the use of their club. The flowers looked especially nice with the new flags at the newly cleaned monuments.

Sincerely,

The Flower Committee

One-Night Trip to Minors Cured Evans, Two Homers Pace Latest Red Sox Victory

DWIGHT EVANS

BOSTON (UPI) — A one-night trip to the minors proved to be the right cure for Dwight Evans' sickly batting average.

Evans straightened out his swing Thursday night with two homers against the Red Sox Pawtucket, R.I., farm club, then riddled a pair of homers Friday night in his team's 13-10 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The 23-year-old right fielder hit his first career grand slam in the opening inning, then blasted a two-run shot in the third inning to drive in six runs. His two hits raised his average eight points to .233 with seven home runs.

When the newspaper was printed on pre-stamped pages, Thomas turned it around so that the stamp appeared in the wrong place on the page.

Not Taken Seriously... It may seem incredible that the young printer got away with these taunts for several

NEW YORK — Actor Larry Blyden died Friday in Morocco of injuries suffered last week in an auto accident, his agent said. Blyden was 50.

The stage and television performer, who won a Tony award as an actor and co-producer of a revival of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," was vacationing in Morocco before starting work on a new ABC TV show.

Blyden had left the cast of the Broadway hit "Absurd Person Singular" two weeks ago after 250 performances. He received a Tony nomination for his role in the British farce. Blyden was best known to television viewers as host of such game shows as "Personality" and "What's My Line."

Matthew Moriarty Jr. moved to table the issue until the board's meeting this coming Tuesday.

In another government development, a sewer study committee submitted a series of recommendations to the Board of Directors which will now study them. Among the recommendations was one which would provide uniform front-foot assessment for new sewer projects instead of computing the assessments for each project. Petition Cite Alibi Change For New Trial

LITCHFIELD (UPI) — Defense attorneys for Peter Reilly, convicted of killing his mother, Barbara Gibbons, contend that another person with motive and opportunity to kill the woman no longer has a protective alibi.

Files unsealed in Litchfield County Superior Court Friday by order of Judge John Speziale revealed the information, contained in an amended petition for a new trial for Reilly filed May 21.

The new petition doesn't name a person but says "newly discovered evidence reveals for the first time that a person with one, and possibly two, motives to do harm to Barbara Gibbons, who had an alibi defense, no longer has said alibi defense."

The petition said a woman who provided part of the alibi has changed her version of the events of the night of the slaying. It also says a second person involved in the alibi was "mistaken," and that a third person has come forward with a statement damaging to the possible suspect.

Reilly, now 20, was convicted May 24, 1974, of first-degree manslaughter and sentenced to six to 16 years in prison. He was freed on $60,000 bond pending appeal to the state Supreme Court.

Mel and Edna Edison, the middle-aged couple, played by Robert Donnelly and Elizabeth Brady, suddenly find themselves overwhelmed by the inconveniences of their cliff dwelling—the malfunctioning air-conditioner, the noise of their neighbors, the city pace and finally the worry over the possibility of the loss of Mel's job.

Donnelly, a Manchester resident and a Masquer for 18 years, has appeared in several Little Theatre of Manchester productions. He was selected as best actor by the Connecticut Theater Association for his role in the studio production, "Adaptations" and last season was awarded the Hawley Cup for the best performance by an actor in a supporting role for his portrayal of Harding in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Mrs. Daisy Bill, regent of Orford Chapter, DAR, and Mrs. Everett Kelsey plant flowers in the fountain in front of the Town Highway Garage on Olcott St. (Herald photo by Dunn)

Water flowing from lions' mouths filled the fountain for thirsty animals and a drinking spout was provided for passers-by when the DAR fountain was located at Manchester Center.

Our fountains don't stay put

By ALICE EVANS

Manchester, the City of Village Charm, is also the home of meandering fountains.

Drinking fountains are usually put in place and dully remain in the same spot for years, dispensing cool water to passers-by.

But not in Manchester. More than 50 years ago, there were two fountains in town. Now, there is only the fountain with the bronze dancing bear cubs at the Main St. entrance to Center Park.

First, let's consider the case of the missing fountain.

Orford Parish Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, erected a fountain designed for use by both people and animals in a parklet at the Center, "in memory of Revolutionary Soldiers of Orford Parish." The fountain was dedicated as a gift to the town in 1921.

When the intersection was realigned, the fountain began its travels.

It was moved to Franklin Square, the court at Bennet Junior High School. From there it was taken to the rear of Washington School.

Later, as the story goes, it was found badly damaged in a sand pit. A man, apparently the one who found it, wanted to buy the fountain for feeding his pigs. Town Manager Robert Weiss said "no" to the offer.

The fountain finally landed at its present resting place: In front of the town highway garage on Olcott St. The missing ball on top was replaced by the men at the garage.

Each spring, members of Orford Parish Chapter plant flowers in the fountain to beautify its memorial to the Revolutionary War heroes.

Someday, hopefully soon, the fountain may again be moved and put in working order to delight the town's children and adults alike.

The dancing bear fountain has also traveled. It has disappeared three times, but the town has always been able to get it back.

Once it was removed by kids and found hidden in bushes, William Androlot, park department foreman, said. Another time it was taken as a prank during a Tall Cedars parade, he said. Only once did it leave town, he said.

Just clowning around

Youngsters enjoyed the opening day show of "That Summer of Entertainment" at the Hartford Arena in South Windsor Sunday as they sat and listened to a friendly clown. ## 'Louisiana Purchase' It was better the first time

By JUNE TOMPKINS

The pre-releases call Irving Berlin's "Louisiana Purchase" a "fast-paced musical."

The show opened the 13th season of the Goodspeed Opera House last week, but something has happened to the pace since it made its Broadway debut in 1940. Or something has happened to our evaluation of pace.

For all of Berlin's penchant for composing inimitable melodies, there no longer seems to be the kind of beat one has become accustomed to in recent years. The title song was sung adequately by gorgeously costumed Jane Summerhays but it didn't seem to move like it did when one heard it 35 years ago.

However, there were some fast paced numbers, as the show is advertised as having, both in song and dance.

The story is about a darling squeaky-voiced Sen. Oliver P. Logansberry, very Republican, from Vermont who is sent to New Orleans on a top-secret government assignment to investigate a questionable Louisiana purchase.

The Senator, played by John Remme, encounters many comical difficulties and several alluring ladies who have been hired to tempt him away from his work.

The subject of undercover surveillance of big business by national security agencies is indeed timely.

The time is during an election year in the setting of the New Orleans Mardi Gras celebration.

Remme is unquestionably the star of the show. Although there are several in the female cast who have outstanding roles, the ones who come through as stars are Renee Orin as Madame Bordelaise and Donna Bacalla as Marina Van Linden, the heroine.

Miss Bacalla is lovely to look at and adept at dancing.

As Jimmy Taylor, David Christmas plays a sharp conniver in the Louisiana coverup. Christmas is a familiar face to area audiences who have seen him in other entertainment.

The Mardi Gras set is startlingly impressive and quite a feat of accomplishment for Goodspeed's limited stage space.

For a musical that's so dated, its chief charm is its presentation in the charming setting of the Goodspeed Opera House in its unique setting on the bank of the Connecticut River in East Haddam.

"Louisiana Purchase" will play through July 6.

German expressionist featured at Atheneum

Four paintings by German expressionist Ernst Ludwig Kirchner are on view in the Wadsworth Atheneum's MATRIX Gallery of contemporary art.

Although Kirchner died in 1938 and the paintings on display were done in the early years of this century, he is considered to be a major link in a line of modern painting that began with Vincent Van Gogh and Edward Munch and hasn't yet seen a conclusion.

Kirchner was born in 1880 and began working around the turn of the century in a tradition which was, and still is, deeply engaged in a philosophical inquiry into the dignity of the individual in an increasingly impersonal, mechanized world.

He was one of the founders of a group of artists called "der Brucke," or "the Bridge," which also included Emil Nolde, Max Pechstein, Kees Van Dongen and Otto Mueller. They expressed their philosophical concerns in their subject matter, and by their use of strong, harsh colors and bold, rough strokes.

The display of paintings by Kirchner provides an unusual opportunity for the Greater Hartford community to become acquainted with the work of this influential artist. The Atheneum doesn't own any of his works and his pictures rarely have been included in area exhibitions.

An anonymous lender has made the four paintings available to the museum especially for this exhibition, which will be on view through mid-June.

Lecturer

John Wallace Spencer, author of "Lost in Limbo," will lecture on the infamous Bermuda Triangle June 13 at the Hartford Arena, 585 John Fitch Blvd. (Rt. 5), South Windsor. The talk is scheduled at 8 p.m.

Fair invites Local people

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith of Manchester are among scores of Connecticut craftspeople invited to participate in this weekend's Westport Hand-crafts Fair at Staples High School in Westport.

The Smiths' hand-painted and engraved slate clocks, crafted in a variety of sizes and shapes, are said to be a unique addition to the ninth annual Westport fair.

Since its inception, the fair has become one of the most prestigious crafts fairs in the Northeast, with more than 80 artists participating. It is a juried fair, which insures a variety of crafts without sacrificing quality.

The fair is scheduled to run until 6 p.m. today and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

A creative arts festival is scheduled June 14 at Lebanon Green, rain or shine.

Free Enterprise and...

The Lemonade Stand Business

To better understand how our country's economy works, let's look at the lemonade stand business.

In the U. S. we have the FREE ENTERPRISE system or way of producing and selling things.

Under this system, anybody can go into the lemonade business who wants to.

Our free enterprise system is mixed with rules and regulations.

For example, you might need a building permit to set up your stand.

You might need a health permit to make something that people will be drinking.

The free enterprise system gives you these rights:

1. The right to start a new business.
2. The right to make a profit.
3. The right to go broke!

Kids in Philadelphia sell lemonade to visitors to the city. If their profits are too good, their neighbors will probably start their own stands soon. With so many tourists flocking to this city, this will be a good lemonade stand year in Philadelphia.

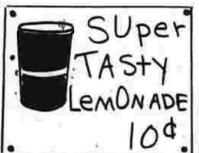

Before you go into business, you must have CAPITAL, or money to buy the things you need to open your stand. You could use your own savings, or you might borrow the money. Be sure to pay it back.

Competition is the idea behind free enterprise!

You must have a good product at a good price.

If you don't, other people will get your business.

You've got to be competitive.

To compete, you must keep the price low.

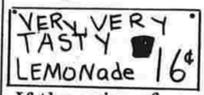

So you must keep your costs low.

You have to be efficient.

If there is a great demand, you can charge more.

If the price of lemons goes up, you will probably have to charge more and might make less profit.

Stockholders

If you have trouble raising money for your business, you might want to sell stock. To do this, you divide the business into parts or shares. Everybody chips in and shares in the profits. These co-owners also have a say in how the business is run.

It's Your Business!

Two lemonade stand operators wait to see how their customer likes his drink. Sellers should always try to keep buyers happy!

Here are some going-into-business tips for lemonade stand operators:

Know your product. Get a good recipe and try it out. Figure out how much you should charge for each cup so you'll make a profit.

Know your market. Find out if there are enough customers in the neighborhood. Also, a good location is important to the lemonade stand business.

Know what you are doing. Check out other lemonade stands. Talk over your plans with others who know something about the business.

Try to satisfy your customers. A happy customer is your best advertisement.

- Be very suspicious of a low price.
- If you don't like one stand, try another one until you get what you like.
- Ask the lemonade stand clerk what he puts in his drink. Is the lemonade frozen? Does he use fresh lemons? Does he use bottled lemon juice? What else does he put in it? Does he make his lemonade in a clean kitchen? Try to find out about any product before you buy it.

Public TV to renew Wolf Trap

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A second season of the highly popular television concert series, "In Performance at Wolf Trap," again featuring soprano Beverly Sills in a full-length opera, will be taped this summer for broadcast next fall by public television stations.

With the help of a $750,000 grant from Atlantic Richfield Co., the local public television center, WETA, will produce six new specials based on summer concerts performed live before audiences at Wolf Trap Farm Park for the Performing Arts in the Virginia countryside near Washington.

A seven-program series, which the Public Broadcasting Service will offer to its 253 member stations in the fall, will include Beverly Sills in a color presentation of Donizetti's opera, "Roberto Devereux." Miss Sills sang a Donizetti comic opera in the premiere Wolf Trap series last year, also underwritten by ARCO.

Among the new Wolf Trap specials this fall will be Julius Rudel conducting the National Symphony Orchestra in Verdi's "Requiem," an evening of blues with Bonnie Raitt and Mose Allison, and a program of jazz, ragtime and dance by the New England Conservatory Ragtime Ensemble. There will be a repeat of last year's Preservation Hall Jazz Band concert.

Executive producer David Prowitt told a news conference he hopes the series also would include British pop singer Cleo Laine and the Russian ballet team of Valery and Galina Panov, for which Wolf Trap is still negotiating.

Ward Chamberlin, WETA president and general manager, said "In Performance at Wolf Trap" was "among public television's most popular broadcasts" last year. Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who donated 117-acre Wolf Trap Farm as a performing arts center operated by the National Park Service, said the series' success proved that "quality can be fun."

Navajos to intern at CPTV

Four Navajo students from Ft. Defiance, Ariz., will spend three weeks at Connecticut Public Television, Hartford, as part of the production team for "Mundo Real."

The students, to be at CPTV from June 9 to 27, work in closed circuit television at Ft. Defiance.

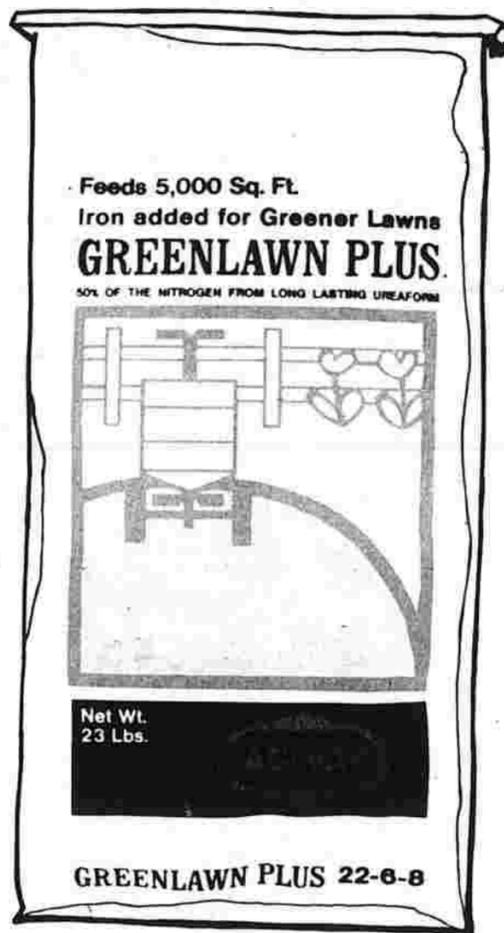

The visit was arranged by "Mundo Real" producer Leslie Colombani, who had visited the reservation recently as a TV consultant.

"Mundo Real" is a bilingual TV series intended for Puerto Rican children in Grades 4 to 8. It is being produced at CPTV under a $250,000 grant from the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare.
