FBI Denies Men Using Heavy-Handed Tactics

OGALA, S.D. (UPI) — The FBI denies its men are using heavy-handed tactics in the search of the Pine Ridge Oglala Sioux Reservation for the killers of two of its agents.

Indians have charged agents had entered their homes without warrants and had otherwise acted in heavy-handed fashion.

FBI spokesman Tom Coll denied it Monday.

"There may be people out there armed but we're not getting heavy-handed," he told a press briefing.

Agents Jack Cole and Ronald Williams, both 28, were shot down Thursday when they tried to serve a warrant at a house in Oglala. Authorities said the slayings were execution style and that some Indians at the house were entrenched in bunkers.

One Indian was killed in a subsequent shootout.

About 200 heavily armed agents were searching the 3,000-acre reservation for the 16 persons the FBI believed were involved in the killings.

One man, Herman Thunder Hawk, was arrested during the weekend and has been questioned. But FBI officials said they were not sure he was at the house at the time of the shootings.

Coll said no negotiations were planned with leaders of the militant American Indian Movement, a major dissenting faction on the reservation and the leading group in a 71-day occupation of the hamlet of Wounded Knee in 1973.

A woman who claimed she was a relative said Monday the Indian killed

Thursday, Joseph Stuntz, 24, may have been an AIM member.

Ruth Stuntz of Monticello, Ind., said Stuntz was one of three Indian children she had adopted. She said she believes he joined AIM about two years ago. His wife and two sons live in Washington State, she said.

Congressional Report Links Economic Recovery to Oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Budget Office says increases in oil prices expected this fall can take $33 billion out of the U.S. economy, reawaken inflation and drag out the recovery.

Based on its expectation that oil prices are going up, CBO issued a report Monday forecasting a gloomy economic situation for the next 18 months.

The report predicted the recent decline in the inflation rate can be expected to reverse, with prices resuming their upward march, and the recovery from the recession will be sluggish, with unemployment almost as severe at the end of 1976 as it was at the start of 1975.

If the worst happens on the oil front, the effect will be about as severe as the 1973 embargo and fourfold price rise by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, CBO said.

The report calculates events as likely to add about $5.50 to the price of a barrel of oil by the end of 1976. That compares to the average increase of $5.35 in 1973.

Going into the $5.50 would be an additional $1 a barrel import fee, a $2.25 OPEC increase this fall and phased "decontrol" of domestic oil prices, as President Ford recommends.

If domestic oil prices increase $5.50 and consumption remains stable, the cost would be $33 billion.

"Households and businesses, that is, would have to reduce nonoil outlays or savings by $33 billion to maintain their level of oil consumption," CBO said. "And this allows only for higher oil prices; if prices of natural gas and coal also increase, the cost would be closer to $40 billion."

"This would represent a direct loss of purchasing power almost twice as great as the increase provided by the recently enacted tax cut."

"A similar reduction in purchasing power in 1973 and 1974 occurred as a result of the OPEC embargo; the sharp cutback in real spending it produced was a major factor in the current economic downturn."

Largely as a result of the expect oil price rise, these were the CBO predictions for the next 18 months:

—After falling to an annual rate of 5 per cent in May, consumer prices will climb to a rate of 6.3 to 8.7 per cent by the end of next year.

—The unemployment rate will be 7.8 to 8.2 per cent by the end of 1976, compared to the White House prediction of 7.6 per cent at that time and a rate of 9.2 per cent in May.

Major Hurt in Melee At Panmunjom

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — A U.S. Army major seriously injured when he was assaulted by almost 20 North Koreans was flown to the United States today for treatment of a fractured larynx.

A female American sergeant attacked in the same melee was not injured.

A military spokesman said Maj. William D. Henderson of Tacoma, Wash., was in serious condition when he was placed aboard a special military plane for a flight to Walter Reed Hospital outside Washington, D.C.

North Korean guards and newsmen punched and kicked Henderson in the face Monday at the truce village of Panmunjom.

Witnesses said the fight started when a North Korean reporter sitting on a bench with Henderson began teasing him. Henderson pointed a finger at the North Korean, who responded by punching the major in the face.

Sgt. 1st Class Patricia Currans, a newswriter from the 8th U.S. Army public information office, ran to his rescue and also was attacked. The U.S. Military Command said she was not injured.

'Salvation Government' Tries To Save Lebanon from War

BEIRUT (UPI) — Premier-designate Rashid Karami today installed a "salvation government" to try to pull Lebanon from the verge of civil war and an afternoon cease-fire was reportedly agreed upon by warring political factions.

The Egyptian news agency MENA quoted official Lebanese sources as saying a cease-fire had been agreed upon and would go into effect at 5 p.m. (noon EDT).

But the official Iraqi news agency, which is usually well informed on Palestinian guerrilla affairs, said guerrilla organizations in Beirut had put all their forces on maximum alert because of an escalation in the fighting.

Beirut was ablaze with dozens of fires from more than 100 explosions during the night and the casualty toll for a week of fighting between right and left-wing militants rose to more than 200 dead and 600 wounded, about half of them from the past two days of fighting.

Terrified families were trapped in burning buildings and sniper fire blocked rescue vehicles. The unchecked violence was reported spreading to other parts of the country.

Karami said the six-man cabinet, which had to overcome last minute bickering between its would-be ministers before it could be formed, would be an "interim cabinet — a salvation government to rescue Lebanon from further bloodshed."

He said it would be replaced later by a national coalition to include the country's warring right and left-wing factions once the two sides had settled their differences.

The announcement of the politically moderate cabinet appeared to have little effect on the week-long battle between rival political factions. Fierce rocket and mortar fire slammed back and forth between right and left-wing strongholds in eastern Beirut while bomb blasts and small arms fire ripped through the city's center.

Heavy automatic weapons fire erupted shortly after noon near Hamra, the city's fashionable uptown shopping district.

Beirut Radio said ambulances and fire engines were halted by intense sniper fire. It said all roads to the capital were blocked and all streets unsafe for travel.

An official said "many families" were endangered by a huge blaze burning out of control in the city's southeast quarter. Another fire destroyed at least 20 buildings in the port area.

Karami's new cabinet excluded both the right-wing Phalangists and left-wing Socialist Progressives, the two main rivals in the fighting. Announcement of the new government had been postponed a day after last minute wrangling among the appointees.

"It is not a cabinet that could or is meant to last. Either it will achieve a national reconciliation within a few months time and then expand to include the right and left or it fails and breaks up," an Arab political observer said.

In Ashrafieh, a right-wing stronghold where fighting has been heaviest, terrified residents reported rockets and mortars falling at the rate of five every minute.

"We can see a huge fire raging," one resident reported by telephone. "Rockets are falling like rain. We are trapped."

The sound of a large blast came through the receiver. "Oh My God," said the resident. "The building in front of me has just crumbled."

The fighting was the latest violence in three months of civil strife involving rightists and leftists, Christians and Moslems, Lebanese nationalists and Palestinian guerrillas.

Black Equality Linked To Economic Stability

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford told black leaders today that economic hard times are ending, but the administration will not "turn its back" on the concerns of the poor in its effort to halt the depression.

While stressing that that equality for blacks can be achieved only through full economic opportunity, Ford would not promise any easy solutions or specifics for blacks in his speech prepared for the 66th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"Obviously," he said, "some indicators will continue to be depressed for a few months, because they record only what is past. But I am confident the economic decline is over."

Striking a note reminiscent of President Lyndon B. Johnson, Ford said he was speaking as president of "all the people" to discuss the "common problems and common sense approaches" which blacks and whites can achieve together for America.

"An unstable economy is the enemy of equal opportunity," Ford said. "While important advances can be made during economic good times they can be quickly and cruelly erased during hard times."

"America is an economic family. We must live by the rules that any family must follow. We cannot spend more than we earn by endless borrowing. We must end our propensity for short term solutions at the expense of long range set-backs."

At the same time he said a policy of fiscal restraint "does not mean this nation will turn its back on major problems of employment, housing, transportation, health care and education."

The convention opened Monday with a sharp attack against the administration by NAACP Board Chairman Margaret Bush Wilson.

Gandhi Opponent Stricken in Jail

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India's most prominent opposition leader, fasting since he was jailed last week in a crackdown against a government critic, has reportedly suffered a serious heart attack in his prison cell.

Supporters of Jayaprakash Narayan said Monday the 72-year-old critic of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was taken to the All-India Medical Institute after the heart attack.

A spokesman at the hospital confirmed that Narayan had been admitted but refused to disclose the reason or discuss his condition.

Supporters said Narayan, head of a nationwide "peaceful revolution" movement challenging Mrs. Gandhi's leadership, was felled by the heart attack Sunday night.

Narayan, one of the leaders of India's independence movement three decades ago, was among hundreds of opposition leaders seized by the government since Mrs. Gandhi imposed a state of emergency last Thursday.

Supporters said Narayan, who has patterned his movement after Mohandas Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign for independence, began a hunger strike in his jail cell soon after being seized.

Electric Boat Workers Set Up Picket Lines

GROTON (UPI) — Some 10,000 skilled union workers went on strike at midnight against Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics, the firm that builds the Navy's nuclear submarines.

Anthony DeGregory, president of the Metal Trades Council, an association of unions, said union officials Monday night refused to approve a 27-day contract extension that would have prevented the strike.

Electric Boat announced earlier Monday evening it would agree to the extension, which was proposed by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Negotiators continued talking until the contract expired at midnight, but no break was near and picket lines went up as soon as time ran out.

"In spite of the fact that the negotiations have been underway for several weeks, a number of major items are still unresolved," said George Roos, director of industrial relations in management engineering. "It's not fair to our employees to have to take a strike position since they have not yet had an opportunity to vote on a tentative offer."

A union spokesman said the two issues blocking a settlement were wage hikes and a company attempt to change contract language that governs the workers' productivity.

The company's latest offer was rejected late Friday but both sides agreed to continue bargaining, which began April 14. Both sides have been preparing for a strike, however.

The three-year offer turned down by the trades council included a 33 cent an hour wage increase and improvements in health, hospital and pension plans, a company spokesman said.

"It was a typical Electric Boat Co. offer — totally unacceptable," DeGregory said.

DeGregory said the union wants an 89-cent wage increase with a cost-of-living escalator built into any multiple-year pact. He also criticized a proposed change in the productivity clause of the contract which governs work practices.

Electric Boat underwent its last strike in the summer of 1973, when about 1,500 members of the Marine Draftsmen Association walked out for more than a month in a contract dispute.

New York Sanitation Strike to Protest Layoffs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sanitation workers staged a wildcat strike here today and threatened to make the nation's metropolis "Stink City."

The strike was called to protest layoffs forced by budget cuts.

"We don't have one truck in the city rolling," a Sanitation Department spokesman said. "The men are in but they're not doing anything."

The spokesman said sanitation officials worked all night developing a "contingency plan" for garbage collection in anticipation of the walkout.

He would not elaborate on the specifics of the plan but did concede that "unless some of the men go back to work it probably won't be very effective."

The action came a day after the Sanitationmen's union lost a court battle in which they attempted to avoid the layoffs of 2,394 workers.

Sanitationmen's union president John DeLury warned the city Monday "there's nothing I can do, nothing this court can do and nothing the mayor can do" to stop the job action.

DeLury warned that a prolonged strike would turn New York into "Stink City" and have worse consequences than a 1968 walkout.

In all, Mayor Abe Beame ordered the firing at midnight Monday of 19,000 city employees, including about 5,000 policemen and 2,000 firemen.

On Monday the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court, in a 3-2 decision, denied a union request to bar the layoffs, rejecting the workers' contention they would suffer "irreparable harm" by losing pension rights and other fringe benefits.

The court also indicated the union would have a tough time when the judges hear final arguments July 8 on the city's move to overturn a lower court ruling that a contract provision guarantees all sanitationmen their jobs through next June 30.

Charge Card Use in Connecticut Started by Two Manchester Men

By SOL R. COHEN

If someone were to ask you, "What is the biggest business in the U.S. and probably the world?" what would you answer?

Oil, automotive, insurance, government, war?

You'd be wrong. The biggest business in the U.S. and probably the world is the charge card business — the bank charge card business in particular. Actually, it encompasses the greater proportion of most other business categories.

The idea of bank charge cards had to originate somewhere. In Connecticut it originated with two Manchester men — a department store executive and a shoe merchant.

Back in the mid-1950's, George Marlow and the late David Werbner (he owned a Main St. shoe store) read articles in two trade journals about the founding of Charge-Plan by the Franklin National Bank of New York. It was the first bank charge card in the country and was the predecessor of Master-Charge.

Marlow and Werbner appeared before the board of the former Manchester Trust Co. (later merged with the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co.) and proposed it become the first bank in the state to sponsor Charge-Plan.

The Manchester Trust refused. However, when it learned a competing bank was interested in Charge-Plan, it changed its mind and began sponsoring it.

After 18 months, Manchester Trust counted 35 merchants under its franchise. However, because it had only 400 cardholders, the bank was reluctant to spend any more money promoting the plan and was about to drop the program.

That's when George Marlow stepped in. Marlow organized 15 stores into a spearhead group to invigorate interest in the plan. With Marlow's Inc. as the principal sponsor, cardholders were increased to 6,500 in six weeks and to 8,500 in six months. It was the largest group of credit cards in Manchester, with dollar volume at about $500,000.

A few years later, after a proxy fight among Manchester Trust stockholders, the bank was absorbed by the Connecticut Bank and Trust.

CBT didn't have a charge card plan of its own. Hartford officials of CBT viewed the Manchester Trust plan as too insignificant to continue and, although Manchester merchants pleaded for retention of the local plan, it was abandoned. The equipment used for operating it was dumped at Manchester's landfill area.

For about a year, Manchester was without a charge card plan for its merchants. Then, Marlow succeeded in bringing Uni-Card to Manchester and Eastern Connecticut. Uni-Card, in Eastern Connecticut, was the forerunner to Bank-Americard.

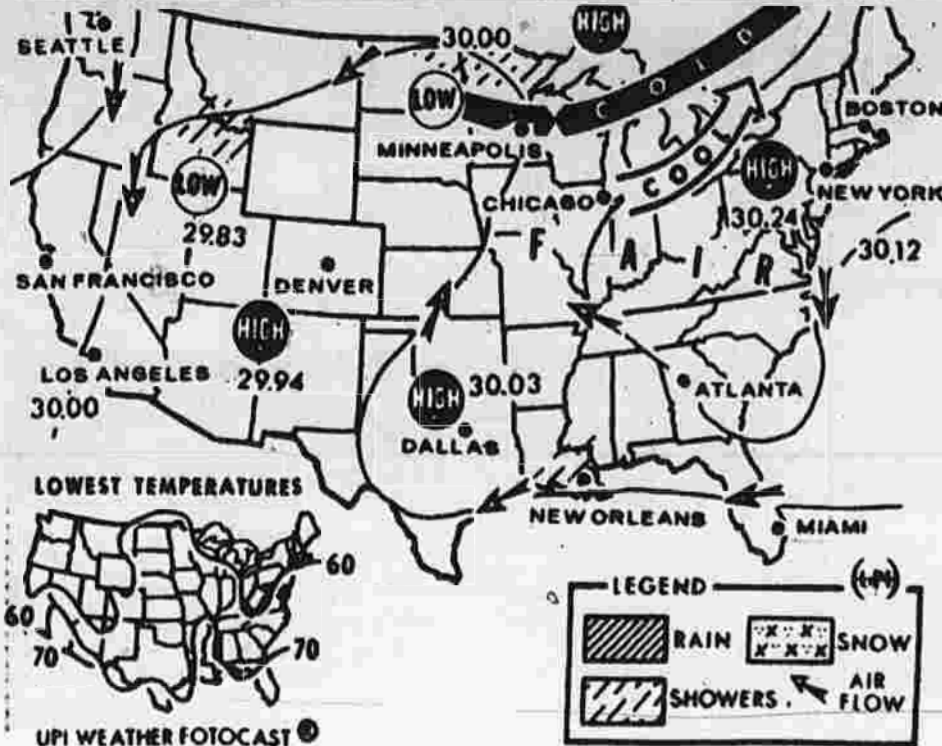

At about that time, charge card plans were sweeping the country and banks everywhere were getting into the act. CBT came back into the fold with Master Charge, a plan adopted also by National Bank and Trust.

Today, the two banks alone have over 150,000 cardholders in the state, with hundreds of participating merchants and with total sales approaching $300 million.

The total sales for all bank charge plans in the country are estimated in the countless billions.

What it all adds up to is that small-town merchants aren't necessarily small, town-merchants, nor "country clods," as Marlow once was called by a Hartford banker.

George Marlow and David Werbner proved that in the mid 1950's, when they instituted bank-charge cards in Manchester, the first in the state.

Alleged Kidnapper-Rapist Killed by State Troopers

WEST TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — A man who allegedly kidnaped and raped a 17-year-old Connecticut girl, and who was later killed by a state trooper, was identified as Carl Elliott of New Britain, Conn.

Elliott, 36, was identified by fingerprints and by relatives who identified him for state police here Monday.

He was shot several times in a shootout with troopers who chased a red Ford van for 23 miles in the toll road's northbound lanes after it ran through a police radar trap at 70 miles per hour early Sunday.

The high-speed chase ended when the van flipped over after it hit a patrol car that was part of a roadblock near Newark International Airport.

State troopers, who gunned their cars close to 100 m.p.h. at times to force the van to a stop, said they opened fire only after hearing gunshots coming from inside the overturned vehicle.

The girl, Brenda J. Corliss of New Britain, told police she had been abducted at gunpoint in her home town about 2:30 p.m. Saturday and had been driven all night. She told investigators she had been raped by Elliott about five hours before the shootout began.

Miss Corliss was released Monday from St. James Hospital in Newark, where she had been treated for shock. She was released to her mother.

She said "every word" in two previous columns she had written about the intimacy of her marriage was true and that she was not otherwise injured.

An autopsy by State Medical Examiner Edwin Albano late Sunday showed that Elliott was killed by a bullet which struck him in the head. Elliott was also shot several times in other parts of the body, the trooper spokesman said.

During the high-speed chase, Elliott's car, which entered the turnpike at Exit 7 in Bordentown, snaked along the divided northbound lane and sideswiped the patrol cars several times. Elliott resided at 21 B Horse Plain Road, police said.

A police spokesman said the van was stolen from a car care center in Wrightstown, N.J., and its license plates were apparently taken from a car at Allen's Exxon service station in the town.

Ann Landers To Get Divorce

CHICAGO (UPI) — Syndicated advice columnist Ann Landers, in "a sad and personal message" to her readers, announced Monday night she will be divorced from her husband, Jules Lederer, after 36 years of marriage.

The Chicago Sun-Times columnist, whose real name is Eppie Lederer, said in early Tuesday editions she felt she needed it to her readers to make the announcement in her column. She said her marriage was "one of the world's best" and refused to elaborate on the reasons for ending it in divorce.

"In my 20 years as Ann Landers this is the most difficult column I have ever tried to put together," said Mrs. Lederer. "Perhaps there is a lesson there for all of us. At least, it is there for me. Never say, 'It couldn't happen to us!'"

"I do so after many hours of soul-searching. Should it be written at all? Would it be appropriate? Would it be fair? I have decided yes — because you, my readers, are also my friends. I owe it to you to say something. There should be some word directly from me."

"The sad, incredible fact is that after 36 years of marriage Jules and I are being divorced. As I write these words, it is as if I am referring to a letter from a reader. It seems unreal that I am writing about my own marriage."

She said "every word" in two previous columns she had written about the intimacy of her marriage was true and that she was not otherwise injured.

A modification agreement was signed by the Board of Education with Eastern Bus Lines, Inc. (EBL) concerning school transportation for Bolton children from June 1975 until July 1976.

EBL will be paid $48 per day per bus for seven 66 passenger buses; $56.70 per day per bus for two mini-buses and $47.25 per day for one van. Both parties agree that when the price shown in the June 1973 agreement for gas exceeds 28 cents per gallon, each party will pay fifty per cent of the difference in price over and above 28 cents.

The parties agree that town and the school board will not pass to EBL any increase in sales tax in excess of 14 cent per gallon. The parties agree to increase lay-over expenses from $3.25 to $4.25 per hour.

Reform Requested

There are some campaign reforms we'd like to see that cannot be legislated. They can only be brought about by candidates disciplining themselves and the party faithful maturing to the point where they do not need their egos constantly reinforced.

One of the most recent things we would classify as a "goat-getter" are statements made by a couple would-be Democratic nominees for president that Gov. Ella Grasso would be an acceptable candidate for vice president.

The surety wouldn't say she was unfit and expect to get out of Hartford or the state alive, would they?

These tributes to party leaders by those seeking support are meaningless. Those who have lauded Ella to the delight of Nutmeg Democrats have said the same thing about other governors, senators, or representatives in other states with the possible exception of Gov. George Wallace. If they haven't you can almost bet they will before the campaign ends.

Our gripe is that as flattering as it may be to a person, or his party, or his state, to be mentioned for a spot on the national ticket it is not a commitment by the candidate but pure politics.

The sad fact is that we all know it and yet we tolerate it. We agree with a lot of people — Republicans as well as Democrats — that many people mentioned for vice president on the Democratic ticket aren't as competent and qualified as our governor.

But that decision is not going to be made at a Hartford Caucus more than a year before the convention. Until primaries and/or conventions select nominees for president and vice president on the same ballot, running-mate speculation is a rhetorical exercise since no candidate — Republican as well as Democrat — is going to say his party's leading office holders in any state aren't competent enough to be on the ticket.

If this should happen, then it would be news. In the meantime, the Lady at 990 Prospect Avenue says she isn't interested, which is another game politicians play.

DON OAKLEY
Informed Public Vital to Defense

Since 1946 the United States has spent more than $1.3 trillion in national security, according to an estimate in American Heritage magazine. That is almost equal to the $1.6 trillion the federal government has spent for all non-military goods and services since 1979.

"The plain fact," writes Allan L. Damon, "is that an extraordinary part of our national energy and wealth in recent years has been devoted to war or to the prevention of war, and the immediate future is not likely to bring any significant change."

Millions, billions or trillions — Americans are ready and willing to spend whatever is necessary to safeguard the nation's security in an insecure world, and no less than is necessary. And that is more than necessary. And that, of course, is where the rub comes in. How strong is strong enough? In a nation in which military is subordinate to civilian authority, and which historically has tended to let its defenses rust in peacetime, the question has never been an easy one to answer.

Numerous military experts have been warning for some time that the U.S. Navy has deteriorated sadly. In fact, claims one, the United States has passed "peril point" in losing control of the seas to the Soviet Union.

Neither a complacent nor, at the other extreme, a frightened public can make the decisions that must be made to preserve the country's security in coming years. Only an informed public can.

Countering the idea of security based on the ultimate nuclear sanction, of course, is the very cogent argument that weakness in conventional arms invites the kind of Soviet adventurism that could lead to the very nuclear war we both wish to avoid. But again the question is, how strong is strong enough?

Zumwalt is right in one thing. Any official report on the status of U.S. military preparedness, at least as much of its continuing information presumably already known to the Soviets, ought to be made available to the American people.

TOM TIEDE

The Double-Edged Blade of Abortion

WASHINGTON — The word from the National Right to Life Committee is that 1.2 million abortions will be performed in America this year — 300,000 more than the last annual count and perhaps a million more than in any of the 197 years prior to the 1973 Supreme Court decision liberalizing applicable laws.

The sum presumably accurate, calls for pause. I have been, for all my adult life, in favor of abortion on demand — my reason being pragmatic. Women not wanting babies will do almost anything to rid themselves of the burdens, and putting laws in their way is mean logic. I once viewed the results of a teenager who tried to terminate her pregnancy with a douche of household chemicals. Her funeral was awful, her mother loudly admitting in sobs that she has refused the girl the money to seek an illegal abortion for fear of the immorality involved.

I remain firm on pragmatism. But I confess as well that the magnitude of the estimated number of abortions this year, in the name of anything, is disgusting. Abortion has become a major branch of the medical industry and the same time is sliding into the recesses of our collective conscience. Instead of tolerating it necessarily while we search for moral and practical alternatives, we seem to be deciding it as the ultimate solution.

We are making this decision, furthermore, not by common sense but by uncommon intellectualism, the easier way to do it since the process involves perceptive argument which while impossible to prove cannot be dismissed either. There is, after all, a philosophical fundamental in the idea, say, that a woman has a right to do with her body as she pleases. Women do not have this right, of course, nor do men, as witness the laws against suicide or the use of some drugs or the dodging of the wartime draft. But even if sovereignty over the body is a myth the argument has humanistic elements — the rights of being over an unbeing — that are more comfortably considered than is the emotional spectrum of morality.

What is wrong with the super-sophistication approach to the abortion question is that it tends to go beyond the capacity of many involved to understand. When does life begin? Logarithmic answers, of whatever exhaustion, mean nothing. Perhaps it was one thing to agree when legal abortion meant scraping out embryonic tissue. It is quite another now that fully formed fetuses can be removed under the law, and if not left to expire in silver trays may at times be used as live subjects in experiments. In either case, the complexities are useless to the common person.

Beyond this, the idea of excusing abortion with academic data gives worry of another sort. As Supreme Court Justice Benjamin Cardozo warned: "The tendency of a principle is to expand itself to the limits of its logic." If one can explain away abortion with fancy philosophical footwork, and then experiment on the living fetus, what next? Already it is possible to experiment on the fetus by health insurance; and it has been suggested that the state too help out, i.e., make it all easier still.

For any who care to see, "the substitute in emphasis" may have occurred in America as it did in Germany. But less than many seem to worry. Before it's too late, perhaps we should at least open up to the truth. Keep abortion reasonably attainable, if that is our consensus, but call it for what it is: slaughter. To continue to do otherwise, for the purpose of making the issue palatable, puts us in a sense on the road back to the caves.

Congratulations Mary

We wish to extend our congratulations to Mary Cadorette on her selection as Miss Connecticut, 1975.

We hope her reign will be a successful one and we know she will do her best to represent the state in the Miss America Pageant in September.

Miss Cadorette is a credit to her sponsors, the Manchester Jaycees, and to East Catholic High School where she recently graduated.

While it may seem a bit of a contradiction that an East Hartford young lady should be Miss Connecticut in the Miss Connecticut Pageant, it reflects in a sense the closeness of the two communities and especially the role of East Catholic in several communities in and around Manchester. East Hartford has just reason to be proud of one of its daughter's achievements and Manchester can be equally proud that Miss Cadorette will be representing it and be the whole state in Atlantic City this fall.

We wish Miss Connecticut a happy reign.

A National Epidemic

WASHINGTON — Of course there are bugs in President Ford's new crime control program. But it seems to me its critics — not all of them professional bleeding hearts — will settle for nothing less than perfection in a congenitally imperfect world.

For instance, there is the hue and cry over Ford's proposal of mandatory minimum prison sentences for individuals convicted of such serious crimes as hard-drug trafficking, kidnapping and offenses involving dangerous weapons. Gosh, say the critics, that certainly would cause a lot of problems, better go back to the drawing boards.

The idea heard most often is that mandatory prison terms could prove more of a deterrent to convictions than a means of reducing crime. One is subjected to a recitation of the old chestnut that juries might not be willing to convict if their decision means the defendant must serve some time in the slammer.

I do not buy that for a moment. If the crime is a serious one and if the evidence is conclusive of the defendant's viciousness, it is inconceivable that a jury composed entirely of saints would hesitate to find for the people's prosecutor.

This has always been a country with a keen sense of the difference between right and wrong. Most children are still taught that misbehavior is punished, and indeed, in today's crime-ridden atmosphere, juries are quite likely to consider the element of protection of society in reaching their verdict.

What Ford's critics are saying is, in effect, that we can't trust the jury system. That is not only preposterous, but demeaning to the citizenry. The jury system has met the test of time as a procedure for judgment by the defendant's peers and not by an anointed wise man. Admittedly, some juries render irrational verdicts, but that's because they are also human and thus imperfect.

Then there is the complaint that all

Dear Sir: This is a followup letter on my recent note to parents related to motorcycles and the hazards related to them. I merely mentioned the fact that I work hard, but when I sit, I sit loose. Undoubtedly the new emphasis in our western culture of eastern mysticism will be healthy. In like manner we have something to show the east. Perhaps a happy wedding of activism and meditation will be good for the world. Keep in mind that Jesus commented to the concerned and active Martha, "You art troubled about many things. It was Mary who had chosen the better part and set at the feet of Jesus. Let you misjudge Mary it is well to know that up to the time that Jesus entered their home she had been working too. Keep in touch with Jesus lest you become a run down merry-go-round. The Bible says: "Jesus went into the temple, as was His custom." Dr. Clifford Simpson

Miss Prindle Weds St. Jean

Lois Elizabeth Prindle of Bolton and Rodney Joseph St. Jean of East Hartford were married June 27 at Bolton Congregational Church in Bolton.

Mrs. Rodney St. Jean

The bride wore a gown of white flocked veil over pink tulle and a white tulle train. Her shoulder-length, triple tiered veil was attached to a Gibson Girl cap. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses and baby's breath.

The Rev. J. Stanton Conover, pastor of Bolton Congregational Church and the Rev. Robert Cronin, pastor of St. Maurice's Church in Bolton, officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The church was decorated with white gladioli and pink carnations.

Bridesmaids were Miss Pamela Spencer of Hadlyme and Miss Wendy Hagan of Bolton. They wore gowns identical to that worn by the honor attendant. They carried bouquets of flowers — complementing their gowns.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, I had a child out of wedlock. I never married the baby's father, but we live together as husband and wife up until six months ago. When we decided to split up, there was no big scene and no hard feelings. He quietly moved out.

DEAR NEEDS: Tell him everything. Your past doesn't necessarily make you a "tramp." Many learn and mature from past mistakes, and the fact that you don't want to lie now shows that you have both learned and matured. Level with him, and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am a waitress with a pet peeve: woman who come in with escorts and refuse to speak to me. When I ask for their order, they ignore me, turn to their escorts and tell THEM what they want. Then the man gives the order to me. This is ridiculous.

DEAR BURNED: Sorry, but according to the etiquette book, the gentleman should order for both the lady and himself. This is practiced in the more elegant and formal restaurants. But in the interest of common sense and expedience, I think it's time that moth-eaten rule was dropped.

Yes, There Will Be Fireworks This Year!

By SOL R. COHEN
We were wrong and we apologize! What's more, we're tickled pink to apologize!
Exactly a year ago today, we wrote, "No more fireworks show in Manchester, not last year, not the year before, not this year and, unless someone comes up with a dramatic suggestion, not next year too."
Well, someone came up with that dramatic suggestion and, ergo, there WILL BE fireworks in Manchester "next year," which now is "this year."

The bidding has been: 1

West North East South

Pass 3♥ Pass 1♠

Pass 5♥ Pass 5NT

Pass 6♦ Pass

You South hold:

♠ K J 9 7 ♠ A K Q J 4 A 2

What do you do now?

A — If your partner holds the queen of hearts you will be cold for seven; if he doesn't you will still have a good play. Bid seven hearts if you feel like gambling.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You hold the same hand. East opens one spade. What do you do?

Answer Tomorrow

Reverse moves contract ahead

In the language of bids a reverse bid should always show extra strength. More important, you and your partner should know just what a reverse bid is.

We define it as any bid of a new suit that shuts out a return to an earlier bid suit at the lowest possible level. We recommend that a reverse bid by opener be a one-round force and guarantee at least 16 points; a reverse by responder be a game force and show at least 13 points. For the rest of this week we will show reverse bids at work.

South's two-heart bid was a classic reverse call. North would have to return to clubs at the three level if he wanted to bid clubs. As it was, North bid three hearts and South settled for game.

Council Moves Against Water Rate Increases

VERNON

BARBARA RICHMOND

Three motions passed by the Vernon Town Council Monday night will give Mayor Frank McCoy the authority to oppose a request for a water rate hike; allow him to petition to have the hearing in Vernon; and authorize him to request a change in state law concerning rate hikes.

In the absence of Mayor McCoy, Town Attorney Abbot Schwebel asked the council to actively oppose a request for a 27.57 per cent rate increase filed by Rockville Water & Aqueduct Co. with the state Public Utilities Commission (PUC).

The water company asked for an increase that would bring in additional revenues of $130,431 in May 1976 and was granted $30,479 of this request. In March

Single Vote Due On Fire Projects

BARBARA RICHMOND

The Vernon Town Council Monday night rejected a suggestion to divide a referendum question into three parts, and voted unanimously to ask for a total appropriation of $725,000 to carry out recommendations of the Fire Study Committee.

Councilman Peter Humphry said he was concerned that opponents might turn down the entire appropriation because of the economy. He said if the question were to be divided it would have a chance of partial approval anyway.

The proposed appropriation includes $200,000 for constructing, furnishing and equipping a two-bay, two-story addition to the Vernon Co. 1 firehouse on Rt. 20.

The town has already purchased the land for $30,000. Another portion of the appropriation is $30,000 for land to build a firehouse to replace Vernon Co. 2, also on Rt. 20; $135,000 for a 100-foot aerial ladder truck for the Prospect St. firehouse; $195,000 for an 85-foot aerial platform truck for Vernon Co. 1; $95,000 for a 1,250 gallons-per-minute pumper for the Nye St. firehouse; and $10,000 for improvements and expansion of the fire alarm communications system.

Town Attorney Abbot Schwebel told Humphry three separate ordinances would be required if the referendum question were to be divided.

Councilwoman Gretchen Mason said she felt breaking the question down would leave it wide open for the people to turn down the two biggest items.

Vernon Fireworks Thursday

Vernon's annual fireworks display is scheduled for Thursday night at Legion Field, West Rd. Preceding the display the 30-member Governor's Foot Guard Band will give a concert. Donald Berger, recreation director, said the fireworks display will start about 9:15 p.m. and will include aerial bombs and set pieces.

An aerial bomb will be set off at 6 p.m. Thursday to indicate the performance will go on. If the weather is bad then the display will be postponed until Sunday night as the field will not be available Saturday. Berger said the bleachers will be set up this year for the convenience of spectators. The Vernon Police department will direct traffic and members of Post 14 American Legion will direct the parking.
