Brand and Leonov Trade Space Posts

HOUSTON (UPI) — Space diplomats Alexei Leonov and Vance Brand traded places aboard the first international orbital assembly today and got guided tours of the linked Apollo and Soyuz spaceships while television viewers watched 140 miles below.

"Howdy partner, my old friend," Leonov said in English as he greeted Donald "Deke" Slayton in the cabin of the modified American moonship, moving from the adjoining docking module with Apollo commander Thomas Stafford.

Brand in turn moved to the Soyuz, greeted Valeri Kubasov and said good morning to Moscow control.

It was the first of three joint working periods on today's schedule, devoted to ceremony, work and sightseeing in the name of science and détente. The joint activity ends Saturday.

Kubasov opened the televised spacecraft tour by holding up a picture of his wife, Lyudmila, and their two children, Katya, 8, and Dima, 3.

"Hello American people," Kubasov said in English while Brand watched. "I am going to tell you about the Soyuz spacecraft. The Soyuz spacecraft consists of several compartments, the orbital module, the descent vehicle, the instrument assembly and the propulsion system."

He then reached over to the pale green control panel in the orbital module, pulled a water gun off a special clip and took a drink of water.

In the Apollo, Stafford gave Leonov and the Soviet people a look at the American systems, saying in Russian, "the Apollo is the spacecraft aboard which the astronauts have flown to the moon and also to our Skylab."

When Stafford and Leonov first met in the docking module today, the Soyuz commander gave his American colleague a portrait of Stafford. Leonov is an amateur artist who is preparing a collection of sketches on the joint project.

Locked together by a jointly designed docking apparatus, the spaceships Apollo and Soyuz represented what Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev called "a prototype of future international orbital stations."

Stafford opened the hatch between the docking module and Soyuz for the first time today at 5:57 a.m. EDT and laughed when he saw wires and hoses floating about.

"Looks like a bunch of snakes in here, Valeri," he told Kubasov.

After awakening from sound but ab-breiated sleeps, the five crewmen were informed by their control centers in Houston and Moscow that what appeared Thursday night to be a slight air leak into a tunnel linking the Soyuz with the docking module was not a problem.

"Everything is shipshape," Leonov reported.

The first telecast of the day from Apollo started at 5:30 a.m. EDT and Stafford, speaking in Russian, told controllers, "good morning, this is pretty early in Houston, yes."

Brand examined small fish swimming in a plastic bag in the docking module and reported to ground communicator Karol Bobko, "the fish look healthy. Bo. They're swimming around happily." The fish are designed to study the effect of weightlessness on their orientation.

In an early morning telecast from the Russian ship, Kubasov recapped Thursday's historic initial docking and meeting in the Soyuz and said, "it was a very exciting moment for both astronauts and cosmonauts."

"This was a meeting which emphasized the good will of our people," he said. "We exchanged flags, we signed a joint document, we exchanged a number scientific experiments. It was very hard for us to part in this first international meeting in space."

Leonov said, "We are acclimated to this as though we had been living here a long time."

The Americans likewise said they were in fine condition today.

"We're very much alive and healthy and in great shape," Stafford told Houston in a morning status report.

The last of the four crew transfers of the 44-hour docked flight ends late this afternoon.

The two ships separate Saturday morning but their joint operations will continue for another 6 1/2 hours. In one experiment, Apollo will create an artificial eclipse by blocking out the sun for the cosmonauts to photograph the solar corona.

And then the Soyuz cosmonauts will try their hand at maneuvering to a docking. The ships will be linked for three hours the second time before they move away for good.

Leonov and Kubasov plan to land in Russia Monday. The Apollo pilots will orbit until next Thursday before splashing down in the Pacific Ocean.

The Apollo maneuvered to an unusually

HOUSTON (UPI) — "As linguists they are excellent cosmonauts."

That was the quip of a bilingual Russian listening to the exotic English-Russian dialogue of the five spacemen who accomplished history's first international orbital rendezvous.

"It is neither the queen's English nor good Soviet Russian," my interlocutor, an amateur philologist, said, "but adequate space language."

To my question whether it could be called Esperanto, the synthetic international language invented earlier this century, the philologist objected and coined a new word.

"Let's call it Spaceperanto," he suggested.

Never indeed, in my long experience of covering bilingual negotiations, have I heard such limited knowledge and use of language achieve such perfect understanding.

The vocabulary in both the English that the cosmonauts used and the Russian the astronauts spoke was small and the grammar deficient.

As for the pronunciation, it was definitely Spaceperanto. So much so that at times it was not clear whether the Americans spoke Russian or English — and conversely for the Russians.

But the spacemen communicated successfully — not only because every one of them appeared to have a special sense of what the circumstances dictated, but also because they had dedicated themselves to at least two years of rigorous, intensive study.

Not only the language, but in Mark Twain's phrase, "How she is spake."

The result was development of an excellent 124-page glossary which contained almost all the conceivable terms and phrases the spacemen would need for a successful mission. Memorization of the glossary meant grueling labor sandwiched in the breaks in the rigid training for the flight.

So when Apollo commander Thomas Stafford said, "Vas Ponyal," which in Russian means "I understand you," his opposite, Col. Alexei Leonov, was able to answer, "Roger," in the nondictionary Americanese.

The space waves bristled with such words mispronounced as "khorosh" by the Americans. The Russians knew that meant "okay."

And okay it was, from the first oral contact through the mutual visits and the cosmic banquets aboard the two ships when the spacemen were even able to exchange simple toasts in mispronounced noncosmic language.

Even if it means the use of such strange idiom as the American "I read you," which in Russian translates into "slyshu vas" — "I hear you."

Democrats Work To Save Defeated Development Bill

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso and Democratic legislative leaders today were scrambling to resurrect the controversial city and town development bill.

The legislature's State and Urban Development Committee voted Thursday not to bring up a new version of the measure, originally vetoed by Mrs. Grasso, at the special legislative session next week.

"Right now, it's 60-40 dead, but that's a guess," an administration official said after the committee voted to send the bill to a study committee. But Senate President Joseph J. Fauliso, D-Hartford, said it was "still alive."

Mrs. Grasso vetoed the original version because of defects which critics said would lead to abuses by local officials, but she urged the legislature to approve another version with safeguards.

The bill was designed to give municipalities a freer hand in issuing bonds to attract new businesses, rehabilitate decaying housing and create new jobs.

Rep. Richard E. Varis, R-Naugatuck, said the bill contains loopholes that could allow municipal officials to abuse taxpayers' money.

The controversy over the measure, the fifth draft of the measure Mrs. Grasso vetoed, has taken on overtones of big city vs. small town, with small municipalities against it.

Under the revised bill, a municipality would certify that it has major economic problems and authorize the use of bonds to stimulate business. The bonds would be put to a referendum, but the voters would not have a say in what specific projects are carried out, Varis said.

He said the bill appears to be tailor-made to circumvent strict bonding provisions in the Hartford city charter. The vetoed measure was pushed by Nicholas A. Carbone, Hartford Democratic town chairman and City Council majority leader.

Earlier Thursday, House Speaker James J. Kenney, D-Hartford, said of the measure, "It is a must bill at this time." Kenney said he expects the lawmakers to meet three days next week to finish their business, including Mrs. Grasso's nomination of five members to her new Public Utilities Control Authority.

The special session will begin Monday, after the legislators meet in a "trailer session" to consider 18 other bills vetoed by Mrs. Grasso. The Democratic-controlled legislature is expected to uphold all the vetoes.

Kenney said the committee has had three weeks to consider the revised version of the city and town development bill.

"If they can't iron out the kinks in that time, they'll never be ironed out," he said.

Rep. Donald Esposito, D-Danbury, chairman of the Urban Development committee, had said last week that more time might be needed to polish the bill.

Varis, the ranking Republican member in the committee, said since the bill grants such broad financial powers to the cities and towns, adequate time must be taken to insure the bill is properly drafted.

Varis said the broad bonding authority appears to be the major stumbling block in the committee.

"If they try to ram it through, I'm afraid it will have a lot of defects, though it is an improved bill," Varis said.

"The powers are too broad to come out with a defective bill," he said.

A breakdown of the vote, representing about half the full membership of the committee, showed all three Republicans and four out of the seven Democrats present in favor of sending the proposal to the study committee.

Santa Visits Town, Takes Early Orders

Donut on W. Middle Tpke. He distributed gifts and took note of wishes for Christmas delivery.

It's mid-July, it's hot and humid and there's no relief in sight. What's more, you're Santa Claus and you're on vacation in Manchester, but you're dressed for the North Pole.

What do you do?
If you're smart, you'll do what he did. You'll sit yourself down in the cool comfort of an air-conditioned donut shop.

It was "Christmas in July" Thursday at Mister Donut on W. Middle Tpke. and Santa was there to meet the kids (and some adults, too).

"What're you doing here in this hot weather?" one of the kids asked him.

He said he'd been spending the summer in Labrador, getting things ready for the Christmas season, when one of the elves told him, "Santa, you're pushing us too hard. You need a vacation."

So, he left on vacation and wound up in Manchester. Where else?

Lots of kids showed up — 15 in the first half hour — and the fact it's July and not December meant nothing to them.

Each told Santa what he or she wants for Christmas and each got a bag of donuts, a cold soda and, compliments of Santa himself (he wrote it 15 years ago), a copy of the song, "White Little Snowflakes."

At the request of several adults, Santa even sang the song for his appreciative audience.

When it came time for the Herald's photographer to take a picture of Santa, with a little boy on each knee, it was only a strange coincidence (we have witnesses to prove it was only a coincidence) that 4-year-old Chris (Shurtleff) was sitting on his left knee and 5-year-old Kris (Archambault) on his right knee.

Chris told Kris Kringle he wants a "put-put" race car for Christmas and Kris told Kris Kringle he wants a fire engine, to replace the one run over in his family's driveway.

It's only July, but you know something? We're willing to bet they get their wish.

Grain Demands Balanced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union apparently is going to import more grain than expected, but Europe, Japan and China are likely to import less, according to U.S. officials.

They say those trends should about cancel each other out and the United States — with record grain crops — should not have to strain its economy to supply its share of world demand.

The assessment was contained Thursday in a new Agriculture Department review of the world grain outlook, which estimated global production this year at 983.9 million metric tons — down 13.2 million tons from an April forecast, but still the biggest in history.

The report said this would exceed probable world needs and allow global grain stocks to increase nearly 12 million tons by mid-1976.

Portuguese Demonstrate

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The collapse of Portugal's coalition government has touched off protests against the country's influential Communist party and left-wing military rulers.

Thousands of chanting protesters shouted "down with communism" and "a free Portugal" Thursday night at demonstrations in the north of the country.

Some 20,000 supporters of the left-of-center Popular Democratic party, the second largest in Portugal, turned out for an anti-Communist rally in the coastal city of Porto.

Another 2,000 backers of the Socialist party, the largest in the country, showed up for a demonstration in the northern city of Braga, considered a Communist stronghold.

"Socialism, yes, dictatorship no," the protesters shouted over and over in both cities. "A free press, a free Portugal."

Looters Held Back

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Squads of police cordoned off the wreckage of a crowded Brazilian commuter train today to keep looters from disrupting an all-night search for victims.

The six-car train, packed with 1,000 travelers, jumped the track at rush hour Thursday evening as it roared into a suburban Rio de Janeiro station at 60 miles an hour.

A Fire Department spokesman said "more than 100 people were killed and at least 300 were injured" in the accident. But a railway spokesman reported only 13 persons dead.

"The figure of more than 100 is absurd," the rail spokesman said. "The official number of dead is 13 and it will most likely remain at that."

Rail Strike Predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal mediators called more talks today with negotiators for the nation's railways and a 17,000-member union which plans to strike July 28 if no contract settlement is reached.

Marathon bargaining broke down Thursday. Management and union representatives traded bitter remarks and an earlier atmosphere of optimism was destroyed.

GARDENING
By FRANK ATWOOD

The evening primrose is in bloom at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Bushnell on Thayer Rd., and like evening primrose anywhere it puts on a show that is worth asking the neighbors to watch. Fat, upright buds, growing in clusters on an upright stalk about four feet high, get fatter as the light fades at dusk.

Then, obeying their own signals as sunlight fades and darkness draws on, the buds literally burst into bloom. Four petals open wide and the bud becomes a bright, clear yellow flower about three inches across. There may be a few stragglers that will open later as darkness becomes more intense, but the Bushnells have opened about two weeks ago and the days were a little longer, blooming time was a little after 8. It will continue to be progressively earlier for the few weeks that bloom continues.

The flowers do not open by the clock, but by the intensity of the light, and when Steve Dunn took his picture, it was an over-cast evening with a shower building up and the flowers opened early. It was a little before 8. When the first flowers opened about two weeks ago and the days were a little longer, blooming time was a little after 8. It will continue to be progressively earlier for the few weeks that bloom continues.

Yellow flowers of evening primrose open just as darkness falls at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Bushnell at 66 Thayer Rd. They stay open through the night, then start to close. The next evening a new set of flowers will open. (Herald photo by Dunn)

Bees Come in Morning

The flowers stay open during the night, but bees use the night to fly in and pollinate. Mrs. Bushnell thinks that morning is the time when pollination takes place. She has not seen any insects other than bees during the hours of darkness, but bees find them in the morning and the flowers hanging petals have enough space between them for a bee to crawl inside.

Formerly in Woods

The Bushnells are living in a home that had been newly built in a house that was Mrs. Bushnell's mother's, showing red and white blossoms and many buds. Not everyone is successful in maintaining glorioia plants but this one survived the 1975 ice a failure in that acid soil, but they have had some topsoil brought in from a dairy farm and this year and the garden is doing well. There were stumps also that had to be removed. An Easter lily saved from last year is about to bloom. Mrs. Bushnell is Mary Jane Bushnell, a daughter of Dr. Richard Bushnell, who is talking now outdoors all year although it originally came from Texas. In the backyard, saved from the bulldozer, is a clump of to use again.

Mrs. Cynthia Wilson To Seek Hebron Selectman Post

Anne Dallaire 228-3267 Mrs. Cynthia G. Wilson of Slocum Rd., told the Democratic Town Committee Tuesday night that she will seek the party's endorsement for the Board of Selectmen.

Mrs. Wilson is tax collector and registrar of voters. She is a member of the Conservation Commission and a justice of the peace.

She has served on the Board of Education and was deputy registrar of voters before assuming the office of registrar.

First Selectman Aaron Reid announced his intention to seek re-election earlier this month. Mrs. Joan Rowley of Reidy Hill Rd. is a candidate for tax collector.

No one has expressed interest in running for town treasurer and agent of the town deposit fund.

Although no official announcement has been made, it is assumed that Mrs. Marian Celio will seek re-election as town clerk. Mrs. Celio is serving her first two-year term, having been endorsed by both parties.

Mrs. Wilson, who is vice-chairman of the Democratic party and a member of the party's nominating committee introduced a number of prospective candidates for town office. Other persons mentioned for office but not present at the meeting were Mrs. Barbara Stanfield, Hope Valley Rd., Board of Finance; Jim Lynch, Buck Rd., Board of Education and Board of Finance; and Joe Levine, Old Colchester Rd., Board of Education and Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ramen Campbell and John Hibbard also were not present, but have expressed interest in the Planning and Zoning Commission and Bob White of Willow Rd., would like to run for alderman to the appeals board.

Encumbent board members interested in seeking re-election include Robert Owens, Carriage Dr., Board of Education; Wayne Miller, Wellwood Rd., Board of Tax Review and Elder Young of Wall St., Zoning Board of Appeals.

Edward Williams of Slocum Rd. who is presently serving on the Board of Education has announced his candidacy for a seat on the Board of Finance.

Robert Croton, Wall St., an alternate of the Zoning Board of Appeals has announced his interest in a full term as a regular member of the board.

June Sylvester of Old Colchester Rd., has expressed her interest in serving in any capacity the party might desire.

In other action Carlann Frankel received the unanimous support of the town committee for recommendation to fill the vacancy on the Board of Finance. The vacancy was created by the June 1 resignation of Duane Totten.

Frankel announced his intention to seek endorsement for a full term on the Board of Finance.

The finance board is expected to fill the vacancy at its Sept. meeting.

Last month Frankel was elected treasurer of the town committee replacing Paul Blow who resigned due to business commitments.

The party caucus will be July 31, at 8 p.m. at the Town Office Building with a recommended slate to be presented by the nominating committee. This will not preclude nominations from the floor.

The committee appropriated $40 for a half page ad in the Lions Club Harvest Fair Program, which will be held in September.

Silt or Pollutant? A Matter of Definition

If a city takes water from a muddy river, cleans and purifies it for the use of its residential and industrial customers and sends the separated dirt and other solid matter back into the river, it would hardly seem to be guilty of polluting the river.

Yet it would be in the eyes of the Environmental Protection Agency. Or so claims the American Water Works Assn. in a hefty, three-inch thick document it presented the other day in the House Public Works Subcommittee on Investigation and Review.

The central theme of 17 separate exhibits offered by the AWWA, an organization representing some 30,000 public and private water utilities and others in the water treatment field, was that the present environmental effect of most treatment plant discharges is "inconsequential" and that elimination of the discharges would produce "no noticeable benefit."

However, if the federal Water Pollution Control Act is not changed, it warned, major construction and increased operating costs would result in substantially higher water bills to users.

Much of the difficulty, says the AWWA, is that the Environmental Protection Agency wants to consider silts as pollutants. They are not, the AWWA argues, nor are they caused by water treatment plant operations in the first place.

"Treatment plant removal is only a temporary separation of the sediment from treated water," says one portion of the AWWA report. "It is then returned to the original water course with no discernible change in sediment content of the surface waters."

Calling blanket regulation impractical, the association maintains that effluent discharge guidelines must be flexible and related to the quality of the streams that receive the discharges — stringent where required and lenient where stream conditions allow. And where no measurable effect on stream quality is found, no controls should be necessary.

New Careers In Agriculture

By 1985, the world will have another one billion mouths to feed, says the population experts.

This will place a heavy burden on American farmers to produce more food. But it will also create many new opportunities for careers in agriculture — careers calling for specialists never before associated with farming, on jobs often far removed from the land itself.

As the trend toward fewer but larger farms continues, economics and logistics will become more and more important to efficient farming in the 1980s. Larger, maintenance-free machinery with high productivity will raise the cost as well as the complexity of tractors and other equipment.

Farmers will depend heavily on off-site experts to help them decide such questions as the feasibility of using one big tractor or two small ones, purchasing capital equipment outright, leasing it seasonally or buying it co-operatively with other farmers. Advice for such decisions will come from people with a high degree of scientific and technological training as well as actual farm experience.

According to John E. Mitchell, an executive vice president of Massey-Ferguson, "An agricultural background even prior to higher education has never been more valuable than it is today. With much of the rural scene disappearing, there is already a shortage of farm or ranch kids going on to higher training who know the language and thinking of farmers."

U.S. Department of Labor estimates indicate that 40,000 to 50,000 new farm and ranch operators will be needed each year during the 1980s. It already takes about five "agri-business" people to back up each farmer or rancher today, notes Mitchell. He predicts that the number will increase as the need for specialists — ranging from agronomists and livestock veterinarians to service mechanics and application engineers — continues to grow.

Secretary Kissinger In Middle America

By HELEN THOMAS UPI White House Reporter WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is traveling around the country drumming up support for President Ford's foreign policy. In some ways he looks like a political campaigner but Kissinger seems to be asking the American people for a vote of confidence and to bolster the backing he needs to restore some of the foreign policy making power to the executive branch.

There apparently is little attempt to screen those looking for work to see if they're interested and merely going through the motions in order to collect unemployment payments. All too frequently, applicants do not report to the employer at all. In a high percentage of cases, when hired, they don't stay on the job.

There has been a major effort to extend unemployment payments in this time of recession. And rightly. But a job is far better than an unemployment check. Yet the efforts of Congress and of President Ford to straighten out the agencies dealing with those in desperate need of work have been pitifully ineffectual.

New government-sponsored studies pinpoint the problems: In employment offices in one state and another, the average man and woman looking for a job is treated routinely with little or no attention paid to personal abilities — and no attempt to place an applicant where most qualified.

The applicants are numbers, not people. Job openings are funnels into which to pour the job seekers. Never mind whether they do or do not fill. Never mind whether they get a job or not. It's the number of referrals that counts.

Likewise there's often little attempt to know the qualifications required for the opening they're sending the applicant to, or what the duties are. The applicant, not forewarned or prepared, may spend his days going from one employer to another with little hope of success. With little orientation, and not knowing what the employer expects, he has little chance of landing a job, or of lasting long if he is employed.

RAY CROMLEY Job Hunting The Hard Way

WASHINGTON — Nowhere are the fumbles of a plodding bureaucracy more apparent and more disgraceful than in the state-federal employment services.

There has been a major effort to extend unemployment payments in this time of recession. And rightly. But a job is far better than an unemployment check. ANDREW TULLY

Not Whistling Dixie

WASHINGTON — President Ford's campaign aides are not just whistling Dixie when they say privately that they are not worried about Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

The conventional wisdom among pundits seems to be that if Wallace ran for President as a third-party choice he would wreck Ford's chances by collecting a huge chunk of conservative votes. These experts note that the only reason Hubert Humphrey ran a close race against Richard Nixon in 1968 was that Wallace cut into Nixon's support.

Politically, however, 1968 was a long time ago. Since then, Wallace has been paralytic by a would-be assassin's bullet, posing the question whether he would be healthy enough to handle the Presidency's man-killing chores. Even the most ardent Wallace supporters have to be concerned about that question.

Thus, as the Ford people see it, Wallace will be even more of a "protest" candidate in 1976. That is to say, the Wallace voter will be casting his ballot not for a candidate he believes can win but to call down a plague on both the Democratic and Republican nominees.

That is so, Ford will not be in as bad shape as the Democrats predict. Wallace's strength is among conservatives — the Wallace supporters may play safe and go for Ford.

or, as Ford's campaign chief, Howard (Bo) Callaway, put it at a recent strategy meeting: "It just doesn't make sense for a candidate to elect a Democratic President just to show his loyalty to George Wallace. The conservative may believe in Wallace, but he knows damn well Ford is more conservative than any guy the Democrats can nominate."

In short, Callaway is banking on the hard fact of political life which says the electorate always, if reluctantly, chooses

MAX LERNER

Joshua

BOLINAS, Calif. — When his father saw him, newly born, struggling for breath, fighting pluckily for life itself, he named him Joshua. It was the natural name for one who had to fight his battle of Jericho from the first moment of life.

What it was that made him choke so pathetically was never wholly clear — perhaps a Hyaline membrane, as with Jacqueline Kennedy's baby, Patrick, or perhaps swallowing too much amniotic fluid. Mike and Leslie held vigil for three days at the Marin County Hospital, while the doctors and nurses devotedly labored over Joshua, with an oxygen "bird" over him and a tube down his throat.

There were ample prayers for him, too, to add to the skill of the team around him. Finally Edna and I, hovering over the phone a continuous way, got word that the crisis days were over, and that Joshua had won his Jericho.

That was a month ago. Now here I am, seeing him for the first time, getting him to the hill, holding tight the precious bundle of earth, air, fire and water, and giving thanks for the twelfth.

How shall I describe him? He is sturdy, handsome, contented, assertive — all the adjectives that dot his kin Israeli on a baby. He has a commanding, lusty look — a cross between a Russian Cossack, a Roman emperor and a Chicago ward politician. Why shouldn't he look that way? He is the inheritor of the right of converging, illustrious and enduring lines.

He is my eighth grandchild, and I have welcomed each of them with fervor. He is now in one thing special about Joshua. He is my first grandchild in the male line. The first seven were presented to me by Cora, Joan and Joan, and they bore the names of their fathers. Joshua is the firstborn of my oldest son, Michael, and on him will fall the first burden of the continuance of the Lerner name.

I look at Joshua and I ask him — and myself — whether this is male chauvinism on my part, or only a long, built-in residue of the patrilinear naming system. Joshua says nothing and looks wise. He has learned quickly that this is a good way of responding to most things in the world he has entered. I hold him over my shoulder, and burp him, much as I did when I paced the floor with his father some 30 years ago. This is the continuity of the generations, the eternal recurrence which gives life its enduring quality despite all the ephemeral headline happenings I have been writing about. You hold the tiny creature in your arms, and you think about what he has become part of — a life web at once enduring and fragile — and you get a lump in your throat.

I ask myself what Joshua's ruling passion will be. Will it be psychology, like one of his grandmothers, or world unity, like the other? Will he be a writer, like his grandfathers on both sides? Will his passion be literature and the theater, like his mother's, or nutrition, neurology and society, like his father's? He has so many conditionings to choose from. But if he proves to be like any of my own six children, he will make his own choice and stubbornly hold to it.

Edna found an ancient wooden cradle for him in Southampton, and I bought one. Steve built him another and more mobile one, of bamboo. After his nursing I rank him as the best sleeper. Does he remember the year of his birth, as Otto Wank claims? The Freudians tell us that he is now in the first of two oral stages, in which he still doesn't distinguish between himself and the objects he incorporates. He is in (Karl Abraham's words) "Objectless and free of ambivalence." If you can give any credence to this stuff, he will later move into the second oral stage and become a destructive cannibal.

I await that time, when I can offer myself as one object that won't mind being cannibalized. Joshua was lucky to have been born here in Bolinas, a half-old, half-new town on the Pacific, which is a genuine gem of the coast. It is full of sturdy young men, beautiful young women who come on bicycles to admire him, children, dogs. Joshua will be enveloped with love on my part, or only a long, built-in residue of the patrilinear naming system. Joshua says nothing and looks wise. He has learned quickly that this is a good way of

Paluska Heads GOP Ticket, Committee Offers Caucus

ELLINGTON BARBARA RICHMOND

Everett C. Paluska, of Suisun Lake Rd., Ellington, who served as tax collector in that town for 13 1/2 years and as deputy state tax commissioner for five years and probation officer for four years under Gov. Thomas Meskill, will run for the post of first selectman in the November elections.

The announcement of the state of Republican candidates to be made to the Republican caucus in Ellington July 30 was made at a press conference this morning by Gerald O'Connell, Republican town chairman.

In announcing that he will head the ticket, O'Connell said the choice was made due to Paluska's knowledge about the town, his past services, and the fact he will be available.

Paluska, and his wife Barbara, who will seek re-election as tax collector, are also municipal tax consultants. Mrs. Paluska took over the tax collector's post when her husband started his own business with the state tax department.

Paluska, who is 51, has lived in the Ellington area all of his life and over the years has been very active in local affairs. He is now in the first of two oral stages, in which he still doesn't distinguish between himself and the objects he incorporates. He is in (Karl Abraham's words) "Objectless and free of ambivalence." Red Sox, A's Putting Pressure on Rivals

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Oakland A's and Boston Red Sox have picked up right where they left off at the All-Star break, putting the pressure on their division rivals in the American League.

The three-time world champion A's picked up ground on both their closest rivals in the Western Division, while the Red Sox gained a full game on their second-place rivals in the Eastern Division. The A's now lead by 1 1/2 games in the West and the Red Sox by 5 1/2 games in the East.

With Reggie Jackson and Sal Bando hitting homers and Ken Holtzman winning his 12th game, the A's defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-3. The homers by Jackson and Bando tied the score at 2-2 in the second inning and the A's then scored three runs in the third to take the lead. Cecil Cooper, one of the Red Sox' under-rated young stars, led a 12-hit attack with a double, triple and homer in Boston's 9-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals. It was the eighth straight victory for the Red Sox as Luis Tiant pitched a five-hitter to raise his record to 15-8.

The Detroit Tigers defeated the Chicago White Sox 9-1 after a 4-0 loss, the California Angels beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-1, the Texas Rangers won the New York Yankees 7-2, and the Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles scored a 6-3 12-inning triumph over the Minnesota Twins in other AL action.

White Sox 4-1, Tigers 9-0
Wilbur Wood pitched a two-hitter, stretched his string of scoreless innings to 18 and raised his record to 8-13 for the White Sox in their first game. The Tigers gained a split, however, when Lennox Lewis pitched a seven-hitter and Aurelio Lopez pitched a four-hitter and walked one as the Rangers ended their four-game losing streak.

Angels 6, Brewers 1
Dave Chalk's first homer in the season snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth and Morris Nettles drove in three runs for the Angels. Ed Figueroa pitched a four-hitter, hurt only by Darrell Porter's second-inning homer, in raising his record to 8-5 while Jim Colborn was the loser.

Rangers 7, Yankees 2
Ferguson Jenkins pitched a three-hitter for his 11th victory and Jeff Burroughs drove in three runs with a double and a sacrifice fly as the Rangers dealt Pat Dobson his ninth loss. Jenkins struck out four and walked none as the Rangers ended their four-game losing streak.

Orioles 6, Twins 3
Elrod Hendricks hit a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the 12th, lifting the Orioles to their win over the Twins. Grant Jackson pitched two scoreless innings to win his third game for the Orioles, while Bill Campbell was tagged with his fifth defeat against two victories. Dan Ford homered for the Twins and Lee May connected for Baltimore.

Kuhn's Job Safe, Finley Loses Out

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Bowie Kuhn called the entire two-day ordeal "obscene." Charlie Finley said Kuhn was "gutless" and had no class.

Yet, as the baseball owners departed in various directions at the conclusion of the two-day All-Star break meetings Thursday, Bowie Kuhn said his commissioner and Charlie Finley had lost another one.

Kuhn's final vote of confidence from the owners, which extended his contract for another seven years — was 22-2. But the margin of victory was really much smaller.

NL Roundup Reds' Streak Ended

NEW YORK (UPI) — It took a pitcher with a blistering fastball to finally put the collar on the Cincinnati Reds. It took a blistering bat to keep Los Angeles from gaining any ground.

While Montreal was handing the Reds their first loss in the last 10 games, 3-0, Thursday night, Los Angeles was having trouble coping with Pittsburgh, leaders of the National League East. The Dodgers blew their first opportunity in two weeks to gain on the Reds by dropping a 5-2 decision to the Pirates.

Montreal's Steve Rogers was working with "good velocity" for six innings against Cincinnati before retiring to the showers with a blister on his right forearm. Rogers had held the Reds, the National League batting leaders, to five hits, all singles, while walking two and striking out seven. Dale Murray came in from the bullpen to preserve the shutout and nail down the victory.

Pittsburgh's Dave Parker, who did not make the All-Star roster despite batting .338, smashed two homers to extend his hitting streak to 14 games and his total homers to 17.

Willie Stargell, who also sat out the All-Star break with a .311 average, added his 18th homer for Pittsburgh, while Bruce Kison allowed six hits in 8 2/3 innings and brought his record to 8-4 after getting ninth-inning relief help from Dave Gusti.

All three of the homers came off Andy Messersmith, 12-7, who failed for the fourth straight time to win his 20th game. He allowed six hits in 8 2/3 innings and brought his record to 8-4 after getting ninth-inning relief help from Dave Gusti.

Ford Not Worried By Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Word from the White House is that Ronald Reagan doesn't scare President Ford very much.

White House officials say he is more concerned about Ford winning the November 1976 presidential election than about beating the former California governor for the Republican nomination.

The official spokesman said when asked if Reagan was feared.

He said Ford's men see no reason not to take Reagan at his word; that he has not yet made up his mind whether to seek the GOP nomination, that he may not decide until year's end and that in no way does he want to be vice president.

According to his aide in the White House, Ford believes in running "flat out." In other words, Ford believes in using a steamroller no matter if his foe is a giant or a gnat.

Reagan seems to be classed somewhere between a giant and a gnat.

The President's men are confident of their man and his chances. The official said Ford has moved carefully in setting up machinery for 1976.

In his December 1974 reorganization of the White House staff, Ford named nine men — including assistant Donor Rumfeld, counselor Robert Hartmann and counselor Philip Buchen — as his senior advisers. Now, for the first time, a 19th senior aide has been greased-penciled onto the chart.

The tenth man is Georgian Howard "Bo" Callaway, a former Army secretary named to head Ford's election committee.

The White House official says Callaway — without White House office space or being on the public payroll — will operate as do his fellow nine senior advisers to the President.

Callaway can see Ford whenever he wants. He can telephone Rumfeld, Hartmann, Buchen or anyone else in the White House.

Of course, it will be to Rumfeld that Callaway will go to make an appointment to see Ford, and then to Hartmann to get any working papers. Rumfeld remains the most equal of the 10 equals.

The White House official indicates Callaway's post means less in the position of political adviser Hartmann.

The official says Hartmann will continue as a key political maestro.

It will be his job to link Ford to the Republican National Committee. It will continue to be Hartmann who Republican state chairmen will telephone to get in a word in the house of power.

Married GIs Divorce Army

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — The honeymoon — and the marriage as well — is over between the Gockes and the Army.

When Timothy Gocke and his wife, Ellen, joined the Army in 1972, they were told by recruiters they would be stationed together and would work the same hours.

The Army heralded them as the first husband-wife team to enlist under guarantees and options of the "modern Army." But couple says the Army didn't live up to its promises, so they're getting out.

The Gockes were told they would be stationed at Ft. Benjamin Harrison near Indianapolis, where they would attend finance school.

Instead, Mrs. Gocke said, she was ordered to clerk-type at school at Fort Dix, N.J., and her husband to paratrooper school at Ft. Benning, Ga.

They objected and both were stationed at Fort Dix.

There they encountered more problems. They were told they could not live together — a promise they had been given upon enlistment.

Higher authorities intervened, and they were permitted to share the same quarters. Then they were transferred to Ft. Lewis near Tacoma. "This didn't end their problems."

The Gockes were not treated too well by their fellow enlisted men and women at Ft. Lewis. "The oldtimers, lifers, weren't ready to accept the change," Spec. 4 Gocke, 25, said.

The Gockes said other soldiers were jealous of their combined monthly take-home pay ($800) and he suffered ridicule when she attained the rank of private first class — before he did.

"I outranked him and — poor Tom — I mean, you know what the men are like in the Army, they're so macho," she said.

It got to one of those where I could do no wrong and he could do no good."

Mrs. Gocke got out of the Army last June. Her husband's enlistment ends in November.

Elephant Attacks, Trainer Hurt Badly

VALENCIA, Calif. (UPI) — An angry bull elephant trampled a woman animal handler Thursday and drove both his tusks into her neck, exposing her jugular vein.

"That she is still alive is a miracle," said the surgeon who operated on the woman at Beverly Lamping, 31, who manages the animal farm at the Magic Mountain amusement park near her husband's.

Frank, who managed a 5-year-old elephant named Bamboo from a barn to an exhibit area when he suddenly attacked her for unknown reasons, park officials said.

"The elephant just decided to kill me," she later told her husband. "He went after me three or four times. He knocked me down several times. I couldn't fight him off."

She was bleeding into her neck and was unconscious for 700 seconds.

Surgeons at Golden State Hospital operated for 1 1/2 hours to repair the wounds inflicted by the elephant's tusks in the area of her collarbone and neck. She was in serious but stable condition.

Married GIs Divorce Army

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — The honeymoon — and the marriage as well — is over between the Gockes and the Army.

When Timothy Gocke and his wife, Ellen, joined the Army in 1972, they were told by recruiters they would be stationed together and would work the same hours.

The Army heralded them as the first husband-wife team to enlist under guarantees and options of the "modern Army." But couple says the Army didn't live up to its promises, so they're getting out.

The Gockes were told they would be stationed at Ft. Benjamin Harrison near Indianapolis, where they would attend finance school.

Instead, Mrs. Gocke said, she was ordered to clerk-type at school at Fort Dix, N.J., and her husband to paratrooper school at Ft. Benning, Ga.

They objected and both were stationed at Fort Dix.

There they encountered more problems. They were told they could not live together — a promise they had been given upon enlistment.

Higher authorities intervened, and they were permitted to share the same quarters. Then they were transferred to Ft. Lewis near Tacoma. "This didn't end their problems."

The Gockes were not treated too well by their fellow enlisted men and women at Ft. Lewis. "The oldtimers, lifers, weren't ready to accept the change," Spec. 4 Gocke, 25, said.

The Gockes said other soldiers were jealous of their combined monthly take-home pay ($800) and he suffered ridicule when she attained the rank of private first class — before he did.

Hayes Corp. Showing Modular Home

Hayes Corp. Showing Modular Home

Joseph H. Tully, vice-president of The Hayes Corp., a Manchester real estate firm, examines the interior plans of the modular home his company has for inspection on the north side of Spencer St., just west of West Cemetery. An Open House for the public is scheduled Sunday, from 2 to 5 p.m. The home on display has five rooms and 1 1/2 baths and is only one of 17 models (of up to eight rooms) built by Connecticut Homes of Nashua, N.H. A division of the nationally known Weil-McLain Co. Company has sold over 15,000 modular homes in the 10 years it's been making them. Modular homes are built in two sections and are delivered by trailer. The two sections are bolted together when placed on a site. The structures are quality-controlled during construction and are completed on assembly lines, similar to those for automobiles. Tully said of the modular home, "It's the finest product we've seen in the industry in the 17 years the Hayes Corp. has been in the real estate business. It can save a home buyer 15 to 20 per cent of the average cost of a dwelling. Financing is similar to that for conventional homes and we can promise delivery in two weeks." (Herald photo by Dunn)

Rogers Reports Sales Decline for Quarter

Rogers Corp. has reported second quarter sales of $912,000, down 26 per cent from last year's all-time high of $1,245,000, and a net loss for the period of $42,000, or four cents per share.

It compares with record earnings of $40,000, or 44 per share a year ago. For the first half sales were $1,407,000, down 24 per cent from the $1,854,000 in last year's comparable period, resulting in a loss of $181,000, or 19 cents per share. It compares with a profit of $175,000, or 77 cents per share a year ago.

Norman L. Greenman, president of Rogers, said, "This is the only time since 1957 that Rogers has experienced two consecutive loss quarters. Volume in the second 3 months did improve somewhat over the first quarter, and the loss was reduced significantly as stringent cost reduction efforts became fully effective. June was the best month so far in 1975, with improved sales and a slight profit, and there are indications that the severe inventory liquidation by our customers has begun to ease in all but one of our market areas."

Bank Reports Assets Reach All-Time High

The assets of the Savings Bank of Rockville have reached an all-time high of $60,851,246, an increase of $3,825,705 over a year ago, Charles E. Pressler, president of the bank announced at the annual meeting July 15.

Pressler said the total deposits of the bank's 20,699 customers, plus 2,283 club accounts, members, attained a new high of $54,105,769.

The loan services of the bank showed a 1966 mortgage loans in the amount of $1,068,131 as of June 30. The bank is also active in the home improvement loans, personal passbook, auto, and student loans plus having a stock savings program.

It also has group home mortgage insurance, group health insurance and savings bank life insurance as part of its many services.

With one branch office in Somers, the bank is now standing another branch office at Lafayette Square in Vernon. Plans are also being made to offer personal checking accounts as of Dec. 21, to the customers of all offices.

The following officers were re-elected: Pressler, president; Herman Usher, vice president and treasurer; Burton C. Johnson, assistant treasurer; Charles D. MacMillan, assistant treasurer; Edith T. Casati, secretary; Dorothea E. Press, assistant secretary; and Arline Shaw, assistant secretary.

Dance To Raise Funds For Football Program

There will be door prizes. Tables will be reserved for those persons purchasing tickets in groups of five. Parents having children in the football program as players or cheerleaders are urged to purchase tickets in groups of five. This will be the group's main fund raiser.

The money is used to supplement that which is given by the town.

Tickets to the event are now being sold.

Anyone wishing to purchase a ticket is asked to call Gall Tischer, 649-4074, Sherry Shaw, 649-8815, Judy Miner, 649-7131, Donna Holland, 646-0975, or Pat Narsavage, 646-7459.

Mrs. Grasso said Thursday she was pleased by the town's high unemployment for funds for needed public works projects will be examined on the merits and value of the state's credit rating in mind.

The $16 million was to be obtained through bonding, but the governor said that the state's credit rating had reached its borrowing limit and further bonding could damage the state's credit rating and drive interest rates up.

Job Program OK'd

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso has given a qualified go-ahead to a $16 million job program passed by the 1975 legislature but treated by the state's financial plan.

Mrs. Grasso said Thursday she was pleased by the town's high unemployment for funds for needed public works projects will be examined on the merits and value of the state's credit rating in mind.

The $16 million was to be obtained through bonding, but the governor said that the state's credit rating had reached its borrowing limit and further bonding could damage the state's credit rating and drive interest rates up.

Experts speak foul language
Sometimes experts get confused by their own biddling language. This hand cost a major in a tournament some years ago.
North was one of those minimum bidders who hated to open with a forcing two of any sort. His two heart rebids were one-round force in the system he and his partner were playing. But they were playing so many conventions that he was under the impression he had forced to game.

Ask the Jacobys
A reader from Shreveport wants to know what point count limits we advocate for a one notrump opening bid. The answer is that we go with the standard American 16-18. We have no quarrel if you want to shade it to 15 to 17, but we see no merit in weak or superstrong notrumps. We see even less merit in the scatter gun 16-18 notrump. To get the most value from your notrump openings keep them as precise picture bids.

Here Come the Book Readers

Carla Krysiak, 8, of 65 Green Rd., moves her little paper horse along the route of Paul Revere's ride which indicates her progress in a summer reading club at Wilton Memorial Library. A new member of the club is given a boat with his or her name which is then placed in the Boston Harbor at the bottom of the chart. After reading two books, the boat reaches Old North Church where the reader is given a horse. As books are read, the member's horse moves past historical buildings until it reaches Concord, the goal for ten book read. The ride ends Aug. 5. (Herald photo by Dunn)

Egypt Will Get New Peace Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—New Israeli proposals for an interim Mideast peace agreement soon will be delivered to Egypt, Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dinitz predicted today. "I feel progress has been made," Dinitz told reporters as he emerged from a breakfast meeting with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. The State Department said Thursday Israel had put forward "new ideas" on the stalemate. But Dinitz declined today to go into details and cautioned against "premature" talk of an agreement in the war of nerves of Israeli-occupied lands in the arid Sinai Desert. "The next step, I presume, will be that Israel's ideas will be given to the Egyptians," said Dinitz, who also held talks with Kissinger Thursday. The Israeli official said he did not know when the new ideas would be presented to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, but it was understood they might be relayed there by U.S. Ambassador to Egypt Hermann Eilts, who is currently in Washington for briefings. Eilts was expected to return to Egypt this weekend. The talks here have been held under some mounting pressure because of Egypt's threat to end rights for a U.N. peacekeeping force in the Sinai next week.

Progress Reported On Bicen Programs

The Manchester Bicentennial Committee met Thursday night at the Municipal Building to hear reports on programs in progress. The fireworks July 4 on the hill in Wickham Park got praise and criticism. Some felt the fireworks, almost all aerial, should have been visible from most parts of town. Others said it was the best fireworks the town has had. The fireworks was a practice run for a fireworks display next July 4.

George Atkins of the veterans committee met Thursday night at 23 graves in Manchester of Revolutionary War soldiers. He is in charge of honoring each grave next year. David Gay, in charge of the time capsule, said his group plans now to bury the capsule on Thanksgiving Day after the Turkey Day Road Race. The next meeting of the committee is planned for Wednesday, Sept. 17.

West Siders Repeat Storm Sewer Petition

A repeat petition and an anonymous letter were received Thursday night by Manchester Director Robert Price, whose turn it was to man a Board of Directors' comment session. The petition was a copy of one given the directors last year by a group of West Side residents. It requests installation of storm sewers in the area. The two men who presented the repeat petition asked for an explanation of the delay in construction—in light of the fact the voters last November approved

One Charged In Robbery

Robert L. Lomax, 21, of Hartford was arrested Thursday at 11:15 a.m. at Hartford Police Headquarters on a Common Pleas Court 12 warrant charging him with first-degree robbery.
The charge stems from the robbery Tuesday at 5:50 p.m. of the Cumberland Dairy at 210 W. Center St. by two black males, police said.
Two men threatened the store clerk with a baseball bat-type weapon and took about $100 from the cash register. Three men at the scene including an off-duty policeman, Donald Burns, noted the license plate number of their car.
The car was registered in the name of Lomax, police said.
Lomax was held overnight in lieu of $5,000 surety bond for court today.
Police said they are still looking for the second man in the robbery.

Thieves Use Phone Call Technique

With a phone call and a truck, thieves stole $2,863.01 worth of articles from Economy Electric Supply Co. of 824 Main St. this month, police said.
On July 9, a woman phoned in an order for all the items. She said she represented a Springfield firm doing business with Economy.
On July 14, a man driving a red truck came to the store. He loaded the articles and left.
On July 17, Thursday, the owner of the Springfield firm came to the store and said he never ordered or picked up any of the articles.
Police are investigating.
