

New rec is rising

The new West Side Rec on Cedar Street is beginning to take shape with about 25 percent of the steel frame up. The masonry, doors and frames have also been delivered for the $1.4 million project which will be a shared use facility with Washington School (in the background). Interior renovations in the school have also begun, according to architect Richard Lawrence. (Herald photo by Pinto)

Directors to meet tonight

Tuesday's storm resulted in postponement of the scheduled meeting of the Manchester Board of Directors, but the February agenda, which includes several budget-related items, is expected to proceed tonight at 8 o'clock in the Municipal Building's Hearing Room. The board will conduct a public hearing on the transfer of $125,000 to the Water Department budget. The money will come from a state payments on the principal of bonds for the purchase of the Manchester Water Co.

The directors also will consider a transfer of $22,730 to the Sewer Department budget. This department, like the Water Department, has had a shortfall in the present year's budget. No public hearing is required for the Sewer Department transfer because the money is already in the department's reserve fund. The board is being asked to approve an additional transfer of $283,525 from the Contingency Fund to various accounts, including those for pension benefits and insurance expenses.

Public hearings scheduled to be conducted tonight include the proposed allocation of $10,000 in town funds and $25,000 in federal grants to pay for a temporary mini-bus service for Manchester's elderly and handicapped. Funding for three Comprehensive Employment Training Act projects, one in the Police Department, one in the Water Department and one for Forestry Maintenance, will be the subject of public hearings. All of the proposed funding would be provided through the Federal CETA program. The directors also will hold a public hearing on a proposal to permit carnivals or circuses for certain organizations in town. Such activities are not permitted under town zoning regulations. The Planning and Zoning Commission has voiced objections to any change in the present setup, but Directors William Diana and John FitzPatrick have recommended a change. The board will consider the formation of a Youth Commission. Last month, it agreed to create another new commission, one for the handicapped.

Nurse director retires at Manchester hospital

About 200 friends and co-workers of Mrs. Mary Sterud, R.N., attended a retirement party recently in her honor at The Colony. Mrs. Sterud was appointed director of nursing service in July 1961, the position she held until her retirement, which was effective Feb. 1. She became a full-time member of the hospital staff in January 1948. A native of Manchester, Mrs. Sterud received her training at Hartford Hospital School of Nursing, after which she worked at Hartford Hospital. She met and married her husband, Arne, and followed him in the service until 1947 when they returned to Manchester and Mrs. Sterud resumed her work at Manchester Memorial Hospital on a part-time basis. She and her husband live at 105 Baldwin Road.

Frostbite only injury after swim in sound

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Two men who became lost in the season's worst snowstorm and spent 18 hours helplessly adrift on Long Island Sound expect to be released from a hospital today where they were treated for frostbite. Charles Greenleaf, 27, of Noank, Conn., and his friend, Lance Elwell, 39, of Fisher's Island, N.Y., left Fisher's Island off the northeast tip of Long Island at 12:30 p.m. Monday. They managed to swim to shore Tuesday after the Coast Guard and search boats failed to find them. Greenleaf said he had been visiting on the island and he invited Elwell to ride with him to make a doctor's appointment in Noank. Greenleaf said there was a light snow falling at the time and a 20-knot wind blowing and they expected to make the trip to the Singer Boat Yard in Noank in 10 to 15 minutes. "Just as we were entering the Mystic River, less than a half mile from the boat yard, the engine coughed," Greenleaf said. The Noank man said he managed to restart the 65-horsepower outboard motor on the 17-foot Boston Whaler, but a main fuse blew and the engine ground to a halt. For the next 18 hours, with winds exceeding 50 knots and temperatures plummeting, the men drifted in a southwest direction toward Long Island. Greenleaf said the two constantly had to bail out the open, cabinless boat as 18-foot-high waves swept over it. Their boots became filled with water. Through a prearrangement, friends of the two experienced boatmen notified authorities that the boat was missing when Elwell did not telephone the island by 12:55 p.m. Monday. An alarm was put out and an ambulance boat of the Fisher's Island Volunteer Fire Department set out to search for them. Connecticut authorities also were advised and several boats put out from both Stonington and Noank. The Coast Guard also began a search. Greenleaf said the design of the Boston Whaler — its square bottom and low center of gravity — "was what saved us." Shortly before daylight the shivering boatmen could see lights on the Long Island shore. "When we were about 300 yards from shore, a wave completely swamped the boat, but it didn't sink," Greenleaf said. "When we got about 100 feet from shore, a wave knocked Lance out of the boat and he had to swim," he said. Greenleaf said when the boat was about 50 feet from shore, he jumped out and swam the rest of the way. Both were given aid at a shoreline home.

Postmen mortal
HARTFORD (UPI) — Even postmen are mortal. A postal official says no mail was delivered to residents in Connecticut and most of western Massachusetts because of the snowstorm. Thomas J. Jamer, a spokesman for the U.S. Postal Service, said Tuesday only five of 368 carriers reported to work. For that reason, he said, only high priority mail deliveries of laboratory and X-ray materials were made to area hospitals on Tuesday. Jamer said slippery roads and the governor's traffic ban prevented many Hartford carriers from getting into work.

Library gets energy books

The Manchester League of Women Voters has presented a set of books on energy to Mary Cheney Library for an energy shelf for the use of students and all other interested citizens. The books were purchased as part of a project financed by a grant from the League of Women Voters education fund and the U.S. Department of Energy. Similar sets have been donated to their town libraries by local leagues throughout the state. The books are about the energy crisis and energy options for the future as a basis for making individual judgments on possible courses of action. Many of them were used by the Manchester league in its recently completed energy study. The following books have been placed on the energy shelf: "Energy Dilemmas," published by the LWV education fund, traces the development of changing patterns of energy use and their historic and economic impact. "Energy Options," also published by the LWV education fund, explains the policy choices confronting the American public and points out the kinds of compromises that must be considered in developing a viable energy policy. "Rays of Hope: The Transition to a Post-Petroleum World," by Denis Hayes, published by W.W. Norton, documents the potential for reliance on renewable energy resources such as sunlight, wind, falling water, and wood. It allows the reader to visualize what life could be like in a world run on renewable energy sources. "Soft Energy Paths toward a Durable Peace," by Amory B. Lovins, published by Ballinger Inc., provides a different assessment of the energy crisis and a plan for conservation and energy regeneration. "World Energy Outlook," published by the Exxon Corp., details an energy producer's analysis of the factors most critical to world energy demand and supply. The following additional publications, which were used by Manchester LWV in its study, have also been placed on the shelf: "Aime to Choose," the Ford Foundation study on energy, and the foundation's preliminary report, "Exploring Energy Sources," source book of the National Science Teachers Association. "Save Money, Save Energy" and "Coping with the Energy Crisis," both produced by the Consumer Federation of America for the Office of the Energy Commission (OEC). "Safer Tankers and Cleaner Seas" and "Reducing Tanker Accidents," two pamphlets published by Exxon. "So What's New?" an energy history of the United States, and "Energy in Focus," pamphlets published by the Federal Energy Administration.

January building at record low

The month of January was the slowest ever for the Town of Manchester Building Department, Francis Conti, chief building inspector, said. The department issued 31 permits for projects with an estimated total cost of only $100,148. In comparison, the department's richest month ever was October 1977 when 142 permits were issued for projects with an estimated total cost of $22,058,440. That month included the building permit for the J.C. Penney Co. catalog distribution center. "January normally is slow, anyway," Conti said. It is a month when contractors may take a couple of weeks off and most people do not want to do much renovation work because of cold and stormy weather, he said. Last month's weather, which included more than 30 inches of snow, was a major factor in the slowness of building in Manchester, Conti said. In January 1977, the Building Department issued 36 permits for projects with an estimated total cost of $441,295. In January 1976, the department issued 32 permits for projects worth an estimated total cost of $402,935. Last month, 26 of the permits issued here for alterations and additions. Permits also were issued for two signs, one tool shed, one greenhouse and one single-family dwelling. The department also issued three affidavits, one demolition permit, eight certificates of occupancy, 48 electrical permits, 24 plumbing permits and 21 heating permits during January.

DEAR ABBY: OLD SHOE DOG's letter certainly steamed me. I sold fine shoes to both men and women for over 50 years, and I always removed the customer's shoes. (Shoe dog says, "Doctors don't undress their patients, so why should we remove shoes?") What an idiotic comparison. There is nothing degrading about undressing a foot. Shoe dog complains, "Most people don't even know what size shoe they wear? Why should they? A competent shoe salesman routinely measures the customer's foot, then gives him (or her) the size that fits. Besides, shoe sizes change according to one's weight. (If you've gained or lost 20 pounds you can't wear the same size dress or suit you wore before your weight changed. The same is true of your shoes.) I don't know where OLD SHOE DOG sold shoes, but he never could have made it in MY store. SHOE DOG (RETIRED)

DEAR PODIATRIST: I am well acquainted with the pointed-toe shoe of the 50's. I fought that battle after putting my foot in it! DEAR ABBY: Maybe I shouldn't complain, because my fiancée says she loves me a lot and I know he never even looks at another girl, but here's my problem: Every deer hunting season, he says he'll see me after the season is over. He is so crazy about hunting, he goes every minute he has off from work. Abby, everyone says I'm a fool to wait for him to come to see me every week. I think if he really cared for me he'd see me on weekends during the deer season, don't you? Next season, should I tell him he can either find time for me or he can find someone else? SECOND CHOICE

Win at Bridge

Trick mystic appearance

South won the opening lead with the ace of spades. He next led a diamond that West captured with his ace. West played the king of spades and then another spade. "Run the diamond suit," said West. "Take the ace of hearts and give me the last three tricks. Down one." declarer replied. "Play the hand out," said East. "Maybe he'll make a mistake and go down more." "Just play cards," said North. "Get the hand over with." South ran the diamond suit, and on the last diamond West found himself in an embarrassing position. He had to save the king of hearts doubleton, or else declarer could play the ace, dropping the singleton king and the queen of hearts would be the ninth trick. West could not pitch the ace of clubs. Otherwise, South's king of clubs would be the ninth trick. Finally, West could not throw one of his two remaining spades, because once he got on lead with the ace of hearts and last trick on defense. Unwittingly, South had trapped West with a squeeze play that every one shaking their head.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: OLD SHOE DOG's letter certainly steamed me. I sold fine shoes to both men and women for over 50 years, and I always removed the customer's shoes. (Shoe dog says, "Doctors don't undress their patients, so why should we remove shoes?") What an idiotic comparison. There is nothing degrading about undressing a foot. Shoe dog complains, "Most people don't even know what size shoe they wear? Why should they? A competent shoe salesman routinely measures the customer's foot, then gives him (or her) the size that fits. Besides, shoe sizes change according to one's weight. (If you've gained or lost 20 pounds you can't wear the same size dress or suit you wore before your weight changed. The same is true of your shoes.) I don't know where OLD SHOE DOG sold shoes, but he never could have made it in MY store. SHOE DOG (RETIRED)

Some called taxi firm, wanting to go shopping

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter
During a time when most people and businesses in Manchester had come to a standstill Tuesday because of crippling storm conditions, the available taxi service through Dial-A-Ride received a few calls from those who wanted to go shopping.
"It was though they didn't even know we had an unusual storm," a spokeswoman for the outfit said.
But, as with many other town services, only emergency calls were answered.
The Manchester taxi service was used mainly to take some emergency calls to the hospital, including one person who was bitten by a cat, and to help deliver emergency prescription calls.
Those who are considering buying or renting snow blowers, or those who need to buy parts for their blowers, are out of luck. A local supplier said this is no longer the season to buy blowers. Lawnmowers are coming in now. There just aren't any snow blowers available.
Private snow remover contractors cannot keep up with the calls. One is refusing to take anymore calls. Another contractor, is waiting for mechanical service on his two pieces of equipment, one of which is waiting for installation of a new transmission which gave out from over use during the last two storms.
One restaurant that stayed open Tuesday had very little business. The manager said he doubted that many people knew he was open.

vehicle traffic was lifted today.
Although the Manchester Ice and Fuel Company's ice deliveries weren't particularly effected by the storm, the oil deliveries have been delayed.
The few grocery stores and quick service stores that were open Tuesday were busy, but the common staples like bread and milk were the fastest selling items, and the first to be depleted.
Most gas service stations were open Tuesday. Those that were not were clearing their pumps today and hoped by noon to resume normal customer service. At least one gas station received a delivery of gasoline today, and one was expected at Bob's Gulf Station at West Middle Turnpike and Broad Street. No station contacted planned to ration gasoline to its customers.
Drug stores made deliveries Tuesday and this forenoon for emergency prescriptions only. They expected to resume normal service after the governor's restriction on

Committee reaches quota for vote on consolidation

The Committee for One Manchester said today that it has obtained the required number of signatures from Eight Utilities District residents for a consolidation referendum question. Meanwhile, representatives of the district issued a strong statement against the petitioning and urged residents not to sign or to remove their names.
The Committee for One Manchester was formed last month to begin a move for consolidation, which would combine the district and the Town of Manchester. The two bodies now have separate fire departments and sewer authorities in their areas.
The committee began work Jan. 27 on the first step for consolidation, a petitioning drive to obtain ten percent of signatures from registered voters in the district and ten percent of signatures from registered voters in non-district sections of Manchester.
If those numbers are obtained, a townwide referendum question on consolidation is planned, probably for the November election.
Dwight Miller, co-chairman of the committee, said this morning that the petitioners have obtained more than the 750 signatures representing ten percent of the district's voters.
Also this morning, district officials issued a statement urging residents not to sign. If they have signed, the officials asked that steps be taken to withdraw the names said.
"The directors of the Eight

Utilities District are totally appalled at the actions taken by the so-called Committee for One Manchester for trying to steal the tax-advantage and living advantages of the people of the district," the statement said.
The district officials mentioned that members of the Town Board of Directors have expressed opposition to a takeover of Manchester's water supplies by the Metropolitan District Commission.
"The district directors are similarly opposed to an outside takeover by the town. The right of self-determination is the cornerstone of American democracy," the district statement said.
District officials have mentioned the lower tax rate in the district and said that a move for consolidation should be started from within the district. It requires a separate vote of approval by district residents. Based on the Town Charter, they say supporters of consolidation are basing the present move on a state law, the Home Rule Act.
District officials said that press releases and fliers distributed by the Committee for One Manchester contain "many untruths, malicious innuendoes and misrepresentations."
"We are taking this opportunity to deny in total their allegations and promises made in their unsigned flyer and state emphatically that the Eight Utilities District is a viable low tax rate area of the Town of Manchester and we intend to stay as such," the statement said.
The directors ask district residents

K-Mart plaza merchants can seek federal loans

Merchants in the K-Mart Plaza and others in Connecticut have become eligible to apply for government loans to repair damage by the storm which collapsed roofs in the state.
Rep. William R. Cotter (D-1st Dist.) was notified today that Connecticut has received a Small Business Disaster Declaration, which will enable individuals and businesses in all eight counties to receive low-interest loans for physical damage and economic injury caused by snow, ice and heavy flooding from Jan. 17 to 27.
The disaster declaration was written to cover New Haven and New London counties, and all adjacent counties which, in effect, means the entire state. The Small Business Administration (SBA), acted on the request of Gov. Ella Grasso, following the Civic Center Coliseum, the K-Mart roof collapse in Manchester, and other demonstrations caused by the January storms.

The two types of loans are specifically for physical damage and economic injury. Guidelines set by the SBA are as follows:
Home loans — $50,000 maximum, 1 percent interest on the first $10,000, 3 percent on the next $30,000, and 6 percent on the remainder.
Personal loans — $10,000 maximum, 1 percent interest — $50,000 maximum, at the discretion of the SBA, 3 percent on the first $25,000, 6 percent on the remainder.
Economic injury — 3 percent on the first $25,000, 6 percent on the remainder. The purpose of this type of loan is to meet economic obligations which would have been met without the intervening storm. There is no maximum limit.
Applications for physical damage loans must be filed before April 10, 1978. Applications for economic injury loans must be filed before Nov. 1, 1978.

'Blizzard of '78' touched everybody and everything

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
A young cross-country skier enjoying the emptiness of Manchester's Main Street Tuesday afternoon probably said it best.
When asked where he'd been skiing, Tim Hill of 371 Oak St. replied, "Everywhere."
Storm Larry was like that. After spending about 30 hours in the region, it dumped and drifted everywhere.
The storm brought at least two feet of snow to all parts of Manchester and surrounding towns. George Ringstone of the Town Highway Department said. The effects of the storm were easily visible in Manchester Tuesday afternoon as virtually the entire town was closed.
About the only vehicles venturing onto the road were four-wheel drive or emergency ones.

Businesses that were open were scarce. A few gas stations and a handful of convenience stores stayed open during the day.
Many residents walked along the side of the road — sidewalks were unusable — carrying a loaf of bread and a carton of milk from the closest open store.
Some made the trips to stores on skis or even, occasionally, by snowmobile.
Dennis Naumec of 52 Delmont St. took care of two chores at once. He gave his four-year-old daughter, Linda Marie, a ride on her sled, along with milk and food picked up at a nearby store.
Most of the stores that were open ran out of milk or bread, and some ran out of both.
Other residents spent the day shoveling and snowblowing.
"What a way to get a day off," Laverne Atkinson of 123 1/2 Center St. said as she lifted a shovelful of snow, one of many that she lifted during the day.
Once the afternoon snow slowed and the winds died down, youngsters playing in the snow became more visible. Near-empty streets, sidewalks and parks made for good skiing and sledding areas.

Area towns digging out; decision due on schools

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter
Area towns continued to dig out today from the two major storms that hit the area Monday and Tuesday. Schools have been closed for three days and a decision will be made tonight about Thursday openings.
In effect, the towns of Vernon, Bolton, South Windsor, Coventry, Andover and Hebron were closed for business and remained so this morning as road crews attempted to clear out parking lots at schools, shopping areas, and municipal buildings.
Police in all of the towns reported numerous abandoned cars which hampered snow clearing operations on the major highways and secondary roads.
In Coventry Monday night the road crew was called to Waterfront Park to clear the road and driveway for a woman who was in labor. With the help of a police cruiser she was brought to Windham Community Memorial Hospital in Willimantic.
In Vernon a woman from Brooklyn Street, who also was in labor, was taken to Rockville General Hospital by a police cruiser.
In all towns owners of four-wheel drive vehicles volunteered their services to take people who were performing necessary services to work.

Road crews worked twice around the clock and some, who had hoped for relief last night, didn't get it as the second major snow storm hit the area.
Snowmobiles and skis and other such means of transportation were pressed into service as the governor's ban on driving continued.
First selectman Henry Ryba, Bolton, reported snow removal operations running smoothly and smoothly but said his crew was very tired.
Vernon police assisted stranded motorists and also assisted in transporting emergency workers, such as nurses and medical assistants, to their jobs in the local hospital and convalescent homes. CBERS with four-wheel vehicles assisted the police in this area.
One police cruiser was involved in a minor accident on West Street Tuesday afternoon. No injuries were reported and damage was minor.
In Bolton, first selectman Henry Ryba said for the most part the roads are good now but there is still a few problem areas to be taken care of. He said two pieces of equipment broke down Tuesday but the snow removal crews are doing an excellent job.
In Andover all roads were reported to be open this morning and no equipment breakdowns were reported.

Oakland-Denver deal long way from dead

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Oakland-Denver deal isn't dead yet... Old man Marvin Davis, who's putting up the $12 million for the A's hoping to move them to Colorado, is willing to hang on a while longer so negotiations are continuing in an effort to settle the matter of Charlie Finley's lease with Oakland city officials...

Whether Muhammad Ali likes it or not, he may be forced to share the heavyweight title with Ken Norton soon. Jose Sulaiman, WBC president, has declared the WBC will consider Ali's title vacant if he doesn't fight Norton following his Feb. 15 meeting with Leon Spinks in Las Vegas. Recognized as champion by the WBA and WBC, Ali couldn't care less about Sulaiman's ultimatum. He hasn't any intention of fighting Norton again unless maybe some sucker comes along offering him $12 million. Whenever he has nothing else to do, Ali likes to daydream like that...

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Still convinced the A's agreed to wait for a few months before moving to Denver, Oakland Commissioner Bob Kuhn has launched a new attempt to free the team from its Oakland Coliseum contract. Robert Nahas, president of the Oakland Coliseum, said Tuesday Kuhn called him urging another attempt be made to settle the problem. The A's have another 10 years on their Coliseum contract.

"The commissioner," said Nahas, "feels very strongly we're heading into a real catastrophe if the A's remain in Oakland and the Giants remain in San Francisco. He feels the situation could turn into a disgrace for baseball." In San Francisco, Mayor George Moscone said his door still is open to further discussion, although he is remaining firm in his position not to go for a 50-50 split of Giants' home games with the Coliseum, or changing the name of the San Francisco Giants. ### Bolton business cited as violation of zoning

The Bolton Zoning Commission has sent a letter to Joseph Verdone of School Road saying he is in violation of the home occupancy business provision of the zoning regulations. The commission plans to have a public hearing on those changes in April. Commission members renewed the status of the Baker property at 42 Clerk Road as a youth hostel. And commission members approved their budget for 1978-1979 in the amount of $480. Attend conference Patricia Bankel and Robert Hamm recently attended the Connecticut Education Association Midwinter Conference in Hartford. The theme of the conference was PL 94-142, the law concerning the education of all handicapped children. Mrs. Bankel is a math teacher at Bolton High School and Hamm is a secondary reading teacher.

State agrees signal is needed

Vernon The State Department of Transportation agrees with the Vernon Traffic Authority on the need for a state traffic control signal at the intersection of Merline Road and Route 63 and is asking the town to agree to pay its share of the installation cost. The Traffic Authority met last week and voted to ask the Town Council to transfer $4,500 (the town's share) from the utilities account and authorize Police Chief Herman Fritz to sign an agreement with the state. The agreement is necessary before the DOT develops a design for the signal to recommend to the state Traffic Commission. The town has to pay the entire cost of the electrical energy necessary to operate the proposed signal and DOT will provide maintenance of it. This will make the fifth signal installed on Route 63 within the past two or three years.

Student test scores rank well in Bolton

Bolton High School juniors and seniors scored favorably with other Connecticut, New England and national students on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT) and the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). June Krusch, high school guidance counselor, said the mean scores received by Bolton seniors on the November 1977 SAT show an increase from the previous year. She said the national scores were declined. Mrs. Krusch said the College Entrance Examination Board completed a study investigating the cause of the decline. She said according to the study factors that contributed to the decline were changes in the groups of students taking the test, disruptions in society and family life, less emphasis on fundamental learning skills, and automatic promotion. The mean verbal score for Bolton students was 457 and the mean math score was 483. The national mean verbal score was 429 and the math score was 470. Meeting tonight The Board of Selectmen will meet at 7:30 p.m. today at the Community Hall.

Calls for firemen increased in '77

Bolton The Bolton Volunteer Fire Department responded to 171 calls in 1977, 31 more than in 1976. Automobile accidents and medical assists accounted for most of the increase. In 1977 the department responded to 38 auto accidents, 37 mutual aid, 29 brush or woods fires, 16 false or service calls, 10 car fires, six structure fires, four chimney fires and one gasoline washdown. Last year the department donated a brush truck to the town. To buy it, the department had many fund raising activities including the fireman's ball, beerfest and sale of Christmas trees. Emergency telephone stickers were distributed to every home in town. The number to call in an emergency is 972-7333. Residents were given the opportunity to take a cardio pulmonary resuscitation course in June. It was taught by a department volunteer. In 1977 nine volunteers received an emergency medical technician certificate. The department now has more than 20 EMT's. The department's annual fireman's ball will be Feb. 25 at the Garden Grove in Manchester. A roast beef buffet will be served. The department is also conducting a raffle to raise money for new equipment. Tickets for either event are available from any fireman.

Michael and Spider Learn how to deal with blindness

By SUSAN VAUGHN Herald Reporter A boyhood wish of Michael Robinson has at last been fulfilled for him at age 26. He has a dog. Although it is a wish shared by many boys, for Michael having a dog means more than having just a pet. It means a pair of eyes and more mobility and independence for Michael, who has been blind since birth. Michael received his black Labrador Retriever named Spider, at the Guiding Eyes for the Blind Training School in Yorktown Heights, N.Y., in October. During the 26 days Michael attended the school, he and Spider learned to work together as a team. Never learned so much Michael cannot say enough good things about the Guiding Eyes school. He said, "I have never been to a school where I learned so much." Guiding Eyes for the Blind is a non-profit, tax exempt organization supported by donations from the public and is dedicated to providing guide dogs to blind persons who request them. A graduate of the Oak Hill School for the Blind in Hartford, Michael said he spent the first 19 years of his life without any mobility aids, such as a cane or a guide dog. He felt very frustrated, he said, without those aids. He feels it is very important for blind children to receive mobility training at the age of 10 or 11 years. "It is a waste of time if they wait until they are in their teens," Michael said. Michael received his mobility instruction from Frank MacIave after he started to work at the Manchester Sheltered Workshop. It was MacIave who asked Michael if he would like a dog and encouraged him to get one. The white cane is useful and a requirement before a blind person can have a guide dog, Michael said, but the cane "doesn't take you around obstacles and away from driveways the way a dog can." A lot of the students at the Guiding Eyes School, like Michael, did not like the cane. Michael was one of 18 students from all over the United States who participated in the training session last October and November. There were also two men from Israel who came to the school to get their training with a guide dog. Enjoy camaraderie Michael especially enjoyed the camaraderie among the students at the training session. "No one ever quarreled," he said. He also enjoyed the facilities at the school, including a music room with stereo and piano and lots of braille reading materials and talking books (records). Michael enjoys music and is taking piano lessons. He is also a member of the Silk City chorus and a barbershop quartet. On the second day of the school, the students received their dogs and took an initial walk around the school and grounds with them. From then on the dogs stayed with their new masters and mistresses, who were then responsible for their complete care, including feeding and grooming daily. By the end of the three and a half weeks, the students knew their dogs well, Michael said. All the guide dogs were Labrador Retrievers, except for one German Shepherd. The retrievers are chosen as guide dogs because of their intelligence and good temperament, Michael said. Rigorous training The daily training at the school is rigorous, starting early in the morning. The students were taken in vans with their dogs to different types of locations to practice their training. The areas included the streets of several towns around Yorktown Heights, including the streets and sidewalks which were under construction, which was good experience, Michael said. The students also learned to ride buses and subways with their dogs and spent a day in New York City. Michael said the subway experience was scary for many of the students and was one he would not forget. "You have to be really quick to get in those doors," he added. The Guiding Eyes students and their dogs also learned how to get around in big stores like Macy's. "We were told to ask questions when purchasing an item and also how to ask for specific directions from people," Michael said. Too often in giving directions to a blind

Learn how

"We were taught to have our dogs good control at all times," Michael said. "No nonsense," was what Michael's teacher John Schroyer kept telling them.

"We're the boss for the dogs," Michael said. "If not, the dogs would take advantage." The dog could get distracted by another person or an animal, too.

The blind person always must use a firm voice with authority in giving commands to the guide dog. It is not necessary to yell at the dog if he misbehaves, but to tell him a firm "no," Michael said and get him back on the right track.

Learns set of commands
The dogs learn a set of command words, such as "forward, straight, or stop," the latter which can mean "go a little faster or get your mind back on what you're doing," Michael explained.

It is important to remember, Michael said, that the dogs are not pets, as much as they come to love them, they are "working dogs." "It is also very important to remember that they are dogs first and guides second. It is still the person's responsibility to make the initial decision to cross a street, by first listening for traffic, and then listening for himself straight across an intersection. But the students are also told to always follow the dog.

Since Michael brought Spider back to live with him in Manchester, he is E. Center St., he has been teaching the dog the route between home and the Sheltered Workshop. So far that is the only regular route Spider has learned, Michael said. "Spider does not maneuver well in the snow."

They have also tried going to the drugstore, with the help of Michael's roommate, Jack Moreland. Spider is only 17 months old and still has a few little bad habits, Michael said, which he hopes the dog will outgrow. Obedience training is part of the daily regimen. Over-all, Spider is adjusting very well to his new home and master. "He's a good dog and I love him," Michael said.

The Guiding Eye dogs are raised in a foster home for the first year of life, usually by a 4-H Club member. They undergo an intensified three-month program of training with the school instructors before they are matched with their new owners. Spider behaves well at work with Michael. He sleeps at his feet most of the time while Michael works.

Michael's advice to other persons with guide dogs is to expect problems at first and not to expect them to know the person's love immediately. It is best to have a sighted person with you at first, Michael said.

Some suggestions to persons approaching a person with a guide dog is to always approach from the right side. If the person accepts an offer of help, offer him or her your left elbow. It is important also not to give an order to a guide dog. The dog will not listen to anyone but his master or mistress. It is also important never to interfere if a blind person corrects his or her dog. The dogs always get well rewarded and praised when they do a task correctly, Michael said.

Michael concluded that "it's not easy to have a guide dog. It's a big responsibility, in a sense it's like having a small child to take care of," but the rewards are great for the blind person. "A lot of love is the most important thing, as well as desire and determination," Michael added.
Michael is looking forward to the coming year when he and Spider can take long walks and romp in the park.

On second thought

What happened to kitchen stove?

Last night when our teen-age son turned nose up at the meal, I threw my hands in the air and wailed. "That's what I get after slaving over a hot kitchen stove for hours!"

"What stove?" asked John, eyeing the little toaster oven that had produced the meal. In question. John made a point. Like most modern women, I don't slave over a hot stove anymore. I still love, don't get me wrong, but it's over a toaster oven, fry pan, waffle iron, smileless grill, doughnut maker, deep fat fryer, crock pot, Chinese wok, big-mac-maker, and a crepe cooker. Every year I add at least one new appliance to the long row that sit beneath their lumpy plastic covers on my kitchen counter.
While I am involved with my 10 electrical appliances, my kitchen stove sits practically unused. The chrome rims around its burners sparkle with grease and its self-cleaning oven can't find a single speck of grease to self-clean. The cord is tangled. And the care and use of each appliance is different so I'm always thumbing through the instruction manuals. For example my Chinese wok has to be seasoned with oil before each use. My fry pan must never be immersed in water. And heaven forbid if I use the broiler and the crock pot together because they invariably blow a fuse.

"We're crazy," I said to my husband. "The whole economy's crazy. Why do I need all these fancy electrical appliances? My good old kitchen stove... one appliance... can do the work of all others combined."

"You're right," agreed my husband. "It's a big promotion deal. Super salesmanship... like selling a refrigerator to an eskimo."
At the rate these super salesmen are coming up with fancy new appliances, pretty soon my kitchen stove will be completely outmoded. But I'm holding on to it anyway. Who knows, eventually it may bring a good price in an antique shop. Some enterprising wheel-dealer will paint it butter milk red, put a flower pot in one of the burners, label it "Ye Olde Kitchen Stove" and sell it to a collector of Americana to use as a bar in the family room.

Terzi heads pageant judges

Heading the list of judges for the Miss Manchester Scholarship Pageant to be held Saturday will be Al Terzi, anchorman for WFSB-TV evening news.

He began his broadcasting career in 1960 working as a producer for the Central Connecticut Council on the radio stations in New York state. He later combined his interest in broadcasting with his military career, serving seven years with the U.S.A.F. Intelligence Unit in the Far East and working as a disc jockey on the Armed Forces Radio in Taipei, Taiwan, and Osan, Korea. Before coming to Hartford, Terzi was a weatherman and announcer on KCTV, Channel 8, in San Angelo, Texas.

Terzi attended Yale University where he majored in Chinese and Korean languages and continued his education at Central Connecticut State College. In addition to being a member of the Advisory Board of the Central Connecticut Council on the Boy Scout of America and a licensed commercial airplane pilot, Al also involves himself in various activities of Mary Our Queen Church in Southington. He lives in Southington with his wife, Carolyn, and their three children.

Other judges include William J. Haggerty Jr., producer of the New Hampshire Scholarship Pageant, and David Kelley, legal council and associate director of the Miss Connecticut Scholarship Pageant for the past 11 years; Dee Castolene, chaperone for Miss Bristol; and Linda Kapral Papp, Miss Connecticut 1977. Edward Tomkiele, Manchester town clerk, and William Johnson, president of the Savings Bank of Manchester, will serve as auditors. The Miss Manchester Pageant, sponsored by the Manchester Jaycees, will feature 12 young ladies from the Greater Manchester area who will vie in swimsuit, talent and evening gown competition for the title. The winner has a chance of going on to become Miss Connecticut and, if she wins that title, can seek the Miss America crown and a $15,000 scholarship. Nearly one million dollars in educational scholarships are awarded annually at the local, state, and national Miss America Pageants, making it the largest scholarship foundation in the world for women.

Al Terzi

The ladies will be introduced in the Bailey Auditorium at Manchester High School at 8 p.m. Proceeds from the event are contributed to the scholarship fund awarded to the contestants and to the Manchester Scholarship Foundation. Advance tickets are available at Watkin's, the Senior Citizens Center, Artistic Hair Design, any Manchester Jaycee or by calling ticket chairman, Charles Rohde 846-8961. Tickets will also be available at the door prior to the performance.

FOCIS class set tonight

"New Parent classes sponsored by the Family Oriented Childbirth Information Society (FOCIS) will be held tonight at 7:30 in Conference Room C of the Manchester Memorial Hospital. A registered nurse will conduct the class which features the film 'The Newborn.'"

Your dental health

This is the third in a series of six articles on dental health published by The Manchester Evening Herald, in cooperation with the Manchester Hampshire Scholarship Pageant.

Each time you eat foods containing sugars, certain bacteria in the mouth are stimulated to create acids that attack the tooth enamel. This bacteria is found in a sticky, colorless film called plaque that forms continuously on everyone's teeth.

The greatest damage occurs within the 30 minutes after eating sweet foods. So the more often you eat foods containing sugar the more often the acids have an opportunity to accumulate on your teeth to act on the enamel.

One answer to the problem is to limit the number of times you eat sugary foods each day. In other words, confine your intake of sugary foods to regular mealtime and avoid those between-meal snacks.

Instead of selecting sweets in the vending machine or at the corner snack shop, look for sugar-free candy or gum and soft drinks, fresh fruits, milk, cheese, soda crackers, potato chips, popcorn or peanuts.

Snacking on candy bars or sugary soft drinks is probably the worst thing you can do to your teeth.

Mothers meet Feb. 15

The Twin Mother's Club of Greater Hartford will hold its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 15 at 8 p.m. at the First Congregational Church, 837 Main St.

Social Security

Q. My friend sent away for an earnings record and got back a report that shows more earnings, but not how much he really made. How come?

A. Generally, the earnings statement will show the amount of your earnings that are taxable for Social Security purposes, except where you might have worked for more than one employer during the year, or your employer reported erroneously. This maximum amount of annual earnings on which Social Security tax is paid increases automatically each year to keep pace with the increases in average wage levels. No more than the maximum given each year can be used to figure benefits.

Q. If my earnings record don't match my own record of earnings, how can I get it changed?

A. If your own record does not agree with the amount shown on the earnings statement you get from Social Security, call, write, or visit your Social Security office promptly. Bring your Form W-2, pay slips, or any other proof of wages. If you have earnings from self-employment, bring in your tax returns along with canceled checks showing payment of Social Security contributions. We'll work with you in setting the record straight.

Q. How should I report 1978 wages when my ex-husband starts collecting retirement benefits if you are 62 or older and were married to him at least 20 years.

A. You can get monthly benefits when your ex-husband starts collecting retirement benefits if you are 62 or older and were married to him at least 20 years.

Of consumer concern

A new Federal Trade Commission buyer's guide advises consumers to know all the facts before investing in an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). For a copy of the guide write to the Division of Distribution and Duplication, Room 128, FTC, Washington, D.C. 20500.

The guide, entitled "Frank Talk About IRAs," is based on results of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection's two-year investigation of various IRA plans and the way they are marketed. It also talks about common problems consumers have experienced with these plans because of the effect of tax requirements on certain investments used as IRAs and offers suggestions on how consumers can avoid them. Written in question and answer form, the guide explains what an IRA is and requirements consumers must follow to get tax benefits for using one. For example, the guide notes that consumers will not be eligible to contribute to their IRA if they are participating in another tax supported pension plan. It stresses that consumers who think they may change jobs and become ineligible to contribute to their IRA because they are covered by another retirement plan should watch out for contracts requiring fixed payment schedules. If they become ineligible to make payments, they may have to default on their contract and pay current income tax on what they get back from their IRA plus a 10 percent penalty.

Further, since most insurance companies deduct their fees from the first year's payments, consumers may receive little or nothing back if they default soon after they've started their IRA.

The guide advises consumers to obtain a copy of Publication 560 from the Internal Revenue Service and, if possible, consult the nearest IRS office and a specialist to make sure that the plan they have chosen fits their investment needs and that they qualify for the tax benefits.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Harold's mail order business perked up when he began offering "lucky stones" for sale. But postal authorities soon haled him into court on a charge of mail fraud.

"It's a phony deal," they told the judge. "Obviously no one can promise good luck from mere rocks."

But when Harold pointed out that he made no specific claims for the stones beyond their name, the court tossed out the charge.

"There is nothing immoral," said the court, "in the belief that gems or amulets affect the wearer's fortunes; if the (defendant) wishes to sell lucky rocks for what they are, without lying about them, (he) is not acting fraudulently."

The case illustrates the fine line the law must draw in deciding when the mails have been used to cheat the public. Consider another, contrasting case:

Here a man offered - by mail - to do psychic readings that would reveal "the whole truth" about a person's future. His readings were supposed to be based on date of birth, sex, and race. But all the man really did was send out an identical form letter to everybody.

This time a jury found him guilty of "conscious and intentional fraud in promising to do things he did not intend to do."

And a woman ran afoul of the postal laws by operating a service for the lovers. Her technique was to pull in members with teaser ads such as "Wealthy manufacturer wishes to meet congenial, home-loving wife," or "Wealthy young widow seeks husband and adviser."

But in fact she never introduced anybody to anybody, contending herself with simply pocketing the membership fees. Finding her guilty of mail fraud, a court said "the scheme cannot be said in any sense to be a bona fide matrimonial bureau."

Many execs put into wrong jobs

NEW YORK (UPI) — A California executive recruiter swears this story is true. A company hired him to find a young executive at a salary of $40,000 a year. He found a chap with exactly the right qualifications who was making $25,000. "But," he said, "the fellow flatly refused the job after studying the specs, saying 'I couldn't look at myself in the mirror each morning if I took $40,000 for doing that kind of work.'"

Bill Smyth of A. William Smyth Associates, Inc., Ross, Calif., says the experience was unnerving.

"I could understand the view that the prospect might be setting himself up as a vulnerable target by taking a salary the job didn't justify," Smyth said. "But at the same time I felt a chap with his drive soon would have attracted more responsibility and would have been earning the $40,000."

Smyth cited the incident as an extreme example one person's refusal to follow a corporate trend that increasingly is becoming the rule — putting square pegs in round holes.

"The brutal truth," he said, "is that anywhere from 20 to 80 percent of all white collar workers feel they are in the wrong jobs and hate their work."

Smyth said one way a company ends up with the wrong people in the wrong jobs is "by too rigid a policy of promotion from within the company. This policy can perpetrate the old ways at the expense of creativity."

"So can a bad age mix," Smyth said. "Big age gaps in the management team, say between the 20-to-30-year-old turks and 50-to-60-year-old group, can result in viewpoints that are too diverse, both in technical and business outlooks and lifestyles."

"Mirror image hiring is another mistake," he said. The boss hires people just like himself when, in fact, he should look for marketing oriented people if he's technically oriented or vice-versa.

"The boss has the delusion that anyone with his background and personality can do anything."

Smyth said his experience with the young fellow who refused the $40,000 job, in addition to underlining the fact that managers want fair compensation points out that job descriptions given recruiters and prospects often are totally unreal.

"Often the reason for this," Smyth said, "is that the company doesn't want to admit that what it really is looking for is, for instance, someone who can get along with a very abrasive colleague who can't be fired."

But square-peg job hunters can put themselves into round holes, Smyth said.

An almost sure way to do so is to change jobs just for the sake of change. Another way to put yourself behind the eight ball in a new job is not to devote enough thought to the location and living style you want.

Finally, many job seekers have the illusion that, as they become more experienced, the arena in which they can operate expands.

"The truth is," Smyth said, "each added skill, each added lifestyle, family, habit and health requirement limits rather than expands your job possibilities."

Business theft billions a year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Shoplifting, employee pilferage and transportation theft cost American business at least $5 billion last year, insurance and trade groups say.

The biggest loss was a merchandise inventory shrinkage of $4 billion, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

Another $1 billion loss resulted from thefts from railway cars, trucks, ships and transshipment depots, according to Brammall, Inc., of Ansoia, Ind., a firm that makes unique small locking devices for railway cars and freight containers.

Brammall calculates the toll of transportation thefts is growing at a rate of around 17 percent a year.

Curiously, the greater part of the loss from transportation thefts is not reaped by the thieves. The bigger part is in damage resulting from the thefts.

Most of the transportation looting is by casual thieves and most of it can be prevented by cheap but sophisticated locking devices attached to the car doors, Brammall said.

The professional cargo thief is another matter, Brammall concedes.

"There's literally no way to stop him if he's determined. But sooner or later he may get caught fencing his loot or get careless and be grabbed rehanding."

Clothing, liquor and cigarettes are the merchandise most commonly stolen in transit, accounting for 42 percent of all thefts. Curiously, TV sets, radios and other expensive electronic and musical gear, which account for a large part of the thefts from store warehouses, represent only about 4 percent of thefts in transit, probably because trucks that carry them are well locked.

Worth's will donate percentage of sales

Worth's Stores in Connecticut want to show they have a big heart. On Saturday, Worth's will donate 10 percent of the gross sales from each of their nine stores to the 1978 Campaign of the American Heart Association. In the Hartford Chapter of the Heart Association, three Worth's stores will be participating in this special promotion: West Farms Mall, Manchester, and the Tri-City Shopping Plaza in Vernon.

During the day, the American Heart Association of Greater Hartford will be providing free blood pressure screening at each of the stores. The public may also register for free prizes to be given away Feb. 14. Prizes include hosiery, wallets, American Heart Association tee-shirts, cookbooks and canvas tote bags.

Worth's is asking everyone to "come on, have a healthy heart." High interest rate

Society for Savings today announced it is offering high-interest, short-term certificates of deposit to investors.

The non-negotiable certificates are offered in amounts ranging between $100,000 and $150,000 for maturities between 30 days and one year. The interest rates paid, which will be competitive with other money market instruments, are dependent on the term chosen. The bank's CD rate structure will be set each day by Society's Investment Department.

William W. Wilcox, senior vice president and treasurer of the bank, said the certificates offer Society's customers and other investors a money market instrument that is competitive with treasury bills, commercial paper and certificates of other financial institutions.

Val Rossetti, Caldor treasurer, said the company experienced "a good January" despite bad weather that forced a temporary interruption of operations at some of the stores.

Need for executives up in region in '77

Demand for business executives in the Northeast in 1977 increased 30 percent over 1976.

Among executive functions in the Northeast, 1977 demand for engineering and science executives rose 47 percent and operations executives climbed 46 percent compared to the previous year.

During the same period, non-manufacturing companies' demand for executives in the region rose by 77 percent and manufacturing companies 47 percent, while financial service companies showed no change.

These highlights are among the findings of the latest Executive Demand Index by Arthur Young & Co. The report covers the three-month and 12-month periods ending Dec. 31, 1977.

The Northeast region comprises Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

Nationwide demand for business executives rose by 30 percent in 1977 compared to 1976, but it has been declining steadily since its peak in the first quarter of 1977. During 1977, the strongest increases in the nation occurred in the Southwest and West.

Among industry groups, non-manufacturing companies ranked highest. Demand for executives in personnel, operations, and marketing positions recorded the greatest gains, while demand for engineering and science executives showed the smallest gain.

Edwin S. Mruk, a director of Arthur Young & Co., accounting firm, noted that while 1977 outpaced 1976, "the persistent decline since the first quarter is worrisome."

Mruk pointed out that "although demand for business executives during the fourth quarter rose four percent over the same quarter in 1976, it fell about seven percent from 1977's third quarter and 24 percent from the first quarter."

The current demand for executives is still relatively strong," he said, "but the decline reflects continued feelings of uncertainty among corporations about the economy. This uncertainty is reflected in more cautious hiring goals for new management level personnel."

For the year ending Dec. 31, 1977, the largest increase in demand was for personnel executives, up 48 percent over 1976.

"This reflects industry's need to implement recent government regulations such as equal employment, employee health and safety, and pension reform," Mruk said.

"The strong demand for operations executives and marketing executives, up 38 percent and 24 percent, respectively, is in keeping with the trend we have witnessed over the last year," Mruk said.

"Openings for operations and marketing executives continue strong because of management's paramount concern for improving company productivity."

Bank pays interest on unset diamonds

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Southwest Side bank is dangling diamonds on the hook in hopes it will snare high rollers in the world of bank depositors.

The Ford City Bank pays off its interest obligations in unset diamonds at wholesale prices instead of cash if customers prefer. The deposits are mostly four-year certificates.

Mrs. Maureen McQuinn, manager of personal banking, said the idea has caught on so well the program has been extended beyond its original Jan. 31 deadline to Feb. 15.

The diamond payoff ranges in size from one-half to two-and-a-half carats. There is also one super special — a 15-carat stone not intended for the average wage earner.

The 15-carat diamond comes with a $430,000 four-year certificate of deposit. A half-carat requires a $2,225 four-year deposit. A two-carat stone is payable as interest for a $23,950 deposit for four years, a 30-month deposit of $40,150 or a 12-month deposit of $103,600.
