Why don't people visit the convalescent homes? Has that question ever entered your mind? Have you said, "If a member of my family was in a convalescent home, I would certainly visit. I would not abandon a friend of mine confined to a home?"

The reasons are varied, but I think for many of us the experience can be too painful. There may be some guilt involved. Could we have done more to keep the individual in their previous living arrangement? Did we think to stop in to say "hello" when we were in the neighborhood?

Perhaps we just find it difficult to find something to say to a dear family member or friend that has changed from a very alive, active person to a person limited physically or mentally. Their loneliness also can overwhelm us to the point that we don't want to run from it.

What can we do about this? It is much easier for some of us to visit when we know specifically what we can do to help when we arrive. This is what the Manchester Area Conference of Churches is attempting with the auxiliary concept.

Forming an auxiliary for our convalescent homes will give families, friends, and other interested community members an opportunity to volunteer some time to a convalescent home.

A definite need for the home will be fulfilled, and an opportunity for the volunteer to become involved in the life of the home will be provided. Through this involvement, we can develop a deeper understanding of what life for the patient is really like, so we have more to talk about our friends and relatives. It puts us in closer touch with their feelings, thus making communication easier.

A small, but positive start has been made in our local convalescent homes. Thanks to the efforts of Karla Vince, social worker at Crestfield and Ruth Converse, recreation director at Crestfield, as well as five volunteers, a "Cheer Cart" is now in operation there.

Another "Cheer Cart" will be in operation shortly in the Meadow East building due to the cooperation of the Meadows administration.

We will continue to look for specific jobs that volunteers can do to help our convalescent homes. We hope to open the doors of communication to these residents of our community now confined to a home, but who have given so much to us individually as well as to our community.

Canal treaty vote to end long debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thirteen years of negotiations and 39 days of bitter debate set the stage for today's Senate ratification vote on whether to turn the U.S.-built Panama Canal over to Panama on Dec. 31, 1999.

With the vote scheduled for 6 p.m. and the outcome in question, the Senate began its final debate at 7:30 a.m. A two-thirds majority of those voting is required to approve such a major policy move.

As today's arguments got under way, Republican Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts said he would vote for the treaty. He had been listed as wavering on whether to vote yes or no after helping pass the so-called Canal neutrality treaty last month.

Brooke's announcement cheered the Senate leadership, which has been pushing for ratification. And it apparently added impetus to an agreement reached Monday to soften the so-called DeConcini amendment.

U.S. military intervention in case of a canal shutdown was "precautionary" and probably would never be used.

"Quite frankly," he said, "although I am flattered by the attention of the media during the last few days, I believe it is quite unwarranted. What I proposed in the DeConcini amendment was merely a clarification of the principle articulated in the Foreign Relations Committee."

Top court blocks Nixon tape copies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today blocked plans to make available to the public copies of some of the White House tapes which led to Richard Nixon's resignation as president and the conviction of his top aides.

Highway links are six years away

By MAL BARLOW Herald Reporter. Area business and government leaders got a full serving of bad highway news this morning after an East Hartford Chamber of Commerce breakfast at the Ramada Inn on East River Drive.

Harold F. Heintz, deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Planning and Research of the state Department of Transportation, distiled it up.

The crucial study, the EIS or environmental impact study, was done in January. Heintz office is starting preliminary designs. All planning and permit work will take three years. Then actual construction of the East Hartford-Manchester connector to cost $2 million will take another three years, he said.

Directors cut third of capital proposals

By GREG PEARSON Herald Reporter

The Manchester Board of Directors Monday night eliminated about one-third of the $172,633 capital improvement budget proposed by Town Manager Robert Weiss for the 1978-79 fiscal year.

At its four-hour budget workshop Monday, the board reviewed 23 capital improvement items included in the General Fund budget by Weiss. It decided to include ten items in the budget. An eleventh item is a possibility for next year, but the remaining items probably will be delayed.

Other matters discussed Monday included the following: The directors mentioned the possibilities of eliminating the annual leaf pickup program and reducing refuse collection to once a week.

The board made no decision on another item — two pickup trucks for a federally funded forestry clearing project. The trucks could be purchased primarily with federal funds, but it would cost the town $6,783, and the town could keep the vehicles once the one-year project ends.

These items cost $340,500, according to budget estimates. Most of the town has decided to use.

Director Joseph Sweeney also mentioned the possibility of eliminating the annual leaf collection program. He said that areas of town are now picked up before many leaves have fallen.

"I just wonder if this is a program we might consider dropping unless it can be more effective," he said. There was little other discussion on the proposal Monday night, however. The directors eliminated about $21,000 from the proposed $940,641 highway budget. If all those cuts remain, the department's budget actually would be less than was adopted for this year, $822,808.

Discussion of the Park Department budget also was mentioned. He also said that no matter how much local support there is for a highway, and no matter how much care is taken with studies, every highway plan will go to court. Environmentalists will challenge it, he said.

Senate OKs teacher bill to ban residency rules

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Senate feels teachers should not have to live in any specific place just to keep their jobs.

"Teachers should be hired on their ability and competency, and not on their place of residence," Sen. Richard Scheller, D-Essex, said Monday.

He led the fight to get the bill passed, outgunning senators from New Haven who tried to stop it.

New Haven, along with Waterbury, requires new teachers to agree to live within city limits before being hired. The issue is being considered by Hartford leaders.

Senate Majority Leader Joseph Lieberman, D-New Haven, and Sen. Anthony Clarione, D-New Haven, fought hard Monday to get their city exempted from the bill. They almost pulled it off.

Lieberman proposed changing the bill so any city with teacher residency requirements in effect as of Oct. 1 this year would not have to make any changes.

He also proposed an amendment to prohibit any new teacher residency laws after April 1.

Some senators were apparently confused about which proposal they were voting for. About 20 minutes after the Oct. 1 amendment was approved 19-12, Scheller asked that it be reconsidered.

"There is obviously some confusion here as to what was approved," he said.

After voting 25-5 to reconsider, the Senate defeated the amendment 22-9. The second amendment was also beaten, 17-14. The bill was then approved 24-7 and sent to the House.

Scheller said it was important to get the bill passed, because husbands and wives who teach in different school systems could be put into impossible situations.

"We find many husbands and wives in teaching positions," he said.

"Placing residency requirements on them makes it extremely difficult and puts them in really impossible situations."

He also argued against proposals to exempt towns with residency laws already in effect.

"That creates a caste system where we say it's ok if the community already has the law, but we prohibit it for others," Scheller said.

Sen. Joseph Flynn, D-Bristol, also spoke in favor of the law, saying it could force two newlywed teachers who work in different towns "to live with a cunning mother-in-law."

"If that's your idea of marital bliss, gentlemen, you leave a lot to be desired," Flynn said.

House kills school bill to force hiring report

HARTFORD (UPI) — The House of Representatives has killed a bill that would have required local school boards to outline their plans for hiring minority workers.

The bill, defeated Monday on a 99-44 vote, would have required regional and local school boards to submit an "affirmative action" report to the state Board of Education. The state board would set regulations on how the reports should be written and what they should include.

The reports, now mandatory for all state and many municipal agencies, are designed to let the state know what various departments, boards and commissions are doing to hire minority workers.

Rep. Abraham Glassman, D-South Windsor, argued the measure should be approved because local and regional school boards were not being subjected to the same discrimination requirements as other agencies.

"We impose affirmative action on state agencies. We impose it on municipal agencies. I see no reason why we as a Legislature should not impose affirmative action on local school boards," he said.

But, Rep. Eugene Migliaro, R-Wolcott, expressed the majority opinion when he said, "This is just another move to have the state Board of Education control the local boards."

On another front, the house approved 135-10 and sent to the Senate a bill requiring the state police and each municipal police force to adopt a policy to deal with high speed chases.

Plain language measure is hard to understand

HARTFORD (UPI) — Before the session's over, the bill-drafting arm of the Legislature should have a pretty good idea what the "plain language" bill is all about. Now, if they can just explain it to the lawmakers.

The House of Representatives Monday set the bill back to the Legislative Commissioners' Office for its second redrafting. But before it did, Rep. Elmer Lowdin, D-Stamford, had an observation to make.

"The bill violates its own standards," he said. "I find it hard to understand."

Last week, the House endorsed a plan to require bankers, real estate agents and most other businesses to avoid words and phrases like "whereas," "heretofore," and "party of the first part" when drawing up contracts involving less than $50,000.

Under the proposal, judges could award $100 plus attorney fees, to consumers who were misled by confusing contracts.

But the lawmakers last week took out a provision in the bill that would have allowed consumers to file class action suits for up to $50,000 in damages against companies that cluttered up contracts with "gobbledygook."

Deputy House Speaker Robert Vicino, D-Bristol, ruled the change significantly altered the bill and it would have to be redrafted by the LCO.

It was Monday the measure came back to the floor of the House. Now it's headed back to the LCO for another redrafting.

The House of Representatives decided if bankers and real estate agents are going to have to write contracts in "clear and simple" language, then the insurance industry will have to do the same.

The House voted 91-49 to include insurance contracts in the "plain language" bill. Vicino ruled this was also a "substantive" change that required further modification by the LCO.

Rep. Robert Frankel, D-Stratford, argued the delay would kill the measure. He said the House should pass the bill and "work out the rough edges next year."

Frankel said the proposal was modeled after a law that will take effect in New York this summer. He said New York did not include insurance companies under its law.

Lawyer asks state aid in defense of Acquin

WATERBURY (UPI) — A lawyer for Lorne Acquin, accused of killing nine persons in Prospect last July, said he will be in court today asking for $5,000 to hire an independent investigator to look into the case.

Attorney John Williams said Monday an FBI report showed Acquin's palm and fingerprints do not match bloody prints found at the scene of the crime.

Williams was to make his request to Waterbury Superior Court Judge James Henneby.

Acquin is charged with the July 22 murders of Cheryl Beaudoin, 29, her seven children, and a young friend who was spending the night. Some of the victims were bludgeoned and stabbed.

Acquin, 28, also is charged with arson for allegedly setting fire to the modest ranch-style Beaudoin home. He pleaded innocent and asked for a jury trial.

Acquin, an unemployed roofer, was the foster brother of Frederick Beaudoin, who was working the late night shift at a North Haven plant when his wife and children were slain.

Williams said the two-page FBI report contained the bloodied prints

Betty's notebook

By Betty Ryder

Well, I'm going to get up again on April 30 on board the SS Volendam of the Holland America Lines heading for Bermuda.

The cruise ship is taking its inaugural cruise to Bermuda on April 25, which is for five days, and I'll depart the following week for seven days.

This will be the first cruise ship to Bermuda with Sunday departures which were initiated to accommodate honeymooners and others unable to make Saturday departures. In most instances, when weddings are held on Saturday, unless you live in the New York area, it would be pretty difficult to get to the pier and catch a cruise ship. So, Holland America came up with the Sunday departure idea, and although it's barely under way, reservations are coming in nicely.

The timing is good because I recall at least twice seeing a bride and groom still in wedding attire dash up the gangplank just as the ship's attendants were about to remove it and the captain's whistle noted signaling immediate departure from the pier.

The SS Volendam arrives in St. George's, where visitors can spend nearly a day and a half touring, then proceeds on a two-hour sail to Hamilton for another two and one-half day stay.

Sounds great. Oh, and on board (this is what is called an "Entertainment Cruise") will be Billy Eckstine and Mimi Hines. With a little luck, maybe I'll get a chance to interview them.

Eddie's Night

Rumors have it that Eddie Reed, long-time pianist at Cavey's Restaurant, who is recovering from a Nov. 25 automobile accident, will be brought by some friends to the restaurant for dinner on May 1.

After dinner, they plan to have him greet his many friends in the large room behind the piano area and give him a chance to catch up on the news. So, if you haven't seen Eddie, here's the chance.

Unfortunately, I'm going to miss the reception for one of my favorite people because I'll be heading for Bermuda. Well, I'll pop down to

HEALTH

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been having a problem with gas. I have been watching my diet carefully. Milk and milk products caused much stomach upset and loose stools. I have totally avoided these products for the last six months but it has not eliminated gas.

My physician suggested yogurt for a 14-day period. This seemed to help. Do you think I should continue this on a daily basis? Is there anything in wine related to this problem?

I have avoided vegetables for months at a time. Please send me your pamphlet on gas and any information you can regarding this.

DEAR READER — Milk will cause gas and diarrhea and cramps in people who are intolerant to milk sugar (lactose). If that really is your problem you must be very careful about which yogurt product you use. Many commercial yogurt products are thickened with dry milk powder and contain excess amounts of lactose. They are worse than ordinary milk. Be sure and get a naturally fermented yogurt product. It has a chance of having less lactose in it than ordinary milk. However, I don't think it is likely to correct your gas problem.

Keep in mind that many people have gas problems because they swallow air. This is discussed more fully in The Health Letter number 6-8, Controlling Gasousness, that you requested. Other readers who want to know more about the menopause age, the same as they do in a woman who has not had a hysterectomy. And when that happens you have hot flashes. You may be having hot flashes and still be in the menopause. I would suggest that you see your doctor and have a thorough examination. The ovaries can undergo changes and it is important to still have annual examinations for that reason alone. If you are deficient in female hormones now and don't have a uterus you may be able to take small doses of hormones to control your hot flashes.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, to give you more information. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of The Manchester Evening Herald, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. In these instances it doesn't make any difference what foods you eat — it is stopping swallowing excess air that counts.

Then I'd like to emphasize again that everyone swallows some air. The gas pains occur in the person who has poor colon function to begin with. The spasms of the colon trap the gas and that causes the pain. Improved colon function may help your problem. I'm also sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Irritable Bowel Syndrome, to give you some helpful hints on how to improve your colon function.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you comment on brain tumors, especially the early symptoms of them. At times I feel as though there is a heavy object inside my head over my right eye. A recent stroke left my mind a bit shaky. I am 53 years old but very active.

Barry's evidence disclosure bill passes Senate

HARTFORD (UPI)—State Sen. David Barry of Manchester thinks prosecutors and policemen should be trying for more than potshots in their pistols. So, he got the Senate to pass a bill that could put a prosecutor in jail for hiding evidence that might clear a defendant.

He said the way the state handled the prosecution of Peter A. Reilly points to the need for the bill. There has to be some restriction to help a defendant against the truly awesome powers of the state," Barry said.

Reilly was accused of killing his mother, Barbara Gibbons, who was found slashed to death in their Falls Village cottage in September 1973. The late John C. Bianchi, chief prosecutor for Litchfield County turned over to a judge.

Nine persons elected as chamber directors

The Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce has announced the election of nine new members to its board of directors. The new directors, elected for two-year terms, represent a wide range of business and professional interests in the Manchester area, according to James Breitenfeld, executive vice president.

The newly elected chamber directors will officially assume their positions at Friday's chamber board meeting, and will be introduced to the chamber membership Wednesday evening at the chamber's 77th annual banquet.

The new board members are as follows: Irving L. Bayer, Jeffrey P. Clarke, Howard M. Holmes, Collins D. Johnston, Richard L. Schuster, Barbara B. Weinberg, Stephen Cavagnaro Jr., Roy Drummond and Carroll Brunetti.

Chamber directors are not elected to serve in name only; tradition demands a commitment of time, energy, and creativity, according to Breitenfeld.

HARTFORD (UPI)—The Senate has refused to limit drunkness by persons between 18 and 20 to restaurants and bars but has approved a bill to allow package stores to open on election days.

Under current law, no liquor can be sold in Connecticut while polling places remain open. Only one senator spoke on the election day drinking bill, which was approved Monday 25-7 and sent to the House.

Man due in court on deaths in fire

WILLIAMANTIC (UPI)—A 23-year-old local man was to be presented today in Windham County Superior Court to face charges he set a fire April 4 that took the lives of two young children.

John Saucier, Sr. of Bristol, said late Monday night he thought Green should have been charged with murder.

He killed my two kids, didn't he? Even if he's just a firebug, he should face charges of murder in my book," Saucier said.

Indian accords urged

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Interior Department says it will try to get Congress to pass a law settling the claim of some South Carolina Indians to a 140,000-acre reservation including the town of Rock Hill, S.C.

A similar claim by two Maine tribes alleges two-thirds of that state was illegally taken from the Indians. There are also pending Indian land claims cases in Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Judiciary patronage eyed again

HARTFORD (UPI)—The swift and unexpected execution of a bill designed to eliminate some political patronage involved in judicial nominations caused such a stir that House leaders have decided to reconsider the matter.

House leaders Monday killed the so-called merit selections bill. Today, they are expected to resurrect it for debate.

The word apparently had been passed the House's Democratic leadership did not want the bill, and Abate was willing to let it die.

"I was told the leadership wanted the bill recommended (killed), and Ernie wanted it recommended," said Rep. Patricia Hendel, D-New London. "There was a misunderstanding."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How dare you perpetuate the myth that men prefer women with big breasts in a recent column in which you offer men tips on how to make themselves more "feminine." You said, "If she's flat-chested and a 38-D walks by, pretend not to notice."

Abby, there are men who prefer women with small breasts ("flat-chested," according to your 38-D standard)—my husband among them. He doesn't have to "pretend not to notice."

If you had done a little research, you would have known that men who prefer women with small breasts are more mature, intelligent and less chauvinistic than the big-breast worshippers.

Please stop trying to make me, and others like me, feel that we are inferior and unattractive, and that any man who slobbers himself into a stupor over a 38-D!

SMALL AND SEXY
DEAR SANDS: My apologies. But in most surveys I've seen in which men were asked to describe their "ideal woman," the 38-D's were way out in front.

DEAR ABBY: My grandson, who is 33 and a physician, is quite religious. Every Friday night he serves his two sons, ages 3 and 5, wine with dinner, and they say a prayer. I wasn't too concerned about this until the 5-year-old visited us and asked if he could have some wine. Of course we didn't give it to him, but I started to worry that the children could be developing a taste for wine at an early age and eventually become alcoholic. I read somewhere that this could happen.

Is there some way I can convey this message to my grandson without offending him? (P.S. He's a Scorpio and doesn't take criticism very well.)
GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: Tell him in a loving, non-critical way that his son asked for wine in your home. As a physician he should know the danger of giving a child too much wine too often. (P.S. Scorpios are also quick learners.)

DEAR ABBY: We hear so much these days about whether to "become involved" when we see a stranger being attacked or abused by another stranger. I'm reminded of an experience I had back in 1936 while waiting for one of those long, yellow streetcars in Minneapolis.

Along came a couple. The man proceeded to give the woman a very loud tongue-lashing. She looked so hurt and defenseless. I finally said, "Look, fellow, you are showing very bad manners talking to a lady that way, and I suggest that you stop it!"

He seemed amazed that a stranger would interfere, but he stopped momentarily. Then suddenly the woman swatted me alongside the head with her umbrella and said angrily, "You mind your own business! He's MY husband and he can talk to me any way he wants to!"

I was young, glib and naive. I also learned a lesson. Now if I decide to interfere, I stand back a peason.
