Social Security

Q. I've just heard that a woman should change her name on her Social Security record when she marries. I'm getting married next month, but I'm going to continue using my maiden name. Should I notify Social Security or not?

A. If you continue using your maiden name after marriage, you don't have to report your marriage. Just be sure you use your maiden name consistently. If you ever change the name you use — whether because of marriage, divorce, or other reasons — you should report the change to Social Security so that your earnings will be properly recorded.

Q. I'll soon be eligible for Medicare. I know it covers inpatient hospital care, but what about outpatient hospital services? For example, if I have to go to an emergency room, will Medicare cover my treatment?

A. Medicare medical insurance helps pay for covered services you receive as an outpatient from a participating hospital. Covered services include services for diagnosis or treatment of an illness or injury in an emergency room or outpatient clinic, lab tests and X-rays billed by the hospital, medical supplies such as splints and casts, and drugs which cannot be self-administered.

Q. My 19-year-old daughter is blind and has been getting Supplemental Security Income for almost a year. It is necessary for her to file an application for SSI every year?

A. Your daughter doesn't have to file another application. However, Social Security will review her case once a year to see if she's still eligible for SSI.

Q. Last month I was severely injured in an automobile accident. It looks like I won't be able to work for at least a year or so. My doctor suggests I apply for Social Security disability benefits. If I apply, will I have to have any special medical tests or examinations?

A. In some cases, special examinations and tests are required. However, Social Security will first request medical reports from your doctor and the hospital or clinic where you've been treated.

Q. My monthly Social Security retirement checks are sent directly to my bank, so when I moved to a neighborhood last month, I didn't notify Social Security of my change of address. A friend told me I should have. Is this true?

A. Yes. Although you may have your retirement checks deposited directly in your bank, there are other important messages that Social Security sends to your home to keep you informed of changes affecting benefits.

Ginzburg ends his defense

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg today closed the defense of his trial by denying he was guilty and sending his regards and solidarity to fellow activist Anatoly Shecharansky, on trial 10 miles away.

The court then recessed to consider a verdict and sentence, expected to come late today or Friday, on the charges of anti-Soviet activities.

Ginzburg, 41, told the court in Kaluga, "I don't consider myself guilty and I am not asking for leniency."

The prosecutor demanded he be sentenced to eight years in prison at hard labor and three years exile in Siberia — two years less than the maximum for anti-Soviet activities.

Ginzburg interrupted his one-hour, 40-minute trial defense to send a message to Shecharansky, who faces a possible death sentence in his Moscow trial.

Ginzburg explained to the court that during his 17 months in prison, police investigators had told him he also would be charged with treason and espionage.

Schaffer nominated for national post

HARTFORD (UPI) — President Carter today nominated Connecticut Gov. Gloria Schaffer to the U.S. Senate, but was beaten by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn.

The nomination came eight days before the Democratic state convention. Several women, including Barbara Weinberg of Manchester, are running for the secretary of state position. The announcement of Mrs. Schaffer's nomination leaves that position vacant on the Democratic ticket.

The CAB nomination must be approved by the U.S. Senate. The hearings are not expected to be finished before the state convention, but will probably conclude before the November elections.

Bourque can see his file, FOI commissioner decides

Manager's power challenged at hearing on town charter

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter
A handful of citizens showed up at Wednesday's public hearing on proposed town charter changes which have been worked on, and commented more on town government in general than the proposed charter changes.

Every year he has more power and every year we lose something," Stephen Dzielski of 3 Alice Drive also agreed that the town manager has too much power.

In a surprise move, commissioner Richard Weinstein asked that the Charter Revision Commission go on record supporting to the Board of Directors that they appoint a new Charter Revision Commission to consider a change in the town's form of government from the present town manager system to a strong mayor form of government.

Manchester's present form of government and doesn't see any need for change.

And Commissioner Robert Franklin said he didn't think there have been "any great outpourings from people needing a change."

Commissioner member Hillary Gallagher agreed and said he would like to see the town's form of government reviewed periodically.

Commissioner Alex Laramenz likes the treasurer's job should be an appointive one. It is now an elective position.

At the end of the meeting, former Mayor Matthew Moriarty, a visitor, was asked for any comments or criticisms.

The personnel file of a town employee includes the job application, physical information and ratings and documents relevant to work performance.

The decision, if it stands, means that an employee could request his or her file from the town. Other persons could view the files unless the individual employee provided them, an FOI spokeswoman said.

Weinstein said that in some cases, bids had been routinely waived without apparent reason by town managers.

The commission will ask Town Manager Robert Weiss and town auditor Jerome I. Baskin concerning the town treasurer's job and proposed new finance director position.

In a letter to the commission, Baskin felt that combining the two jobs would lead to a "leak of adequate controls" over town finances.

The commission has agreed that the treasurer's job should be an appointive one. It is now an elective position.

At the end of the meeting, former Mayor Matthew Moriarty, a visitor, was asked for any comments or criticisms.

A recommendation from any commission can be all things to all people," he said, "but this commission should be commended on all the work it's done."

He feels confident about West Hartford, where he has a strong base of support.

He asked for support from the local GOP. He also said that his campaign will work, in part, to keep area Democrats from pulling the party lever.

Both candidates are expected to win the Republican nomination in their districts. Both will be running in districts that have heavy Democratic advantages in voter registration.

Andrews mentioned the 60,000-vote advantage the Democrats have in the First Congressional District, but he believes he can defeat Cotter.

He called Manchester, West Hartford and Hartford the key towns in his election bid.

"Without Manchester, it's going to be very difficult to win in the First Congressional District," Andrews, who is executive director of the state NAACP, said.

Directors, mentioned her concern with the Community Development block grant program. She said that the program has become one with many strings attached for a suburban community like Manchester.

Andrews said that the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, which runs the CD program, has cut Community Development funds by 20 percent.

"If you bear what I stand for, if you judge me on my ability to be persuasive, you'll have no problem backing me," Andrews said.

Betty Sadoski, president of the Manchester Property Owners Association, asked Andrews about how he would win support both in Hartford and in the suburbs.

"I've watched the suburban areas be pitted against the urban areas. I think I'll be able to bring forth a unique feeling of understanding," he said. Part of the problem in the Hartford area results from a lack of effort to find a solution by the present congressman, Cotter, he said.

Vivian Ferguson, a Republican member of the Manchester Board of Directors, mentioned her concern with the Community Development block grant program. She said that the program has become one with many strings attached for a suburban community like Manchester.

Andrews said that the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, which runs the CD program, has cut Community Development funds by 20 percent.

"If we can't gear the programs to the money we've got, then we have to cut the programs," she said. She said that the Republicans have a good chance to win the senate seat and asked for support from the Manchester GOP.

Erving will costar with Meadowlark Lemon of the Harlem Globetrotters and Jerry Tarkanian, coach at the University of Nevada in Las Vegas, will be technical adviser. The plot goes like this: Erving and Lemon play for a lousy Pittsburgh team that couldn't score standing on ladders. A 14-year-old boy persuades the owner to build his team around players born under the same sign of the Zodiac — Pisces — and things thereafter go swimmingly. The film title — "The Fish that Saved Pittsburgh."

Al Gentile continues battle for big bands

By JAN ZIEGLER

NEW BRITAIN (UPI) — The way band leader Al Gentile figures it, the fans of big band sound are a minority whose rights are being ignored. "Radio and television aren't playing the music. Children are being indoctrinated by something else and brought up with the attitude anything their parents like is passe. "TV and radio figure it would cost too much to turn the market around. They claim the people that like our kind of music are dying off, so the market is limited. The music gets less and less airplay.

"Well, until those people die off, they deserve that little bit of airplay. The way I figure it, air rights belong to us. If our music is in the minority, it should be represented," he said. "Do you follow me?"

Thousands of people follow Gentile. Some of them plan to throw a testimonial for him Sunday, with admirers stomping at Connecticut's Savoy, the Lake Compounce Ballroom in Bristol.

Others probably remember his outdoor appearances in Hartford and elsewhere in New England long before the city began banning rock concerts at Colt Park in response to the rock throwing, petty larceny and mountains of broken liquor bottles and refuse that accompanied each show.

Gentile played outdoors five nights a week to crowds exceeding 2,000 at Colt Park during the 1940s and he said he never saw a fight. He says there was no need to enforce a no drinking rule, either.

Totie Fields was once his vocalist and he says Frank Sinatra and Dinah Shore, Vaughn Monroe, and the late Gene Krupa have appeared with his band through the years. Conrad Gozzo, the trumpet player's trumpet player, started out with the Gentile aggregation.

He staged a vaudeville extravaganza in Milwaukee, recalled that a few years ago he acted in a show about a Japanese internment camp in America during World War II and was nominated for an Emmy. He said he watched the show with some friends and then went out for refreshments.

"I'll be taking the show on the S.S. Rotterdam for a nostalgia cruise featuring Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberle, the singers who popularized songs like "Green Eyes," with the late Jimmy Dorsey. The cruise is sponsored by the Connecticut Big Band Society, which Gentile started. And if he had the time and money, he says, he'd get people together to challenge radio and television stations' applications for federal license renewal because he says they are denying the public the sounds of the 40s.

But he is pleased people are dancing together again. Discos are re-arranging the old songs to a new beat, and people who are just not hearing the music that existed before rock are listening more closely.

Gentile hears the sound. It's the big bands — Bones is at the Paramount, Benny at Carnegie Hall, Louis Prima at the Strand, — and for Al Gentile, musician and promoter, the sound gets louder and louder.

Star(Trek)dom created problems for actors

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Mr. Sulu and Mr. Chekov say it was great to be junior officers aboard the U.S.S. Enterprise, but when their "Star Trek" voyages were over they both had problems with their acting careers.

"It hurt the careers of some of the people in the show because they were so closely identified with it," said Mr. Chekov, who gets his earth-tone mail under the name of Walter Kovak.

"At one point I felt it was over and they (the public) were lauding us for something we did in the past, a ghost. I felt a little threatened at one point but that's over now."

That the fact a new movie is being made starting in August with the old "Star Trek" company has taken away the money to help pay "Star Trek" voyagers over they both had problems with their acting careers.

"I feel more comfortable about it now that the movie is being made," said Koenig.

Takei, who appeared with Koenig at a recent science fiction convention in Milwaukee, recalled that a few years ago he acted in a show about a Japanese internment camp in America during World War II and was nominated for an Emmy. He said he watched the show with some friends and then went out for refreshments.

work, I felt I had done a great job and that's all I was thinking about," he said. "Then I get to the store and this child yells out, 'There's Mr. Sulu.' It wasn't at all funny to me."

"Star Trek's" popularity would only last but turn into such a cult explosion.

"This 'Star Trek' phenomenon has gone far beyond the television show and the people that made it," he said. "It's a worldwide thing now, simply amazing. It seems like it has gone on forever. We thought it would go to a dignified end like other shows."

Takei said he attended a "Star Trek" convention in 1970 and "it was a modest gathering but heartwarming because they appreciated the show."

MEG, town reach accord

Officials from the Town of Manchester and the Municipal Employees Group Union Wednesday reached a tentative agreement on a two-year contract. The proposal, which still needs some language corrections, must be approved by the entire union membership and the Town Board of Directors before it goes into effect. Peter Henry, president of MEG, said that he hopes to present the contract proposal to the union a week from Friday.

"We agreed tentatively on the language, but it has to be firm up," he said. After that, he hopes to present the contract to the union for a vote after work on Friday, July 21. "Under the circumstances, it's the best we can do," Henry said of the proposal. "You never end up with everything you want."

Best construction year enjoyed in fiscal 77-78

The Town of Manchester enjoyed its best construction year ever during 1977-78, Francis Conti, chief building inspector, said. The department collected $193,772 in fees during the fiscal year, ending June 30. The total estimated cost of the projects issued permits is $32,413,698.

Conti said. An additional $8,000 in fees was collected for subcontracts issued by the department. In 1976-77, the department received $29,993 in fees for projects with a total estimated cost of $9,216,413. One of the key factors in the construction industry, single-family homes, increased during the past year.

The department issued permits for 133 single-family homes during 1977-78. In 1976-77, it issued 92 permits for single-family homes. In comparison, during 1976-77, the department also issued permits for the following projects: alterations and additions, 911; fences, 88; pools, 84.

Opinion

Growing moonlighter ranks

Moonlighting becomes increasing numbers of Americans, judging by a recent survey.
The Bureau of Labor Statistics puts the number of individuals holding down more than one job at some four million. Most are in professional fields such as education or accounting, and most also find second jobs in similar areas.
The great majority of moonlighters are men, usually with families. But almost one quarter — more than 900,000 — are women.

Expanded corporate couple

Speaking of working women, a group on the West Coast is pioneering a special type of job training.
They are corporate wives, and under a program being developed by Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp., in its Coast facilities, they are learning more about their husbands' work than is usually the case in a well-ordered marriage.
Named IRIS after the mythological Greek messenger and goddess of the rainbow, the program fills the wives in on not only their husbands' specific responsibilities but the company, its products and its role in society.
They receive regular mailings of financial statements, internal publications and employee newsletters and may take in-depth tours of company facilities. If they desire, the wives may take speech training to prepare themselves for more active community roles.
The program, intended eventually to be available at company facilities nationwide, is designed not only to increase a wife's understanding of her husband's career but to expand her own capabilities.
The result could be a corporate couple whose sum is greater than its parts.

Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Thursday, July 13, the 194th day of 1978 with 171 to follow.
The moon is in its first quarter.
The morning star is Jupiter.
The evening stars are Mercury, Mars, Venus and Saturn.
Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.
American actor Sidney Blackmer, and American educator Mary Emma Woolley were born on July 13 — she in 1873 and he in 1885.
On this day in history:
In 1863, opposition to the Federal Conspiration Act led to riots in New York City, in which more than 1,000 persons were killed.
In 1865, Horace Greeley wrote an editorial in the New York Tribune in which he said "Go west, young man, go west and grow up with the country."
In 1878, the Russo-Turkish war ended.
In 1977, the Communists shot down a U.S. plane over North Korea, killing three crewmen. A 25-hour power blackout started that day in the New York City area.
A thought for the day: U.S. historian Henry Brooks Adams said, "A friend in power is a friend lost."

Rhodes:

'Carter tax cut is phoney'

By LEE RODERICK
WASHINGTON — "President Carter's proposal is a phony tax cut, and the snow job this administration is trying to pull off will melt in the hot sunlight of reality, as Americans begin to realize what's really happening."
That bit of political rhetoric is brought to you compliments of House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona. In a luncheon speech the other day, Rhodes demonstrated the GOP's anxiety over what it sees as the Democratic Party's attempt to deal its tax-cutting, anti-inflation thunder.
"The president's proposal for a $15 billion tax cut is inadequate and misleading," said Rhodes. "In reality, there will be a net tax increase that will add nearly $100 to the tax burden of the average American household next year. The president's proposal ignores the impact of inflation on tax liability."
"For example, a married couple with a $12,000 taxable income faces an income tax rate of 18.5 percent. But a 6 percent increase in income is taxed at 25.5 percent. The national effect, then, is that an inflation rate of only 6 percent — and that's a very conservative estimate these days — will mean a tax increase of $13.5 billion to the American people."

Meanwhile, House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill (D-Mass.) issued a statement with a slightly different view, crediting the Carter administration and the Democratic Congress with an 18-month record of "stimulating the economy and reducing unemployment."
"Business fared as well as the worker under this administration," said O'Neill, with profits "increasing over 9 percent compared to 6 percent in the previous administration." The Speaker added that unemployment has also dropped from 8 to 6 percent during the past 18 months.
In his speech to the National Press Club — clearly intended to send major themes Republicans will wield in their campaigns this fall — Rhodes said the President's threatened veto of a proposal to cut the capital gains tax "reflects a simplistic notion of what makes our economy go."

The proposal is needed to "replenish a badly depleted pool of investment capital," he explained.
Carter is trying to "scapegoat" the issue by claiming that "some vague and wealthy 'them' will be the principal beneficiaries," charged Rhodes. "The fact is, the 'them' to whom Mr. Carter refers is all of us."
The Arizona also trotted out the GOP's tax showpiece, known as the Kemp-Roth bill, which would cut taxes by 30 percent over three years. The measure won 194 votes in the House in March, Rhodes noted, predicting its supporters will increase as a result of California's Proposition 13 cutting property taxes.
Rhodes flatly predicted his party will gain a majority of seats in the House this fall — something the Republicans haven't done since 1952, and which almost no one else here believes will happen this year. As the minority party, the GOP could normally be expected to gain the most from the tax revolt. However, recent public opinion polls indicate the public is undecided on which party can best be trusted to hold down taxes.
Who will carry the Republican presidential banner into the 1980 campaign? Gerald Ford, John Connally, Howard Baker and Ronald Reagan are all possibilities, says Rhodes. Interestingly, he dwelled on the latter, saying Reagan is "keeping his organization intact, putting out newsletters on occasion ... I think he's running."

Rotary Club is wonderful

To the editor:
It's still a great world with some wonderful people. The Manchester Rotary Club, in their continued efforts to raise money for local charities, served a hot dog and soda during the Manchester Parkade Sidewalk Sales, plus offered rides on a circus train.
This was our second year doing this, and I felt through the goodness of your newspaper, we should thank all the people who helped us: Grote and Weigel; For donating 50 percent of their fine tasting hotdogs.
Hartford Road Dairy Queen: The owner, Fred Annulli, who himself sells hot dogs donated all the hot dog rolls and napkins.
Friendly Ice Cream, at Burr Corners: For their donation of mustard, ketchup, and relish. Thanks, Dick!
Shady Glen Dairy Stores: Who not only sell hot dogs, but the same brand Grote and Weigel, for allowing us to sell hot dogs in direct competition only a few feet from their store. Thanks to Bernice and John Reig.
Manchester Parkade Merchants: For their tremendous financial and moral support in assisting the Manchester Rotarians.
The Jerko Clowns: A local family who always gets into the spirit of things, donating their time and efforts, being more than helpful in the interests of the local charities.
Yes, there are good things going on all over this world. That is why over $500 will be spent on worthy charitable causes from this latest effort.
Thanks you,

Bakke, equality and Justice

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Before we get talked to death about the Supreme Court's Bakke decision, two facts ought to be recognized: It did not establish equality in college admissions; and it does not clash with either national policy or practice.
In the first instance, the ruling specifically endorsed giving minority applicants an advantage in selecting students to fill classes with limited space.
Justice Lewis Powell, the swing man on the decision, cited admission systems that give special weight to an applicant's racial or ethnic background along with other qualities such as academic standing, leadership potential and athletic ability. Such plans, he said, stand the test of "equal protection" that numerical quota systems do not.
The system the court threw out was like a card game which Bakke could win while playing against other whites, but never against blacks. The kind of plan Powell approved would require everyone to play in the same game, but permit the dealer to give minority students an extra card.
To some people this looks like one of those legal fictions that judges and lawyers love but defy lay understanding. Why, the non-lawyer might ask, is it illegal to establish a numerical quota for minority students but okay to establish admission standards that are intended to achieve the same result?
Obviously, this isn't equality. It favors minorities. And we know the reason: to attempt to rectify the injury of decades during which the benefits of American society were denied to blacks and other minorities in this country.
What we need to face is that this policy of giving an edge to minorities is not some whim of bureaucrats or judges, but a commitment of the entire United States government.
It is the result of the civil rights protests of the 1960s, the great national debate that they provoked and a series of presidential actions, judicial rulings and congressional enactments intended to end discrimination and to varying degrees rectify past wrongs.
In one way or another, every element of national government — Congress, the federal courts and the presidency — took part in development of the policy before Allan P. Bakke ever went to court. The Bakke decision provides guidelines for the application of the policy, but does not change its substance.
National policy providing benefits to particular groups is not a new concept. For years, we have given military veterans extra test points in civil service examinations. We favor American companies in awarding government contracts. We give an edge to economically distressed states and localities in allocating federal grants. We provide aid to the physically handicapped.
All of these programs help specific people and, in areas where resources are limited, can be said to discriminate against others. We do it because, after examining the values that underlie our society, it is right.

The court's Bakke ruling

By DON GRAFF
Unity may make for strength as a rule, but the Supreme Court's Bakke decision could be a stand-out exception so far as constitutional law is concerned.
Decision, in fact, is not really the word for this particular case. The long-awaited conclusion of Allan P. Bakke's challenge to the racial-quota admissions process of the University of California Medical College at Davis is a synthesis of six separate opinions from the nine justices.
It is this diversity which produces the peculiar strength of this first constitutional testing of affirmative action.
In ruling out Davis-style rigid quotas while upholding the principle of special consideration for minority interests, the fragmented court was unable to deliver itself of a precise definition of the law as applying to all the complex parties involved. Instead, it has established a very general principle which will guide but not bind evaluation of future cases involving preferential consideration for minorities.
And future cases there most certainly will be. Assistance to minorities in improving their circumstances — in education, business and government itself — now has constitutional sanction. But, other than the ban on precise racial quotas, what constitutes an acceptable assistance program innumerable specific and often special situations has not been spelled out.
A series of reverse-discrimination suits on the order of Bakke's is to be expected. Some may be disposed of with relative ease in the lower courts. Others may follow Bakke to the Supreme Court. Each will have to be decided on its own merits according to the parameters established in Bakke. And in the process, national policy on affirmative action and its constitutional underpinning will be clarified.
That is how a constitution grows and a society based on law develops to meet the demands of changing times.
Approval of Bakke has been widespread on both sides of the issue. Relief could be a major factor. Both feared an all-and-nothing decision — with each seeing the other side ending up with all and theirs nothing. Instead, there is something of great value for both, although enthusiasm may cool somewhat as the fine print of the six opinions is scrutinized and the Bakke precedent begins to shape decisions in subsequent minority-preference cases.
There is also something of value in the decision beyond the principles involved in Bakke itself.

Any pastor in town could very well have written this:
Letter to an Aspirin Company —
Dear Sir:
"You manufacture aspirins that relieve suffering, colds, and fevers. The mixture used in your tablets makes it possible for people to get out of bed and fight off headaches, bad nerves, and muscle spasms. I have noticed these tablets work wonders on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays — and especially well on Saturdays."
"But people who take them on Sundays seem to get no relief. They can't get rid of their aches and pains and are not able to attend Sunday School and Church."
"Is it possible for you to examine your tablet and put in an ingredient that will work on Sundays?"

Reporter held in contempt for withholding notes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A reporter for the Sacramento Union was ruled in contempt of court Tuesday by a Superior court judge for refusing to turn over subpoenaed notes and tapes in a story about a murder case.
Judge John J. Boskovich ordered John Hammerly to be jailed until he agrees to release the material for an in-camera review. But Boskovich stayed execution of the order for 30 days to allow the reporter to appeal. Hammerly said he will appeal the case to district court. The tapes and notes in question were of an interview with Edward Gonzales, an unindicted co-conspirator in the slaying of Ellen Delia case. Four men, including Mrs. Delia's husband, have been indicted for murder in Mrs. Delia's execution-style slaying in Feb. 17, 1977 in Sacramento.
Gonzales told Hammerly he drove the car for the killers of Mrs. Delia, whose body was found near Sacramento airport. The Delias operated an East Los Angeles drug rehabilitation program for ex-convicts. Public Defender Kenneth Wells said, "The right of a fair trial is more important than a reporter's right to keep private notes that may well mean the difference between an acquittal or a conviction."

About town

The board of trustees of Second Congregational Church will meet tonight at 7:30 at the church.
Temple Chapter, OES, will have its annual picnic Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Dow. Members are asked to contact Mrs. Dow or Mrs. Pierce Armstrong for further information.

Tenth Coin singers coming to Calvary

The Tenth Coin, a singing group with headquarters in Batavia, N.Y., will present a program Friday at 8 p.m. at Calvary Church, 647 E. Middle Turnpike. The public is invited.
The musical group, consisting of about 15 young people, will present the gospel in music, sign language and drama. The program is designed to appeal to both the deaf and those who can hear. At the conclusion of the program, there will be a time for refreshments and fellowship.
The group also conducts "deafness awareness" programs in public schools and sponsors retreats and camps for the deaf. Members also conduct training programs for those interested in learning sign language. Friday's program is being sponsored by the Maranatha Christian Coffee House of Calvary Church.

Committee passes bank reform bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — after disclosure of a bank reform bill generated in the wake of the Bert Lance controversy has been approved by the House Banking Committee.
The bill would ban insiders from overdrafts, control loans to insiders, and otherwise lay down a broad federal regulatory blanket over practices of bank workers.
Under the privacy provision of the bill, federal officials would have to notify a person each time an agency wanted to examine his banking records.

Nursery school gets solar fund

WINSLOW, Maine (UPI) — The Mother Goose Nursery School has been selected in the latest round of solar energy grants from the U.S. Department of Energy, and its owners couldn't be happier.
When Reginald and Alice Huard heard they had been awarded a federal grant, they had to cut short their vacation and return home because they were too excited.
"This is still experimental, but we're very excited to be a part of it," Mrs. Huard said Tuesday.
The grant will pay for construction of a greenhouse and other facilities at the school, she said.

McClelland-Waldron

Cheri Denise Waldron of Bolton and John Everett McClelland Jr. of Manchester were married March 14 at the Second Congregational Church in Manchester.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Waldron of 24 School Road, Bolton. The bridegroom is the son of John E. McClelland of Manchester and Eunice K. McClelland of Deland, Fla.

The Rev. James MacLaughlin of Second Congregational Church performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a muslin gown designed with V-neckline with lace insert, bell sleeves trimmed with lace, Empire waist, and lace tiered skirt. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

The bride's parents served as matron of honor and best man. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The couple is residing in Bolton. Mr. McClelland is employed by Cellu Products Inc. of East Hartford. (J. Grunski photo)

Resident fights clean up attempts

By CHRIS BLAKE Herald Reporter EAST HARTFORD—The town is seeking a court injunction against Walter Bachman to force him to remove two unregistered, inoperable cars and other debris from his front lawn.

Assistant Corporation Counsel David Zigel filed the letter with Hartford Superior Court Wednesday. The action comes after several attempts by the Health Department to order Bachman to remove the debris from his lawn at 60 Whitney St.

"The Health Department said in a letter dated Nov. 7 of last year that the debris constituted a health and safety hazard to the people of the area."

On April 17, the Health Department wrote to Bachman, ordering him to remove the debris from his front lawn by May 31.

The letter said "large piles of refuse" on his lawn "could be an attraction for small children who could be injured while investigating or playing with the refuse."

It also stated that the refuse is "unsightly and inconsistent with the appearance of neighboring properties." The refuse could also provide "harborage" for "rats, mice and other vermin," the letter said.

The refuse also "might serve as a fire hazard and endanger life and other nearby properties," the letter said.

When Bachman failed to obey the order, the town decided to take legal action. The town is seeking a permanent injunction "restraining the defendant from continuing the violations."

The town also seeks an order authorizing it to remove or contract to remove the accumulated refuse and to charge the expense to Bachman. The injunction would carry a $250 per day fine for every day it is disobeyed.

Smoke alerts rescuer, life saved

Jiminez rushed into the downstairs apartment to see if anyone was there. Someone else called the fire department.

Jiminez found Edward Dwyer lying on a burning couch and carried him outside, said Fire Marshal John Armstrong.

"The victim was very fortunate to have that man take him out," said Armstrong.

The marshal said it appears Dwyer had been drinking and smoking. He fell asleep on his couch and his cigarette must have set the couch on fire, Armstrong said.

Fire department paramedics treated Dwyer for smoke inhalation. He refused to be taken to a hospital.

The couch was removed from the apartment and drenched by firefighters. There was some smoke and fire damage inside the apartment and some smoke damage in the apartment upstairs.

Paramedics treated Dwyer on the scene. He was taken to a hospital. He was discharged Wednesday evening. He told Jiminez his acts saved a man's life.

Audit reveals 'weaknesses'

By CHRIS BLAKE Herald Reporter EAST HARTFORD—The recent audit which has cleared former school finance manager Paul J. Costello of any irregularities in the department has produced new questions.

"Internal weaknesses" exist at the George Street main depot, where materials for the school department are processed and released, said David B. Rosenthal, a representative of Shapiro, Rosenthal and Co.

The firm conducted a complete audit of the records and disbursements of the school department and found that "there was proper documentation and authorization for everything," Rosenthal said at a Wednesday morning audit committee meeting.

"There are certain internal control weaknesses that do not allow us to say where certain orders went," he said.

The audit committee requested the audit after allegations of misuse of school funds were raised. The firm expects to release a written report next week.

Leonard J. Baker, supervisor of the physical plant and the overseer at George Street, said today, "I have no idea what they (the auditors) are talking about."

Baker said he is anxious to see a written report with the problems spelled out. He said as far as he knows "everything is fine here."

Rosenthal said the firm will suggest better controls from the George Street depot. He said the procedure "is not being followed 100 percent" and the firm would suggest stricter adherence.

Audit committee members Joseph Visigallo and Salvatore "Gerry" Ingallinera said they were happy that the school finance office was cleared.

"I'm delighted that the school controller's office has been given a clean bill of health and I hope those who have raised questions are also delighted at the results of the audit," Visigallo said.

The discussions here this morning lead me to believe there are no discrepancies, major or minor, in the lumber and gasoline accounts," Ingallinera said, "other than weaknesses at George Street."

Visigallo said the George Street weaknesses identified by the auditors "are not casually related" to the school finance office.

Meanwhile, Republican Councilwoman Esther B. Clarke, who had raised questions about the lumber and gasoline accounts, said she is happy that an audit was performed.

"We asked for an audit by a professional firm and that's what we got," Mrs. Clarke said. She said she will wait for the written report next week before making any comments on the audit.

Keillian wins delegates

By CHRIS BLAKE Herald Reporter EAST HARTFORD—Robert Keillian picked up the support of two delegates in East Hartford for his gubernatorial bid at Wednesday night's Democratic Town Committee meeting.

The East Hartford delegate count now stands 18 for Gov. Ella Grasso, 10 for Keillian and three uncommitted.

Democratic Town Chairman James M. Fitzgerald said today that some of the delegates who were uncommitted are now supporting Keillian.

Fitzgerald said the figures last week showed 16 delegates for Gov. Grasso, eight up for Keillian and seven uncommitted.

However, three of those uncommitted delegates have endorsed the governor. The three are Fitzgerald, state central committee member Eugene Paganetti and Mayor Richard H. Blackstone.

Also at Wednesday night's meeting, East Hartford became the first major delegate to throw its support for William O'Neill of East Hampton for lieutenant governor.

Youth director resigns

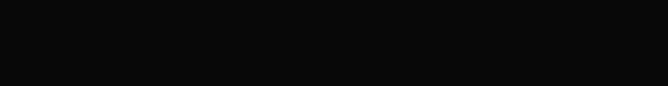

EAST HARTFORD—The director of the department of youth services submitted his resignation to the town Wednesday.

Bruce A. Backus, 31, will leave his post by Aug. 11 to begin work on his doctorate degree in clinical psychology at the University of Oregon.

The East Hartford native received his BA degree in psychology from the University of Hartford in 1971 and his MA in clinical psychology there in 1973.

He became the assistant director of the town's then new youth services department. Fred Bales, now director of parks and recreation, was director then. Backus took over the department in January 1975.

His staff has counseled many hundreds of young people and their families each year. Backus set up the town's Youth Services Clinic staffed by part-time psychologists. His office also runs a job bank for youths and has run special programs on single parenthood, suicide and rape.

Bill Gaughan, 25, is a computer analyst programmer for Aetna Life and Casualty and a concert pianist — despite the fact that he is blind. Gaughan said he is "just doing what most other people do," which includes handling most matters without any assistance.

Blindness is no hindrance; Bill Gaughan leads full life

By CHRIS BLAKE
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — In a world which he cannot see, Bill Gaughan is a success.

Gaughan is 25 years old and has been blind since birth. But that hasn't stopped him from getting the most out of life.

"The way I look at it, I'm just doing what most other people do," Gaughan said. He is probably doing more than some people do.

He is an analyst programmer in the systems department of the Casualty Division at Aetna Life and Casualty in Hartford. He is also a pianist who has been playing for 15 years.

His favorites are Beethoven and Mozart. He prefers playing classical music and the romantic selections of Chopin and Schumann.

"I don't like to play by ear," he said. "Although I have a good ear, I don't play by ear. I read the notes by braille beforehand and memorize the piece."

The only types of music he will not play are pop music and jazz — and it's more out of choice than anything else.

At work, Gaughan said his blindness is not a major hindrance. He is able to do almost anything that anyone else can do, with the obvious exception of reading.

However, even this he can do through the use of an optical machine, which he bought. The machine is similar to an optical character reader except it can take reading material and convert it to raised print.

Gaughan said reading is not one of his hobbies. Most blind people read at about 40 words per minute, he said.

Grew up in Bristol

Gaughan grew up in Bristol, but attended Oak Hill School for the Blind in West Hartford from kindergarten through the 10th grade. He then transferred to Bristol Eastern High School for his final two years. He was graduated from Bristol Eastern in 1971.

He said Bristol Eastern was a large, high school. "I couldn't get over the fact that the school was that big. I still didn't know the whole school when I graduated, just the parts where I graduated," he said.

At Bristol Eastern, he was aided by "mobility instructors" who helped him locate classrooms. They also helped him with special problems which his blindness presented.

In 1971, he enrolled at the Hartt College of Music, which is part of the University of Hartford. He stayed there for two years and transferred to Central Connecticut State College.

"At one time I was going to go into a career playing the piano," he said. "Then I decided I would go into music education, but there are very few jobs for music teachers so I decided not to go into that."

Central Connecticut accepted all of his music credits from the University of Hartford. At CCS, he majored in psychology and was graduated in December, 1976.

He wanted a career in psychology, but heard that he would have to go to graduate school to get it. His area of interest was "psychometric psychology," or test designing.

"I had been advised that computer training was needed for psychometric psychology, so I enrolled in the Computer Processing Institute," he said.

He was graduated from CPI in October of last year and began work at the Aetna in November.

Gaughan enjoys his work. His fellow workers accept him and try to help him with any problems this blindness may present.

"I can get around the building pretty good," he said. "I may need help if I have to go to the bathroom or when I go outside to the bank to cash a check."

He carries an aluminum cane to work. The cane is sensitive to vibrations and vibrates when he approaches a curb.

He learned to use the cane a long time ago and it comes easier. He can learn to play some pieces in a day and some take up to a month to learn.

His rock favorites are Bonnie Raitt, Carly Simon and Jethro Tull.

"They have books on cassette and in braille," he said. "They also have magazines you can subscribe to on 12-inch records."

"Newsweek is available on a 12-inch record," he said. "I used to get it. I think I'll start getting it again."

Avid album collector

One of Gaughan's greatest pleasures is listening to music. His album collection numbers over 300 and they range from classical to rock.

"It's mostly the same type of music I play," he said. "I love chamber music and I like music for wind ensemble and pre-classical stuff — like Renaissance and baroque."

He also likes East Hartford. He has lived here for two years. He said the town is big enough to get major bus service just about anywhere in the area.

The town is working toward better facilities for the handicapped through the new Commission on the Handicapped. Any handicapped person can get free transportation anywhere in town by calling 528-4411, the Call-A-Ride number.

The town is also installing ramps on curbs in areas in which road repairs are being made.

For Bill Gaughan and many others, this is welcome news.

PZC grants approval to firm to build home on third lot

COVENTRY — The Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) has unanimously approved the application of Trumbull Homes to construct a dwelling on the company's third lot on Richmond Road. Two abutting lots were recently approved for development by the PZC.

Two stipulations were tacked onto the approval: (1) the final map must be modified to reflect the monument and iron pin modification approved by the commission at a June meeting, and (2) the work affecting the right of way on Richmond Road must receive the approval of the Town Council.

The council gave its approval this week, voting to accept the recommendations of Town Planner Gregory Padick and Town Sanitarian Donald Holmes. Padick noted that the driveway had been redesigned to improve sightlines.

In other business, the PZC continued to a later meeting a public hearing on the application of Khalig Salari for a five-lot subdivision on Carpenter Road. Salari said he had 19 acres to subdivide and planned to build houses costing about $60,000 each on four of the lots.

The applicant's attorney, Kevin O'Brien of Manchester, said his client presently had no plans to develop the fifth and largest lot, which is mostly wetlands. An abutting landowner, Frank Gallant, told the commission he had been working for 25 years to preserve the large swamp in the area for wildlife and rare plants.

"I cannot see developing on the rear lot," he told the commission, noting that he had no objection to construction on the four lots applied for. Another neighbor, Ron Raynor, disputed Salari's southern boundary line, which Raynor claimed as his property. But Padick explained that boundary disputes were civil matters and could not be ruled on by the PZC.

Padick felt that soil types and boundary markers were not adequately noted on the applicant's map. Commissioners agreed and asked Salari to correct the map for a subsequent meeting. The planner also pointed out that the town's Conservation Commission had not worked to a similar petition filed by Salari last year, although the conservatists also did not think that the swamp area was developable.

Dixon appointed

BOLTON — Robert A. Dixon, former Republican Town Chairman of Bolton, has been appointed the Bolton coordinator for the Sarasin For Governor Committee.

Dixon served as director of the Greater Hartford Better Business Bureau and as director of the Connecticut Halfway House. He is currently vice president in charge of public and regulatory affairs for the Connecticut Natural Gas Corporation.

As coordinator, Dixon will be responsible for distributing campaign materials and organizing Sarasin supporters in Bolton.

Library programs

VERNON — The Rockville Public Library will present film programs on July 18 and 25 in conjunction with the summer reading program "Monster Mania."

On Tuesday July 18, from 2:30 to 4 p.m., "The Beast from 20,000 Fathoms," a science fiction thriller, based on a Ray Bradbury story, will be shown.

On July 25 three short films will be shown from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. "The Beast of Monsieur Racine" is the animated story of Monsieur Racine's encounter with a strange looking but harmless beast who has been eating his prize pees. In contrast to the fantasy film, two shorts that bring the age of dinosaurs to realistic life, will be shown.

Free tickets for both programs will be available one week before each program. Tickets will be limited to Vernon children entering Grades K-6.

ZBA hearing

ANDOVER — The Zoning Board of Appeals will hear a request from Roger Zito at a public hearing July 19 at 8 p.m. at the Town Office Building.

Zito is seeking relief from lot size and road frontage requirements for a lot on Lakeside Drive.

A copy of the appeal is on file at the Town Office Building.

Bloodmobile visit

ANDOVER — There will be a bloodmobile at the Columbia Congregational Church

Friday from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m. It is being sponsored by the Columbia chapter of the American Red Cross which includes the towns of Andover, Hebron and Columbia.

Persons from age 18 to 66 may donate blood. Seventeen year olds may donate blood if they have a Red Cross permission slip signed by a parent or guardian.

Walk-in donors are welcome.

Candidate endorsed

COVENTRY — James Totten, a law partner of former Democratic Town Committee Chairman Richard Crombie, has received the endorsement of the town committee to seek the judge of probate post now held by lawyer Charles Puppale.

Puppale is a Democrat, is not seeking reelection. Two years ago he won the contest against Republican David Rappe. Rappe is seeking Republican Town Committee endorsement for another race this November.

A Bristol native, Totten has practiced law in Coventry for more than a year with the firm of Totten, Cromie, and Jay on Cross Street. This is his first run for public office.

The Democrats are also supporting David Barry of Manchester in his reelection bid for state senator. The Republicans claim they still have not found a candidate to run against the long-term Manchester senator.

The town committee recently endorsed Robert Walsh for re-election to the State House of Representatives. Two candidates are seeking the Republican nomination to oppose Walsh: Andrew Repko of Willington and Claire Connelly of Coventry.

Bailey suit on

HARTFORD (UPI) — A federal judge has refused to dismiss a suit against Boston lawyer F. Lee Bailey, who defended Patty Hearst, and is allowing the case to go to trial.

Beatrice Green and her daughter Kimberly, both of New Britain, claim Bailey was involved in not pursuing a medical malpractice claim against a New Britain doctor. The doctor operated on Kimberly in 1966 when she was 2-years-old.

U.S. District Court Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld rejected Bailey's argument that he can't be charged in court for failing to follow through on a case.

Xerox challenged

NEWARK (UPI) — A small New Jersey firm has challenged the Xerox Corp. in a multimillion dollar antitrust suit charging the grandfather of copymakers monopolized the market.

In a trial which began Wednesday in U.S. District Court, the Van Dyk Research Corp. of Whippany said Xerox wrongfully created a rental-only market by pricing its equipment out of the buyer's reach.

The company also charged that Xerox, whose sales exceeded $5 billion last year, violated the antitrust laws through conspiratorial agreements with other companies, unlawful patent practices and unfair sales policies.

FBI probe set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department will investigate allegations by a former FBI informant that the agency helped cover up his shooting of a black man in 1963 in Alabama where he had been hired to infiltrate the Ku Klux Klan.

The New York Times said today the inquiry was ordered by Deputy Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti in response to requests for "a full report" from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., whose Senate committee is drafting a legislative charter for the FBI.

Miss Rehmer wins national contest

VERNON — Karen Rehmer, a student at Rockville High School has won the national competition in business skills. Competition was conducted in San Francisco, Calif.

Karen won the state competition and with the help of contributions from the Rockville Area Chamber of Commerce and other groups, she was assisted in paying her way to get to the national competition.

The goal was to raise $300 to help pay for the trip and $350 was raised. Contributions were made by Rockville High School, Rotary Club, Vernon Junior Women's Club, Lodge of Masons, the Elks Lodge and one individual, Donald Rinauer.

Town's Day Care Center will expand services in the fall

By JUDY KUEHNEL
Herald Correspondent

SOUTH WINDSOR — The Child Care Center operated at the Wapping School, opened its summer session this week and in the fall will start expanded operations on a full day schedule to accommodate mothers who work full time.

The center, which had been open from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., until going on the summer schedule, is now operated only from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Sandra Murrin, director of the center, said besides expanding the hours, space will also be expanded from the present one-room facility to two rooms plus an office.

Renovations, which are expected to be completed during the summer, will make it possible to accommodate nap times for tots and space for infant care.

Mrs. Murrin said that a recent grant, which is to be used for renovations, will enable the town to install low shelving for toys and games and built in tables and benches.

The child care facility has been commended for its individual and loving atmosphere. However, the limited hours have been an inconvenience for some of the mothers, Howard Pitts, chairman of the Community Service Council said.

Mrs. Murrin said that she expects that students in the Child Development Program at South Windsor High School, will continue working with the children in the fall.

Also in the fall Mrs. Murrin expects to add an administrative assistant and another teacher to the staff.

During the summer each mother has to provide lunch for her child. The center provides milk.

There are many interesting things for the children to do both inside and outside and on special days they are taken on field trips to various places of interest in the area.

Public hearing

SOUTH WINDSOR — A public hearing will be conducted Monday at 7:15 p.m. at the Town Hall on the use of Revenue Sharing funds for the renovation of the Wapping School.

The Facilities Task Force, appointed by the Town Council to study plans for the renovation project and give cost estimates and make recommendations to the council, met Wednesday night.

The school was terminated for use as an elementary school at the end of this past school year. After being renovated it will be partially used for an activities center for the town.

After discussing plans Wednesday the facilities committee voted unanimously to include an air conditioning system in its plans.

The cost of the unit is estimated at $4,000 and some task force members felt this part of the renovation project could be delayed because the renovations won't be completed until the cooler weather.

However, it was decided it should include this year with some members expressing concern that the town might not appropriate funds for the system to be installed next year.

The question of new furniture for the facility was also discussed. The group expects to receive $25,125 from the town for furnishing, equipping and painting the eight rooms to be used by the town for social services agencies.

Tennis tourney

SOUTH WINDSOR — The Recreation Department will conduct its third annual tennis tournament July 27 through 30 at the Wapping Court Complex.

Participants from South Windsor and all area towns, maintaining an amateur status, are eligible.

Trophies will be awarded in the following categories: Mens and womens singles, mens and womens doubles, and mixed doubles.

The fee will be $4 for a single entry and $6 per doubles team. Each entrant must supply one can of balls.

Applications may be obtained and completed at the recreation department between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily or at the Wapping Court Complex nightly from 7 to 10 p.m.

Basketball program

HEBRON — A summer basketball program is being conducted at the Rham High School gym every week night from 6 to 8 p.m.

The program is offered at no charge to all junior and senior high school students of Regional School District 8.

Police auction

Chamber members will elect six directors in the fall

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

The Board of Directors of the Rockville Area Chamber of Commerce approved a slate of 12 names, six of which will be elected to serve on the board for three-year terms.

Approval was given at the Wednesday meeting. Steve Lamont, chairman of the Nominating Committee, said the committee compiled a list of 34 possible candidates and then narrowed it to 12 for presentation to the entire membership which will receive ballots in the mail.

He said the 12 were chosen giving consideration to having the board equally represent the three towns represented by the chamber, Vernon, Tolland, and Ellington.

One of the names was withheld because the person hasn't been reached to see if he will run.

The others are: Ralph Livingston, Dick Mirazik, Ray Richard, Dan Wright, Chris DeWitt, Mike Adamick, Don Waskiewicz, Henry Edwards, Wilton Lisk, Dennis Daffey, and Norman Hall.

The chamber's fiscal year starts in the fall.

Harvey Desruisseaux, president of the board, said he and Anne Flint, executive director, and some other members of the board attended a meeting of the East of the River Chamber group. He said they found it really exciting to get together with representatives of other area chambers to discuss mutual problems.

He said a series of workshops will start in the fall and the group will talk about long-range and short-range programs.

Lee Higgins, chairman of the Bylaws Committee, said she has sent copies of the bylaws out to all members of the chamber to have them read them over to see if they have any suggestions for amendments. She said she would report back to the board at the September meeting.

Andrew Tricartio, chairman of the Economic and Development Committee, explained plans for a "Rockville Downtown Festival" planned for Sept. 16. If it rains it will be postponed to Sept. 22.

He said during the festival the green in the center of Rockville will be used for an arts and crafts sale and exhibit. He said a $5 fee will be charged to rent space.

Park Place, which runs along the park, will be blocked off to be used for entertainment. To date he has commitments from a Greek Band and the Singing Seniors. He expects to have others.

There will be a full food concession and the Rockville merchants will have sidewalk sales. The event will start at 10 a.m. and end at 7:30 p.m.

Desruisseaux said the event is very critical to the viability of Rockville.

The committee had asked for a budget of $100 to put on the program but the executive committee asked the committee to submit any bills incurred in connection with it and it would act favorably on them.

Desruisseaux also reported that he had heard from the J. C. Penney company on the chamber's request that the company consider setting up a catalog outlet somewhere in the center of Rockville.

He said the company indicated it is

PZC approves applications

SOUTH WINDSOR — The Planning and Zoning Commission, with some stipulations, approved five applications, three of them involving requests for subdivisions.

The application of Robert L. Adlington for a subdivision of property located on Main Street, the application of Elliot S. Zimore, for a subdivision of property on the east side of Ellington Road and the north side of Chapel Road, and the application of Bruce Willard for a subdivision property owned by Blanche Benkowski, located at the corner of Foster Street and Ellington Road, were all approved with conditions stipulated.

The highest bid of $90,000, was submitted by Freese and Horan of West Hartford. The next lowest bid, considerably higher than Dzen's figure, was submitted by Central Paving of South Windsor at $53,000.

The town engineers estimated cost of the project was $49,000.

Installation project, bids were opened Wednesday and the apparent low bidder was Dzen Construction Co. of Manchester with a bid of $39,027.

Also approved were the plans of the town to install storm drainage systems on Foster Road and Burgess Road and the application of Larry's Auto Supply for a revised site plan of a catalog outlet somewhere in the center of Rockville.

Larry Bourbeau victim of hit-run in New York

Larry S. Bourbeau, 22, of 21 Beverly Road, Vernon, was found dead along a New York City highway last Saturday morning, reportedly less than two hours after he had been left at a Hartford bus station to catch a bus to New York.

His wife was found in the southbound lane of East River Drive near 81st Street at 4:05 a.m., apparently a hit-and-run victim, according to police. How he arrived in New York, no one seems to know, since, according to a friend of the family, he was left at a Hartford bus station shortly before he was to have board the 2:23 a.m. bus for New York.

New York Police are investigating the death with the help of two witnesses and a piece of automobile trim found near the body.

He was born in Manchester and was a 1974 graduate of Rockville High School. After graduation, he joined the Army and served for two years.

An artist, he was employed at Thompson Associates Inc., a Windsor commercial artist firm. He also drew cartoons for the Tri-Town Reporter of Vernon and was taking art courses at Manchester Community College. He was a communicant of St. Maurice's Church of Bolton.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Lillian Bourbeau of Vernon, a sister, Phyllis Bourbeau of Vernon, his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary Bourbeau of Manchester, an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Bernard of Coventry, and a nephew. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

John J. Brown
SOUTH WINDSOR — John J. Brown, 89, of 2814 Ellington Road died Wednesday at his home.

Mr. Brown was born in Cuthbert, Ga., and had lived in the Hartford area for 51 years. Before retiring, he had been employed at the former Billings-Spencer Co. of Hartford. He was one of the founders of Holy Trinity Church of God in Christ, Hartford, and a member of the New England Welfare League and St. Luke's Arms Club, both of Hartford.

He is survived by three sons, Robert Lee Brown, William Brown and John H. Brown, all of Hartford; two daughters, Lillian Payne and Margaret Payne, all of Hartford; 11 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

The funeral is Saturday at 11 p.m. at Holy Trinity Church of God in Christ.

Discipline considered for four in Park case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House ethics committee today capped an 18-month inquiry by starting disciplinary proceedings against four congressmen who received cash gifts from South Korean businessman Tongpan Park in an influence-buying scheme.

The committee on Standards of Official Conduct finished the preliminary stage of its Korean probe Wednesday by voting to take further action against four of the 14 sitting House members implicated in the scandal.

It delayed official notice of the action until today to allow notification of the individuals involved.

But sources close to the inquiry told UPI the committee will begin a full investigation that could result in disciplining Reps. Edward Patten, D-N.J., Charles Wilson, D-Calif., John McFall, D-Calif., and Edward Roybal, D-Calif.

The four now have 21 days to answer the allegations, then normal hearings on the charges will begin. After the hearings, the committee will decide whether to recommend punishment, which could range from reprimand to censure to expulsion.

The full House then must agree.

Police report
Manchester
An apartment on Jefferson Street was broken into Wednesday and several household items and jewelry were reported stolen.

Police said a witness reported seeing three Puerto Rican males walking from the apartment area carrying television sets and a sewing machine. According to police, the witness who saw them enter a car, also was able to report the license number.

Police arrested Sophie M. Spinolan, 61, of 119 Wickham Road, Gastonbury, and charged her with larceny in the fourth degree. Court date, July 31, East Hartford.

Police suspect arson in a fire last night at 95 Hilliard St. Police said that Assistant Chief John Christensen of the Eighth Fire Department said that flammable fluid was probably used in starting the fire which destroyed about 100 bales of wood pulp in a pile of 500 bales.

Police also made the following motor vehicle arrests:
David Gauthier, 18, of 159 Bryon Drive, charged with reckless driving and operating a motor vehicle on town property. Court date, July 25, East Hartford.

Police arrested a driver of a Common Pleas Court warrant charging him with four counts of issuing a bad check. The total amount of the checks was more than $400, police said.

The incident stems back to 1977. Larry Labetkin was released on a $500 nonsequester bond for appearance in Common Pleas Court 19, Rockville, July 25.

Mrs. Janet Boyd
A memorial service for Mrs. Janet Boyd of 244 Sycamore Lane, who died Tuesday at Manchester Memorial Hospital, will be Friday at 3 p.m. at Second Congregational Church.

Bigelow Street residents angered at zoning ruling
By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
A proposal to build a home on the side lot at 35-38 Bigelow St. in Manchester has resulted in angry neighbors and an appeal to the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ernest Machell, zoning enforcement officer, has ruled that the construction, being proposed by T.J. Crockett, is permissible according to the town's zoning regulations. Machell and Alan Lamson, town planner, both said, however, that the construction as proposed is one that the town would like to avoid.

Crockett has proposed to build a second home on the Bigelow Street lot, which has 100 feet of frontage. A total of 75 feet of frontage is required per lot in the Residence B Zone.

Crockett has proposed to meet the 75-foot requirement by dividing the property in a zig-zag fashion.

This would create 75 feet of frontage at the street line for one lot and 75 feet of frontage at the building line for the second lot.

As being correct," Machell said. "It was so extreme that we balked at first. But, you have to put your personal feelings aside and go by the letter of the law," he said.

The occupants of 25 other homes on Bigelow St. have sent a letter to Crockett expressing their disapproval. Also, an appeal of Machell's decision has been filed with the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Thus, any construction work at the site cannot be done until the ZBA rules on the matter, which it will hear in September.

"The majority of homes, particularly those on the eastern end of Bigelow Street, have large lots surrounding them. Cramping a house on that undersized lot would result in the loss of the atmosphere and appearance of our neighborhood," the neighbors said in their letter to Crockett.

"The finding of a loophole in the zoning laws solely for personal financial benefit without concern for the Town of Manchester and its residents is a disservice to the City of Village Charter," they wrote.

Crockett could not be reached this morning for comment on the matter. Lamson said that the existing definition of lot frontage has led to other problems in the past. Because of this, the town's Planning and Zoning Commission will consider a change to the regulations at its July 24 meeting.

The proposed change would require PZA approval before the building line is used as the measuring point for lot frontage.

There are some cases where the frontage should be measured at the building line, he said. The best example is the pie-shaped lots that are created at the end of a cul-de-sac. To meet zoning regulations, the lots would have to be much bigger unless frontage is measured at the building line, Lamson said.

NICKLAUS, who won the British Open in 1966 and 1970, was also among the afternoon starters who had the worst of the weather.

The course was considerably tougher this afternoon than it had been in the morning, said the 38-year-old "Golden Bear," who fired four birdies on his outward 36 and homeward 36.

"When we started, the wind started to get up. There was not a breath of air to start, then a little breeze came up and made all the holes on the front nine holes in the cup close, and the back nine long," he said.

"This morning, before the wind, the fellows who got out there were pretty fortunate. I don't know how Aoki would have played with a lot of wind, but I'm sure he's going to find out before this championship is over," said Nicklaus, who plays out of North Palm Beach, Fla., and Muirfield, Ohio.

When early starter Aoki shot his 68, he had a headache from wondering how to avoid the bunkers," he said later, it looked as if the championship record of 63, which American Mark Hayes set last year, was up for grabs.

Big-hitting Tom Weiskopf, winner in 1973, birdied the 17th hole in Sunday's round. Weiskopf, from Columbus, Ohio, then birdied the 10th before a record first-day crowd of 150,000.

But he then bogeyed the 15th, had a double bogey 6 on the dreaded 17th and finished at 69, along with compatriot Ray Floyd, Australian Jack Newton and Spain's Sevy Ballesteros.

Tradition dead
Long live the king, the king is dead. And when the king died, so did interest by one of its most ardent rooters, who shall remain anonymous.

The Boston Celtics had tradition; there was always talk of "Celtic Pride," now that is no longer. The Celtics will reign no more and the world will be sadder for it.

The Celtics used to be the platoon boys. You loved to hate them, a la the Yanks in baseball. But a strong Celtics franchise brought considerable recognition to the NBA.

That's gone. So apparently are the good old days — the upheaval has taken its toll. Once solidly entrenched, the franchise has been sent adrift as former owner Irv Levin, never comfortable in Boston, swapped with John Y. Brown, head of Kentucky Fried Chicken and ABA Kentucky Colonel fame.

That wasn't the topper. That came with the announcement that Kermil Washington, Kevin Kunnert and No. 1 draft pick Freeman Williams along with the rights to Sidney Wicks accompanied Levin to San Diego and that Marvin Barnes, Billy Knight and Nate Archibald were coming to Boston.

No one really cares Wicks is leaving — many are glad to see him go. But Washington, Kunnert and Williams were all people General Manager Red Auerbach wanted and they were swept away. Brown insists he wants to retain Auerbach's services but he thinks he does protest too much. Brown likes to be head man all the way.

The old Celtics pushed "Celtic Pride." You had the likes of Bill Russell, Bill Sharman, Bob Cousy, K.C. Jones, Sam Jones, Tom Heinsohn, Frank Ramsey, "Jungle" Jim Loscutoff, John Havlicek reeking of it. It is no longer, only remnants remain, and with its departure so disembarks a fan (not yours truly).

They used to bring up the talent through the ranks. No longer — and part of the blame for that has to be shouldered by Auerbach. Remember such outstanding No. 1 picks as Clarence Glover and Glenn McDonald?

The old guard is drifting away. The banners of past championships may remain high in the rafters at Boston Garden but that is about it. That franchise no longer exists.

And what will take its place? Dave Cowens is still on the scene but the Celtics are not far long, not when he meets his new teammates, Barnes, Knight, Archibald — all talented in their own way but not winners. They present too many problems that franchise is a scorner, not a defender, and Archibald has been injured since the last two years. Two of the three need the ball to be effective and considering they only allow one in a game at a time.

The Celtics will be re-formed, but in Brown's image. Auerbach if he's smart, and no one has ever accused him of being a dummy, will head for the hills for good.

What will be left? A weakened will be difficult to recognize. The king is dead.

Wind plays havoc in St. Scotland golf
ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (UPI) — So St. Andrews isn't such a gentle old lady after all.

True, she behaved in maternally fashion early on, but then the capricious whims that have hampered golfers on this legendary course since the 18th century came to the fore and Hubert Green's chances of winning the 107th British Open Golf Championship had virtually gone with the wind.

Green, the 1977 U.S. Open champion and pre-tournament third favorite, posted a disastrous 6-over-par 78 on the 8,833-yard Old Course, seaside links Wednesday and found himself 18 strokes adrift of the surprise first-round leader, Isao Aoki of Japan.

But Green was not the only name to suffer the ill winds of this storm. Turn it into cash quickly by selling it through the Classified Ads.

Baseball season resumes

NEW YORK (UPI) - The major league baseball season resumes Thursday with the Boston Red Sox poised to slay the New York "Dragons" and the California Angels and San Francisco Giants hoping to prove they aren't "morning glories."

The Philadelphia Phillies, with a 4 1/2-game lead in the National League's East are the only defending division champions and pre-season favorites who reached the All-Star game in first place. The defending champion Kansas City Royals and Los Angeles Dodgers are each second in their divisions but the New York Yankees — ah, yes, the New York Yankees.

The night of Manager Billy Martin's Yankees is so severe that the outside George Steinbrenner's jurisdiction may decide to move its New Year's Eve celebration up to mid-August. Or, more exactly, that hoped-for giddy hour when the Red Sox mathematically eliminate the Yankees from the race.

The Ramblers nipped Nassif's, 20-19.
Mary Wroblecki homered and Wendy Pelletier played well for the Ramblers. Steve Latus and Wayne Major each stroked four hits and Debbie Gevery three for Nassif's.

Formal's Inn, after finishing second three of the last four years, captured its first Capital Region League Tournament last night by virtue of a 3-2 decision over Glastonbury at Fitzgerald Field.

Water safety needs stressed in book

NEW YORK (UPI) - No one should venture out on the water in an ill-equipped boat. In addition to the safety items specified by federal authorities, adequate precautions should be taken to cope with accidents or illness.

Such precautions should include a well stocked medical kit and an up-to-date pre-visit aid by a competent medical person.

In addition to the usual bandages and tape, Bergan suggests the following items be included in your cruising gear:
- Antacids that contain magnesium and aluminum hydroxide to take care of any indigestion.

An anti-nausea to ward off the effects of allergies or colds.
- Antiseptics of the common household variety such as Betadine for treatment of minor cuts and scrapes.

Aspirin can alleviate pain and reduce fever. It helps soothe aches and pains from muscle cramps, dental cavities and headaches.

Non-prescription Dramamine or other motion sickness pills can help prevent or relieve vomiting and nausea.

Insect repellent will help ward off irritating insects. Hot water compresses or even ice cubes help take the bite out of chiggers, prickly heat or insect bites.

Eye-glasses: take an extra pair along just in case. Also be sure to have a pair of good sunglasses.

Metemul, available only by prescription, helps control diarrhea and eases abdominal cramps.

Dr. Paul Sheldon in his book "First Aid Afloat" suggests that the ship's medicine kit also include a thermometer and case, a sling, a three inch Ace Bandage, an oval eye patch, splinter forceps, small scissors and safety pins.

The more distant the cruise, the more elaborate the medicine chest should be stocked and Sheldon offers several lists from the minimum to the most elaborate for a trans-ocean voyage.

Steve Colgate, president of the Offshore Sailing School headquartered in New York City, has a number of suggestions in his latest book, "Fundamentals of Sailing, Cruising and Racing," on how to combat seasickness.

Colgate, a veteran of the America's Cup trials, the 1968 Olympics and numerous ocean races, cautions against drinking liquor excessively the night before departing on a cruise.

Handicap clinics are latest craze

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) - The Norwegians are in producing health sports to the United States, where the concept promises to change the lives of thousands of handicapped.

Plans are under way for a health sports center in Minnesota to serve the handicapped from all over the United States.

Handicapped persons who use the facilities will be encouraged to test the limits of their physical capabilities to gain confidence and endurance.

Called Vinland Center, it will be patterned on the Beistolen Health Sports Center in Norway, where the lame help the blind and vice versa.

A similar but expanded program, including the arts, is envisioned for Vinland Center, Carlson said in an interview.

Beistolen was founded eight years ago by Erling Stordahl. Its daily schedule allows the blind to ski, the paralyzed to play volleyball and swim in the Jotunheimen Mountains 160 miles northwest of Oslo.

The handicapped are paired off for joint activities. For example, a person with leg disabilities steers a tandem bicycle from the front seat while a partner who is blind pedals from the rear seat.

Beistolen's corridors are covered with special strip carpeting to help the blind pinpoint their location in the building. Offices doors are marked with braille. Sculptures have braille inscriptions.

Atkins, Mays GHO entries
Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open of Golfers today announced that veteran actor Claude Atkins, and former baseball great Willie Mays have joined the celebrity Pro-Am field for the GHO July 28 at Wetherfield Country Club.

Atkins, who has appeared in hundreds of TV shows and movies, is perhaps best known for his role in the hit TV series "Movin' On." This summer he will star in two made for TV movies, "Little Mo" and "B. J. and the Bear."

Atkins, remembered for his home run swing and basket catches, is currently a coach and goodwill ambassador for the New York Mets. Only one of three men to hit over 600 home runs, Mays is a favorite of sports fans across the country.

This will be the second appearance at the GHO for both. They join former President Gerald Ford as a singer Pat Boone as celebrities for the Pro-Am event.

The official GHO car will be a 1978 Buick. Seventy cars will be supplied by 10 members of the Connecticut Buick Dealers Association to the touring pros.

Sarasin, others in GOP, spend high in campaign

HARTFORD (UPI) — Governor-elect Rep. Ronald A. Sarasin, R-Conn., has raised more money, spent more money and owes more money than any of the other candidates for the state's highest office.

Campaign finance reports filed with the secretary of the state's office reveal Sarasin has spent almost twice as much — $249,528 — as any other candidate through July 11.

Sarasin has also raised the most money — $259,221 — and accumulated the largest debt — $78,656. According to his quarterly finance report the bulk of Sarasin's debt is a $61,799 bank loan he took out to keep his campaign afloat.

The Beacon Falls congressman, considered the frontrunner in the GOP gubernatorial race, is not the only Republican spending money faster than he can take it in. Senate Minority Leader Lewis Rome of Bloomfield is also in the red with a $5,128 deficit. Rome's report showed he had raised $104,397, spent $99,969 and still owes $9,554 for campaign expenses.

The campaign finance records also showed that House Minority Leader Gerald Stevens of Milford accumulated a campaign debt of $10,724 before he dropped out of the Republican gubernatorial race recently.

During his candidacy, Stevens took in $76,038 and spent $79,446. The Miller attorney still owes $11,313 for expenses incurred before his candidacy was aborted.

While the Republican gubernatorial hopefuls have been going into debt to become Connecticut's highest elected official, the Democratic contenders have been building up tidy campaign surpluses.

Gov. Ella T. Grasso has raised $206,724, almost as much as Sarasin has taken in from his contributors. But Mrs. Grasso has spent only $129,686, about half as much as the congressman.

As a result, the incumbent Democrat has accumulated a campaign surplus of $77,038. Her gubernatorial challenger, Lt. Gov. Robert K. Killian, has also claimed a favorable campaign balance, $19,006.

Killian, the first lieutenant governor in Connecticut history to challenge his boss for the party nomination, reported he has raised $120,052 and spent $100,447.

Health Center correcting flaw in its power system

FARMINGTON (UPI) — The University of Connecticut Health Center said today plans already are in the works to change its electrical power supply system which a published report claims could cause a major power failure.

The Hartford Courant today reported about 500 cables supplying electricity to the academic and research sections are jammed inside one concrete trench, which could create a short circuit and fire hazard.

"The cables were haphazardly laid in this trench with no orderly separation of circuits and little or no support to keep them from tussling around during a fault," the newspaper quoted from a Jan. 17 letter written by physical plant director Richard Popham to Daniel MacKinnon, former Administrative Services commissioner.

"A fault (circuit defect) problem in one feeder (cable) could thus be communicated to any or all 50 circuits in this trench," Popham wrote. The problem allegedly violates the National Electrical Code.

More than $100 million in lawsuits are pending in several states, all MacKinnon, former Administrative Services commissioner.

Claim error

WATERFORD (UPI) — A health researcher for Ralph Nader says he made a technical error when he said three workers at Connecticut's Millstone I nuclear power plant were exposed to excess levels of radioactivity.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe had said Tuesday federal statistics showed 298 workers at 15 atomic power plants across the country were exposed to more than the maximum dose of 5 rems of radiation two years ago.

However, Wolfe retracted part of his comment Wednesday. He said he "had no way of knowing" that the 12 rems of radiation the three Millstone workers received was within legal limits because it was a first-time exposure.

Nuclear power plant employees who have been exposed to radiation in previous years are allowed only 5 rems of radiation per year, said Karl Abraham, a spokesman for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

But he said newly-exposed workers are allowed up to 12 rems of radiation because there is no cumulative factor at that point. Abraham said 19 employees at other atomic power plants were exposed to excess radioactivity in 1976.

Pleads guilty

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — A Norwalk man has pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiring to defraud the government while overseeing a housing rehabilitation program in Stamford.

Thomas Edwards, 56, pleaded guilty Wednesday in Superior Court following the testimony of a contractor who said he gave Edwards a $400 bribe in a Stamford parking lot April 14.

Edwards, a former roofing contractor, was in charge of monitoring housing rehabilitation under the federally-funded Neighborhood Preservation Program. He worked at the $13,000-a-year job from September 1976 until his arrest.

NASA delays shift

HOUSTON (UPI) —

Space agency officials, "learning as we go" in the struggle to save Skylab from crashing back to Earth, held off an attempt to restabilize the wobbling laboratory in order to study long-term changes in the mission.

"I can't tell you now when that (attempt) will be," Johnson Space Center spokesman Charles Redmond said Wednesday. "I guess the phrase is 'within several days,' but I don't know what the definition of 'several' is."

Meanwhile, reports of record solar radiation, which increases outer atmospheric drag on Skylab, dramatized the problem of keeping it in flight until a space shuttle crew can boost it higher or crash it harmlessly.

A power failure Sunday allowed Skylab to drift out of a streamlined flight profile that minimized drag on its 240-mile-high orbit. It was the third such deviation in a month.

NASA Skylab Coordinator Robert D. Allen Wednesday said a third shift of flight controllers might be added along with a fourth tracking station to increase current 16-hour-a-day contact by units in California, Bermuda and Hawaii.

"We need the increased coverage so that we have a better handle on what our systems are doing at various points in the orbit," Allen said. "If you add another station, it fills a gap where you don't have
