

More tax suits filed

Several owners of a variety of commercial enterprises in Manchester have appealed the tax assessments for their properties.

Among those who have appealed are Jarvis Realty Co., owner of property at 233-263 W. Middle Turnpike — site of Stop & Shop, Mister Donuts and a barber shop.

The firm feels that the assessment for the property, $574,900, is too high. Jarvis Construction Co. filed an appeal in connection with the $438,600 assessment for property at 494 W. Center St., the Manchester Racquet Club. And Jarvis Enterprises Inc. appealed the $40,800 assessment for property on Oak Grove Street.

John D. LaBelle and Alice C. Jarvis, co-executors of the estate of Alexander Jarvis, also have appealed the assessments on the following properties: 299 W. Middle Turnpike (C & D Cleaners), $85,200; 328 W. Middle Turnpike (Mini Auto Care), $105,760; 501 W. Middle Turnpike (Grandma's Pies), $111,820; parking lot property off Center Street, $47,750; and vacant property off Broad Street, $6,300.

Dems pledge to glue party

By MIKE CLANCY

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut Democrats Friday opened the 1978 convention with a pledge to hold the party together despite the unprecedented intraparty struggle between Gov. Ella T. Grasso and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., in order to qualify for a primary in which all registered party members may vote.

Mr. Grasso said she had the support to avoid a primary, but Ribicoff, the first lieutenant governor in modern Connecticut history to challenge a sitting governor of his own party, disputed her contention.

Killian is so sure he will qualify for a primary he has already started taking out radio and television ads for August.

Both sides courted delegates during the convention's opening day of speeches and politicking. Balloting was scheduled for Saturday, with no shortage of candidates for the other spots on the ticket.

Connecticut Republicans meet next weekend in Hartford with Rep. Ronald Sarasin, R-Conn., the likely convention choice. But state Senate Minority Leader Lewis B. Rome is expected to get the required 20 percent and has said he will probably enter a primary.

The feud between Mrs. Grasso and Ribicoff is more personal than ideological. He claims to represent Democrats — mostly party regulars who have left out of her administration. Some liberals were unhappy with Mrs. Grasso's performance, but a challenge from their quarter never materialized.

Mrs. Grasso beat Killian in a delegate primary in his hometown of Hartford in 1974, and former state and national Chairman John M. Bailey, who ruled the Connecticut Democratic party with an iron hand for almost 20 years, convinced the loser to step aside and take the number two spot on the ticket.

But Bailey, Mrs. Grasso's political mentor, died shortly after she took office and ever since, the governor and her second-in-command have been fighting.

At least 10 candidates have expressed interest in the lieutenant governor's spot and about five women are looking at the secretary of state's job. There appears to be little competition for the treasurer, comptroller and attorney general nominations.

Mrs. Grasso, the daughter of Italian immigrants, recently broke with tradition and announced she would not endorse any of the candidates running for lieutenant governor.

Gang all there

By ANDREW M. NIBLEY

HARTFORD (UPI) — While father Abraham stood there beaming and telling the Democratic family how good it was to see them all again, two of the older children, Ella and Robert, sat behind him with their hands folded, posing.

The gang was all there. The party had come together to pick a new leader.

But not this night. It was a time for cheering, crying and renewing old acquaintances.

Uncle Billy O'Neill, the rich uncle with all the patronage jobs, opened the show at the posh Bushnell Auditorium. The three-balcony hall adorned with modern art was about two-thirds full and as hot as the chili on the hotdogs being hawked outside.

A lot of the family had shown for the first night's reunion. Some were out with the hotdog vendors wearing funny hats, waving funny signs and making funny noises.

Some of the bigger children were in their downtown hotel rooms, drinking and laughing and telling each other who they should vote for Saturday when things got serious.

Uncle Billy, the Democratic state chairman who wants to be lieutenant governor, told the family to take a minute to remember their kindly grand grandfather who had watched over them all those years.

Everyone bowed their heads and remembered. They remembered how grand grandfather John Bailey, the former state and national chairman, always kept the family in line.

Ella Grasso, the governor, and Robert Killian, the lieutenant governor, wouldn't be having this nasty fight if Bailey were still around.

When Uncle Billy had finished talking, father Abraham Ribicoff, the family's elder statesman and senior senator, took center stage.

Economy said lagging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's economy grew during the spring at the fastest rate since early 1976 — 7.4 percent — but still lagged behind administration expectations, the government reported Friday.

The Commerce Department also reported that inflation during the second quarter soared by 10 percent the largest jump since the January-March period in 1975.

President Carter and his advisers had expected economic growth during the April-June quarter to rebound sharply from the dull winter months and hit an annual rate of about 9 percent.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter considered the new figures "relatively good although somewhat less than we hoped for."

The inflation reading was "not good," Powell said.

The slower than expected second-quarter increase in the government's Gross National Product statistics may force the administration to think again its estimate for full-year economic growth, officially projected at 4.1 percent.

"I think 4.1 percent now looks too optimistic," said Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps. "I would not rule out absolutely the chance of a recession."

The administration predicted in January that 1978 growth would be 4.7 percent. Earlier this month, it revised that figure to 4.1 percent.

Some private experts have predicted a possible recession by year-end or in 1979 unless inflation is brought under control.

The GNP is the total output of goods and services produced in the United States, adjusted for inflation, and is considered the trust measurement of a nation's economic strength.

The 7.4 percent GNP rise was a significant improvement over the first quarter, when there was a 0.1 percent decline. It was the strongest three-month period since 1976's first quarter rise of 9.3 percent.

Hancock offices open

BOSTON (UPI) — An estimated 6,000 district agents for the John Hancock Insurance Co., the nation's oldest life insurance company, Friday went on strike to win more money for additional services they provide policy holders.

Spokesmen at the company's home office in Boston said they do not expect any serious disruption in services and that management is filling in where needed.

"In respect to all of our offices, they will remain open — the strike does not affect a number of other financial services that we provide — it does not affect our mutual funds services," said Glen Parsons, a vice president of John Hancock public relations.

Members of the Insurance Workers International Union, AFL-CIO, Thursday voted 2,945-to-1,478 against a new contract. Agents in most major U.S. cities voted, but agents in several Southern states with a no-strike clause did not.

Parsons said the strike affected only the 6,000 district agents of the company — not general agents selling group insurance or independent agents. Most other employees — including underwriters and bookkeeping staff — did not honor the strike.

Ella says fight will be success

By BRUNO RANIELLO

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso, on the eve of her expected endorsement to run for a second term, Friday indicated it will be a close but successful fight at Saturday's Democratic state convention to block her opponent's bid for a primary.

Mrs. Grasso told a news conference she "felt comfortable" she has enough delegates to deny a primary challenge by Lt. Gov. Robert Killian, but she was less than certain.

When asked if she had enough delegate votes to deny Killian's primary bid, Mrs. Grasso said, "My present information is that there will not be a primary." When pressed whether this meant she could gain a clear-cut victory over Killian, she said, "I feel comfortable" but she declined to describe herself as "confident."

Killian, meanwhile, declared flatly Friday — "I have my 20 percent. We will have a primary."

Killian must get 20 percent or 272 of the 1,257 delegate votes at the convention Saturday to gain a statewide primary that would be held Sept. 12.

Mrs. Grasso also kept her neutral stance regarding the numerous candidates for lieutenant governor that she indicated if House Majority Leader William O'Neill of East Hampton is nominated, he should give up his post as state party chairman.

Mrs. Grasso said she has "been on record" as being against electing state officials holding dual jobs such as state party chairman. "I don't expect that an elected state official should serve in that capacity," she said.

However, she added, any final decision would have to come from the Democratic State Central Committee.

The governor's bitterness against Killian also was evident when she said she was still "deeply disturbed" over his charges she used misleading advertisements to easily win a

Your neighbors' views: Should the town treasurer's post be eliminated?

Gerl Sembenotti: "I haven't been following the issue. I think the office should remain a people's choice."

Walter Wiese: "I think it would be a good idea. The town's finances might be better taken care of money-wise with a director of finance instead."

Paul Erickson: "Yes, I think it should be eliminated. Sometimes the wrong person gets in power. I think the town should appoint a director of finance. Maybe they could get a little closer to the truth."

Bill Perry: "If the post isn't needed, it should be eliminated."

Ron Hewett: "Yes, I think the town treasurer has done a lot of good."

Mrs. Albert Jacobs: "It doesn't hurt to shuffle jobs around once in a while. It's always worth a try."

Kay Rhoades: "I think the town treasurer has done a lot of good."

Camille Chamberland: "I don't know anything about it."

That's entertainment

By Allen M. Widem

It's well and good, certainly, to cite, commend and congratulate initiative, incisiveness, impact projecting promise for America, but all that transpires is not necessarily accomplished by youth.

But the person who looks with professionalism at any given task in any given industry — most especially entertainment — is an individual able to vigorously participate indefinitely.

It's been said — and with considerable justification — that for every light on Broadway there is a sad story to tell.

They waste, the utter waste, of enormous gifted talents, simply because of age factor, can be pointed up, time and again.

How much greater could American screen comedy have been with an 'older' Sennett's advice and counsel? And multiply his situation many fold — in and out of entertainment!

Entertainment and America itself did not suddenly bloom, blossom unaided. There was and there will continue to be a fusion of talents, capabilities, reflecting the entire

Vo-Ag transportation issue

Observer with opinion formed

To the editor: On Monday evening, July 10, I attended a public hearing of the Manchester Board of Education requested by parents of vocational agriculture students regarding the continuation of transportation to Vo-Ag centers in Rockville and Glastonbury.

splendid teachers in their classrooms, known several board members for whom I have tremendous admiration. The issue Monday, July 10: About 20 secondary school students from Manchester attend or will attend next year programs at regional Vo-Ag centers in Rockville and Glastonbury.

"They know what they want, they are willing to learn and to work," he said. It appeared to me that these details of the program were interesting to the members — and (I hope I am wrong about this) — new? The parents group had, after hearing of the bus cut, arranged visiting periods for board members at both schools and invited, by letter, all members.

suppose. (Will they go to the July 24 meeting, when the decision is made? Will I? I haven't decided.) The parents, mother, father, or both, spoke briefly, to the point, kept their cool. I am sure some of them were unaccustomed to such public self-revelation. I found their appeals touching.

Other editors say:

The House (Friday) rejected a sensible Carter administration compromise directed toward a more cautious approach to development of the nation's first commercial breeder reactor and toward a breeder fuel that would be less vulnerable to theft and conversion into a nuclear power.

It now seems clear that the original Clinch River plan will never be realized. Congress can speed the next step by accepting the compromise now, rather than waiting for an unlikely veto-override.

South Windsor asks why change in road

Officials from the Town of South Windsor have sent a letter to Manchester asking about planned changes for the reconstruction of part of Pleasant Valley Road. The Town of Manchester has proposed road changes both in Manchester and in South Windsor to handle expected increases in traffic that will be generated by the J.C. Penney Co. project in Manchester.

Thought

One sign of God's presence in our lives is joy, which shows itself in an enthusiasm for life, for goodness, for friendship, for truth, for justice, for God himself. The person whose life is rooted and grounded in the Lord is filled with a deep and peaceful joy that no one can take away.

Did you ever go to a Board of Education public meeting? The board sits at a table in horseshoe formation, each member fronted by a sign with his or her name. Every speaker, each member of the public, identifies himself or herself before speaking.

There was a court stenographer, for the board. The superintendent of schools and the assistant superintendent were present. I did not take notes. I should identify myself, too. I have lived in Manchester since 1963, am a voter and taxpayer. I was a board of education member, in the town where I previously lived, for — how long? — 12 or 13 years. Sometimes it seemed forever. I am a former newspaper reporter and feature writer: a parent and a grandparent.

Letters from the commissioner of agriculture and natural resources, from the executive secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, and from Stanley Pullen, head teacher at Rockville, were read. All supported continuing transportation: all wrote enthusiastically of the programs which benefit students and, on a wider basis, benefit Connecticut agriculture now and in the future.

There was frequent reference to Connecticut agriculture as an important factor in the economy of the state. E.J. Kersting, dean of the College of Agriculture of the University of Connecticut, was present, was introduced as a "resource person." If anyone asked him questions, it was after the meeting.

One fact kept surfacing all through the meeting: This bus cut is being made under the terms of one little sentence in a law enacted 20 years ago: a little clause that can be used legally as an escape hatch. Legally, morally, ethically? I don't think so, but I am an observer.

Efforts are being made here in the General Assembly, where these things have to be done, to update the law. Dr. Kennedy read the enabling act. Mrs. Diane Lenti, who with David Verbridge, chaired the parents' group, discussed the efforts, including lobbying, on the part of several groups, to change the law. No one said how long this change might take, what would be the plight of the students caught in this squeeze. The updating won't happen this year. What of the students too young to drive themselves? Whose parents work — both parents? Car pooling sounds fine, but on a twice a day, 20-mile per trip basis? How much car will $600 buy?

The meeting was reminded, more than once, I think, that funds coming from the state as reimbursement for expenditures for education do not go into the education budget, but into town funds. I think I have always known this. I think the parents did not. The exact bookkeeping process has never been explained to me so that it made any sense.

I ask myself several questions. One: Since Cheney Tech in Glastonbury is the regional center for several towns, including Glastonbury, what would be the reaction in Manchester if Glastonbury cut off transportation? If all the sending towns cut off transportation till the law is changed? Oh dear, dear — let us not think about that. There were Vo-Ag students present, to see how things are done. I four — years after issuance of the regulations. Nevertheless, the final version of the cotton dust standard is based on Carter's timetable. The anecdotes reflect the enormous power of the nation's chief executive, at a time when Congress and the public supposedly have rejected the "imperial presidency" and when it has become fashionable for presidents to gripe about not having much real influence on public affairs.

In this case, the president resolved a controversial issue with nothing more than an offhand remark and simple gesture of slightly moving his chair. And even though all the other officials present had spent countless hours studying the issue, their seven-year timetable was instantly scrapped in favor of the four-year deadline Carter proposed in an off-the-cuff suggestion. Institutional loyalty in all large organizations requires that no public dissent be voiced after the boss has made the final decision. So when Schultz publicly announced renunciation of the issue he proclaimed that there had been "no winners and no losers."

But confidential government documents show that the solution endorsed by the president was virtually identical to the tough plan proposed weeks earlier by Labor and OSHA. What was publicly touted as a compromise was, in fact, a major victory for Marshall and Bingham and an embarrassing setback for members of the White House staff who are employed to give the best possible advice to the president.

At another point in the meeting, Carter praised the Labor-OSHA approach, then asked why it couldn't be implemented by the industry within four years. Both groups of high-level administration officials were flabbergasted by that casual comment, because the Labor-OSHA proposal called for full compliance no later than seven — rather than

By MARTHA ANGLE President: No small power

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Carter's personal intervention has finally resolved a dispute over health standards in the textile industry — and behind that settlement lies a fascinating story of policy-making in the White House. At issue were federal standards establishing maximum permissible levels of cotton dust. Inhalation of cotton dust can lead to irreversibly reduced breathing capacity, chronic bronchitis, and emphysema and even death among workers in textile mills.

Among the Carter aides in that group were Stuart E. Elizenstat, the president's senior advisor on domestic policy; Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors; and Robert S. Strauss, in charge of the president's anti-inflation program. The conflict between those men and the proponents of tough controls, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and OSHA Administrator Eula Bingham, became so intense that Carter last month agreed to hear personal arguments from both sides.

The deadlock was broken with a dramatic gesture by the president, according to those present during the confidential discussion. After listening to both groups, Carter reportedly turned to Elizenstat and said: "Stu, you know I usually agree with you but in this case I'm going to side with these people." As he made that comment, Carter got up and moved his chair a few feet — away from the group of White House aides and toward the Labor-OSHA delegation.

Hunkering down

By DON GRAFF Americans are saving more of their money. The savings rate so far this year is averaging about 8 percent of disposable personal income, up from 4.7 percent last year. Good news? That depends. For the individuals doing the saving it could turn out to be — depending very much upon what lies a short piece down the economic road.

But for the economy in general, it's an omen that has its ominous aspects. Increased savings are a sign not of increased prosperity, as the Conference Board analyzes the current situation, but of public concern over continuing inflation and what it could lead to. According to a survey of consumer spending trends in the July issue of the economic research organization's magazine, Across the Board, the theory that rising prices spur the public to hoarding brings in desperate hopes of beating even higher prices to come is a fallacy. The vast majority of households hunker down, seeking to offset erosion of real income by curbing spending and salting away as much as they can as a hedge against economic uncertainty.

By Dave Overby (DAVE OVERBY is editor of the Charles City, Iowa, Press.) The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms recently proposed some rules on registering handguns. The National Rifle Association and other groups immediately set up a howl, saying this was another step toward gun confiscation. Congress subsequently saw the constitutional and political manifestations and stopped the BATF move.

Collectors' Corner

A colorful postal card honoring Molly Pitcher will be released on Sept. 8 at Freehold, N.J. This was the site of the Battle of Monmouth where Molly took over her husband's job in the artillery. Her real name was Mary Ludwig Hays. She had been carrying water from a well in a pitcher during the battle, hence the name. The soldier, John Hays, collapsed from the combined effects of a wound and the heat. "Molly" joined the crew and kept the cannon in action. In later years she was given a life pension by the state of Pennsylvania.

Molly Pitcher, Monmouth, 1778

This will be the 20th anniversary of the battle. On the sequentennial Molly's name was overprinted on a 2-cent carriage regular issue stamp. There was some criticism at the time.

One philatelic newspaper called the stamps "comical Molleys," and spoke of slipshod methods that resulted in a "cheesy" overprint. The same paper reported that a youngster wanted to know if he could have stamps with Marian Davies, Clara Bow and Lon Chaney.

These 1958 issues were released at Freehold, New Jersey, and Washington, so three types of first-day covers exist. They all seem to be about the same scarcity, and list from $5 to $40, depending on the cachet.

The new card will show Molly's skirt in red and her blouse white; the flag will be in its usual colors. This, and the Cincinnati Music Hall card, also in color, may start a trend. Save a nickel and send a card instead of a letter.

Alertness is needed in dealing with the USPS these days. The Cincinnati card was released on May 12 and seekers of FDC's had until June 12 to order them. Also, the John Hancock cards could have been FDC's for another month.

But now they have lowered the boom and orders for the Molly Pitcher and also the 14-cent "Eagle" card (for international use) coming Aug. 4 must have a postmark date not later than the release date of the card. Why — who knows? To misquote Longfellow: The Post Office will be the wind's will, and the thoughts of the USPS are long, long thoughts.

Two stamps you may not have noticed this month: the 15-cent Rose Booklets were released July 11 at Shreveport, La., and the 8.4 Bulk Rate July 13, at Interlochen, Mich.

The Rose stamps had their first-day ceremonies at the national headquarters of the American Rose Society. For an FDC, get a stamp locally, affix it to an envelope and send in another envelope addressed to First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Shreveport, La. 71102 or before July 26. Give up on the other way — Postal Service affixing stamps, "as the minimum is a full booklet pane of 8 costing $1.20.

The 8.4 Bulk Rate stamp is in the American Series and has a picture of a grand piano. The curving inscription reads "Peace Unites a National Like Harmony in Music." This stamp was released at the National Music Camp on July 13. They can be ordered for FDC's until July 26. For Post Office affixing (the only way for this one), send 17 cents per cover addressed to "8.4 Cent Bulk Rate Stamp, Postmaster, Interlochen, Mich. 49645."

Nonpre-cancelled stamps may be obtained from the Philatelic Sales Branch at Washington or from philatelic centers such as the one at the Hartford Post Office.

Hi! The big news for this coming week is that on Monday morning we will be signing up for a trip to Rockport. The trip is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 3, and the complete package of the air-conditioned bus ride, a sight-seeing tour around Rockport and a nice lunch at the Oleana by the Sea is $17.50. Registration will start around 9 a.m. at a first come basis.

It looks like Monday mornings will be very busy for the next few weeks because with all the trips planned we must sign up at least a few weeks ahead. So keep your eye on this column as we keep you posted from time to time.

While on trips, a reminder to you folks who have signed up for the November fly/cruise trip that your final payment is due the first of September. There is also room for eight more people, or in other words four couples.

A good point to think about is that Eastern Airlines is making it possible for anyone to stay in Florida after the cruise for up to 21 days and then fly home at no extra cost. So if you have some friends in Florida, you might want to think about being able to visit them for a few days.

Hey, let's see what's been happening here at our center!

There were 23 golfers out on the green and here are some of the scores: Low gross scores: Joseph Grunich, 39; Dick DeMartin, 42; Herb Laquerre, 48; Al Detke, 47; Merrill Dickinson, 45; Low Net Scores: Steve Doyle, 30; Tom Irvine, 32; Jim Gleason, 34; George Vailone, 36.

On Wednesday morning our two good friends, Phyllis Saich and Margaret Mills from the Manchester Public Health Nurses were kept busy giving checkups to a member of our seniors. All one has to do to get a free checkup or a blood pressure test is to call the Public Health Office before Wednesday for an appointment.

Pinochle
During the morning we had 36 players for pinochle and the winners were: Bob Hill, 615; Martha LaBate, 589; Marge McLean, 589; Mina Reuther, 567; Gladys Seetert, 557; Josephine O'Connor, 548; Helena Gavello, 543.

While that is going on, we also have our very popular ladies of the Friendship Circle meeting in the basement. This is a group that was organized by a couple of college girls a year ago. The idea of this group is to sort visit, chat, eat, meet new members and make new friends. Some will bring in their hobbies to show and help others get started. This is an excellent way for the newcomers to get acquainted. The session starts at 10 a.m. and all you need to do is just drop in.

Stratford bounces back with jaunty 'Twelfth Night'

By FRED T. FERGUSON
STRATFORD, Conn. (UPI)—The American Shakespeare Theater, after a year in the dark of financial trouble, has returned to its stylized replicas of the original Globe Theater with a just plain enjoyable production of "Twelfth Night."

Lynn Redgrave is the ticket-selling star, but the play, which opened July 12 for a limited five-week run — the theater's only play this summer — is striking more for its direction, supporting cast, sets, costumes, songs and music.

Stephen Joseph Bova, Bob Diaby, Stephen Vinovich, Mary Louise Wilson and Mark Lomas make the bard's prose seem today's conversation. They make their roistering comic roles as contemporary as anything on Broadway, film or television, of which these fine actors have played their share.

Director Gerald Freedman has moved the setting forward to the 18th century "to get away from the Elizabethan look," and the elegant sets by Ming Cho Lee and gurgling water silk-like costumes by Jeanne Botton contribute to this end.

Although the music is billed as "incidental," there are moments when you'd think Shakespeare had been moved into musical comedy. (There are several dances. 10-9, choreographed by Graciela Daniele.) A quartet of handsome singers of songs composed by John Morris to fit the period — with lyrics from Shakespeare, sort of — pipe up a chorus or two, scene by scene.

It goes a long way to help Freedman achieve his avowed goal of emphasizing the celebratory nature of the play. In fact, it may make "Twelfth Night" even more celebratory than Shakespeare may have figured on — to mark, in the bard's case, the Epiphany, in Freedman's, the bard's return to the house by the Housatonic.

Miss Redgrave is there as Viola, of course, sometimes a bit forced or mechanical but adequate. But the hilarity comes in Bova's glorious depiction of a drunken Sir

Toby, a role he performs with clear relish; Miss Wilson's wise and willing, albeit mature, wenchability as Maria; Diaby's superbly malleable spoliator, Malvolio; Vinovich's expert straightman role as the knightly simperton Sir Andrew Aguecheek; and Lomas' agile house jester, Feste.

Others get higher billing, but these professionals deserve the praise.

The rejuvenation of the American Shakespeare Theater is also something of a transformation that may make it more viable. In its 20 years, it has suffered possibly from the fact its productions were often keyed to a New York City crowd in a house too distant, about 90 minutes by car.

The effort this year has been to make it an outing for Connecticut folk. A cruise boat with merriment entertain makes the run from New Haven for the Stratford performances. There is a brass quartet and madrigal singers to serenade picnickers on the grounds before the performances.

Further, Stratford is operating on a year-round schedule as one of the nation's growing number of regional theaters.

Under the umbrella of the Connecticut Center for the Performing Arts, it offers ballet and opera, too. It has opened its doors to touring companies of Broadway musicals and

Coin flap flip flop is foolish

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The flap over whose likeness should adorn the proposed new dollar coin has tended to obscure a more vital question, namely: Will it play in Peoria?

Sad to say, the Treasury Department's recent record in currency design does not inspire confidence in that regard.

There was, to cite one notable flop, the new Eisenhower metal dollar. That coin, in terms of circulation, has been a real turkey.

Somebody decided the country needed a new $2 bill. Which, if possible, has been an even bigger bomb than the Eisenhower dollar.

Now someone has decided that what we actually need was a new dollar coin that would be less bulky than the current one. A 1.9-gram, mawerwheel, you might call it. Or maybe a skateboard wheel.

Anyway, it would be only slightly larger than a quarter and, as professed by the Treasury Department, would have had Miss Liberty on one side and an eagle on the other.

But at Senate hearings this week it appeared sentiment had shifted to the design favored by women's groups — i.e., supplanting Miss Liberty with the stern visage of Susan B. Anthony, the well-known suffragette.

What was not apparent at the hearing was any assuring evidence that the coin would gain wide public acceptance either way. What surely is the coin's customarily gets short shrift.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but I believe the only coin ever called by its "tails" side was the "buffalo nickel." And that was a case of necessity.

Opposite the buffalo was an Indian, a name that had been pre-empted by the Indian head penny.

Let's acknowledge that the eagle is a noble bird and fully deserving of numismatic recognition. But the eagle already serves as "tails" for the Eisenhower dollar, the Kennedy half-dollar and the Washington quarter.

To use it as "tails" for the proposed new dollar coin would be an act of redundancy that borders on monotony, and surely would do nothing to enhance the coin's popularity.

If "heads" of the new coin is to be dedicated to one of the pioneers of women's equality, I say this would be a fitting time to give "tails" equal prominence.

How about a coin with Mrs. Anthony's face on one side and the famed World War II pinup of Betty Grable on the other?

That would make it popular with male chauvinists as well as women's liberators, thus avoiding the risk of another fiasco.

Moreover, depiction of that particular part of the female anatomy would be especially appropriate for that particular side of the coin.

U.S. court refuses to act on Seabrook

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A U.S. district judge refused to extend the life of the controversial Seabrook Atomic Energy Project.

Judge Louis Oberdorfer dismissed a complaint filed by the New Hampshire State Building and Construction Trades Council because, he said, the group had come to the wrong court in its effort to prevent the $2.3 billion project from being suspended at 6 p.m. EDT Friday.

Lawyers for the unions said they had not decided whether to appeal the case or what court to take it to. Oberdorfer, after hearing nearly an hour's arguments from the parties in the case, said the case properly belonged in the U.S. Court of Appeals.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission suspended the project on June 30 pending a review of the cooling tower system at the plant by the Environmental Protection Agency. Earlier this month, the NRC ordered that work be halted on the project at 6 p.m. today.

James Fairman, a lawyer for the unions, told the court the NRC's order will leave 1,000 employees out of work with a loss of $600,000 in weekly paychecks.

He also said the delay would mean the project will be put off at least until next spring and in reality "ongoing construction will not impact adversely on the environment."

Diane Sullivan, an assistant U.S. attorney representing the NRC, argued that the unions had come with "an inappropriate claim in search of an unavailable remedy."

She said the unions had not been involved in earlier proceedings before the NRC and the law clearly indicates that appeals from final decisions by federal agencies must be taken to a federal appellate court, not to the district level.

Wilbur Glahn, an assistant attorney general for the state of New Hampshire, supported the union group's complaint in court, arguing that the state would be injured if the project is halted because its citizens would end up paying higher utility rates since the company involved will be faced with $15 million a month costs due to the construction delay.

He also said one subcontractor with 150 employees has already filed for bankruptcy and other Seabrook related firms may be facing the same prospect.

But Oberdorfer said simply that he was dismissing the complaint because it had been improperly brought to his court.

The anti-nuclear Clamshell Alliance had condemned the state suit.

The plant builder, the Public Service Co., has said the order, which was to be effective, would force it to lay off 1,800 workers.

"It is the responsibility of the NRC to protect the public and (Gov. Meldrim) Thomson seems determined to short-circuit this process," Clamshell spokesman Malcolm Davies said Thursday.

Thomson, a staunch advocate of nuclear power who called the NRC order "stupid," had urged the unions to file suit against it.

"Thomson seems more concerned with the Public Service Co. interests than with the welfare of the people of the state," Davies said.

Davies said plant workers are being used as a "political football" by Thomson to protect the interests of the P.S.C.

"In spite of promises of more jobs for New Hampshire, few of the (Seabrook) workers are citizens of the state," Clamshell spokesman Cheryl Fox said. "Thomson is using state money to protect the jobs of out-of-state workers."

The Clamshell Alliance has sponsored several demonstrations against the plant, including one in June that drew 10,000 people.

FCC will not censor despite court ruling

BOSTON (UPI)—The government has no intention of censoring the airwaves or becoming "an arbiter of taste" despite the Supreme Court's seven-to-two ruling, the head of the Federal Communications Commission said Friday.

Charles Ferris said in a speech prepared for the New England Broadcasting Association the FCC's highest priority "continues to be to encourage bold, innovative and controversial programming."

The Supreme Court ruled last month a New York City radio station had overstepped in broadcasting a recording by comedian George Carlin which contained explicit language—including seven well known "dirty words."

The court ruled the station could be reprimanded after the fact for having broadcast the program when there was a likelihood children might be listening.

"I do not intend to devote my limited powers...to censoring speech," Ferris said. "I do not intend to become an arbiter of taste."

The FCC Thursday renewed the license of WGBH-TV, Boston's public television station, despite viewer complaints it broadcast vulgar language.

Calling the renewal "a decision that drew the line on complaints," Ferris said the FCC disregarded the allegations because the Supreme Court decision did not cover occasional use of expletives or profanity while late at night.

"Our WGBH decision should make it clear (the Supreme Court decision) really is limited," Ferris said. "It should show that the FCC is not going to become a censor."

"And, hopefully, it will prevent an outpouring of audience complaints based on occasional words."

Declaring the FCC's commitment to opening the airwaves to "increasing diversity of speech," Ferris said it would be "a tragedy if broadcasters used the seven dirty words' case to avoid controversy."

"For you to be safe—to only provide the conventional view—is not enough to serve the public interest," he said.

"This is the message I want most strongly to leave with you: We at the FCC are far more dedicated to the First Amendment's promise that broadcasters should air controversial programming than we are worried about an occasional four-letter word."

He said both the commission and the courts have said broadcasters "have an affirmative obligation to air controversial issues...the Fairness Doctrine is designed to protect noncommercial, minority views from private censorship."

Computers that listen hit market next year

By LeRoy POPE

(UPI Business Writer)

NEW YORK (UPI)—Computer terminals which will respond to oral rather than written commands will be on the market in the United States next year, says a New York science research firm.

The first such system, called a speech recognition machine, is about to be installed for a commercial customer by Japan's NEC Corp., says Quantum Science Corp. It can recognize a spoken vocabulary of about 120 words.

Quantum Science, a multinational technological consulting firm based in New York, expects similar machines with recognition vocabularies of 50 words probably will be on the market next year in the United States priced to sell for $4,000 to $5,000.

A Quantum spokesman noted that the size of the initial vocabulary is not the most important index of a machine's value or quality; other considerations may be more important.

Quantum Chairman Mirek J. Stevenson, said International Business Machines Corp. and the Bell Telephone System are the most advanced among American firms with designs for the speech processing terminals.

A study by Quantum, one of a series of ten the firm is producing on hardware of the future, concluded the long-term trend in man-machine communication will be to accommodate human rather than machine characteristics. Therefore, speech processing—speaker verification, speech recognition, speech synthesis—will be among the most significant new fields in information processing in the 1980s.

The speech processing computer terminals will save time in many businesses, Quantum said. They will be particularly valuable in aircraft traffic control, automatic and semi-automatic material handling systems, critical quality control programs where delicate data input decisions are necessary and they will enable many handicapped persons to do computer terminal jobs.

But the Quantum spokesman said that, unlike terminals operated solely by keyboards, the speech processing terminals will be highly individual and rather human. He said the machine would have to be adjusted, "trained" that is, to the individual voice of the person who uses it. If the worker quit or if somebody else wanted to use the machine, it would have to be retrained, a process taking an hour or less.

Quantum said the same machine can be trained and adjusted to recognize vocabulary in different languages because the building blocks of the sound patterns that make up all languages are basically similar.

Other uses for the voice processing terminals, Quantum said, will be for easier operation of numerically controlled machine tools, telephone paging and inquiry, and data retrieval from computers, and other routine office and data processing applications such as credit card verification and some banking functions.

Despite inflation, Quantum said, the cost of this kind of advanced computer hardware is steadily falling and the cheaper prices will hasten the commercial adoption of speech processing terminals because speech is inherently faster than punching a keyboard with or without tape, and speech can be used as an additional man-machine communications channel when hands or eyes are otherwise occupied.

It is even possible, the study said, that speech-commanded mini-computers with simple vocabularies someday will be used in homes.

Heritage offers 40-year mortgage

Home buyer's monthly mortgage payments will be lower with new 40-year term loans now being introduced at Heritage Savings and Loan Association. President William H. Hale says he believes Heritage is the first bank in the area to offer the longer term. "With mortgage rates and taxes rising, we were looking for some way to keep the monthly carrying cost within the reach of most families. So we're offering an extended term which means a lower monthly payment."

A young couple getting a $40,000 mortgage would save $25 a month on the mortgage payment on a 40-year loan compared to that on a 25-year loan.

Ironically, the longer term does not necessarily mean that a borrower will pay more interest over the life of his loan, according to Hale. "Most loans never go to maturity, so it's academic in most cases whether the term of the loan is for 25 years or 40 years," Hale says. "People usually move, refinance, sell their home or simply pay off the loan early." Nationally, the life of the average mortgage is only 7 years.

Hale says that in recent

Commerce trip to Japan called recruiting success

The state Department of Commerce's recent business attraction mission to Japan has resulted in the prospect of at least six Japanese companies planning to visit Connecticut by the end of the year. Deputy Commerce Commissioner Charles J. Duffy said today.

In a report on the mission to Gov. Ella Grasso, Duffy and Northeast Utilities President William B. Ellis said the two-week (June 2-14) trip to Tokyo and Osaka was "a resounding success."

"The Japanese business executives we visited were very receptive to the Connecticut story and are extremely impressed with the high quality of labor and large numbers of small subcontracting firms we have in the state," Duffy said.

He said Japanese interest in Connecticut business opportunities is widespread enough that the Department of Commerce is recommending to Gov. Grasso that the state immediately begin sending investment recruiter to Japan four times a year. Based on results from that effort, Duffy added, the hope would be to eventually set up a full time Japanese office, similar to the office established this year in Brussels, Belgium.

"Constant contact and follow-up is absolutely necessary to maintain this interest," Duffy said. Ellis was one of three Connecticut businessmen who accompanied Commerce officials on the mission. Duffy said the presence of these business leaders "was most important to the Japanese in establishing credibility for our presentations."

Attempt at coup falters in Peru

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Air Force Gen. Juan Pereda attempted a coup Friday in the state capital of Santa Cruz, but the attempt was aborted by an anti-Communist president and the move appeared to be failing after reports by President Hugo Banzer for restoration of peace in the nation.

Banzer sent two cabinet members to Santa Cruz to aid Pereda and to end the bloodless rebellion, and in a three-minute speech to the nation, appealed for calm in view "of the dangers that exist at this moment for the nation."

Banzer's military government declared a state of siege throughout the country, suspended civil rights and activities of students, many of them leftists, imposed a 10 p.m. curfew and banned meetings of more than three persons.

La Paz was calm although tanks and armored personnel carriers took over control of the city.

A group of businessmen and lawyers calling itself a "nationalist rebellion" against international Communism seized radio stations in Santa Cruz, declared Pereda the president-elect and ordered that his chief rival, former President Hernan Siles Zazo, be deported on grounds he was leading a Communist plot to take over Bolivia.

Military sources in Santa Cruz said

Jurisdiction unclear in bank bilking case

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — A bank computer uncovered the scheme, but no one seems to have declared jurisdiction over the case of the culprit who figured out how to bilk several southern Vermont banks out of $2,700.

State Lottery Director Henry Makus says the state police are investigating. But a spokesman at the Rutland barracks says they don't handle con men.

So said the Bureau of Criminal

Doctors ready to fight Legionnaires' Disease

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — Despite confirmation Friday of Vermont's first 1978 death from Legionnaires' Disease, doctors believe medical personnel are better prepared to fight the illness now than when it killed 17 people last year.

Dr. Harry Beatty, chief of medicine at Medical Center Hospital in Burlington, was the first of 28 Vermont victims of the severe respiratory illness, now being tested, diagnosed and successfully treated with antibiotics earlier.

The state Health Department announced Friday a male patient who they declined to identify died at Medical Center Hospital in early July.

Beatty said the man, the fifth case at the hospital in 1978 and the seventh in the state, may not have survived anyway because he was seriously ill

Cleveland's reform mayor fights for political life

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cleveland's "Boy Wonder" mayor, Dennis Kucinich, at 31 the youngest big-city mayor in the nation, faced heated up opposition Friday in his fight to stay in city hall.

His own Democratic Party joined the powerful ranks of police, unions and business community leaders seeking to drive the self-styled maverick reformer from office in the first recall election in the city's history on Aug. 13.

The Cuyahoga County Democratic Party Convention voted overwhelmingly Thursday night in favor of the recall drive. A precinct tally was not taken, but only about 20 of 600 committeemen and women attending voted to support Kucinich.

"No one here gets any personal satisfaction out of this," County Democratic Chairman Timothy F. Hagan said after the vote. "But we now urge the voters of this once-great city to vote to recall Dennis Kucinich."

The mayor, in typical fashion, declined an invitation to address the convention and instead went bowling. The drive to restore him from office began four months ago, when he fired popular Police Chief Richard Hongisto. Hongisto, recently named to head the New York State prison system, charged that "this year all cases the disease has been suspected within the first few hours of the patient being admitted to the hospital."

Postmaster says contract will not increase rates

By ROBERT SHEPARD
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new postal contract that gives handlers a key job security clause and an average 6.5 percent annual salary increase will help the government hold the line on postage stamp rates. Postmaster General William Bolger said Friday.

The three-year contract, initiated at 4 a.m. at the end of a 14-hour strike among the 570,000 postal workers covered by the contract.

Pulchritude's Peak

Bob Barker and Helen O'Connell co-host the "Miss Universe Beauty Pageant" to be broadcast live, via satellite, from Acapulco, Mexico, Monday, July 24 on the CBS Television Network.

If your appetite has been whetted by the sight of local bathing beauties, the "Miss Universe, Beauty Pageant" can only add some international spice to the sport of girl watching. The pageant airs live from Acapulco, Mexico, on Monday, July 24.

Producer-director Sydney F. R. Smith, who has directed both the Miss USA and Miss Universe beauty pageants for the past 11 years, will be center-front this year - as producer. Since Smith has been around all this super-national pulchritude for the last 11 years, he's eminently qualified to chat about the splendid strain of womenfolk called the Miss Universe contenders.

First, don't hand Smith any of that business about beauty-contest girls being a bunch of Dumb Doras. "They get smarter every year," Smith says. "Hipper, too. They used to be like so much bland apple pie. Nowadays, the contestants are as cooperative as all get out, they take well to the TV cameras and also get along remarkably well with each other."

"It's fun," Smith says, "to make all the shots look beautiful, and fun to make all the girls look beautiful." Next to fun, there's excitement. "The shows are events, live, straight-ahead events. You don't find too many of those in television today."

There are those, Smith concedes, who believe that pageants on television have become pseudo-show business spectacles, complete with big-name guest stars, production numbers, the works. "It's a necessity," Smith explains. "You need time for the girls to change. It takes seven or eight minutes for a girl to change from a swim suit or a gown. You can't have eight minutes of blank air and you can't have Bob Barker or Helen O'Connell (show co-hosts) talk for eight minutes."

Taking a place among the judges will be ice skating champion Dorothy Hamill, actress Ursula Andress, Mexican film star Cantinflas, fashion designer Roberto Cavalli, singer Lola Falana, film director Milos Forman, former Miss Universe Christiane Martel, producer David Merrick, operatic singer Anna Moffo, singer Melba Moore, Parisian entertainer Line Renard, former first lady of Indonesia Madame Dewi Sukarno and modeling agency executive Wilhelmina.

ROLLER RECORD - Can you tell me if I'm crazy? I remember a movie with Tim Conway as a man who wants to break the Guinness Record for staying on roller skates. Did this movie ever exist, or is the California sun getting to my brain. - Mitzi Morrison, Paso Robles, Calif.

So that's what they mean by a brain drain, inventing Tim Conway movies. Actually, you're probably crazier to have remembered that best-forgotten epic known as "Roll, Freddy, Roll." It was a 1974 TV movie, which also sported the talents of Jan Murray. Can you tell me if there's a recording of the theme song from the show. He'd love to have a copy. - Mrs. Wetty Castlejack, Griffith, Ind.

Epic Records has recorded "The Theme From the Incredible Hulk," which was written by Joe Harnell. If your record dealer doesn't have it ask them to order it for you.

HULKAHOLIC - My son has become a Hulkaholic since "The Incredible Hulk" came on the air. Can you tell me if there's a recording of the theme song from the show. He'd love to have a copy. - Mrs. Wetty Castlejack, Griffith, Ind.

Epic Records has recorded "The Theme From the Incredible Hulk," which was written by Joe Harnell. If your record dealer doesn't have it ask them to order it for you.

Dial-ogue

GUNN'S GAL - I have an important question; I would like to know who played Edie on "Peter Gunn"? All I can think of is Lola Albright who played Della on "Perry Mason." - Mrs. Audrey Skukan, Jacobsburg, Ohio.

Either you or your punctuation are a little off. You were right the first time, with Lola Albright — she played Edie. But she didn't play Della Street, that was Barbara Hale.

SAVAGE SONS - I was told by a friend that Leif Garrett played Tony Randall's son on TV. I don't think he's right. I watched "The Tony Randall Show," and I don't know the kid's name but it wasn't Leif. — Connie Klein, Poplar, Wis.

Both of you are right, in a way. Leif Garrett did indeed play one of Tony Randall's offspring, but it wasn't on "The Tony Randall Show," it was on "The Odd Couple." It was before he became the idol of millions of young girls, of course. The young man on "The Tony Randall Show" was Brad Savage.

SEA SURVIVORS
 Rod Taylor stars as the owner of a salvage boat who rescues Suzy Kendall from Florida waters and then goes after her abductors in the action-adventure "Darker Than Amber," an NBC-TV "Big Event Movie," Tuesday, July 25.

SPY DRAMA

Model-actress Lauren Hutton stars as a woman who is an enigma to Stephen Collins, playing an army officer on a clandestine assignment in the World War II espionage drama, "The Rhinemann Exchange," on NBC Saturday Night at the Movies, July 29.

Recruited to arrange the top secret transfer of scientific data from German agents to U.S. intelligence, Collins suspects he's been double crossed by the beautiful widow with whom he is having an affair after several attempts are made on his life.

SWINGER

Cliff Robertson stars as a small-town police chief in "Man on a Swing," film drama in which extrasensory perception helps solve a bizarre murder, on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," July 25.

TV Star Scene

As an old saw says, "Only a fool never changes his mind." So, count Julia Child and Sally Struthers among the smart folks. Both — for different reasons — said they wanted no reprise of the series that brought them television fame. But that was a while back.

Julia, it was learned later, was convalescent from surgery when she rang down the curtain on her "French Chef" lessons.

Now she's fine and readying a new PBS series. This time around she's shedding her former Gallic boundaries and focusing on good food in general.

Eye brows did raise, however, when the word first went around that Ms. Struthers may guest occasionally this fall on "All in the Family" with her TV parents, Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton. In the not-so-old days she battled through the courts in an attempt to break totally free. It was her screen hubby Rob (Meathead) Reiner who first spread the happy rumor about Sally, a week after he announced his own intention to do a few guest shots. In the meantime, Rob is spending part of his vacation co-starring in a movie with his real wife, Penny Marshall (of "Laverne and Shirley"). Its title: "Love

Me and I'll Be Your Best Friend."

The great English showman Lord Lew Grade, who produced two series built around Patrick McGeehan ("Danger Man" and "The Prisoner"), is dickering for another first-class British actor, Trevor Howard, to star in a weekly small-screen whodunit. Well, well. History does repeat itself ... sorta.
