Mott's Taking Pathmark Spot

Mott's Supermarkets Inc. has announced it will open a new grocery store in the closed Pathmark outlet at 214 Spencer St. Pathmark ended Manchester operations at 6 p.m. Wednesday and there had been rumors that Mott's would occupy the 54,000-square foot store. The rumors were confirmed late Friday afternoon. Mott's officials emphasized that the company will continue to operate its 24-year-old supermarket at 567 E. Middle Temple. The Spencer St. facility will be the largest in the Mott's chain, which now consists of 19 stores in Connecticut and western Massachusetts. Mott's also announced Friday afternoon it will open a new store in Chicopee, Mass., in a second Pathmark outlet closed this week. The Chicopee and Manchester stores are about the same size. Financial details of the Mott's takeover weren't revealed, but the still-operating Pathmark gasoline station and liquor store apparently were not part of the deal. Mott's said it expects to begin business in the three-year-old Pathmark facility by October. Closing of the Pathmark facility was a surprise when local store officials received orders from company headquarters to cease operations. The doors were locked at 6 p.m. Wednesday and no reason was given for the closing. Pathmark is owned by Supermarkets General Corp. of Woodbridge, N.J. In announcing plans for two new stores, Mott's also reported strong operating gains for the second quarter and six months ending June 23. For the quarter, sales rose 15 per cent to a record $34.4 million and net earnings were up 31 per cent to $2,912,759. For the six months, sales were up 23 per cent to just under $68 million and net earnings were up 31 per cent to $6,187,679. Making the announcements, Mott's Chairman Joseph Mott said he expected 1975 sales and profits to attain all-time record highs. Mott said the company is also making arrangements to open two more large supermarkets in locations to be announced. Mott's Supermarkets Inc. is one of several independent members of Wakefern Food Corp., a retail-owned cooperative based in Elizabeth, N.J.

Development Bill Passed and Signed

HARTFORD (UPI) — After months of cajoling, prodding, convincing, and just plain hard work, Hartford Democratic Town Chairman Nicholas A. Carbone finally got his development bill through a doubling legislature. Gov. Ella T. Grasso signed the extensively reworked city and town development measure late Friday less than half an hour after it was approved in a special legislative session. Last June, Mrs. Grasso vetoed the original bill, sought by Carbone to pump new life into the city's flagging economy, after widespread criticism that it would open municipal coffers to corrupt politicians. Carbone and Democratic legislative leaders, two of whom come from Hartford, had to allay the suspicions that surrounded the proposal, which grants broad borrowing powers to economically troubled municipalities. The leaders thought they had the kinks worked out when they met in a one-day special session July 21, but more questions were raised than answered. Finally, nearly four weeks later, the affirmative votes came. And Carbone is setting out to start putting the complicated provisions of the 27-page bill to work. The Democratic leader already has a list of prospective clients he hopes to bring to Hartford, among them General Motors and American Airlines. The first order of business is to get a referendum question put on the November ballot to declare Hartford an economically troubled area and give the city fathers broad borrowing powers to rebuild the city's economic base. "If it passes, we hope to use the new provisions to attract in new jobs to Connecticut," Carbone said. "I know we can do it and do it successfully." While Carbone, who has had to battle suburban and rural lawmakers skeptical of the motives of big city politicians, was revealing in his victory, opponents had their doubts about the future impact of the measure. House Minority Leader Gerald F. Stevens, R-Milford, said the measure rides roughshod over local municipal charters—such as Hartford, where voters have refused to grant Carbone the powers he sought. "Overriding local charter bond provisions is a bad precedent," Stevens said. On another level, Stevens said, there is no limit on the amount of revenue bonds a city can issue for residential, commercial and industrial redevelopment projects, a possible source of future problems. "You have a potential situation where cities and the state will have to redeem the bonds should the source of revenue be deficient," Stevens said. While not bound by the law to redeem bonds from a failing project, Stevens said, either the city or the state probably would do so to protect their credit ratings. Both New York and New Jersey have halted out falling municipal bond programs for their cities, he said. Provisions for granting 20-year tax abatements as an enticement for new industry could lead to abuses the way the new law is written, Stevens said. "I think we're making a mistake to extend municipal bonding authority at this time," he said. The Senate, which approved the bill 23 to 7, argued for four hours over the amended bill, but the much larger House resolved the issue 89 to 35 after only two hours and sent it to Mrs. Grasso. "I don't know of any piece of legislation that has had so much scrutiny, study, involvement and participation," Mrs. Grasso said. "This bill represents hopes for the restoration of our beleaguered cities," she said. Sen. Richard F. Schmelzer, D- Essex, whose State and Urban Development Committee handled the politically delicate issue, said the governor's original veto and the effort put into the changes produced a much better bill. House Speaker James J. Keneally, D-Hartford, said the committee's work represented an extraordinary legislative effort. "With their leadership we passed a truly landmark piece of legislation," Keneally said.

Agency Says Wiretap Limits Don't Apply to Its Operation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Security Agency says it is above the wiretap laws and may intercept phone calls Americans make to foreign countries when it deems necessary. Officials of the supersecret electronic surveillance agency told the House Intelligence Committee Friday the NSA is not currently tapping the overseas phone calls of U.S. citizens, but claimed it may legally do so in pursuit of national security duties. Some panel members said they doubted the NSA's word that it has stopped eavesdropping on Americans. The committee summoned Lt. Gen. Lew Allen Jr., director of the Pentagon codebreaking and electronic monitoring agency, to discuss the NSA's budget, personnel allotment and mission. Before Allen began reading his budget statement, committee chairman Otis Pike, D-N.J., interrupted. "Prior to the meeting, I was contacted by representatives of the White House who advised me that the area which we are now addressing involves extremely sensitive information," Pike said. "It is quite possible that we will have to go into executive (closed) session fairly early." Pike said the panel was worried about allegations the NSA is intercepting telephone calls of American citizens. Do tell us what you can in this regard." Allen, a tall, balding man of 49, said it would be "difficult for me to respond in open session." He said electronic eavesdropping is one of America's "real secrets." Pike said he wanted as much public comment as possible because, "I feel very strongly that telephone communications of American citizens are being intercepted. "American citizens want to know how and why and whether they want to spend money on the operation. Pike noted a District of Columbia Court of Appeals ruled recently that telephone taps on Americans, even for reasons of national security, were illegal without a court warrant. NSA chief counsel Roy Banner said this law applies "where there is a domestic communication," but did not cover overseas communications. "Are you telling us that the President advised you that it doesn't apply" to the NSA? Pike asked. "Our understanding is it doesn't apply. ... The United States can intercept a communication with a foreign power," Banner said.

Portuguese President Backs Moderates

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — President Francisco de Costa Gomes today appeared to have thrown his support to moderate officers who have openly opposed the plan to turn Portugal into a Soviet-style state. The weekly newspaper Expresso reported the president and a "long and very cordial" meeting with two of the moderate officers and authorized the release of a letter that indicated he backed their move. "His excellency affirms to be in accord with almost all of its (the dissident policy document) contents, criticizing only the inopportunity of its release," the letter said. A spokesman at the president's office confirmed Costa Gomes met with the dissident officers Friday night and said he believed the Expresso report was factual. "I cannot give you an official confirmation, but since there has been no denial, you can take it for granted," he said. The president serves on the ruling three-man junta created by the Armed Forces Movement two weeks ago to accelerate the country's drive to the far left. Since then, anti-Communist rioting has broken out in more than 40 towns and unrest in the army has grown rapidly. The president met with the dissidents a few hours after he swore in a new left-wing cabinet formed by Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves — the pro-Communist on the junta that the dissidents wanted ousted. In its first meeting, the cabinet nationalized the country's second largest shipyard and remaining privately owned breweries. In different parts of the country, former Foreign Minister Maj. Melo Antunes and other moderate officers Friday circulated a document protesting the military leadership's increasing leftward drift. Military sources said the document was attracting a growing number of signatures. A few hours after the cabinet took office, marines returned to the northern town of Fafe, 200 miles from Lisbon, to disperse large crowds protesting the death of a second anti-Communist demonstrator machine-gunned during a mob attack on Fafe Communist headquarters Wednesday. In Lisbon, several hundred journalists held a march to protest a proposed media censorship law. The demonstrators shouted "the information law is a fascist law." Other demonstrations and clashes with troops were reported in the towns of Bombaral, Braganza, Sao Joao da Pesqueira, Sao Pedro do Sul and Porto de Espada. Costa Gomes swore in the 12 civilian and seven military cabinet ministers in a chandelied room in Belem Palace overlooking the Tagus River. Then at the cabinet's first session, Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves summarized the country's economic and political situation. The ministers approved nationalizations of the Setenave Shipyards, in Setubal, and those breweries not yet under government control.

What To Do in a Holdup

Patrolman Roy Abbie shows Mrs. Marie Aroian, a sales clerk at the Nassiff Arms Co. on Main St., the police department's new booklet, "Operation Hold-up." It tells her what to do when held up. Written by Olf, Russell Holyfield, community relations officer, it first suggests the hold-up victim keep calm. Do not resist, it says. Then call the police first and quick. Other suggestions are included. William H. Hale, president of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce and president of the Heritage Savings and Loan Association, told Chief Robert Lannan the chamber is pleased to have the booklets to distribute to all town merchants. Funds for the writing and printing of the booklet were supplied by a grant from the Connecticut Planning Committee on Criminal Administration. (Herald photo by Dunn)

States' Share of Profit Asked In Drilling for Offshore Oil

BOSTON (UPI) — The New England coastal states stand to be "raped economically" unless federal laws governing the leasing of potentially oil-rich offshore lands are changed, says Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass. Studds, addressing a state-federal conference on offshore drilling Friday, urged Congress to pass legislation giving states a larger share of the profits from the drilling and make oil companies liable for spills. The legislation would also require a delay between exploration and drilling, a move strongly opposed by the oil companies but favored by many coastal states. Under current law, leases give companies the right to both explore and produce. Studds said the delay is needed to give the benefits of development will be lost," he said. On Aug. 31, the U.S. Interior Department will receive oil company nominations for leases on the oil-rich tracks along the Continental Shelf. Studds also insisted the oil industry has overstated both the ability of offshore oil to bring droves of new jobs to unemployment-plagued New England and to significantly lower regional fuel prices. "It will be the onshore impact which will be extraordinary compared to any offshore impact," he said. "We have got to find front-end money for coastal states to absorb the social, political and economic impact of any coastal development."

Congress time to come up with a federal coastal management policy to handle the effects of drilling before production actually gets underway. "This legislation is more than crucial," said Studds. "The people of this region stand a chance to be quite literally raped economically if the laws are not changed." Studds' remarks were echoed by other speakers, including Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Thomas O'Neill. "Whether we like it or not, George's Bank will be explored for oil. This exploration can be done on our terms, or on the terms the oil industry lays down," said O'Neill. "If the New England states fall into squabbling among themselves, many of

Natural Gas Shortage Predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Natural gas shortages will hit industry hard this winter — perhaps hard enough to close some factories — and could pinch home heating supplies too, White House experts say. President Ford got this grim forecast Friday during a two-hour energy briefing that produced clear estimates on the size and scope of the gas shortage, but no decision on what can be done about it. "The President reviewed various administrative actions he could take to help minimize the impact of the prospective shortage, deputy press secretary William Greener said after Ford's meeting with energy and economic advisers. "But no final decisions were made." Greener said the advisers estimated this winter's natural gas shortages would be half again as bad as the shortfalls suffered last winter. They predicted supplies would fall about 15 per cent below anticipated national demand, which now runs about 22 trillion cubic feet per year. Last winter, supply fell 10 per cent short of demand. And Greener said local shortages could be even more severe in Iowa, Missouri, Ohio, New Jersey, New York, North and South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

Another White House spokesman, John Carlson, said industrial users would probably suffer first from limitations in the gas supplies, perhaps forcing shutdowns of some factories and causing unemployment. He said residential consumers of natural gas for heating and cooking would suffer next if the shortage proves severe enough. "It's very difficult to determine which industries will be hit first," Carlson said. Ford has recommended deregulation of natural gas prices which he says will serve as an incentive to increase production. Congress has opposed deregulation.

Townsend later told police he was taking a walk along Cooper St. towards his home when a man grabbed him from behind some bushes. He demanded Townsend's wallet. Townsend gave him the

Aluminum Wiring Said Fire Hazard

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has declared the aluminum wiring used in some two million homes to be a fire hazard and opened the way to possible free repair or replacement. In a unanimous vote Friday, the commission ordered publication of a notice inviting firms involved to develop safety rules to overcome the fire hazard. The commission also voted 3 to 1 to order an administrative law judge to hold hearings and determine whether aluminum wire installed before 1971 — when a new technology came into use — presents a "substantial product hazard." If the judge finds the hazard exists, producers of the wire will have to repair it, replace it or refund the cost of the wiring to the consumers involved. Commissioner Constance Newman said the four commission members present had unanimously decided "that the aluminum wire system in the home represents an unreasonable risk" of fire. But she opposed the decision to hold the law judge hearing, believing that an information and education program on the risks involved would suffice. Officials said the wiring hazard stems from aluminum's tendency to loosen as current passes through it, causing oxidation and a bad connection between the wire and the outlet or switch. Eventually the wire can heat up and spark a fire within in the wall — even when nothing is plugged in or the switch is off. Aluminum wire came into wide use in the past decade because of a shortage of copper wire. After 1971 a different method of installation was used along with switch plates and connectors designed to more readily accept aluminum wire.

St. Margaret's Circle, Daughters of Isabella, will have a chicken barbecue Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the home of Agnes Buccino, 166 Charter Oak St. Donation is $2. Pilot Was Warned Just Before Crash

DENVER (UPI) — Five minutes before a Continental Airlines 727 jetliner began streaking down a runway at Stapleton International Airport for takeoff, the pilots of two other airplanes warned flight controllers of heavy wind turbulence. According to Larry Robison, an air traffic controller at the airport, the report was relayed to the Continental pilot before he took off. In a matter of moments, the jet crashed on its undercarriage in a wheat field 500 feet off the runway, injuring 39 persons, 25 of whom were hospitalized overnight. The plane carried 131 persons. "They did report there was not particularly wind shear but there was an up and down movement of the wind between 100 and 300 feet," said Robison. "Both those reports were forwarded to the pilot of the Continental." A federal investigator Friday said it would probably be a week before the cause of the Thursday crash was determined, but he indicated shifting wind conditions probably were the main factor. Wind shear — a scissor like movement of layers of air blowing in opposite directions — was blamed for the crash of an Eastern Airline 727 June 24 in New York which killed 113, the worst single-plane disaster in U.S. history. Robison said the pilots of the two planes that relayed the warning took off in the northerly direction taken by the Continental jet. The plane, en route from Denver to Wichita, Kan., reached an altitude of 50-75 feet before it crashed. The impact tore the tail and cockpit sections from the fuselage. A fire in the tail section was extinguished with foam by airport firemen. An airport construction worker said the plane crashed moments after the roof of a small maintenance shed was blown away by a wind gust. He said the strong winds forced him and other workers to seek shelter. A Continental spokesman said the Boeing 727 could not be salvaged.

Rhodes Sees No Big Role For Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republican leader John Rhodes, who counseled Richard Nixon through his last days as President, says he doubts Nixon can ever regain public office. Rhodes, R-Ariz., reminisced Friday on Nixon's resignation from office one year ago today. He said "arrogance ... a feeling that it could no longer be done" undid the White House team — and shook his head when asked if he thought Nixon could return to public office. "Of course it's hard to say that something like that could never occur, but I can't foresee it occurring," Rhodes said in an interview. "Mr. Nixon is eight years older than he was when elected President. His health deteriorated. I hope he has regained it. But I really can't imagine that there would be any possibility of Mr. Nixon holding public office again."

ROCK HUDSON

Rock Hudson plays a role his own age

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — It's too early to tell if "Embryo" will be a hit, but it's sure to be one of the most interesting and unusual films in a long time.

Rock Hudson just wrapped up his starring role in "Embryo," and he is enthusiastic about it. The picture deals with a research scientist, doing work on fetal development outside the womb. It asks the age-old question: can a fetus grow independently? Hmmmm?

"There is a lot of genuine research on that subject being done," Rock says, "so the picture is timely."

One facet of the film he finds fascinating is that he is playing a man his own age, or nearly.

"It's one of my best parts," he says. "I play a 50-year-old man — which I am. Well, I'm 49 going on 50. And I like the idea of playing my own age, not having to try to be younger than I am."

"I doubt that I will ever play another young romantic lead again."

He is looking forward to his new period of playing men his own age. He thinks the parts will be meatier.

"It's harder for a woman to age than a man," he says. "There are plenty of good parts for a man my age but the ladies hate growing old."

His TV series, McMillan & Wife, part of NBC's Sunday Mystery Movie group, is going into its fifth season. But before it starts, Hudson has big plans. "Embryo" was a tough picture, so he's set aside three weeks to rest.

"I'm going to Hawaii," he says, "and just flake out in the sun for three weeks."

Makeba tours

After a two-year absence, African singer Mariam Makeba will return to the United States this fall for a nationwide concert tour.

Third show

How does your garden grow? Cockle shells, and coral bells, all in a row.

Stalks of delphinium blue.

This garden isn't ordinary

By JUNE TOMPKINS

Eight-foot high delphiniums are not found in everyone's garden.

Perhaps the reason they grow in Mrs. Robert Doellner's garden is because she feeds them when they look like they need feeding.

The garden at 227 S. Main St. began several years ago with four beds of roses. Now there are about 175 rose bushes incorporating about 40 varieties. And there are many varieties of perennials added to the original rose garden.

Mrs. Doellner seems to have a special fondness for her delphiniums in three shades of blue. "They're such a challenge. Although they're a perennial, you have to treat them like an annual. They do die. Some live for many years, but more of them don't," she says.

She buys 12 new delphiniums every year.

Part of the secret of her healthy plants is a rotating compost pile her husband maintains in a hedged enclosure. Treated grass cuttings and fallen autumn leaves make much of the garden food.

The flower garden work is easy compared to the produce garden the Doellners had several years ago when they lived in South Windsor. She recalls the strawberries they raised, "the kind you could get only 17 to a basket, the kind you bit into after rolling in sugar."

There are problem roses in Mrs. Doellner's garden just as there are problem children in a family.

The Royal Highness rose, a pale pink blossom on a stately stem seems to be Mrs. Doellner's problem rose. It is the one most difficult to keep growing.

Some of her roses with an unusual variegated splash pattern on the petals get that way from too much heat, she says. A "heat blast" she calls it. The dew gathers on the petals at night and, under the sun's intense heat — the next day, the petals become scorched.

A healthy rose is her Portrait rose, a fragrant variegated pink variety that is a prolific bloomer and quite free of disease.

She says it is the only rose

A rose by any other name...

developed by an amateur, and it won the American Society Rose of the Year award.

The rich Mr. Lincoln rose, when in bud, resembles deep red velvet folding around itself.

Many perennials grow in the same garden. Mrs. Doellner likes to have flowers that bloom from the earliest daffodils and tulips to the last chrysanthemums of the season.

Watering her garden, particularly the rose bushes, is indeed a labor of love.

During a dry spell, Mrs. Doellner takes the hose to the edge of the garden and fills two two-gallon jugs of water which she empties around each of the 175 rose bushes.

Off to the side of the back yard is what Mrs. Doellner calls her "put and take garden." It is just that. She moves a clump of phlox from her big garden here waiting to transplant it, or give to a gardening friend. It's a place to put her extra iris; it's a place to grow some of the plants needing extra watchful care.

Beauty is not without its blight.

Early in the morning Mrs. Doellner goes in her garden to battle the Japanese beetles which invade daily. Little jars of water mixed with kerosene are located around the bed borders in which she throws the "little beasts."

The roses brought into the house are picked in the evening and the stems are placed in hot water. "It shocks them," Mrs. Doellner says. After leaving them thus all night, she puts them in cold water the next morning and they last many days.

The Doellners don't need a painting of a garden on their wall. They enjoy the changing combination of colors from their screened porch, from their living room picture window, and from their upstairs bedroom window.

And the garden is a source of slightly pleasure for the neighbors.

Mrs. Doellner pauses in her daily garden tasks to enjoy the flowers around her.

Long and detailed novel is just hard to put down

The Surface of The Earth, by Reynolds Price. (Atheneum, $10.95)

Price understands the American idiom and writes about it with an intensity of feeling that can't help but move and enlighten the reader. He also has written a novel in the traditional sense of the term, one unlikely to draw applause from the avant garde because it is not alienated or witty or obscure or even intellectually stimulating.

Instead Price tells the story, at considerable and satisfying length, of the Mayfield and Kendal families in rural North Carolina and Virginia, from 1803 when Eva Kendal elopes with Forrest Mayfield, until 1944 when their grandson is grown.

There is no doubt, as the phenomenal popularity of the Delderfield novels proved, a wide audience for these sagas in which the reader can identify with carefully built-up family structures that increase in credibility as detail builds on detail.

The Surface of The Earth has another ingredient that adds to its interest — it is a Southern novel, written about characters who could not be transplanted elsewhere at will. Again, the reader's suspension of disbelief becomes easier and more complete as he identifies with the region, its attitudes and geography and idiosyncracies.

Here's a long, detailed novel that is satisfying to read, not because it engages in semantic acrobatics or philosophical fencing but because it is engrossing, dramatic and just plain hard to put down.

The Birth of America, by John Lewis Stage, text by Dan Lacy. (Grosset & Dunlap, $25) This is one of the best of the books so far that might go into the Bicentennial category — a stunning pictorial history of early America, from Jamestown and Plymouth to Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown. Lacy's text tells the story clearly and sharply, but Stage's art makes this a truly beautiful book on how our forefathers lived — rich and poor, artisan and farmer, North and South, at church, at play, at war.

Jimmy the Greek, by himself, with Mickey Herskowitz and Steve Perkins. (Playboy, $9.95) Anyone who likes to gamble, from the devoted horseplayer to the amateur who occasionally puts his money where his mouth is in a political bet, will be fascinated with the gambling lore of Jimmy the Greek's autobiography. Jimmy makes it clear that gambling means math, odds, luck and some knowledge of human quirks. For instance, he can boast that he picked Truman to win over Dewey in 1948. That was because he was told girls don't like mustaches, or anyway, they didn't then.

Michael Crichton, the young novelist-screenwriter-director, has been picked to direct Warner Brothers' upcoming movie, "The Last Tomb."

The Mini Page

Especially for young readers

Distinguished Achievement Award Winner 1975

By BETTY DEBNAM

Mirror, mirror on the wall... Who Am I Gonna' Get This Fall?

Throughout the country, students are wondering who their teacher will be. The Mini Page asked kids if they could order teachers, what kind they would want. Check the ideas with which you agree.

- I would like a teacher who:
- "you could share your problems with"
  - "is nice and sweet but stern so everybody wouldn't go wild"
  - "is generous, pleasant, responsible, and understanding"
  - "never, never, never screams"
  - "takes us on a lot of field trips"
  - "helps you think"
  - "frowns a little but is happy most of the time"
  - "won't get mad when you ask one little question"
  - "doesn't like one child more than another"
  - "lets us have a long PE period and play dodge ball every day"
  - "likes me"

- Looks
- "is big and tall, not small"
  - "looks like Raquel Welch"
  - "is pretty and cute with long hair"
  - "has blue eyes, white teeth and long nails"
  - "I don't care as long as she is MY teacher"

- Wears
- "long dresses, mini skirts, necklaces"
  - "blue jeans with patches"
  - "pantsuits if she is young and dresses if she is old"
  - "halter tops, stockings and go-go boots"
  - "anything she likes"

Maybe your teacher will look like one of these.

Principal's Advice
The Mini Page asked a principal what advice he would give students about their teacher-to-be.
"The people at school have studied your assignment very carefully and placed you where they think you can do best. Sometimes we separate you from a good friend. This gives each one of you a chance to make new friends and you can still meet 'old' friends after school.
"Don't judge teachers by what other people say. Give them a chance. If you get a brand new teacher, try to help her.
"Don't worry if your room is not where you want it to be. A mobile unit or a room in an old building can be fixed up to look very pretty and attractive."

Kids love soccer. It's becoming more popular every day.

His three year contract is said to be worth from 4.5 million to 7 million dollars. It's the biggest sports contract ever signed.

Pele has been called Brazil's greatest natural resource. He was so popular that he had to be taken to the playing field by helicopter so that he would not be crushed by the fans.

Everyone, especially the kids, will be watching to see what Pele will do for soccer in this country.

A Teacher Speaks Out!

Kids know what kind of teacher they would like to have. Teachers have their ideas, too!

What kind of student will you be?

Meet Phillis Wheatly (1753-1784)

One of her books became very successful. She was a friend of many famous Americans. She traveled to England. Many of her poems supported the American cause. She married and moved away from Boston. ### Mini Recipe: Crazy Cake

This recipe sounds crazy, but it is delicious. It's a little harder to make than most but it's such fun that Mom or Dad would love helping you with it!

- 1½ cup flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 6 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 tablespoons cocoa
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 cup cold water

Mix flour, sugar, cocoa, salt, and soda in an ungreased frying pan. Make three holes in the mixture. Place vegetable oil in one hole, vinegar in another and vanilla in the last one. Pour in 1 cup cold water and mix until smooth. Bake 25 minutes at 350°.

Icing — Mix 1½ cups confectioner's sugar with 2 tablespoons cocoa and ¼ teaspoon salt; cream these with 3 tablespoons soft butter, and 2 tablespoons hot, strong coffee and spread it on the cake. YUM, YUM. Really good.

Ask Kleiner

By Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: I love Elton John. Some friends have told me that most big singers like that get high during a concert by smoking pot, popping pills, etc. Could you tell me if he does? Also, could you tell me about how many others do? - AN E.J. FAN, Carlton, Ala.

It is a fairly common practice. It always has been. For some reason, musicians have traditionally needed something to get "up" for performances. Even in the big-band era, many smoked pot, even before it was called pot.

DEAR DICK: What happened to the film called "Ground Zero," made about 1972. Parts of this picture were filmed in my home town. It played in a San Francisco theater for about a month and then has not been heard or seen anywhere after that.

DEAR DICK: Two questions - on variety shows, who pays the guests? And, on television shows, do the stars own the clothes they wear? - CURIOUS, Columbia, Tenn.

Two answers - variety shows work this way. The network pays the company that makes the show - Cher, for example - a certain amount of money. Out of that, the company pays for everything, including the guest stars. Cher may get, let's say, $50,000 a week. Out of that, she must pay all her guests' orchestra, dancers, furnish sets and costumes.

DEAR DICK: I am a great fan of Johnny Cash and I would like to know how many records he put out this last year. - MIKE GRAHAM, Ellerslie, P.E.I., Can.

DEAR DICK: I am presently working on a thesis at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. The topic is John Philip Sousa's opera, "El Capitan." The lead was originally played by DeWolf Hopper, who was married to Hedda Hopper. Can you give me any assistance? - PATRICK KIRAL, Homer City, Pa.

Atheneum gets a Grandma Moses painting

Anna Mary Robertson Moses, known throughout the world as Grandma Moses, caught the imagination of the public as an artist and also as a unique individual. By the time she died in 1961, at the age of 101, her paintings had been shown all over the United States and in many foreign countries.

The Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford has just acquired a painting by Grandma Moses. "For Pastures New" is a relatively unknown work by the artist. It was painted in 1942 and depicts a simple country scene, as do most of her works. The coloring is soft, typical of early summer, with bright patches of red and blue in the clothing of the figures. The scene is clearly delineated, simple and straightforward.

Anna Mary Robertson was born in 1860 in Greenwich, N.Y. She was a farmer's daughter and married a farmer, Thomas

Salmon Moses, in 1887. They lived in Virginia for 17 years, had several children, and returned to Eagle Bridge, N.Y., in 1905. Anna Mary Moses began to paint in about 1918 but her first works were primarily decorative, done on fireboards and tables, although she occasionally painted landscapes for family or friends.

In 1927 Thomas Moses died and, her children grown, his widow cast about for something to fill her time. As she put it in her own account of her life, "Leaving me unoccupied, I had to do something, so took up painting pictures in worsted, then in oil..."

The work of Grandma Moses is classified as primitive, a category which refers to the absence of formal training of any kind. She was certainly self-taught, but her ability to evoke not only the mood of American country life but also to portray accurately the movements of people and animals in their workaday world was remarkable.

The Atheneum owns one other work by Grandma Moses, an undated painting entitled "The Old Covered Bridge." The two paintings are a significant part of the Atheneum's collection of 20th century American paintings.
