

Manchester Evening Herald OPINION Quota System Wrong

The Connecticut State Police, it has been reported, are issuing traffic citations under a quota system.

Quotas are set up on the basis of the average monthly number of tickets handed out by each of the 10 state police units around the state.

The idea is that those patrolmen who are not writing tickets at an average rate will be inspired to "bring themselves up to acceptable levels."

As the low producers increase the production, the average will go up and next month more efforts or arrests will have to be made to meet "acceptable levels."

To the extent such efforts reflect impartial enforcement of traffic law violations, the idea of increased law enforcement is not bad.

But the quota system is inherently bad. It puts the enforcer under pressure to meet an arbitrary goal. This means in many instances his judgment of what constitutes a violation is narrower when he is trying to reach his quota than after he has reached it.

Sad to say, traffic law enforcement because of economic reasons, can never be a 100 per cent day in and day out effort. At best, we can only attempt to create a climate for safer driving by attempting to discipline the more flagrant violators.

Quotas make no such distinction. The real danger in quotas other than the uneven law enforcement, is that in setting a minimum effort, too often it becomes the maximum effort, too.

The concern for an "acceptable level" by state officials may stem from the federal government's stipulation that states show an effort to enforce the federal 55 m.p.h. speed limit. Or it may be an effort to fatten state coffers in these days of financial stress.

We have no quarrel with the federal goal of fuel conservation but the lower speed limit's real merit is that it has proven it saves lives. Therefore enforcement must be an around the clock effort not an on and off thing possible with a quota system.

We hope the quota system will be abandoned as quickly as possible.

The safety of Connecticut motorists is not to be measured by the number of speeding tickets issued; but rather by a lessening of accidents for which there are no "acceptable levels."

A new magazine — Soldier of Fortune — may be just the ticket for the Walter Mittys, as well as for the "professional adventurer" for which it is designed.

Publicity describing the charter issue of the magazine promises that "this unique publication will provide the professional adventurer with pertinent, usable, head-knocking, bone-jarring special interest articles, jammed with facts, ideas and techniques, that are slammed across with the devastating impact of a burst from an Uzi (a much respected Israeli sub-machinegun."

For instance, the first issue contains information on how to become a

"merc" — mercenary — in Africa, with an on-the-spot report on type of combat, the enemy, terrain and pay scales.

Other articles tell how to win at underwater knife fighting, how to cope with hoodlums or muggers in the back streets of Chicago, Saigon or London, how the CIA supplied weapons to the assassins of Dominican dictator Trujillo and then betrayed the traitors.

In between wars and rumors of wars, the magazine plans to cover the whole range of action-oriented topics, from chopper pilots in Borneo to oil roughnecks in the Arctic, from crop dusters in Rhodesia to salvage divers in the Pacific.

The Lighter Side Aid for the Unopposed

By Dick West

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Election Commission recently invited the public to submit views on various campaign regulations it is considering.

One of the matters on which it solicited comment concerns proposed spending limits for candidates who are running unopposed.

The question the commission was wrestling with was whether candidates who have no primary opposition should be permitted to spend the same amount as those in contested primaries.

Since this happens to be an issue I feel strongly about, I have spent a good bit of time collecting my thoughts for presentation to the commission.

I am setting them forth here in the hope that if you are like-minded you will let the commission know about it, too.

In all fairness, it seems to me, an unopposed candidate shouldn't have any limit on his campaign spending.

Politicians have a hard enough time drumming up support when the race is close.

In a contested primary, a candidate's major source of support comes from voters who can't stand the other candidate.

Candidates who are forced to run unopposed not only lose that advantage; they acquire at least two big disadvantages.

Possibly the main obstacle an unopposed candidate must overcome is the undecided vote.

Public opinion polls invariably show that whenever voters are given no choice there is a substantial increase in the percentage who can't make up their minds.

Actually, of course, in an uncontested primary the voters do have a choice of sorts. In effect, they are told that "It's either him or nobody."

And that is the point on which many are unable to reach a decision.

Thus, for an unopposed candidate the problem is twofold. He must look for support not only among voters who would prefer nobody but among those who aren't sure which they would prefer.

It's a genuine dilemma and candidates in those circumstances need all the campaign funds they can get.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

"On Vacation"

There is nothing like a vacation to make people over and give them a new sense of living.

But the thoughtful person will remember that you can't vacation from God. If anything it ought to be a time for tuning the heart and mind to new values and especially to what is basic to life itself.

Don't forget that the highest thoughts you can have on a vacation are related to God as the Father who cares, who controls, and who carries us.

A.J. Cronin, in one of his books, tells of a person saying, "I can't help it, I still don't know whether I can believe in God."

To which the response comes back, "It doesn't really matter whether you believe in God; God believes in you."

Make that your key thought for this vacation season.

Power and Beauty

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — How would you like five minutes of conversation with the most beautiful girl in the universe? In fact, with each of 71 of the most beautiful girls? That's what the judges of the Miss Universe contest have had, spread out over two crowded, delightful, impossible evenings.

By the time you read this you will know what, at present writing, we don't ourselves know — who the gleaming, joyful Miss Universe is. (Editor's note: Miss Finland was the winner.) But we know enough to know how hard it will be in the end to choose between the whole array. A judge in a court of law must often deal with an unruly herd that will becloud the steady eye and mind.

Joy and pathos mingle here in equal measure. The girls are young, tense, vulnerable, scared. They are dazzled by the stir they make. Some have come up from poverty and broken families, but most come from middle-class homes in their own countries, and until they have led uneventful lives. Each has rehearsed how to dress, stand, walk, smile, wave her hand, and each has even been primed to answer the questions the judges might ask in the "personality" interviews.

But sometimes there are unexpected, rattling questions. The heart pumps, the face flushes, the brain has to work fast and summon all its energy for the answer that will not be displeasing to the judge and yet will be true to the girl herself. Hope eggs you on, your sheer driving will sustain you, and, always on the edge of all the other emotions there is the specter of heart-break.

The sharpest criticism of all these contests comes from two directions. One is from the Women's Liberation Movement,

TOM TIEDE

An Idea Thinks Its Time Has Come

SAVANNAH, Ohio — One would think any movement promising people $25,000 a year for 16-hour-a-week jobs would have applicants pounding on the doors. But the only technical activity on the pastoral grounds of Technocracy, Inc., is the caretaker mowing the lawn. The parking signs point to empty lots, the two-year-old office building is manned by a lone worker. "Anybody who comes out here," says an observer, "is probably lost off the Interstate."

It wasn't always thus for Technocracy, Inc. Formed in the early 1930s as a glimpse of a new social and economic order, it was one of many Depression-spawned ideologies that gnawed into the American imagination. With people seeing apples in the street, when they could steal the apples, thousands read Technocracy pamphlets and listened to Technocracy speeches with serious if not altogether unappreciative interest.

Even then the movement promised something for nothing, or at least very little: No poverty, no welfare, no class prejudice, no crime, no corruption and no politics.

Expectedly, the interest quickly faded with national recovery. Today, though membership figures are not discussed by Technocracy officers, support is sustained by a small group of hard core enthusiasts throughout the United States and Canada. Says one, John Sheldon, a member of the movement's board of directors:

"We are not a pushy group. If people like us, fine, but we don't overtly promote. We think our ideas are right, we know they are right, and we are not so much advocating the changes we want as we are waiting for them to occur."

The changes expected are nothing short of complete control of the nation by an entire continent. Technocracy foresees old order economic laws giving way to modern consumer eruptions, the result being the necessary forging of a continental nation — the U.S., Canada, Mexico and all Central American countries — as a force for survival. And what survival? The Technocrats believe North American resources and people could be welded into a socio-economic entity that would secure for its nearly 400 million people the highest, firmest and most effortless standard of living in history.

Money would be replaced by guaranteed shares of the nation's production, the equivalent of about $25,000 in goods and services annually. Work would be reorganized so that no one would have to begin it until age 25 and so everyone could end it 20 years after.

"Crime would disappear because there would be no need to profit from it," says Sheldon. Corruption would end too, he adds, for the same reason. "Everybody would have exactly the same standard of living. Everybody would have exactly the same opportunities. Under our system, the world would be for living and not for enduring."

There is, of course, a catch in all this. Numerous catches, actually, but one in particular. Technocrats do not think Utopia can be created by any but the most capable. Hence, politics would be replaced

Insect Bites Can KILL

One bite, in susceptible people, can cause instant lung collapse and subsequent heart stoppage!

Would you be surprised to know the stings of bees, yellow jackets, wasps and hornets kill more humans every year than any other animal? Their venom contains a poison that can set off massive allergic reactions that can be fatal to a sensitized person. Such people should carry a medical identification card describing their sensitivity.

To treat a sting, apply a constricting bandage just above the stung area, using a strong, wide strip of cloth. Apply an ice pack or cold cloths to the inflamed area. Remove the stinger with tweezers being careful not to squeeze the venom from the sac into the skin.

ANTIDOTE: For those people who know that they have allergies of any kind it might be advisable to carry an emergency Insect Bite Kit with them. This kit contains ADRENALINE injection in a syringe already to be injected quickly. This can only be had with a prescription. But it can sometimes mean the difference between life and death. Antihistamines and cortisone help control symptoms.

KEEP THE BUGS AWAY
Don't wear clothing with bright flower prints because they fool the insects and draw them to you.

Avoid using scented preparations. Deodorants, hair sprays and perfumes attract bees and wasps.

Use commercial insect repellents that are rubbed or sprayed on the skin.

Stay away from places where insects gather.

Bernard To Head Andover Constables

Donna Holland
646-0375

Lionel Bernard was elected head of the Andover constables and given the title of "administrator of constables" at a meeting of the constabulary Monday night at its headquarters.

Bernard received four votes and William Kowalski received two.

Of the seven elected constables the town has, only one, Clarence Custer was absent from the meeting.

At a meeting two weeks ago it was decided that Kowalski would be deputy chief and Ronnie Mike his lieutenant.

The constables decided the man who had received the highest number of votes in the election would be deputy chief and the man receiving the next highest number would be lieutenant.

Because that meeting had not been legally posted with the town clerk, the constables legally posted Monday's meeting and the vote was taken.

Kowalski said the choosing of a man was not a contest among the constables. He said the man had to be well liked in town, of unquestionable character, completely honest and one who could be trusted and relied on.

Joe Bretton said he agreed with Kowalski's idea of the man but most important it had to be someone other constables could relate to and get along with.

He said, "It has to be someone who will do our best interests as well as the town's."

A motion by Bretton to call the head of the constables, "chief administrator" was responded to by Kowalski saying, "That title is downgrading to the man and I think it's idiotic."

When the title was revised to administrator of constables and the vote taken, three were in favor, one against and two abstained. The title means the man will be responsible for paper work and equipment, as by state law all constables are equal.

Then Bernard said he wanted to show in the minutes there was definite group appreciation to Kowalski for all the work he had done. Bernard said it was through Kowalski's efforts the constables had reached the point of organizing and he should be thanked.

Kowalski said he would never let the town down and he would do his best working with Bernard.

A set of operational rules for the constables submitted by Kowalski, were unanimously approved by the constables.

A set of bylaws will be prepared and voted on in September.

The committee to draft the bylaws consists of Bernard, Gary Kelly and Eric Anderson. Bernard is not now a police constable for several years. He was on the Coventry Police force as an auxiliary, then as a super-numerary.

He was on the Coventry Police force for eight years.

He received an award for heroism from the New England Police Commissioner's Association about three years ago.

He's been a special constable in Andover for four years. In May he became an elected constable.

Bernard said once the bylaws were approved, he would insist all constables obey them.

He told the men the first year would be a rough one, but at the end of a year they would have a "solid" good operating constabulary."

Kowalski was questioned as to whether the cruiser could be considered an emergency vehicle for the dog ward.

He explained the circumstances of a week ago when he received a call to pick up an injured dog which had been hit by a truck to take it to a veterinarian and his own car wasn't available. He said in the same set of circumstances he would do it again.

Then the question was raised as to how David Youmans, first selectman, classifies his use of the cruiser purchased for the constables.

The constables voted to keep their portable radio at headquarters unless it was needed by whoever was on patrol.

Bernard will begin an inventory of the constable's equipment.

The constables will request the town pay for them to attend classes on use of a pistol and practiced late in July. The cost is anticipated to be under $50.

For those who need the constables for any reason, an emergency or to have their houses checked while on vacation, their names and numbers are: Lionel Bernard, 742-8596; William Kowalski, 742-7184; Ronnie Mike, 742-9760; Gary Kelly, 742-7810; Joe Bretton, 742-7665; Eric Anderson, 742-9182.

Democrats Criticize Dreselly Over Park Appointment

BOLTON
Donna Holland
646-0375

The Democratic Town Committee criticized First Selectman David Dreselly saying it is "shocked and appalled by his demand that the opportunity to serve the town must depend upon voicing criticism, making political statements or aspiring to any other town office."

The committee issued the criticism after Dreselly said Lawrence Shaw, park commissioner for two years, wasn't being supported for reappointment because of remarks he made before the May election.

The DTC said Dreselly's, "...insistence on subservience to the administration represents a frightened attempt to prevent airing of the issues and can only corrupt the Democratic process and discourage people of ability from wanting to serve the town."

At its last meeting the DTC members discussed "...serious town problems which we feel are being mishandled by the selectmen."

A committee member said police protection and the dump were among the problems discussed.

The selectmen were criticized by the DTC for "...inadequately informing townpeople before important issues were to be decided."

It cited as an example the library. It said, "Prior to the vote on the new library the only information given to townpeople was in a factually prepared and distributed by the Democrats."

A resolution passed by the DTC said, "Whenever a town meeting will be called for the purpose of voting large sums of money or making decisions with far-reaching effects on the town, the selectmen should hold a public hearing."

"This hearing should be held close enough to the time of the town meeting that the information presented will be up to date but far enough in advance to allow citizen participation in the matter before the legal call is published."

Work To Continue

Stanley Bates, appointed Friday as the town's new park commissioner, said work at the Memorial Park will continue.

Bates said he plans to meet with his advisory group to "...catch up on where the park stands and what it needs."

The advisory group appointed by the selectmen to assist Bates consists of Ray Senna, Ernie Manning and Larry Shaw.

Bates said they will continue to improve the entrance and will continue to work in the back area of the park.

He said he hopes to make a trail to the site of the proposed conservation pond and to get people into the park.

Vernon Gets $10,000 For Work on Center

The town of Vernon was notified Friday that it will receive a $10,000 Department of Public Works grant for the renovation of the center.

Community Affairs grant to complete renovation work at the former People's Bank Building for use as a senior citizen center.

The bank building was purchased by the town about a year ago and was located on Park Place in the center of Rockville, where it was a suitable spot for the senior center.

The town appropriated some money and renovation work has been started on the first floor to provide for a senior center.

Colt Sells Weapons To Mideast Dealer

HARTFORD (UPI) - A Colt Firearms Division spokesman has confirmed that a State Department license was issued to allow the firm to sell weapons to a professional arms dealer in Beirut, Lebanon.

Jack Campbell, vice president of public relations for the Hartford-based firm, said in New York City Monday the export license, granted in early May, "is in keeping with our government policy."

The report question whether the sale meant American weapons could be purchased by Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon, where the United States has maintained an official position of neutrality.

Lawrence was likely to draw the attention of Congress, according to the report which quoted Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., as saying the sale "is a major issue and we are putting the matter to Congress."

Colt officials declined to comment on the report and now are putting the matter to Congress.

Legal Showdown

At a time when so many people are out of work and the business climate just isn't doing it, the town of Manchester is facing a legal showdown.

District Fire Chief Granville Lingard insisted the district is doing just as good a job with volunteer firefighters as the town is doing with a paid fire department.

He charged the town is out to "squeeze the district out of business," so it can increase the fire tax base for the entire town.

But the Supreme Court ruled that since Laurel could put the remaining 9.3 acres to other uses, the Transportation Department could not be forced to buy them.

The high court said Laurel could put the remaining 9.3 acres to other uses, the Transportation Department could not be forced to buy them.

WASHINGTON (UPI)
Serious crime rose sharply in the first three months of this year and part of the reason, according to Attorney General Edward Levi, is the number of repeat offenders on the streets.

In releasing the latest FBI crime statistics Monday, Levi said they were a "terrifying fact of life."

Serious crime was 18 per cent higher in the first quarter this year than in the same period last year, when there was a 15 per cent increase over the 1973 reporting period.

For some crimes the increases were larger. Robbery was up 28 per cent and burglary up 20 per cent.

Preliminary figures for all of 1974, released at the same time, rose 17 per cent over 1973.

Levi called the crime rate increase "one of the terrifying facts of life which we have come to accept as normal and which we must not accept as normal."

Apparently, law enforcement is solving only about one of five known serious crimes, he said.

"But of even greater concern is the downgrading of charges of felonies to misdemeanors at the prosecution stage regardless of the defendant's past criminal record."

He said about two-thirds of all persons arrested are repeat offenders and it is important that such offenders be identified as career criminals.

For the first quarter of this year compared to a year earlier, crime in rural areas was 21 per cent higher, suburban areas 19 per cent and cities with populations of 100,000 or more 17 per cent, the report said.

By geographic areas, northeastern states reported a 21 per cent increase, southern states 20 per cent, north central 17 per cent and western states 13 per cent.

The report said that while the rate of murder, forcible rape, robbery and aggravated assault rose 18 per cent as a group over the year before, robbery itself was 28 per cent higher for the three-month period.

Aggravated assault was up 10 per cent, murder 7 per cent and forcible rape 4 per cent.

The Zoning Board of Appeals approved all five petitions heard Monday night.

The petitions were:
• Albert and Vivian Spearot requested a special exception for conversion of a single-family dwelling at 111 Walnut St. to a two-family dwelling on a lot smaller than required by the zoning laws.

Three Walnut St. area residents spoke about the possible fire hazards to the occupants. In its approval of the petition, the board added the condition the conversion two-family was possible within the town's building code.

Emmett and Levennia Hayes requested a variance to divide a parcel of land into two building lots, one with less area than required, at 67-69 Cambridge St.

David and Ann Bartlett requested a variance to build an addition to 115 Main St., site of the Goodchild-Bartlett Travel
