Joan Lewis, Democratic chairman of the Coventry Board of Education and Jake Wisenall, Democratic board member, seeking re-election to the Board of Education in the Nov. 4 election, issued statements challenging a recent statement of State Representative Vincent Moriarty and report. In contrast to Mrs. Moriarty, I have found teachers in the program to be extremely enthusiastic in their comments toward it and in their participation.

for it. Thus, it becomes a program unique to Coventry developed by the staff to fully meet the needs of our students. This program has proven itself academically, and its social advantages cannot be measured. "Representatives from the state Department of Education evaluated the program last year at the request of the board and gave a very favorable report. In contrast to Mrs. Moriarty, I have found teachers in the program to be extremely enthusiastic in their comments toward it and in their participation.

making progress in an orderly and sound manner. Particularly pressing needs are usually met by immediate Board action. "This coming year the board will be considering an alternate school proposal for high school level students and a board subcommittee for building needs and program planning consisting of board members Jacob Wisenall, Vincent Moriarty and myself along with the administrators will present to the full board a report on building priorities for future years. The board will continue, as it has in the past, its on-going evaluation of current programs.

"As to cost, with SLP implemented in four out of six grades at the elementary level, we are still spending approximately $200 more per pupil for high school students. Coventry ranks in the lower one-third of the state as to spending per pupil, and I feel we get the most out of each dollar spent.

"The board annually reviews systemwide testing results, and I have seen great improvements in these scores over the past four years particularly at the elementary level. Last year Grades 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 8 and 9 were tested. The results were outstanding in many areas of the basics. Without exception, each grade tested above the norm. While SAT scores for high school students throughout the nation were down, Coventry's were up.

"We have many needs within our educational system at all levels. We cannot fulfill all of these needs at once, but the important factor is that we are making progress in an orderly and sound manner. Particularly pressing needs are usually met by immediate Board action.

"We have team teaching at the Capt. Nathan Hale School here with much success for many years at the sixth grade level and this year, again with the cooperation of staff, this method of teaching is being successfully integrated into the seventh and eighth grades. The art and music programs at the elementary level were increased by the hiring of an additional teacher for each subject in the 1972-73 school year. Also, in the 1972-73 school year, physical education teachers were hired for the elementary level.

The Sequential Learning Program, now fully implemented in Grades K to 3, is not so-called "open education" but a highly structured more individualized approach to learning. Teachers and administrators involved in each phase of the program meet for a year plan to that phase's implementation to carefully plan

More than 900 show interest in carpool

HARTFORD (UPI) — More than 900 Connecticut motorists have expressed an interest in joining a carpool in the first three weeks of the state's computerized carpool program, Gov. Ella T. Grasso said Thursday. Mrs. Grasso said the response is an excellent beginning in helping reduce energy consumption and saving motorists money. The Connecticut Department of Transportation is using a computer to match responses from motorists to establish carpools. The governor said telephone inquiries about carpooling have increased from 10 a day to more than 50. "The increase follows an intensive statewide educational program, including distribution of more than 40,000 notices to motorists passing through the state's 15 highway toll stations," she said. "Carpooling is the most efficient and least expensive form of public transportation in existence today," the governor said.

GROTON — A union official says at least two thirds of the 202 Electric Boat workers tested for occupational lung disease have been found to be afflicted, some seriously. Most of the workers came into repeated contact with asbestos used in insulating pipes in nuclear submarines, the official said. The company stopped using asbestos earlier this year.

HARTFORD — Hartford policemen, angered at stalled contract talks, will begin initiating job actions that could slow down police operations and reduce traffic ticketing, scores of police union officials. They said the actions would begin immediately and reach full swing in about two weeks.

Regional

ALBANY, N. Y. — A Boston "systems analysis and management consultant firm" has been retained at a maximum cost of $4,800 to examine the state letter's ailing computer operation. All lottery operations were halted Wednesday when it was found the computer had printed a number of duplicate tickets.

BOSTON — Classes were halted for the first time this fall at a Boston public school because of renewed racial conflict. Thirteen youths were arrested and 20 others suspended at South Boston High School Friday.

National

OKLAHOMA CITY — Technically, no one was sure whether Oklahoma City policemen are on strike, have quit or have resigned. But one thing was certain — 550 of the city's 700 officers were not on duty. They turned in their badges Thursday after the city council refused to grant a 10 per cent pay raise recommended by an arbitration panel.

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, back from China, has told President Ford his talks to arrange a presidential visit to that country went well. Kissinger gave his preliminary report Friday after his return from Peking via Japan.

WASHINGTON — About 2,000 Louisville area opponents of racial busing headed for Washington today for a rally on Capitol Hill. They traveled by bus. Most of the demonstrators are union members and are going against a strong disavowal of their cause by AFL-CIO president George Meany.

BATON ROUGE, La. — Louisiana and two other states will file suit to block a postal rate increase for Dec. 28, Attorney General William Guste said Friday. Maine and Massachusetts are joining in the suit to halt the raising of the first class stamp from 10 to 13 cents.

WASHINGTON — Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., of the Senate Banking Committee says there is an "overwhelming sentiment" in his committee to do something to rescue New York City from insolvency, but "the question is what." The answer may come next week when his committee and a House banking subcommittee meet to try draft legislation to come to the city's rescue.

International

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union landed a spacecraft on Venus today and successfully transmitted back to earth a "panoramic" view of the cloud-shrouded planet's surface. Tass news agency said the Venus 10 "soft landed" about 1,300 miles from the landing site of the descent craft Venus 9.

MARRAKESH, Morocco — King Hassan's great march to Lake Chad in Spanish Sahara with an army of unarmed civilian volunteers ran into a recruitment snag today — not enough women are signing up. Hassan had wanted 10 per cent female participation but only 6 per cent of the marchers are women.

LISBON, Portugal — Bombers, ignoring a full and complete ceasefire, blasted two offices in Oporto and Lisbon and rumors of an imminent coup d'etat continued to flood Portugal.

Franco near death

MADRID (UPI) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco, gravely ill from two massive heart attacks, is showing accelerated signs of renewed heart failure, a medical bulletin said today. The official bulletin, signed by all Franco's doctors, said the renewed signs of heart failure followed an attack at 10 p.m. (5 p.m. EDT) of abdominal distension caused by paralysis of the intestine. It said the abdominal problem was dealt with through the customary medication. The bulletin also said Franco this morning suffered from a congestion of the lungs, which yielded to treatment. Underlining the seriousness of Franco's condition was the visit to El Pardo Palace during the morning of Spain's highest-ranking active military officer, Gen. Carlos Fernandez Valdespin, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro and the president of parliament and the Council of the Realm, Alejandro Rodriguez de Velaquez, later also arrived at Franco's residence.

The medical bulletin said doctors also were trying to determine the effect on Franco's digestive ailment of his "anti-Parkinson medication." It was the first official admission that Franco has suffered for some 20 years from Parkinson's disease — an ailment which causes uncontrollable shaking of the limbs. The staff of Franco's El Pardo Palace earlier was formally informed of the seriousness of his condition. The aging ruler chafed precariously to a time of his life, but medical reports said it would be a miracle if he lived much longer. Government sources said a transfer of Franco to Franco's designated residence, 37-year-old Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, was expected in a matter of days, but no deadline had been set. The sources said the transfer was not being pushed because of a desire by all parties involved not to embitter the last hours of a man who ruled Spain for 36 years and is widely revered as a national hero by supporters of his right-wing regime. Medical experts said the end was days or even hours away, although efforts continued to keep the 82-year-old ruler alive.

"It can be done for a few hours or even days with breathing apparatus and other instruments and stimulators," one medical source said. "But in most cases that would be the limit." Franco, the last of the right-wing strongmen in Europe, suffered a second heart attack Friday only hours after his doctors reported he was recovering from a coronary attack Tuesday. The ailment, bringing to a close nearly four decades one-man rule that began in the bitterly fought civil war of the 1930s, put new pressure on the government to transfer power. Government sources said the possibility of handing over his powers for good had been put gently to Franco more than once since his first heart attack — only to meet with a refusal even to discuss it. The sources said all the necessary papers were ready for his signature but he was in no condition, either mentally or physically, to sign them. The sources said the government preferred to wait rather than force the issue — provided the final agony would not be spun out too long.

GOP speakers stress need for responsive government

By ALEX GIRELLI
Herald Reporter

Two Republican speakers told members of the Manchester Property Owners Association Friday night that Manchester must have responsive government in which the elected officials initiate action rather than react to the administration. The only Democratic speaker at the meeting was Nathan Agostinelli, Republican town chairman. Mrs. Vivian Ferguson, incumbent Republican candidate for the Board of Directors, and Mrs. Phyllis Jackson, incumbent Democratic candidate for the board. Theodore Cummings, Democratic town chairman, has informed the association about 10 days ago that he would be unable to attend. About 50 association members and others attended the meeting in the auditorium of Whiton Memorial Library.

The speakers were Nathan Agostinelli, Republican town chairman, Mrs. Vivian Ferguson, incumbent Republican candidate for the Board of Directors, and Mrs. Phyllis Jackson, incumbent Democratic candidate for the board. Theodore Cummings, Democratic town chairman, has informed the association about 10 days ago that he would be unable to attend. About 50 association members and others attended the meeting in the auditorium of Whiton Memorial Library. All three responded to a question from Burton Pearl about forming a charter revision committee with a view to changing the council-manager form of government which he said is not responsive to the public. None, however, committed himself to advocating such a change. Agostinelli said he could not speak for the Republican party on the subject of charter revision because there has been no discussion of it in public or in private. As an outcast of the meeting, Agostinelli said the Democratic Party has taken a great deal of credit for what he described as the routine accomplishments of government. But he said government under the Democratic majority has been a reaction-type government marked by crisis and special meetings. Meanwhile, he said, the days are scarce by the vacant W.T. Grant store, boarded-up houses, and burned-out buildings with nothing done about it. Mrs. Ferguson stressed what she labeled as abdication of responsibility to the general manager. She said she was not motivated by vindictiveness and was not out to oust any individual. She said the present administrator (in an apparent reference to General Manager Robert Weiss) is bright, clever, and has ability, but gets no direction from the Board of Directors. She favored a contract under which the manager could be permitted to resign at the end of a term without loss of prestige if his performance was unsatisfactory to the majority of the Board of Directors.

Mrs. Jackson said the Democratic majority has succeeded in a number of accomplishments such as sidewalk construction, purchase of land for sanitary land fill, purchase of the Manchester Water Co. storm drain projects, and additions to junior high schools. She said that while inflation has reached 25 per cent, the tax increase has been only 5 per cent. She said that the goal of the Democratic majority now is to tighten municipal operations. "Time for a change?" she asked rhetorically. "No I think not." All she said change for the sake of change would be a dangerous thing. Both Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Jackson have been at odds frequently with the administration and both were described in an advertisement by the Manchester Property Owners Association as directors credited with doing their homework and understanding the issues.

Don't forget to set clocks back tonight

By SOL R. COHEN
The time has come, as it does each year, to acknowledge the fact that winter's near. When you're ready for bed and you've had that last snack, your clock must be pushed one hour BACK. If your clock says 11:2, then it means that it's 1, and remember to wind it or it just won't run. What moved us to write this "poem" dear friend, is the news Daylight Saving's about to end. You must have noticed the days getting shorter. Well, they'll get even shorter when you do what you oughter. And that something you oughter do, dear Jack, is to push all those clocks one hour BACK.

Battles spread in Lebanon

By ALEX GIRELLI
Herald Reporter

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Warring Moslem and Christian militia units battled across Lebanon with mortars, rockets, and machine guns today, ignoring a round-the-clock curfew backed by army troops. Police sources said at least 25 persons died in fighting Friday and during the night, bringing the death toll in the past six weeks to more than 640, with 1,600 wounded. The worst fighting was reported from the villages of Hadath and Lelaki in the south and around Ras Nabeh, Sodeco and Nasseria in the east. Sniper fire and kidnappings made most areas of Beirut unsafe Friday and streets in the war-ravaged capital were deserted. Security forces, bolstered by 400 to 500 army troops, failed to enforce the government-ordered total curfew in Beirut's worst trouble spots. Army troops intervened in Beirut for the first time in the current round of fighting and guarded government buildings and public utilities. Premier Rashid Karami has rejected demands for the army to play a larger role in ending the conflict for fear it would provoke a backlash from Moslems who regard the army as a pro-Christian force. Bewildered citizens jammed the telephone of Beirut Radio announcer, Sharif Al-Akawi, asking information on the curfew that was first announced Thursday night. Al-Akawi, whose daily broadcasts on security conditions have made him the bodyguard of all Lebanese, was equally puzzled. "I don't have the answer to any of your questions," he said, appealing to authorities to clarify the situation. Security officials and the U.S. Embassy said they had received no word on the fate of two Americans who were among some 200 persons kidnaped at roadblocks in the past two days. Charles Gallagher, 44, and William Dykes, 55, both employees of the United States Information Agency, were seized Wednesday in district dominated by Lebanese Moslems and Palestinians.

Interior Minister Camille Chamoun met with U.S. Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley to discuss the case but said afterward there had been no developments. By Friday and his partner William Moy, a restaurateur who, like Friend, is from Hollywood, Fla. The commission also may try to determine whether Friend, who died last April of cancer, also kept a safe deposit box, the source said. If he had one, the source said, investigators would want to check the records to see how many times it may have been opened during April and May 1974. Organized crime investigators say the alleged $200,000 payoff was made on or about April 9, 1974, at the Hartford Hilton Hotel. The Bailey family says the former party leader was in Florida during the week of April 9.

Probes delay jai alai opening

By ALEX GIRELLI
Herald Reporter

WETHERSFIELD (UPI) — The grand premiere of the sport of jai alai in Connecticut will probably have to wait until state officials deal with charges of political payoffs and organized crime connections with a Bridgeport gambling commission. A gala opening was planned for the Bridgeport fronton, billed as the world's largest, Nov. 15, but the Connecticut gaming commission said Friday it won't allow the opening until an investigation is completed. The commission Thursday night released the names of 41 persons it may subpoena to a Nov. 6 hearing to consider revoking the installation's gambling license. The hearing is expected to be a lengthy one, extending beyond the Nov. 15. The names included former Republican State Chairman J. Brian Gaffney and former Bridgeport Mayor Nicholas A. Pannozzi, who is now an official with the federal General Services Administration in Washington. Organized crime investigators have said Bridgeport Jai Alai President David Friend told them he paid $200,000 in 1974 to the late John M. Bailey, former national and state Democratic chairman, for his help in obtaining the license. A one-man state grand jury, meanwhile, is scheduled to begin hearing evidence Monday of possible criminal wrongdoing in the Bridgeport jai alai scandal. Others on the list of names include Bailey's law partner, Alfred Wechsler of Hartford, Bailey's legal secretary, Louise Dunn; Bridgeport Police Supt. Joseph A. Walsh; and former state Public Works Commissioner Paul J. Manafort and some of his relatives. Manafort is running as a GOP candidate for mayor of New Britain. Also facing possible subpoenas are former state Deputy General Manager Robert Eckhardt; C. Beck, present DEP official Henry Beal; and former Bridgeport building official John D. Greggos. They are under state police investigation for allegedly helping Friend's firm, Connecticut Sports Enterprises Inc., win an exemption to a state air pollution law. A source told UPI subpoenas also may be issued for the records of a safe deposit box at Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., rented by Friend and his partner William Moy, a restaurateur who, like Friend, is from Hollywood, Fla. The commission also may try to determine whether Friend, who died last April of cancer, also kept a safe deposit box, the source said. If he had one, the source said, investigators would want to check the records to see how many times it may have been opened during April and May 1974. United Way funds counseling agency

By ALEX GIRELLI
Herald Reporter

The John Does, married 10 years, parents of two children, complain they can't talk out their problems. "They don't want a divorce, yet are unhappy together much of the time. She hates her husband as well as herself when she screams, but how else can she get through to him?" Child and Family Services of Connecticut Inc. provides counseling services to individuals, families, and couples including pre-marital and marital counseling as well as counseling around parent-child relationship problems. The agency is a non-sectarian, multi-service private agency supported by volunteer contributions and the United Way. Assistance is offered to single parents including placement of babies in foster homes and adoption planning when requested. The agency also provides day care in carefully selected and supervised family day care homes during the daytime hours. The Northeast District Office at 110 Main St., was established in 1958. Many clients are self-referred and hear about the services of the agency through friends and former clients. Referrals also come from schools, physicians, police and other social agencies. Fees are determined by a sliding scale based on income and number in the family. The agency has grown and expanded its services to Manchester and surrounding areas under the leadership of Miss Margaret Parker who was district director since the office opened until her retirement last January. To keep up with the rapid increase in demand for services, a new social worker, Miss Linda Johnson, was added to the Northeast District Office staff in addition to the appointment of Mrs. Arline Rosenberg as new district director. The staff now consists of six full time and one part-time professionally trained social case workers. There has been continued focus on expanding the agency's day care program and on recruiting day care mothers as well as children who could profit from a day care experience. Thanks to you, it's working.

New York lottery halted

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey has ordered a halt in all games and drawings in the State Lottery because "a computer complication" had resulted in the sale of a number of duplicate numbered tickets. Affected by Carey's dramatic action were Thursday's drawing in the weekly 50-cent game with a $500 payoff and the final Oct. 31 drawing for the controversial $250,000 Colossus game as well as all other lottery operations.

"We were faced with a crisis of confidence and a public relations problem," a spokesman for Carey said, explaining that no immediate decision had been made as to how or when holders of several million lottery tickets would get refunds or possibly a chance at winning the big money. "There's just no precedent, no procedures for dealing with this sort of thing," the governor's spokesman said. Although the game of chance has been under fire for several days by investigative articles in at least three newspapers — the New York Daily News charged last week that state had been "systematically cheating" players — the final crisis was caused by a cure proposed by Lottery Director Jerry Bruno. A key segment of new procedures to eliminate smudged tickets as "winning" numbers called for cutting back by 1 million the number of weekly tickets printed.

But, according to an administration spokesman, when the computer-driven ticket printer was told to run only 4 million tickets, a quirk in its program produced several duplicate tickets. An estimated 2 million tickets had already been sold and it was an impossible task to find out how many of the duplicates had gone out. Carey ordered an immediate "across-the-board freeze" on all lottery games and drawings.

 Hi, everyone. First of all, we Yankee fans send our heartfelt condolences to you Red Sox fans. It was a great series, and just too bad that either club had to lose. Oh well, there is always next year.
 Come this Wednesday morning, the travelers will be heading for Brown's. We'll be leaving the Center around 10:30 a.m., so you'll have time for a big breakfast. We will make a coffee break stop along the way, and at that time you will receive a box lunch to munch on. After a busy couple of days we will be heading back home and should be in town around 6 p.m.
 While 180 members are on this trip, members at the Center will go as usual with all the regular programs. However, for Thursday it will be just baked beans and frankfurters, instead of the regular big meal.
 Thursday morning, Dr. Turek and the Manchester Public Health Nurses and volunteers gave flu shots. The show and started at 10:25, and by 12:05 they knocked out 391 seniors. It sure was a jam session for awhile, in fact after we filled the main hall we lined them through the halls and even out on the street. Thanks to our good friend, the man upstairs it was a perfect day.
 On behalf of the seniors and my staff, I want to sincerely thank Dr. Turek, Manchester Public Health Nurses and their volunteers for doing such an excellent job and a service deeply appreciated.

The battle of Breed's Hill

View of the Attack on Bunker's Hill with the burning of Charlestown, June 17, 1775. A Boston Illustration by Charles Tinker. C. British Troops attacking D. Powdered Liberty.

 At the council of war at Cambridge called by General Artemus Ward, the officers of the American soldiers besieging Boston debated what to do. Spies had brought word that very day (June 16, 1775) that the British were planning to occupy Dorchester Heights just south of Boston. What countermeasures should the Patriots make?
 The Committee of Safety had urged that Charlestown peninsula — across the neck of Boston from Boston — be fortified. Ward was reluctant to do so because of the dangers involved and the serious shortage of powder. General Joseph Warren, the famous doctor and Patriot leader of Boston, felt the same way.
 One who argued differently was Gen. Israel Putnam of Connecticut, affectionately known as "Old Put." This burly, shouldered farmer with long and hard service in the Indian War was a dominant figure in the council. Outspoken, aggressive, and explosive at times, Putnam was very much for action. He proposed the immediate fortification of the heights of Charlestown. Col. William Prescott of Groton, Mass., who was to lead the action, agreed and the others went along.
 It was foolhardy for the Americans to venture onto Charlestown where they might be easily cut off and isolated by the British. This peninsula was connected to the mainland by a narrow causeway, often overflowed at high tide. But rashness and not reason prevailed among the restless militia who wanted to drive the enemy out of Boston.
 The order given, 1,000 to 1,200 men with various arms, a day's rations and entrenching tools gathered on Cambridge common. After President Adams of Harvard College prayed for their success, the force marched toward Charlestown. An eyewitness left a graphic description of them: "To a man, they wore small clothes, coming down and fastening just below the knee, and long stockings with cowhide shoes ornamented with large buckles, while not a pair of boots graced the company. The coats and waistcoats were loose and of huge dimensions, with colors as varied as the bars of oak, sunshades and other trees, could make them, and their shirts were all made of flax, and like every part of the dress, were homespun." Officers might have uniforms but not the men.
 Entrenchments were to be laid out by Col. Richard Gridley, an experienced military engineer. Although the council had explicitly ordered that no regulars look like a man in their work, the British's army of 2,000 regulars looked like a man in their work, the British's army of 2,000 regulars looked like a man in their work, the British's army of 2,000 regulars looked like a man in their work.

Lake residents may get funds

COVENTRY
MONICA SHEA

 Mort Blumenthal, director of the Northeastern Connecticut Community Development Corporation, (NCCD), told members of the Lake Rehabilitation Study Committee Wednesday they can have federal money.
 Under the Title 10 grant that is now being filed with the federal government, lake area residents may be eligible for assistance in rehabilitating their homes.
 Blumenthal said the NCCD is willing to provide labor assistance and technical advice for plumbing and electrical work.
 Help would be available especially to those residents who may be violating building or health codes.
 Title 10 provides funds to families whose income is less than $12,000 and whose repair costs would not exceed $10,000.
 Blumenthal requested local housing officials begin now to make a list of at least a dozen homes which could be repaired. With the list, the town could start work right away if the Title 10 funds are awarded.
Endorse rezoning
 Residents for Responsible Planning have endorsed the proposed rezoning of the lake area.
 Robert Fitch, president of the organization, sent a letter to the Planning and Zoning Commission which stated: "We believe the proposed rezoning of building lot size from 15,000 to 40,000 square feet, although it doesn't prevent building on all small lots, does tend to encourage responsible use of the land. Most of the soil in this region has poor drainage. High density housing leads to a further threat on the purity of the Coventry Lake water."
 "The proposed rezoning, along with other controls we trust are forthcoming, will ensure an improved quality of life for all our citizens."

Election campaign enters new phase

Manchester's election campaign entered a new phase this week, with candidate statements giving way to candidate charges and with innuendos and implications replacing innovations and improvements.

THE WEEK IN REVIEW

Tuesday, Republican Edward Wilson wanted to know whether any favoritism was shown Arthur Fischer, head of the New York firm planning the multi-million dollar Buckland Commons. He wanted to know if the "several hundred" dollars Fischer donated to Democratic causes had anything to do with the March 1974 decision by the Planning and Zoning Commission, when it approved two zone changes in Buckland.

Democratic Town Chairman Ted Cummings immediately denied any wrongdoing, called Wilson's charges "a smear campaign," scheduled a comment session for Thursday night and invited Wilson and GOP Chairman Nathan Agostinelli to attend.

They heard Cummings categorically deny any wrongdoing or any favoritism and heard him explain that $290 of Fischer's contributions were for Democratic dinner tickets in 1974 and 1975 and $100 was a contribution to the state Democratic campaign — for a total of $390.

They heard Mr. Cummings announced he's consulting with attorneys — to determine whether he should institute legal proceedings against Wilson "for his insinuations of wrongdoings."

Wednesday night, a sparse turnout of about 45 attended a "Meet the Candidates" night in Manchester High School Auditorium, sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Wings of evening: One Solitary life

The following description is attributed to Phillips Brooks, the famous Boston preacher. It is doubtless familiar to many but bears repeating.

"Here is a man who was born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman. He grew up in another obscure village. He worked in a carpenter shop until he was thirty, and then for three years he was an itinerant preacher. He never wrote a book. He never held an office."

"He never owned a home. He never traveled foot inside a big city. He never traveled two hundred miles from the place where he was born. He had no credentials but himself."

"He had nothing to do with his world except the naked power of his divine manhood. While still a young man, the tide of popular opinion turned against him. His friends ran away. One of them denied him. He was turned over to his enemies. He went through the mockery of a trial. He was nailed upon a cross between two thieves."

"His executioners gambled for the only piece of property he had on earth while he was dying — and that was his coat. When he was dead, he was taken down and laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend. "Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone and today he is the centerpiece of the human race and the leader of progress. I am far within the mark when I say that all the armies that ever marched, and all the navies that ever sailed, and all the parliaments that ever sat, and all the kings that ever reigned, put together have not affected the life of man upon this earth" as powerfully as that one solitary life.

One with God is a majority In a unique way Jesus was one with God. He is a lesser degree there have been other lives so dedicated to doing God's will that it can be said of them "one with God is a majority." Despite criticism and even persecution they have pursued their course with confidence that God was with them. Albert Schweitzer is an outstanding example of such a person.

The 100th anniversary of his birth was recently observed with celebrations calling attention of his contribution to medicine, music, theology and world peace. Not too many years ago he was acclaimed as one of the world's outstanding Christians. You are no doubt all familiar with his life story — an authority on Bach, noted musician, and successful doctor, who gave up worldly possessions to devote his life to serving those who were in greatest need of help. His hospital in Lamborne, Africa, ministered to those who had no other medical care.

Yet toward the end of his life he became the target of much adverse criticism. An article in the "Christian Century," (Oct. 8) entitled "Reconsidering Albert Schweitzer" says that his "declining years were accompanied by a veritable cacophony of praise and blame, during which time he sought to maintain a dignified silence."

There were voices raised against his manliness, his management of the hospital, his attitude to the blacks, and his cultural philosophy. But he continued to serve where he felt he had been called to serve until the very end.

The article by Dr. Dungan of the department of religious studies at the University of Tennessee, goes on to point out his tremendous contribution. He writes, "Few have seen the essential unity and self-consistency of his whole life," because of his interest in diverse fields. I believe he will continue to be considered one of the world's outstanding Christians, one who persevered in what he believed was God's will for him.

How can we be sure? The example of lives like Schweitzer's prompts soul-searching on the part of those who want to do God's will, but are not so sure just what it is or whether they would have the courage to do it if they knew. The following prayer was suggested to me by a friend who has found it helpful in her meditation. It is a variation of the "Jesus Prayer" which she repeats in rhythm when walking, thereby exercising the body and enriching the spirit.

"Lord Jesus, Son of God, Saviour — Have mercy on me, a sinner, IT IS SO. — Enlighten me to know what I should do Enable me to do it when I know." — It can then be enlarged to include prayers for others: "Lord Jesus, Son of God, Saviour, (John's) and mine. Have mercy on us, sinners, IT IS SO. — Enlighten us to know what we should do. — Enable us to do it when we know."

The origin of "Church" For centuries the Christian Church has proclaimed as a minimum creed that "Jesus Christ is Lord." In the Greek the word for "lord" is "Kyrios." As the missionaries spread across Europe into the British Isles, the word became "kir" or "kirke." Still today in Edinburgh the Scots go to the kirk, but in England both "k" became "ch." So when we join the church we are pledging our lives to Jesus Christ as the supreme Lord.

"Too many people consider the "church" as a building or place of worship. It is much more than that. John Calvin once defined the church as "the fellowship of the forgiven and the forgiving." It is a society in which each one feels the cleansing of God's grace and so in turn treats his fellows in a forgiving way. You and I know how far short we fall from this ideal but this is what it should be. Recently the First Church of Christ in New Britain has used this phrase in its Newsletter to describe the church:

"Where and when we work, pray, and break bread together to promote the increase of the love of God and neighbor."

Not too solemn There is a place for humor — even in the church. These may cause you to smile — if not to chuckle.

As the minister stood up to deliver his Sunday sermon he paused, surveyed the congregation, turned toward the choir with an appreciative glance and then announced, "We thank the choir for their excellent rendition of our Sunday anthem — and now a message from our sponsor."

Increasingly the church realizes that it must compete for the time of its parishioners. One recently had a quarter page add on the Saturday religious page: "Come next Sunday and avoid the Easter rush."

When Dr. Ralph Sockman was the Radio Preacher of the National Council of Churches he preached one Sunday on Nationalism. His topic was announced like this: "God's Only Rival" Dr. Sockman

Tumor treatment facility urged

To the editor, I am compelled from personal experience to call your attention to an unfortunate situation which is growing more serious with each passing day. It is a situation that is causing pain, suffering, inconvenience, and expense to hundreds of people located in the Manchester vicinity. What is even more outrageous is the fact that it is a situation that could be corrected immediately.

In 1972, 609 cases of malignant tumors were diagnosed in Manchester Memorial and other nearby hospitals. In 1973, this figure not only has greatly increased but will continue to increase, and can be conservatively expected to exceed 1,000 cases in the next three to five years. The unfortunate people so afflicted must travel several miles to an overcrowded facility for treatment, often spending long, uncomfortable periods of time waiting for their turn. The cost of travel is added to the incredible expense of such illness, not to mention the additional distress, discomfort and uneasiness to the patient.

For some time, Manchester Memorial Hospital has had suitable provisions for a treatment and follow-up care center for tumor patients. The space and equipment is available as well as trained personnel to staff it. And yet it lies idle, in spite of the crying need for its implementation. Why? It is time for the administration of the Manchester Memorial Hospital to take whatever steps are necessary to get this unit functioning immediately. Concern for the growing number of victims of this disease demands it.

P.S. Other up-to-date information can be obtained either from me or Dr. Douglas Roberts, Manchester Hospital.

Markers stolen

To the editor: The Manchester Historical Society is a corporate non-profit organization dedicated to preserving the history and the heritage of Manchester. We maintain the Cheney Homestead which is open to the public at specific times and provides periodic displays, fairs, exhibitions and lectures. All of our financing comes from modest membership fees and we try our best to achieve our objectives with the somewhat limited funds available.

In 1973 one of the Sesqui-Centennial projects assigned to the Manchester Historical Society by the Town Sesqui-Centennial Committee was the marking of historical sites and this has continued as more research could be done. As a result of this project 21 markers were placed with the support and imbedded in concrete throughout Manchester. Each one has the Town Sesqui-Centennial seal and the historical data pertinent to that location condensed into about 50 words. These were placed at the various appropriate locations in our town. It was hoped that these markers would renew a sense of pride in our historic past and supplement the teaching of local history in our schools.

Some individuals have sabotaged this project by stealing the markers or vandalizing the signs. To date six have been stolen and one recovered. Although many more places of historic significance should be marked, it now becomes questionable whether this project should be continued.

At present the five completely missing markers are from the following historic sites: First Settlement — On West Center Street, near the corner of Olcott Street. Union Dam — On Union Street, near the site of many early manufacturing concerns.

Jambstone Quarry — On Buckland Street, where the dinosaur remains have been found, opposite Hartman Tobacco Company's office. East Academy — On Parker Street, off the end of Academy Street, site of Manchester's first secondary school.

Rochambeau's Army — On Spencer Street at the West Cemetery, the route of Rochambeau's army marched through town. The recovery of these signs would restore the project to its original intent. They may be returned to the Town Clerk of the Park Department or either of the undersigned.

Very truly yours, Wells C. Denison, president Edson M. Bailey, chairman Historic Site Marking Committee of Manchester Historical Society

Today's Thought "My brother always gets the best. My mother loved him more than me. My father played ball with him. The teachers always thought he was smarter. But my day will come... I'll get even yet. Someday he'll really be down and beg me for help and I'll say, 'Oh go to your father' and he knows how our father lived before he died. Boy, won't I feel good then!" — Jackie Jellas

The national sampler: What newspapers are saying

By United Press International Wichita (Kan.) Eagle and Beacon: Because the urgency of the nation's energy crisis is such that it requires research and development programs similar to the rush atomic and space projects of the past, it is alarming to learn that the Ford administration has given up hope for major energy legislation until after the 1976 elections.

Congressional reluctance to approve tough measures to conserve fuel and encourage domestic production — both necessary if even a beginning to greater energy independence is to be made — indicates the experts were right when they said fuel self-sufficiency was not plausible. Certainly it is unlikely with an administration and Congress who refuse to compromise on effective bills.

The thinking in Congress seems to be that to approve the presidential plan to save oil by raising prices would be political suicide during an election year. But its delay in acting to meet an expected critical shortage of natural gas this winter will win no votes either, particularly if, as expected massive layoffs occur because of the shortage.

Unemployed voters are not likely to look with fondness on the incumbents who did nothing to save their jobs. The Sunday Ledger-Enquirer, Columbus, Ga.: Which is more important, congressional vacancies or tending to the nation's business?

In coming to a definitive answer to this question, look at these rather significant items: — Congress has voted itself a Columbus Day recess of 12 days and has scheduled further recesses of six days for Veterans Day, 12 days for Thanksgiving and the usual Christmas holiday. That will total about 40 days with only 73 calendar, and fewer working days left in the year.

Everyone, including sundry congressmen, complains bitterly about the boondoggles that set up the taxpayers' dollar — Quality of Life survey, the effects of alcohol on sunfish and rats, who knows, how many others — without doing anything about it.

It is encouraging to note that Georgia's Jack Brinkley, Elliot Levitis and John Flynn, along with Alabama's Jack Edwards, William Dickinson and Jack Buchanan voted against the Columbus Day recess. Nevertheless, wouldn't it be nice if Congress forewent some of its down time and devoted it to trimming the ridiculous from the budget? Citizen Tribune, Morristown, Tenn.: It is a conviction of Department of Justice attorneys that Patricia Hearst will run away if she is admitted to bail. Scarcely no one who has been following the case doubts otherwise. Flight is a pattern of life for the remnants of the "Symbionese Liberation Army" and she would be likely to be spirited away from them, even if she did not choose to run elsewhere. It has seemed wiser for her own safety to keep her guarded without bail.

But now Miss Hearst may have to be released on her own recognition if she has not been brought to trial by December 27. A section of the new "Speedy Trial Act" ... specifies "interim time limits" within which federal prosecutors must bring to court, within 90 days of their arrest, prisoners awaiting trial — those unable to raise bail and those denied bail for fear of flight. The charge must be dropped in some cases. A Washington official is quoted as

It's a well known fact in real estate circles that a home located proximate to a higher priced neighborhood tends to take on the aura and neighborhood. Appreciates in value even faster than it normally would. We submit to you, therefore, that the above mentioned brand new residence has the best of both worlds - it is next to such an area, and it is truly a quality, custom crafted home in its own right! From the quiet elegance of the partially brick front through the subdued but evident quality of the six-plus rooms, to the thermopane sliding doors leading out to the appointed rear deck, the residence is truly an outstanding value. A two-car garage plus all the automatic kitchen amenities, wall-to-wall practically everywhere, two full baths, an aesthetically appealing rear deck, replace a few of the features you'll see inside. Outdoors is a delightful combination of sun and shade on a short, no-traffic street.

Karen lingers in coma

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (UPI) — Karen Ann Quinlan lingers in a coma with the merest of life signs, unaware that within days a judge will decide whether her vegetable-like existence should be ended.

But Superior Court Judge Robert Muir Jr., who will make that decision, has refused to visit the 21-year-old girl's bedside at St. Clare's Hospital in Denville, N.J.

Muir says such a visit might have an emotional impact on a precedent-setting case that must be decided strictly on legal evidence.

Karen, who collapsed into a coma after taking a combination of drugs and alcohol, is kept alive by a respirator. Doctors have testified she cannot recover and her family wants her disconnected from the machine and allowed to pass into "the loving hands of the Lord."

Whatever Muir's decision — and the state argues that allowing Karen to die would amount to homicide — there is the prospect of an appeal.

If the case is pursued, the New Jersey chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union said Friday it may join the legal battle on the side of the parents. New Jersey ACLU director Stephen Nagler said his personal opinion is that there is a constitutional right to die.

Neurologists have testified that Karen, in a coma for six months, has only the primitive reflex functions of life, similar to that of a new-born infant without a brain. The brain damage is irreparable, her recovery hopeless, her physical appearance grotesque, they said.

"Life was important to her, and the way she could live was important to her," Julia Quinlan, her mother, testified last week, recounting conversations with her daughter after an aunt died a painful death from cancer. "She always said, 'Please, mommy, don't let them keep me alive that way.'"

Joseph and Julia Quinlan, Roman Catholics who have reconciled the moral issue in their souls, believe Karen has a right to die.

The state says it has a vested interest to protect Karen's life — regardless of its quality.

Judge rejects Aillon request for new trial

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — A judge has rejected a request for a new trial for Guillermo Aillon, convicted more than two years ago of killing his estranged wife and her parents.

New Haven County Superior Court Judge Thomas O'Sullivan Friday rejected Aillon's second petition for a new trial, saying a private conversation between trial Judge Simon Cohen and a juror the night before the verdict was "harmless."

Howard Jacobs, Aillon's attorney, said he will appeal to the state supreme court, the second time the case will go before the justices.

Aillon, 37, was convicted Sept. 1, 1973, of the stabbing murders of his wife, Barbara, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. George Montano, a prominent North Haven family.

Aillon, a native of South America, was an anti-poverty worker who achieved recognition from the Jaycees as one of the leading young men in the state.

Aillon called for a new trial after his conviction when he learned Cohen talked with a juror outside the jury room on the fourth and final night of deliberations.

Superior Court Judge John F. Shea granted the new trial saying the conversation was presumed prejudicial to Aillon unless the state could prove otherwise.

But on June 4 of this year, the state Supreme Court reversed the decision and ordered a new hearing. The hearing in August led to the Friday decision against Aillon.

Open house set today at new animal hospital

BOLTON
The Bolton Veterinary Hospital's new building opens officially today with an open house scheduled to start at 3 p.m.

The new, 72,000-square foot structure — at 222 Boston Tpke., west of Bolton Notch — was designed by architect Robert Gantner of Willimantic and built by the Andrew Ansaldi Co. of Manchester.

Dr. Allan Leventhal, owner of the firm, said construction of the building began almost a year ago after inspection of many animal facilities throughout the country.

The new facility includes five examining rooms, a conference room, pharmacy, laboratory, surgery room, and many wards, runs and service areas. It was designed for efficiency in operation, Dr. Leventhal said.

Veterinary staff at the hospital includes Drs. Roy Holman, William Pomper, Michael Tulman, David Coley, Eric Galster, Eve Knowles and Leventhal. Fifteen full- and part-time technical and service personnel enable the hospital to offer complete services for large and small pets.

Dr. Leventhal is a 1951 graduate Cornell University. He began his practice in 1953 in a small building on the same site, which after many renovations is being replaced by the new facility.

The public is invited to today's open house.

Goodspeed production should enjoy success

By JUNE TOMPKINS

When "Very Good Eddie" played at the Goodspeed Opera House last summer, I saw it and said I wouldn't mind seeing it again. Again I did during its present re-run at the Goodspeed prior to a Broadway opening later this fall. And should an opportunity rise to see it a third time in New York City, it would be welcome.

Except for some line re-writes, some choreographic improvements and a couple of cast changes, which are all to the good, the play is as bright, gay, fast paced and entertaining as it was the first time it appeared at Goodspeed.

It is an excellent family type entertainment about two newly wedded couples who board a Hudson River dayliner for their wedding trip to the Catskills. Just before the boat leaves the New York pier, a mixup in the luggage is married and one of each of the married couples goes ashore to straighten it out. The boat leaves without them and a humorous situation develops.

There are other romantic sidelights provided by David Christmas as Dick Rivers and Cynthia Wells as Elsie Lilly. Miss Wells, who plays the prima donna of Mme. Matropo's singing protegee, has a lovely voice and sings a couple of delightful duets with Christmas.

Travis Hudson stars as Mme. Matropo and stops the show in the second act with her "katy-did" in the style of a red-hot-mama.

New to the cast are Virginia Seidel as Mrs. Elsie Darling and James Harder as the steward and hotel porter.

Ms. Seidel has a thin, nasal quality to her voice which, at times, is harsh to the ears. Harder does an adequate performance as the comedian in the show.

Judging by the successful run of "Shenandoah" on Broadway after having opened at the Goodspeed, "Very Good Eddie" should enjoy a similar run of success, even though "Eddie" is a revival of an early 1900 musical with music by Jerome Kern.

The entertainment continues at Goodspeed through Nov. 2. For reservations, call 873-8668.

Growth of hobby creates hysteria

The collecting hobby has reached the proportions of an epidemic, leaving in its wake a scarcity of fine, rare items and prices that continue upward.

This scarcity, coupled with inflation, has forced collectors to focus their attention on the near-antique, the not-so-old and the nearly new.

And, it has made the public so conscious of the values of these collectibles that it seems every possession — even today's jelly glass — has been given stature far beyond its worth.

It also has created a kind of hysteria in which the unwary or inexperienced collector is panicked into insane purchases.

This does not mean that there are not some things from this era that will become tomorrow's treasures.

It means that very little of today's mass-produced merchandise will be of great value except as curiosities to future generations.

If this state of affairs has left you perplexed as you sort through the family's accumulation during spring house cleaning, take heart. There are a few guidelines to help with decisions of what to keep and what to throw away.

Call out anything that is less than good to excellent quality. Materials — metals, wood, glass — and craftsmanship would be signs of the best quality.

Handcrafted items should be kept. Particularly if they are of excellent workmanship and of significant importance.

Any item that has been made in a limited number (the finer the better) will interest future collectors.

Consider the design of a piece. It should be representative of its period and in good taste.

And last, keep only those things that are in mint condition. Today's collector may accept a rare antique with a hairline crack, but it doesn't make sense to save a contemporary piece that is less than perfect.

Remember, you can't save it all. In 10 years you would need a warehouse. But with good judgment you can be saving treasures for future generations.

The village smithy stands...

From the refiner's fire: A dragon-head doorknocker.

A liking for old tools and wondering how they were made were the beginnings of Raymond Osterlund's blacksmith shop in back of his home at 37 French Rd., Bolton.

The racks around his rustic shop are filled with antique tools, most of which he uses at one time or another in his hobby craft.

An air conditioner service man by trade, he is one of several blacksmiths in the area who pursue an ancient art of business or hobby purposes.

Osterlund's smithy venture is his hobby. He works mostly to create items for craft and hobby shows where he sells his wares.

Working with another metal hobbyist friend, he creates tin lamp shades, with individual designs made up of from 1,200 to 1,500 holes in each shade.

Using antique tools, he heats his rods of iron or hot rolled milled steel over a forge fired with soft coal which he fans with a 1902 Champion blower, the one that replaced the bellows. He also has an electric blower.

Osterlund shapes the metal into plant holder hooks, door knockers, fireplace tools, wall hangings, and other fanciful and useful items. With brass and tin, wall sconces, candle holders and lamp shades are among the articles made.

Osterlund wears the leather garments of a smithy. The apron he made from excess shoe leather that had belonged to his father. The hat he found at the New England State Exposition.

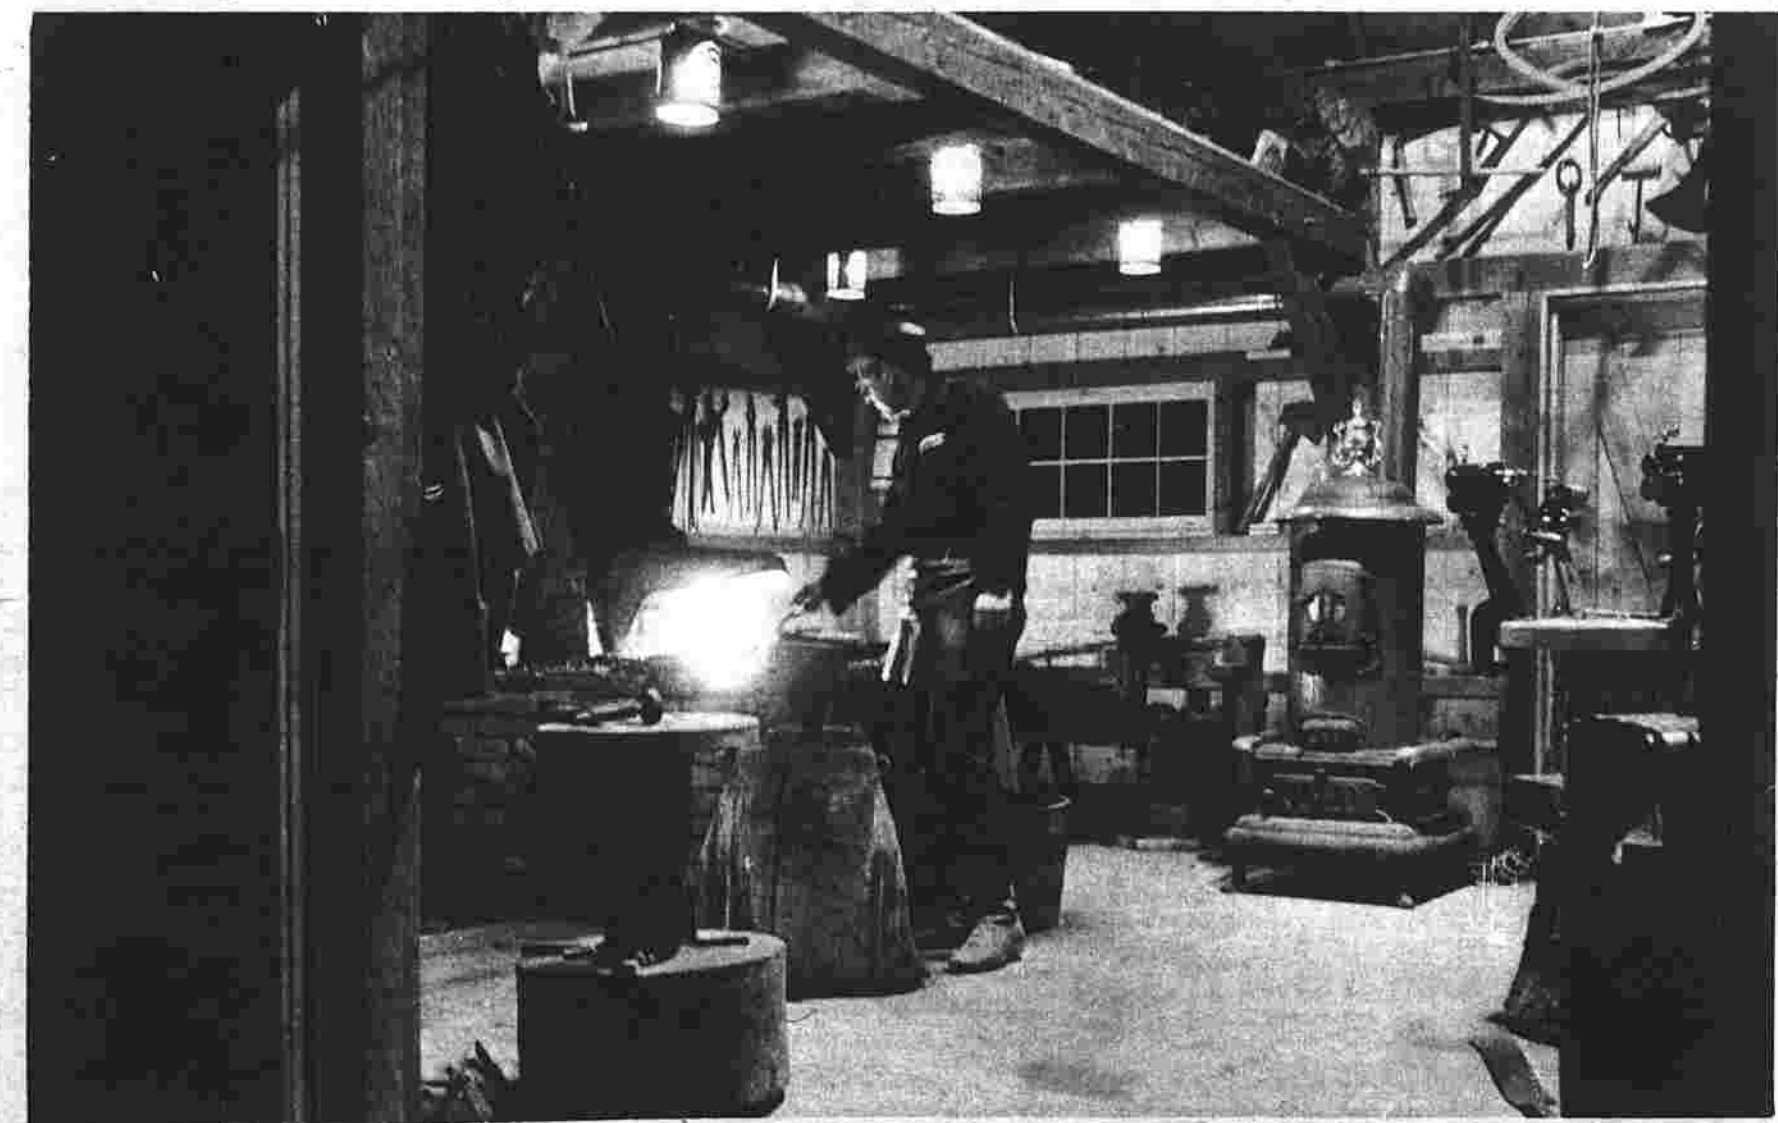

Nothing gives him greater joy, perhaps, than that special instant when two pieces of iron have reached the right degree of heat and he pounds them together.

Followed by an instantaneous explosion of sound and sparks, Osterlund can say with satisfaction, "It's a good weld."

An antique drill press, cobwebs and all, sometimes used in Osterlund's tinsmith shop.

Story by June Tompkins
Photographs by Steve Dunn

Looking into Raymond Osterlund's blacksmith shop on almost any evening finds him at the forge fashioning decorative and practical works of iron. Nearly all the tools and contents of the shop are antiques. Note the cut tin lampshades he has made, no two of which are alike.

STAMPS & COINS

By Russ MacKendrick

The last United Nations commemorative for 1975 will show this flower growing out of a strand of barbed wire to symbolize their peace-keeping operations.

It is a little on the grim side but it tells the story and at last we have a U.N. stamp that doesn't have to be deciphered. Topical flower buffs will appreciate the accurate wild rose and the "bob-wire" collectors should find it just ducky.

It was engraved and printed in Finland from a design by Mrs. E. Oivo, a women's libber of that country - fitting, in this International Women's Year, as noted by the U.N. stamps of last May 9.

There are to be four stamps in the set: 13 and 26-cent values good for postage from New York, and 60 and 70-centime values good only from Geneva. (Incidentally, if you sometime overhear a person saying "always New York and Geneva," there's your chance to butt in and remind all listeners that Canada used Scott numbers 170 through 174 for their mailings from EXPO '67. Be popular.)

On the same day that these four are to come out - that is, Nov. 21 - the U.N. Postal Administration (UNPA) will issue the eighth in a series of souvenir cards.

(You can pronounce "UNPA" with gusto - far better than our "USPS" that comes out in hisses).

The cards will reproduce the new Peace-Keeping stamps plus five older ones on the same theme. Also the UNPA on that day will have ready some souvenir folders with all their issuances for the year - not too many: Just the eight-piece stationery binge of Jan. 10, four commems for Peaceful Uses of Outer Space in March, the Women's Year, the 30th Anniversary in June, the Namibias in September, and the above left - reasonable for these days of philatelic avalanches.

There will be a U.N. booth at the Farmington Valley Club's FARVEX at Avon tomorrow, complete with a special rubber-stamp show cachet.

Two-dollar bill
The Christian Science Monitor quotes a congressman as saying flat out that there will be a $2 bill next year, in time for the Bicentennial. The Treasury plans to issue 400 million pieces annually and will cut the one-dollar bill production in half.

It is fondly hoped that the color or size will be distinctive. In Britain they do this, and overdo it, as the one-pound note is small and the others stepwise larger, and the 20-pound is such a monster that it has to be folded and refolded to go anywhere. No mistaking it, though.

Salute to SPA
Linn's Stamp News for Oct. 20 gives a salute to the SPA. This stands for the Society of Philatelic Americans, a countrywide general stamp-collecting group. The membership is away smaller than the American Philatelic Society (only 7,000 or 8,000) but they offer some unusual services: A two-week expertization for a dollar, bookbinding, and a Board of Chancery to settle arguments.

Meeting set
The Manchester Philatelic Society meeting, the circuit book and refreshment night, will be on Tuesday the 28th. Place: Mott's Community Hall, starting at 7 o'clock.

A great rarity
A great rarity acquired - only two in existence! It is the Stamp and Coins column for the Oct. 4 Herald having the picture of the new Banking and Commerce issues, with the addition of the real stamps affixed and tied on with a genuine, handback, first-day cancellation. This was a gift from Tom Jay, Membership Chairman of the local club, and a long-time aficionado of far-and-wide first-day ceremonies.

No biz like show biz...

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD - (NEA) - Even if you're a tremendously successful businessman in another field, that doesn't automatically qualify you as a moviemaker. John Crean found that out the hard way. Crean is hugely successful in his own field. He is chairman of the board of Fleetwood Enterprises, a company which owns the first, second and third biggest manufacturers of RVs - mobile homes, motor homes, campers. Fleetwood is this year celebrating its 25th anniversary. A few years ago, Fleetwood went public and Crean found himself with a lot of money to invest, so he invested some in making movies. He financed

"Hammersmith Is Out," with Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, and "Man and Boy," with Bill Cosby. Neither was a big success. "I lost around three million," Crean says, "so I decided I'd better learn something about movie production - I'm a production man from way back. So he got a cheap script and made his own movie, at his ranch in San Juan Capistrano. It was never meant to be released, just sort of a production experiment. Crean watched every penny. "I discovered," he says, "that it only cost me around $100,000 for the actual production. That compared to $1 million for 'Hammersmith' and $750,000 for 'Man and Boy.' I realized that I had lost $900,000 on the first one and $650,000 on the second - just through wasted money." Now, with that experiment behind him, he figures he knows a little something about what he's doing in the movie business. And so he's anxious to make another movie. "I want to do it," he says, "just so I can prove to myself that I can make a good film and a profitable one." Sidney Sheldon, after a long and noble career in movies and TV, has found peace and happiness in another field - he is now one of our more successful novelists. "I don't miss the movie and TV business at all," says Sheldon.
