Allied leaders confident of recovery

RAMBOUILLET, France (UPI) — President Ford said today he and the leaders of five allied industrial nations have agreed on measures to bolster the world's sagging economy and are confident of "full recovery" from the worst recession in 40 years.

Winding up three days of economic summit talks in the historic Rambouillet castle, Ford and the leaders of France, West Germany, Britain, Japan and Italy agreed that the twin ills of recession and inflation are being cured.

Ford said the leaders had "reaffirmed our mutual confidence in a sustained and full recovery from the deepest recession since the 1930s." "As leaders of major democratic nations," he said, "we reached substantial agreement on a number of issues concerning monetary policy, trade, energy and our relations with the developing world." The leaders were capping their meetings in the rainy French countryside with a joint declaration giving details of the agreements, including preliminary agreement on the thorniest problem — American-French disputes over monetary exchange rates.

"Perhaps our most important accomplishment over the past several days has been our recognition that the objective of sustained, stable economic growth will be facilitated by our common effort," Ford said. Similar closing statements were made at the ceremony by his summit partners, French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain, Takeo Miki of Japan and Aldo Moro of Italy.

Ford paid tribute to his colleagues for "the spirit of goodwill and friendship" they demonstrated in the meeting.

"In our sessions, we have covered the range of economic issues of concern to the industrialized world and challenging to our democratic society," he said.

"These meetings have been rewarding in important ways... most importantly, they reaffirmed our mutual confidence in a sustained and full recovery from the deepest recession since the 1930s."

The summit leaders met for about three hours this morning, then broke for a of Rambouillet Mayor Jacqueline Thome-Patenotre.

The leaders dispersed immediately after reading their statements. Ford was expected back in Washington late this afternoon.

Teachers continue strike

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Negotiators for striking teachers were ordered back to jail today and other union officials were charged with contempt after the educators began the fifth day of their walkout.

There was a chance, however, that the jailings could be called off if the 1,200 members of the New Haven Federation of Teachers approved the school board's latest contract offer at a meeting today.

Superior Court Judge George A. Saden ordered the union's negotiating team returned to jail and charged the others with contempt after ruling the union was not bargaining in good faith.

Teachers' spokesmen said it was the school board which had not bargained in good faith, making a contract offer only after teachers had left a mass rally earlier today and headed for the picket lines.

Saden had jailed the negotiators Friday and released them Saturday after they promised to urge the teachers to return to work today. He also threatened to jail any teacher who did not show up for work today.

It was not known whether the union's negotiating team planned to recommend acceptance or rejection of the pact.

The Federation met in West Haven early today and voted to return to the picket lines instead of classrooms.

Union spokesmen said an agreement was reached on the length of the contract — the union wanted two years and the board wanted three — but there was no word on the weightier financial issues.

Saden said Sunday any teacher who continues to strike faces a contempt citation and will go to jail. Saden, who issued an order against the strike a week ago, spoke after Frank Carrano, president of the striking New Haven Federation of Teachers, said the strike would end only if the board of education showed it was bargaining in "good faith."

"Good faith has nothing whatsoever to do with the order I issued and under which Mr. Carrano and the other union leaders were released last Friday," Saden said. "As far as I'm concerned the strike is dead."

Saden allowed 12 union leaders jailed Friday to leave the same day after they promised they would return to work themselves and would urge their colleagues to go back to their jobs.

Matt Borenstein, a spokesman for the teachers, said Sunday teachers would go back only if there was a "reasonable possibility of a contract."

Borenstein said he understood about 200 subpoenas were prepared in case teachers failed to return to work. Of the 1,200 teachers in the system, an estimated 800 to 925 were involved in the walkout last week.

Town directors take oaths tonight

Manchester's 1975-77 Board of Directors will be sworn into office tonight and will conduct its first business meeting Tuesday.

Tonight's ceremonies are at 8 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center, Myrtle and Linden Sts., with Chief Justice Charles S. House of the State Supreme Court delivering the main address.

Tuesday's business meeting also is at 8 p.m. However, it will be in the Municipal Building Hearing Room.

Administering the oath of office tonight to the nine directors will be Judge of Probate William FitzGerald, And, administering the oath of office to those three Board of Education members elected to 1975-78 terms will be State Sen. David Barry.

Immediately following the ceremonies, the Board of Directors and the Board of Education will conduct brief organizational meetings — to elect top officials for the new term.

Matt Moriarty Jr., top vote-getter for the Board of Directors, is expected to be named Manchester mayor and chairman of the board. John Thompson, mayor for the past four years, is expected to be named deputy mayor. Pascal Prignano, currently deputy mayor, is expected to be named secretary.

The Board of Education is expected to re-elect Allan Thomas its chairman and John Yavis Jr. its secretary.

All directors and school board members to be sworn in tonight are incumbents. The Board of Directors and the Board of Education continue to be controlled 6 to 2 by the Democrats.

Directors to be sworn in tonight are Democrats Moriarty, Thompson, Prignano, Phyllis Jackson, Robert

Price and Jack Goldberg and Republicans Vivian Ferguson, Paul Willhite and Carl Zinsser.

School board members to be sworn in are Democrats Yavis and Eleanor Coltman and Republican Earl Odom.

Refreshments served by the senior citizens will follow the ceremonies.

Eighth District voting today on referendum

Eighth District residents who are registered voters and who have resided in the district for at least three months are voting today on a proposal to extend district lines into the Buckland area.

The area is under the jurisdiction of the Town Fire District and pays taxes to it. However, it is being serviced by the District Fire Department, under a $250-per-call contract it has with the Town Fire Department.

The request for expansion comes from Buckland area property owners — in a petition signed by more than 50 per cent of the area's property owners.

District officials contend Public Act 200 of the 1963 General Assembly gives them the right to extend their boundaries into the area. Town officials contend the 1947 town charter supercedes the special act and requires Town of Manchester permission for the expansion. They have said they won't accept an expansion vote as legal.

Voting is until 8 p.m. in the District Firehouse, Main and Hilliard Sts., with Sedrick Straughan the moderator.

At 7 p.m., the district board of directors is conducting its regular monthly meeting — expected to be recessed by 8 p.m., to learn the results of the vote.

Reagan may announce Thursday

By IRA R. ALLEN
United Press International
Last week it was George Wallace making the formal announcement of a long-expected presidential candidacy. This week it may well be Ronald Reagan.

Reagan, who spoke in Oklahoma and Illinois during the weekend, said he would make an important announcement in Washington Thursday, presumably his decision whether to challenge President Ford for the Republican presidential nomination.

In his weekend speeches, the former California governor said, among other things, he would be willing to have a black or a woman as a running mate although he himself would not accept the vice presidential nomination.

He also said it is time to have a woman Supreme Court justice, although the prime requisite for a place on the court should be quality rather than sex.

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, former Treasury Secretary John Connally and Commerce Secretary-designate Elliot Richardson also were speaking out on GOP politics, but most of the political action was by and among Democrats.

Wallace, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," said that if elected president he would propose a constitutional amendment to let people choose where to send their children to school.

He also would not rule out a third party candidacy, said he is taking royalties from campaign merchandise bearing his likeness because he needs the money to pay medical bills, and said he would do most of his campaigning by radio and television.

The last of five Democratic candidate gatherings held across the country by liberals ended Sunday in Baltimore. The six candidates who attended had nothing bad to say about one another — just about Ford administration economics.

In terms of emotional appeal, Fred Harris of Oklahoma was the most popular, as he has been at previous such meetings. But most of the hard political talk centered on Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona and Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana who seemed to be the practical favorites.

GOP leader claims new taxes stall economic recovery

HARTFORD (UPI) — State Republican Chairman Fred Biebel says new taxes are stalling Connecticut's economic recovery and that Gov. Ella T. Grasso should make serious attempts to cut state spending.

"All we are getting from the governor's office is a series of self-serving statements deploring the state's fiscal situation and warning ominously of higher taxes, toll rates and other state fees," Biebel said Sunday.

Biebel said the sales tax and high motor vehicle fees are a direct burden on the people while the revived dividends tax is a first step toward a state income tax.

Billion dollar tax plan before New York assembly

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Gov. Hugh Carey's plan for the financial rescue of New York City and the state still faces its biggest problem in the state legislature, whose members must consider more than $1 billion in new state and city taxes.

President Ford reportedly is satisfied with the Democratic governor's plan to balance the state budget and has dropped his opposition to federal aid to keep the city solvent. But the mammoth tax package has drawn opposition from Republicans in the legislature.

Before they recessed their emergency session for the weekend, the lawmakers approved a plan to allow New York City to delay repayment of $1.6 billion of its debt principal and narrowly beat a deadline for keeping Yonkers, the state's fourth largest city, from going broke.

They also approved an $80 million emergency appropriation to keep the state's Housing Finance Agency from collapsing.

But the toughest parts of Carey's financial rescue package — $872 million in new state taxes and $200 million more from city residents — are yet to come: a freeze on state workers' salaries, local tax increases of more than $400 million and a penny increase in the current four-cent state sales tax coupled to an income tax credit for persons making less than $20,000.

The governor also has proposed a one-cent hike in the city's four-cent sales tax. Together with the state increase, the proposals would bring the sales levy in the nation's largest city to 10 per cent.

In Washington, the House takes up a bill today to provide $4 billion in loan guarantees, with a vote expected Tuesday. A weekend compromise reached by Banking Committee chairman Henry Reuss, D-Wis., and House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona was expected to expedite passage and may remove whatever remains of a veto threat.

Carey's fiscal advisers say failure to raise state taxes will push the state $1.7 billion into the red within 17 months. Even with the taxes, they say, it will be necessary to trim state spending by $400 million.

In New York, Mayor Abraham Beame Sunday named John Zuccotti, 37, chairman of the City Planning Commission and one of Beame's closest advisers, to the No. 2 job of First Deputy Mayor.

James E. Cavanagh, a 37-year city employee who announced his retirement from the post during the weekend, had been reported under strong pressure to step down from officials overseeing the city's fiscal reorganization.

Now it is official

Francis J. Conti now has the official title of Manchester's chief building inspector but his duties haven't changed. He had been acting chief since the first of July and had assumed most of the duties about a year ago. Conti, who finished first among the 12 finalists for the post, succeeds Thomas Monahan, who retired in July. Originally, 32 applicants sought the job. (Herald photo by Dunn)

'Ballotese' baffles unsuspecting voters

Voters in communities across the country were confronted with all kinds of issues on Nov. 4, as they are every Election Day. The following, taken from the ballot in one small midwestern city, was not untypical:

"Shall the charter amendment as proposed by Ordinance No. 1975-18 approved by the Blank City Council, September 3, 1975, to amend existing Sections 3.14, 4.04, 4.05, 5.01, 6.01, 7.01, 7.02, 7.03, 9.01, 9.02, 10.01, 10.02, and 10.04, enacting new Sections 2.01, 5.01, 10.01, 10.02, 11.01, 11.02, 11.03, 12.01, 12.02, and 12.03, repealing existing Sections 4.06, 8.01 and 8.02, and renumbering existing and new sections incidental thereto, to provide for the appointment and removal by majority vote of Council of a city manager, who will assume office on January 1, 1978, be adopted?"

This particular issue, which was one of nearly a dozen similarly phrased, was defeated by the voters of "Blank City." There is no way of telling how many rejected it on its merits and how many were simply dazed by all the verbiage between the "Shall" and the "be adopted" and, uncertain just what it was they were being asked to decide, followed the old unwitting adage: "When in doubt, vote no."

Now there are probably any number of good reasons for this kind of "ballotese" which is necessary. One can be pardoned, however, for sometimes suspecting that the legal mind's fondness for mumbo-jumbo is not greatly different from that of the jungle witch doctor.

Lawyers never use one word where three will do. A person's will does not merely give his worldly goods to his heirs but "gives, bequeaths and devises." Like the witch doctor's magical incantation, unless the legal language is precisely so and exactly like that used from time immemorial, it isn't any good.

But would it not be possible to use common sense and strive for a little more clarity on our ballots? Something like this:

"Shall Blank City adopt a city manager form of government? The city manager would assume office on January 1, 1978 and be subject to appointment and removal by majority vote of Council."

Then below: "This charter amendment, proposed by Ordinance No. 1975-18 and approved by the Blank City Council, September 3, 1975, would amend existing Sections..." and so on.

Actually, this example is not bad at all. It is a model of simplicity compared to some involving matters like the issuance of bonds or the amendment of state constitutions. Issues have been known to be framed (could it be deliberately?) so that a negative vote is really a vote in favor, or vice versa.

Little wonder that there is such widespread distrust of government and politicians and so much voter apathy.

In aid of city revenue

The financial plight of New York and a few other large cities to one side, America's cities are, in the aggregate, making ends meet.

According to U.S. Census Bureau data, municipalities took in a total of $52.8 billion in fiscal 1974, an increase of 9 per cent over the previous year. Expenditures totalled $52.2 billion, an 8.6 per cent increase.

A growing proportion of city revenue is coming from the federal and state governments, however, in the form of grants-in-aid and shared taxes. Federal support rose from 3.5 per cent to 12.4 per cent of general revenue in fiscal '74 and state aid went up from 17.3 to 23.7 per cent.

In other words, well over a third of all municipal revenue that year was not generated by the cities themselves.

A reflection of this is the fact that, while property taxation continues to be the single most important source of city income, as a percentage of total revenues it declined from 41.2 to 27.7 per cent.

OPEN FORUM

Reporting criticized

This letter is in response to Sol R. Cohen's election aftermath that appeared in The Manchester Evening Herald Thursday, Nov. 6. If Mr. Cohen would report town meetings as he reports his co-called "afterthoughts" to the people, Manchester would be treated to all of the news, rather than just what he feels is important to himself.

In response to his reference that my campaign was supported by the MPOA is completely erroneous. If a private citizen cannot write letters to the editor, regardless of their affiliation to any organization, then we as residents of Manchester are going to be renounced because we belong to the Masons, Knights of Columbus, Rotary Club, Lions or whatever organization we are a member of or former member. In a way did the MPOA back my candidacy, or did they lose their non-partisan role in being the watch dog on town government affairs.

Mr. Cohen also failed to mention the number of referendum questions that have not passed because of the MPOA's firm stand on letting the people of Manchester know the facts on the issue being presented to them. It is too bad that Mr. Cohen has to see fit to use his column for grinding an axe towards an organization that tried to present facts on all issues that are important to the people of the town.

Here's hoping Mr. Cohen will stick to reporting all those important happenings around his house and leave town news to the other reporters who know how to report it. Harry W. Reinhorn 200 Spring St. Manchester

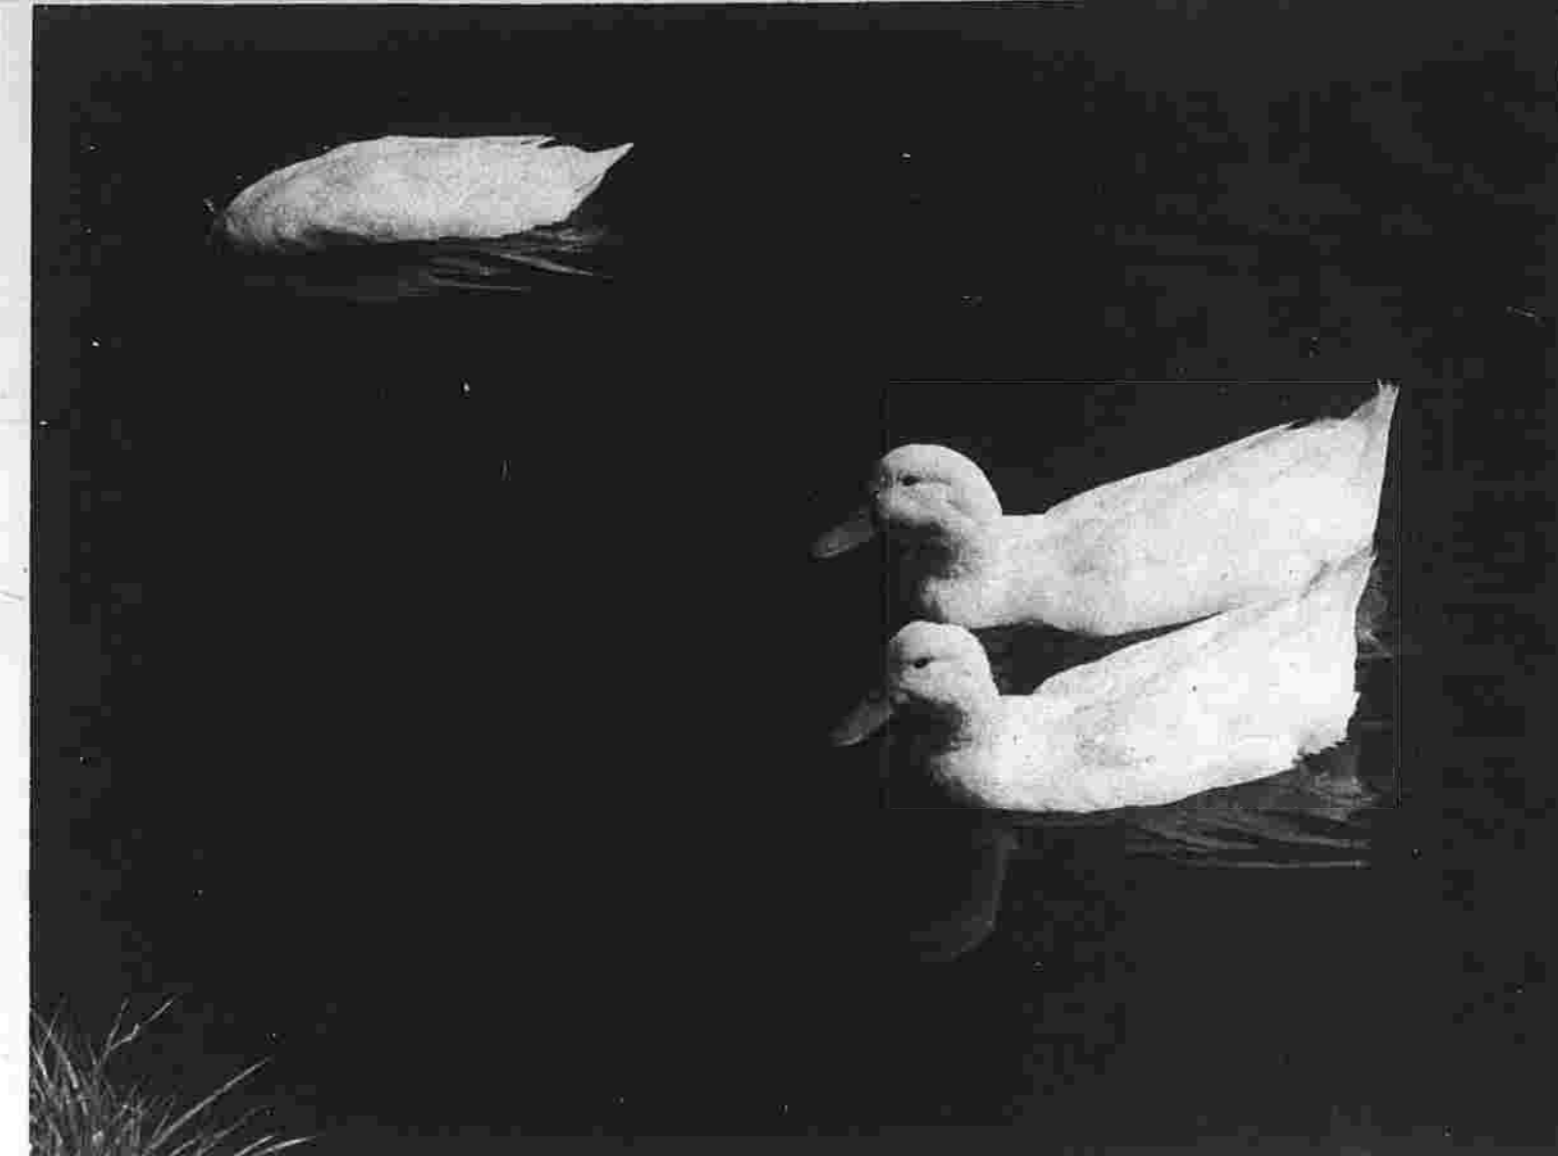

Thanks backers

To the editor: I would like to thank all of the people that worked so hard on my campaign for re-election to the Board of Directors.

As all candidates know, that without the people who participate either by folding brochures, passing out material, or contributing financial support, no candidate would ever obtain his or her goal.

I further would like to thank all of the people that voted for me. To them and all of the people of Manchester, I pledge that I will work to the best of my ability to make Manchester a better town for all.

Yours truly, Carl A. Zisser, director 750 Main St. Manchester

Sadism — masochism journalism

NEW YORK CITY — I should hate to be a subject — or object — of Bernard Collier's malicious eye and ear, but I found myself riveted to his account of his interviews with some luckless members of the Washington press corps in his "Hope And Fear in Washington: The Early 1970s: The Washington Press Corps" (Dial). I felt like a baryonyx chicken, and was fascinated by a snake, and was thankful that the fates had not brought Collier closer home to New York.

This is the final fruit and flowering of the subjective "new journalism" that started so bravely with Tom Wolfe and Norman Mailer and the activist "participatory" journalists of the late '50s and early '60s. Collier has given us a "Fleurs du Mal" without Baudelaire's poetry, but nonetheless with a hothouse flush on the blooms, not of any evil but of unwitting self-revelation on the part of those who were unwary enough to say yes to him.

He lines up his gallery of portraits in acid — among them Jack Anderson, Sally Quinn, Ben Bradlee, Dan Rather, "Johnny" Apple, Marvin and Sander Vanocur, Douglas Kiker, "Scotty" Reston, Clark Mollenhoff, Eileen Shanahan, Carl Rowan, Eric Sevareid, Bob Woodward and Eric

MAX LERNER

Bernstein. He also has a few who get off easy, like Court Jewry — Helen Thomas, Bernard Kalb, and (perhaps because he was dying) Stewart Alsop.

Not all of them are gods and goddesses of the new media elite, but most have become personalities to their readers, and a few are stars.

The fascination — and horror — comes from seeing them in psychological undress, seduced into telling more than they wanted to and more than they thought they were telling.

We learn about their bank accounts, tax returns and lecture fees, about whom they do or don't sleep with, both outside and inside marriage. We hear the scatalogical and sexual language they burst out with, we are told of the number of girls they date, what their divorced wives were like and what illness they suffered from how they made fools of themselves or were made fools of, about how they are treated in the hospital, how they eat at night and stuff into it, how they eat at night and vomit in the morning, whether they pick up lunch checks, how they take success or failure, how their clothes and shoes look, what gestures they make when they talk and what it means when their eyes roam around a restaurant.

Nothing lethal is left out — not only what considered words the hapless creatures utter but also their random unguarded ones. We soon know more about them than we want to know.

It has a little in it of Tom Wolfe pitilessly dissecting Leonard Bernstein's "radical chic" party, but without Wolfe's sure flair for its bearing on political struggle and social theory. But mostly it seems to derive from the total encounter movement, which has now pretty much played out, whether at Esalen or elsewhere.

It is as if Collier had read Fritz Perls' "Out of the Garbage Pail" and had put his targets on the Perls "hot seat" to enact their wrestlings with dream and reality. What they omit in their little psychodramas Collier supplies by prodding and hectoring them while they write in whatever circle of hell or limbo he has consigned them to.

He doesn't spare himself, either. In fact, his self-revelations fall somewhere between abject confession (both on sexual and business failures) and spoofing (hilarity on how he tried out for a national TV news program). The Collier brew gives us heady whiffs at one of sadism and masochism, where gall meets wormwood. Is this where the "New Journalism" was all along headed for — to become S/M Journalism?

Collier uses "Hope and Fear" in his title. But shouldn't it have been (if the title had not already been pre-empted) "Fear and Loathing in Washington"? It is a convulsive spectator sport he offers us, a literary Rollerball.

His own values emerge if you look hard for them — that every journalist's job is a prison, although sometimes a gilded one; that few or none of us are totally honest, either with our audience or with ourselves; that we have been betrayed by William James' "Bitch Goddess" Success, who turns out to be a consuming female Moloch. There is just enough validity in all this to give the book a dark vein of terror.

He seems to have a nostalgia for the old newspaperman's craft, which flourished in his days on the New York Herald Tribune. But surely that craft was never like this. Nor is the way back to it the mud and blood-bespattered one that Collier takes.

D.C. may soon qualify as a modern Gomorrah

ANDREW TULLY

WASHINGTON — I am somewhat cheered by intelligence seeping down from the more exquisite strata of Washington life which indicates that the nation's capital may soon be mentioned in the same breath as Broken Leg, Utah, as a fun city.

Washington's society reporters, a tough and observant lot, lately have been exclaiming in print over the ring-a-ding quality of capital parties, suggesting that with a little push here and there the capital might well qualify as a modern Gomorrah.

Conversation at high-level routs has been described as entrancing and females are wearing all the latest get-ups. But I don't know. It is generally agreed that the country is in sore need of an interlude of reconciliation after Watergate, and the average Washington soiree — while perhaps every bit as soigne as a kaffee klatch in Prairie City, Iowa — is not doing its bit in the binding-up-of-wounds department. I don't know whether they're serving cheaper booze these days, but for some reason an awful lot of cutting remarks are being uttered.

Supporters of James Schlesinger, deposed as Secretary of Defense, lay the blame on Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, and get even by releasing slurring remarks for immediate release without attribution.

For example, I was surprised, and impressed, by a low-voiced crack attributed to Mrs. Betty Ford about an ensemble sported by Mrs. Ethel Kennedy at a White House reception. Mrs. Kennedy reportedly looked splendid in a brand-new Dior outfit which drew gasps from other guests. But not, apparently, from the First Lady. A society spy claims that when Mrs. Ford was asked to comment on Mrs. Kennedy's garb she delivered one of the season's most artful put-downs.

"Really," was her reported reply. "I didn't notice what she was wearing." Over the centuries, such a remark has always ranked as the unkindest cut of all — female division. Women, bless their hearts, do not care what other women say about their attire so long as they say something. To have another female claim she didn't notice what another female was wearing is tantamount to a declaration of war. Unless my history is faulty, such a snub once led to a duel between two ladies-in-waiting in Catherine the Great's Russian Imperial Court. I have checked out, as unfounded, a report that Ethel Kennedy since has been seen in the shop of an elegant gunsmith, fondling silver-plated derringers, but for a fact the incident is not likely to contribute to a detente between the Fords and Kennedys. Meanwhile, I also see by the papers that what passes for society in this Tootsie Roll factory has rejected former California Gov. Reagan because he occasionally nibbles on a peanut butter and jelly sandwich.

The impression given by assorted spokesmen, some of them Republicans, is that Reagan's gustatory tastes make him ineligible for a place above the salt. "What is he, anyway?" asked one GOP member between mouthfuls of pate de foie gras, "some kind of a deloused Nixon?"

A YGOP resolution said, "Since the state Department of Environmental Protection has final approval of septic and water systems, the PZC should give its approval at this time. This approval should be contingent upon the state's approval of sanitary and water system.

"Arrowhead Ridge will be an asset to the town."

The Police will assist with traffic control this year.

Mrs. David Holcomb and Rev. Newell Curtis are co-chairmen of the Manchester Bicentennial Committee on Religious Observances and Liaison with MACC and the Bicentennial Committee.

The two remaining Bicentennial religious observances will be The House of Angels and Saints.

The convalescent home sub-committee of the Division of Special Ministries held a townwide program for visitors to shut-ins and convalescent homes. Nov. 9 John Bossidy, deacon at St. Bridget's shared some of his thoughts and experiences as a visitor to convalescent homes as a "place where angels and saints live" and went on to say, "They don't have wings. Some don't even have legs. Some have legs but cannot walk; have eyes and cannot see. So many pure and sinless people live here in the future of our country based on God and ever have. And although they suffer from many different afflictions, they have one disease in common — the disease of loneliness."

"The purpose of visitation is to share a few moments of the day God has given us touching those who need us. If you ever want to touch God, touch one of His children in a convalescent home — the house of angels and saints."

Edward Batson, a patient of Meadows who at 88 has made 27 beautiful traps, said, "When you keep busy, you don't feel so bad." Mr. Batson's son was a regular visitor but is now living in Japan.

Another Meadows resident, Mrs. Anna Perrilli, said, "It means a heck of a lot to have someone visit you." Her children all live down South. She has six grandchildren but has never seen them.

Part of the companionable sharing was the singing led by Bossidy and Cheryl Cantrell and some really delightful songs by 78 year old Irvn Kirpens who shared some of his own compositions much to everyone's pleasure. Ideas developed during the sharing sessions include plans to provide gifts for over 300 patients who will not be remembered at Christmas, hopes for interesting more people in becoming visitors and ways of educating the community to the unusually high number of convalescent home patients resident in Manchester. Barbara Baker, chairman of Special Ministries, summed up the day by saying, "We'll be doing this again. It was much too good not to continue."

IT'S OUR POLICY

By Ray Tanguay, C.I.U. CERTIFIED INSURANCE CONSULTANT

The National Safety Council reports that alcohol is a major element in almost all motor vehicle accidents in the U.S. And it's a prime factor in many fatal accidents.

Accordingly, the insurance industry is tightening its underwriting standards for auto insurance. You may lose your auto insurance. You'll have difficulty getting insurance with a new company, and you certainly have to pay more.

An alcohol-related conviction will be viewed more seriously than a non-alcohol related conviction. You may lose your auto insurance. You'll have difficulty getting insurance with a new company, and you certainly have to pay more.

A conviction for driving while intoxicated can change your status from "preferred" risk to "questionable" or "unacceptable" risk. You'll lose your reduced rate for good driving record from the Department of Motor Vehicles. Convictions for driving under the influence, driving while impaired, or refusing to take alcohol tests, are handled similarly to "driving while intoxicated."

For straightforward answers bring your insurance questions to DEECHER-TANGUAY, Inc. 121 East Center St. 646-2212

BIGOTRY in the United Nations!

The designation of Zionism as a form of racism by the United Nations is a calumny that debases the world organization, for it represents the triumph of falsehood and bigotry.

The action of the United Nations therefore not only does violence to history, but is flagrantly offensive to Jewish religious sensibilities.

A recognition of the inseparability of Zionism and Jewish religious faith does not create immunity from all criticism of specific social and political policies.

Even in its most secularized manifestations, Zionism retains at its core the ancient Jewish hope for the redemption of the Jewish people and of all mankind.

But Zionism is more than a political phenomenon. It is an expression of Jewish religious belief and hope, for it witnesses to the most distinctive aspects of Jewish faith.

Odds are three in 10 Red Sox will repeat

The odds are three in 10 the Red Sox will get into the World Series next year. Bill Lee told a corporate communion breakfast gathering of more than 300 men, women and children at St. Mary's Church yesterday morning.

Indians' soccer title hopes shattered by Wethersfield

Defense, solid unyielding defense, was the hallmark in Saturday morning's State Soccer Tournament Class AA Division finals. Wethersfield's backline proved to be the toughest as the Eagles took a 1-0 verdict over Manchester High to cop the state title before an estimated crowd of 3,000 at Hall High in West Hartford.

Steve Dawson aims pass to John Madden (86) for Manchester touchdown

Indians no match for unbeaten Hall

By LEN AUSTER
Herald Sports Editor
Execution of a wishbone-T offense is a complex task... The sparse sun-drenched crowd of 500, 310 paid, saw the visitors run their CCLL mark to 8-0 and aggregate ledger to 9-0 this year...

lost in a single season. And the eight consecutive reversals... Coach Frank Robinson dressed 48 players and all saw service... He compassionately sent in his second offensive unit (an entire new 11) with 8:19 left in the third quarter and a new defensive platoon shortly after... "Manchester has a couple of good players like (Steve) Dawson and (Bob) Hawkes," Robinson commented... "But it just doesn't have enough. You can't hit people and be hit"
