City man surrenders after firing gunshots

HARTFORD (UPI) — A Hartford man wielding a handgun fired four or five shots into Barker Street, barricaded himself in his first floor apartment and held police at bay more than three hours before surrendering early today.

Police said David Babineau, 27, opened the front door of his 154 Barker St. home and threw a handgun into the South End street to surrender about 12:15 a.m. No one was injured in the incident.

Police said Babineau was taken first to Hartford Hospital and later to Norwich State Hospital for observation.

Police Chief Hugo Masini, who negotiated two hours with Babineau by telephone, said police will not press charges.

Masini said "as far as we are concerned the man has a medical problem. We will submit a report to the prosecutor, but we will not seek a warrant."

Babineau surrendered about an hour later after WFSB-TV newsmen Pat Sheehan, whom the man had called, assured Babineau that Masini would honor a promise that charges would be filed and he would be given psychiatric help.

The Rev. Joseph A. Devine, a pastor of St. Augustine Church and police chaplain, and Rev. Edmund Nadolny, director of communications for the Roman Catholic Archdiocese, were also at the scene helping to calm Babineau.

Full House to debate $18.1 billion tax cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Speaker Thomas O'Neill said today an $18.1 billion tax cut recently backed by the House administration will be debated by the full House along with a smaller cut proposed by the Ways and Means Committee.

The House Rules Committee today was examining both the administration-backed reduction in federal levies and the other $18.2 billion measure that was approved by the House Ways and Means Committee. The Rules Committee is charged with determining what bill the House will address, and it was clear the larger cut could be debated as an amendment to the Ways and Means bill.

O'Neill made public his stand on the larger cut, sponsored by Reps. Joseph Fisher, D-Va., and James Corman, D-Calif., after conferring with members of the rules panel.

The Massachusetts Democrat also said a measure by Rep. Charles Vank, D-Ohio, to simply extend current tax rates also would be included in the measures the House can debate.

A fourth proposal, by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., to insulate capital gains tax rates from the impact of inflation, will also be brought before the full House, O'Neill said.

O'Neill has made it clear, however, that a Republican proposal aimed at cutting income tax 33 percent during a three-year period will never reach the floor.

O'Neill said, after a White House breakfast Tuesday, he doesn't want that bill, written by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., to be taken up by the House.

The Rules Committee is considering the format for House action on the tax proposal. Tax bills normally come in under restrictive rules, since leaders feel it would be chaotic to have the bills written by the House through an unrestricted number of individual amendments.

O'Neill favors a tax cut for individuals and corporations, but opposes the GOP legislation. He also is against cutting back the higher Social Security taxes approved by Congress last December, or offsetting them by income tax credits.

The speaker also was undecided Tuesday on whether he would support the Fisher-Corman $18.1 billion tax cut endorsed by Blumenthal.

When announcing the legislation Friday, Fisher and Corman said it would provide greater individual tax relief and direct it more to lower and middle income brackets than the committee bill, which the administration considers tilted toward wealthier taxpayers.

Vance trip is success

By United Press International
Israel and Egypt accepted Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's invitation for a Labor Day weekend summit conference in the United States so readily that U.S. officials returning with Vance today were astounded at the speedy success of his mission.

President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat are going to Camp David, Md., together Sept. 5 to seek a way to end the deadlock that has stalled the Middle East peace initiative Sadat himself began nine months ago.

Vance came to the Middle East Saturday carrying two personal, handwritten letters from Carter. He read one to Begin in the Israeli leader's Jerusalem office Sunday.

The second he disclosed to Sadat during a leisurely stroll on the Egyptian president's summer house lawn Monday evening.

The letters were invitations from Carter to meet at the summit and, to the astonishment of U.S. officials, each man accepted within minutes, without bothering to consult his government or advisers.

"We did not believe decisions would be made as quickly as they were," said one high State Department official. "Thank God they were. I am surprised they were."

Begin's swift acquiescence was expected, but Sadat's came as a surprise. "I had doubts that Sadat would accept this rapidly," said the official, who had believed Vance would either get a conditional answer or a desire to go back and reflect.

Vance and Sadat met for the second and last time at the president's villa Tuesday night. Then the secretary, in another surprise, announced to reporters the United States was prepared to "play a role as a full partner" in the search for peace.

Sadat was elated. The developments meant the peace process had turned "a new page," he said. "Let us not look back."

But there was some concern that Washington and Cairo might have different views on what constitutes a "full partner." Egyptian officials said it was a "new element," but Vance said, "We have always indicated we were prepared to play a role as a partner, even as a full partner."

At a news conference in Israel following announcement of the summit, Begin said: "I want to express my happiness that President Sadat agreed to participation in this tripartite meeting."

He said the summit will be in the nature of "a free discussion" without a time limit.

Directors delay vote on charter

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

The Town of Manchester's mayor and auditor Tuesday night spoke in favor of establishing a director of finance position, but the Board of Directors took no action because of a lack of members.

The formation of a Department of Finance and other Town Charter changes recommended by the Charter Revision Commission will be acted on Monday by the board.

Only five members attended Tuesday night's meeting of the board. Since five votes are needed to approve any item, the board decided not to act on the proposed charter changes until the special Monday meeting.

Discussion of the first proposal, to establish the Department of Finance, did take place.

Jerome Baskin, the town auditor, voiced his support for the establishment of a director of finance to oversee all financial matters in the town.

"The time is overdue for the effective supervision of all financial matters, which the town does not have," Baskin said.

He said that the present town employees are capable, but there is a lack of coordination between the now-separate financial departments. A director of finance would oversee all departments and solve that problem, Baskin said.

After the auditor's presentation, Mayor Stephen Penny said that he favors a director of finance, as long as the creation of the position does not require the hiring of any new personnel.

He feels that the job might be handled by altering the responsibilities of existing town personnel.

"Hartford bank employers continue to deny women employees the respect, salaries, job training and promotion opportunities which their key position in the banking workforce demands."

Of those responding to the survey:
• 83.2 percent said most low-paying jobs are held by women
• 56.4 percent said they have never seen their bank's affirmative action plan or they do not know if there is one.
• 84.4 percent said they are not permitted to discuss salaries with co-workers.
• 54.2 percent said they do not know the maximum salary for their present job.

Women bankers poorly paid, can't advance

By JANE ANDERSON
HARTFORD (UPI) — A survey taken by Hartford Office Workers shows the more than 5,000 women employees at Hartford's major banks are poorly paid despite years of service and have little if any chance for promotion.

Susan Bucknell, executive director of the state's Permanent Commission on the Status of Women, said she will ask her organization to hold a public hearing on employment discrimination in the Connecticut banking industry.

The questionnaire, distributed to 1,500 women employees at 11 Hartford banks in April and May, showed 62 percent of the respondents earn less than $8,000 a year although the median length of employment was three to six years.

The survey results were presented to Connecticut Deputy Banking Commissioner Kay Bergin who said Tuesday she wasn't surprised by the statistics or conclusions.

But she said there's nothing she can do about it because her department has no jurisdiction in enforcing federal affirmative action laws. However, she said her department offered to help the government monitor Hartford banks for compliance with affirmative action programs and was turned down.

The federal government has a staff of three to monitor banks in the Northeast, but K.G. Patton, director of the Treasury Department's Equal Opportunity Program, said the Labor Department will be keeping such tabs as of Oct. 1, suggesting there would be more staff available.

"There is no question," Patton said, "that banking is what we call a problem industry in this regard. Banks, like other federal contractors, are encouraged to share their affirmative action plans with their employees."

"The plans can run for hundreds of pages, so people in the banks who are responsible for affirmative action must make a real effort to get the word out to employees."

At a news conference, Kathy Wirkus, head of HOW's banking committee, declined to identify the banks which were said to have discriminated against women but did cite one bank, the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., as being cooperative.

"Women bank workers are victims of low pay, lack of job descriptions and job posting, lack of opportunity for promotion and little or no information about affirmative action programs are," said Ms. Wirkus.

Hartford National Bank's human relations officer, Bob Davis, said affirmative action programs are disseminated throughout all the bank's divisions and are placed on the table in the employment office.

He said meetings are held periodically with employees to keep them informed of affirmative action efforts.

"I do intend to develop some new programs and increase awareness and sensitivity about this matter among all levels of employees," Davis said.

The HOW report said:
"Two of the many strategies used by banks to maintain these low-level wages are to not publicize salary systems and to forbid workers to openly discuss salaries with other workers."
"The lack of specific, detailed and accurate job descriptions effectively undermines or prevents a serious commitment on the part of banks to effect equal employment opportunities for women."

Rain hurts state crops, and beaches

STORRS (UPI) — The rain falling daily since the beginning of the month is draining beaches of human life and wrecking vegetable gardens across the state, officials say.

Edmund Marrotte, consumer horticulturist for the University of Connecticut Cooperative Extension Service, said Tuesday the rain has stopped maturation of vegetables and severely retarded pollination.

The result, he said, is blight and either the lack of a crop or the appearance of odd-shaped and perhaps odd-tasting vegetables.

William F. Williams, director of the state Parks and Recreation Service, said attendance at state parks and beaches has been "terrible."

Miller said the number of people at Hammonsett State Beach in Madison fell to 4,000 by Wednesday of last week, compared with typical attendance of 8,000 to 10,000.

Miller said if the good weather holds, he wouldn't be surprised if 15,000 visitors show up to tank in the sun.

Nuclear medicine intern

The most recent in a long line of University of Vermont students of nuclear medicine technology to spend an internship at Manchester Memorial Hospital is Orton Cowles (left of Middlebury, Vt., shown working with Daniel Mikolowsky, chief nuclear medicine technologist, at the hospital's Gamma Camera.

The program, arranged several years ago between the University of Vermont and four major Connecticut health care institutions, calls for the rotation of a number of nuclear medicine technology students through the four — Hartford Hospital, Manchester Memorial Hospital, Yale-New Haven Hospital, and the University of Connecticut Health Center in Farmington.

Upon completion of their rotation internship, the final phase of this educational program, the students receive their degree from the University of Vermont and are then eligible to take the examination leading to their licenses as registered technologists in nuclear medicine.

Democrats lacking votes, delay replacing Danyliw

The Manchester Board of Directors Tuesday night tabled action on filling a Manchester Housing Authority position held by Dr. Joseph Danyliw.

The tabling occurred because only five directors, four Democrats and one Republican, attended the meeting.

The Republican — Carl Zinser — indicated that he would not vote in favor of the motion to appoint James Murphy to the position. This would have defeated the motion since five affirmative votes are needed to pass an item.

Mayor Stephen Penny said after the meeting that a vote would have been taken if more than five directors had been present. Penny, Stephen Cassano, John FitzPatrick and Thomas Connors were the Democrats who were present.

Penny had said at last week's meeting that the Democrats will recommend Murphy for the position held by Danyliw. Danyliw's term expired last month.

Danyliw has said that he is being replaced because of his failure to

New jobs vacant as town begins year

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

One new job; a continuing one, included in the 1978-79 Town of Manchester budget, has been filled, but the others remain vacant.

The situation, however, is not abnormal and some of the positions should be filled within the next month, town officials said.

The only job to be filled this week is that of Diane Wicks, the outreach worker for the elderly who works in the Human Services Department. Her position has been paid for partially by federal funding, which ran out this year.

The Board of Directors agreed to pay the entire cost of the salary with town funds, so Ms. Wicks has continued serving in that position.

The Manchester Police Department has five positions to fill at this time. With the budget figure approved by the board, the department has decided to create one new position — a lieutenant in the youth services division — and fill four vacant patrolmen slots.

The Board of Directors also approved the filling of another long-vacant position, an inspector in the Building Department.

Testing for the inspector's job should be done Wednesday night, Steven Werber, personnel assistant, said.

"We had a hard time securing an exam for that position," he said. The state used to provide tests for such jobs, but it now provides standard tests only for police and fire jobs, Werber said.

The state, apparently, has become worried about testing because of suits that have been filed in cases where minority groups have said that tests were discriminatory. Thus, the burden of supplying or developing examinations has fallen on the local municipalities.

Werber said that the inspector's job could be filled within the next couple of weeks.

An agility test will be held tonight for candidates for the four patrolmen jobs, he said. The town gave a written exam for the positions two weeks ago.

About 100 persons took those exams," he said. The town has about 250 applications on file, but the Town of Newington gave its written exam the same night Manchester did. This probably reduced the number who took the test here, Werber said.

It probably will be another two or three weeks before the four vacancies are filled.

Testing for the lieutenant's position in youth services has not been done yet. The testing was delayed until a captain's vacancy in the detective division was filled, Werber said.

Minor said that the department also plans to fill four other vacant patrolmen jobs at the start of 1979.

Werber also said that there has been no unusual delay in filling the new jobs.

"Every new job takes long time to fill," he said.

Thomas Moore, the town controller, said the situation actually helps the town budget. The salaries for the jobs have been budgeted for the full year, so any money not spent on those salaries now will add to the town's total of unexpended funds.

"It's a pleasure," Moore said.

Town to get appraisal of Hickey's Grove land

The Town of Manchester will spend up to $600 for an appraisal of the Hickey's Grove property of Oakland Street adjacent to Union Pond.

The Board of Directors agreed to spend the money for the appraisal as long as the property owners agree not to sell the land to anyone until Sept. 15, when the appraisal should be finished.

The step was taken because the first asking price by the property owners was considered too high, but the town believes that the property is worth maintaining as a recreational area.

Fred Ramey of the Advisory Recreation and Park Commission told the directors that the commission has long supported acquisition of the land, but it feels the asking price for the parcel is too high.

He would not say what the price is, but the offer reportedly is about $300,000. Ramey said that it is unclear whether all areas of the property, including an adjacent home, are included in that price tag.

Two directors also said that the parcel is an attractive one.

"I have no problem looking at this piece of property compared to Hilliard Pond. This is a much more desirable piece of property," Carl Cummings said.

One resident, Frank Lupien, of 21 Sunset St., asked that the town should not pay for the appraisal, but all costs for purchase and site improvements before buying the property. He also recommended that the proposed purchase be placed before the voters as a referendum question.

Directors question need for law on food service

A food service ordinance proposed by the Town of Manchester's Health Department was questioned and criticized by members of the Board of Directors Tuesday night.

John Salcius of the Health Department spent about 30 minutes on the grill while directors raised questions about the proposal.

Salcius said that the department already has an inspection program in place that is carried out regularly in restaurants. The department is seeking the ordinance primarily to establish a system that would require new restaurants to apply for a license.

The present process of finding out about new restaurants is "cumbersome," he said.

Salcius said that the ordinance would not create any new work for the department, other than the paper work for issuing the licenses, and the department is not insisting that a fee for the licenses be charged.

The ordinance would assist them in finding new restaurants. It also would require that new establishments have at least one employee who is a certified food handler.

The board took no action on the matter Tuesday, but all five directors who attended had criticism, Carl Zinser asked if the Building Department notifies the Health Department when it receives a permit application for a new restaurant. Salcius said that he did not strike the woman with the knife, Brooks said. Brooks would not say whether there was someone else in the apartment at the time.

The woman, who was taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital shortly after the assault, had no injuries other than those inherent in the sexual assault, Brooks said. The woman is in her early 20s.

The burglar left the apartment with stolen items valued at under $100.

Brooks said police have a partial description of the assailant and are following up some leads in their investigation.

Cummings says opponents inconsistent on spending

State Rep. Theodore Cummings, the incumbent legislator in Manchester's 12th Assembly District, said today that his opponents should straighten out their stories about state spending.

"One candidate says the state overspends by 12 percent. The other says the state should cut back on spending. They are inconsistent," Cummings said.

Two Republican candidates — Walter Joyner and Fred Peck — are seeking the nomination to run against Cummings. In his statement, Cummings referred to neither by name.

Peck issued a statement Tuesday saying that the state should use its surplus before bonding to build a courthouse in Manchester. Joyner previously has commented on cutting back on state spending.

"It seems that some of the potential candidates don't have their act together," Cummings said.

"While these statements may be good for attracting votes, there isn't much fact behind them," he said.

He said that the state's $80 million surplus was used to increase the distribution of money to cities and towns in Connecticut. Cummings received more than $800,000 this year, he said.

He said he would make for a modest tax increase," he said.

He said that any future surplus should be conserved and used in the same manner.

"That's consistent, and it's in the best interest of all the residents of the state," he said.

Burglar armed with knife rapes woman in apartment

News for senior citizens

By WALLY J. FORTIN

Hi, Red Sox fans. Tomorrow is your day, as we will be going to Boston in hopes of getting the Sox back in the winning trail. The bus will leave our center at 9:30 a.m., so we ask you folks who have signed up to be here around 9 a.m.

We have a little surprise for you. Because of a break in the price of the tickets, every one will receive a bag lunch consisting of a tasty ham sandwich, dessert and fruit juice. Now you'll have something to munch on during the game. On the way home we will stop at the York Steak House for dinner. (This, of course, will be on your own.)

The news here at the center starts with our Friday afternoon setback games. We had 23 players and the winners were Josephine Schuetz, 126; Francis Fike, 123; Bill Stone, 122; Bob Schubert, 120; Bert Turner, 118; Oscar Cappuccio, 118; Archie Houghtaling, 119.

On Monday, the big deal was signing up for a day at Galilee, R.L., and as of this writing we filled two buses, and now have a waiting list.

Trips procedures
Every once in a while it becomes necessary for me to tell you the procedure we follow in registering for our trips. It is done on a first come basis with one person signing up for no more than two people. We will not take registration ahead of time nor will we take it over the phone until we give the members a chance to sign up in person.

Registration starts around 8 a.m., but we have no control as to when people will start to show up. Some come as early as 5:30 a.m. and try the door, which naturally is locked at that time. They then go back to their car to wait and first in these people are considered first in line.

For the most part, everyone knows just where they show up and we have very little trouble. Once in a while we run into a problem and that is the reason for explaining this procedure. All we ask is your cooperation and everyone will be taken care of.

Back to trips
Back to trips. A week from this Thursday we will be going to the Saratoga Race Track and at this writing we have four seats left. We will take both buses, and we hope we can fill the second bus. Anyone interested should call our office, 643-5310, before Monday. Remember, at this time you'll be seeing some of the best horses in the country as well as the top jockeys.

Come next Monday, we sign up for the five-day, four-night stay in Yarmouth on Cape Cod. Because it's a real bargain, we are limited to one bus on Sept. 11 and one bus on Sept. 25. When signing up for this trip, you can have your choice of either date on a first come basis. Once we fill the first bus then we automatically go to the bus for the 25th. The complete package includes bus ride, motel room, breakfast and dinner each day. You'll be a half block from the ocean and there will be programs planned for your interest, including golf. All this, plus tips, except for the maid, at $109 per person, double occupancy. We will have a few single rooms at $139 each.

Pinochle games
Monday afternoon we had 48 players for our pinochle games and the lucky winners were Ed Scott, 816; R. Schubert, 813; Grace Windsor, 793; Leon Falot, 787; Olive Houghtaling, 787; Tom Tompkins, 774; Paul Schuetz, 772; Bess Noonan, 772; Ann Thompson, 766; Vincent Borello, 758; Mina Reuther, 754; Mike Haberman, 747.

In the morning we had 25 players out in the green and the low gross scores were Joseph (Gardish), 47; Irvin Gardish, 45; Joseph Quinn, 45; Vince Porter, 45. Low net scores were Herb Laquerre, 31; Henry Rau, 30; Dick Giacomine, 34.

We're still open
Some of the members are getting confused about whether we are still open or not. We are indeed open and our programs are rolling along. We have slowed down some because at this time of the year many are on vacation.

We will be closed to programs in the last week of August because we need time to put the floors back in good condition for all the action in our fall program.

Our good friend Mae Tivnan is back home recuperating from a recent fall and Henry Berry is able to get out once in a while after having hip surgery. Violet Dion is in the Manchester hospital and today she had an operation on her hand. Our sincere heartfelt condolences to Mrs. Doris (Cooper) Gobell whose husband Herbert passed away this past Sunday.

The big picnic
Don't forget that this Sunday is the big picnic in Center Springs Park. It's the day when many of the youth in town have planned an afternoon of fun and games at 1:30 p.m.

just for you senior citizens. The action starts at 1 p.m., ending around 5 p.m., and you'll have some nice goodies to munch on.

The picnic will be held right next to the skating rink lodge and there is ample parking right near there. It is suggested that for your comfort you should bring your own lawn chair. Try to attend as you'll be glad you did and the young folks will be happy because they are working hard to make it an enjoyable day for all.

About town
Manchester's Senior Citizens Pinochle Group will sponsor a game Thursday at 9:45 a.m. at the Army & Navy Club. Play is open to all senior citizens.

The Old Guard will meet Thursday at 10 a.m. at Emanuel Lutheran Church for a bus trip to Fenway Park, Boston.

The public is welcome to attend a mid-week Holy Communion Service tonight at 7:30 at Concordia Lutheran Church, 40 Pitkin St.

Ferguson criticized for staying neutral

At least some members of the Manchester Republican Town Committee feel that the town chairman should back the party-endorsed candidate in the 12th Assembly District primary.

Thomas Ferguson, GOP town chairman, has said that he does not live in the 12th District and does not plan to endorse either Walter Joyner or Fred Peck, the party's two candidates for the assembly seat nomination.

Joyner was selected by a 143 vote of the town committee members who live in the 12th District. Peck was chosen by a 107 vote.

Clarence "Bud" Brown, a town committee member, said, "I don't see how he can be neutral."

He plans to discuss the matter with Ferguson, he said.

Cora no threat for two days

MIAMI (UPI) — Cora, the season's first Atlantic hurricane, packed 80 mph sustained winds and gales up to 100 mph today, but forecasters said the storm would not be a threat to land for at least two days.

In an advisory issued at 10:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday, the National Hurricane Center said Hurricane Cora was located at latitude 14.0 north and 65.5 west, or about 1,450 miles east-southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Cora will gradually build to about 90 mph in the next 36 hours, said forecaster Joe Pelissier, "but it will still be too far away to hurt anyone immediately."

The hurricane was moving west at 15 to 20 mph, and Pelissier said it would continue to move in that direction and "maybe a little northwest for the next three days."

Weather satellites have been tracking the hurricane, which is still out of range of the Air Force's "Hurricane Hunter" planes.

Pelissier said it was much too soon to predict Cora's path.

"It could just curve out to sea, as some storms do, and never hit land. About one-third of the hurricanes that form that far out at that latitude continue to west into the Caribbean Sea. The other two-thirds curve north. Some of them hit the U.S. mainland, some curve out to sea," Pelissier said.

Forecasters had been watching Cora since Sunday, when it still was in the depression stage. It strengthened as it moved westward across the Atlantic.

Meanwhile a tropical depression that had been churning across the eastern Caribbean Sea broke up into an area of rain squalls over the Windward Islands Tuesday and lost its circulation. The hurricane center said it would not issue further statements on the system unless it rebuilds.

In Paris, it firmed marginally to 4.3835 francs compared with Tuesday's close of 4.3830.

It also recovered slightly in Tokyo, closing the day at 187.5565 yen against 187.5040 at Tuesday's close.

Gold increased 50 cents to $207.625 an ounce at the Zurich opening, and opened at $207 in London, 12 1/2 cents ahead of Tuesday's close. It was fixed at a record $208 in London, $1.25 over the overnight close.

It topped the previous record fix set Aug. 1 by 50 cents.

The dollar slid to record lows for the second day running on key European money markets today, but recovered slightly against the Japanese yen. Gold again reacted to the weaker dollar and hit fresh peaks in London and Zurich.

The dollar opened at a new low of 1.6875 Swiss francs in Zurich and slid quickly to 1.67875 against 1.65275 overnight.

Dealers said there was no new element in the continuing decline. "The dollar is under pressure everywhere, and it will remain like this as long as Washington doesn't show any interest in its currency," one dealer said.

Another dollar low was registered against the West German Deutschemark in Frankfurt where it opened at 1.9075, down from its record low of 1.9800 at Tuesday's close.

The dollar lost a further 20 points against sterling, opening at $1.9360 to the pound in London, and moved down to $1.9355 in early trading.

The dollar also weakened in Brussels, to $2.14 Belgian francs from $2.30 Tuesday, and Amsterdam where it went to 2.1495 guilders from 2.116 overnight.

Mayor says Philadelphia was patient with MOVE

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — "We demonstrated patience and tolerance for their abuses against our community far and beyond what civilized people have a right to expect," Mayor Frank L. Rizzo said Tuesday, following a gunbattle between police and the radical back-to-nature group MOVE that left one officer dead.

"There is no question that MOVE fired the first shot," Rizzo, the city's former police commissioner, said. "The adversary in this case was an uncivilized force, we were forced to cope with according to civilized rules."

A year-long confrontation between the city and MOVE exploded early Tuesday when police, heavily armed with guns and tear gas and supported by firemen with high-pressure water cannons, attempted to evict MOVE members from their ramshackle West Philadelphia home.

But the members, who last week defied a court order to vacate the dilapidated home, defied police as well, touching off a violent shootout in which 23-year veteran Police Officer Joseph Ramp, 52, was killed. Four police officers, five firemen and a MOVE member were wounded.

When the gunfire ceased after about four minutes, twelve MOVE members and sympathizers had been arrested and later were charged with murder, weapons violations and conspiracy.

By mid-afternoon, bulldozers and cranes had flattened the house. Tear gas was shot into the house and firemen sprayed water from high-powered hoses into the basement where MOVE members had barricaded themselves after refusing to obey the order to surrender given over police bullhorns.

"We gave them numerous opportunities to come out and surrender," said Police Commissioner Joseph O'Neill, who also spoke at the news conference where numerous weapons taken from the house were displayed.

O'Neill said MOVE members pushed a naked baby out the window to use it as a shield. However, he said police grabbed the baby unharmed.

Eleven children ranging in age from 11 months to eight years, who were taken from the home, were turned over to the Department of Welfare.

The police assault on the dilapidated home was a last effort to end a running confrontation dating back to the group's founding in 1972 as the Community Action Movement.

Opinion

Housing and inflation

It was not good news that prospective home buyers have been facing the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. In June, a board survey showed, the average new house in the United States cost almost $83,000. That is an increase of nearly $9,800 from one year ago.

Existing home prices changing hands in June were lower, but not by much. The average price for a used home sold in June was $83,700. What these prices reflect, of course, are national averages. Home prices vary considerably from community to community, and between regions.

Other editors say:

The decision of a federal court judge in Florida to permit Fedorek Fedorenko, accused Nazi war criminal, to keep his American citizenship was justified on the basis of the evidence presented against him.

Fedorenko, a former Waterbury resident who retired from Scovill Mfg. Co. six years ago, denied that he whipped and shot Jews in the notorious Nazi prison camp at Treblinka while he was a guard there during World War II. He claimed he was forced to be a guard after the Nazis took him as a prisoner.

Judge Norman C. Roetger noted that Fedorenko also was a victim of Nazi aggression. He said that the burden of proof that he had committed atrocities at the prison was not met. During the trial some of the elderly witnesses were vague about identifying him.

The judge said it appeared that some had been coached on what to say. He criticized the "heavily theatrical" and the shouts of demonstrators at the courthouse for the death penalty.

Fedorenko admitted lying on his naturalization papers when he came to this country 35 years ago, but said he did it to prevent being sent to the Soviet Union. A native of Ukraine he stated falsely that he had been a farmer in Poland when he was taken prisoner by the Nazis.

What a new pope may mean to Americans

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer
Ordination of women, birth control, priestly celibacy and relations with non-Catholics all are issues that many Catholics believe will receive new consideration by the next pope.

The death of Pope Paul VI left the Roman Catholic world preparing for new leadership, but what change, if any, a new pontiff may bring to the Vatican remains a matter of hope and speculation.

Popes, like Supreme Court justices in the United States, cannot be typed by their past records. The office changes the man as much as the man changes the office.

In the United States, with 50 million of the world's 700 million Catholics, the church has been on the cutting edge of the dramatic changes in modern religious life.

Capital Fare

By ANDREW TULLY
WASHINGTON - There is indeed such a thing as a dangerous bore - Benedict Arnold and Aaron Burr come easily to mind as men whose blabbermouth politicking imperilled the safety of the weaning United States.

And then there is Philip Agee. One wishes to dismiss him as merely an obsessive dullard. In detail how to identify CIA personnel, and will contain detailed biographies of more than 700 U.S. intelligence operatives around the globe. In short, the work is intended to thwart the CIA's efforts to operate secretly in unfriendly areas of the world where identification of its spies could expose them to sudden death.

Well, Agee announced in Fidel Castro's captive capital plans to establish a worldwide network of "agents" to monitor and operate CIA personnel and methods of operation. He has gathered five American leftists, including two other former CIA employees, to act as a kind of hoc committee in charge of treason.

The Agee and Schaaf blueprint could be dismissed as pure crackpotism were it not for America's tendency to stand still while being punched around by its enemies. But the two men obviously are the kind of bores who can do a lot of damage.

where the church has to live at peace with Protestants, Jews and a hundred other varieties of religious belief and non-belief, tolerance for dissent is a way of life and the church has learned to live with it.

The new pope's impact will not be limited to Roman Catholics. A central question Protestant and Orthodox church officials will ask is whether the new pope will continue to follow Paul's innovations and openness to the ecumenical movement.

Open forum Respected true lady

To the editor:
May I offer a response to your editorial on the Democratic convention. "They will debate," a welcome if issues are discussed. I also hope our news media will now report on issues.

I found Killian to be arrogant, rude and evasive to questions from the public - a man who will shout, attack and browbeat the public.

I listened also as Killian said as governor, he would have vetoed the recently passed bottle bill. Here is a bill, of which the date of implementation was deliberately set back in hopes the next governor can repeal it.

For example, they have a new book coming out soon. The title is "Dirty Work: The CIA in Western Europe." I have not seen a copy of this work, but you can bet the mortgage money that it will not present the CIA as a bunch of selfless heroes.

New verdict on jury duty

By DON GRAFF
Citizenship isn't all rights and privileges. It also involves obligations. Among these, jury duty probably ranks with the least popular for most citizens, right down there with paying taxes.

Computers also are being used in locating moved and missing jury candidates and to deliver notifications, at significant savings in time and expense.

The real test of the innovations is probably to be found in the response of the jurors themselves. In the case of St. Louis, there has been no decrease in exemption requests. But there has been a drop in the number of excuses granted. This because the speeding up of the process and the cutoff of the waiting time for jury candidates has made court administrators less sympathetic to excuses.

The computer also assigns specific groups of prospective jurors to each courtroom and provides printouts of such basic information to the selection process as names, addresses and occupations.

Secretaries set vote on factfinder's plan

EAST HARTFORD - The 20-member executive board of the school secretarial union is scheduled to vote Thursday night on the state factfinder's report, which was released last week.

The factfinder's suggested salary increase is closer to the board's request than it is to the union's. The union had asked for a 10 percent salary hike for a three-year period. The board wanted a three percent increase, but it was willing to go higher if the union made concessions in the language of the contract.

They had been plagued with the problem of flooding from the Willow Brook, a tributary of the Connecticut River, which runs an east-west course roughly parallel to Silver Lane.

An old culvert, built in 1937, was too small to handle the flow of water going under Forbes Street during heavy storms. When it rained, the water would run off into the yards of some of the residents, sometimes even reaching their garages or homes.
