Please, no holiday!

Come now! A national holiday for the greatest rock singer of them all - Elvis Presley.
Elvis fan clubs have been rocking their way around the White House hoping to get President Carter and Congress to declare Jan. 8 - Elvis' birthday - as a national holiday.
We don't knock rock music; we don't knock Elvis.
But these special days, weeks and months are going to put the Chases' Calendar of Annual Events into the upper category prices.

ASK MACC
Editor: Fr. Steve Jacobson
A service of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches

Question: "What are the most common reasons for people getting divorced?"
Answer: Austin O'Malley at the turn of the century wrote: "The three most important events of human life are equally devoid of reason - birth, marriage, and death."
As a clergyman it has been my keen interest to note the teeter-totter ordinary number of couples who are unable to list any reason for wanting to unite their lives in marriage other than a beautiful allegiance to an emotion titled "Being in Love."

Thoughts

Through a regular discipline of prayer, the "pray-er" finds it possible to enlarge and expand those areas of prayer-filled concern.
PRAYER: To God we will lift up our thoughts to the beauty which he has created and made possible: to the beauty of the landscape, of another personality, of music and painting and sculpture, of his creativity all about us.
CONFESSION: But we must ask God for his forgiveness for our own contributions in the spoiling of this beauty - whether it be in our littering the landscape, the putting down of another personality, or the crudeness of mouth or mind that thwarts the beauty of his creativity.

Resting the taxpayers' case

WASHINGTON - All right. President Carter now has what he calls an anti-inflation program. He talks like a man who would seriously consider a proposal to empty the Atlantic Ocean with a teaspoon.
Carter's problem is that he doesn't realize leadership entails a willingness to make some people mad. A war on inflation would be made to work by a Harry Truman or an Ike Eisenhower, both of whom had the guts of a rock star when the chips were down. HST and Ike wanted to be loved, too. But that's ALL Jimmy Carter wants.

I refuse to be impressed. With inflation flooding the Republic, Carter has put not a finger, but a toothpick, in the dyke. I can hear those in the executive suites of private business and labor chortling with glee. They'd feel the pressure if Carter had cut the federal pay raise by 3, or even 2, percentage points, but who's going to find awesome a weekly $3.96 "sacrifice" by the bureaucracy.
The labor barons in the bureaucracy are sore, of course. They'd be sore if Carter chipped a nickel off their fiefs' annual income. If you can do so without wincing, consider the reaction of Kenneth Blaylock, president of the 200,000-member American Federation of Government Employees union.

Almanac

The moon is approaching its full phase.
The morning star is Mercury.
Jupiter and Saturn.
Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.
An American nuclear scientist Glenn Seaborg was born April 19, 1912. This is actor Hugh O'Brian's 48th birthday.
On this day in history:
In 1775, the American Revolutionary War began.

Blaylock finds the idea of "mandatory wage controls for civil servants disgusting." He threatens work slowdowns by AFGE members in service, safety and support jobs.
Kenneth Lyons, president of the National Association of Government Employees, says the president is offering "peanuts" to the Feds. "Peanuts?" A 5.5 percent increase come to $50 a year for the occasional employee now earning $10,000 a year, and double that for one earning the Washington average.
Both these barons say the pay raise cut would not stop inflation. They're right, but only because the reduction isn't big enough to impress Big Labor and Big Business. What the country needs is a president with the chutzpah to demand more than merely a symbolic attack on the high price of shin meat.

A tale of two ex-presidents

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON - (NEA) - In the files of the Internal Revenue Service lies the tale of a fascinating contrast between two recent former presidents, both of whom left Washington under circumstances they considered less than ideal.
One is Lyndon B. Johnson, who wanted a second full term in the White House but was forced to abandon that goal because his pursuit of a military victory in the Vietnam war became a major political liability.
Johnson had a wheeler-dealer reputation, and questions were repeatedly asked (but never fully answered) about his family's ability to amass a $14 million fortune during his three decades on the public payroll.
Nobody ever nominated Johnson for sainthood, but he left Washington with his reputation essentially intact. The same cannot be said for Richard M. Nixon, the first president ever to resign under the threat of impeachment.
Both men established foundations in their names, presumably hoping to perpetuate the memory of greatness each saw in himself. Johnson succeeded, but Nixon has failed thus far.

from the official or personal life of Richard M. Nixon or his wife, Patricia R. Nixon, and which have historical significance.
The most valuable materials obviously are those from Nixon's presidential years - but they remain in federal custody because of protracted and still unresolved litigation over whether they belong to Nixon or the government.
Two other foundations have been established in Nixon's name, although he does not control them. One is the Nixon Birthplace Foundation, operated by the residents of Yorba Linda, Calif., who are anxious to preserve the former president's birthplace in their community.
The local school district long held the title to the Nixon family house, however, and the foundation negotiated for almost a decade before the school district recently agreed to relinquish its hold on the property.
But the foundation now must raise at least $125,000 to buy the house, a considerable undertaking for an organization that never previously had even $10,000 in assets.
Finally, there is the Richard M. Nixon Educational Trust, established by the Pomona First Federal Savings & Loan Association, which contributed money earmarked for scholarship awards to deserving students from high schools in the Pomona-Yorba Linda area.

Change is a creative asset or divisive wedge. It deserves our fullest understanding.

Bill outlaws bias against retarded

HARTFORD (UPI) - The Connecticut Representatives, acknowledging the persistence of a mentally retarded man who dreams of becoming a politician, Tuesday gave final legislative approval to a bill outlawing discrimination against the mentally retarded.
After the House approved the bill on a 147-1 vote and sent it to Gov. Ella T. Grasso, lawmakers stood and applauded Richard Sedor, a 28-year-old Windsor Locks man who began fighting for the legislation two years ago when he was denied a job as a postal worker.
Sedor, who leaned over the gallery railing to see the vote, acknowledged the applause with a smile and told the lawmakers below, in a voice barely audible, "Thank you."

Mentally retarded Richard Sedor, 28, of Windsor Locks proudly displays his driver's license as he talks with reporters after receiving a standing ovation from state representatives. The House approved a bill to prevent discrimination against the mentally retarded. Two years ago, Sedor was told he would not be able to get a job and would not be able to drive a car, which led him to campaign for the law. (UPI photo)

The House rejected an amendment that would have eliminated all protected classes and made it illegal to discriminate against anyone that was qualified for a job. Under existing law, it is illegal to discriminate against a person on the basis of race, color, creed, sex, marital status, national origin, ancestry or physical disability.
The bill defines mental retardation as "significantly below average intellectual functioning accompanied by deficiencies in social behavior."
Mrs. Grasso has promised to sign the bill, scheduled to take effect Oct. 1.
After the vote, Sedor's representative, Joyce Wojas, D-Windsor Locks, ran up to him and gave him a kiss.
"I feel great," Sedor told reporters who gathered around him.
"My first 16 years I went through hell," he said, recalling his days at the Mansfield Training School.
" They told me I'd never be able to drive, to vote," he said, waving his driver's license triumphantly. "They told me you'd will be to wash dishes."
Two years ago, Sedor was denied a job as a postal worker. He felt he had been discriminated against, so he went to the state Human Rights and Opportunities Commission.

Strada says firm hid nothing

HARTFORD (UPI) — Senate Deputy Majority Leader William E. Strada said Tuesday his law firm did nothing to hide a $25,000 fee even though a federal grand jury has indicted his law partner for conspiracy. The Stamford Democrat, the third highest ranking member of the Connecticut Senate, said the legal fees, paid in 1971 and 1972 by a Providence R.I., company, were reported and cleared by an Internal Revenue Service audit. A grand jury in Providence, R.I., Monday indicted Strada's law partner, John C. Fusaro, 42, of Stamford and lawyer Alan J. Goldman, 43, of East Providence, R.I., for conspiring to hide from the IRS a $25,000 payment by the Tourism and Development Corp. Strada was not indicted. He told reporters at the state Capitol Tuesday he testified before the federal grand jury last year. He said he could not discuss the details of the case, because "I am certain I will be a witness sometime down the road." But Strada appeared convinced Fusaro will be vindicated.

Media blamed for black stereotype

BOSTON (UPI) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson Tuesday criticized the news media and television for helping perpetuate debilitating stereotypes of blacks. "The main image projector (the media) remains a haven for American racism," Jackson told an audience of about 500 cheering and applauding blacks and whites at Roxbury High School, in one of Boston's poorest neighborhoods. He said stereotypes of blacks as athletes, entertainers or violent criminals is constantly reinforced on television and in print. He challenged the young audience to overcome poverty and ignorance through education and hard work. "I may be in the slum, but the slum is not in me," Jackson shouted during his 40-minute revival-like speech that was interrupted about a dozen times with thunderous applause. "We are better than our environment. No one will do more for you than you will do for yourself."

Measure to test bride for immunity to rubella

HARTFORD (UPI) — Moved by the plea of a lawmaker who has a handicapped child, the House of Representatives has approved a bill requiring prospective brides to be tested for their immunity to rubella. Rubella, also known as German Measles, can cause blindness, mental retardation and heart trouble in infants whose mothers had the disease during pregnancy. "When you think that one handicapped child, even one child, might be avoided if a woman had been advised she doesn't have the immunity, this amendment would be worthwhile," he said. The amendment passed on a voice vote and the bill was sent to the Senate. The bill itself was approved on a 144-1 vote and sent to the Senate. The measure would require women applying for marriage licenses to be tested for their immunity to rubella.

Rev. Moon buying land

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the South Korean evangelist with a following in the U.S., has bought three acres of land near Gloucester Harbor for a proposed marine academy. Richard Sapp, a church member and Moon negotiator, said Monday the group is also trying to buy several acres of waterfront property for a commercial fishing operation this summer. Both projects would need city approval. Sapp said Moon has bought the three acres of undeveloped land in a cove near the harbor for the marine academy and hopes to obtain about 40 acres of waterfront property for a commercial fishing operation this summer.

Bill allows divorcee to choose last name

HARTFORD (UPI) — Divorced women will be able to choose their own last names under a bill approved by the Senate and sent to the governor. Though the final vote of 31-3 would indicate it passed easily, there were strong arguments Tuesday against the bill. "This hurts children who will be subjected to taunts and questions from their schoolmates when their names are changed," said Sen. Joseph Flynn, D-Bristol. The bill would support from senators who said judges can arbitrarily forbid a woman from using her maiden name. But Flynn said the bill shouldn't be passed just because of one or two cases. "We don't destroy the sun because someone once got sunburned," he said. The bill lets the woman choose her name instead of a judge. She could use her married name or, if she had been married more than once, any former name. Senate President Pro Tem Joseph Faullio said judges should be able to decide because they can make objective decision based on the facts of the case. "It's the children I'm concerned about, not the women," Faullio said. "This is not a woman's rights or men's rights issue."

Legislature finds time to vote on minor bills

HARTFORD (UPI) — The 1978 Legislature, with only two weeks of life left, found enough time to deal with several minor bills. On Tuesday the Legislature dealt with colored oleomargarine, pierced ears, warts and yellow legs. The colored oleo bill details what a restaurant owner must tell his customers when serving them margarine instead of butter. It was approved unanimously by the Senate and sent to Gov. Ella T. Grasso. Yellow legs are wild birds. They were added to a list of protected birds by the Senate Tuesday which voted unanimously to send the bill to the governor. Also protected by the list are cranes, avocets, curlews, dowitchers, knots, oyster catchers, phalaropes, plovers, sandpipers, stilts, surf birds, turnstones, willets and godwits. A majority of the House of Representatives feel registered nurses have enough ability to safely pierce ears. The issue was approved 76-72 as an amendment to a bill allowing out-of-state doctors to prescribe administration of medication to children by a school nurse. The bill was sent to the Senate. The House also: — Killed a bill preventing bowling alleys from selling any kind of liquor other than beer and wine.

Abbe, Lowell backed pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., were among the 68 senators who voted for the second Panama Canal treaty. Weicker said after the vote Tuesday night, "The master-servant relationship which ended domestically at Appomattox in 1865 ended internationally for this country this evening in the United States Senate chamber at Washington D.C."

Holdup man is released

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. (UPI) — A man who walked into the state Social Welfare office, showed a gun to an employee and reportedly asked for money, will not be charged because he did not actually threaten anyone with the gun, police said. No shots were fired and the man was quickly taken into custody without a struggle. He was later released without being charged. Police identified him as a 52-year-old resident of Bellows Falls, but did not release his name. According to officials, the man walked into the welfare office at about 2 p.m. and showed the handgun to an employee. A police spokesman said he told the worker, "I'll get my money one way or the other."

Anti-litter measure passes House

HARTFORD (UPI) — Someday, Connecticut could be one of the cleanest states in the nation. Gov. Ella T. Grasso has already signed into law a bottle bill, designed to clean up the state by requiring nickel deposits on all beer and soft drink containers.

assessments would produce between $2 million and $3 million to finance the litter cleanup. The bill approved after two and a half hours of debate now goes back to the Senate, where it was approved earlier.

Judge mulls bid for defense aid

FERRISBY (UPI) — A Waterbury Superior Court judge is considering a request by Lorne Acquin's attorney for $5,000 so the defense can hire a private investigator to look into the case.

Superior Court Judge James F. Henebery said Tuesday he would rule on the request at a later date, but he questioned the court's authority to appropriate money for such a purpose.

Acquin's attorney, John Williams of New Haven, argued that a private investigator is necessary because FBI comparisons of bloody palm and fingerprints found in the Beaudoin home do not match Acquin's.

Acquin, 28, is charged with nine counts of murder in the slayings of Mrs. Cheryl Beaudoin, 28, and eight children in Prospect. He has pleaded innocent to the charges.

The bodies, some bound and beaten, were found in the blazing Beaudoin home July 22. Authorities have called it the worst mass murder in Connecticut's history.

Frederick Beaudoin was working at a North Haven plant when his wife and seven children died. The eighth child was a family friend who happened to be spending the night.

In objecting to the defense request, Assistant State Attorney Walter Scanlon said the prints probably belonged to the victims.

Scanlon said two of the bodies were so badly burned that taking their prints was impossible.

Acquin's attorney told the judge a private investigator was necessary because "extraordinary measures are needed to track down the real murderer."

Williams also requested state police photographs of Acquin's body, statements taken by police concerning Acquin's whereabouts on July 21 and 22, and hospital records of Mrs. Beaudoin's alleged venereal disease.

The defense attorney claimed Mrs. Beaudoin's alleged condition could provide a link to the real murderer.

Referring to Mrs. Beaudoin, Williams said, "The killer was someone who was jealous of the sexual activities of the deceased."

Scanlon objected to the requests, claiming the defense is not permitted to determine what evidence might tend to clear a defendant.

"The defense cannot define what is or isn't exculpatory," Scanlon said.

Scanlon also told Judge Henebery that he thought Williams had manipulated the public defender system in taking on the responsibility of being Acquin's attorney free of charge.

Foster families needed to aid troubled children

Residents of Manchester and other towns in the Capitol Region are needed to serve as foster parents for a large group of children in the care of the Connecticut Department of Children and Youth Services (DCYS). These are troubled children under 12 years of age who might otherwise need to enter a residential treatment center.

Fourteen sets of parents will be selected in this region. DCYS will care for a child on a regular basis and one family will serve as a relief family who would provide occasional care for the children when the foster parents may need a vacation or time alone, or just feel overwhelmed by the problems the child may be presenting.

DCYS requires that foster parents be new foster parents — parents who have not had a child placed in their home before. They must be a two-parent family

Citizens petition council to keep lake level high

Coventry
 Resident Jim Hackett presented the Coventry Town Council with a petition bearing the names of 194 lake area homeowners who want the lake's water level to remain at the summer level of 93 feet and not be reduced. Elmore and Antoinette Turkington, who own a small island in the lake, have filed suit to reduce the water level in order to expose the full 2 acres of their land.

The 93-foot level "will provide the greatest good for the greatest number of people," Hackett said. The Town Council set that sludge mark as the optimal level for recreational purposes several years ago, although in winter the dam is adjusted to lower the level in preparation for the usual spring freshets.

Howard Brock concurred with the petitioners, noting that only two people lived in the seasonal cottage on the island while everyone in the lake associations is paying money to use the lake as it should be. Council Chairman Jack Miles said he would turn the petition over to Town Attorney Abbot Schwabel for

Power of radio can heat homes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Years ago engineers for broadcasting stations discovered that the heat generated by a radio station's transmitter could be used to keep studios and offices warm in the coldest weather.

Now it looks as if this heat may be used to warm homes, office buildings, even aircraft hangars and shipyards, and for some more sophisticated purposes as well.

American Pollution Control Corp., Thornwood, N.Y., has developed a whole range of electronic energy applications out of this radio power generator principle which it says can save vast amounts of energy and help solve the problem of extracting shale oil at reasonable cost. It also can be used to provide energy for pollution control systems.

Dr. Carl Gallo, a research and development engineer, former director of New York's Lincoln School technical electronics institute, and head of American Pollution Control, has obtained a federal patent for the electronic heat system.

The process divides the electromagnetic field from a radio power generator into its two component fields, the electric and the magnetic.

"Ninety-nine percent of the energy from these fields then can be converted into heat by what we call atomic friction in the electronic furnace," Gallo said.

Such a unit, made up of a small radio transmitter and an electronic furnace, can produce electronic heat in the home from electricity at astonishing savings, Gallo said.

"The heat is circulated through the house by conventional means — hot air, hot water or steam," he said.

"But the potential saving is up to 50 percent as compared with an oil burner, up to 70 percent as against natural gas and up to 80 percent compared with direct electric cable heat. These are maximum figures. What would be saved in any particular house has to be determined by experience."

Gallo said the present estimated cost of the electronic heating plant for a four-bedroom house, including steam, hot water or hot air furnace, is $3,900. Conversion of existing systems presumably would run less and mass production could be expected to reduce the cost if the system proved popular.

The method has another advantage for space heating. There is no combustion, so there is no smog or soot problem and the fire risk is relatively small if the installation and insulation are correct.

Gallo's company eventually intends to manufacture and market the home electronic heating units itself. Meanwhile, he is seeking to adapt the principle to larger scale heating applications and to industrial and mining processes.

"The most promising of these, I believe, is shale oil extraction," he said. "In our Camden, N.J., laboratory, we have succeeded in extracting oil from shale at an indicated cost of $3 a barrel. That is quite a favorable cost and, if realized, ultimately could further the dream of extracting oil from shale in amounts large enough to significantly reduce the nation's dependence on foreign oil."

Sales, income up at Pioneer

Pioneer International Corp. has announced operating results for the first quarter of its fiscal year 1978. Net sales for the period were $3,359,000 compared to $3,411,800 in 1977. Net income was $459,000, equal to 24 cents per common share, as against $283,000, equivalent to 16 cents per common share, in the prior year.

Pioneer International Chairman David N. Abrams said the extraordinary gain of $137,000 in 1978, compared to an extraordinary gain of $16,000 in 1977, was related to tax loss carryforwards available within the consolidated tax return to Pioneer International's parent company, Pioneer Systems Inc.

Through its operating divisions Pioneer is noted as the world's leading manufacturer of parachutes, recovery systems and related equipment. The Feuer Gage division provides gauges for use in the precision metals industry.

Reale joins Network

The office of Daniel F. Reale Inc., Realtors, has become the first realty firm to join Network of Homes in the Greater Hartford area, according to Martin Coletta, regional training director.

Located at 175 Main St., the firm of Daniel F. Reale Inc., Realtors, was founded in 1973, and is headed by Dan Reale, its current president. Coletta said Mr. Reale had several very successful years of experience in real estate before starting his own company.

Equipped with an extensive background in land acquisition as well as residential and commercial sales, Reale has put a strong emphasis on service, responsibility, and integrity to customers and clients who come in contact with his agency. This influence is reflected by each and every member of his staff.

The present location consists of a modern real estate office, which is fully equipped and very comfortable with all the necessary tools to better accommodate both customers and clients.

With the "coming of age" in the changing structure in real estate marketing, Dan's goals to project and firmly maintain professional standards and status within the community are foremost requisites in the operation of his agency. The progressive thinking is exhibited by his decision to become affiliated with Network of Homes.

Sons of the American Legion

Spirited youth carry on tradition

By BETTY RYDER

Family/Travel Editor
All play and no work is fun. But the young men of the Sons of the American Legion (SAL) of the Dilworth-Cornell-Quey Post of the American Legion in Manchester have managed to combine the fun of companionship with their varied interests and have come up with some rewarding endeavors.

SAL is comprised of young male descendants of Legionnaires who have served in a war. Currently there are 50 members with the youngest member only six months old. He is Matthew Mikoleit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mikoleit of 349 Oakland St. His dad is vice commander of the local post.

Mike Pohl, 15, is serving his third term as SAL commander. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pohl of 157 Brookfield St. His dad is a past commander of the post.

"SAL was originally chartered in 1937 with 14 members," Mike said. "Interest waned after World War II and it started up again in 1962. Again, due to lack of interest, it terminated. But we started back in business in 1975 and now we're going strong," the enthusiastic commander said.

Organized to help the post as well as give the youngsters activities and get them involved in Legion affairs, SAL offers varied events.

With four senior advisers, Lee Palina, Al Fredericks, Al Foss and Harold Lawson, the young men conduct cake sales, car washes, and have an envious Junior Rifle Team record.

"We meet every other Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Nike Site at which time we shoot. We also conduct a business meeting and are currently revising the bylaws," Mike said.

In the tenth grade at Illing Junior High School, Mike, in addition to his duties as commander, serves on the Town of Manchester Youth Committee, as a volunteer maintenance person at his school, and helps with the cooking at the Senior Citizens Center on Friday mornings.

"The work at the center is part of the school curriculum," he said. "I especially like to make cakes, and when I'm not cooking, I ride horseback at least once a week in Willington."

Mike is definitely planning a career in politics after college. "I plan to run for the Board of Directors when I'm 18; bring some young blood to it. I will fight for things youth wants and not let them do things like shut down the Teen Center," he said.

Mike's a man of varied activities and last year came in first in the state for raising money for St. Jude's Children's Hospital.

"I received a gold watch," said a smiling Mike.

Together with the other members of SAL, the youthful commander hopes to encourage other young men to join the group.

If any young man comes from a Legion family, give Mike a call at 646-7568 and join a group of dedicated young people on the move.

Matthew Mikoleit, six-months-old, the youngest member of SAL, tries on his dad's hat. His dad, Clarence Mikoleit of 349 Oakland Road, is vice commander of the Manchester post.
