

Vernon sets immunization clinics

The Vernon school system will conduct a series of immunization clinics April 18 and 20 and the parochial schools will also be done April 20. Those students who received their measles before age 1 or before 1966 must be reimmunized, school officials said.

State statutes require that each child be properly immunized against measles, rubella and polio before being permitted to attend a public school. Any child who does not comply will face exclusion from school.

A child would be protected against measles and rubella (German measles) if he or she has had the disease, however, proof of this must be documented by a physician.

School officials said that non-compliance with the statutes is permissible only for standard medical or religious reasons. For medical exemption, it is necessary that a doctor provide an explanation. A request for exemption because of religious beliefs must be documented by a clergyman.

Those students needing reimmunization will be given consent forms to be signed by a parent and returned to school immediately. Any student who does not meet the requirements of the state law, by not attending a clinic, will be excluded from school immediately, school officials said.

The clinics will be at: Rye Hill High, Talcottville, Vernon Elementary, Lake Street and Skinner Road schools on April 18.

They will be at Middle, Center Road, Sykes, Maple Street and Northeast schools, April 20.

Inguanti plays the clarinet. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Carmelo Inguanti of Merline Drive.

Both were selected for participation on recommendation of their band director, Ruth Ann King, and through written and tape auditions.

The National Honors Band is sponsored by the National Band Association. It will perform for the Music Educators National Conference biennial meeting in Chicago April 12-15.

The band will be made up of some 100 students representing each of the 50 states. Dr. William D. Revelli, director of bands emeritus at the University of Michigan, will be the director.

Grasso stands by per capita grants

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso said today she "will stand by" a bill approved by the Appropriations Committee to give out $20 million of her $2.13 billion budget to poor communities on a population basis.

Mrs. Grasso, at a Capitol news conference, indicated she was less than enthusiastic, but would support the Democratic leadership's $22 million plan that received approval by the Appropriations Committee Wednesday and heads for the House, where the task of pushing it through began today.

"I will stand by it," she said.

The leadership had scuttled Mrs. Grasso's earlier proposal to distribute to taxpaying homeowners $20 million grants ranging from $20 to $75.

The remaining $2 million would go to municipalities to help them pay for the cost of preparing and mailing the notices.

In accepting the leadership's decision, Mrs. Grasso said she "consented" to a part of the bill that would require municipalities to tell their taxpayers how much they saved in property taxes as a result of the grant.

She denied it was a political ploy to please the voters, as charged by Republicans.

"I see no reason to object to an explanation to the public where their money is going and how it's been spent," she said.

Mrs. Grasso did not say just how much money the state might be ready to give the towns for preparing and mailing tax impact notices but she said it would "be less than the $2 million."

On another matter, Mrs. Grasso indicated her displeasure at the latest actions involving the state gaming commission and its dealings with promoter Ronald Mooney.

The commission has given Mooney several deadline extensions in its efforts to come up with sufficient financial backing to build Connecticut's first horse race track in Middletown.

The commission began hearings last month to decide whether to revoke Mooney's license. The commission met Wednesday but still took no action and set a May 3 date for Mooney's attorney to file briefs on why he should not have his license revoked.

Mrs. Grasso said the proceedings were "long and protected" and "give rise to serious misgivings."

There's a catch to the handouts

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Democratic-controlled Appropriations Committee has endorsed a plan to spend the rest of Gov. Ella T. Grasso's proposed budget by spreading $2.1 million around to Connecticut's 169 cities and towns on the basis of population.

There's a catch, however. A municipality would have to tell its taxpayers how much they saved in property taxes if the Democrat-inspired program is adopted.

Last week, the legislative budget-writing panel gave its stamp of approval to the governor's $2.1 billion spending package — the largest in Connecticut history. At the time, the committee decided how to spend all but $22 million in the budget.

Wednesday, under the watchful eye of House Majority Leader William O'Neill, D-East Hampton, the Appropriations Committee approved 21-14 a bill that would divide up $20 million between Connecticut's 169 cities and towns based on their 1970 populations as determined by the U.S. Census Bureau.

But the bill would also require each town to send notices to taxpayers telling them how much they saved in property taxes under the $20 million program fashioned by Democratic leaders.

The remaining $2 million in Mrs. Grasso's budget is expected to go to municipalities to help them pay for the cost of preparing and mailing the notices.

Republicans on the Appropriations Committee said the program amounted to an election year "giveaway" by Mrs. Grasso and her legislative leaders. But the minority members were particularly upset about the notice requirement.

"This was an attempt to buy votes," complained Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Stamford.

"It's a total outrage to the taxpayers of the state," aid Sen. Patrick Madden, R-Woodbridge.

At first, urban Democrats were also upset with the proposal because it was not weighted in favor of big cities, which have significant welfare populations and eroding tax bases.

"How can we in good conscience vote for a $20 million pass-through on a per capita (population) basis?" Sen. Sanford Cloud, D-Hartford, asked his fellow big city lawmakers.

Sensing that a Republican-urban Democrat coalition would defeat the bill, the committee's Democratic

School group begins long-range planning

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter

A Board of Education Citizens' Advisory Committee on Long-Range Planning was introduced Wednesday night to an eight-point study program involving recommendations for future use of Manchester's schools.

The 28-member committee is charged primarily with assessing the enrollment projection and making an assumption of the population projection is going, according to Dr. James P. Kennedy, school superintendent.

Kennedy also asked the committee to consider regional planning. He said the board sees the town possibly divided into three planning districts — each district containing the schools nearest each other in that area.

The committee has also been asked to consider community use of schools. Board member Paul Greenberg, who conducted the meeting, said the board has already received requests from several groups for use of school space. He mentioned the proposed dental clinic, the town Day Care Center which wants to expand, Lutz Junior Museum, senior citizens, Sheltered Workshop and request for more space for maintenance.

The proposed dental clinic and day care unit would be self-sufficient through federal grants, Greenberg said.

Review the attendance areas covered by the present junior high schools and make recommendations for possible future changes in these attendance areas. A projected timetable should be included.

Review the present physical plant at Manchester High School, along with the school's organization and make recommendations concerning possible future modifications and/or renovations to the building and the organization of the school.

Raise areas of concern for future study and planning.

Each of the committee members was given a notebook with information and reports on the various subjects they will use in their study. Kennedy said some of the reports will be updated and distributed.

The group agreed to meet every other Wednesday in a different school where they may become familiar with that school's facilities. There will be no meetings in July and August. Greenberg asked the committee to have recommendations prepared before meeting by next April.

At the next meeting, the group will elect its own chairman or co-chairman who will collate the recommendations of the committee and prepare them for presentation to the Board of Education and Board of Directors.

Members of the committee are Roger Bagley, James Breitenfeld, William Brindley, Patrick Brown, Dr. Daniel Brosn, Scott Cendaniel, Charles Crocini, John Crowley, Howard Epstein, John Freese.

Also, Mrs. Barbara Goldberg, Neal Hanrahan, Mrs. Darden Haslett, Mrs. Elizabeth Inagliata, Mrs. Rebecca Janenda, Mrs. Emily MacKenzie, Mrs. Marilyn McCann, Mrs. Lee McCray.

Carter, Congress on better terms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Striking farmers are furious with the House and Panamanians are upset with the Senate, but President Carter and Congress appeared to be on better terms today.

Behind the sudden improvement in White House-Capitol Hill rapport was the House decision Wednesday night to reject by an overwhelming 268-150 margin an emergency farm aid bill that Carter had threatened to veto.

The president's decision to accept almost any natural gas pricing compromise reached by a deadlocked House-Senate conference committee, which has blocked approval of the administration's energy package.

Word from Sen. Dennis Deconcini, D-Ariz., the freshman lawmaker who seems to be holding all the cards on whether the Panama Canal treaties will be ratified, that he is willing to compromise on his controversial amendment.

"Everyone who voted no today... they'll be defeated in November," Turek said. He said that he believes this can be done. The department has received promises of payment from several property owners with large overdue tax payments.

ZBA considers cafe bid

Hebron

The former permittee of the Hebron Public House, known locally as the "Pub," and the owner and operator of Gran Sasso asked the Hebron Zoning Board of Appeals last week not to allow the "Pub" to reopen as a cafe.

They charged a cafe would cause problems for the town and Robert Elliott, attorney for the "Pub's" owner, accused them of vindictiveness.

Leo Marquis, who was at one time permittee at the Hebron Public House, addressing a hearing on a request from Robert F. Cafazzo for a variance to permit the "Pub" to operate, said "the town is not prepared for another cafe."

He said it is one thing to have a place where someone stops for a beer on the way home and another to have a cafe where people stay long periods of time.

Marquis also said the town is not prepared to have a cafe in the center of town. "If you don't believe me, check the police records" of areas with cafes, he said.

Philip Andrews, owner and operator of Gran Sasso, said he has worked hard for the past two years to discourage loitering and congregating at his place of business in the Piza Shops on Route 66.

He said he sells wine and beer but has not pursued a full liquor application initiated some time ago because he feels he does not have the space to accommodate and properly control such an establishment.

He predicted problems from persons seeking food after having been at the cafe for the evening.

Elliott presented a brief to the appeals board, saying he felt it necessary to do so because of "the grave concern to Mr. Cafazzo."

During a period when the "Pub" was not operating, the zoning regulations were changed and liquor outlets were no longer allowed within 1,000 feet of each other.

The "Pub" was within 1,000 feet of Nick's Pizza House and because a non-conforming use. Zoning regulations provide that non-conforming liquor outlets lose their non-conforming status if it is not in operation for six months.

DEP urges landfill fence

Coventry

The Coventry Town Council has received a report from the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) recommending fencing near the working face of the sanitary landfill to contain blowing litter.

Over the past few years residents near the intersection of Plains Road and the landfill, where the dump is located, have expressed concern before the council to complain of papers and other garbage blowing out of the landfill and onto the road.

Last year the council directed Town Manager Frank Connolly to extend the landfill's surrounding fence to keep the debris in. To date Connolly has placed a small backstop (as yet unfenced) at the corner in question and has had wire affixed to some of the trees there to contain the litter.

However, a picket fence on the Plains Road portion is down, and papers are blowing out there. Councilman Douglas Whelan asked Connolly to take further measures and to report back to the council on the problem.

In other business resident Paul Dohi turned over a bottle of champagne to the council that had been given to him by a balloonist who landed on the ice at Coventry Lake last week.

The pilot, Clayton Thomas, told Dohi that it was a European tradition to present wine to the owner of the property to which one landed.

Since the town owns the lake, Dohi turned the bottle over to the council and suggested that its members make use of it as preparation for the budget hearings that will be held tonight and Thursday night at the high school. The balloon came to rest near Lakeview Terrace.

The council agreed to explore the possibility of a joint referendum before June 1 on town purchase of the Salvation Army land and on a charter revision that was worked out by a council-appointed commission last year.

The council has asked the manager to have the Army extend the bond for the property near the southern end of the lake until June 1 in order to find out if 50 percent of voters funding will be available toward the purchase.

Congress eyes sub costs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With a planned fleet of 29 Trident missile-carrying submarines possibly costing $10 billion more than the original $40 billion estimates, congressional investigators say it is time for the Pentagon to provide detailed cost figures. The General Accounting Office Wednesday said even a smaller fleet of 21 submarines would cost $7 billion more than the $30 billion figure Navy planners provided Congress. The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, called on Defense Secretary Harold Brown to detail the costs of the submarine. The first Trident, already expected to be a year late when it goes into service in 1981, attracted widespread attention recently because its cost has escalated from an original estimate of $793 million to $1.2 billion, nearly a 50 percent increase. Tridents are being built by General Dynamics, which is embroiled in a $54 million claims dispute with the Navy over other submarines. The Navy last year provided the House Appropriations Committee with projections for costs of 21 and 29 Tridents but said they were "rough order of magnitude estimates" and not "budget-quality."

Rhody delays I-84 decision

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy has postponed making a decision on the controversial Interstate 84 that would stretch from Hartford, Conn., to Providence. The governor wants the Providence Water Supply Board to review the impact of the proposed highway on the quality of water in the Scituate Reservoir, Garrahy spokeswoman Lorraine Silberthau said Wednesday. The board complained last week that it has had no opportunity to participate in the decision. The reservoir supplies water to nearly half of Rhode Island. "He wants them to have all the material they feel they need and then have input in the decision," Mrs. Silberthau said. Garrahy initially planned to issue his decision by the end of last week. Connecticut Gov. Ella T. Grasso has already approved her state's segment of the road.

City garden will blossom

HARTFORD (UPI) — The world's oldest municipal rose garden, in danger of becoming barren because of the expense of maintaining it, will blossom again thanks to a group called The Friends of Elizabeth Park. Group officials said Wednesday they have collected more than $10,000 in contributions during the past year and bought more than 1,000 rose bushes to fill nearly 50 empty rose beds in the nationally acclaimed garden. It costs Hartford more than $200,000 annually to maintain the park, which was willed to the city in 1898.

Bank displays fiber collages

A display of fiber collages by Willa Nolan of Manchester is currently being shown at the Savings Bank of Manchester on Main Street. Mrs. Nolan has used ravelings from various fabrics to create many versions of what she calls, "rhythm in nature." As she begins to assemble them, the product begins to acquire a combination of color, texture and design. Mrs. Nolan's interest in fiber collages began several years ago when she was restoring her son's clothing with needle and thread. As she unraveled the threads, she noted their colors and textures. She would place the threads in attractively shaped bottles, and later took them out, cut them and glued them to fabrics. Designs and patterns developed. Her flower designs show Queen Anne's lace fashioned from white corduroy ravelings, cattails from bits of brown thread. Mrs. Nolan has exhibited at Jorgensen Exhibition Hall at University of Connecticut, Joeoff Gallery at University of Hartford, and in shows in Hartford, New Haven and Avon. She won a Manchester Art Association Show award in 1977. She has studied fiber arts, painting and flower arranging. An article on her floral note card designs has been published in a national needlework and crafts magazine. Her note cards are sold in a Hartford store gallery. The art show, sponsored by Arts Encounter of the Manchester Arts Council, will be in the Savings Bank of Manchester through April 20.

The Town of Manchester built a new firehouse in the Buckland area of Manchester 2 years ago.
1. This Firehouse cost over $350,000.00 to build.
2. This Firehouse costs nearly $250,000.00 to operate.

The reason for this highly unusual situation is that this

Making the metric move

Is 21 degrees shirt-sleeve or bundle-up weather? Celsius degrees are the ones in question, which may become of considerably more than academic interest next year, according to present planning by the National Weather Service.

Starting in June of 1979, the service hopes to begin relating national temperature readings to newspapers and broadcasters in Celsius as well as the customary Fahrenheit. By September, Fahrenheit may be dropped and we'll be winging it with Celsius only.

The changeover, still at the tentative stage, could be the public's broadest and most meaningful exposure yet to the metric system toward which the United States has been progressing by very slow millimeters for the past several years.

According to present service plans, subsequent steps toward fully metric weather reporting will be snowfall predictions in centimeters instead of inches, wind speeds in kilometers instead of miles per hour and, by June of 1980, barometric pressure in kilopascals instead of inches of mercury.

By then, the march to metric should be more apparent in several other areas of public note. Standardized metric sizes — six in all, starting with 1.75 liters — will replace pints, fifths and the like in liquor packaging as of Jan. 1, 1980 by Treasury regulation.

With the 1980 model year, the Transportation Department has decreed that auto speedometers must show both miles and kilometers. An earlier effort to convert highway sign distances to kilometers has been shelved, but occasional signs spotted around the country nevertheless have already gone metric.

Coming up this July will be a first step in the major effort to bring the 50 separate state measurement codes into metric line. The National Council of Weights and Measures, representing state regulatory agencies, is working on a model metric code to be submitted for state-by-state adoption.

A surprising thing is that with all the official involvement, metric is not yet official U.S. policy. Congress thinks conversion may be a good idea but has held back so far from making it compulsory.

Its last words on the subject are in the 1975 law which set up the U.S. Metric Board to "coordinate the voluntary conversion to the metric system."

And that board, eventually to consist of 17 representatives of various public interests, is just now in the process of being selected by President Carter, and confirmed by the Senate.

Once in being, the board will coordinate the multitude of specialized conversion plans now blossoming. One of its first evaluations is likely to be of the National Weather Service's plans for phasing in metric measurements.

By the way, 21 degree Celsius is a comfortable 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

Carter attacked on water policy

WASHINGTON — In a "Workers unite!" call to their members, 24 of the nation's leading environmental groups have sharply attacked the Carter administration for trying to "subvert" promised changes in its federal water policy.

Banded together under the ad hoc Coalition for Water Project Review, the groups held a press conference here the other day to blast an administration policy paper on federal water reform. What was unusual about the blast was that the policy paper hasn't even been completed yet.

"The final document is still being thrashed out in the Interior Department," explained John Burdick, the coalition's coordinator. "But we have friends in the administration who have told us basically what's in it, and we are concerned over the direction it takes."

He told Scripps League Newspapers. The position paper is scheduled to reach President Carter's desk in the next week or two.

Asked specifically if the coalition hopes to force changes in the final document by its public criticism, Burdick said, "Sure."

These groups, including such key organizations as the National Wildlife Federation, Sierra Club, National Audubon Society, and Environmental Action, were riding high a year ago after Carter unveiled a "big list" of 18 dams and other water projects marked for extinction. Congress agreed to cut off funds for nine of the projects, and the administration launched a study of the "develop an" energy program, and "protect farm lands."

Participants in the recent press conference generally refrained from frontally attacking Carter.

"Our members have mixed feelings about him," Burdick said. "But we're certainly questioning the quality of his leadership on this issue."

They didn't hesitate, however, to take on two top Carter aides — Vice President Walter Mondale and Secretary of Interior Cecil Andrus.

"Mondale and Secretary Andrus are taking actions how to render the

DID YOU SEE HIM JUMP WHEN I POPPED OFF THAT LAST VOLLEY...?

My remains go to research

By ANDREW TULLY
 WASHINGTON — If nobody minds, I feel great. I have mailed the little card, and on my death my remains will go to the Georgetown University Medical School for research that some day might enable a doctor to save a child's life.

It is a wonderful feeling because my body is the one thing I can contribute to a society that, by and large, has been good to me. Over the years, a relatively modest income has made it impossible to give more than modest amounts to charity. At the first of sounding pretensions, I like to think that in death I will pay off a part of my debt to humanity.

More than anything else, medical science needs human remains to adequately train its future doctors. There is, and always has been, a body shortage. And yet only through dissection can the anatomical sciences be successfully taught. If medical students and doctors had never dissected a human body, appendicitis probably would be as fatal today as cancer.

There are other considerations, not the least of which is that my death won't cost my estate a thin dime. When I die, the medical school will be notified and my remains forthwith will be removed to its Department of Anatomy. There will be no embalming expense; the agreement prohibits embalming. Moreover, bodies which have undergone autopsy are not accepted.

There is also my personal objection to conventional funerals. For one thing, they have become too expensive, and there is a tendency among next of kin to show their affection for the dead by being overly extravagant in their choice of a casket and other accoutrements of a funeral.

As a born Roman Catholic, I do not derogate the custom of the wake. It

Open forum Opposes Green School

To the editor:

As an occasional drop in at the Senior Citizens' Center, I was quite interested to learn that around $200,000 of the grant to be used for the revitalization of Main Street had been allotted to the Senior Citizens, to be used to provide increased space.

I was more than interested to find that consideration was being given to the Green School, as that is far and away from Main Street. Now that the estimate for renovation is over $200,000, it would seem better if some other way could be found to provide needed space.

How about adding another story to the present building, and installing an elevator, which should cost no more than one at the Green. As for extra parking space, has anyone considered contacting two nearby churches to see if they would permit the use of their lots during the week, for perhaps a small donation, or a contract to keep the facilities clean, and remove snow in the winter? It would entail a short walk, but older people seldom get enough exercise.

What further distresses me is the fact that the Green School is much farther away from the present site for the majority of those using it. All the private homes for the elderly are

Energy cause

To the editor:

Inflation is running rampant, unemployment is still high, the dollar has fallen on every major money market to record lows, and we had the worst trade deficit in our history. Why?

There are many reasons but the root cause of all of the problems is energy. Our country has an unbelievable thirst for energy. In spite of signs everywhere that energy is in a crisis state, we do very little to conserve.

Even if we can get all the energy we want now, we are still in a crisis because we are importing it.

In spite of this, our Congress does nothing on an energy bill which at least will start us in the right direction. People still spend, they still drive when they can walk, and industry uses virgin material instead of recycled which uses much less energy.

Said 'no' to library

To the editor:

The people of South Windsor voted "no" twice in referendum, not to construct a new library.

Despite this fact, the "Ivory Tower" is being built next to the Town Hall. The proposed town budget contains a 2.5-mill increase. A school, my doctor says, these students will have a long wait. The way I feel, I couldn't agree more. Meanwhile, I am content — and just might enter the Boston Marathon.

Those who advocate, "be sure to vote, because your vote counts," certainly cannot be talking about South Windsor.

The politicians have proved by their actions, that they do not have to abide by the wishes of the electorate.

Thoughts

"Peace be with you!" (Luke 24:36)

Into a world torn by dissension, into cities bleeding from prejudice, into churches split by division, into families disturbed by indifference, the Lord Jesus says, "Peace." Are we tempted to capitulate and state that the Lord's greeting is an unattainable reality?

What is peace? Is it really the absence of all sorrow, distress, conflict... just a happy state of euphoria? Rather, doesn't Christ himself show us through his life that peace is achieved only when I have attempted to carry out completely the will of God in my life.

To the extent that I can say "yes" to God will I know the peace of God. Together we pray the words taught by the Lord, "Thy will be done."

Do these words just fall from my lips thoughtlessly or do I have the courage to say, "In his will is my peace?"

Bill allows borrowing for coliseum roof

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Legislature's Finance Committee has voted to let the state borrow $5 million to help Hartford rebuild its collapsed civic center coliseum roof.

The coliseum roof caved in under the weight of several inches of rain-soaked snow at 4:18 a.m. on Jan. 18 — just hours after 5,000 basketball fans left the arena.

While the committee was debating the issue, its room was filled with high-powered legislative leaders, most of whom were elected by the people of Hartford.

Also in attendance was Hartford Deputy Mayor Nicholas Carbone and at least one other member of the Hartford City Council.

The bill was approved 23-5 and sent to the Senate.

It was amended to allow a group of private businessmen to administer the money raised by a state bond issue.

Rep. William E. Taber Jr., R-Orange, complained the bill would spend the money of taxpayers who don't have any interest in Hartford, but he later said he had been convinced by the debate to vote in favor of the bill.

Rep. Chester Morgan, D-Vernon, said the bill was a symbol of a way of life that has existed in Connecticut for centuries.

"When the barn burned down or the barn collapsed, neighbors, whether they were friend or foe, got together and helped out," Morgan said.

Panel approves right turns bill

HARTFORD (UPI) — Bills to allow right turns at red lights, require annual auto pollution inspections and create an investigation of legalized gambling in Connecticut have been approved by a legislative panel.

The Appropriations Committee, pushed along by co-chairman Sen. Robert Hooley, D-Somers, approved about 70 bills in six hours before its 5 p.m. deadline Wednesday.

The bulk of the time was spent taking roll call votes and relatively little time was spent debating the bills. At one point, the budget-making committee simultaneously considered five bills.

One of the five bills, which were approved 34-0, was the right-turn-on-red proposal.

That measure, which would take effect Jan. 1, 1979, would allow Connecticut residents to make right turns at red lights after making a complete stop.

The Appropriations Committee also approved a bill requiring Connecticut to have annual auto emission inspections by 1981. But the measure does not include a specific inspection plan. Instead, it would create a special committee to study the problem and make recommendations next year.

The legislative panel also voted 29-5 to create a bipartisan legislative panel to investigate legalized gambling in Connecticut. The committee would receive $50,000 to do its work.

In other action, the committee approved bills:

- Requiring persons convicted of felonies or reckless or drunken driving to pay the state an additional $10 that would be put in a pool for victims of the crimes. The victims would be allowed to sue for up to $10,000 in damages.
- Paying cities $700,000 for setting up work programs for their welfare recipients;
- Giving $3 million to municipalities for providing psychiatric and mental health services;
- Appropriating $300,000 in emergency fuel aid for the working poor;
- Combining three federal grant programs to hard-pressed cities. Under the proposal, included in the governor's budget, the municipalities would receive $23 million in aid;
- Giving $6 million in state funds to municipalities on a per capita basis;
- Allowing towns to collect $35 from the state for every private or parochial school student that has to be bused to another town;
- Appropriating $150,000 to set up shelters for abused spouses;
- Doing out $99,999 for 55 youth service bureaus around the state;
- Giving raises to Connecticut's Supreme Court justices. A total of $16,500 in raises would be given out the first year, with $33,000 coming in the second year.

Promoter of track gets new extension

WETHERSFIELD (UPI) — The state gaming commission has given promoter Ronald Mooney until May 3 to file briefs and show why his license to build Connecticut's first horse race track should not be revoked.

The extension granted by the commission Wednesday was still another reprieve for Mooney who has been having trouble coming up with the money.

He has survived two other deadlines in trying to prove to the state he can finance the proposed $55 million track in Middletown.

Despite assurances to the contrary, a representative of the commission testified he did not think Mooney's latest effort is financially sound.

Randall Garry, the commission's chief financial advisor, said he did not consider a plan by Mooney to raise the money through bonds using a California agency to be "a bona fide commitment."

Measure will delay Hartford revaluation

HARTFORD (UPI) — A legislative committee has narrowly approved a bill that would let Hartford put off for two more years shifting part of its property tax burden from business to residential landowners.

The bill, approved 15-13 Wednesday with Democratic legislative leaders from Hartford watching closely, was strongly opposed by several lawmakers from districts located outside the Capitol City.

Hartford officials asked for the bill, saying hard-pressed owners of one, two and three-family houses would not be able to withstand another hike in property taxes.

Hartford, which has not revalued property since 1961, will have to conduct a revaluation in October, under the bill passed by the Finance Committee. But the bill allows the city to weigh the revaluation to avoid increasing the burden on residential owners.

Loan deadline extended

HARTFORD (UPI) — The U.S. Small Business Administration has approved a two-month extension of the deadline for filing applications for loans to repair damage to Connecticut businesses during the winter of 1978.

Stanley C. Weinberg Jr., regional director of the SBA, notified Gov. Ella T. Grasso of the extension. Mrs. Grasso earlier this month asked for the extension.

The extension is June 15 applicable only to applications for loans for property damage. Applications for economic loss loans can be filed until November.

Gardening

By Frank Atwood

At the age of 23, Robin Weir is surely one of the youngest independent merchants in Manchester. She was more than two years younger than she is now when she opened her place of business, the Greenhouse, on Broad Street.

I asked Robin how she has been doing as the operator of a plant store, now also offering cut flowers.

"I know I am not going to become a millionaire," she said, "but I have been making a living."

She is happy that her greenhouse roof is made of fiberglass rather than plastic. The heavy snow of Jan. 18 that collapsed the Coliseum roof at the Hartford Civic Center blew harmless off the rigid, rounded roof of the Greenhouse while the roofs of some plastic greenhouses in the area crumpled under the weight.

The storm meant some loss to Robin all the same. For two days she was unable to drive from her parents' home in Andover to her Broad Street store and some of her plants were in trouble for lack of water when she could come to the rescue. Most of them are recovering but their dates for blossoming have been set back.

The weather has an important influence on the sale of plants, Robin knows.

"People won't come in to buy plants in a snowstorm," she said. They come most reliably when the sun shines or when there is a holiday just ahead.

Lily of the Nile, a native of Africa, blooms nicely for Robin Weir at the Greenhouse, the plant and flower shop she operates on Broad Street. Robin says it is her favorite flower. (Herald photo by Pinto)

Easter was the most recent of these holidays and Robin, who usually works alone, had three helpers to wait on Easter customers. I asked her what they bought and she said "everything in sight."

More people gardening

Mothers' Day will be next, May 14, and then Memorial Day at the end of June, traditional time to buy plants for outdoor gardens or seeds for planting outdoors.

"People are more into gardens," said Robin, and she expects a good Memorial Day demand.

The worst setback in the short history of this business enterprise was caused by weather, the loss last fall of 2,500 chrysanthemum plants of 3,000 were grown by Robin's mother, Mrs. Walter Weir, for her to sell. A long period of wet weather just as the chrysanthemums were blossoming caused many of the flowers to rot before the plants could be dug.

Mrs. Weir had grown 800 "mums" successfully in 1976 after turning over the family vegetable garden for chrysanthemum production and more than tripled her project last summer, only to wind up with a loss. She bought rooted cuttings and set them out in the open, pinching them back several times to encourage the growth of side shoots and multiply the number of buds. It takes many days of hand work to care for that many plants.

I asked Robin what she had gained from her experience that seemed most important to her. Learning to meet people, she said had been her greatest personal benefit. She feels that she had to overcome her natural shyness before she could talk comfortably with strangers. In a retail business one talks with new people every day.

My call at the Greenhouse followed an invitation to see what Robin calls her favorite flower. The name in Latin is Agapanthus and in English it is Lily of the Nile. She had the plant five years and it grows in a tub on the floor. Strong, sword-shaped leaves grow from several crowns. In the center of each crown is a sturdy flower stalk with a spreading cluster of blue funnel-shaped flowers. This plant stays inside year-round but it could be set on a patio in the warm months.

Excellent forsythia bark chips in a cold frame outside through the winter, have blossomed beautifully indoors. For reasons that I do not understand, crocus bulbs given the same treatment have almost completely failed. Anyhow, the crocuses have blossomed now in the garden.

Four physicians recertified

Four of Manchester's doctors have recently received recertification as practicing obstetricians and gynecologists.

Dr. Don Guinan, Dr. Donald Morrison, Dr. Robert Stanton and Dr. Robert C. Walden Jr. are the first physicians in Manchester to participate in an update program which took about a year of extra study before they took exams last December.

There were 1,200 obstetricians and gynecologists in the country and 40 from Connecticut who undertook the program suggested by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology. The Connecticut Medical Education Association has made a big push the past five years encouraging physicians to update their education.

Manchester Memorial Hospital requires 50 hours per year of educational updating from each of its staff doctors to remain on the staff.

The four physicians in Manchester took courses at the University of Vermont, and attended seminars in New Orleans, and Bermuda. They also studied from tapes and journals with a guide provided by a 175-page syllabus.

There are between 16,000 and 17,000 certified obstetricians and gynecologists in the whole country, Dr. Guinan said. The ones who volunteered for recertification did so at the request of the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Periodical recertification for all doctors "probably will become mandatory on a regular basis," Dr. Guinan said.
