Three killed in jet crash in Toronto

TORONTO (UPI) — An Air Canada DC-9 with 107 persons aboard skidded off a runway on takeoff from Toronto International Airport today and broke into three sections on the gentle slope of a small ravine.

Three persons were killed, the Toronto coroner's office said. Air Canada spokesman Brock Stewart said at least 45 persons were injured.

Air Canada flight 189 was bound for Vancouver, British Columbia, with a full load of 102 passengers and five crew members when the takeoff was aborted at 8:15 a.m. The plane skidded off the side of runway 35-left and broke into three sections.

"What apparently happened was the captain lost power in one of his two engines and attempted to abort takeoff," Stewart said.

"The plane broke apart into a tail section, midsection and the nose section. The nose area was heavily damaged, since the plane went into the gully nose first," Stewart said.

The spokesman said there was no fire or explosion and within three hours of the crash persons aboard were taken to city hospitals "regardless of apparent injury."

The flight originated in Ottawa and headed for Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Vancouver, when the accident occurred.

Tax bills go out this week

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Tax bills for the Town of Manchester will be mailed out starting Tuesday. The mailing of the bills is about a week late this year but will include an enclosed notice explaining the town's phase-in plan and the amount of state funding the town will receive.

James Turek, Manchester's collector of revenue, said motor vehicle and personal property bills will be mailed Tuesday. There are about 25,000 of these bills.

Real estate bills would be mailed by Friday and should be received by most taxpayers by Saturday, July 1, Turek said. The first portion of real estate taxes are to be paid during the month of July. There are a total of about 14,000 real estate bills, Turek said.

He said that the bills are being made this year about a week later than in past years.

He said that the delay was caused by "technical difficulties" that developed from the town's phase-in of real estate property assessments. This delay will not create any major problems for his office, but Turek does expect that most people who come to pay their taxes may want to chat more this year than they have in the past. "It's not going to be strictly a payment of the tax bill. There will be a number of inquiries about the tax bills and how they're arrived at," he said. "We think it's going to be a busy July."

The department has added two SAM (Summer Activities in Manchester) workers to do clerical work through mid-August.

Manchester is the first town in the state to approve a phase-in after a revaluation. The phase-in permits the town to spread the increase in assessment of real estate property over a five-year period. In the past, the entire increase has gone into effect in one year. The real estate bills will include a notice that explains the phase-in of the revaluation. The bill itself will let the assessment before revaluation, the new assessment after revaluation and the 80 percent figure that will be deferred because of the phase-in.

The second part of the notice says that the town will receive $8,218,918 in state aid during the 1978-79 fiscal year. The notice says that the town tax rate would be 88.11 mills without the state aid instead of the 50.34 mill rate for the 1978-79 fiscal year. The enclosure of these notices about state aid, required by Connecticut Public Act 78-249, was criticized sharply by many people, particularly Republicans who viewed the notification as a re-election ploy by Gov. Ella Grasso.

Turek said that the printing of the 14,000 notices — they will be included only in real estate bills — only cost Manchester $80. Other towns have spent more, however, and there has been some confusion about which taxpayers have to be included in the notification, he said.

The town will receive a two-cent discount on the mailing of its tax bills. Even though the 15-cent price is now in effect for first-class mailing, bulk mailers who pre-sort their mail can still receive a two-cent discount on each item. This will save the town about $780 for the mailing of all tax bills.

Fishermen and tourists poured during the weekend into Montauk, a resort on the tip of Long Island, hoping for even a glimpse of the fish that is estimated to be 30 feet long and weigh 5,000 pounds.

Montauk, under the fictional name Benches, was the setting for Peter Benchley's novel about a killer shark that terrorized Long Island bathers.

Most leaving Seabrook site

SEABROOK, N.H. (UPI) — Demonstrators who Sunday staged the nation's largest anti-nuclear protest streamed off the Seabrook atomic power plant site today but said they didn't know for sure whether a few dissidents would refuse to leave peacefully.

Some members of the Clamshell Alliance said they would be back "soon" in greater numbers to occupy the plant construction site and shut it down.

Leaders of the Clamshell Alliance said they were trying to talk dissidents into leaving before the 3 p.m. deadline agreed to by demonstration organizers, the state, and the plant builder — the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire.

"It was peaceful, very peaceful. There might be a few stragglers but nothing we can't deal with," said Attorney General Thomas Rath. He worked out the compromise to provide land for the demonstration if it were legal and limited to three days.

"We're coming back," said Denise Levitt, a professor of English at Tufts University, as she packed her gear into a crowded van. "We're coming back in greater numbers, and we're going to occupy, and we're going to close that place down."

Last year a demonstration at Seabrook drew 1,800 people, 1,414 of whom were arrested when they refused to leave the construction site for the $2.3 billion plant.

This year organizers pledged a peaceful rally in hopes of drawing people scared off by the threat of arrest. An estimated 10,000 people showed up for the Sunday rally which was the highlight of the Saturday to Monday protest. About one-third were Clamshell members and the rest were ordinary people concerned about nuclear power.

Clamshell spokesman Harvey Wasserman said a few people were talking about driving to Washington for an independent protest and an attempt to stage a sit-in Wednesday at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Activity in the fight to halt construction of the $2.3 billion Seabrook plant shifted 30 miles west to Manchester today, where both the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and Environmental Protection Agency were conducting hearings which could lead to a halt in construction.

Some Clamshell members planned a march on the NRC hearing later today.

The EPA, by court order, was reconsidering its approval of the plant's cooling system of under-ocean tunnels, which environmentalists say endangers marine life.

The NRC was considering whether it should halt construction until the EPA reaches a decision and whether it should look again at alternate construction sites in southern New England.

Sunday's turnout was far bigger than the 6,000 maximum predicted by Clamshell leaders.

"The nuclear industry should take notice. This movement is bigger than the Clamshell Alliance. We have a

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Army and air force units and armed militia today rebelled against South Yemen's Marxist government, bombing and shelling the presidential palace, the Iraqi News Agency said.

At midday, the clashes were continuing, but the Iraqi agency said the rebels were in control of half the capital of Aden. No casualty figures were available.

Rebel jets bombed the palace of President Salem Robays Ali in the Al Tawahi neighborhood, which is also the site of the defense ministry and other key buildings, and rebel gunners were shelling the building, the report said. Smoke billowed over the area.

There was no word on the fate of Robays Ali or whether the uprising was linked to the assassination Saturday of the president of rival North Yemen, Lt. Col. Ahmed Al Ghashmi, killed by a bomb delivered by a South Yemeni diplomat.

"The situation is by no means clear," the Iraqi agency reported. Ambulances sped through the capital carrying wounded to hospitals. Militia in government vehicles patrolled the city and a curfew was in effect, the agency reported from Aden.

Although the political leanings of the rebels were not clear, Western diplomats and other area experts contacted believed it was most likely an uprising by pro-Soviet forces who objected to a government effort to improve ties with conservative regimes such as those of Saudi Arabia and neighboring North Yemen.

However, in the murky world of Yemeni politics, they did not exclude the possibility that conservative, pro-Saudi tribesmen triggered the fighting in the Arab world's only Marxist state.

Experts initially attached more weight to the theory that the coup attempt was pro-Soviet because of the involvement of what the Iraqi agency termed "national militia" — local men recruited to the paramilitary arm of the ruling, pro-Moscow National Liberation Front. Communications were cut off with the outside world, but the Iraqi Agency apparently managed to file through its embassy wireless facilities.

It quoted sources as saying the uprising involved army units on the Bob al Mandeb straits — near the border between North and South Yemen and astride the entrance to the Red Sea — as well as units in the Salaheddine barracks in Aden and in the 2nd and 3rd military districts.

In Paris, French radio reports quoted Iraq's Baghdad Radio as saying that the fighting was raging near the Aden airport, which was shut down.

France's Europe No. 1 radio station claimed that though fighting appeared to be subsiding, the ruling National Front party deposed President Ali, considering him as being "pro-Chinese."

No ships were allowed to enter Aden harbor and a number of buildings in the capital were on fire, the network reported.

North Yemen also cut off its communications to the outside Saturday after Ghashmi was killed in a briefcase carried by an unidentified Aden diplomat.

North Yemen, a conservative state with close ties to Saudi Arabia, immediately blamed the assassination on "the criminal hands in Aden," a radical Marxist state that maintains friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

North Yemen also cut off diplomatic relations with Aden and the leftist Beirut newspaper Al Liwa today reported heavy concentrations of troops on both sides of the border.

Ghashmi was buried today in Sana'a's Martyr's Cemetery. The country was being ruled in the interim by a four-man presidential council headed by a judge, Abdul Karim Al Arshi.

Versailles palace ravaged by bomb

VERSAILLES, France (UPI) — A powerful terrorist bomb explosion ravaged three floors of the historic Versailles palace early today, destroying priceless works of art and injuring a custodian.

Police said several radical organizations claimed responsibility for the pre-dawn blast that devastated the famed Gallery of Battles and its rooms of the 17th century palace, one of France's most famous landmarks.

Experts making preliminary estimates said the blast caused over $1.2 million in damages.

Police said the bomb consisted of several pounds of dynamite or plastic explosives and was planted on the ground floor Gallery of Battles during a public fireworks display Sunday evening.

Worst hit was the Gallery of Battles — a monumental colonnaded hall with dozens of oversized murals depicting famous battles in French history from the days of the Roman conquest to Napoleonic times.

A number of radical groups claimed responsibility for the explosion but investigators said it appeared to have been the work of the outlawed Breton Liberation Front.

The group has been charged with numerous bombings in recent years to back its campaign for the autonomy of Brittany, once a free Celtic duchy.

A Breton Liberation Front communiqué released by the secret organization in Rennes, capital of Brittany, said the Versailles attack was carried out by "soldiers" of the Front's militant branch, the Breton Revolutionary Army.

The statement said, "The Breton people are oppressed, the Breton soil is occupied by French military camps, the Breton tongue and culture are rejected and destroyed by the French imperialist regime."

The explosion wrecked the famed

Gallery of Battles and Empire halls, which recently were redone at great expense and inaugurated by President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

The palace's Gallery of St. Louis, decorated lavishly under Napoleon, and its "countless art treasures" were a ruin, police said. The force of the blast knocked down ceilings and cracked walls in adjoining halls.

Heavy damage was done to the Gallery of Battles — a monumental colonnaded hall with dozens of oversized murals depicting famous battles in French history from the days of the Roman conquest to Napoleonic times.

Car hits wall, driver killed

Alexander Zoromski, 55, of 182 Maple St. was killed instantly Sunday evening when the car he was driving slammed into a Cheney Brothers building on Pine Street.

Police said the accident occurred at 7:38 p.m. shortly after Zoromski dropped off a passenger in an alleyway between Elm and Pine Streets. The car headed straight into the cement foundation wall of the factory.

Zoromski was pinned in the vehicle and his body was extricated by firefighters from the Town Fire Department. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Police had not yet determined the cause of the accident this morning. An autopsy was to be performed today.

The front end of Zoromski's car was extensively damaged. The building sustained little damage, police and fire officials said.

This was the fourth auto fatality in Manchester this year.

Town seeks bids on three vehicles

The Town of Manchester is seeking bids for three new compact passenger cars and one three-quarter ton van for use by the Water and Sewer Department.

The specifications for the cars include 124-inch minimum wheelbase, 178-inch minimum body length and a 5,000 pound gross vehicle weight.

The bids will be opened July 6 at 11 a.m. at the Municipal Building.

ZBA may act on liquor bid

Manchester's Planning and Zoning Commission will meet tonight at 7:30 to consider several items discussed at public hearings three weeks ago. The items that attracted the most public comment at that meeting is an application from Steakman Inc. of Manchester, which runs the Mr. Steak restaurant at 244 Center St. The restaurant has submitted a proposal to permit full-service restaurants serving liquor within 1,000 feet of another liquor-serving establishment.

The town's zoning regulations now set a 1,000-foot minimum between any liquor-serving or liquor-selling establishments, except in the Central Business District.

Members of the public spoke both for and against the proposed change. John Hutchinson, a commission member, called the proposal "a nightmare the way it's written."

Chairman Alfred Siefert said that he opposed writing a regulation aimed at one location.

The PZC took no action at the meeting, though, but may do so tonight.

The commission also may act on a special exception requested by the Evans Product Co. The exception is sought to permit more than 60 parking spaces at a Spencer Street

Padre Pedro ordained as auxiliary bishop

HARTFORD (UPI) — Peter "Padre Pedro" Rosazza, 43, has become Connecticut's first Italian and Spanish-speaking bishop. Rosazza, born on Bishop Street in New Haven, was ordained Saturday in this city as an auxiliary bishop in the Archdiocese of Hartford while an estimated 1,700 people watched in St. Joseph's Cathedral.

The consecration rites were delivered in both Spanish and English. When the bishop gave the benediction at the end of the ceremony, he first said it in Spanish and then translated it into English.

Rosazza made symbols out of his black beret and bicycle as he pedaled his way through his Hartford inner-city parish serving his priesthood. The ordination was attended by Apostolic Delegate Jean Jadot, Archbishop of Madrid, and about 35 other bishops as well as Gov. Ella T. Grasso and Lt. Gov. Robert K. Killian.

The new bishop pledged to take his new responsibilities seriously. "With the help of God I shall make better efforts of kindness and be more sensitive to suffering. I hope to be always a friend to the poor and stand up for justice against aggression," he said.

River easements granted

East Catholic High School and the Jarvis Construction Co. have granted easements totaling 2,400 feet for the Hockanum River Linear Park.

The easement from East Catholic High School will protect woodlands, allow cleanup, public access and hiking trail work along 2,000 feet of riverfront on the south bank of the Hockanum behind the school.

The easement from the Jarvis estate will preserve about 400 feet on the north bank of the river, just west of New State Road. It will also allow cleanups, improvement of hiking trails, and expanded guided public walks through marshlands on the north side of the Hockanum.

Cleanup and trail clearing projects are planned this summer by the Hockanum River Linear Park Committee, with the assistance of Boy Scout Troop 25.

The next linear park committee meeting is scheduled Sept. 5 at 7:30 p.m. at the Municipal Building. Anyone interested in Hockanum River conservation may call committee chairman Dr. Douglas H. Smith, 649-5678.

The summer day camp which runs today through Aug. 18 has two openings in the week of July 4th, which is a four-day week. A waiting list is being taken for the other weeks.

Indian keepers

What most American Indian tribes can call their own today they came by the hard way — losing time after time to the white man until they ended up with territory which no one else wanted. Or so it appeared until the rush to develop new energy sources found many of today's tribesmen camped atop vast minerals reserves. To make the most of their newfound wealth, 25 tribes are taking a tip from the Middle East and setting up an organization modeled on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

When natural disaster strikes...

Considering that the ubiquitous credit card is all too often a source of budget disaster, it's refreshing that one major issuer makes a special effort to be of assistance in instances of natural disaster. Whenever the president declares a locality a disaster area because of flood, earthquake or other calamity, Texaco now mass mails "disaster letters" to its affected cardholders. The company offers to suspend bill payment without the usual carryover interest charges. Customers accepting the offer are contacted by a company representative to work out a repayment plan. Thousands of disaster letters went to a dozen states during the severe winter just past, which qualified as something of a national disaster. The response, reports the company, was massive and grateful.

Reflections

Hal Turkington
Managing Editor

Bert and Riva Cooper of 243 Ferguson Road went to England to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary this year, and Reflections played a part in it. The Coopers are English band fans. Bert says he has every recording by the Grenadier Guards. How did Reflections play its part? We must go back to Reflections columns of April 25, May 2, May 31 and June 6 of 1977, that's a series of stories we did about Jubilee Year in England, the Trooping of the Colours at Whitehall, and two final columns about our trip there in 1977.

One day last fall Bert Cooper "got up enough nerve" to come into The Herald office and make his request to the Reflections author. Yes, he had been to England, but he had always wanted to see the Trooping of the Colours. He couldn't get tickets; he made several efforts; in fact, he even wrote directly to the queen, but he didn't get an answer.

"Hal," said Bert, "do you think your good friend from the Grenadier Guards Band, George White, might be able to get me tickets? I won't even go to England for my 25th anniversary unless I can take Riva to see the Trooping of the Colours." We said we would try; we would write to George. George wrote back that, yes, he had made contact, and he could arrange tickets. Too bad there wasn't a third phone so that someone else could have heard the shouts of glee from Bert when we phoned him with the news. So, in earnest did the Coopers start to plan their anniversary trip.

They've been home about a month now; the Coopers sent a card from England, and Bert has been in to tell us about the trip. These are some of the notes.

The send-off from Ferguson Road was to the tunes of a piper, arranged by some friends. They left Logan Airport in Boston in rain, but found 14 days of sunshine in England.

At Heathrow Airport they were met by Col. Sgt. Sidney Moon of Her Majesty's Marine Commanders, who Bert hadn't seen since he took care of the sergeant's wounds in Korea. Sgt. Moon subsequently was awarded the U.S. Navy Bronze Star for heroism on a commando raid in North Korea. It was presented in Grosvenor Square in London, by an American admiral at the U.S. Embassy.

Bert and Sid have been corresponding for 27 years.

They attended the Beating of Retreat of Massed Bands of the Royal Marines on Horse Guards Parade in Whitehall. Two days later they saw the Trooping of the Colours on the same parade grounds. "Both military marching events are the zenith of precision marching maneuvers and musical perfection of five massed bands of Foot and Horse Guards," Bert said. (We know, we know, Bert.) The Coopers said the English and Scots did everything to make their stay a memory. They were most helpful, most courteous, and went out of their way to be friendly. For example, Bert said they stopped a baker in Scotland who was leaving his shop and asked directions to a restaurant. The baker and his wife didn't know, but insisted on driving them. When they couldn't find it, they took the Coopers to their favorite restaurant. They inquired where the Coopers were staying and when they would leave for home. One week later, the baker and his wife surprised the Coopers by stopping at their small English hotel in Buckingham and presented them a remembrance of their silver anniversary trip — a four-pound Scots fruit cake and a Bell Decanter of Scotch. The Coopers had the baker, John Makay, and his wife, Maimi, join a garden party the Coopers were hosting for Sgt. Moon and his family as a happy farewell. They toasted the queen, the president of the United States, and all the congenial friends, both new and old — and God Bless Merrie Oldie England.

Bert and Riva are already planning exchange visits with their English and Scot friends. No, they didn't get to see George and Ivy White. The Whites were on holiday, but when they returned to their home, there was a gift sent from the Coopers. As a footnote, Rennell and Maureen White of London, cousins of Doreen Scriptures, manager of Hartford National Bank Green Branch, who the Coopers met in London, stopped in to visit Bert and Riva on Ferguson Road only two days after they returned to Manchester.

We're happy that we had a part in making that silver anniversary happy for the Coopers. We know this column is going to make its way to England and Scotland; Bert guaranteed that.

FEC investigates Delaney

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A federal investigation has uncovered discrepancies in the reporting of thousands of dollars in campaign transactions on behalf of the chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee.

The very existence of the investigation is a closely held secret within the Federal Election Commission (FEC). The probe has become a highly sensitive political matter because it involves one of the most influential members of the House, Rep. James J. Delaney.

Delaney, a silver-haired New York Democrat, is a veteran of 32 years in the House and one of the few old-style Irish pols still serving in Congress. In a recent interview, Delaney claimed that the FEC investigation has been concluded and denied that it had produced any evidence of improper handling or reporting of campaign funds.

But the treasurer of the "Delaney Committee for Congress," Arthur Rosenblatt, acknowledged that the investigation was continuing and that numerous 1976 campaign transactions had been challenged by a team of commission auditors.

FEC officials refused to comment, but several sources familiar with the probe said that what began last autumn as a routine audit of the Delaney campaign committee's finances had been elevated to a full-scale investigation.

Rosenblatt, a New York businessman, said many of the questioned disbursements involved in the use of "street money" or "walking around money," an unsavory tradition that still survives in many big-city Democratic organizations.

That practice involves distributing substantial sums of cash on election day to local political leaders in payment for their ability to produce sympathetic voters at the polls. "We're talking about district leaders in a half-dozen (neighborhood political) clubs," said Rosenblatt. "A district leader says, 'I have 10-20 captains. I want $20 for each captain.' Without those captains, you're not going to get results."

In addition, Rosenblatt said, the FEC remains unsatisfied with his claim that approximately $2,000 purportedly was paid to political workers who manned telephone banks during the campaign.

The financial reports filed for public inspection show that Rosenblatt not only was treasurer of the Delaney committee but also was the recipient of the largest amount of campaign funds — at least $7,700 for payments to "inspectors," campaign workers and "investigators" as well as dinners for local political leaders and lunches for campaign aides.

The collection and expenditure of more than $50,000 to re-elect Delaney two years ago appears to have been somewhat superfluous because he long has been a virtually unassailable political institution in his congressional district.

In 1976, Delaney was unopposed in the Democratic primary, received the nomination of the Democratic, Republican and Conservative parties, then won the general election with more than 95 percent of all votes cast.

Despite the substantive violations uncovered in the FEC probe, Delaney says "I don't think there was a better set of books anywhere than we kept." An examination of the public figures, however, reveals numerous examples of contradictory information.

For example, the committee submitted four different reports covering financial activities in July and August of 1976. They variably claim receipts during that two-month period as $15,925, $15,925, $12,925 and $11,925.

After his re-election in 1976, Delaney assumed the chairmanship of the Rules Committee, which must clear virtually all legislation before it can be debated on the House floor, controls the length of time allotted to that debate and specifies whether amendments can be offered to pending bills.

Despite that considerable influence, the 77-year-old Delaney unexpectedly announced earlier this year that he will not again seek re-election. The federal investigation reportedly was a factor in his decision to retire.

Thought

Ever Since he made the world, they have seen the unseen things of God — from the things he made they can tell he has everlasting power and is God. Then they have no excuse. Romans 1:20

June has busted out all over! The woods and the wild flowers are covered with green. Not every day is a blue sky, some are dark and grey. A thunderstorm comes up all too suddenly.

All of this is testimony God is with everlasting power. It's an invitation for us who are a part of creation to view the handiwork of God himself. Strange, but the creator forces no one to look this way. But then such have no excuse! It is so because the creator is denied by what we see. He would go against what our senses tell us; he has everlasting power and is God.

How is it with you? Is man really the measure of all things or is he a part of the measurement, the created world of the loving and living God? Rev. C.W. Kuhl Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church

Retiring principal gets unusual gift

New aluminum letters identify the Highland Park School on Porter Street. The letters were given in honor of Harriet Atwood, retiring principal, by current and former PTA families of Highland Park. (Herald photo by Chastain)

Words of surprise and gratitude were those of Harriet Atwood when she received the rather unusual gift of cast aluminum school letters and a permanent plaque in her honor as retiring principal of Highland Park School. "I am so pleased that at last our school will be readily identified to passersby," she said. "To all the people in the community who contributed to this project, I want to express my sincere thanks."

Both Miss Atwood and Mrs. Frances Ryan, retiring first grade teacher, were honored recently with surprise gifts and farewells at the PTA annual meeting and tea. Mrs. Ryan was honored with 12 inscribed hardback primary books for the school's newly renovated library.

Miss Atwood has been principal for 21 years, and Mrs. Ryan taught at Highland Park School 19 years.

Phone error delays house fire response

By MAL BARLOW
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — A misunderstanding between a frantic caller and the fire department dispatcher Sunday morning caused a delay of nearly five minutes in getting fire trucks to a burning home on Home Terrace.

Fire Chief Michael Fitzgerald said today, the mixup took place as follows:

"The frantic man called at 2:38 a.m. Sunday and told the dispatcher answering the phone at the main station that his home was on fire. He gave the address."

The dispatcher repeated what he thought the man had said to him. He said, "Holmes Street, right?"

The caller said, "Yeah, that's it." Chief Fitzgerald said trucks were dispatched right away to Holmes Street which is in the Hockanum Village housing project in the southwest part of town. The firefighters found the home fully ablaze, said the chief.

"They tell me it must have gotten a good start. It must have really been going good before they got the first phone call," said the chief.

Fire Marshal John Armstrong said he does not know yet where the fire started. He does not suspect arson. Electrical inspector Nicholas DePietro and building inspector Chester Santa were to study the scene today with Armstrong searching for the cause.

The fire appears to have begun in the kitchen.

The home's occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carpe and her son, Malcolm Miller, 25, were asleep in the home when the fire started, said Deputy Fire Chief Francis Dagny. The son was asleep in an upstairs bedroom. He first realized the home was on fire when he saw flames rising around the headboard of his bed, he told firefighters.

Mrs. Carpe said this morning they were upset with the delay in getting fire trucks to their burning home. She said the first call was made by her son and then two more soon after by a neighbor. She said she was fighting the fire with a garden hose when she looked at her watch and it said 2:30 a.m. and the trucks had not yet arrived.

"When you're excited, time seems longer," she said. "But I know it was more than 10 minutes before they got out of the race."

Contrary to early reports, Mrs. Carpe said she was not injured at the scene. She did trip on a fire hose and her son suffered minor burns but did not require treatment.

Firefighter Richard Mazzarella injured his shoulder while hauling out fire hose, said Chief Fitzgerald. He will be off duty a few days to recover, he said.

Ad firefighter James Ferrigno suffered a scratch on his eye during the fire. He was taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital for treatment and was back on duty today, the chief said.

The home was badly damaged. The roof of the one-and-a-half story structure is gone, said Armstrong. The Carpes and their son stayed with friends in town overnight.

The REACT Team of East Hartford said today they had planned to make an announcement later this week about the status of his gubernatorial candidacy.

Stevens, considered the underdog in the three-way scrap for the GOP nomination, refused to confirm or deny reports that he is ready to pull out of the race.

"I have nothing to say at all at this time," Stevens said. "But I may have some kind of announcement later in the week."

Stevens said his campaign is going well, but he's having trouble raising campaign money. The Milford Republican said he's only been able to raise $75,000, a figure well below what his challenger Rep. Ronald Sarasin, R-Conn., and Senate Minority Leader Lewis Rome of Bloomfield have been able to produce for their campaign coffers.

Campaign workers for Stevens said they believe their candidate has more than 20 percent of the delegates to the state Republican convention July 28-29. If they're right, Stevens could force a primary runoff.

But there is apparently some doubt in Stevens camp about whether he has the financial backing he will need to wage a primary war.

Stevens said he will not take a place on a Rome or Sarasin ticket. He said he fails to win his party's gubernatorial nomination, he will drop out of politics

News is bad on lobsters

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI)—There's some bad news this year for Maine lobster lovers.

The director of research for the Maine Department of Marine Resources says overfishing has reduced lobster populations, limited early catches this year and kept prices high.

"There's a very clear relationship between overfishing and the decline in catch," Robert L. Dow said Sunday. "This decline is despite the fact that we've had optimum water temperatures in the last five to six years."

Dow said the lobster catch of 1,722,000 during the first five months of 1978 was 86,000 pounds lower than during the same period last year. He said lobstermen have been getting an average of $2.55 a pound for their catch this year compared with $2.14 a pound during the first five months of 1977.

He said lobster should be more plentiful in the next few weeks as they finish a molting process and become more active, but he predicted lobstermen will find them in smaller numbers than in previous years.

Fired school chief angered by board

HARTFORD (UPI)—Edythe Gaines, Hartford's first black female school superintendent, Sunday spoke her first angry words about the school board's decision to fire her.

She also vehemently denied reports she asked the board for a $7,000 contract settlement for sick and vacation days when she leaves office Friday after three years on the job.

That settlement is one of the unmitigated—and it will call it by right name—lies Mrs. Gaines told a crowd Sunday at Masjid Muhammad No. 14, a city Muslim group.

Mrs. Gaines told the group to make sure whoever her successor is has the same performance record and credentials as she does. If not, people can conclude "this board is desirous of destroying our children," Mrs. Gaines said.

The board in April voted not to renew her contract when it expires Friday, claiming Mrs. Gaines did not consult often enough with them, was lax in reviewing teachers up for tenure and was absent too often.

Trial court merger effective Saturday

HARTFORD (UPI)—Next Saturday, Connecticut becomes the first state in the nation to adopt a single trial court in hopes of streamlining the state's judicial system and reducing a mammoth backlog of cases.

When the merger goes into effect, the Judicial Department will consist of the Superior Court, the Superior Court and the Probate Court. The Probate Court—the only state court to which judges are elected rather than appointed—will not be affected by the merger.

The Superior Court will be split into three divisions for family, civil and criminal matters. Replaced under the new system will be the Common Pleas, Juvenile, Small Claims and Family Relations Courts.

The court reorganization plan survived two years of legislative debate. Merger advocates have argued it will save time and increase efficiency because judges will be moved around to meet current demands of the court.

With the change, the 67 Common Pleas and Juvenile Circuit judges will be expanding, meaning more secretaries are needed. Hartford is especially hard-hit because of the large number of insurance companies with huge employment rolls.

They said schools aren't emphasizing office skills as much as they once did and women are becoming less interested in clerical jobs. Poor salary scales are also an impediment to getting qualified help.

CBT officials said their job fair drew more than 400 applicants for hard-to-fill clerical and secretarial positions.

Duro said the fair drew many applicants who have to work during the week and can't go job hunting. He said the ages of the applicants varied, which surprised him. "I expected about 75 percent of the candidates to be around 18," he said.

Salaries for inexperienced bank tellers in the area begin at between $113 and $128 per week, officials said. At one large insurance company, which did not want to be identified, secretaries begin at between $144 and $153 per week.

Cutrate legal clinic helping the consumer

HARTFORD (UPI)—Attorneys Vincent and Joseph Trantolo say they opened Connecticut's only law clinic because "it's time the legal profession went public" and people paid far less in legal fees.

Vincent, 32, said the attitude of many lawyers for too long has been "the public be damned ... we are professionals and the public will come to us."

"I don't think the bar association, very frankly, has done enough to change that attitude."

"I think the legal profession is a very good profession. A lot of consumers, though, don't. They're intelligent—but they're consumer conscious. They want more," he said.

That's where the Trantolo Law Clinic comes in. You can get a simple will there for $30; an uncontested divorce for $172; or file for bankruptcy for $250. Each of the dozen or so services offered by the clinic costs less than those offered at other legal firms.

Fees may be paid by cash, check, or MasterCard.

"In our society of high-priced law firms and no-cost legal aid programs, only the rich and poor have ready access to lawyers," they said.

"People in the largest sector of our society—the middle income—must either do without lawyers and give up their rights or, when lawyers cannot be avoided, pay much more than they can afford," the Trantolos agreed.

They say the legal clinic concept is tailored to avoid the pitfalls of the consumer's dilemma.

Joseph, 38, said prospective clients pay $15 for an initial consultation to discuss the general nature of the client's problem.

"Then," Joseph said, "we ask 'What are you looking for—what do you want us to do?' after we advise them."

"Then we go to a fee quotation, if the particular problem fits into one of the clinic's categories of business," he said.

Uncontested divorces have made up the bulk of the fledgling clinic's business since opening two months ago. Such cut-rate clinics were made feasible by last year's U.S. Supreme Court ruling to allow lawyers to advertise their wares.

Vincent says "90 percent of the people who come to the clinic, come because they want to know what their legal rights are—not necessarily by law, but by a legal problem."

For example, "a tenant might want to know what rights the law gives him against his landlord before he gets involved in a costly legal hassle," he said.

Because the commercial success of the clinic concept depends on streamlined methods and steady flow of clients—complex, time-consuming cases are not considered.

If a client has a complicated case, it is referred to another lawyer who has agreed in writing to handle similar problems for the clinic at a reduced cost. The clinic does not receive a referral fee.

After attorneys work in the realm of a clinic or in the privacy of his office, the man ... if he has any integrity at all ... is going to do the work to the best of his ability."

Both attorneys admit there has been some criticism of their enterprise and decline to discuss a grievance filed against them with the Hartford County Bar Association by a realtor charging him with solicitation.

"I think the public has accepted the concept. They're ready for it and they know what we are trying to do," Vincent said. The Trantolos opened a new clinic branch in Vernon last week.

"Of course, there are some attorneys who say we're 'bastardizing the profession' because the clinic concept is synonymous with (lawyers) advertising," he said.

"I don't think you will find many attorneys shunning (advertising). I don't think you're going to diminish the profession. In fact, I think it is going to improve the public image of the profession."

"A lawyer is licensed to practice law. It makes no difference whether the attorney works in the realm of a clinic or in the privacy of his office. The man ... if he has any integrity at all ... is going to do the work to the best of his ability."

Yale was owed $4,700 of Ms. Fiester's education debt.

Harvey said his client's reputation was "dragged through the mud" during the lawsuit.

Ms. Fiester works at the Hospital of Saint Raphael in New Haven. She is nearing completion of the first year in the site of the slaughter Friday and only four miles from the Mozambique border—in a widespread search for about 20 killers.

But they declined comment on reports from the border that the troops had crossed into Mozambique, where black nationalist guerrillas—blamed by Salisbury for the massacre—are known to maintain bases.

Guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe Sunday denied his rebels carried out the attack and said he had witnesses who would testify it was the work of black Salisbury troops masquerading as rebels.

Mugabe asserted the massacre was an attempt by Salisbury to divert attention from a weekend raid into Mozambique—a charge Rhodesia denied.

The bloodied and mutilated corpses of three men, their wives, two other women, and their four children were found Saturday on a soccer field at Elim Pentecostal mission school, 150 miles southwest of Salisbury.

The killers evidently raped three of the women, then killed them with axes, bayonets and clubs. One woman was found with an ax embedded in the base of her skull, authorities said.

It was the worst massacre of whites since the guerrillas began their war for black majority rule in late 1972. A total of 34 missionaries, nuns, priests and Red Cross workers have died in the bush war.

Israel rejects plans on occupied territory

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI)—Israel has spurned an Egyptian plan calling on Israel to strip withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza Strip and then allow the Arabs to decide the future of the occupied territories.

"Israel unreservedly rejects these proposals of President (Anwar) Sadat," the Israeli Cabinet said in a statement Sunday. "Israel proposes conducting negotiations without preconditions."

The Egyptian blueprint—which officials in Cairo said would be presented to the United States in time for Vice President Mondale's Friday departure for Israel and Egypt—envisages Israeli withdrawal and the restoration of the West Bank to Jordan and the Gaza Strip to Egypt.

This would be followed by Arab-Israeli negotiations on security guarantees for both sides. Once agreement is reached on these measures, the door would be open for inter-Arab consultations on the future of the two regions.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Tom Heston declined comment on the matter.

Egyptian officials in Cairo believe an inter-Arab solution could take the form of a federation or confederation between the West Bank and Gaza and the Jordanian government of King Hussein.

The Israeli rejection was drawn up by Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who took the opportunity to knock down persistent reports he is gravely ill.

In Cairo, diplomatic sources said they guessed the United States might attempt to bridge the Egyptian and Israeli positions at a conference in London among Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Kamel and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

But the Egyptian officials refused to confirm such a conference was actually being arranged.

As many as 500,000 Zaireans are estimated to have taken refuge in neighboring countries such as Angola, Zambia, Tanzania, Sudan, Rwanda and Burundi, and in some European countries.

The United States, Canada and Western European countries have urged Mobutu to liberalize his regime and get reconciled with his opponents before they grant him emergency military and economic aid.

There was no immediate indication of how many refugees might avail themselves of the opportunity to return home.

Chinese Deputy Defense Minister Gen. Chi Hsien-tien and his 11-man delegation, which arrived Saturday night, started a week of talks with Zairean government officials Sunday.

Zaire is asking for 20 light tanks to help rebuild its army and for two patrol boats to strengthen its tiny navy, military sources said.

Chinese officials said Peking was likely to agree to the request. But they said China was not expected to send any further military personnel to Zaire after the arrival last week of a group of naval instructors.

President Mobutu Sese Seko mwanumbi submitted his proposal for a general amnesty for Zairean refugees and exiles, which he had announced in a speech Saturday, to the legislative assembly.

As soon as it has been approved, he will ask the Organization of African Unity and the U.N. High Commission for Refugees to help in the repatriation of refugees and exiles who wish to return home.

WEST HAVEN (UPI)—A man sought by police for allegedly shooting his wife near a home for battered women in Massachusetts was arrested Sunday in Connecticut.

Thomas Parziale, 35, of Peppercorn, Mass., was stopped by state troopers on Interstate 95 near the West Haven toll station. Police said he had his three young children with him and a pistol.

Parziale was charged with first-degree murder, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon.

He was held in the West Haven jail and is being held in lieu of $100,000 bail.

Rhodesia hunts rebels after grisly massacre

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI)—Rhodesian troops reportedly invaded Mozambique in pursuit of the killers of 18 Britons—axed, bayoneted and clubbed to death in the worst massacre of whites of the six-year war.

Military authorities said the troops today were searching the scenic Vumba mountains—the site of the slaughter Friday and only four miles from the Mozambique border—in a widespread search for about 20 killers.

But they declined comment on reports from the border that the troops had crossed into Mozambique, where black nationalist guerrillas—blamed by Salisbury for the massacre—are known to maintain bases.

Zaire seeks China aid, sets refugee amnesty

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI)—Zaire is seeking military help from China and has made a first move toward liberalizing its government by proposing an amnesty for an estimated half a million refugees living abroad.

Chinese Deputy Defense Minister Gen. Chi Hsien-tien and his 11-man delegation, which arrived Saturday night, started a week of talks with Zairean government officials Sunday.

Zaire is asking for 20 light tanks to help rebuild its army and for two patrol boats to strengthen its tiny navy, military sources said.

world-wide movement here. It's an imaginative, creative, peaceful movement that's really capable of stopping nuclear power," Wasser-man said.

In taking on the question of nuclear energy you are taking on the central social and political issue of our times," Barry Commoner, professor of environmental science at Washington University, told a rally attended by protesters and local people sunning on blankets, eating picnic lunches.

"Washington has failed to provide political leadership. It is the obligation of the people here to provide that leadership," Commoner said.

Comedian and civil rights activist Dick Gregory looked at the crowd and joked to a reporter, "If they keep this up, they're going to build a Pepsi plant over there."

Gregory said he came because of last year's arrests. "When 1,500 predominantly white people go to jail from the economic structure they were from, this touches a lot of black folks," he said.

This year's crowd was also almost all white. Most members were young, but not all. Gladys Milligan, 70, of Roswell, N.M., showed up because she said "it isn't just the young people who should be concerned. It's every generation."

Clamshell members spent most of Saturday night and Sunday trying to dissuade a group of Boston dissidents from reneging on a pledge to leave the site peacefully today. The Boston group complained Clamshell leaders had no business making the pledge without consulting scattered affinity groups which make up the alliance. Higartner said "virtually all" dissidents were persuaded the group had to keep its word or risk losing public support.

Attorney General Thomas Rath said if a handful of people stayed behind, the state would try reasoning with them before it resorted to arrest.

The PSC first announced plans for Seabrook in 1972, then estimating its cost at $600 million. Environmentalists tried for four years to halt the plant at regulatory hearings. When the PSC got a construction permit in 1976 the Clamshell Alliance was formed by people who said they would try to direct action.

Today's hearings are the result not of Clamshell pressure but of continued court challenges by the original environmental groups.

Their requests led the U.S. 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston to order the EPA to reconsider its decision okaying under-sea tunnels to bring in water for the plant cooling system. The water will return to the Atlantic 59 degrees hotter, which environmentalists say will endanger marine life essential to the New England economy.

The same environmental groups persuaded the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to consider whether it should suspend the construction permit until the EPA rules.

A commission spokesman said it was the first time the commission itself decided to leave Washington to hear arguments by local people involved in a fight over a nuclear plant.

Senate has busy week to make up lost time

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate set a busy work schedule this week to make up for time lost in the 17-day suspended filibuster on labor law revisions.

Both House and Senate will quit Friday for a 10-day Fourth of July recess.

The Senate agenda was mostly appropriations and relatively minor legislation, with only one major item — a bill to prevent bankruptcy for New York City.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said he intends to call up the bill by Thursday. The current program that has kept the city solvent since 1975 expires the following day, June 30 — the day the holiday recess begins.

"It is my intention to get up the New York City aid bill no later than next Thursday," Byrd said in outlining the week's program. "I have every hope we can finish the bill before we go out for the holiday."

The Senate Banking Committee has approved legislation that would provide $1.5 billion in long-term federal loan guarantees to permit

New York to borrow money to avoid bankruptcy. The House already has approved $2 billion in guarantees.

The legislation under consideration would replace seasonal, direct federal loans to the city that Congress approved in 1975.

So even if the Senate approves the bill before the holiday, final adoption of an aid measure could not come before Congress returns from the recess July 10 and conferees work out a compromise between House and Senate versions.

Assurance that some form of Byrd said Saturday the labor law revision bill will come back to the Senate from committee in a form that can pass without a filibuster.

The bill, intended to update the National Labor Relations Act, would make it easier for unions to organize and prevent delays in employee votes on forming unions.

Among the major proposals to come up this week are the tax treaty with the United Kingdom, which the Senate defeated Friday, then revived so it could try again Tuesday, and the fiscal 1979 appropriations bill for the Treasury Department.

In anticipation of the holiday, the House has a lighter workload after racing through most of the major appropriations bills during the last two weeks.

But one of the most controversial ones — the $7.3 billion money package for foreign aid — will not be called up for action as planned. House leaders do not believe it has the votes to pass.

Librium, sleeping aids linked to cancer

BOSTON (UPI) — Librium, the second most commonly prescribed drug in the United States, and methyprilone, the active ingredient in several nonprescription sleeping aids, have been associated with cancer in rats, researchers reported today.

The drugs are members of the chemical family called amines, and when they are eaten with nitrates they form nitrosamines, one of the deadliest cancer-causing substances known to man, researchers from the Frederick Cancer Research Center told the northeast regional meeting of the American Chemical Society.

When nitrates were fed to the rats in combination with the drugs liver and nervous system tumors resulted in a high percentage. William Lijinsky reported.

Humans have a constant supply of nitrate in their saliva and also ingest nitrate when they eat meats cured with sodium nitrite, such as bacon, sausage and ham.

Bacon has been a subject of controversy in recent years because it has been shown that while raw bacon doesn't contain nitrosamines, cooked bacon does. Furthermore, stomach acids can combine with nitrates left over from curing to produce nitrosamine.

Lijinsky's research — if substantiated by other scientists — would show yet another way that substances innocent by themselves can cause cancer in combination with other substances.

Lijinsky, director of the chemical carcinogenesis program at Maryland's Frederick center, discussed his research with rats in an interview.

His work on methyprilone has led to a proposed ban of the substance by the Food and Drug Administration. Methyprilone is an antihistamine used as a nonprescription, non-narcotic sleeping aid because antihistamines commonly cause drowsiness as a side effect.

Thirty percent of the rats fed methyprilone in combination with a nitrite developed liver tumors, Lijinsky said.

With Librium, 10 percent of the rats tested developed tumors. Although a smaller number than the methyprilone, Lijinsky said the result was significant because the tumor formed most frequently was in the rat's nervous system, a much rarer form of tumor than in the liver.

Lijinsky and researchers at Hoffman-La Roche, the manufacturer of Librium, are repeating his experiment to see if its results can be matched. His new experiment, begun a year ago, already has produced two tumors among the 80 experimental animals.

"I don't want to make a real bang-the-drum evangelical presentation," Lijinsky cautioned. "I'm not going to project the risk (of cancer in humans) because I don't think anyone's able to do that yet. I'm just presenting the data."

More students flunking in city school systems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An old practice — flunking — is becoming a new trend in big city school systems.

Education officials say the trend is toward an unbending refusal to promote children from grade to grade just to get rid of them. And they say it is rapidly paying off in better basic skills for grammar and high school students.

Pressured by taxpayers for better results, many big city school systems recently have adopted the non-nonsense approach to problem students and apathetic parents.

"We flunked about 13,000 students two years ago," said Jacksonville, Fla., school board member Bill Carter. "That number dropped to 3,000 last year. A lot more parents are now asking how their kids are doing."

Chicago school board member Henry Moore said: "I, for one, am glad those days of token 'social promotion' of students are over. We've gone through a generation who felt they had no responsibilities — only group rights. We're testing students and we find that a lot more eighth graders must go to summer school this year to cope with high school."

Noting that taxpayers are turning down school bond proposals in many areas, some cities also are testing teacher skills to weed out unqualified instructors.

Dallas school board member Sarah Haskins said the results, to be released this summer, of some teacher-testing in her district "may show we have some teachers who should not have been teaching."

The comments came at a weekend meeting of the Council of Urban Boards of Education. Representatives from many of the nation's 65 biggest cities said their school systems now:

—Test the ability of elementary and high school students at regular intervals and refuse to promote those who do not keep up.

—Put more emphasis on reading skills, and pressure parents to sign contracts promising to uphold their responsibilities in the education process.

Council Chairman George Brown Jr. of Memphis said schools must let taxpayers know they are fighting waste, especially in light of the nationwide tax revolt that seems to have been heralded by California's Proposition 13.

Tornadoes, floods damage Midwest

By United Press International

Tornadoes, torrential rains and flash floods have pounded the upper Midwest, inflicting heavy damage from the Dakotas through Indiana.

At least one person was killed and more than a dozen injured in the violent weather Sunday.

A tornado tore through the Nebraska Panhandle town of Gordon, injuring at least six persons and causing hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage to buildings and homes.

High winds swept through Indianapolis' northwest side, heavily damaging three apartment complexes and causing some minor injuries.

South Dakota Gov. Richard Kneip issued disaster declarations for four counties, three hit by tornadoes Saturday night and one lashed by winds up to 110 mph Sunday. Damage was estimated at $2.5 to $3 million.

Several farm building complexes were destroyed by the twisters, but there were no serious injuries. A home was destroyed by the high winds in Springfield.

In north-central Illinois, pounding rains, lightning and severe winds combined to cause an estimated $1.25 million in damages in Livingston County. At least seven funnel clouds were sighted, four of them in the Chatsworth area. The high winds destroyed one home and ripped the roofs from the post office and a plumbing company. There were no reports of injuries.

In Lee County, Ill., an 84-year-old woman whose daughter's car stalled on a rain-slick road and veered into a drainage ditch, drowned while trying to swim to safety. A spokesman for the Lee County Sheriff's Department said numerous roads and bridges were closed because of heavy rains and some power outages had been reported.
