Jai alai scandal hearing opened by gaming agency

NEWINGTON (UPI) — A public hearing expected to unveil details of one of Connecticut's worst scandals opened today with Bridgeport jai alai fronton operator David Friend expected to take the stand.
The Connecticut Commission on Special Revenues is holding the hearing to determine whether it should lift the gambling license it granted to Friend, a Hollywood, Fla., banker. The fronton had been held in the hotel in February and March 1974.
Commission Chairman Paul Silvergield rejected eight motions by Friend's attorneys and ordered the hearing to proceed.
The first witness was Thomas McGinnis, general manager of the Hartford Hilton, who testified that Friend and two other individuals involved in the fronton operation and Spanish-speaking residents and the local NAACP chapter.
State police say Friend told investigators that a $200,000 payment was made to John M. Bailey, the late Democratic state chairman, in Hartford in April of 1974.
Silvergield rejected the motions by Louis I. Gladstone, Friend's attorney, including one to conduct the hearings behind closed doors.
McGinnis told the commission that Friend, Lidizio Renzulli and Quinton Hinton stayed at the hotel Feb. 27-28 and March 28-29, 1974. Also in the party was Murray A. Cooper of Cooper Limousine Services, New York, N.Y.
Friend, owner of the $14 million facility, was scheduled to take the stand after the preliminary matters were taken care of.
Chief State's Attorney Joseph T. Gormley, representing the commission, said Wednesday he expects that witnesses who balk at a questioning will be granted immunity and will be forced to testify.
Gormley said the immunity would not prevent him from prosecuting convicted criminals, since he gathered what he considered sufficient evidence for conviction before the hearings started.
But 25 persons were subpoenaed to the hearing but Gormley said he expected to hear today only from Friend, William Moy, a Hollywood, Fla., restaurateur, and officials of Hartford's Hilton and Sonesta hotels.
A grand jury investigation, held in closed sessions, will recess for the duration of the commission hearings on the gambling license, expected to last into next week.
Among the charges against Bridgeport Jai Alai — any one of which would be sufficient grounds for lifting its license — are making false statements to the commission and a existence of an owner's contact with two known organized crime figures.
Gormley said he planned to produce records from four Connecticut banks relating to the jai alai operation. They were Connecticut National Bank, Connecticut Bank and Trust, Lafayette Bank of Bridgeport, and the Metropolitan Bank of Trumbull.

Building getting refurbished

Work started this week on cleaning up and refurbishing of the Podrovo and Jaffe Building on Main St. which formerly was occupied by the W. T. Grant Co. The building is being purchased by Ken Burkamp, second from left, from Abraham Druckman of New York City. Looking on is Robert Weiss, town manager, left, and Frank Spilecki, right, who will be rental agent for the mini-mall. On the scaffolding is Jim Ouellette of Four K's Construction Co. The building has been involved in a tax lien suit.

Health insurance plan endorsed by labor chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany said today a $100 billion bill to provide health insurance for everyone would cost no more than is being spent to buy health care for only some people.
Meany endorsed a national health security bill that would provide universal coverage without excluding any services or requiring individuals to make additional payments. It would be financed out of payroll taxes matched by general government revenues.
The labor leader acknowledged that a $100 billion price tag on the bill tends to frighten people. But he said the price tag "is both its biggest drawback and the major source of the program's strength."
"If health security were enacted tomorrow, its cost would not be $100 billion in addition to the $100 billion now being spent — as some of its opponents would like you to believe," Meany said. "Its cost would be the same $100 billion that is now being spent."
"Health security would take the same money that is being spent today by individuals, insurance companies and governments to purchase health care for some individuals, and use that money to purchase health care for everyone."
Under any program — even one priced at $2 billion and the administration plan to spend $8 billion — the nation will still be spending $100 billion for health care, Meany said. "The difference between all national health insurance proposals is how that pie is divided up."
Under the health security bill, he said, the total cost will be "clearly visible," it will be used to the benefit of everyone and future costs can be controlled under a single budget.

Wholesale prices up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Increases in the costs of steel and new cars drove up overall wholesale prices by 1.8 per cent in October, the biggest monthly increase in a year, the Labor Department said today.
The increase in government's Wholesale Price Index, which translates into a double-digit annual rate of 21.6 per cent, soon will be felt by consumers in the retail prices they pay for goods and services.
For the past three months combined, prices have increased at a compounded annual rate of 13.5 per cent. The increase last month was the biggest since October, 1974, when wholesale prices jumped 2.9 per cent.
The prices of industrial commodities, which make up 70 per cent of all the items measured, were up a substantial 1.2 per cent — also the biggest increase in a year. This was caused primarily by price increases for steel and other metals, textile goods and the 1976 model automobiles.
Although prices paid to farmers fell in October, the costs of farm products and foods jumped 1.7 per cent, led by increases in the prices of leaf tobacco, fluid milk, live poultry and vegetables, the department said.

Buckland petition meeting set for Friday evening

A special meeting of Eighth District voters is scheduled for Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Bentley School, Hollister St., to consider a petition on a petition to extend district boundaries into the Buckland area for fire service.
Although Friday night's meeting is expected to be adjourned to Nov. 17, so that voting on the proposal could be by referendum on voting machines, those district voters who wish to discuss the pros and cons of the controversial issue are being urged by district officials to attend Friday night and voice their opinions.

Rockefeller bowed out to avoid party squabbles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller said today he decided not to be President Ford's running-mate in 1976 because he had come to Washington "to serve the country I love... I didn't come down to be caught up in party squabbles."
Rockefeller, at a nationally broadcast news conference three days after he announced his surprise decision not to run again, referred immediately in an opening statement to the conservative-liberal split that has wracked the party for more than a decade.
Rockefeller said that "a minority of a minority" of conservative Republicans opposed his place on a ticket. Rockefeller has been a sore point with the party's right wing since he opposed Sen. Barry Goldwater at the 1964 GOP national convention.
When asked what squabbles he was referring to, he said, "I think they're obvious to everybody."
Rockefeller said he came to Washington "to serve the country I love and to help in solving the problems that we face. But I didn't come down to be caught up in party squabbles that make it more difficult for the President at a time when the problems of the country require" his closest attention.
Rockefeller said the differences of opinion he had with Ford over federal aid to financially strapped New York City had nothing to do with his decision. He said Ford had not written off New York state in 1976 by his refusal to help New York.

Contest for deputy mayor erupts

JUDY KUEHNEL 644-1364
South Windsor Democratic conclaves met Wednesday night for five and a half hours at a closed meeting in an attempt to resolve the battle over the deputy mayor's spot on the Town Council.
Mrs. Sandra Bender, the highest vote getter in Tuesday's election, will serve as mayor.
But the second highest vote getter, Robert Myette, was battling for the position he says, "The people voted me into."
At a private meeting following the Democratic victory Tuesday night, Mrs. Bender announced that she wanted Edward Havens as her deputy rather than Myette.
Havens came in fourth with 2,767 votes following Michael Enes with 2,830. Myette was second with 2,863.
"I was really shocked," said Myette.
"The people supported me and I'll fight this thing to the end. To do anything different would be to make a mockery of their votes. And I won't do that."
Myette was asked to leave the closed meeting Wednesday night while the remaining Democratic conclaves hashed and rebashed the situation. Included in the discussion were Mrs. Bender, Cite Decker, David Cohen, Enes, and reportedly, former Mayor Robert Smith, and Democratic Town Chairman Thomas Moynihan.
At one point, Mrs. Bender reportedly was asked to leave the meeting while the talk continued.
According to Herald sources this morning, no decision was reached. Another meeting is set for Sunday night.

Bills to save NYC snagged in Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Efforts to save New York City from default are snagged in Congress, so legislation is advancing to let the city go bankrupt as painlessly as possible.
A House Judiciary subcommittee was working on a bill to provide the city to file for bankruptcy without many of the conditions President Ford prescribed when he said a week ago that he preferred bankruptcy to "bail out."
The strategy is to prepare the bankruptcy legislation as a backdrop in case a Democratic bill to provide billions in federal loan guarantees fails to become law. That bill faces antipathy in the House of Representatives and the Senate and a veto in the White House.
Under Ford's bankruptcy plan, a federal judge would have day to day control of New York's finances. He could close a hospital, rewrite a pension plan, end rent control.
But the House bankruptcy bill leaves "political and governmental powers" in the city's hands while the city is in bankruptcy and negotiating with unions and bondholders to delay debt payments and reduce pension plans to regain solvency.
Meantime, the Democratic bill to provide $7 billion in federal loan guarantees — the bill Ford threatens to veto — ran into new trouble. The House Ways and Means Committee balked at approving the removal of tax-exempt status from bonds guaranteed by the federal government.
If Ways and Means doesn't approve that section, the bill stands virtually no chance of clearing Congress.
In other developments:
— Gov. Hugh Carey said a source for a $150 million loan to the city had been found, so default, threatened for Nov. 17, appeared to be staved off once again. Dec. 1 is the new default day.
— Carey asked for a short-term $76 million Federal Reserve loan to keep four state agencies from defaulting on their bonds this month.

State considering action to halt rail removal

State officials are considering legal action to stop or delay the Penn Central Railroad from removing track along a 20-mile right-of-way from Manchester to Willimantic.

The state is working to determine whether it can afford to buy the track at its $1 million price tag, it was learned at a Wednesday State Capitol meeting on the controversial removal of rails along the abandoned line.

State Finance Commissioner Jay Tepper, who hosted the Wednesday meeting, said the state Department of Transportation has only $50 million to work with for all transit projects in the next four years.

The Providence & Worcester Railroad has expressed interest in the Manchester-to-Willimantic line and P&W President Robert Eder says he's willing to buy the track if the state buys the right-of-way.

The Department of Transportation had agreed to buy the right-of-way with expected federal funds, but state officials said they weren't interested in the rails.

Opinion
Bicentennial project

Everybody is proposing some project or program to get people more involved with the nation's Bicentennial celebration which will climax July 4, 1976.

While the Bicentennial marks the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, we should keep in mind that this challenge to King George's tyranny was neither the real beginning or the end of the struggle for human freedom.

The precedent was the Magna Carta and the struggle to refine, re-define and extend human freedom continues today.

Therefore, perhaps the most fitting way we might attempt to commemorate the Declaration of Independence and its defiant challenge to authoritarianism is to re-examine the state of human freedom in Manchester, in Connecticut and in the nation.

Now we are not expecting major changes or assaults on the entrenched and complacent government we have allowed to rise out of the ashes of that successful rebellion about two centuries ago.

What we are proposing is a questioning of the rules and regulations that have become inhibitions upon our personal freedoms.

Let's get into the Bicentennial spirit by challenging some of these petty tyrannies that exist in many forms.

For example, is the freedom of choice really fulfilled when a person has to register to vote as a party member or unaffiliated voter. Does party or nonaffiliation enhance

Justice William O. Douglas' lonely debate

TACOMA, Wash. — I caught a glimpse of Justice William O. Douglas on TV the other day, in his wheelchair, on his way to his Supreme Court duties. He seemed very frail, but gallant in his courage, as he told the old Justice Holmes story: Holmes and Brandeis on a street corner in Washington, the wind whipping a pretty girl's skirt around her knees, Brandeis going on in earnest conversation, the 90-year-old Holmes sighing, "Oh, to be 70 again." I took it as Douglas' way of pointing to the "Yankee from Olympus" who stayed on the court until a later age than his own:

I write this in Douglas country, in the shadow of Douglas' youth. A half-hour drive from here in Yakima, where this extraordinary man grew up and had his early life struggles before he heeded the call to "Go East, young man" and landed Columbia and Yale law schools and the corporate life of Wall Street. He brought his rugged honesty and his knowledge of corporation finance to the chairmanship of the Security Exchange Commission. Then he was one of the remarkable band of Roosevelt judges who turned the Supreme Court around, and became a militant mainstay of the liberal Warren Court, and has carried over into the Burger Court as its oldest member.

The tenacity with which he holds on to his court post, in the face of his partial paralysis, and the ups and downs of improvement and relapse, is one of the dramatic stories of court history.

Clearly Douglas wants his tenure on the Supreme Court to outlast Gerald Ford's in the White House. President Ford is damned in his eyes for a double reason. He inherited the Presidency from Nixon, and when he was in Congress he led the Nixon Administration effort to impeach Douglas. These would seem reason enough for Douglas' enmity. But in addition he seems convinced that the Justice Gerald Ford would pick to succeed him would be one more vote added to Nixon's four court appointees, to provide a five-judge majority for conservative decisions.

This is political reasoning, but it isn't the first time the judges have reasoned politically when they had to decide about retiring. Politics is never very far from the Supreme Court, from the time a President starts to pick a new judge right up to the time he presses way to another. In the case of Justice Douglas his refusal to retire just happens to be more nakedly political than usual.

But it is also something more. Douglas doesn't want to give up his self-image easily. He is frail, he must get physical therapy, he sits silently through the Supreme Court sessions when once he asked barbers questions from the bench. But he still sees himself as he once was — the daring young man on the flying Washington trapeze, defying the

Euthanasia case major precedent

Everyone wants what is best for Karen Anne Quinlan, the 21-year-old woman who has been lying in a coma in a New Jersey hospital for six months as the result of an apparently self-administered mixture of alcohol and drugs.

The court suit brought by her father, asking that he be permitted to turn off the respirator that is keeping her alive in a vegetative state, has attracted international attention and brought into highly emotional focus the question of how far modern medical science should be required to go to prolong life and, indeed, just what we mean by "life" and when it can be said to be ended.

Because Karen's doctors as well as other expert medical witnesses called in the suit have testified that there is virtually no hope that she will ever regain consciousness, let alone full health, and that her brain has probably been irreparably damaged, many people believe that the only humane thing is to employ the devices and, as her mother asks, let her die in dignity.

But everyone also wants what is best for society, and in this respect many fear that if the family's request is granted in this case, it will establish a precedent that will open the way to euthanasia — the putting to death of the incurably ill or injured — and from there, such horrors as the legal murder of the senile, the insane or anyone else adjudged to be unfit to live.

Others counter that there is a vast gulf between positive euthanasia — the deliberate killing of a person who would otherwise go on living, if only in purely biological sense — and the machine, and five others of the same 1937 series, are being retired and will be replaced with machines purchased earlier this year.

The six machines have been used in every election since 1937 and have accumulated voter counts ranging from 36,200 to 38,900.

The Connecticut State Library has furnished us with a clue on why the first Tuesday in November is Election Day in most of the nation.

The date was established for national elections 130 years ago — by an act of the 1845 Congress.

We can't help wondering about all the polls and all the comments and all the speculation concerning President Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, in their quest for the Republican nomination for president in 1976.

We can't believe people actually think that the Republicans would bypass Ford for Reagan or for anyone else.

We can't believe any political party would dump its incumbent president, especially since he has announced he will seek the nomination. We can't remember the last time the Republicans or Democrats didn't nominate an incumbent who wanted the nomination. Republican Calvin Coolidge and Democrat Lyndon Johnson announced unequivocally they were out of the running.

We have to believe that this on-going thing with Ford and Reagan is a public relations gimmick — to stimulate Republican interest at a low point since Watergate, and to build up Reagan, or some other far-right conservative, as the Republican candidate for vice president.

DON OAKLEY

Cloak and dagger by computer

WASHINGTON — It is said of one former Central Intelligence Agency operative involved in Watergate that if you asked him to find out for you what was printed on the front page of the New York Times on a given date, he would not go down to the newsstand and buy a copy.

Rather he would perch himself on the 12th story of a building — complete with disguise — and with a precision, highpowered camera and attachments, covertly photograph the first page of the paper being read by some man or woman in the park below.

One problem the CIA lives with is that it was founded, in part, from remnants of the World War II Office of Strategic Services. The OSS had a nucleus of professionals. It also attracted an unusually large number of men and women who developed their ideas of intelligence from TV spy stories and paperback thrillers.

Unfortunately, numbers of these dilettantes had high Ivy League connections and some influence with the members of the law firm of Wild Bill Donovan, the hero of OSS Intelligence was an exciting game.

The CIA has, over the years, slowly whittled down the number and influence of these holdovers, and their disciples in the next generation. Even today, the job is not complete.

RAY CROMLEY

Most of the illegal activities exposed in recent studies for which the CIA stands accused, are of little value — the esoteric poisons, the dart gun, the cloak and dagger spying. The payoff is not worth the cost.

The opening of mail, the shadowing of suspects, the listing of who attends meetings and who parties with whom, the interviewing of neighbors — is normally a waste of time. The exception is when you have sufficient evidence to be virtually certain of guilt and know almost precisely what you are looking for.

Modern intelligence, whether by the CIA or the FBI is a highly technical profession, similar to advanced scientific research.

Some 90 per cent of usable information gathered from open, unclassified sources.

By and large, spies are a vanishing breed in the American system of intelligence. The Russians, the Chinese, the North Koreans and other secretive societies still depend heavily on spies. The British have a sophisticated system.

But Americans now tend to concentrate their efforts on satellites, on complicated computer analysis of

Debate the issues

WASHINGTON — Predictably, President Ford has said no, he would not at this time support a constitutional amendment against mandatory busing for school desegregation.

I say predictably, because while Ford obviously thinks forced busing is an outrage he also can recognize a hot political potato when it is offered him. So he has taken refuge in that time-honored gimmick, the study.

This study will be made by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Justice Department, to ponder alternatives to school busing that would achieve "reasonable" desegregation and provide equal access to quality education. You'd better believe the study won't be completed before next year's presidential election.

In fact, both Republicans and Democrats would just as soon hear as little as possible about school busing during the next 11 months. It is not an issue either party can explore with much profit, for the simple reason that public opinion seems to be about evenly divided on whether equality can be achieved by judicial fiat.

That's too bad because the matter could stand a prompt airing in Congress, and let the presidential candidate all where they may. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., one of several legislators sponsoring amendments aimed at barring court orders to bus pupils, says he thinks the anti-busing people could win this one. Joe Flasher, a Washington lawyer and civil rights lawyer, says he doubts an anti-busing amendment could gain the required two-thirds majorities in the House and Senate.

Both Tower and Flasher probably are doing their arithmetic with their glands, but that's all right. It would be curious if the battle were fought out in Capitol Hill as soon as possible so the people, if necessary, could start making the final decision to ratify or not ratify through their state legislatures.

It seems to me that a properly worded amendment could take the racism out of busing simply by following the decision of the Supreme Court in the landmark Brown decision 21 years ago. The highest bench said then that a child could not be denied admission to a public school solely because of the color of his skin. Yet federal courts have increasingly felt obliged to measure the good faith of desegregating schools by the racial results of their programs.

When a pupil volunteers to endure a cross-town bus ride in order to attend a superior educational institution, that is "busing." When that same pupil is transported across a city to a school as bad as the school he can walk to, solely because of his race, that is "forced busing." And "forced busing" is just as unconstitutional as a court order requiring an auto mechanic or a bank vice president to work in a certain neighborhood.

In 1954, the Supreme Court observed that to separate black children from others solely on the basis of their race "generates a feeling of inferiority as to their status in a community that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone." But what about a black pupil who keeps hearing that a school is inferior if its enrollment is too black?

That, after all, is the issue: Whether education as well as justice should be color blind. And it says here that, election year or not, it is still one of Congress' duties to debate the issues.

Center Church annual bazaar Saturday

"Gingerbread Fair," the annual bazaar of Center Congregational Church, will take place Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the church, 11 Center St.

The fair will feature a variety of items made by members and friends of Center Church. Homemade baked goods and confections, preserves, aprons and decorative "homey" items will be available at the "Country Store."

There also will be a selection of plants, antique items, toys, used books and jewelry, plus gifts, knitted and Christmas items and a tag sale.

A large portion of the proceeds from the fair will be donated to CROP for use in the construction of a water resource project.

Mrs. Michael Markstein and Mrs. Brad Vale are chairmen of the event, which is open to the public.

Bid opening set for Nov. 17

Bids will be opened Nov. 17 in the Manchester Municipal Building for furnishing the highway department with three new trucks and the police department with a new highway striping machine.

The highway department is seeking a 1975 or 1976 dump truck of 13,000 to 15,000 pounds and two 1975 or 1976 half-ton pickups.

Being offered in trade on the dump truck is a 1971 Ford station wagon. Being offered in trade on the pickup trucks are two 1968 Dodge pickups.

Being offered in trade on the highway striping machine (as an alternate bid) is a 1969 line stripper.

There has been a tendency to gather so much marginal information it has been impossible to sort the wheat from the chaff. The file drawers of our intelligence agencies are filled with material which no one has time to look at.

An upgrading of the professionalism of the CIA would do much to remove the legitimate discontent voiced both by the White House and by Congress.

Legislators and counterintelligence have one talent in common: They're experts at passing him bills.

Election afterthoughts

It has occurred to many political observers that the "non-partisan" Manchester Property Owners' Association (MPOA) was caught with its partisanship showing in Tuesday's election and, in the process, lost most of its onetime clout.

For one thing, its executive board went on record in opposition to the school referendum question. It carried by a wide margin.

Then, several top MPOA officials publicly backed Republican candidates for the Board of Directors, including two former members of the MPOA executive board — one of them a former MPOA president.

The two former MPOA officials ran 10th and 11th in a field of 12.

It appears that attempts to make Buckland Commons and the Buckland Firehouse campaign issues (at the expense of the Democrats) didn't work out too well.

The Democrats carried all voting districts in the North End — District 1, Buckland School; District 2, Robertson School; and District 7, Waddell School.

Actually, the Democrats won in nine districts and the Republicans in only one — District 5, Buckley School. Vivian Ferguson, the top Republican vote-getter, won not only in District 5 but in District 10, Manchester High School, as well. In District 10, she was second high among all 12 candidates, losing out only to Democrat Matt Moriarty Jr., 62 to 62.

Moriarty, the high vote-getter for the Board of Directors and expected to become Manchester mayor Nov. 17, when the board meets to organize, was making his first run at political office Tuesday.

When he was named a director in February 1974, it was to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Anthony Pietrantonio, also a Democrat. He had been campaign manager for Democrat Robert Price in the 1972 election campaign.

Moriarty, 34, will be the youngest Manchester mayor since the late Aaron Cook filled the post when he was first selected under a previous form of government.

SOL R. COHEN

Republican Nathan Agostinelli was 36 when he became mayor in 1966.

The registrar's office wants to be contacted by the gentleman caught in a voting machine in District 2, Robertson School, Tuesday, when the mechanism jammed. He left without revealing his name.

The machine, and five others of the same 1937 series, are being retired and will be replaced with machines purchased earlier this year.

The six machines have been used in every election since 1937 and have accumulated voter counts ranging from 36,200 to 38,900.

Two 12-year-old Manchester boys, referred to juvenile authorities in connection with vandalism at a warehouse on Hilliard St. Several windows were broken Wednesday, police said.

Carl J. Lamphere, 18, and Kenneth Thompson Jr., 16, both of Quincy, Mass., resident. Both were to be presented in Common Pleas Court 19, Stafford, today.

State Police said the arrest involved the report of a car taken from a Quincy, Mass., resident. Both were to be presented in Common Pleas Court 19, Stafford, today.

Penalty kicks was the only way a winner could be decided as the clubs battled to a 3-3 stalemate after 60 minutes of regulation time and 4-4 after 30 more minutes of two five-minute overtime periods and two 10-minute sudden death sessions.

Darkness nearly engulfed Quinnipiac College's field situated in Sleeping Giant State Park before boots by seldom used senior Carl Stafford, Bill Meier and sophomore Scott Hyde outdistanced penalty kicks by Hamden's Marco Pascale and Larry Coassin. Dragon fullback John Heine was selected by Coach Valerio Moretti to take the final kick but his drive went wide left past the goal lining a jubilant Manchester celebration at midfield.

"There's not much more that can be seen in a soccer game," elated Tribe Coach Dick Danielson remarked. "It wasn't great soccer but it was exciting. The game just went back and forth."

Danielson acknowledged his club harked on penalty kicks Tuesday and as circumstances prevailed the work proved productive. The 29-year veteran stated his use of Stafford could've been second guessed but his hunch paid off. "Carl knows he's not fast enough to play but he's been working on penalty kicks all season and he can really blast them—almost as hard as Bruce (Ballard)." The chunky bespectacled Stafford stepped up after Ballard had sent his shot over the net and his blistering drive was too much for Hamden's Chuck Molloy to handle.

Just before Stafford's successful try, Hamden's Dean Walsh saw his attempt stopped by second-string goalie Dave Koski, who was specifically inserted for the series of five alternating kicks. Walsh's blast hit the right post and was ricocheting into the net but Koski got over and got his hands on it enought to direct it out. "That save was the key, Danielson insisted, "Koski was in there because his reaction time is quicker than (Brian) Beggs. I don't know how he got over there but he did."

Hamden regained the momentum, with it all tied at 6-6. Hyde stepped up and with his unconventional method of using the outside part of his foot to shoot, drilled a grounder to the right corner with a guessing Molloy heading in the other direction. Heine missed and this exciting and thrilling tilt was history.

The victory moves 9-5-2 Manchester, which according to tournament regulations assumes the top ranking (starting off 23rd ranked), to Saturday's quarterfinals against Ridgefield High, a 1-0 upset winner over Simsbury at a site and time to be determined. Hamden, District League champs, bows out with a 19-1 mark. Going into the game, the Dragons had yielded just six goals.

Hamden, much quicker of the two clubs, jumped off to an early 2-0 lead and it looked like it was going to be a runaway. Pascale got the first

Among the recent signed entries received by Will Hadden, general chairman for the Cedars, was one from Bill Turley of West Hartford, a standout with the Bucknell University cross country squad this fall and a young man who just missed making the prize list last November with a 26th placement.

Bailey Rd. home to the fire about 700 feet away. Hutchinson said there were no cars or people around when they got there. He said, "The few who arrived immediately began breaking windows and doors and yelling to see if anyone was in the house." He said the people, cars and trucks didn't arrive until after the fire trucks did. Armstrong said only one call about the fire was received by the Willimantic Dispatch Center, no area station received calls even though the fire could be seen from as far away as the University of Connecticut. He said the extent of the damage was "totally uncalculated." Armstrong said, "All we can hope for now is that one or two citizens will be aroused and might make a call when and if they spot a fire."

The house was unoccupied at the time of the fire. No injuries were reported but two cats died in the blaze. The home was being rented by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sobol, both at work at the time of the blaze. It has been owned by Gulf Western and Mal Tool for four years. The state fire marshal's office said there is no evidence of arson. They believe the fire began on the porch but don't know why. Local fire marshal Joseph Comerford could not be reached for comment.

NYC bankruptcy bill clears subcommittee
WASHINGTON (UPI)—A House subcommittee has approved a bill to allow New York City to declare bankruptcy, renegotiate $12.3 billion in debts, rewrite labor and pension contracts and seek to live within its revenues. The bill now appears more likely to become law than the multi-billion dollar loan guarantees sought by the city to avert default. A new obstacle arose Thursday when the AFL-CIO said it could not support a loan guarantee bill which gives Treasury Secretary William E. Simon power to compel the city to rewrite labor contracts. House Speaker Carl Albert said he couldn't pass the loan guarantee. "We've got problems — lots of problems," he told reporters. Under the bankruptcy bill, the city would be required to win the approval of two-thirds of its 200,000 bond holders for new terms — giving delayed and reduced payment on billions in debts at lower interest rates. The city also would have to renegotiate labor and pension agreements and come up with a plan for living within revenues. A federal judge would then decide if the new arrangements were fair and feasible. New York Gov. Hugh Carey, a

President to reaffirm international policy

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Ford has decided he must speak out to insure Russia and other nations do not believe his firing of Defense Secretary James Schlesinger and his curtailing Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's powers mean a change in U.S. national security policy, White House officials said today. Ford planned to send the message to Moscow, Peking and other points in a speech in Boston. Ford appeared in Springfield, Mass., at the 21st annual convention of the New England Society of Newspaper Editors at midday. The speech covered national security policy from defense and Strategic Arms Limitation talks with Russia, to defense of his military budget proposals, to the Middle East peace-making effort and America's commitments to its allies, the sources said. Ford does not want neither America's allies nor its possible foes to get the idea that the firing of Schlesinger means the administration will stand for the United States being anything less than the most powerful nation on earth, the sources said. Schlesinger is regarded in Washington as a "hard-liner" against defense cuts and on disarmament negotiations with Moscow. The sources said Ford also wanted to make sure his stripping Kissinger of his dual office as the presidential national security affairs adviser has not been interpreted as lessening the secretary's role as the prime architect of U.S. foreign policy. Ford replaced Schlesinger, a man whose brains he respected but whose professional manner irritated him, with Donald Rumsfeld, formerly the President's chief of staff. The Boston speech was to be delivered to the 51st annual conference of the New England Council, the regional cooperation group led by the governors of the six states of the area. Ford also was taking part, after the speech, in three Republican party fund-raising events.

Friend declines to testify

NEWINGTON (UPI)—A federal grand jury will hear evidence next week in the Bridgeport jail scandal, a lawyer for promoter David Friend said today in a bid to block his client from testifying before the Connecticut Commission on Special Revenue. Friend was made aware by commission Chairman Paul J. Silvergleid that he could be granted immunity and forced to testify although the evidence he might provide would not be used against him. The onetime Hollywood, Fla., banker was called to the stand and commission invoked his right to remain silent as Friend himself did and the commission recessed for 10 minutes. The commission began a round of hearings Thursday into the financing of the fronton and Friend was scheduled to be the leadoff witness. The state issued a grand jury sitting in the matter consisting of Superior Court Judge Harold M. Mulvey. The gaming panel is hearing evidence to determine if Friend's license for the jai alai arena in Bridgeport should be revoked. His counsel, Jacob Zeldes, said Friend was to be a witness before a United States grand jury conducted by the Organized Crime and Racketeering Division of the Department of Justice for Hartford Nov. 12, 1975. He is under all these circumstances clearly a target of investigation. "Mr. Chairman, the same act of the General Assembly which established this commission said crystal clear that all agencies created by the General Assembly must recognize privileges." Asking Friend to testify before the commission is "flagrantly in violation of the principles set forth by the Supreme Court of the United States," Zeldes said. Friend, 38, head of Connecticut Sports Enterprises, was sworn in Thursday to testify before the state Special Revenue Commission, but it was late and he was excused until today's session. The stocky, Hollywood, Fla., promoter said by himself in a corner of the hearing room Thursday, walking up to his lawyer's desk to whisper in his ear when the testimony concerned him personally. The commission is considering revoking CSE's gambling permit because of the scandal. Meantime, two Cleveland, Ohio, promoters have shown an interest in getting the permit to operate the fronton, due to open in less than two weeks. Friend allegedly misrepresented CSE's finances to banks that loaned it $500,000 and paid $200,000 cash to the late national and state Democratic Chairman John M. Bailey for help in obtaining the gaming permit.

Indian high court rules in favor of Mrs. Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today won a marathon legal battle that was threatening her leadership of the nation. India's highest judicial tribunal, the Supreme Court, unanimously upheld her 1971 election to Parliament and set aside a high court ruling that convicted her of election malpractices. "Sometimes we might lose sometimes we may win," Mrs. Gandhi told a jubilant crowd of well-wishers. "We may fall down, but we should always try to get up and go forward." The court ruling upheld legislation passed by Parliament that made her immune—retroactively—from the election fraud charges. That session was boycotted by opposition members. A five-judge bench of the Supreme Court, chaired by Chief Justice Ajit Nath Ray, overruled the high court verdict unseating her from Parliament. At the same time, it removed a six-year ban imposed by the high court barring her from fighting an election for six years.
