HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut Attorney General Carl Ajello has warned all state agencies that if they want quick action from his office, they should not rely on the U.S. Postal Service.

In a memorandum distributed to all state agencies, Ajello said, "Needless to say, the regular U.S. Postal service often involves even greater delay (than the state mail system) and erratic service and should be avoided."

Ajello said Wednesday he doesn't have any statistics to back up his warning. But he said at least twice a week some state agency calls his office asking for action on some matter and his office hasn't even received the material from the agency.

His memo advised the agencies to hand-deliver any material that needs action in a hurry.

"Frequently it is necessary to transmit a variety of items to the attorney general for immediate attention," he said. "These might include legal process, documents for review or execution as well as other things where time is important."

"All such matters should be hand-carried to 30 Trinity Street. The deliverer should insure that the person receiving the material is aware of its significance, including the time element."

"Such material should not be placed in the regular state delivery service since that routing normally requires several days for arrival and certainly does not alert anyone here to the time consideration involved," Ajello said in the memo.

He said he does not know of any specific cases where material was delayed in the U.S. mails and resulted in a problem.

"I just was trying to make the point that if the agencies want action taken in a hurry, they should get it here in person," he said.

Belgium sends paratroops to help in Zaire evacuation

By United Press International

Belgium today began a paratroop operation to evacuate foreigners whose life may be in danger in Zaire's embattled Shaba province.

A series of Hercules C130 air force transport planes ferrying an estimated 1,000 paratroops to Zaire, began taking off from Melsbroek military airport near Brussels shortly before 4 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT).

The rescue operation was prepared by a crisis cabinet which met during the night and again this morning.

Prime Minister Leo Tindemans said afterward that a high-level meeting was being held somewhere abroad with the United States, France, Britain and some African states to coordinate the operation.

The rescue operation was launched amid Paris reports that French Foreign Legion paratroops flew to Africa today as part of a possible international rescue effort to evacuate whites trapped in street fighting in the rebel-seized mining center of Kolwezi.

Zaire said Wednesday its paratroops recaptured strategic Kolwezi airfield from the Angola-based insurgents, but diplomats reported drunken rebels roamed the town hunting whites.

A dispatch from Brussels said that while the first rescue airlift plane roared off, line after line of paratroops filed into the other craft. Others were still lined up with their shirts off or arms bared to receive vaccination shots.

The paratroops were assembled at Melsbroek this morning from various units over the country, wearing combat suits.

Relatives gathered around the airport to shout and wave goodbye to the crack units which were leaving on the second Belgian rescue operation in Zaire in 14 years.

Separate planes, including two Boeing-727s, left earlier with equipment and logistic personnel.

Belgian Prime Minister Tindemans had announced earlier that Belgium had started preparations for evacuating foreigners whose lives were feared in danger in Zaire's Shaba Province, invaded by Angola-based secessionists eight days ago.

A French radio broadcast in Paris said today that French Foreign Legion paratroops flew to Ivory Coast capital of Abidjan aboard five DC8 jetliners chartered from a private airline as part of the possible international effort to evacuate whites.

The capture of Kolwezi airfield may be a turning point in the battle President Mobutu Sese Seko's army is waging against some 4,000 rebels who invaded Shaba Province via neighboring Zambia eight days ago.

Seventy-eight Americans in the battle area were evacuated Wednesday in a daring rescue organized by the Indianapolis-based Morrison-Knudsen construction firm for its employees and dependents. An estimated 10 Americans remained behind.

But fears grew in Western capitals about the fate of some 3,000 other whites living in the copper and cobalt mining center of Kolwezi, captured by the rebels in their initial surprise assault.

CD coordinator is in hot water

CD coordinator is in hot water

By ALICE EVANS
Herald Reporter

Alan Mason, Manchester's community development coordinator, is in hot water with the Housing Authority and the Senior Citizens Center site committee.

Mason, who in the past has been criticized for the Commission on Aging and the Human Relations Commission, also has disillusioned at least two members of the Community Development Advisory Commission.

Representatives of the site committee and the advisory commission appeared at Tuesday night's meeting of the Housing Authority to find out why it was "jeopardizing" the town's chances of obtaining federal funds, a statement Mason had made to both The Herald and The Hartford Courant.

The advisory commission ended up giving the authority a clean bill of health on the matter, and the site committee joined Housing Authority members in blasting Mason for giving out misinformation, double-talk, and throwing road blocks in the way of the site committee in obtaining Green School as a new Senior Citizens Center.

Mason had said that the Housing Authority's rejection of a grant to buy 10 units of rental subsidized housing could jeopardize the town receiving community development funds.

Pascal Mastrangelo, chairman of the authority, said he had told Mason he was not to speak for the Housing Authority and that any information about the authority should come from its office.

"Accepting the grant would be a nice way not to make friends. If we bought a duplex house and the tenants did not qualify for the low-income rental subsidy, they would have to move. If they didn't move, we would have to dispossess them and would have to pay to relocate the family," Mastrangelo said.

The authority could only afford a quarter of a maintenance man for the 10 housing units, which might be located in various parts of town, he said.

"We have 126 units of subsidized housing and have authorized another 30 units tonight. We have contacted Sen. Lowell Weicker, Sen. Abe Ribicoff and U.S. Rep. William Colter today to speed up action on obtaining a grant to build another 100 units of elderly housing."

"As far as the authority is concerned, we're taking care of handicapped and elderly people and those with low incomes," he said.

James McAuley, a member of the advisory commission, told the authority, "You come out with a clean bill of health; you're not jeopardizing anything. You are being used as a scapegoat by someone."

Knowing that the new Senior Citizens Center is doomed if the federal funds go down the drain, the subcommittee said that all it was getting from Mason was double-talk. Members said they didn't mind answering questions about the proposed center, but they felt Mason was throwing road blocks in their way. "Our problem is Alan Mason," one committee member said.

"We don't want to make accusations, but certain waves are being made that are very confusing to the advisory commission," Al Reale, a member of that commission, said.

Everyone wished that Mason had attended the meeting, but he had refused an invitation because of another commitment, Mastrangelo said.

Mastrangelo is seeking a "confrontation" with Mason to clarify all issues. He will ask Town Manager Robert Weiss to arrange such a meeting, and if Mason refuses, Mastrangelo said that he would request Weiss to order Mason to show up.

Bolton student wins national scholarship

BOLTON — David Cloutier, a 15-year-old Bolton High School sophomore, has won the grand prize of $1,000 in the 13th annual Stanley Tools National Scholarship Contest. The announcement was made Wednesday by James Titus, vice president of market planning and development for Stanley Tools.

Cloutier received the grand prize for a six-foot trestle table he designed and built under the guidance of Roger Titus, high school industrial arts teacher.

Cloutier is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cloutier of 21 Brandy Street.

There were 20 winners from across the country. The top three prizes went to students in New England.

The contest is part of Stanley's long established program to encourage the development of students' woodworking skills. Students are required to submit plans, a list of materials and photo of the project. Cost of wood materials may not exceed $100.

Sewer fee plan revisions likely

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Changes apparently will be made in the proposed sewer rates for the Town of Manchester, including a possible alteration in the town's charge to the Eighth Utilities District.

Changes to the Eight District's charge could include a decrease, if the town Board of Directors decides to eliminate charging the district for collection, or an increase, if the board votes to charge the district retroactively for sewer usage.

Also, the board may decide to reduce the proposed amount that large users would pay during the first year. This could result in an increase in the proposed minimum rate, a decrease in Sewer Department expenditures, or a combination of all three.

Town directors met Wednesday with Frank Sampson and Stephen Alcott, both of Metcalf & Eddy, to review that firm's report on changes in the sewer rates.

The federal government is requiring that communities charge for sewers on a flat-rate basis that would eliminate a discount for large users. Manchester, like most communities, now has a schedule that includes a lower per-unit cost as water consumption increases. Sewer rates are based on water use.

Metcalf & Eddy has proposed that almost all of this discount be eliminated beginning July 1. This would mean substantial increases for large water users, including Lydall Inc., Cheney Brothers, Manchester Memorial Hospital and the Eighth District.

The directors, however, hope to avoid increases in one year as sharp as the one Lydall Inc. would face under the plan — from $53,000 to $154,700.

"I strongly suspect that the rates will not go into effect in their present form," Stephen Penny, chairman of the Board of Directors, said after Wednesday night's meeting.

A May 31 public hearing will be held on the proposed sewer rates.

Auditor sees Denison trips no violation

An investigation by a state auditor based on allegations about activities of Ronald H. Denison, president of Manchester Community College, resulted in no unauthorized, illegal or irregular findings, Leo V. Donohue, a state auditor, said.

Allegations concerning a trip out of state during the college time, use of a state car and attendance records were reported to the auditor's office by two citizens who asked to be unnamed. The investigation was done prior to Denison's controversial reappointment as president in March.

Donohue submitted a report to Searle F. Charles, executive director of the Community Colleges, on May 1, recommending that a policy be adopted regarding trips by state employees while on the state payroll. There is presently no policy.

One of the allegations involved two trips by Denison to Iowa in late 1975 and 1976 to attend meetings of the board of directors of an educational testing company, Denison acknowledged that the trips were taken, Donohue said, and that they were taken with the full knowledge of Charles.

The trips were on weekends and involved missing part of a Friday and a Monday. Donohue said he found no basis for the other complaints.

The state auditor's office is required by state law to check any information that comes to its attention that might indicate unauthorized or irregular expenditures by state employees. The auditors are required to report any of the findings which might be in violation to the governor's committee on legislative management.

In the investigation of MCC, nothing was found that required reporting, Donohue said. However, because of concerns for several years over the lack of policy regarding work of state officials outside their regular state duties, Donohue made the recommendation to state employees while on the state payroll.

Donohue also said that it was a bad practice for Denison to go to Iowa while on the state payroll. He added that it would be bad practice for anyone in a similar position, but he said it has occurred on numerous occasions.

Donohue said a law on a policy was introduced in the 1976 State Legislature, but failed to get passage at the last minute.

Sewer rate changes nationwide problem

Manchester is not the only town going through changes because of the federal government's mandate for sewer rates that would eliminate a discount for large users.

"This user charge has caused an uproar across the country," Frank Sampson of Metcalf & Eddy said after meeting Wednesday with the Town Board of Directors.

Sampson and Stephen Alcott, also of Metcalf & Eddy, met with the directors to explain the proposed changes to the town's sewer rates. The town now provides a discount for large users, but the new rates are based on the amount of water used.

The federal government has said that such discounts have caused a decline in a community's ability to receive future federal grants for sewer work.

Some town businesses, such as Lydall & Foulds and Cheney Brothers, and also the Eighth Utilities District, which pays the town as one large user, will receive large increases.

According to a report by Metcalf & Eddy, Lydall & Foulds would face the sharpest increase — from $53,000 to $154,700.

Such increases are being experienced in towns across the country, Sampson and Alcott said. Almost all communities have had some type of discount for large users.

Some communities, in fact, have provided greater discounts than Manchester. Alcott said that one out-of-state firm fears a proposed increase for sewer charges from $40,000 to $550,000.

Town joins in study of insurance costs

Manchester is participating in a Connecticut Conference of Municipalities study on insurance procedures.

The committee is researching whether towns might be able to cut down on the amount spent for insurance.

Thomas Moore, controller for the Town of Manchester, is working on the committee that is organizing the study.

He said that questionnaires have been sent to all the communities in the state to find out about present insurance costs and methods.

Town Manager Robert Weiss said that recommendations might be made about self-insurance for certain items or pooling municipal insurance policies to reduce costs.

Last year, town officials had said that they might look into a self-insurance program to reduce town insurance costs.

Weiss said that he suggested the CCM study as an approach that would be better than Manchester and other towns doing such studies individually.

Taxi firm granted seven more cabs

Dial-A-Ride of Connecticut Inc., which operates a taxi service from its Manchester office, has received permission from the state to add seven additional vehicles and to service East Hartford.

The Public Utilities Control Authority has granted permission for the firm to operate seven additional radio-equipped vehicles.

The firm, located at 134 E. Center St., now has five vehicles in operation, Roger Talbot, president of the company, said. He expects that two or three of the new taxis will be delivered right away and another two or three should be delivered within the next few weeks.

The Capital Cab Co. spoke in opposition to the expansion request at the PUCA hearing.

Speakers in favor of the expansion included representatives of the Madison Motor Inn in East Hartford, the East Hartford Chamber of Commerce and Pratt & Whitely Aircraft. All spoke of the need for increased taxi service in the area.

Town, district unit will meet May 25

A subcommittee of members from the Boards of Directors for the Town of Manchester and the Eighth Utilities District will meet May 25. Vivian Ferguson will replace William Diana as the Republican representative from the town board. Diana is hospitalized after suffering a heart attack.

Mrs. Ferguson, however, will be unable to attend the May 25 meeting, so her place will be taken at that meeting by Carl Zinsner.

Besides a white elephant table, there will also be candy, crafts and plants for sale.

Games will be set up for all ages. The public is invited.

Town will flush Rockledge mains

The Town of Manchester Water Department will flush water mains in the Rockledge area next week. Fran Taylor, office manager for the department, said.

The flushing will start Monday and is expected to take all week. It will start at Garth Road and go north to Green Manor and Barry roads and Lynch Drive. Work also will be done northwesterly on East Middle Turnpike to Parker Street.

Homes within the area outlined by those streets may experience reduced pressure and discoloration, Taylor said.

If water appears discolored, the homeowner should try to avoid using it until it clears, he said. This will prevent rust and sediment from being brought into the home's system.

If sediment does get into a home's hot water tank, Taylor said that the homeowner should wait until the water clears and then open the faucet at the bottom of the tank to drain the collected material, which will settle at the bottom.

Also, if a load of wash is done during the period of discolored water, the load should be done again after the water clears. Four ounces of cream of tartar should be added to help clean any discoloration of the clothing, Taylor said.

It normally takes a couple of hours for the water to clear in a home. If water appears discolored for an extended period, the homeowner should call the Water Department.

Quinn to head New Hope home

Peter C. Quinn was elected president of New Hope Manor Inc. at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors today. New Hope Manor is a private, residential treatment center and accredited school for adolescent girls with drug or alcohol related problems.

The immediate past-president attorney John L. Bonee III of Hartford handled the gavel over to Quinn, saying, "New Hope has met tremendous challenges over the last two years, demonstrating that the goodwill and determination of dedicated individuals, both on the board, the staff and in the community, can make a private, nonprofit institution be successful and responsive to the needs of young people in the community all too often ignored and abandoned."

Quinn, of 175 N. Beacon St., Hartford is a special assistant to the superintendent of schools in Hartford.

Other executive officers elected were: Nancy Bristol of West Hartford, vice-president; Cassandra Carlegio of West Hartford, secretary; and Joanne Susag of Manchester, treasurer.

The founding members of New Hope Manor: Lorraine Casanelli of Wetherfield, Vivian Fox of West Hartford; Anne McGinness of West Hartford; and Kathleen Donovan, now of New York, all registered nurses and first-hand witnesses of the devastating effects of chemical abuse on young persons, were honored at the annual meeting and designated as "permanent consultants" to the board of directors. New Hope was founded in 1972.

Town aide suggests limits on travel

Paula Yellman, Manchester's budget analyst, has recommended a town policy that would limit expenses for such items as trips to conferences and memberships to professional groups.

The Board of Directors will consider this matter, along with other loose ends that developed during the budget-making process, at its June meeting, Stephen Penny, chairman of the board, said.

The board took a close look during its budget work at the professional development and training accounts of each department. These accounts cover such expenses as trips to seminars and conventions and memberships in professional groups.

Ms. Yellman, in a letter to the board, proposed that no employee be allowed more than one membership fee and that a department not be allowed duplicate memberships to the same organization.

She spoke to other towns about their policies for out-of-state-trips to conferences and other similar events.

Her recommendation was that the town establish a line item in the personnel budget for out-of-state travel.

Flouride in water said not harmful

BOSTON (UPI) — There is no conclusive evidence that fluorides in your drinking water will increase your chances of getting cancer or other diseases, a federal health expert says.

"I found no evidence of a harmful effect of fluoridation," Dr. J. David Erickson of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta writes in the current issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"But that is not to say there is conclusive evidence that fluoridation does not have a harmful effect. It is darn difficult to prove a negative. It is like telling me to prove that there is not a spaceship from Mars somewhere on this planet," Erickson said in an interview.

In his study, death rates in 24 cities with fluoridated water supplies and 22 with non-fluoridated water supplies in the United States were compared for the years 1969-1971.

Erickson said he set out to determine if fluorides are harmful. "Recently, there has been a good deal of interest in a purported relation between community water fluoridation and cancer mortality," he said.

"During these three years 570,671 deaths occurred in the cities with fluoridated water... The figures for cities with non-fluoridated water were 551,05," he said.

But Erickson said the higher death rate in the fluoridated communities had nothing to do with the drinking water and much to do with the population and environmental aspects of the cities.

Erickson said some of the communities with fluoridated water where there were higher death rates, such as communities in Florida, had higher concentrations of older people and therefore higher mortality rates.

"We have to take into consideration the different kinds of people who live in the various cities, the level of education overall, and the population density."

"I am not saying that because a person is less educated he will die earlier, but education seems to have some bearing on life expectancy. Maybe it is because of the types of jobs the less educated have that have an effect," he said.

But he wrote, "There was no evidence of a harmful effect, including cancer, attributable to fluoridation."

Foes cite consolidation cost

Supporters of the Eighth Utilities District again have issued information about the costs they feel would result from consolidation of district with the Town of Manchester.

A one-page fact sheet on the costs was presented Tuesday night to the Democratic Club of Manchester. It was prepared by William Sheridan, treasurer of the anti-consolidation group. Stop Tampering With the Eighth's American Liberties.

The Democratic club previously had heard from supporters of consolidation.

Sheridan estimates that consolidation would result in a $625,700 increase in yearly costs based on hiring 28 firefighters at a cost of $20,000 per year, a figure that includes salary and fringe benefits.

The 28 firefighters would be needed to staff the Eighth District's firehouse around the clock, Sheridan said.

HRC will try again to get Bourque files

By ALICE EVANS
Herald Reporter

Manchester's Human Relations Commission will make one more attempt to see the personnel files of John Bourque so that it can complete its investigation of charges brought against the town by Bourque, a former town employee.

Richard Kenny, a member of the commission and an attorney, will see a member of the town council's staff in the next few days in an attempt to resolve the problems the commission has faced in seeing Bourque's personnel files.

Kenny said Tuesday night that if the town council will agree to change some of the language in the release Bourque has to sign before the commission can see the files, the commission can resolve the matter within a week.

Bourque has refused to sign the release because he believes, after reading the document, that he would be signing away his life, his goods and everything he or his heirs might have in the future.

He has filed a complaint with the Freedom of Information board and his hearing is set for June 20. Tuesday night, he told the commission that he is planning to set down with the town and work the whole thing out. "If I get a lawyer (to handle his complaint) it will only cost me money," he said.

The commission has been discussing Bourque's complaint since December. Commissioner John Honor said Tuesday night, "Bourque is destitute and doesn't know what to do. We sit here with our rhetoric and his complaint is out of a job."

Other commissioners also feel that the town or someone should do something about finding work for Bourque Hachadourian, a member of the commission, said, in discussing the Bourque complaint. "After what you read in the papers, if I were a town employee, I wouldn't bring a complaint before this commission. I would just go to the state."

Opinion

Bolton evades issue

It is unfortunate that Bolton voters and officials again have chosen to evade the long standing question about the legality of the town's capital reserve fund. Townspeople ignored the problem Monday night when they adopted a 1978-79 budget of $2.5 million. One official, a member of the Board of Finance, even tried to suppress debate on the issue, saying that discussion was disruptive. The questions surround an apparent conflict between an old town ordinance and a new town charter. Board of Finance members said they had resolved the matter through discussion with the town's lawyer, but if they had, it seems debate wouldn't be necessary.

The "disruption" stemmed from a suggestion that the capital reserve fund be used to help reduce the tax rate. Voters were urged to take $30,000 worth of capital expenditures out of the regular budget and pay for them with the reserve fund. Townspeople and all but one member of the finance board rejected this idea. Involved were purchases of town vehicles and capital improvement projects. If the capital reserve fund is illegal, why is it allowed to exist? And what good is it if it can't be used for capital expenditures? These are questions which have been unanswered for too long. Bolton voters should insist on getting the answers immediately.

Feminism vs. mortgage

DONALD F. GRAFF
A lot of American families can thank the feminist revolution for the roofs over their heads. And a lot of other families could have good cause for blaming it for their difficulties in finding roofs. Why? Because the feminist movement's success to date in expanding the legal rights and responsibilities of women has been a major contributing factor in the current housing boom. Possibly the largest single factor, according to the analysis of a home-financing organization, Advance Mortgage Corporation, Detroit-based subsidiary of New York's giant Citicorp. One provision of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1975 required that a working wife's income be counted toward mortgage eligibility under the same standards as the husband's, the company notes in the current issue of its quarterly survey, "U.S. Housing Markets." "That, at a stroke, increased the mortgage power of millions of two-income families 40 to 60 percent and, in many cases, by much more," the survey points out. Under the new phase-in, which translates financially into billions of dollars in mortgage-eligible income which would not have existed prior to the 1975 equal credit act when incomes of working wives of childbearing age were generally discounted by mortgage lenders. That, in its way, is the good news—for two-income families and the housing industry. The bad news is that single-income families, generally those in which only the husband is a jobholder, have not seen their mortgage-eligible income escalate similarly. Consequently, they are being priced out of the market as housing costs continue to rise steeply. Unless, that is, they were fortunate enough to be home-owners before 1975 and can apply the increased value of a present home to the purchase price of a new one. But that's the way it is with revolutions — you win some and you lose some.

Sex replacing violence in TV wasteland

By LEE RODERICK
WASHINGTON — Philo T. Farnsworth, the late Utah-born genius who was the principal inventor of television, once said that TV is a gift of God, and that God will hold accountable those who misuse this remarkable gift. If that is true, a good number of people in television industry have reason to fear meeting their Maker. The electronic pollution served up nightly in the guise of "entertainment" by the commercial networks makes a mockery of their claim to operate in the public interest, which, by law, they supposedly must do. The insidiousness of network decision-makers is seen in their current resort of sex as a substitute for the wholesome violence they so recently found the public reluctant to swallow any longer. One result of their sexual programming is that network bigwigs are now playing a cunning game of one-upmanship to see who can be the raunchiest before viewers cry "enough." And, to date, they appear to be succeeding in administering sex in sufficient quantities to irritate viewers without turning most of them off. Despite more sex on the airwaves this year than ever before, the networks report no significant increase in protest mail.

Hermilio Traviesas, former chief censor at NBC who is now the top censor for all the networks, recently expressed surprise at the lack of protest in an interview with a Washington TV critic. In one movie film shown on television under the title "Death of Her Innocence," said Traviesas, a bedroom scene showed a guy pulling a condom out of his pocket and putting it on the table. "I was... expecting a whole lot of telephone calls after it was on the air, but we only got two or three," he explained. Another segment, on "Saturday Night Live," was about a government agent who tracked down venereal disease. About 100 telephone calls protested the sketch, said Traviesas, "but 100 calls is nothing. In the early days of 'Laugh-In' there would be 500. "The "Saturday Night" show averages about 40. If we get 100, then I look at the show on Monday morning, because I never stay up late enough on Saturday night to watch it live." The apparent lack of protest of sexual material on TV — which can only encourage the networks to increase the dosage — reminds me of a recent observation by British social critic Malcolm Muggeridge. Commenting on the decline of morals in the West, Muggeridge said our situation is similar to that of a bunch of frogs who find themselves in a pan of water on a stove. The water heats up so gradually that they fail to realize the danger until it is too late and they are boiled. Many viewers already have been burned in various ways by what they have witnessed on television, and others have been boiled. But only the most sensational of their cases ever come to public attention. Such as the case of Olivia Niemi, the California girl who was nine on that September day in 1974 when confronted on a San Francisco beach by three other girls and a boy ranging in age from 11 to 15. At least one of the four later told police she had watched an NBC film on station KRON-TV several days earlier called "Born Innocent," in which a teen-age runaway was committed to a reformitory. There, in a brutally realistic sense, she is attacked by four inmate girls while taking a shower, thrown to the floor, and repeatedly raped by one of the girls, using a "plumber's helper." The film was aired at 8 p.m. On the San Francisco beach less than a week later, life imitated "art" as the four youths assaulted 9-year-old Olivia Niemi with a beer bottle. Her family is suing NBC and the station's owner; the case is scheduled to come to a jury trial later this year. NBC and such friends-of-the-court as CBS argue, of course, that the First Amendment to the constitution absolutely bars any kind of recompense for the Niemis. Whatever the constitutional merits, their case dishonors the sacred

Phase-in inequitable

The letter, "Surprise Us Again," in this column on Tuesday, May 9, 1978, was incorrect as the editor's note points out. Nevertheless, that does not change the fact that the phase-in of property taxes is inequitable to many residential property owners. I, for example, will pay hundreds of dollars more over the five year phase-in period than other taxpayers whose homes were recently assessed by the town for exactly the same dollar value as mine. My new assessment increased only 65 percent, thus indicating, relative to other assessments, that my old assessment was, in fact, too high and I, therefore, paid more tax in the past than I should have. Under the new phase-in, I am again penalized since I will now have to pay a share of some other owner's tax bill. An example showing the inequity of the phase-in is shown below:

Home Owner	1966 Assessment	1977 Assessment	% Increase	Assessment Increase
Owner X	$17,575	$35,150	100.0	$17,575
Owner Y	$21,230	$35,150	65.6	$13,920

Phase-in Yearly Increase	1978-1979 Assessment	1978-1979 Tax Bill
$3,954	$23,000	$1,207
$2,784	$24,014	$1,274

Bad news for incumbents

By MARTHA ANGLE AND ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Pollster Lou Harris has some ominous news for members of Congress who expect the mantle of incumbency to shield them from defeat in this year's elections. Harris' polls, like those of other leading survey experts, ordinarily show a majority of those questioned approve of the job the 117 own representative is doing even though Congress as a whole receives an abysmal rating. But in a survey completed in late April, Harris for the first time found a majority giving negative marks to their own congressman as well as the institution. And that trend, if sustained, could spell significant trouble for the Democrats this fall despite House Speaker Tip O'Neill's confident prediction that the majority party will lose no more than five seats.

"Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever." Hebrews 13:8
"This just isn't my day." Another day of the same week can find you expressing "what a good day I had!" Bad days, good days, so-so-days... we all have these ups and downs because everything around us affects us in one way or another. Yet what a joy to know that Jesus Christ always has his love reaching out to his children — that his love is not conditional upon our feelings toward him. Forgiveness and peace are perfect and complete and always available to the seeking heart.

Business

Economist predicts strength won't last

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — A leading economist predicts business ought to enjoy the current strength of the nation's economy because it probably won't last very long. Alfred Sommers, chief economist for a New York economic research firm, gave that warning to about 200 businessmen at the annual meeting of the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council. Sommers said the prospects are "astonishingly good" for strong economic growth through June, but after that, inflation and other problems will begin to eat into the gains. Sommers predicted the third quarter will also see growth, though somewhat slower than the second quarter. And by 1979, he said, the economy should have slowed down to a moderate growth rate of 3.5 percent after adjusting for inflation. Sommers, a Milford native, said, "It's going to be very hard to reach that inflation away."

Gets national honor

Mervyn D. Lenz, president of Brescome Distributors Corp., at 85 South Satellite Road, South Windsor, has been named a 1978 Time Magazine Distinguished Wholesaler Award winner. A 30-year veteran of the business, he is one of eight alcoholic beverage wholesalers in the nation selected for the honor. The eight winners were selected by a panel of judges comprised of faculty of the Columbia University Graduate School of Business. Born in Newark, N.J., Lenz received bachelor's degrees from the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy and the University of North Carolina. He later completed an advanced management program at Harvard University. He served as a U.S. Navy lieutenant and chief engineering officer during World War II before joining his father in the wine and liquor industry. His father, a pioneer distiller and executive vice president of Browne Vineers Co., which later merged into Seagram's, bought Brescome Distributors in Hartford in 1949. Upon his father's retirement, Lenz became president of the company in 1967.

Since joining Sarah Coventry, Mrs. Cunningham has earned numerous awards and citations for top sales performance. She has won trips to U.S. cities and the islands which have been offered as prizes in company-sponsored sales contests. Mrs. Cunningham and her husband, Terry, have two children, Pamela, 14 and Colleen, 11.

Not as solid as rock

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — The last company in the Granite State to provide granite to the building trade has gone out of business. Assets of the Swenson Building Granite Co., whose predecessors provided granite for the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and many of New York City's historic buildings, will be auctioned off June 8 by the mortgage holder, the Merrimack County Savings Bank. The demise of the company threw 35 people out of work.

Canadair plans jet facility at Bradley

HARTFORD (UPI) — Canadair Inc. of Westport announced Wednesday it will build a $4 million corporate jet facility at Bradley International Airport in Windsor. The opening of the facility is expected to create 50 jobs, the company said. The Westport firm is a subsidiary of Canadair Limited, a Montreal-based aircraft manufacturer of the new, wide-bodied business jet, the Challenger. Canadair plans to build a 60,000 square-foot facility at Bradley field. The center should be operational by the fall of 1979. Company officials said this will be the first of three such facilities, with the others planned for the western United States and Europe.

Success To Grads

Ol' college campus ain't what it used to be

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The 1960s and early 70s brought angry, mass demonstrations on college campuses in Rhode Island and across the nation.

Students are still protesting today, but it's not quite the same.

Apart from mid rallies over internment matters, it was a quiet spring at institutions of higher learning throughout the state.

Some Brown University students are protesting investments in firms doing business with South Africa. A demonstration at the University of Rhode Island focused on journalism department cutbacks. Rhode Island School of Design students held a two-day protest over the leadership of Shaun Brown, president of the Brown Undergraduate Council of Students, says students are too involved "with pre-professional stuff to care about racial policies in South Africa, or anything else for that matter."

There's still a core group of 500 students who are active on campus," Mr. Brown said Tuesday. "But the majority of the students say 'this ain't the 60s, it's the 70s and I want a good job.'"

She says most students "are satisfied with what's going on inside Brown and outside."

Craven, the University of Rhode Island's outgoing student government president, says students today are too cynical to think a protest can make the world a better place.

"People in the '60s grew up in the 'Leave-It-To-Beaver' image. They saw America as great. And when it wasn't, they tried to change it."

"Now," Craven said, "they've all seen Vietnam, the assassinations and all the political scandals and they say America's not so hot."

Craven said it makes sense that most protests today are over tuition increases or department cutbacks a switch from the antiwar cause of a decade ago.

"Education is a means to an end for students here. They want the good way of life," he said. "Money in your pocket, a roof over your head, two cars in the garage, and the ability to do what you want, that's what they want."

Neither university has ever been called a bastion of activism.

Brown has experienced only one building takeover in the 21-year history of the Ivy League school. In the spring of 1975, students occupied University Hall, the school's administration building, to protest budget cuts affecting financial aid to students.

URI has never had a major protest.

Journalism students recently walked into the president's office to show their strong disapproval of proposed cutbacks in their department. URI students have also been staging small demonstrations throughout the year, on campus and at the Statehouse, against tuition hikes.

URI President Frank Newman calls this new brand of activism on his campus constructive.

"Students want to get the most out of their education because of the depressed economy. They want to be involved in the college's budget process," Newman said. "Students today recognize it's important to have a good career, but it's also important to have a good education."

Brown Political Science professor Edward I. Iser says the Ivy League campus is politically quiet because it's a "non-ide class university."

"There have never been any left-wing hippie radicals at Brown. The students are relatively stable and conservative," Iser said. "Most Brown students are reasonably content to live in this world as it is."

William D. Vanech, assistant English professor at Brown, said he is relieved to see that students across the country aren't burning down the university buildings anymore.

"Students should've learned from the '60s that the last place they should criticize is the university," Vanech said.

Competency tests have shortcomings

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pressures in the states for tests to prove students are learning the basics may really undercut education, a law consultant reports in "Phi Delta Kappa" — the prestigious journal of the education home society.

Lawyer Merle Steven McClung said shortcomings in the stamped toward competency testing are unfair to students. In the long run, he fears the tests may damage the public school system in America.

McClung focused also on the legality of such tests.

His major criticism is that too many of the testing programs are being imposed on students too late in their high school years.

"Traditional notions of due process should require adequate prior notice of any rule that could cause irreparable harm to a person's educational or occupational prospects," he said.

Due process, he noted, might also be violated in some programs because the competency tests lack curricular or instructional validity. In short, they don't test what the schools have been teaching.

Further, McClung took note of the racial discrimination overtones of the competency movement. He said a disproportionate number of minority students who fail the tests could lead to segregation or re-segregation within schools.

McClung proposed a model program for competency testing. The main points:

- The test should not measure what the school has never taught.
- It should reflect all levels of society.
- It should incorporate a lengthy phase-in period.
- It should include provisions for proper preparation, evaluation and remedial opportunities without tracking — that is, without putting students into a slow, medium or fast learner slot. Many educational authorities consider tracking damaging to a student's expectations of himself. It is almost axiomatic in education: a student tends to stay in the track in which he was first put. A slow track in the first grade can mean a slow track throughout one's educational experience in public schools.
- It should provide ways for students and educators to share responsibility for performance rather than place the full burden on the students.

Educator has treatment for junior high trouble

By PATRICIA MCGORMACK
UPI Education Writer

Wickedness, demonic vibes and ants in the pants don't have much to do with junior high students who act up, drop out, flunk or turn on with drugs.

A pilot project in an inner city junior high in Wilmington, Del., shows that the kids causing problems have problems of their own — each treatable by rehabilitative activity.

Rehabilitative what? Activity.

The approach is a little bit complicated but Dr. David H. Moyer, who reports on a 10-year demonstration project funded in part by the United States Office of Education, swears by it.

He has seen "rehabilitative activity" work minor miracles in the Wilmington Junior High.

Dr. Moyer, vice principal, said the system hinges on diagnosing the problem students — putting each in one of six major categories — and then applying the rehabilitative activity.

The symptoms in each category, dominant causes and rehabilitative activity:

- TRUANT: Symptoms include illegal absence, cutting class. Dominant causes: failure, frustration, low family educational expectation. Rehabilitative activity: small group counseling, photography lab, employment.
- DEPENDENT: Symptoms: clinging personality types, irregular attendance. Dominant cause: neglect, abuse, institutionalization. Rehabilitative activity: individualized reading, math lab, counseling, athletic activities, photo lab, employment.
- AGGRESSIVE: Symptoms: acting out behavior, threats, fights. Dominant cause: weak home structure, conformity to survival code of behavior, conditioned success in use of fear. Rehabilitative activity: athletic activities, drama, television, reading, chorus, counseling, consistent limitations, art projects.
- DELINQUENT: Symptoms include: illegal behavior, poor adjustment to school, no respect for authority, irregular attendance. Dominant causes: lack of limitations at home, poor internalization of adult expectations in school. Rehabilitative activity: small group counseling, athletic activities, reading, math lab, photo lab, tutoring, employment and drama.
- UNSTABLE: Symptoms include: unpredictable behavior, poor peer relationships, intense response, medication often required. Dominant causes: unstable model of behavior at home, poor adjustment in developmental situations. Rehabilitative activity: par sessions, reading, math lab, photo lab, supportive mental health service, vocational rehabilitation, counseling.
- DRUG RELATED: Symptoms include: overlaying symptomatic conditions of one of the live behavior patterns described above.

Budget hearing set tonight in East Hartford

EAST HARTFORD — Tonight the Town Council will give the general public a chance to comment on the proposed town budget. It will hold a public hearing on the budget at 7:30 in the Town Hall Council Chambers.

Mayor Richard Blackstone suggested the Town Council cut $213,000 from the budget. He admitted he cannot say where the cuts should be made in the school budget nor can the council. It is the board's job to make the choices of where to cut.

But the mayor said repeatedly during budget talks where there was fat in the school budget. He pointed to the administrators, and the school maintenance account, and the school supplies.

School Superintendent Eugene Diggs suggested letting go the school nurses and social workers. Board Chairman Lawrence DePonte said they would just have to let go more teachers.

Al Levie elected president of EHCAG

By MAL BARLOW
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — The East Hartford Citizen Action Group (EHCAG) elected Al Levie, 50, of 35 Patton St. as the group's second president since it took form in the spring of 1977.

"I hope we can strengthen the organization, have it grow more," said Levie. "We will continue to address problems in town. I hope we will successfully deal with them."

Most important areas to EHCAG's 400 members in nine neighborhood associations are education, housing and law enforcement, he said. These are the things that members keep talking about and working on. Other issues of concern are the needs of the handicapped, and the elderly, and discrimination, he said.

Levie was born and raised in New York City. He left in 1951 to go to Pittsburgh, Pa. where he worked at the open hearth in steel mills for 10 years.

While working in the mills, Levie began to write. He left the mills to work for a Pittsburgh ad agency and write for a living.

He joined a movement of newsmen, ad writers and public relations workers during the 1960s to support civil rights.

About seven years ago, Levie came to East Hartford to live while working for a major ad agency in Hartford. He also tried doing free lance public relations work.

Then he became an organizer of hospital unions. He was a key person in organizing the workers at the Meadows Convalescent Center on Bidwell Street, Manchester, a few years ago.

In March of 1977, Levie took a public relations position with the private Housing Market firm in Hartford. It contracts with the city to supply information to people on buying and renting homes in the city. They tell people about incentive plans to help people live in the city and about the quality of life there.

Levie said EHCAG is not the first such group in East Hartford. He was a member of a group called Action East. It had about 20 active members and worked hard several years ago to help the town set up the Human Rights Commission. Members included Aldo Rovero and Gary LeBeau who are still active in EHCAG work and Marcelle Fahey who now appears certain to win the Nov. 7 election for state senator from the Third District as a Democrat.

"EHCAG is a logical progression from Action East," Levie said. "But EHCAG is broader, more successful. It attracts more interest from more people."

He joined the EHCAG movement from the start even though he did not live in a neighborhood of an association.

"I felt the quality of life in East Hartford was not commensurate with the possibilities in the town. Citizen involvement in town affairs could make it a better place to live. Of course, this is true of any town anywhere."

His neighborhood has since formed the South End Association. Levie's wife, Edith, has also taken a keen interest in EHCAG. She spoke often during the winter for youth centers or community centers in Hartford. He also tried doing free lance public relations work.

Then he became an organizer of hospital unions. He was a key person in organizing the workers at the Meadows Convalescent Center on Bidwell Street, Manchester, a few years ago.

In March of 1977, Levie took a public relations position with the private Housing Market firm in Hartford. It contracts with the city to supply information to people on buying and renting homes in the city. They tell people about incentive plans to help people live in the city and about the quality of life there.

Council delays action on library path plans

SOUTH WINDSOR — The Town Council has decided to put the proposed footpath from Sand Hill Road to the new library at the bottom of its list of priorities—at least for a couple of years.

Town Manager Paul Talbot told the council the footpath would cost the town about $16,000. Easements from the three private property owners would run the town additional money, not included in the original estimate.

The path was proposed as a convenience for residents in the Sand Hill Hill Road area, as well as a route for high school students. The high school is located near Sand Hill Road, and the path would have eliminated the need to drive, or walk busy Ellington Road or Sullivan Avenue.

Talbot said the council should decide whether to build the path before making any agreements with the property owners for easement rights.

The council said they preferred to wait until the public's need for the path was firmly established, or at least until the library was completed and functional.

Marilyn Pugliese and Phyllis Strieler are heading the Heart Fund Drive, locally. They remind South Windsor residents that their support is needed now to meet this year's goal of $3,000.

Officers installed
Hilda Martin was installed recently as president of Beta Xi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. Other officers installed were Annette Romeo, first vice president; Ruth Parasitelli, second vice president; Darlene Johnson, corresponding secretary; and Judy Varney, treasurer.

Beta Sigma Phi is celebrating the 47th anniversary of its founding. The South Windsor chapter was organized in 1955. The organization unites women in fellowship and friendship and promotes cultural development.

Wethersfield; and Flaherty and Giovanna Associates of New Haven. Maguire will be doing the Columbia dam and Storck, Shenpits. This is also known as the Snipsic Reservoir.

The Columbia dam has been in existence since 1900 and the Vernon one since 1925.

The governors of all of the states, where dams will be inspected, had to provide a program for any repairs before the corps would agree to conduct the inspections.

The inspection program won't resolve specific dam safety problems and will not relieve the states or owners of these structures of their responsibilities for public safety.

Group won't back Head Start program

EAST HARTFORD — "We may have to withdraw our support of the Head Start program," said Al Levie, the newly elected president of the East Hartford Citizen Action Group (EHCAG).

He and other members of EHCAG were responding to news from Mrs. Linda Sacchi of 47 Prospect St. that Head Start's starting would force the closing of the Title I program in East Hartford.

"This means no prekindergarten for my three-year-old," said Mrs. Sacchi.

She said workers in the Title I program said it would be all over when Head Start began. At least 30 mothers called her about it. They asked her to see if EHCAG could reconsider its support of Head Start.

Levie said Wednesday he had contacted Smith at Head Start in Hartford to check out Mrs. Sacchi's fears. Smith told him East Hartford can certainly have both Title I programs and Head Start together.

Levie said Wednesday he had contacted Smith at Head Start in Hartford to check out Mrs. Sacchi's fears. Smith told him East Hartford can certainly have both Title I programs and Head Start together.

The federal Title I program offers pre-school activities at the Mayberry, Norris, Willowbrook and Silver Lane schools. Unlike Head Start, sessions last only a few hours and there is no lunch.

EHCAG member Mrs. Edith Levie, said, "Mr. (Henry) Smith of Head Start assured us this would be in addition to anything else being done. We had better investigate this."

Mrs. Sacchi said if it were true, and she believed it was, then children like hers could not be helped. She and her husband, William Sacchi Jr., make too much money to have their daughter meet family income requirements. Also, their daughter is too young for the longer Head Start program, she said.

Mrs. Kathy Falletti of EHCAG said Sam Leone, assistant superintendent of schools, had said at a recent Board of Education meeting that Head Start would absorb Title I.

Levie said Wednesday he had contacted Smith at Head Start in Hartford to check out Mrs. Sacchi's fears. Smith told him East Hartford can certainly have both Title I programs and Head Start together.

Corps to inspect Vernon dam

VERNON — The Shenpits dam in Vernon and Columbia Lake in Columbia are among 35 Connecticut dams which will be inspected by the Army Corps of Engineers within the next several months.

Gov. Ella Grasso said the inspections will center on dams that have been a source of concern to Connecticut residents the past several months. Four engineering firms will be under contract to do the inspection work.

The governor said that the work of the four companies will supplement the ongoing evaluations conducted by the state Department of Environmental Protection and will add to the state's work through the use of highly sophisticated equipment.

He said the importance of the structures was dramatized earlier this year during the severe storms that struck Connecticut. "The people of our state want reassurance that these dams are safe, and the program of state and federally contracted inspections is designed to provide that assurance," he added.

If any dams are found to be in need of repair, the state now has $1 million available, allocated by the 1978 General Assembly on request of the governor. "The joint effort by our state and the Corps of Engineers is another example of the excellent cooperation between the state and federal governments for the benefit of our citizens," Gov. Grasso said.

The first of the inspections will be at Columbia Lake, today, the governor said.

The Corps of Engineers has allotted $200,000 to the four contracts. The engineering firms include G-E Maguire Inc. of Providence, R.I. and New Britain; Cah Engineers of Wallingford; Storck Engineers of Wethersfield; and Flaherty and Giovanna Associates of New Haven. Maguire will be doing the Columbia dam and Storck, Shenpits. This is also known as the Snipsic Reservoir.

The Columbia dam has been in existence since 1900 and the Vernon one since 1925.

The governors of all of the states, where dams will be inspected, had to provide a program for any repairs before the corps would agree to conduct the inspections.

The inspection program won't resolve specific dam safety problems and will not relieve the states or owners of these structures of their responsibilities for public safety.

EDC to study phase-in as it affects business

By GREG PEARSON Herald Reporter

Don Genovesi, an EDC member, questioned how much a firm like that would be paying in personal property taxes. Under the phase-in the personal property will be taxed at a rate of about 50 mills instead of the 34 mills if the full revaluation had gone into effect.

"How that is a benefit to the owner of personal property is beyond me," he said.

Penny explained, "If there's a detriment to any taxpayers, that's what we're looking for. The benefit personal property owners would have received will be phased-in over the five years."

"I think that's a detriment," he said.

Town Manager Robert Weiss said that a new firm will look at the entire package a town offers for many years and not just the couple of years. He feels that Manchester is very competitive in its tax rate compared to similar-sized towns.

A firm such as J.C. Penney may pay more than it might have in its personal property taxes during the five-year span with the phase-in, he said.

Weiss also said that the question of new buildings built after the revaluation and during the five-year period is being reviewed by town counsel.

The EDC agreed that Genovesi and John DeQuattro should serve on a subcommittee to review the phase-in and the effect on businesses.

The board also agreed to make changes in the New State Road Adams Street sewer. The cost increased from $198,000 to $467,000 because of the changes, but the town will pay much of that cost. The change was made to meet federal requirements, Giles said.

Another amended list from Kennedy of the total $375,000 in budget reductions still included the closing of Green School.

Another reduction from lowered health insurance rates was increased from $80,000 to $125,000 in the total list presented by Kennedy. Transportation and substitute teacher accounts in the amounts of $20,000 and $15,000 respectively were kept in Kennedy's recommendations.

The committee objected to items which were on Kennedy's list of alternatives to closing Green School. Those included eliminating a subsidy to Lutz Junior Museum and equipment replacement at the high school.

The PTA also made a plea to restore the $30,000 amount for the expansion of the gift program.

The Board of Education is expected to take some of its own recommendations on budget reductions at Monday night's meeting. Final action on whether to close Green School will be made until June 5, which will affect the final budget adoption on June 12.

With late home runs by youngsters Jason Thompson and Lance Parrish, the Tigers came from behind to beat the Milwaukee Brewers, 5-3, to give 35-year-old Jack Billingham his fourth American League victory against just one loss.

"I pitched reasonably well," said Billingham, who won 119 games in the National League before joining the Tigers in spring training.

Ron LeFlore, who collected four hits, including his fourth homer of the year, doubled with one out in the seventh, setting the stage for Thompson. The 24-year-old first baseman blasted his ninth homer of the year off loser Jerry Augustine, 4-6, to put the Tigers ahead, 4-3.

Parrish provided the insurance with his fourth homer in the eighth.

Billingham surrendered home runs to Sixto Lezcano and Gorman Thomas with Thompson's blast traveling some 500 feet after the Milwaukee center fielder had been knocked down on the two previous pitches.

Green parents, Kennedy suggest school savings

By SUSAN VAUGHN Herald Reporter

The Manchester PTA Council budget committee Wednesday night heard recommendations for reductions in the school budget from School Supt. James P. Kennedy and from Green School parents.

The PTA group made no specific recommendations of its own on the total $375,000 in budget cuts. The committee will meet again Monday night at the same time as the Board of Education in a meeting at Manchester High School, then take their recommendations to the board last night.

The committee will consider Kennedy's recommendations and those presented by Frank Smith for the Green School parents and deduct any duplicates on the lists.

Smith presented a list of $150,000 worth of cuts in nearly all areas of the budget as an alternative to the $112,000 reduction which could be made by the closing of Green School this year.

Many of Smith's proposed reductions were in amounts of $1,200 to $6,400 in equipment and supplies for various programs. Larger recommended cuts were $22,000 from the capital improvement accounts, $15,000 for substitute teachers, $12,700 for program curriculum improvement, $3,895 for building administration, $6,800 for central administration, $1,500 for maintenance, $12,500 for building operations, $2,800 for consultants and $4,800 in combined travel accounts.

The PTA members objected to Smith's recommendations on the replacement of the bus fleet, which they thought would be too expensive. They also objected to reductions in equipment for the areas of business, home economics and industrial arts.

Wilson E. Deakin, assistant superintendent of schools, said some of Smith's recommendations are not possible, such as the $4,310 deduction from the extra-curricular account. He said that account is mostly for the purchase of books under federal Title IX legislation. Kennedy also presented a list of

Not much time

It's going to be panic-city for baseball, track, tennis, golf and softball coaches if the recent closing of bad weather doesn't subside soon.

There isn't much time left before qualifying deadlines arrive so playing dates become ever so vital in the closing days.

Cheney Tech had its baseball game Wednesday postponed meaning the Beavers, 6-7 with a good possibility of attaining post-season play, must close out the campaign with five games in five days.

East Catholic and Manchester High, each 6-9, prayed they could get in yesterday's contests with Northwest Catholic and Penney High respectively. Otherwise each would have a murderous closing stretch.

The bad weather has also started to force cancellations in other spring activities. East has adjped off girls tennis matches with Hartford Public and E.O. Smith because of 1) lack of dates and 2) lack of courts. Manchester cancelled a golf date from last Monday and if bad weather persists, more strikes off the sports schedules can be anticipated.

Deadline for baseball is next Thursday.

This problem isn't a new one. There have been crises previous years the deadline be pushed back and the post-season activities begin later.

Most clubs only have one solid pitcher and spacing of games is all important. Five games in five days, for example, translates to the ace only going twice instead of three in the past. This year, however, has been the worse in that many teams may be squeezing in games.

Whatever, there are going to be a handful of schoolboy baseball games played prior to next Thursday — weather permitting.

They finally got to play some baseball yesterday and East Catholic Coach Jim Penders for one has to be glad.

The "visiting" Eagles, behind the strong pitching performance of Jim Dakin and ninth inning sacrifice fly of Dave Bottaro, kept their slender tournament hopes alive with a 2-1 win over Northwest Catholic at Eagle Field.

East stands 3-5 in HCC competition and 7-9 overall, winners of five of their last six. The Eagles tonight visit conference-leading Xavier High in Middletown at Palmer Field at 7:30. "We go into the lion's den but we go in with a good frame of mind and No. 1 pitcher," Penders stated.

Dakin, 2-0, side-wheeling right-hander who relied on a sinker and slow curve, mixing in an occasional fastball, fanned five and walked five, two intentional. "It was a gutsy performance by Dakin. It was our best pitched game of the year," Penders praised.

The only marker off Dakin was Kevin Sarr's 340-foot homer which by inches cleared the left field barrier in the bottom of the sixth and sent scores tie. Northwest, which finishes 2-8 in the HCC and is 5-9 overall, stranded nine in the fifth inning.

The Eagles tied it in the seventh on an infield single by Mike Giblin, error, and single to right by Dakin. Pete Kiro led off the East ninth with a double to the base of the right field fence. He slid in safely at third.

Man safe at home, lake search ended

By DONNA HOLLAND Herald Correspondent
BOLTON — An East Hartford man reported missing and possibly drowned at Bolton Lake was found by state police to be safe at home.

However, he was not found until after Bolton Volunteer Fire Department and the Tolland County Fire Service Divers had arrived at the scene and were preparing to search the lake.

Fire Chief James Preuss said the local department received a call about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday that a man was missing and may have drowned at Bolton Lake.

Resident State Trooper Robert Peterson said this morning three persons from East Hartford decided to go fishing at Bolton Lake Wednesday. Through a misunderstanding, one man separated from the group and found his own way home, Peterson said.

The two friends, worried when they could not find him, became concerned that he was in trouble and called for help.

Within minutes of the call, members of the Bolton Volunteer Fire Department were on the scene searching the lake shore, waterfront and a nearby inn. Preuss said when nothing turned up the Tolland County divers were called in as a routine step. The divers and their search commanders arrived on the scene and began preparing for a search and rescue.

As they were organizing, the state police called the man's home. He answered the phone and explained what had happened.

A 12-year-old boy reported to police that he was sexually molested by an older youth Wednesday while walking near the railroad tracks off West Middle Turnpike and Homestead Street. Police said the younger boy fought back and the assailant ran off, police said. He was not seriously injured.

Arrests Wednesday included the following:
Arthur C. Kuhn, 45, of Coventry, charged with reckless driving in connection with an incident on May 5, while allegedly nearly forced another car off the road on South Main Street. Court date is May 23.
William A. Blazenski, 23, of East Hampton, charged with operating under the influence of liquor or drugs. Court date is June 6.
Peter E. Fortin, 22, of South Windsor, charged with disorderly conduct and failure to display an insert on his license. The disorderly conduct charge was in connection with yelling obscenities at police when stopped on the motor vehicle charge. Court date is June 5.
Dennis Sica, 25, of Rockville, charged with third-degree larceny in connection with a shoplifting incident at Caledonia Wednesday. Court date is June 5.

Police reported today that about $2,000 worth of tools was stolen from the W.G. Glenny Lumber Co., 336 N. Main St., sometime Tuesday night. A rear window of the store's warehouse was broken and a fire receiver and numerous hand and power tools were stolen.

Police were also investigating a break into Grandma's Pies at 501 W. Middle Turnpike which was discovered by an officer on patrol at 4:45 a.m. today. The officer found a pryed open door, loose change and a cash box on the floor of the restaurant, but there was no other damage or ransacking, police said. A total of about $140 was stolen.

Wallace silent on plans

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George Wallace said Wednesday neither health problems, nor money, nor the potential outcome prompted him to withdraw from the race to succeed retiring Sen. John Sparkman.

Wallace, 58, met with reporters in a followup to his stunning announcement late Tuesday that he had decided against the Senate campaign.

Partially paralyzed since a would-be assassin shot him at Laurel, Md., during a 1972 presidential campaign stop, Wallace said his health was no problem. He also said polls showing he could lose the race and speculation that his money-raising efforts fell short were untrue.

But he refused to give reasons for the action, saying only, "I just decided I didn't want to run. I just changed my mind. Nothing happened — a little fairy just talked to me."

Wallace, who first achieved the national limelight 15 years ago with his stand against integration at the University of Alabama, also denied that his withdrawal automatically ended the political career that has given him three terms as governor and four campaigns for the presidency.

"I did not say I was necessarily retiring from politics and I did not say that I am not," Wallace told reporters.

He did deny reports he was leaving politics to accept a permanently endowed chair at the University of Alabama-Birmingham, site of the medical center where he has been treated following the 1972 wounding.

Wallace said supporters had discussed the IAB proposal with him, but he said "I'm not pursuing that at all — not one bit."

"I'm not sure what I will do," he said. "I will do something. I don't know what my options will be, but I have a lot of things I can do."

Wallace will be eligible for an $18,000 annual pension as a special adviser to the next governor when his term expires, and he is assured of state trooper protection for life.

The Wallace withdrawal apparently puts former Alabama Chief Justice Howell Heflin atop a ballot that will include state Sen. John Baker of Rainsville and Donald Stewart of Amiston.

Fight brews on plans for Miss Liberty coins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supporters contend the lady is an American tradition and honors all women. Critics say, saying she bears a striking resemblance to Patricia Hearst.

The woman in question is the symbolic Miss Liberty, whose image has made many appearances on American coins since 1920.

The Treasury Wednesday said it favors a continuation of that tradition on a new, more manageable $1 coin that next year would replace the unpopular Eisenhower dollar if Congress approves.

The government said the new coin would save millions of dollars in minting costs and last considerably longer.

Opponents agree a new coin is desirable, but they have no interest in Miss Liberty. They want a real female, such as women's rights pioneer Susan B. Anthony, on the coin and they are willing to fight over the issue.

The two female Treasury officials who defended Miss Liberty in a House subcommittee Wednesday were women.

"The female Liberty Head is symbolic of and honors all women rather than any particular individual," said Stella Hackel, director of the U.S. Mint.

Placing a person like Miss Anthony on the coin "would set an unwise course of coin design, and invite a controversial debate on who should be so honored, which would tend to damage the overall success of the proposal," she said.

She said if the new coin is approved by Congress bearing the image of Miss Liberty, more than 500 million would be in circulation by next year.

Zambian president wants U.S. human rights action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Praising President Carter's human rights policy as inspirational, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda is asking him to "continue sounding the moral drums even louder."

Kaunda, in Washington on a state visit, was scheduled to hold a final meeting with Carter today before making a foreign policy speech to the National Press Club.

His talks so far with Washington officials have centered on the explosive racial strife in southern Africa, particularly Rhodesia.

During toasts at a working White House dinner Wednesday night, Kaunda said the people of Rhodesia and (South African-ruled) Namibia, both neighbors of Zambia, "want freedom and independence."

"We want mankind there to be free to do what they want, and when they want, within the law," he said.

Calling Carter's human rights policy "an inspiration to us all," Kaunda urged Carter to "continue sounding the moral drums even louder."

"If we leave the decisions only to the military men and politicians, man will destroy the world sooner than he wants," Kaunda said.

Carter replied: "Three years ago, President Kaunda was here and made strong speech that was embarrassing to his American host. Some said he should not have made it."

"So long as this is the case, it is not easy to condemn their presence. Sisters and brothers, let us deal with the cause rather than the effect when we deal with these very serious matters of life and death in Africa."

At the dinner, Kaunda said the United States now has "greater understanding that the interests of the United States will not be served by the status quo" in southern Africa.

"America is playing a decisive role in asking for changes in Rhodesia and Namibia, based on equal rights," he said.

Kaunda, whose nation provides a base for Rhodesia's black guerrillas, is viewed by Western diplomats as a moderating influence in Africa and an ally in their efforts to mediate peace in Rhodesia.

Wednesday morning, delighted the president again by spontaneously playing the guitar and singing a freedom song as dinner guests Wednesday night clapped and sang respectively to his lead.

Earlier Wednesday, Kaunda told reporters Cuban troops were in Africa by invitation and were not the root cause of strife there.

"I am not sure there is a single Cuban on the African continent who has not been invited by some member of the continent," he said after State Department meetings.

Fired administrator says Grasso politicking

HARTFORD (UPI) — Angry Administrative Services Commissioner Daniel P. MacKinnon has submitted a letter of resignation, claiming Gov. Ella T. Grasso fired him because she cares more about getting re-elected than running the state.

In the letter submitted Wednesday, MacKinnon, a Republican businessman from Suffield, said he will step down June 2 from his job as commissioner of one of the most powerful departments in Connecticut's recently reorganized government.

Earlier in the day, Mrs. Grasso sent MacKinnon a letter telling him he had done a good job as commissioner of the Department of Administrative Services.

"But the development of the department now requires a fresh perspective and a new sense of coordination in the office of commissioner," Mrs. Grasso said.

MacKinnon, who has come under fire in recent weeks for his handling of state land deals, said Mrs. Grasso told him last week he would have to resign and he told the governor he'd be happy to leave.

"You stated that I should feel proud of what we have accomplished in DAS in such a short time," he said in his letter of resignation. "I don't."

"The only feeling is frustration that some kind of expediency and not the ultimate benefit of everyone," MacKinnon said.

Earlier, he said, "The governor asked me to stay on until July 1, but I said I would rather not."

MacKinnon was appointed to his post last summer on a recommendation from one of Mrs. Grasso's financial advisers, former Republican gubernatorial candidate E. Clayton Gengras.

MacKinnon said one of the reasons he was asked to leave was his handling of a land deal for the new Litchfield County Courthouse.

Recently, MacKinnon announced he was re-examining an offer of free land in Torrington as the site for a courthouse. The land offer was made by Dr. Isadore Temkin and his wife, Zena, who have been politically close to the governor for years.

Mrs. Grasso said the courthouse matter had nothing to do with the dismissal.

"The acceptance of the Litchfield land offer was not a factor in my discussions with Mr. MacKinnon as to his continuing service with the state," Mrs. Grasso said.

The Litchfield issue was not the first time MacKinnon has run into trouble since he took over as commissioner.

MacKinnon, who oversees state purchasing, personnel and leasing, was recently criticized for his handling of a lease involving a Hartford building.

Under the lease, the state has been paying for unused space at the building since March 29th. The lease also requires the state to pay for most renovations and maintenance on the building, a provision contrary to standard leasing procedures.

Earlier this year in a speech at the University of Connecticut, MacKinnon offered construction workers at the school by referring to them as "lessor paid, lesser educated" individuals. He later apologized for the remark.

Before becoming commissioner, MacKinnon headed the Maverick Corp. of Hartford, a non-profit group that hires the hard core employed.

U.S. prods Dominicans to resume vote counts

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI) — The government, under U.S. prodding, promises to resume counting ballots in the presidential election, a process stopped by the army when it appeared the opposition candidate would win.

But authorities did not say when the ballot counting would resume. Heavily armed soldiers in camouflage uniforms patrolled the streets of the capital.

"The people must have confidence that the commission will take all measures to ensure that the final result represents the expression of the will of the people."

Candidate Antonin Guzman, 67, emerged from hiding Wednesday and declared himself president-elect in a news conference.

The wealthy rancher appealed to President Carter to extend his human rights campaign to the Dominican Republic and insist the government respect the will of the people and his "victory" over incumbent President Joaquin Balaguer, 70.

When the count stopped with one-quarter of the precincts reporting, the most reliable figures gave Guzman, leader of the left-of-center Dominican Revolutionary Party, a lead of 226,078 votes to 218,073 for Balaguer.

The Revolutionary Party's own count gave Guzman 1.3 million votes to 475,000 for Balaguer.

Balaguer himself remained silent all day.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said contacts had been made "at the highest level" with Balaguer and the military leaders urging them to respect the will of the people. The State Department expressed concern at the "disturbing action" of the Dominican Army.

Besides U.S. concerns, pressure reportedly also was brought to bear by the Organization of American States through three representatives in Santo Domingo — former Presidents Galeo Plaza of Ecuador, Julio Cesar Mendez Montenegro of Guatemala and Misael Pastrana Borrero of Colombia.

Social Security taxes not likely to roll back

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A veto threat from President Carter and lack of strong support in the Senate have stalled and probably killed an effort to roll back the Social Security tax increases scheduled for 1979 and 1980.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which earlier had voted to cut the proposed new taxes in half, reversed itself Wednesday and voted 21 to 16 to stick with the planned tax hikes.

The turnaround came when chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., said his conscience would not allow him to vote for a cutback, as he did on the panel's earlier 19-18 vote, simply because the House Democratic caucus had asked him to.

The payroll tax increases were passed by Congress last year to keep the Social Security fund solvent in coming years. Following that action, however, members of Congress worried about possible adverse voter reaction and began urging that the increases be eliminated.

But in recent days Carter sent word he would veto such legislation, and it was also known that Sen. Russell Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, was not happy with the rollback move.

It was generally understood that if the payroll tax hikes were necessary to eliminate the deficit, it would be necessary to put large amounts of general tax dollars into Social Security for the first time, something Congress was also reluctant to do.

Ullman promised Social Security financing would be "the first order of business in the next Congress," but as a matter of conscience "he could not bring himself to vote for the use of general revenue funds."

Richard Lugar, R-Ind., one of the leaders of the filibuster. The House produced a series of actions Wednesday that had the White House breathing a little easier.

By a 201-198 vote, it approved a $49 billion target budget for fiscal 1979 to guide Congress in passing alternative and tax bills until it is revised in September. The Senate already has passed the budget bill.

Opponents of the bill charge it is a matter of conscience "he could not bring himself to vote for the use of general revenue funds."

The net effect is to steamroller small businessmen," said Sen. He started his reports Wednesday

Woman judge confirmed

HARTFORD (UPI) — Ellen Burns has been confirmed by the U.S. Senate as the first woman U.S. District Court judge in Connecticut — and the fifth woman in the country to be named to the federal court.

She will replace U.S. District Court Judge Robert Zampano, who is being moved to senior status because of a reduced case load because of medical problems.

Wednesday, she was suggested to President Carter as a nominee for the federal court by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn.
