Israel strikes again

By United Press International Israeli warplanes struck at Palestinian targets today and ground forces battled pockets of resistance along a 64-mile front in southern Lebanon.

Although Israeli forces secured their major objectives during their initial 17-hour assault of southern Lebanon begun Tuesday the Palestinian resistance to the onslaught kept the battle field warm.

The commander of Israel's northern front, Maj. Gen. Avior Ben-Gal, told UPI correspondent Mattias Chazanov in the Christian Lebanese village of Marjayoun that at least 200 Palestinians have been killed out of an estimate total force of 2,000.

Palestinian spokesmen said Israeli forces today staged a lightning command raid north of the Mediterranean port of Tyre, reminiscent of the guerrilla attack last Saturday north of Tel Aviv which killed 34 Israeli civilians and triggered the three-day-old Israeli military operation into Lebanon.

A dispatch from Tyre quoted local residents the raiders killed 20 civilian refugees fleeing north along the coastal highway from the southern central village of Tibnin, a target of Israeli military thrusts.

The government Israeli radio, however, denied the reports of an Israeli raid at Tyre. Israel pressed its battle to eliminate Palestinians from its northern frontier and to create a terror-free zone six miles deep amid behind-the-scenes efforts between Israel and the United States to set up a permanent peace-keeping force to police the area.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson Jr. was faced today with deciding whether to extend his Taft-Hartley restraining order against striking coal miners - an order that has been largely ignored.

Robinson had set a hearing for today on a full 90-day "cooling off" injunction under the act, but changed his mind after meeting Thursday with attorneys for the government, United Mine Workers union and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Instead he was expected to approve a Justice Department request that the current order - which expires at 6 p.m. EST - be extended until March 25 while rank-and-file UMW members vote on a new agreement.

Both the union and industry supported that move, according to court sources.

The American Civil Liberties Union, however, opposed any extension or injunction. ACLU attorney Joseph Rauh said there was "a great civil liberties violation in the restraining order."

He said no economic showing had been made of a need to curtail the constitutional right of speech and organization.

Ballooning has been scheduled for one day - next Friday, March 24 - by the union's International Executive Board.

Main canal treaty ready for debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Confident despite the narrow approval of the neutrality treaty, Senate leaders today scheduled debate on the main Panama Canal pact in hopes of ratifying it by mid-April.

By vote of 68-32, the Senate Thursday ratified the first of two controversial canal treaties and handed President Carter a substantial and bitterly fought for diplomatic and political victory.

Meanwhile, Panamanian Gen. Omar Torrijos warned his nation would accept no changes in the treaties that would mean "occupation in perpetuity disguised as morality."

In an exchange of letters dated March 15 and released by the Panamanian Embassy shortly after the Senate vote, Torrijos said his government would "carefully study" any reservations written in by the Senate.

Carter had told him to expect the Senate to attach a number of reservations to the treaty and said, "We have made every effort and have been successful to date in ensuring that these will be consistent with the general purposes of our treaty."

The Senate vote comes scores of amendments to the first treaty and approved two Torrijos earlier said would be acceptable. But he had not responded to the U.S. defense and security rights, including use of military force if the canal is ever shut down, for whatever reason.

Members of the American Conservative Union announced Thursday, in fact, they would launch a $250,000 anti-treaty campaign during the Easter recess.

President Carter today warned the Soviet Union against using its military might for "political blackmail" and said America is prepared to spend more on its own arsenal if necessary.

In what was billed as get-tough, major defense statement, the president also told the Soviet Union its stepping up military activities may erode "popular support" in the United States for joint ventures by the two nations.

The president made his address at Wake Forest University before boarding a nuclear aircraft carrier for a demonstration cruise off the Georgia coast, where he will spend the weekend.

Carter pointed to the Russian arms buildup and an "ominous inclination" toward nuclear war.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The new school law ordering integration of many handicapped children into regular school classrooms by the fall will not end special education classes, the National Education Association said today.

Opinion
U.N. dollars

The United States has been far and away the major contributor to the financing of the United Nations since the organization's establishment. Over many post-war years of growing affluence in other countries, Washington has succeeded in reducing its share of the world bill somewhat. But it remains well ahead of the runners-up. The United States currently provides 25 percent of the regular budget, compared with 12.97 for the Soviet Union and 7 percent each for West Germany and Japan, and bears a similarly large proportion of the burden for most of the specialized agencies.

Consolidation last step of three-part fiasco

To the editor:
What a fiasco! A regular Penneygate affair, Ted's folly, as the mess is popularly called, has already cost taxpayers over a half-million dollars with the price rising daily. That new firehouse is a hot topic before the Buckland park bomb was dropped. But that little group that made the secret deals with J.C. Penney have lost the firehouse case. They needed the firehouse for the two developments and for insurance purposes. The three-part deal had to come out one piece at a time to reduce community backlash. After all, laws would be broken, special treatment extended, businesses and neighborhoods ruined, and two towns made vulnerable. Manchester, especially, would become a target for Hartford's problems because of the type of developments.

Every Irishman has celebration

The miracle of St. Patrick's Day is how many people every year, whose family trees never had so much as a lateral root in the "Kild Sod," suddenly wake up indignantly Irish. And when it comes to today's celebration of the event, every Irishman has his own style. Arrogant races and country-western music are in Dublin and Shamrock, Texas, a green river in Chicago, political protest in Los Angeles and Savannah, Ga., and green beer just about everywhere.

The Litter Control and Recycling Act now before the General Assembly grew out of a desire by legislators and the public to take positive, effective action to preserve Connecticut's environment and natural resources. The Act was written to fill the need for a program that would attack existing litter, while working to prevent littering now in the future. It was intended to bypass previously proposed half-measures and to provide practical means for recycling large amounts of valuable material. It was to blend with and supplement energy saving and solid waste reduction programs.

Keep me wide open, Lord Jesus, to every new line of thought you've given me, for your own glory. Amen.
God's wind of grace. St. John 7:14-36, do you really want to know?
Today's passage hits hard. It shows that some of us are satisfied to live with our doubts because we don't really want to know the truth about Jesus. We throw up a smoke screen and hide behind it. Here is Jesus trying to get to us. How to be confused about Jesus - thinking of him simply as a man, Verse 15. That will mean you can disagree with him when he gets too close to the mark. He dishonored about yourself; Verse 20. Make out that you're all about more than you really are. Don't go into things too deeply; Verse 24. Find easy ways to brush things off. Don't

ASK MACC
Editor: Fr. Steve Jacobson
A service of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches

Question
Why do kids have to attend school until they're 16, even if they have parents' permission to drop out before?
Answer:
Parents do not have the choice to let their children drop out of school before the age of 16 in Connecticut because of a state law. According to this law, every child between the ages of 7 and 16 must attend school daily. It is the parent's responsibility to guarantee that their child attends school daily. Thus, it is illegal for a child between the ages of 7 and 16 to be kept out of school or to be truant.

'Mame' requires some criticism

It's hard to write negatively about people you know, but in the case of people who put together last Friday night's production of "Mame," it is unavoidable.

The play, as staged in Bailey Auditorium under the direction of Martha White, was simply a poor piece of theater.

A lot of hard work by many good people went into the preparation of "Mame," but this labor did not show through in the final product.

"Mame" could have been a good play. Miss White has proven herself a very capable director in past shows, and the cast was one of the most talented in years.

Of course, the play had its bright spots. There were a few imaginative production numbers, and some good acting, but overall the play did fail.

The audience had the major problem of not being able to hear through the noise of the orchestra. Through the entire first act, amplification was increased and her beautiful singing voice was allowed to shine through.

Our problems with the sound system did not hamper Jerry Ganley, who magnificently played young Patrick Dennis. Both his speaking and singing voice were able to be heard in both acts.

Vera Charles, Mame's best friend, was played with a beautiful flair by Fran Clemens. Her portrayal of Vera, a second rate actress, but a first-class lush, was clear and well defined.

The role of Beauregard Pickett Burside was handled by Paul Munis. He captivated the audience with a Southern charm that led to the show's best scene at his plantation, Peckerwood.

Male dancers, identically dressed in riding tops, formed a fast stepping line to the show's title tune.

Arlene Tripp stole the scene as Mother Burside, Beauregard's wicked mother. Her tall gray wig was hilarious, and she kept her character quite constant.

Stephen Latham, as the older Patrick Dennis, was good, though he, as well as Miss Bronisz, are capable of better performances than they gave last Friday.

The lack of attention to details was a detriment to the play as a whole. While the time span of the play is 1925 to 1946, the costumes span the first 75 years of the century.

Colleen Wright played the bubble-headed fiancé of Patrick, Gloria Upson, to perfection, injecting just the right amount of cultural obnoxiousness into the role.

Grace Jaworski, as Sally Cato, a friend of Beauregard Burside, was an stylish and wonderfully cast.

There were moments in the show that were excellent, most notably the "Open a New Window" number, which shone with innovation. Also, the Moon Lady scene, where Bettina Bronisz was at her funny best, desperately trying to cling to a rising moon.

Unfortunately, these moments were few, and the result was not a tangible piece of theater. Better luck next time. — Paul Marté members (there were close to 200) didn't know their steps.

A suggestion for future productions would be to have a chorus of 20 to 30 members who would be willing to invest the time and effort needed to perfect the choreography, which was for the most part original, imaginative, and entertaining.

Backstage is saluted for work on musical

The show had two major problems: lack of attention to details, and an aura of unprofessionalism and unpreparedness.

The unprofessionalism was at its worst when, as the audience entered the theater, actors in full costume and make-up were roaming about the lobby. Unfortunately, this appalling display set the stage for most of the first act.

The unpreparedness was highlighted by clumsy and overly long scene changes. Many chorus members were seen in the audience, and some were in the way of the audience.

Finally, at 4 a.m., they came home. They said they ran into some old friends and were just sitting around their apartment talking over old times. They didn't bother to call me because they didn't want to be disturbed.

Believe me, I will NEVER give them the kind of night they gave me.

When my parent used to tell me they "worried" when I didn't come home when I said I would, I thought they were silly. Well, now that I got a taste of my own medicine, I don't think they're so silly anymore.

Last Saturday night my folks went out and said they'd be home around midnight. Well, it got to be one o'clock in the morning, then two, then three and they still weren't home, and I nearly went out of my mind when they were both dead in a ditch somewhere with the car on top of them.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 64 and Norman is 68. We have two married sons. Everything was fine until about five months ago when I noticed that Norman was spending a lot of time in the carport, even when it was pouring rain.

I started to watch him from the window, and I saw him making hand signals and waving to the lady across the street. I noticed, too, that when Norman walked the dog, he would stand in front of this lady's house and stare into her window. Then she'd come to my window and the hand signals and waving would start.

The woman is older than I am. I noticed that this monkey business between her and Norman goes on only when her husband is at work—never on weekends or in the evening. I finally couldn't take it anymore, so I called our two sons over and asked them to talk to their father about this outrageous flirting. They told him to stay out of the carport and to walk the dog in the other direction, which he did for two days. Then he went back to his old tricks, claiming there was nothing to it.

Abby, I'm sick about this and am losing weight. What can I do? I can no longer trust my husband of 44 years.

DEAR JEALOUS: I think you're making something out of nothing. What harm is there in a little waving and a few hand signals? It's certainly not important enough to worry about. Please try to see the humor of it, dear. It is his hobby, and he's having fun. Laugh about it. And when Norman realizes that you think it's funny, he'll probably quit.

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is 70, has struck up an unusual friendship with a young woman in her early 20s. The two of them make the rounds on weekends, socializing with friends with the musicians, and sometimes bring them home for a jam session until the wee hours. It seems strange that this young lady has no friends of her own age.

My mother tries to look younger by wearing her hair shoulder-length. She even wears false eyelashes and clothes that are definitely not for a woman her age. She looks ridiculous. Please put this in your column. It might do her good to see it.

DEAR DAUGHTER: If you mother looks "ridiculous," she's the one who will pay the price. For my part, if she's happy, I fail to see what she's hurting.

DEAR ABBY: I am only 14, but I learned a lesson I will never forget. When my parent used to tell me they "worried" when I didn't come home when I said I would, I thought they were silly. Well, now that I got a taste of my own medicine, I don't think they're so silly anymore.

Win at Bridge

Squeeze that extra trick

This north bid three spades he knew that his partner held five of that suit. Hence, he gave the preference with two honors in spades and three hearts instead of bidding four hearts or three notrump.

South had a slight problem in the play. He won the first diamond in dummy and led the king of trumps. West took his ace and played two more diamonds. This gave South a chance to ruff in dummy and discard his potential losing heart. But South ruffed in his own hand, led a spade to the queen, back to his hand with a heart and then he ran off the rest of the tricks.

It was a matter of simple squeeze against East. On the last trump East had to chuck a heart or a spade.

Tennis team tough

This year's Manchester High School Boys' tennis team may be the best ever seen in Manchester. Coach Dave Flanagan's netmen began practice this week.

The '78 squad is screaming with talent. Junior Scott Gottlieb is ranked in New England, recently won a New England tournament, and will be nearly impossible to beat.

Senior Jim Kennedy is also a fine player, himself a match for Gottlieb. Junior Chris Boser (you remember that name from basketball season) will round out the top three singles players.

Depth will be the main reason for the Indians' success this year. Aside from the aforementioned players, the Indians will stick seniors Rich Marshall, Scott Hyde and Tom Donovan. Returning juniors include John Keller, Rob Saunders and Joe Lovell. Newcomers to the team are John Hastelt (another name from basketball) and possibly Ed Kennison.

Naturally, there are a number of "ifs" involved with any prediction. The team will only succeed if the members get in shape, learn to play well together, and go to practice.

The team will also succeed only if the necessary players stay with it. For Boser, Gottlieb and Kennedy, playing outdoors in a team situation is unusual. Playing under a coach whose advice they may or may not respect could, too, be a factor. Those they're equal to the challenge.

Male dancers, identically dressed in riding tops, formed a fast stepping line to the show's title tune.

COEP becoming big business

COEP (Cooperative Occupational Education Program) has been in existence at Manchester High School since 1969. First a small program with 25 students, it now comprises eight staff members and more than 450 students.

Anyone who elects the COEP program must also elect other major subjects in other fields to fulfill graduation requirements. Students receive one high school credit for completing the COEP class requirements. They also receive a high school credit for working 15 to 20 hours weekly at on-the-job training station.

This is considered to be a classroom away from Manchester High.

The COEP staff works closely with the guidance department and the school administration to ensure that COEP students are granted early release on working days, in order to be on the job during prime time for many employers.

The basic philosophy behind COEP is that work is important and that preparing a student for full-time employment is an important part of the school's responsibility.

The students are there to be placed in a training station and learn, not just to work at a part-time job. The employer plays two roles—that of employer and teacher.

The three major phases in the COEP program are open to any student enrolling in the program. The largest of these is the Cooperative Work Experience-Diversified Occupations Program. Five of the eight staff members are assigned to this section.

Students in this phase are taught skills, knowledge, understandings and attitudes needed for successful employment. Students are placed in a variety of jobs, depending on their interests, career objectives, abilities, and availability of working time. Students have been placed everywhere from veterinary offices to automotive departments.

The second major phase is the nurse's aide program. Students enroll in this two-year course in their junior year and work in convenient homes. They work in Manchester Memorial Hospital in their senior year. All classroom instruction is related to the work they perform. Recommended related courses for this phase are human biology, general biology, patterns in human behavior, child development, and math in nursing practice.

The third major phase is marketing and distribution. This is designed for students who wish to pursue a career in marketing or retailing. Classroom instruction is geared toward skills needed for such an occupation, such as cash register operation, display advertising, and merchandising mathematics. More than 100 enrolled students are employed in many Manchester businesses.

COEP is doing admirably at MHS with more than one-fifth of the school population involved. More than 80 percent of the students enrolled have been placed in more than 200 Manchester business establishments. These salient facts show the success of a well-founded group — Jim Richardson

MHS notes

Due home today Mr. Zatursky's Washington crew returns home today. Their absence left quite a void in many of the Junior Honor classes. We hope Mr. Z and Jimmy hit it off well.

Finally, at 4 a.m., they came home. They said they ran into some old friends and were just sitting around their apartment talking over old times. They didn't bother to call me because they didn't want to be disturbed.

Believe me, I will NEVER give them the kind of night they gave me.

When my parent used to tell me they "worried" when I didn't come home when I said I would, I thought they were silly. Well, now that I got a taste of my own medicine, I don't think they're so silly anymore.

Last Saturday night my folks went out and said they'd be home around midnight. Well, it got to be one o'clock in the morning, then two, then three and they still weren't home, and I nearly went out of my mind when they were both dead in a ditch somewhere with the car on top of them.

Crews trying hard to move oil barge

WATCH HILL, R.I. (UPI) — A Coast Guard cutter was bringing high speed pumps to crews working to expedite the move of the crippled 546-foot barge Ocean-250 to a Long Island shipyard for continued offloading operations.

"The plan is to put the barge on an even keel at its anchorage, then escort it to Northville, Ind., near Mattituck (on Long Island's north shore) where it will be offloaded totally," Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer James T. Perkins said today.

Perkins refused to confirm an earlier report that 400,000 gallons of gasoline had spilled into Block Island Sound, but he did say no more gasoline was escaping from the barge's pierced hull.

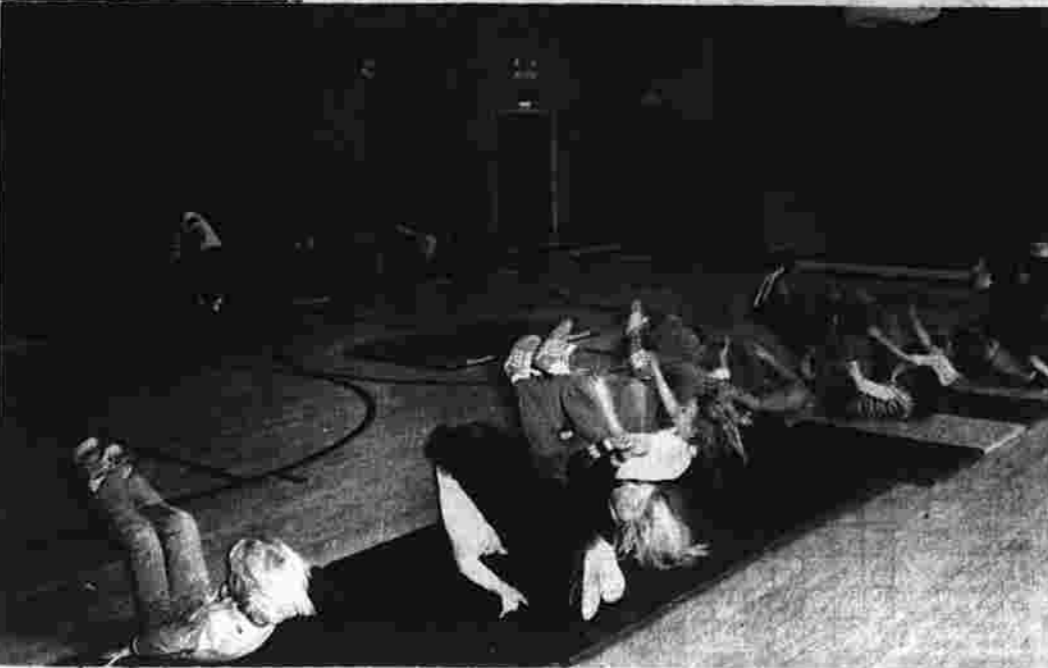

The decision to lift anchor and push the barge across Long Island Sound to the petroleum products terminal from a position 2 miles southeast of Watch Hill lighthouse was up to Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Joseph E. Tamaionis, captain of the nearby guard in New London, Conn., according to Perkins.

Tamaionis departed at daybreak today via helicopter to inspect the barge and an extensive gas sheen which had swept over it the barge and headed out to sea. The Ocean 250 had been on a run from Marcus Hook, Pa., to New Haven, Conn., and had veered approximately 10 miles off course before it ran aground perilously close to this small summer resort town.

"We haven't received one report of gasoline washing up on any coastline," Perkins said. "The cutter Bittersweet has picked up high speed pumps and is on its way out to the barge."

Trailer park owner criticizes state role

HARTFORD (UPI) — Robert Nicoll says the way Connecticut trailer park operators treat their tenants is "pretty sickening" and the Griswold mobile home owner feels the Real Estate Commission is standing by and letting it happen.

The head of the commission's mobile home division concedes the trailer park industry is a "monopoly." But he says the Nicoll's charges are a "figment of his imagination."

Nicoll told the General Law Committee Thursday he and other mobile home owners are at the mercy of the trailer park operators, who rent out lots of mobile homes.

"We live in Corruptville, U.S.A.," said Nicoll, of the Connecticut Mobile Home Association, a group of mobile home owners.

Nicoll said he has been kicked out of two trailer parks, allegedly because he violated his lease. But Nicoll said he never had a lease.

"I asked for one and I was denied," he said. "You can't terminate something you never had."

He said trailer park operators frequently raise the rent and tack on additional charges for things like dogs and children. Nicoll said his base rent at one park was $45 a month, but when the extra charges were added on he had to pay $75 a month.

Nicoll said mobile home owners can't fight back because they have to live somewhere and local zoning laws limit the number of trailer parks in the state.

Nicoll blamed the Real Estate Commission for not enforcing a 1974 law designed to crack down on corrupt practices by trailer park owners. He said part of the problem is a staff shortage at the Real Estate Commission.

Extra effort pays in tax collection

The Town of Manchester's increased tax collection effort apparently is paying off, according to figures for the month of February.

The town collected $471,241.90 in taxes during February, Turek said. The figure is excellent for the month, which is not normally a heavy one for tax collection.

Property taxes are due in two installments, one in July and one in January. Thus, taxes become overdue Feb. 1.

This year, the town has made an increased effort to collect overdue taxes. Foreclosure notices were sent to property owners who owe taxes from past years. The town also sent letters to property owners who owe overdue taxes for the present fiscal year. The town threatened to place a lien on those properties if the taxes are not paid.

The February collection figure increased the town's collection for the year to $16,287,960.21, Turek said. This equals 93.4 percent of the estimated tax revenue for the year.

Last year, at the end of February, the town had collected 94.3 percent of estimated taxes.

Thus, the town is still behind last year's collection effort on a percentage basis, but there is an improvement since the February collections.

Before February, the town had been two percent behind last year's collection percentage.

Even with the collection total of last month, the town still must work to avoid a deficit based on a shortfall in tax collection.

Last year, the town fell short of its projected revenues. If that happens again this year, it could result in a possible deficit at the end of the fiscal year.

Health fair to include physical fitness tests

The Town of Manchester Health Department will conduct a physical fitness screening program at Tuesday's Health Fair.

The third annual fair will be co-sponsored by the Manchester Public Health Nursing Association and the Health Department. It will be held at the Manchester High School cafeteria from 2 to 7 p.m.

The theme of the Health Department's booth will be "Improve Your Lifestyle." It will promote the benefits of physical conditioning and exercise and stress that physical fitness is part of preventative medicine.

Participants in the screening program will first be asked to fill out a short questionnaire that asks what shape they think they are in. They will then take a cardiovascular fitness test and a series of tests to indicate general physical abilities. Pulse readings will be taken with a newly developed electronic equipment.

The test will compare the participant's results with the actual results.

A literature table will be available for those who feel the need to begin an exercise program.

Roger Simm of WFSB-TV will be on hand to answer questions on sports and his job as a sportscaster.

Democrats, Republicans will be busy in Bolton

There will be a flurry of political activity in Bolton over the next week. The activity will begin with an organizational meeting and election of officers of the Democratic Town Committee tonight at 8 at the Community Hall.

The recently elected members of the committee begin a two-year term tonight. Mr. Cannon who has served as chairman for the past two years does not plan to seek re-election as chairman. She will be seeking the vice chairmanship.

John Morianos, current vice chairman, will seek the chairmanship.

The seats of secretary and treasurer will also be filled. Nominations for the four offices will be accepted from the floor.

The Republican Party will caucus Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Bentley Memorial Library. The caucus will elect delegates to the various state conventions that will choose candidates for the November election.

Robert Morra, Republican town chairman, said, "This is where the process for choosing candidates begins. I urge the Republican electors to attend and choose delegates to the conventions."

The newly elected town committee will have its organizational meeting and election of officers immediately after the caucus.

Morra will not seek re-election as chairman but will seek election as vice chairman.

William Febling will seek the chairmanship. Douglas Cheney has announced his candidacy for treasurer and Dorothy Miller for secretary.

Anyone interested in any of the offices may call Morra at 649-4456. Morra said nominations will be accepted from the floor.

The Democratic Party will caucus Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the Community Hall. The caucus will elect delegates to the state convention to choose candidates to the November state election.

Mr. Cannon said all Democrats should attend the caucus. "It is their opportunity to make the preference known."

Anyone interested in being a delegate should call Mr. Cannon at 649-8080.

Noise rule hearing

A public hearing on Bolton's proposed noise ordinance will be held Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. at the Community Hall.

The hearing scheduled for last night had to be postponed because of the snowstorm. The Board of Selectmen rescheduled the hearing to March 20. However, there is not enough time to publish a legal notice, so the various state conventions that will choose candidates for the November election will be in January. It was revised and a second public hearing was scheduled for March 8. Failure to publish a legal notice meant the hearing couldn't be held until March 16.

Democratic event

The Democratic Town Committee St. Patrick's Day dinner dance will be Saturday from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. at St. Maurice Church parish center.

A corn beef and cabbage dinner will be prepared by First Selectman Henry Ryba. Set-ups will be provided at the bring your own bottle affair.

Dancing will be to the music of a live band. Tickets will be sold at the door or from Ivi Cannon, 649-8080, John Morianos, 649-6338, or Allan Hoffman, 649-9662.

Hospital solicits public

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

Volunteer workers for the Rockville General Hospital fund drive gathered at the Vernon Middle School Thursday night to launch into the final and most critical phase of the drive, that of soliciting the community at large.

To date the campaign has raised $642,641 on the credit side of the ledger. The goal is $1.25 million to be collected to add a new wing to the existing facility. This new wing will provide a new pediatrics unit and allow expansion of the emergency unit and other ancillary facilities.

ZBA OKs restaurant

Vernon

In executive session Wednesday night, the Zoning Board of Appeals voted to grant a variance in liquor regulations to allow Nicholas Bonatsakis of Westfield to open a restaurant in the Shopping Bag Plaza, Rockville.

The variance, which will allow Bonatsakis to sell liquor, was needed because the plaza is closer than 1,000

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dempsey are co-chairmen of the community drive and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dooley are over-all chairmen for all phases.

Discussing the hospital's current need, Donald B. Caldwell, president of the Board of Trustees, recalled the spirit of community cooperation that has characterized America's growth and unparalleled success. "We are in a position to continue that tradition by our efforts here and now for Rockville's future generations," he said.

He recalled the first endowment fund, $50,000 given by William H. Prescott and said through the years the hospital has been heavily endowed and these funds have been administered judiciously with all but the proposed wing being paid for with them.

Minister opposes blue law

HARTFORD (UPI) — Businessmen have a tendency to scatter when they see Connecticut clergy show up at a legislative hearing on Sunday closing laws. But they just might get to like Pastor Wayne Willey.

Willey thinks Connecticut lawmakers have better things to do than pass laws encouraging religion.

"I am generally opposed to any law that gives religion encouragement," the neatly groomed Seventh Day Adventist minister told the General Law Committee Thursday. "We can make it in the market place without the help of the Legislature."

The Waterford pastor expressed an unusual departure from the long line of clergymen who have paraded before the legislative committee during the past two years. Almost to a tee, those men of the cloth have pleaded with the legislature to reinstate the Sunday closing laws.

In the spring of 1976, a Court of Common Pleas judge ruled the state's "blue laws" were vague, arbitrary and unconstitutional. He said stores could stay open on Sundays until the Legislature came up with a legally acceptable law.

It has been trying ever since. Step by step, Willey attempted to knock down the argument, traditionally offered by those who favor new blue laws in Connecticut.

Although Willey's sentiments were echoed by several businessmen at the hearing, he did not get the support of William J. Whelan, executive director of the Connecticut Catholic Conference.

HARTFORD (UPI) — Businessmen have a tendency to scatter when they see Connecticut clergy show up at a legislative hearing on Sunday closing laws. But they just might get to like Pastor Wayne Willey.

Willey thinks Connecticut lawmakers have better things to do than pass laws encouraging religion.

"I am generally opposed to any law that gives religion encouragement," the neatly groomed Seventh Day Adventist minister told the General Law Committee Thursday. "We can make it in the market place without the help of the Legislature."

The Waterford pastor expressed an unusual departure from the long line of clergymen who have paraded before the legislative committee during the past two years. Almost to a tee, those men of the cloth have pleaded with the legislature to reinstate the Sunday closing laws.

In the spring of 1976, a Court of Common Pleas judge ruled the state's "blue laws" were vague, arbitrary and unconstitutional. He said stores could stay open on Sundays until the Legislature came up with a legally acceptable law.

It has been trying ever since. Step by step, Willey attempted to knock down the argument, traditionally offered by those who favor new blue laws in Connecticut.

Although Willey's sentiments were echoed by several businessmen at the hearing, he did not get the support of William J. Whelan, executive director of the Connecticut Catholic Conference.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Vida Blue is in hiding today, waiting for San Francisco Giants owner Bob Lurie's return and a private meeting over a new contract.

The Giants obtained Blue, a former Cy Young Award winner from the Oakland A's Wednesday night and Lurie, reacting immediately once word got out, said "without question now, we have the best pitching staff in baseball."

The Giants gave up seven players and close to $400,000 to get Blue. Lurie, the Giants' owner at the time the deal was announced, seemed beside himself.

"It's sensational," he said. "We gave up some good young players but we felt we had to get the best pitcher of Vida Blue's ability."

"Is that right?" Blue said when a newsman read out Lurie's comment. "Well, now we are going to find out how much gold Mr. Lurie has."

Blue, unhappy with a $160,000 a year contract with the A's that has two years to run, said he would like to sit down with Lurie and talk about a new agreement.

"I'm not after the world," Blue said. "But if I was with seven players plus some cash, then I certainly deserve more money than I am making. It's a super opportunity for me to go to that big market. I'm happy about that part but I'm not at all happy about my contract."

Blue said he doesn't anticipate a problem but that he would like his contract settled before the start of the season. He also wants the Giants to be certain of his status. Blue has a suit pending against Charlie Finley in a Bay Area court. It stems from his canceled sale to the New York Yankees in 1976. If he wins the suit, he can become a free agent.

"We'll have to sit down and talk and do it soon," said Blue. "I want the Giants to be sure of my whole situation. They could be left holding the bag and that might not be fair."

As for joining the Giants, the 28-year-old left-hander seems excited. "Let's see now," he said. "The Giants, isn't that the team that's the Count (John Montefusco), Ed Halicki and Jim Barr? That's a pretty good pitching staff right there, so I guess they added to their strength. How can a team with those pitchers be a 100 to 1 shot (Las Vegas odds released the other day)? We'll have to do something about that."

End of the line
The old man of hockey, Gordie Howe is closing in on another 100-point season in the World Hockey Association. The 49-year-old veteran has accumulated 85 points on 22 goals and 63 assists as the New England Whalers head for Cincinnati tonight and then on to Quebec Sunday night for a game to be telecast by Channel 3 at 8 o'clock. Tuesday night the Whalers return home for the start of a rugged seven-game slate over nine days with Indianapolis and Winnipeg on the first two foes. The Jets have all but wrapped up the regular season by winning 10 of their last 11 games.

John McKeon, who starred at East Catholic High and later at Dartmouth, is now in his first year at the University of Connecticut Medical School. The big first baseman hopes to play Twilight League baseball this summer. Dartmouth grads Gene Davis, Chuck Woodhouse and John McKeon turned out to help honor Tony Lupini at Monday night's Irish-Soccer Night of the Knights of Columbus. The Irish Night attracts the largest attendance of any nationally held game.

Wright pitching impresses RSox
WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) — The Boston Red Sox are beginning to think they may have the 1978 version of lefthander Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees.

His name is Jim Wright, and while he doesn't throw as hard as last year's American League rookie standout, the pair have something else in common: both kicked around the minor leagues a long time before getting a major league shot.

Guidry led six years in the Yankees' farm system before finally making the big club in his 27th year. He compiled a flashy 16-7 record last season with a 2.82 ERA — the AL's fourth best. Guidry also pitched the Yankees last fall to a World Series triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Wright, also 27, has labored nine years in the Boston Sox farm system, never getting a chance with the parent club despite his ceaseless search for pitching. Now, Red Sox management is taking a long, hard look at their skinny right-hander.

Jim Rice and George Scott socked their first spring homers yesterday as the Red Sox upped their Grapefruit League record to 5-3 with a 4-4 verdict over the Yankees.

Wright, along with Bob Stanley, each pitched well in the win. "He pitched two good innings, two real good innings," bubbled manager Don Zimmer after Wright had pitched over Boston's 6-4 victory by retiring all six Astros he faced. "He had a good hard slider."

Messersmith hurt, may be out season

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees' crowded pitching staff won't be as packed as people thought it might be this season.

Andy Messersmith, who became a Yankee last winter while recovering from elbow surgery, was on his way back to New York Thursday night to be examined by a Yankee team physician after suffering a shoulder separation during a routine play at first base earlier in the afternoon.

The 23-year-old right-hander may be out for the season. He tripped over the bag while covering first base during the Yankees' 3-2 win over the Chicago White Sox.

"The kid has worked so hard," said Executive Vice President Al Rosen. "He was depressed as hell. You can imagine how he feels."

The Yankees went on to win the game in 10 innings, 3-2, on Joe Lefebvre's RBI single, which scored Mickey Rivers.

In other exhibition games Thursday, Atlanta downed Baltimore, 4-2; Boston beat Houston, 3-2; St. Louis rallied to beat Detroit, 6-3; Kansas City beat Pittsburgh, 8-6; Minnesota topped Montreal, 6-3; the New York Mets surprised Toronto, 6-2; Philadelphia routed Cincinnati, 14-1; Oakland crushed San Diego, 18-0; California defeated Seattle, 4-0; and San Francisco topped Milwaukee, 8-2.

Phil Nietro, Craig Skok and Tommy Boggs held the Orioles to two hits as the Braves rolled to victory. George Scott belted the winning home run and Jim Rice had three RBI to lead the Red Sox over the Astros. The Cards scored four eighth-inning runs to nip the Tigers.

Spring training

U.L. Washington hit a two-run single in the sixth inning to highlight the five-run inning and Willie Wilson added another two RBI to lead the Royals over the Pirates ... Dale Soderholm blasted a three-run homer over the left center field wall to give the Twins the win over the Expos.

John Stearns hit a solo homer in the fourth inning for the deciding run and

Biggest challenge for defending champion Miki Irish in the Town Women's Duckpin Bowling Tournament at the Holiday Lanes is expected to come from Irene MacMullen, who paced a field of 20 in last week's qualifying test.

The former made the grade two years ago and Bunce was in the 1972 field.

Irish qualified in 1976 but didn't reach the finals until last March, whipping defending champion Mary Simmons, 4-0, for the crown.

Making their debuts in the title matches will be Sue Balesano, Lea MacMullen, Cindy Doyle and Sandy Edwards. Saturday's pairings: Irish vs. Balesano, L. MacMullen vs. Bunce, I. MacMullen vs. Doyle, Rozelle vs. Edwards. Matches are open to the public.

Elderly housing plan still over the budget

Coventry

The Coventry Housing Authority has failed to come up with a proposal for an elderly housing project that is within the $670,000 allocated by the State Department of Community Affairs.

Last year the housing authority's plan for a development of 80 units costing $750,000 was rejected by the DCA as too costly. The authority then stripped items amounting to about $80,000 from their proposal and sent the revised plan out for new bids.

The lowest bid received in the second round was $742,000, still considerably above the DCA ceiling. The ALCA Construction Co. of Hartford submitted the low bid. Other bids received ranged as high as $815,000.

Authority Chairman Albert Bradley believes that inflation caused the bids to be higher than expected after the cuts were made. Designer Frank Dziki modified landscaping and changed the hot water heating system to electric in an attempt to reduce the cost.

Bradley speculated that the units might not be open before 1979 because of the cost problems. He said the DCA expects Coventry's plan to cost about the same as similar units in other towns. However, specially designed septic systems must be planned for Coventry because the town lacks sewers and a public water supply.

The drawing will also establish the waiting list order. Anyone may enter a child's name at the meeting, or if unable to attend, parents may contact Joan Churney, Cone Road, Andover.

The school is a cooperative enterprise and non-denominational, inter-racial and non-profit. The tuition is $170 per year for three-year-olds, two days a week and $220 per year for four-year-olds, three days a week. Scholarships are available.

Shrinkage, Expansion 'Critical'

Most houses will settle to some extent within 12 months after they are built. Such settlement may cause cracks in the walls and at the floor line. Usually they are not large enough to cause any damage.

Since concrete or concrete blocks may continue to shrink for a period of a year, basement walls composed of such material may crack. Usually this will not effect the structural soundness of the house. If large enough to break the outside damp proof coating, they may cause dampness.

Where basement, foundation or outside masonry walls develop cracks that cause leakage or indicate some structural defects, consult your builder to determine the cause and cure.
