

Bettors face bribe charges

HARTFORD (UPI) — An ongoing investigation into activities by professional gamblers at Connecticut jail facilities has led to bribery charges against two bettors.

Richard Gajewski, 32, of New Haven, and Rodney E. Woods Jr., 28, of Florida, were charged Thursday in arrest warrants with bribing a handicapper to fix odds at the Milford Jail area in 1977.

The state gaming commission and the state police special revenue squad charged both men with commercial bribery and conspiracy to commit commercial bribery.

Gajewski surrendered at the state police complex in Meriden and was looked at state police headquarters in Hartford. He was released on a written promise to appear in Hartford Court of Common Pleas May 18. Woods was believed in Florida.

Louis C. Fiochi, state racing division director, said Woods' attorney in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., was advised of the arrest warrant but the attorney, David Jaffe, "would not divulge where Woods is, so as to advise his client of our actions."

Fiochi said the arrest warrants were a follow up of the May 5 arrest of Frederick Vines, a handicapper employed at the Milford jail area.

Vines' arrest resulted from a continuing investigation by the gaming commission staff and the state police special revenue squad of testimony last fall that systems bettors were getting favored treatment at all three Connecticut jail areas.

Woods and other systems bettors said they paid tips for services they received, a common practice at most gambling facilities in the country.

Fiochi said the charges against Woods and Gajewski involved payments to Vines during the 1977 season at Milford.

Vines was accused of rigging the odds list that many bettors use as a guide to determining how to wager. Vines, in an affidavit filed in Milford Common Pleas Court, accused Woods of paying him to rig the list.

The affidavit describes several payments he said he got, including two $100 bills stuffed into a cigarette pack.

Fiochi also announced that two "corporations" set up by Woods — Rodney E. Woods Inc., and R. E. Woods Inc. — "have been ejected from all pari-mutuel facilities in Connecticut."

The legal corporations are set up apparently to give a tax break to its "officers," according to gaming commission sources.

Bus pact talks to resume

HARTFORD (UPI) — Managers of the Connecticut Transit bus system have rejected a union request that current contract negotiations be decided by binding arbitration.

The state-owned company said both parties should negotiate a contract "directly across the table" without outside intervention and without litigation, said General Manager Robert McKay.

A spokesman for Local 425 of the Amalgamated Transit Union, AFL-CIO, said Thursday they were contacting their international headquarters on what their next move should be.

The union represents 631 bus drivers and mechanics who provide bus service in Hartford, New Haven and Stamford. Members voted 409-2 last month to authorize a strike. The contract expired March 25.

Union Business Manager Frank Partridge said both sides are close on wage demands, but are no where near agreement on other issues, such as cost of living provisions.

Gormley won't look into Killian charges

HARTFORD (UPI) — A second avenue of relief sought by Lt. Gov. Robert Killian has been rejected by the New Britain Democratic primary.

Chief State's Attorney Joseph T. Gormley Thursday rejected Killian's request for an investigation into possible criminal charges in the conduct of the May 2 primary won convincingly by Gov. Ella T. Grasso.

Killian, who is challenging Mrs. Grasso for the gubernatorial nomination, charged misleading and deceptive tactics were used in linking Mrs. Grasso with New Britain politician Edward Januszewski.

Januszewski plans to run unopposed for Probate Court judge in November, but was not on the ballot in the primary.

Pending are Killian's appeals to the attorney general and the Connecticut Probate Court administrator to review the advertising campaign to see if any laws were violated.

Gormley told Killian in a letter that based on the facts submitted and "the legal principles involved in the construction of criminal statutes, I find that the activities complained of in your statement and its enclosures do not fall within the perimeters of conduct proscribed by (Connecticut law) and therefore no additional investigation is contemplated."

Killian later in the day questioned if Gormley "pursued this investigation far enough" and strongly urged the chief state attorney "to reconsider your investigation of this matter."

The state Elections Commission on Tuesday declined to investigate Killian's charges.

Urges blue law veto

HARTFORD (UPI) — Rep. Ronald A. Sarasin, R-Conn., has asked Gov. Ella T. Grasso to veto the bill on Sunday closings recently approved by the Legislature.

In a letter to the governor Thursday, Sarasin called the laws "unworkable" and "an intrusion into the private sector."

Sarasin, a Republican gubernatorial candidate, said "The establishment of a sabbath day cannot and should not be legislated."

Mrs. Grasso said at a news conference Thursday she has not made up her mind on whether she will sign or veto the so-called Blue Laws measure.

Hotel license suspended

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state Liquor Control Commission has formally voted to suspend the liquor permit of the Hartford Hilton for five days because the hotel showed the nude musical "Oh Calcutta" in its ballroom.

The commission voted Thursday to formalize the suspension action they took Monday. The hotel defended its showing of "Oh Calcutta" in January by saying it was the same as nude paintings in a museum.

The Hilton said it would decide today whether to appeal the suspension.

Ban on nuclear wastes

NEW LONDON (UPI) — The City Council will vote Monday on a proposed ordinance to regulate the shipment of nuclear wastes, hoping to prod the federal government into adopting guidelines for transporting radioactive cargo.

"The effect we are looking for is for the federal government to regulate the shipment of the wastes and not have the responsibility passed off on city after city," said Mayor Margaret Curtin.

The U.S. Transportation Department is working on rules to regulate the transportation of hazardous materials, but they're not expected to be complete for another year.

Wesleyan finances OK

MIDDLETOWN (UPI) — Wesleyan University President Colin Campbell, trying to quiet an uproar by some professors, says there is nothing wrong with the school's financial condition.

Wesleyan's financial status "is vastly improved over where it was several years ago," Campbell said Thursday.

Some faculty members Tuesday demanded to know why Wesleyan's endowment has dropped from $171 million to $108 million in the last decade. They say it's an almost two-thirds decrease when adjusted for inflation.

Minority contractors want Penney work

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

A members of the town's Human Relations Commission is looking into a complaint from contractors about hiring for the J.C. Penney Co.'s stores in Manchester.

John Honor, a commission member, is studying the matter and will report at the Tuesday meeting of the HRC. Chairwoman Lee Ann Gundersen said late Friday afternoon.

The complaint centers on hiring thus far for sub-contractors involved in the construction of the J.C. Penney Co.'s catalog distribution center. The center, to be located in Buckland, will cover two million square feet.

Contractors for the J.C. Penney project do not include an affirmative action clause, and small businesses in the area are concerned. Lillian Scates, executive director of Unity Contractors Association Inc. of Hartford, said.

Unity Contractors is a construction consortium made up of 70 small white and minority-group construction firms.

The group is concerned about receiving jobs for the J.C. Penney building.

Ms. Scates met with officials from the firm and asked about the hiring of minorities.

"There is wide recognition that the economic outlook has changed," said Charles Schalte, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. "The problem of inflation has worsened."

Carter trims size of cut in taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Friday backed off his proposal for a $25 billion tax cut, agreeing to trim the size to $19.4 billion and delay the effective date for three months until Jan. 1, 1979.

Administration officials said Carter altered his stance because of a dramatic change in the nation's economic outlook since Carter first proposed the tax cut in January.

The smaller cut also will help reduce the nation's budget deficit, they said.

"There is wide recognition that the economic outlook has changed," said Charles Schalte, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. "The problem of inflation has worsened."

Botha says Carter preaches 'moral hypocrisy' in Africa

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — In a bitter broadside at the United States, South African Foreign Minister Pico Botha Friday accused President Carter of preaching "moral hypocrisy" in Africa and said that "people who live in White Houses should not throw little stones."

In a wide-ranging interview, Botha defended South Africa's recent raid into Angola, warned the West against imposing sanctions on his white-ruled republic and again denounced black guerrillas fighting to wrest the territory of Namibia from South African rule as "terrorists and murderers."

But Botha, sitting behind a desk under a blue-and-yellow flag inscribed with the words "Dien Troad on Me," reserved his strongest criticism for the United States.

"They should eliminate their own sophisticated, vicious forms of racial discrimination before hypocritically preaching" to South Africa, Botha said.

"That's why I say people in White Houses should not throw little stones. Let the United States achieve complete equality before pontificating to me from a high moral tower."

Botha warned that South Africa had gone as far as it would toward accepting a Western plan for the independence of Namibia, or South West Africa as Pretoria still calls the territory it rules under a mandate revoked by the United Nations.

"We leaned over backwards to accept many painful aspects of the Western plan but to no avail," Botha said.

Acknowledging that Namibia was a certain raiser to the unfolding racial conflict in South Africa itself, Botha declared: "Our impression is that what the United States in effect requires from us is a decision to commit suicide. You have no moral right to demand that from my people."

The foreign minister's temper flared at the mention of the sanctions the West has threatened to impose if black guerrillas are excluded from a say in Namibia's future.

"If that's the kind of selective punishment and hypocrisy that is meted out to us then I say the sooner we got it the better."

"If sanctions are issued against South Africa after what we have done to obtain an internationally acceptable solution in South West Africa, then we've got no hope," Botha said.

Late last month, Prime Minister John Vorster surprised the world by announcing his acceptance of the Namibian plan drafted by the five Western members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, Britain, Canada, West Germany and France.

But nine days later, South African forces struck 150 miles into neighboring Angola to destroy guerrilla bases operated by the South West African Peoples' Organization (SWAPO).

Weiss gets $35,000

The Manchester Board of Directors has voted that Town Manager Robert Weiss receive a $35,000 salary for the 1978-79 fiscal year.

The salary, a $2,000 increase, was approved during an executive session held as part of the board's May 3 budget workshop. At the time, the board did not reveal the size of the increase because it felt that making such information public might influence on-going negotiations with municipal-employee unions.

Stephen Penny, chairman of the board, said that he would check with the town counsel's office about not making such information public.

Under the state's Freedom of Information laws, any vote taken during an executive session must be recorded in the board's minutes.

Friday, Penny announced the size of the increase in a press release.

He said that there were two reasons for the salary hike.

"First, the board wished to put the manager's compensation on a par with that of other managers in the area," Penny said.

Before the increase, Weiss' salary was below that of the managers of the towns of Bloomfield, Farmington, Glastonbury, Newington, Westchester and Windsor. The population, budget and number of town employees in those communities are smaller than Manchester, Penny said.

The increase brings Weiss' salary above those received by the managers of these towns.

The other reason for the board's decision was because of the job it feels Weiss is doing, Penny said.

"First, his administrative leadership, the people of Manchester continue to enjoy a broad range and high quality of municipal services with one of the lowest per capita tax levies on homes and personal autos in the region," he said.

Penny also said that Weiss still receives a salary less than that of the superintendent of schools.

The $2,000 increase for Weiss was approved unanimously by the directors at the executive session. Director Carl Zinsser, who does not attend executive sessions, was the only one not to vote on the matter.

House, Senate negotiators face Monday budget deadline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators debated how much to spend on defense versus education, employment and social services, Friday as they sought agreement on a 1979 federal budget.

Senate negotiators want to budget more than President Carter requested for defense, but less than he proposed in the other areas.

They said the increases are needed to keep U.S. land-based missiles from becoming vulnerable to Soviet attack, to continue shipbuilding programs and to bolster NATO forces.

House negotiators objected to these priorities.

"We want to be No. 1 in defense while we're No. 12 in literacy," said Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y. "We're having trouble recruiting people into the armed forces because they cannot read or write."

The negotiators faced a Monday deadline when, under Congress' 1976 budget law, both houses must have approved a joint budget setting targets for fiscal year 1979, which begins Oct. 1.

If they fail to meet this deadline, there would be delays in bringing specific spending bills to the House and Senate floors.

President Carter asked for $128.4 billion in 1979 defense "budget authority," some of which would be spent in later years.

The full Senate approved $1.4 billion more than that; the House $1.1 billion less.

In negotiations Thursday and Friday, the House side offered to compromise on Carter's figure. Senators came down in the bargaining, but at mid-afternoon there remained a $1 billion difference between the two sides.

A dangerous labor bill

By RICHARD L. LESHER
(Editor's note: Dr. Leshner is president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Washington.)

There is currently pending in the United States Senate a bill which has been mislabeled the "Labor Reform Act of 1978" (S. 2467). Many bills are introduced in each Congress under the guise of "reform" legislation in an effort to make them more politically palatable. Who can oppose "reform?"

The point is, S. 2467 is not reform at all. And the problem now facing union officials is that the public has been through the phony "reform" facade, as clearly evidenced by the mounting, vocal opposition from across the country to the labor bill.

In fact, recent nationwide polls conducted by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J., and "U.S. News and World Report" indicate the overwhelming majority of Americans do not support legislation that would make it easier for unions to organize nonunion workers. Simply stated, the public is saying "no" to legislation giving unions more power, just as a majority of workers are saying "no" to union membership.

In pushing this bill, the labor unions have ignored the basic proposition that our labor laws exist for the purpose of protecting the rights of working people and the public. The government's proper role should be one of impartial "umpire" to protect those rights rather than as a participant on the side of either labor unions or management.

The so-called labor "reform" bill, when stripped of its title, is nothing more than an effort to put the power of the federal government behind big labor's organizing efforts.

Unions openly concede that this direct government involvement will make it easier for them to organize non-union workers. Left unsaid is the fact that the bill does nothing to protect the rights of workers who don't want to belong to a union.

One need only analyze a few of the provisions of S. 2467 to realize how the unions intend to use the bill to increase their membership and to gain special advantages at the bargaining table.

For example, the bill alters the labor laws to mandate "quickie" union representation elections in 21 to 30 days from the union's petition for election. Practically speaking, this limits the employer's ability to respond to the union's campaign, which may have already been under way for months. And it limits the employees' ability to hear both sides of the issue.

What U.S. senator would vote for an election reform which permits his opponent to campaign for months but which affords him only a limited time to respond? Yet, this is exactly what S. 2467 would impose on employers.

Another provision of the bill states that if an employer communicates with his employees on company premises, for example through meetings, coffee klatches, or bulletin board notices, he must permit outside professional union organizers to campaign in like manner at the employer's expense.

This clearly discourages the employer's only opportunity to communicate with employees — that is, while they are at work. And it adds to the union's already existing advantages in the election process.

Again, what senator would vote for an election law requiring him to subsidize the campaign of his opponent?

Next, the bill would impose a series of severe punitive sanctions directed solely against employers. One such penalty would authorize the federal government to dictate to employers the percentage increases in wages and benefits contained in a first collective bargaining contract.

These economic terms would be set, regardless of the employer's ability to pay, by reference to increases in wages and benefits among bargaining units of those major industries with 5,000 or more employees.

Rather than serving as an impartial "umpire," the government would thrust into the role of a third party at the bargaining table on the side of the unions by dictating wage and benefit increases.

Another penalty would authorize the federal government to "blacklist" an employer from receiving government contracts for a period of up to three years. This penalty would put some employers out of business, with a resulting loss of jobs for employees. Is this how S. 2467 will protect workers?

The result of these changes will be to bog down, rather than streamline, the operations of the National Labor Relations Board. In fact, the NLRB estimates that the changes proposed in S. 2467 would cost the agency an additional $30 million annually and require an additional staff of 900 employees to administer. More revealing, the board concludes that passage of the bill will increase litigation.

The country does not need or want more government and more government spending. It does not need or want more union power. And it certainly does not need or want higher rates of inflation and unemployment. Yet that is what S. 2467 offers.

In short, the so-called labor "reform" bill has little to do with the pressing needs of our society. Ironically, it will benefit neither union members nor the public. It is special interest legislation which would incur only to the benefit of union organizers and their national officials. It is a dangerous bill.

Who is doing greater harm?

By Father Edmund S. Nadelny,
Archdiocese of Hartford

Often when one reads or hears a religious commentator's opinion on radio, TV and in newspapers, the prevailing attitude is that sex and violence on TV and radio are having a detrimental effect on our viewing and listening audience.

The overemphasis on sex and violence obviously has tremendous negative effects. In many ways, many of our religious programs and articles are having a greater deleterious effect because their falsehood is a lot more subtle.

In the commercial arena we see a priest portrayed as an immature person on the TV series "Soap," "The Gong Show," and "Mash." Who would want to follow such immature men? A subtle slap, yet a rather obvious one.

In the so-called religious ghetto on Sunday mornings on radio, TV and some newspapers, too many religious programs and articles use Jesus as a product to sell. Jesus is becoming a financially marketable product. So often the speakers give the impression that the only thing that matters is that you feel good with Jesus. It really doesn't matter whether you belong to a church or not, and who really cares if your neighbor is hungry, as long as you have Jesus in your heart. The Electric Religious Leader is actually destroying the community of the church instead of building up God's kingdom.

The viewer needs to watch religious programming with a discretionary eye. Just listen to the way speakers quote scripture out of context to condemn everything and anything. We hear scripture quoted in condemnation of homosexuality, but there is no place in scripture that condemns anyone for his orientation whether it is homosexual or heterosexual. What God judges us on is behavior and attitude, not on our particular sexual orientation. Homosexuals are called to sanctity as well as heterosexuals. We all have a Common Father, so all of us are first children of this Father.

So often our self religious leaders spend so much of their time on the air and in print accusing us of little faith. They say that the reason there are so few cures and so many illnesses is because people don't have faith. So they build up great guilt feelings.

An elderly lady called and was crying because the TV host told her she had arthritis because she did not have enough faith. This attitude does violence on TV and radio. The woman was not told that God has the power to cure everyone and for some mysterious reason God chooses to heal some, while others are allowed to give glory to God through their sickness.

It is not a matter of little faith or sinfulness. No, it's a belief in God's power to heal when and if he so desires. It's a belief that God does answer every prayer, but not always in ways that is recognizable to us. So many self appointed speakers and writers go out of their way to develop guilt feelings over a false teaching on faith and healing.

Another area of caution for the recipient of the mass media is the unwillingness of the commercial and religious media to make a distinction between what the Church and God are saying, and what the Church and God mean. When a baby cries he is telling you something with his tears. But what does that crying mean? Is the child hungry, tired, uncomfortable, angry, hurting? It takes time to find out the meaning of that cry.

The headlines on the networks news try to tell you what the church is saying. It never tells you what the church means. How can you say what the church means on birth control in 30 seconds followed by a commercial. The viewer has to take every headline, especially religious headlines, with a grain of salt.

This deception is also found in religious programming. So often we hear scripture quoted out of context. What did the Lord say? But more important — What does the Lord mean?

Another very obvious discrepancy that I have found in religious programming is that the self-appointed religious leaders give the impression that they want to build up their own kingdom a lot more than they want to build up the kingdom of God. For instance, the host who keeps talking about getting money to build another building that obviously isn't needed in the area, or who

Open forum Distressed at Cartoon

To the editor:
I was distressed to see your political cartoon in your April 19, 1978 edition of The Manchester Herald in which workers in a nuclear power station are hideously deformed.

Along with freedom of the press as guaranteed by the First Amendment, newspapers also have an implied responsibility to provide an accurate rendition of the news.

Clearly you have shown a bias against nuclear power. I would suggest that you take a closer look at this source of power and its safety record. For example, no person has ever been killed or seriously injured in a nuclear related accident in a civilian power reactor.

It is easy to criticize anything as long as you don't have to make the decision as to the alternatives and bear their responsibility. Because of our great need for power, we need all sources of power, whether it be coal, oil, atomic, solar, wind, water, etc. It would be appreciated if in the future that you would give nuclear power a more honest representation.

I am enclosing a small pocket handbook about nuclear energy facts for your use. Perhaps it can be used to give a more balanced picture.

Sincerely yours,
David B. Scott

Tenants start complaining about Centennial Apartments

Tenants at the Centennial Apartments on Chestnut Street have started to complain about conditions in the four-story building, particularly since the two suspicious fires in the past two weeks.
The tenants of the 40-unit building have complained to the management agency, police and fire officials about debris left in the basement from the April 29 fire which burned a mattress and a chair cushion. The debris is still there after two weeks.
Another fire occurred Wednesday afternoon also in the basement. Fire officials said both fires were set.
Town Fire Chief and Fire Marshal John Rivosa said Friday the manager of the apartments, Burr Carlson, has agreed to cooperate fully as far as the corrections he has recommended to make the apartments more fire safe.

Rivosa said he recommended that locks be put on the doors to the basement storage areas, that the holes in the basement ceiling be closed up and that all debris be removed from the area.
Overall, Rivosa said, the building is not too bad. He said there are two exits for each apartment, wooden fire escapes, and there are many stairways which makes easier outside access.
The building does not have to conform to the current fire safety codes because it was built before the 1954 regulations were put into effect.
Current regulations for four-story buildings include a required alarm system, emergency lights in the corridors and stairways, a segregated storage area, one hour fire walls, and floors covered with fire-rated gypsum board. Centennial Apartments have none of these requirements, but Rivosa said he cannot require them because of the regulations.
Police and fire officials have expressed concern about the fires in the building because of the many elderly residents in the apartments.
The tenants have complained of youthful vandals in the building, both on the roofs and in the basement on numerous occasions, according to one tenant, Valerie Evans. She said everyone is always complaining to the management, but little has been done. Other problems include broken windows, and broken water pipes flooding living rooms in at least two apartments, she said.
Rivosa said he will keep after the management agency until they correct the problems because of the serious danger of fire.
The police are also questioning suspects from the fires Friday night

Foreclosure started

The Town of Manchester has taken its first foreclosure action against a delinquent taxpayer, attorney Kevin O'Brien, assistant town counsel, said Friday.

The foreclosure papers were filed Friday against Richard C. Harmon of Glastonbury, O'Brien said. Harmon owns three parcels in Manchester on Pearl, Wells and Chestnut streets, and owes $7,495.52 in taxes to the town, according to town records.
The town originally sent letters about 30 delinquent taxpayers threatening foreclosure if payment was not made.

Most of those persons have since paid or made arrangements with the town to pay in installments.
There still are about five who the town may take foreclosure action against, O'Brien said. A second foreclosure is being prepared for next week, he said.
The town also has taken action against Grand Union. That firm owes $6,672.84 in personal property taxes, O'Brien said.

Sound Assurance Quartet appears on radio Sunday

The Sound Assurance quartet will make a live appearance Sunday night on Bob and Vin's Barbershop, heard at 8 over WINF radio (1230).

The quartet, part of the Hartford Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, Inc., qualified in a contest last week to compete in the society's international quartet competition this summer in Cincinnati. Only 60 of an estimated 1500 quartets in the United States and Canada will qualify to enter the contest that will determine SPEBSQSA's 1978 international quartet champions.
Bob and Vin's Barbershop is produced weekly by Manchester's Silk City Chorus. The program usually features recorded music from the nation's barbershop harmony groups. Another feature is a mystery song contest where listeners are asked to identify a song title after hearing only the verse of a familiar tune. The first person to call with the correct title wins an SPEBSQSA recording of top-ranked quartets.

News for senior citizens
By WALLY FORTIN

Hello, everybody! Well next week is the "big one" for us as we celebrate Senior Citizen month by having our own "Big Week" of activities.

We start off with a nine-hole golf tournament at the East Hartford Golf Course starting around 8:30 a.m. Then we have our regular programs with added prizes. We then come back in the evening at 7:30 for our super dance with live and lively music provided by Lou Schubert and his band. Lots of snacks, punch and door prizes.

Bowling tournament
Tuesday is our bowling tournament in the afternoon and in the evening starting at 6:30, it's our Sports Banquet where we award trophies to the tournament winners and then have some super entertainment by Irish Hugh Hayden.

Wednesday is our day for the Boston tour. We leave at 8 a.m.

Thursday is our special day to honor our volunteers and select Mr. and Mrs. Senior Citizen. We'll have a nice roast beef dinner and some of our guests will be members of the Board of Directors. Entertainment will be provided by Annie Johnston, and our members plus we'll be showing color movies of this year's Variety Show.

Card party
Friday evening we end the week with a gala card party at the Community Y under the direction of Mary and Ed McKeever. The games will be military whist or cribbage and we will have prizes for the winners along with snacks to munch on and also some beautiful door prizes.

Our bus is scheduled to run for both the dance on Monday and cards on Friday providing we have people signing up. The bus for Monday's dance will start its run at 6 p.m.

We still have 10 seats left on bus No. 4 for Wildwood, June 18-23, and must fill it before it can go.

Bowling league
Action here at the center starts with our Senior Bowling League at the Parkade Lanes this past Tuesday. The top scorers were: Class A high triple, Sue Purcell, 403; Norman Lasher, 365; high single, Marge Hall, 157; Lenny Bjorkman, 232; Class B, high triple, Polly Kenneway, 339; Jack Jaslowksi, 519; high single, Polly Kenneway, 132; Russ Nettleton, 189.

In the afternoon we had three tables for bridge and the lucky prize winners were: Marjorie McLain, 4,590; Mabel Larkin, 4,220; George East, 3,580.

We have had some requests about taking in a ball game. Well, I have been told that seats in Boston are at a premium and in fact all games are at night and group seats are anywhere from section 2 to 6 which is far out right field. So far, we haven't had 45 say they would go under these conditions so we haven't planned anything as yet.

The bus for Williamsburg will be leaving the Senior Center at 7:30 a.m. on May 19. There are still a few seats available for this trip.

Menu for the week
Monday: Chicken chow mein, fluffy rice, shrimp egg roll, Jello with pineapple, beverage.

410 WEST MIDDLE TURNPIKE MANCHESTER

Collectors' Corner

By MARCKENRICK
"Whaddy mean they'll postmark our stamps in Canada?"

"That's right, our Postal Service will have a booth at the CAPEX in Toronto and send you a first-day cover from there."

"How come they can do that?"

"They did it from Expo '76 in Montreal."

"Oh yeah?"

Actually it seems that the covers will somehow get from Toronto to Buffalo and be put into the U.S. mail there without further cancellation. The first day of issue will be June 10.

The CAPEX '78 sheet looks like a winner. It will be in six colors - yellow, green, red, brown, blue and black. The stamps will be slightly narrower and taller than our regular issues. Across the top of the sheet we see a cardinal, a mallard duck, Canada goose and blue jay. The bottom row has a moose, chipmunk, red fox and raccoon. In between the rows it says "This tribute features wildlife ('faune vivante') that share the Canadian-United States border."

You can order covers with the full souvenir sheet, or with two or more of the stamps. (Not just one, because the postage rate will inevitably be more than 13 cents by that time.)

Be in mind that the sheet will be nearly three inches wide, so choose an envelope large enough and put the pebble address label down out of the way. (The sheet will be 2.93 by 4.37 inches. The SIPEX sheet of 1966 was 2.875 by 4.25.)

If you want stamps out of a sheet, indicate which ones lightly with pencil on the cover just where you want them attached.

Mail the preparation in a larger envelope to "Post Day Covers," Post Office Box 420, Postal Station "A," Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5M 1V9. Enclose $1.00 for each full sheet or 15 cents for each stamp.

Personal checks are OK up to the limit of 200 covers. Orders must be postmarked no later than June 23.

Naked sheets may be purchased over the counter.

Many United States stamp organizations will take part in the CAPEX: the American Airmail Society, the APS and the SPA will have their spring meetings there, and so forth.

And for Postal History buffs - for the first time in any international exhibition, a class of 500 frames in this topic will be judged separately.

Beer blast was a bomb

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) - Brown students apparently respond better to blitzard conditions than to beer to beer blasts.

The Red Cross threw a bash for 250 Brown students who volunteered for the Red Cross during the February blizzard. Only nine showed up.

The Red Cross had stocked the Benefit Street Armory with 200 cans of beer as a way to thank the students for sking through hazy snowdrifts with backpacks stuffed with food for 30,000 meals to the city's shelters.

Bayard Wharton, head of Red Cross disaster services, said he guessed the students were too modest to accept all the awards, praise and beer. Either that or final exams at Brown had taken their toll.

The nine students who did make it to the party were properly rewarded, anyway.

Each walked out with an entire case of beer.
