Drought Cutting Corn Crop

By United Press International

Rangelands are drying in the hot summer sun and corn lay scorched by a long dry spell that has withered a projected record crop. Temperatures soared above the 100-degree level Monday on the Central Plains. The few scattered thunderstorms that did tumble over the area brought little relief to drought-stricken farmlands. In Missouri, fears were expressed that cattle feeders might liquidate herds because of a lack of feed.

Over-all, the USDA says, the hot, dry weather has cut the potential 1975 corn crop to 5,850 billion bushels, 126 million bushels below July prospects but still a projected record. But state officials in Iowa and Missouri termed the federal figures too optimistic.

Nebraska's weekly crop report said hot, dry conditions continued to cut into available soil moisture. Fire danger was high in northwestern Nebraska. Rangelands and livestock growers were warned that temperatures near 100 degrees posed a danger to closely confined cattle.

Temperatures climbed into the 90s and in some instances above 100 in the Central Plains Monday. The mercury hit 106 at Fort Riley, Kan.

Lightning Jolts Herald Carriers

By MAL BARLOW

Three youths delivering The Herald Monday afternoon in a thunderstorm were thrown in the air by the impact of a lightning bolt. Rick Sawyer, 16, his brother, Robert, 12, both of 83 Bigelow St., and Thomas Sipples, 15, of 180 High St. were all taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital's emergency room by Mrs. Hardy Sawyer.

They were treated for electrical shock and released a hospital spokesman said. The boys were at the front doorway of the 16-unit apartment building at 148 Edgerton St. They were waiting for the heavy rains to subside so they could finish delivering the route the Sawyers have had since December.

Rick Sawyer recalled the incident as follows: "The front and back doors to the building were open. There was a strong draft coming in. We were at the front and getting ready to run."

"The rain was coming down hard. Then it threw us all. My friend (Sipples) was thrown up and back through a metal railing on the stairway inside. My brother was on his bike coming to us. It picked up him and his bike and threw him to the ground. The front wheel is all wobbly now. I was picked up and thrown against the wall above the mail boxes in the hall. I left a mark on the wall there."

"The next thing I knew, I was on the ground. We lay there for several minutes before we could get up. Then we ran to our house. My mother asked us what happened. We had lost all our color."

"She called the hospital and they told her to get us right down." Dr. Robert Butterfield said the boys could not have been hit directly by the lightning or none would be alive. He told them they were very lucky. He also told them they would suffer the same way as Lee Trevino, the golf pro. They would have severe muscle cramps. His blood pressure and heart beat were both too high. His cramps were the worst. "Today I feel sore," Rick said. "Everything is weak."

Rick said this morning the three may get a substitute to deliver today's Herald. The lesson he learned from the brush with lightning, he said, "is not to stand in a doorway in a draft during a thunderstorm."

Scientific Scarecrow

The stick with junk on it here is really a scientific scarecrow set up by Mrs. Ambrose Diehl, left, on the 20 by 50 foot garden plot her family has on the Manchester Community College campus. The metal pieces clink and clank in the summer breezes scaring away crows and other prospective nibblers of their vegetables. The Diehl family of 129 Kenney St. took over several of the 50 plots set up by MCC. The gardeners are graduates of an MCC course taught this spring by George Potterton, retired head of the Manchester High School science department. The course and the plots were set up by the MCC, Community Services Division to help area families keep their food costs down. (Herald photo by Barlow)

'First-Class' Junkyard Use Planned

Glode Zone Change Request Opposed by Many at Hearing

By DOUG BEVINS

Herald Reporter A 78-acre tract of land off Tolland Tpk. near the East Hartford boundary would be an ideal site for industrial development, zoning applicants told Manchester's Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) Monday night.

But opponents of the zone change said rezoning would increase traffic on inadequate roads, cause air and water pollution, and degrade residential property values. A capacity crowd in the Municipal Building Hearing Room heard the pro and con arguments during a public hearing which aired the rezoning application filed by Henry Glode et al and Stephen H. Gluck et al, trustees. The land is now zoned Rural Residence. The PZC reserved decision on the matter. Its next meeting is Sept. 8. The most debated issues of the hearing were the proposed use for the site—an automobile junkyard—and the inclusion within the zone change area of land not owned by the applicants.

Atty. Eugene Kelly, representing the applicants, told the PZC that Frank Fardole of Hartford, who had run a junkyard in that city, planned to buy several parcels in the area to establish a "first-class" junkyard. Kelly, while emphasizing that the PZC shouldn't consider the proposed use in reaching a decision, nonetheless argued for junkyard. He described an automobile junkyard as "a thriving business which contributes substantially to energy conservation and ecology."

Opponents of the rezoning and junkyard, represented by Atty. Vincent Diana, said don't want it. "Let them go somewhere else with their junkyard," he said.

The main issue raised by opponents—besides obvious objections to a junkyard—was that rezoning of residential land would take away property rights by making existing dwellings nonconforming. The 78 acres in the proposed zone change area consist of 17 parcels owned by 14 different persons or companies. The applicants own about five of the parcels.

Owners of three dwellings on parcels within the site objected to having their land included in the zone change. Their land wouldn't be used as a junkyard site but would serve as a legally required buffer between the junkyard and other residential zones.

Kelly said the town's comprehensive plan of development envisions industrial use of the Tolland Tpk. area, but a referral letter from the Capitol Region Council of Governments stated that the regional land use plan calls for medium density housing in the area.

Kelly blamed regional opposition on East Hartford officials. He said East Hartford's objection was "an attempt to atone for the terrible mess they've created in their own town."

Diana characterized the application as "a very emotional issue which has pitted brother against brother." (Many of the parcels are owned by members of the Glode family, but they don't agree on use of the land.)

Diana presented a nine-signature petition opposing the zone change. Other opposition arguments included claims that a junkyard would pollute water supplies and would destroy prime agricultural land.

Brief discussion of the application after the hearing indicated that the PZC might agree with arguments of opposing property owners whose land is within the zone change site. The PZC has 65 days to act on the application.

The federal appeals court decision overturning President Ford's 42-per-cent tariff on imported oil received widespread approval. Massachusetts Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti, who argued the case filed by Massachusetts and joined by seven other states and 11 New England utilities, called the ruling "the most important decision in this country for 10 years back and 10 years to come."

On a 3-2 ruling, the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington overturned a lower court ruling that President Ford had the power to impose the license fees. Monday's decision covers the Ford program instituted in January, and it applies to the fees collected under former President Nixon's similar program.

"It's a significant victory for the little guy on the block, and Vermont (a party to the suit) is one of the little's," Vermont Gov. Thomas Salmon said.

Salmon aide Norman James said the state Energy Office has estimated the decision could cut gasoline prices in the state by two to three cents a gallon, and a home heating oil by one to two cents. Harold Donald of the Boston law firm of Rich, May and Blidadeau, which represented the utilities in the suit, said the $1.5 billion collected under the two tariff programs must be somehow given back to consumers.

Vermont Attorney General M. Jerome Diamond said Congress acts to rebate the money to the states. "New England would get a 'healthier share' than the rest of the country because of its heavier reliance on imported oil."

Connecticut Gov. Ella T. Grasso said the impact on her state's economy would be felt by consumers.

Republican Gov. Melvin Thompson of New Hampshire came out in mild support of the court ruling. He said the decision "only confirms what I said from the beginning should be the action of the President, namely, to avoid the tariff increase."

Oil Import Fee Decision Acclaimed

Administration Ponders Appeal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The court order overturning President Ford's $2 a barrel fee on oil imports should lower consumer prices for gasoline and heating fuel, some Democrats said.

Administration spokesmen declined comment on the impact until the Federal Energy Administration can review Monday's decision of the U.S. Appeals Court. A Ford spokesman in Val, Colo., said there was no immediate decision whether to appeal the ruling.

But Sen. Robert Humphrey, D-Minn., said gasoline prices should drop to about 32 cents a gallon and heating prices to last January's level.

The suit was brought against FEA by the governors of eight Northeastern states. The appellate court upset a U.S. District Court decision that favored Ford. The appellate court said Ford had the power to limit oil imports but could not use a fee to reduce imports by raising prices.

"We recognize that we are overturning an honest attempt by the President to find a solution to a difficult crisis," the court said in a 2-1 decision.

But it said the President was "without substantive authority to impose license fees of the magnitude of issue here."

The FEA estimated the $2 fee on each barrel of imported oil increased gasoline prices about 3 cents a gallon to consumers. The levy, called a "licensing fee," was designed to go as high as $3 a barrel, but Ford delayed the final $1 in an attempt to compromise with Congress on energy conservation.

The first dollar imposed on imports in February led to price increases for home heating fuel, especially in the Northeast, and later to gasoline. But it had the President's intended effect by slashing oil imports 41 per cent below January.

The second $1 fee in May contributed to gasoline price rises over the July 4 holiday. Chairman Al Ullman of the House ways and means committee urged Ford to lift the import levy within the 11 days allowed by the ruling rather than continue the legal fight.

White House spokesman Ron Neesen indicated Ford was favoring that "move before the court decision." Neesen said the Secretary of Energy Rogers Morton, who heads the President's energy resources council, said the ruling does not change the fact that the nation now has no policy to slow imports that swelled from $2.7 billion in 1970 to $24 billion last year.

Smith Ends 44-Year Firefighting Career

By MAL BARLOW

Herald Reporter Kenneth A. Smith retired Aug. 4 after serving Manchester as a fire fighter for 44 years.

Smith, 64, has been on light duty with the Town Fire Department for the past several years due to a heart condition. This same condition prompted his retirement months before his 60th birthday Dec. 18, he said.

"He was terrific," said Fire Chief John Rivosa of Smith. "Give Ken a job to do and, rest assured, he'd do it and do it the way you'd want it done."

"He's going to be sorely missed. He kept meticulous records on the trucks, their parts, all the department's supplies. No one knew like Ken how to find a part when we needed it," he said.

Smith was born in Manchester in 1910 and has lived here ever since. His contact with the nuts and bolts of things what they are and who to keep track of them, began with his first part-time job at Blah Hardware on Main St.

From there he went to the Cheney Bros. silk mills working in the experimental yarn department. At Cheney's, he took a seven-year apprenticeship as an engraver.

The depression years put a slow end to his hopes of a career in engraving. In 1931, Smith joined the Cheney Bros. fire department at its station at Pine St. and Hartford Rd. He was a volunteer.

Despite the steady slowdown in work at the mills, he stayed on the fire department. He joined the National Guard and then the regular Army in 1938. The Army discharged him later that year because he was over age. He was 28.

Back in Manchester, he went to work for a Plymouth and DeSoto car dealer. Soon after, he joined Schiebel Bros. Auto Parts, about the only parts dealer in town then.

"We used to call it Co. No. 5," Smith said. All the workers at the store were volunteer firemen in one of the four companies of the Town Fire Department.

Smith became a regular paid fire fighter on the town department in 1935. "Working conditions have improved considerably in the last 20 years," he said.

He first worked a 72-hour weekly shift. Then it dropped steadily to the present 42 hours.

Smith recalled a long list of hard-fought fires throughout his 44 years as a volunteer, bunker, and regular. Despite the destruction, he never recalls being in serious danger.

"We really could not go into buildings like the men do today. There were no Scott Air Packs."

"When we did go in like for a rescue, we had to tie the ropes around each other. We'd crawl in on our bellies."

Smith married his wife, Stella, in 1944. He quit his job as a bunker then to set up a family, he said. But the leaders of the fire department asked him to come back soon after in order to "fill in for a few months."

Ann, Bruce, Kathleen, Mark, Janice, and John. His three oldest often went days without seeing their father due to his long hours with the fire department on top of his daytime job, he said.

He slowly cut his hours back and found more time with his children, he said. He plans to stay on the department as a volunteer. He offered Chief Rivosa all the time and help needed to make sure the department's inventory and purchasing problems are few in the near future.

He has been treasurer of the Manchester Credit Union for town employees for the past seven years. He will remain active in the Army & Navy Club.

He was named "Man of the Year" in June by the Manchester Rod and Gun Club. He is a past president and plans to continue working for it, he said.

He spent many years supporting town sports programs for youth. He said he hopes to continue working for the Manchester Junior Athletic Association.

"I'll also patrol around the house (at 13 Laurel Pl.). I'll do some gardening and what I want to get myself back into healthy shape."

Dieting is never an easy affair... The best diets are planned on sound principles of nutrition; but they must also be designed to give both variety and eating pleasure. For if we remove the personal and social pleasure that eating provides, we provoke psychological factors—a sense of boredom, deprivation and isolation—that may make dieting even more difficult... We all know that crash diets are seldom successful... Only a balanced menu plan that establishes good eating habits and protects your health nutritionally will work in the long run.

'76 To '76 - Then and Now To Kick Off Bicentennial

VERNON
 '76 to '76 - Then and Now, will be the theme of the Bicentennial celebration. The event will be in Henry Park on Sept. 14 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The day's activities will start with a fire apparatus demonstration and will feature an 1895 steamer which is owned and operated by the Rockville Veterans Firemen's Association. As far as can be determined, the steamer was first used to fight fires in Rockville about 1890 and continued in service until the late 1920s. It was used when the original "boardwalk" burned down in the center of Rockville. The next event of the week in 1975, appreciation members started a full-scale restoration of the steamer and, with the exception of the brass expansion tank which disappeared during World War II, it is in its original condition. Other events of the day will include a picnic from noon to 1 p.m. during which refreshments will also be sold, arts and crafts demonstrations from noon to 3 p.m., athletic competition from 1 to 3 p.m., and a band concert from 2 to 4 p.m. All during the day there will be various performances such as barbershop quartets, magicians, a unicyclist, and an omen pull. There will also be other animals on display and booths and concessions. The parade committee will meet Sept. 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Brady, 36 Discovery Rd. or from any other member of the commission. The Bicentennial Commission will have three committee meetings next month. The first, on Sept. 4, will be for the "Festival '76" committee at the home of Mrs. Brady, 36 Discovery Rd. or from any other member of the commission. The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Sue Connell, 31 Donnell Rd.

R Sox Rally Short And A's Triumph

OAKLAND (UPI) — Despite a slight slump late, the Oakland A's still figure to be the American League West kings if they can stay healthy.

Vida Blue needed help Monday night but still picked up his 18th win as he dominated the Oakland A's in a 3-1 victory over the Red Sox at Fenway Park.

The victory put Oakland 4½ ahead of Kansas City in the AL West while Boston saw its AL East lead sliced to six wins behind the Royals.

The A's still have problems. It was announced that Joe Rudi would not be longer than expected because of a shoulder injury.

The final Oakland run came in the sixth when Bill Hoenes singled and scored on Washington's second double.

The New York Yankees came in the sixth when Bill Hoenes singled and scored on Washington's second double.

He is feeling physically fit top shape, the best I've felt all year, said Blue. He has been battling a shoulder problem this season.

Blue went seven strong in Oakland, hitting a home run, but the Red Sox jumped on him for all their runs in the eighth when Fred Lynn led off with a homer, Jim Rice singled and Carlton Fisk pitched a two-run homer.

Rollie Fingers came on to retire the side in the eighth but yielded to Paul Lindblad, who then Jim Todd when the Red Sox rallied again in the ninth.

Todd retired Fisk with two on in the ninth to earn his first win in two months.

It was the biggest win I think I've ever pitched. This was a game we really had to win," said Todd.

Battled and Struggled Messersmith Snaps Out of Loss Slump

NEW YORK (UPI) — Andy Messersmith thought it was about time he got lucky and the Pittsburgh Pirates would be the first to agree.

Recognized as one of the two or three best starting pitchers in the National League, Messersmith had lost seven of eight previous games when he took the mound for the Los Angeles Dodgers Monday night against the Philadelphia Phillies.

Messersmith didn't pitch as well as he had in several of his recent losses but he nevertheless turned in a four-inning effort that kept the Pirates from scoring, though he did not win.

"I wasn't an easy game," said Messersmith, now 14-11 after being 12-4 at the end of the season. "I had to battle and struggle all the time. Statistics show that I pitched a lot better during my losing streak. Maybe this will turn things around."

Messersmith has pitched better than he did in some of his other losses, commented Manager Walt Alton. "His control was off for him, but he had a lot of deep counts. I can't fault Andy's pitching during the losing streak. He has had good stuff almost every time he's gone out there."

Messersmith, who struck out seven and walked three, drove in two runs with a bases-filled walk and a sacrifice fly and Willie Crawford hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers, who were understandably a bit squeamish still about the Phils.

The Pirates broke their five-game losing streak as rookie John Cantelero struck six innings for his sixth win. Rennie Stenett's daring base-running helped the Pirates score two early runs and they clinched the game with a six-run outburst with the key hits doubles by Dave Parker and Manny Sanguetta. Darrell Evans homered for the Braves.

Andrew T. Carlson, manager of the Division drove in three runs with the second homer of his eight-year major league career and Cliff Johnson hit four hits to lead Houston over St. Louis. Larry Dierker allowed 10 hits and two walks but won the distance for his 10th victory. John Curtis was the loser.

Hod 8, Padres 4
Ed Kranepool struck six in- ings for his sixth win, and an infield out and Joe Torre had a pair of doubles for New York. Skip Lockwood won his first game for the Mets with five innings of shutout relief while San Diego's Randy Jones hit his seventh game against St. Louis.

ANAHEIM (UPI) — With the little finger on his right hand still wrapped in a plastic cast so that he couldn't even take off his glove, Frank Tanana was understandably a bit squeamish still about the Phils.

"I was hoping for a lot of runs tonight," said the California Angel left-hander, who was pitching Monday night for the first time since he was hit by a line drive July 28. "Thank goodness we got them."

"I mightn't be anything back to me. You'll notice I was pitching them inside."

Tanana gave up five hits in the seven innings he pitched to beat the New York 8-1 Monday night, striking out six Yankees along the way to boost his season total to 17—the best in the majors and two more than teammate Nolan Ryan.

"Tanana did a hell of a job not having pitched in two weeks," said Angel Manager Dick Williams. "We were just hoping for five good innings."

But Tanana, now 10-6, had to share the spotlight with the rest of his Angel teammates, who stole a club record six bases—three of them by Mickey Rivers, who leads the team with 60.

Rivers also got five hits in the seven innings he pitched to beat the New York 8-1 Monday

Cuellar Works Like Magician

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mike Cuellar, the Baltimore Orioles' "Cuban Houdini," has more pitches up his sleeve than a magician has handkerchiefs.

"I have to feel sorry for the poor hitters," said Orioles Manager Earl Weaver Monday night after Cuellar's neat two-out 4-0 shutout win over the Kansas City Royals. "They never know what pitch is coming."

The 38-year-old Cuellar (11-1) varied his basic five-pitch repertoire quite nicely, yielding only a fourth inning double to John Mayberry and a leadoff single to George Brett in the fifth. But as Weaver pointed out, there's a "Catch 22" to those five pitches.

"He throws a fastball, screwball, slider, curve and changeup," continued Weaver. "but he also has three or four different speeds on each of those pitches. That gives him a lot of many as 16 pitches he can throw."

"My biggest asset is control," said Cuellar, who got all the runs he needed in the early innings when Bobby Grich broke up a scoreless pitching duel with Kansas City's Steve Busby by slugging a two-run double over the head of centerfielder Amos Otis. Hitting Don Baylor later added his fifth homer leading off the eighth inning.

The victory, Cuellar's 50th career shutout, enabled the Orioles to move to within six games of Boston in the AL East pennant chase. And, as the veteran southpaw added, there

Eric Soderholm belted a two-run homer and Steve Braun put Minnesota over the top with a two-run shot in a come-from-behind victory over slumping Milwaukee. Rookie Tim Johnson (1-1) gained the win with seven innings of relief while San Diego's Hank Aaron's 74th career homer.

Five 8, Brewers 7
Gary Peters hurled a five-inning effort for the Detroit Tigers. Bob Feller pitched two straight loss by shutout. Perry (12-15) gave up four singles in extending the bases. Tigers' scoreless string to 29. Tony Harrah gave up two runs on two hits. Yankees he needed with a two-run homer in the second.

Two 8, Brewers 7
Eric Soderholm belted a two-run homer and Steve Braun put Minnesota over the top with a two-run shot in a come-from-behind victory over slumping Milwaukee. Rookie Tim Johnson (1-1) gained the win with seven innings of relief while San Diego's Hank Aaron's 74th career homer.
