Assassin admits stories conflict

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James Earl Ray admitted today he has given conflicting stories to House investigators, but said these "small errors" do not dispute his denial that he shot Martin Luther King Jr. In his second day of testimony before the House Assassinations Committee, Ray said the initial testimony he gave to committee staff members at Brushy Mountain Prison in Tennessee was not based on a thorough review of the case. "It was my intention to tell the truth," Ray said. "I wanted to be as factual as possible because of the problem of (my) credibility. There have been some small errors in details. Some confusion in dates." Ray said in his opening testimony Wednesday that he never shot King and was several blocks away from the murder scene having his car serviced at a gas station at the time King was killed.

U.S. food safety experts have plans to ban nitrite

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government food safety experts consider the latest cancer evidence against the most preservative nitrite so damaging they already have drawn up a plan to ban it completely, it was learned today. The joint Agriculture Department-Food and Drug Administration action plan, still undergoing scrutiny elsewhere within the administration, calls for a proposal to be published this fall for a phase-out of the chemical now used in more than 9.1 billion pounds of bacon, hot dogs, lunch meat, cured fish and other products each year. The plan warns some of America's favorite foods may never taste the same again, and consumers, retailers and others who come into contact with foods in the post-nitrite era will have to be educated to avoid meat spoilage and the deadly poison that sodium nitrite prevents — botulism. "An attempt to prohibit all uses of nitrite in human food immediately would be unwise," the 50-page docu-

Fund loss upsets MHA

MANCHESTER (UPI) — A letter that states the number of units of the authority's housing program was turned down about four weeks ago. Thompson stated in his letter to the authority that another reason for disapproval was that not enough had been provided for in lower income, non-elderly housing in Manchester. Authority member Joseph Danyliw questioned the reason saying, "How can we do to get the money in the future? What is the authority not doing which it should be doing?" he asked. Dennis Phelan, executive director of the authority, reported that he filed an application with HUD on July 31 for funds to buy and renovate 20 units of subsidized housing. He said he also applied for 100 units of elderly housing, as authorized by the authority, with the Department of Community Affairs. He was told by DCA that the Manchester Housing Authority application from a year ago for 250 housing units is still on the active file and could be considered as well.

District to turn over check for aerialscope

The Eighth Utilities District will present a check in the amount of $167,000 to the Mack Co. of Hartford for the district's new aerialscope fire truck Monday at 7 p.m. at the District Firehouse. The action will be part of the district's monthly meeting. The purchase of the truck was approved by Eighth District voters in June and the truck arrived at the firehouse last week. The truck, believed to be only one of three of its kind in Connecticut, can be used for rescue work in two and three-story buildings. The truck has a platform on an arm that extends about 80 feet above the ground. A group of district firefighters are involved in training sessions every evening this week under the supervision of the Mack Co. They are learning to drive and operate the truck and its special apparatus.

Town delays dental bids until clinic site is found

The Town of Manchester has decided to delay the opening of bids for dental clinic equipment until a new site is found for the clinic. Bids for the equipment — including dental lights, chairs and instruments — were scheduled to be opened today. The clinic was to be located in Bentley School and was expected to open later this year. Last week, however, the town received a price estimate for dental clinic renovations at the school. The price was estimated to be $71,000, about $50,000 more than the town had anticipated. Because of this, the town has decided to relocate the clinic. Town Manager Robert Weiss suggested in a letter to the Board of Directors that the clinic might be relocated at the present Senior Citizens Center once the proposed new center, expected to be located at the Green School, is ready to open. "We didn't want to open the bids now and jeopardize the integrity of the bids," Maurice Pass, director of general services, said. Pass said that a new site for the clinic could result in a change for some of the costs for equipment installed. He said that he doubted the change in site would result in any major change in equipment costs included in the bid. The decision was made, however, to delay the bid opening until a new site is selected.

Church plans Bible school

Anyone may participate. For registration, call 643-9096 or 643-9823.

Ferguson reiterates stand on endorsement

Thomas Ferguson, Manchester's Republican town chairman, has reiterated his stand that he does not plan to endorse either of the party's candidates in the 12th Assembly District until after the Sept. 12 primary. Ferguson said that both candidates — Walter Joyner and Fred Peck — are capable, and he will support whichever one wins the primary. He also said that he feels both Joyner and Peck can defeat the incumbent in the 12th Assembly District, State Rep. Theodore Cummings, who also is Democratic town chairman. Ferguson said that Peck also would have received an endorsement if he had approached the Republican Executive Committee for one. Joyner received 14 votes to Peck's eight at a town committee meeting Aug. 2. Peck has indicated that he will primary and is expected to submit petitions this week. "I consider both of the men in the 12th either of the party's candidates in the 12th Assembly District until after the Sept. 12 primary. Charter path uncertain; comments will be noted

The Charter Revision Commission will consider the comments made Monday night by members of the Manchester Board of Directors about conflict of interest, but the final route the commission will take is uncertain, its chairman said today. Joy Robinson, chairman of the commission, said that it can either drop the entire proposal, make no changes, or make minor changes based on comments by town directors. The commission meets Monday at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building's Hearing Room. It will reconvene those proposed charter changes that the Board of Directors did not approve. The revised proposals then will be sent back to the board. Proposed charter changes approved by the board will be placed on the November ballot. The voters must approve a charter change for it to go into effect. The directors Monday turned down the Charter Revision Commission's proposal concerning conflict of interest, which included the formation of an Ethics Commission. Board members expressed concern about a provision of the proposal that would prohibit members of town decision-making bodies from appearing before their own or other decision-making bodies for business reasons. Directors said that they felt such a provision would be too strict and would limit those who would serve on town boards and commissions, including the Board of Directors. Some directors indicated that they support the idea of an Ethics Commission, which would rule on cases of alleged or possible conflict of interest. "We're going to consider some of the comments that were made last Monday," Robinson said. He said that major changes cannot be made in the proposal now because of the time deadlines. This leaves his commission with three options, Robinson said. It can make no changes and resubmit the same plan to the board, it can drop the proposal or it can make minor changes to attempt to satisfy the board's concerns, he said. He said that he could not predict which of the three options the commission would choose.

Hancock agents end strike

John Hancock life insurance agents ended a strike today that began July 21. Agents throughout the nation Wednesday approved a new agreement. The three-year contract, retroactive to June 29, provides for improvements averaging $32.72 per week for each agent over the three years. Gus Samiotis, alternate negotiator for the New England area, said that the contract includes significant increases in commissions and benefits, including pension plan improvements and increased maternity benefits for women agents. Samiotis also said part of the back-to-work agreement assures there will be no loss of seniority, and no loss of insurance benefits. He said the dental plan was eliminated entirely by the contract. The one the company had previously was a mandatory plan and unsatisfactory, Samiotis said. The New England area was the only area that turned it down by a vote of 702 against to 519 in favor. Nationwide, Samiotis said, the vote was 2,401 for and 1,456 opposed. Locally, the results were 38 to 15, 15 opposed, and one abstention.

Police report

East Hartford
The Gasland station at 600 Main St. suffered its second robbery within 24 hours Wednesday night. Unlike the first, however, no suspects were arrested this time. Police said the manager of the station was struck in the face when he turned around to see who was following her. Police said a black male allegedly took three envelopes containing $800 from the manager's back pocket and fled into the woods at the rear of the station. The robbery occurred at 9:57 p.m. Wednesday. Early Wednesday morning, there was another robbery. Paul A. Canapari, 25, of 391 Foote Road was charged with first-degree robbery, police said. Both cars were westbound and Bamford was attempting to enter the Interstate Highway 86 eastbound entrance ramp from the right lane, police said. Latham was treated and released from Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Matthew E. McKiernan, 20, of 180 Grande Ave., East Hartford, was charged with operating under the influence on West Center Street. Court date is Aug. 29.

Jill M. Gagnon, 18, of 51 Santana Drive was charged with fourth-degree larceny in connection with a shoplifting incident at The Deal, 705 Main St. After she was arrested and taken to police headquarters, police said she took a razor from her handbag and slashed her wrist. She was taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital for treatment and released. She was released by police on a non-surety bond for court appearance Sept. 4.

Jury sets more damages in long Xerox-SCM suit

HARTFORD (UPI) — One juror said he would do it all over again, but the trial judge in the Xerox-SCM antitrust suit says 14 months may be too long a period to ask citizens to serve on a jury. Winding up the longest and one of the most expensive jury trials in federal court history, the nine-member panel Wednesday said SCM sustained an additional $25.6 million in damages from Xerox's monopolizing the market for copying machines using plain paper. It said earlier SCM was entitled to $11.7 million for cumulative profits it would have earned prior to and during the period between Jan. 1, 1969, and Dec. 31, 1976, had Xerox not frozen the market. Thus the potential damage award could reach $112 million because under antitrust law, damages can be trebled in such suit. But the final dollar amount will be fixed by U.S. District Court Judge Jon N. Newman who took the matter under advisement. Xerox, which has headquarters in Stamford, Conn., claims SCM could have reasonably avoided sustaining any damages. That question also will be considered by Newman, who said he might be several weeks before he reaches a final decision. Newman told the jury both sides will now file briefs dealing with questions of law regarding the recommended damages. He said the case could eventually reach the Supreme Court and as the jury left the Main Street courthouse, he said there was a serious question as to whether "it's fair to ordinary citizens to require them to serve on a case that requires this long a trial." A spokesman for SCM said the New York-based company was "very, very pleased on the $25.6 million and the previous verdict concerning what damages SCM suffered but for Xerox monopoly and illegal exclusion of SCM starting in January 1969." Paul H. Elicker, president of SCM, said, "We have been successful in proving Xerox Corp. unlawfully established and unlawfully maintained a monopoly and that this monopoly caused injury to SCM Corp. and its shareholders." But a Xerox spokesman said, "We are confident this will never be entered as a valid judgment." He said Xerox will continue to fight the jury's recommendation. SCM originally sought $500 million, which would have been trebled to $1.5 billion, for being excluded from the market in 1964 and 1969. But the jury found Xerox had violated antitrust laws from 1969 on, thus reducing possible damages. The jury began hearing testimony in June 1977, after lawyers for both sides filed over 40,000 pages of evidence and got statements from corporate officials in the United States, Japan, Switzerland and elsewhere. The trial was also known as one of the most expensive on record. SCM has estimated litigation has cost it $20 million since the case was filed in 1973. Xerox gave no official guess, but in earlier reports spokesmen estimated the company would spend $750,000 a month, or $9 million a year.

Policeman's death probed

NEW BRITAIN (UPI) — An autopsy was to be performed today on the body of a New Britain police lieutenant who died when hit by a bullet from his own revolver, police said.

Lt. Norman R. Allard, 46, of Southington, apparently shot himself in the chest Wednesday afternoon while cleaning his .38-caliber revolver, New Britain Police Chief Thomas J. Ormsby said. "At this point we're calling it an accident," Ormsby said. "There was a sergeant and a deputy chief right there when it happened."

Ormsby said Allard was still breathing when put in the ambulance, but a spokesman at New Britain General Hospital said he was dead on arrival. State Police public information officer John McLeod said New Britain Deputy Chief Donald Parsons and Sgt. Albert Valentine were in the same room with Allard when the gun went off. Ormsby and McLeod said Allard joined the New Britain police force in 1959. He was promoted to sergeant in 1968 and lieutenant in 1977.

Perplexing question

We are back to square one in the matter of conflicts of interest for elected and appointed town officials. We do not have any rules telling them what they cannot do. As a consequence we do not have any guidelines telling them what they can do and not be in conflict of interest. It leaves everyone just where he was before the Charter Revision Commission worked hard trying to find a possible solution, which was ultimately rejected by the Board of Directors. Each person who is a potential office seeker or potential appointee must decide for himself whether there is a possibility he will find himself in real or imagined conflict during his term of office. Each incumbent office holder or appointee must decide for himself whether to pursue his business with the town while he is in office and face the conflict trap or leave office so he can pursue his business with the town immune from the danger. That would be great in an ideal world. Each person facing the problem personally would have the sensitivity to

Science is fine, but people can't be blamed for wishing that the scientists would make up their minds so we'd know what we can eat without killing ourselves slowly, and what we should keep off the table. A few years ago, the "bad boy" chemical was saccharin. The boys from Washington mandated that a warning label be placed on containers alerting buyers of the risk of cancer. But hold the phone The Journal of the American Medical Association has just finished a 1,000-patient study in Baltimore, and concludes there's no connection between saccharin and bladder cancer. How do you like it? Who's right and who's wrong will be left to others. But one speaker, Dr. George V. Mann of Vanderbilt University went too far at a symposium on Cape Cod on "Controversies in Nutrition." He said that the "diet-heart propaganda" was merely a "money-raiser for segments of the food industry, a fund-raiser for the American Heart Association..." We're not sure what we'll eat for dinner tonight, but we're not swallowing such a cheap charge against the Heart Association. Pawtucket (R.I.) Evening Times

UDAG: Cutting edge of Carter's urban policy

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Harris took over management of HUD, one of federal government's most demoralized agencies, she made it clear her first goal was implementation rather than innovation. Mrs. Harris has, however, made one major innovation: the $1.2 billion, three-year Urban Development Action Grant program. And the program is emerging, as the secretary said recently, as the "cutting edge" of President Carter's effort to shape a comprehensive national urban policy.  In announcing the second round of awards earlier this month, Mrs. Harris said the grants "are perfect examples of the new partnership between the government, the private sector and community groups, working to build the local tax base, create new permanent jobs for the unemployed and the underemployed and combat physical decay." It was precisely such goals that Carter hoped to achieve when he outlined his "new partnership" urban policy in March. Not coincidentally, Mrs. Harris chaired the cabinet-level, interagency task force that shaped Carter's urban policy.  What makes the Action Grant program different from other administration housing and urban programs is that it is targeted to the 300 economically distressed metropolitan cities and the 1,800 distressed smaller cities.  It differs from the Community Development Block Grant program, HUD's major urban funding program in two respects — the targeting on distressed and the demand, in the Action Grant program, that the funds serve as leverage for a high degree of private money for projects.  In order to qualify for the funds, the cities must show at least three "symptoms of distress" such as unemployment at the 7.69 percent level; 34.15 percent of housing constructed before 1940; 11.2 percent population at the poverty level; lags in per capita income and population growth; stagnating manufacturing and retail employment.  To date, Congress has appropriated $400 million for each of the fiscal years 1978, 1979 and 1980 for the

"That was a good take, fellas. But Chancellor Cheeseburger was blocking out the warning label."

Religion: porn's new target?

By LEE RODERICK
WASHINGTON — Pornography goes through cycles. Three years ago the 'in' thing was sadomasochism. Since then it has centered on children, with even major publications such as Playboy exploiting the very young. Children are still favorite targets, although the trend now includes religion as well.  The Rev. Morton A. Hill, who heads a major New York-based citizens group called Morality in Media, adds that he recently received a large set of anti-religion porn films that sell for $50 each in adult bookstores and through the mails. They typically portray church leaders, including nuns, in explicit sex acts. "Satanic materials on the black arts today, including devil worship, are part of the new trend," said Hill in a telephone interview with Scripps League Newspapers. "You'll also find more slaps at religion on television shows as well as in some publications available on regular newsstands, such as Harvard Lampoon."  Hill was a member of the President's Commission on Obscenity and Pornography from 1967-70. Although the full commission suggested doing away with anti-obscenity laws, Hill and others wrote a minority report with an opposite view. The minority view was the one accepted by Congress and the Supreme Court. "Legally, we're gaining ground today against obscenity," said the Catholic priest. "We win consistently in the Supreme Court. But we're losing ground on enforcement. There are 90 U.S. attorneys throughout the United States; if they were doing their job, we wouldn't have a pornography problem." Hill says current anti-obscenity laws are "excellent. They are very strong and there's no doubt about their meaning, thanks to key decisions by the Supreme Court."  Three basic federal laws are supposed to stop pornographic materials from being mailed, shipped through interstate transportation, or entering through customs. There are also three tests laid down by the high court defining obscene material: (1) Does it appeal to a prurient interest? (2) Is it patently offensive? (3) Is it devoid of serious literary, scientific, artistic, or political value? If the laws are both strong and clear, why doesn't the Justice Department enforce them? Hill's answer is startling: "Edward Levi, the former attorney general, told U.S. attorneys not to enforce them. His order hasn't been changed under Griffin Bell, the current attorney general." A spokesman for Bell told this reporter that "it is true we haven't got a nationwide campaign going against obscenity." He denied, however, that government attorneys explicitly have been told to go easy on the purveyors of porn.  Other sources say pressure from the American Civil Liberties Union, which has invoked the argument of violation of free speech, has been a key factor in influencing government laxness in enforcing antiobscenity laws. "If this was in the area of taxes, you can be sure that the open and rampant violations now going on would swiftly be dealt with the IRS," notes Hill. He adds that finding the source of obscene materials is not the problem, as many of the items include a mailing address where recipients can write for more. Lax enforcement at the federal level has percolated down to the state and local levels, according to Hill. "Local officials say, 'Why should we penalize the ticket sellers, when nothing is being done at the federal level to stop the distributors?'" "One problem in fighting pornography is that those people who would be most concerned if they knew what was going on are the people who don't see the stuff," explained Hill. "Viewing obscenity does lead to a loss of religious faith and to family problems. A family needs to pray together to stay together. But when you destroy morals, faith goes, too, the family breaks down, and divorce often follows."  How can families fight obscenity in their communities? "Public opinion is a powerful tool and families should object, by phone calls, letters and other means, to those things they find objectionable," said Hill. "Picketing can be very effective in the cases of sex book shops or sex movie houses." He also suggests concerned citizens write to President Carter to urge his administration to enforce anti-obscenity laws. The president of Morality in Media adds that, "we can have more programs showing love, truth, and good taste movies, literature, and TV, if we work together to demand them."  Scripps League Newspapers 1978

Free money

To the editor:
Manchester continues to be the focal point of various Hartford interests in an all-out drive for low-cost, low-income housing to serve inner city residents. Why is such great emphasis and pressure directed on a town which is 10 miles from Hartford and not even adjacent to that city? The answer is quick to come by, if one simply attends Board of Directors' meetings and reads the daily news items in our papers.

The Hartford HUD office has learned that the lure of "free money" is too much for Town Manager Robert Weiss, Human Services Chief Alan Mason and the Democratically controlled Board of Directors to pass up. These grant-happy town officials pay little or no attention to the dangerous booby traps and undemocratic strings attached thereto.

Despite the consistent warnings and pleas by many alert citizens to kick the dollar-drug habit and reject HUD funds, the above mentioned officials refused to get the message. But, oh how obedient they are to the HUD dictators! They are so afraid to pass up the "free money" for big salaries and projects that are either nonessential or that should be paid for with town taxes upon taxpayer approval.

Why don't our town officials have the guts to stand up to HUD and their inner city political chums, and tell them to mind their own housing business? Let those city slickers show us what can be done for low-income housing by using the former Arrow-Hart complex on Broad Street and the large acreage where the Underwood and other factories once stood.

Why not give the voters of Manchester the right to decide on any future involvement with the rulers who dangle those HUD grants? Isn't this the way it should be in a democracy? Truly yours, Vincent Kelly, 34 S. Adams St., Manchester

Thoughts

Finding happiness in life
We have considered several obstacles that can stand in the way of a person experiencing happiness in life; these being a low sense of self-worth, believing that happiness can be bought, and a lack of faith. Today through Saturday, we think of other areas to be aware of in seeking to find happiness. The Thought for Today is to have things to do. Projects and dreams are both necessary in life if we are to be happy! Fatigue that we may experience may have little to do with the body's need for rest. Feeling exhausted can be the result of boredom; of not having enough to do. We think of household budgets and the management of our finances. The same kind of careful management applies to time itself; to build into each day a time for work, play, and reflection. Rev. Dr. James D. MacLaughlin, Second Congregational Church, Manchester

Far cry from 'direct vote'

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON (NEA) — It may look like flogging a dead horse, but at least one major conservative group is still trying to wring some fundraising mileage from the Panama Canal treaties — and in a fashion bordering on outright deception. Although the treaties were ratified months ago by the U.S. Senate and will not appear on any ballot in America this November, you'd never guess it from the "Dear Friend" appeal mailed out last month by the Council for Inter-American Security.  The fund-raising letter signed by council chairman Ronald Docksal, an aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, flatly asserts that "you will be able to vote 'yes' or 'no' on the Panama Canal treaty on Nov. 7, 1978." The Docksal letter insists that "you have that vote. It is indeed on your ballot... Only a conspiracy of silence in the major news media, and in the highest levels of government, can prevent the American people from using their vote on Nov. 7 to cancel the Panama Canal treaty." It requires an extremely careful reading of the four-page letter to discern that the readers "opportunity to have a direct vote" on the treaty "is some not on a ballot referendum question but rather in choosing members of the House of Representatives — who will vote next year on legislation implementing some aspects of the canal treaties."  On page four, Docksal finally gets around to saying that funds collected by the council will be used in an advertising campaign to "tell the American people: (1) here are the top five defense issues, including the Panama Canal treaty, and (2) here is how your congressman has voted on these five issues." That is a pretty long stretch from the "direct vote" promised on page one of the fund-raising letter, to put it mildly. But then, as P.T. Burnum used to say, there's a sucker born every minute." Langford School picked for energy saving study

EAST HARTFORD — The Langford School will be one of 20 schools across the nation picked for an energy conservation program. School Superintendent Eugene A. Diggs announced.

Diggs said today that the study is part of a program undertaken by Tennessee Inc. of Delaware to monitor the energy use of different schools and make recommendations on conservation.

Diggs said the study would begin sometime this year and would begin by examining historical data on previous heating costs.

The study is to include a broad segment of the nation's schools. Tennessee will look at new schools, schools built in the 1950s which have lots of glass, and older buildings.

Diggs said the Langford school was chosen because it's a new building (completed in 1972), it has an open-space interior with little glass on the exterior walls, and because it's air-conditioned. Another reason was because the school is primarily fueled by natural gas.

The audit is expected to last a year and will critique the energy savings or loss by the different school designs. Diggs said the Langford School study would not have an impact on other East Hartford schools.

"It's possible that an older school in Texas or Michigan may be more applicable for those buildings in East Hartford which were built in the 1950s," he said.

Soccer program boosted

EAST HARTFORD — The town's fledgling soccer program, which will enter its first season in the fall, received a boost when 20 volunteers showed up Wednesday night at an organizational meeting.

The town already has over 300 youths signed up in Grades 4 through 8. Rosters have been issued and a 16-team league is planned.

Last week, Fred Balet, director of parks and recreation, said at least 40 volunteers were needed to serve as coaches, referees, linemen and scorers.

Although there were not 40 at Wednesday's meeting, Balet said the signs were encouraging.

"It went very well," he said. "I'm very happy with the turnout last night."

Balet said most of those who showed up expressed an interest in coaching — that's the type of guy he is," Mrs. Stormont added.

Mrs. Stormont said her husband may take her on a trip to Hawaii. About 15 people are needed to make the program run successfully.

He didn't expect big win

EAST HARTFORD — David Stormont never expected to win a million dollars in Wednesday's Instant Bingo drawing at West Farm Mall, but he did come away $5,000 richer when it was over.

Stormont, 67, was one of 20 finalists in the $5 million drawing. He had $5,000.

"I was very happy with the $5,000," he said. "I never expected to win the million."

Stormont said the money "is in the bank and that's where it's going to stay for a while."

He said he has no immediate plans for the money, but he may take his wife, Eleanor, on a trip this winter. "I've been thinking about it, but he became a finalist, he wasn't excited," said Eleanor Stormont.

He never figured to be a millionaire — that's the type of guy he is," Mrs. Stormont added.

Legislators say Killian juggled budget figures

HARTFORD (UPI) — Four legislative chiefs who are backing Gov. Ella T. Grasso for reelection have accused her opponent, Lt. Gov. Robert Killian, of juggling figures in his claims the state is in a financial mess.

The four lawmakers, who have the most control over state spending, Wednesday issued a joint statement seeking to rebut Killian's claims of fiscal insolvency.

The House and Senate chairmen of the powerful Finance and Appropriations Committees accused Killian of "reckless use of budgetary figures" and "arbitrary projections of revenues and expenditures."

All four support Mrs. Grasso's bid for her second term as Connecticut's highest elected official.

Killian, who faces Mrs. Grasso in the state's first Democratic gubernatorial primary Sept. 12, said last Friday that she has been engaging in meaningless rhetoric instead of working for meaningful tax reform.

He repeated his charges Wednesday and chided Mrs. Grasso for letting legislative leaders handle her dirty work.

"These four skirt the issue — an irresponsible position for our Legislature's fiscal experts," Killian said in a statement.

"And, are they speaking for you, Mrs. Grasso?" the lieutenant governor asked.

Mrs. Grasso is unilaterally opposed to a state income tax and says she will never let one take effect, while his government, Killian also finds the prospect of an income tax distasteful, but he has said such a levy might be necessary in the future "unless we can come up with another solution to the fiscal mess."

In their statement, the four lawmakers charged Killian with "resorting to scare tactics to draw attention to his campaign." They said Killian had never protested the budget in his 3 1/2 years as lieutenant governor and suggested that politics was the only reason he was complaining now.

Later, one of the legislators, Sen. Robert Houley, D-Somers and Senate chairman of the Appropriations Committee, changed his mind.

"I take them back," Houley said. "In 1975, he did come to us. He expressed anger because we eliminated his $2,000 expense account. He was very irritable."

Joining Houley in issuing the statement were Rep. John G. Groppo, D-Winsted and House chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Rep. Gardner E. Wright, D-Bristol and House chairman of the Finance Committee, and Sen. Audrey Beck, D-Manfield and Senate chairman of the finance panel.

Houley, who is Mrs. Grasso's assistant campaign manager, said Killian failed to mention an estimated $13 million to $18 million surplus Mrs. Grasso produced this year.

Houley said Killian also overlooked the final payment made this year on a $100 million deficit she inherited from the Republican administration of former Gov. Thomas J. Meskill.

Also not mentioned was "a dramatic turn-around in unemployment" that reduced by one-half the state's jobless rate to 4.5 percent, Houley said.

Killian charged the Grasso administration overestimated state revenues and used $137 million in one-time funds to balance the budget.

He said the state may also have a $462 million shortfall next year because Mrs. Grasso has not met the financial obligations of a state Supreme Court decision ordering equal educational opportunities for Connecticut school children.

Killian says he'll name pro to police position

WALLINGFORD (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Robert Killian has promised a group of Connecticut police chiefs that if he were governor, he would name a professional policeman to the new post of commissioner of public safety.

Killian Wednesday told a meeting of the Police Association of Connecticut "only a top cop can manage an independent and non-partisan department of public safety."

The new agency, which comes into being Jan. 1 under the state's reorganization plan, will absorb the state police department along with other agencies.

Gov. Ella T. Grasso, who also addressed the policemen, has indicated she may choose a civilian to head the agency. She has also said she may choose one person to be both public safety commissioner and commanding officer of the state police.

Mrs. Grasso and Killian will face each other in the state's first Democratic gubernatorial primary on Sept. 12.

Edward P. Leonard, the man chosen by Mrs. Grasso in 1975 as state police commissioner, earlier this month announced he was resigning effective Aug. 25.

Leonard said he was quitting because of health problems and his desire "to remove the department from politics."

He said the creation of the public safety post will lead to politics and also keep the head of the state police behind a bureaucratic curtain without access to the governor.

Mrs. Grasso has indicated she won't name a commissioner until after the November elections.

Killian said if he becomes governor, "I won't let the Department of Public Safety create still another level of bureaucratic insulation between the governor and the state police."

"The director also must have direct access to the governor," Killian said.

Prosecutor need doubted

HARTFORD (UPI) — Democratic legislative leaders are suggesting the Office of Chief State's Attorney may be a longer for necessary.

"And the leaders say now that a search for a permanent replacement for the post is underway; it provides an excellent opportunity to investigate if the office is needed."

Connecticut's first Chief State's Attorney, Joseph T. Gormley Jr., submitted his resignation last week, and said he will take a job with a private law firm Tuesday, Chief Justice John Cotter named Austin McGuigan, head of a statewide organized crime task force, as a temporary replacement.

Senate President Joseph Fusillo, D-Hartford, said "the transition created by the Gormley resignation provides an ideal opportunity for us to examine whether or not the office of the chief state's attorney is an effective instrument of the criminal justice system."

Earlier this year, a legislative subcommittee studied Gormley's office and concluded the state's top prosecutor should be prevented in most instances from trying cases in the courtroom.

Gormley, who was reappointed to a second eight-year term in the spring, accused the lawmakers of trying to tie his office's hands.

Fusillo said Tuesday he has spoken with Senate Majority Leader Joseph Lieberman about the possibility of conducting another investigation of the office of the chief state's attorney in the coming legislative session.

Tolland County Mutual Aid installs new service center

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

Residents of Tolland County can rest assured that if they are in trouble, such as a fire, accident or a major disaster, that help will be on the way fast.

The Tolland County Mutual Aid Fire Association has just installed the most modern of dispatch equipment at a cost of a little over $100,000. The service is located in what used to be a private home at Tolland Center.

The massive modern console, a maze of 240 buttons, handles everything from a security system for the building itself to a National Warning System (NAWAS) which ties major operations centers together throughout the United States.

Overseeing the entire operation is Ronald Littell, head dispatcher and he works with a Board of Directors made up of representatives from several area fire departments.

Ray Gerger, president of the board, said the money to pay for the equipment was loaned by the federal government and will be completely paid back within 10 years.

The operation of the center itself is completely funded by the state. Each department using the center is assessed for the service received and occasionally private donations are made.

The Rockville Fire Department is the most recent to hook into the system. Up to a few weeks ago that department's calls went through the Vernon Police Station but the Vernon Department has been hooked in for some time.

In the new board is a direct intercom system with the Vernon Police and one that serves the entire center. If power is lost there is a three-way backup system on the generator.

Every call that comes in is typed and can be relayed instantly in case there is any question about the conversation.

The walls, as well as the floors of the room housing the console, are carpeted to help keep down the noise.

In the vernacular of the day you could say "You've come a long way baby" to the service which was established as a non-profit organization in 1950.

It was housed in the former Tolland County Jail which is next to the building it's now in. Littell said all of the dispatching was done by the jail guards and at that time only the Crystal Lake Fire Department in Ellington and the Tolland Department were being totally dispatched.

Littell said a few other departments answered their own fire emergency phone then using the county base for the coordination of their firefighting activities.

The county jail system was abolished in the late 1960s and in 1969 the house next door, which had been the home of the warden, was deeded to the county fire service and the service was incorporated.

The service then started to grow from one radio to a maze of radio frequencies. The office had been set up in the basement but with the new equipment was moved upstairs.

The center now dispatches for 20 fire departments, five fire department ambulances and five separate ambulance organizations. It also handles communications for the Tolland and Stafford Springs police and the state Department of Environmental Protection on a 24-hour basis.

The service is the main control center for the state's civil defense network. The center receives and

Executive session of Council expected to discuss police

COVENTRY — The Town Council will hold a special meeting tonight at 7:30 at the Town Hall for an executive session on personnel matters. The session is expected to involve a meeting with Town Manager Frank Connolly, who held hearings earlier this week on disciplinary action taken against three policemen by Chief Robert Kjelquist.

Ten of the 24 persons on the bus were taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital, by ambulance and treated for injuries ranging from bruises to injured ribs. The driver of the bus was Sherry Burkes of Hartford.

The Hebron Volunteer Fire Department responded to the scene of the accident which is still under investigation.

Merger of fire departments going to study committee

VERNON — Last month the Town Council approved the forming of a study committee to study the feasibility of merging the town's two fire departments. Mayor Frank McCoy has now announced the appointment of committee members.

Councilwoman Jane Lamb has been appointed chairman of the committee. Mrs. Lamb made the original request to have the two departments consolidated after there was a misunderstanding in responding to a Route 83 fire in June.

When the Charter Revision Commission was active last year, it considered the possibility of consolidating the departments but decided against it as had revision commissions before it.

When the town governments were consolidated about 15 years ago, the police departments and public works departments were also consolidated but not the fire departments which are both made up of volunteers.

Most of the department members were strongly against the merger and was feared the town might have to end up with a paid department if the merger went through.

Besides Mrs. Lamb, the mayor also appointed the following to the study committee: Morgan Campbell, mayor pro-tem, Stephen Marchant, council member; Mary Glen, a member of the former Charter Revision Commission; Robert Kelly, battalion chief of the Rockville Fire Department; James Trivigno Jr.; Kathleen Cassella Williams

GRAUGARD, deputy chief of the Vernon Department; and Ralph Zahner, a former fireman.

Besides studying the question of merger and setting up a time table and specific plan, the committee will also be charged with studying the position of fire marshal and look at sites for the location of a new fire station to replace Co. 2 on Route 30 in Vernon.

Town Attorney William Breslau was asked, by Mrs. Lamb, if the consolidation could be effected without having to go through the process of a charter change.

Breslau said he thinks a charter change would be necessary but Mrs. Lamb said she thinks it may be possible to amend the charter section concerning fire departments.

She said she was referring to the section of the charter, (under Chapter XV) concerning amendments to the charter. That section states that amendments can be proposed in the form of an ordinance either by the council or by initiative petition, provided the council doesn't adopt an ordinance proposing an amendment to the charter by less than seven affirmative votes. And that the number of signatures required on an initiative petition proposing an amendment be at least 10 percent of the total number of qualified electors of the town.

It further states, "An amendment, however proposed, shall become effective as a part of this charter when ratified at a regular or special election by a majority of those voting thereon provided that at least 20 percent of the electors entitled to vote on the question shall have voted."

The charter, in the section on fire departments, states that it is the intent of the charter that fire protection continue to be provided by the volunteer companies.

It specifically states that the town shall be divided into two fire protection areas, Rockville and Vernon.

However, it does state, that nothing in the charter would prevent agreements regarding the re-defining of jurisdictional service lines between the two departments. This was a suggestion that Donald Maguda, chief of the Rockville Department, made several weeks ago.

Mrs. Lamb said she will try to call a meeting of the study committee for Monday but the time and location will be announced later.

Notch Park opening delayed; needs commission approval

By DONNA HOLLAND
Herald Correspondent

BOLTON — Indian Notch Park, the town's newest recreational facility on Bolton Lake, was not completed yesterday as anticipated.

Douglas Cheney, Public Building Commission chairman, said there is some plumbing and electrical work to be finished and the entrance road and parking area needs work.

Cheney said when the work is substantially complete, it will be inspected by the commission and area needing correction will be taken care of.

Cheney said when everything meets the approval of the commission, the park will be accepted for the town and turned over to the park department.

The contractor for the park is Windham Sand and Stone Inc. The town received $111,000 for the project from the federal Economic Development Administration.

The project was originally scheduled to be completed by June 5. Delays caused by "bureaucratic hurdles," soil conditions, the weather and payment schedule, moved the completion date to August 15. When completed, it will be the town's first recreational facility with a swimming area.

Bolton candidate endorses fair campaign practices

BOLTON — Aloysius Ahearn, who is seeking the nomination on the Democratic ticket for state representative from the 55th District, has joined other area politicians in endorsing the Fair Campaign Practices Code.

"Ahearn, Louie Matsikas and Edward Williams, will be involved in a primary on Sept. 12.

"I fully endorse the principles of the Fair Campaign Practices Code and I intend to run a clean campaign based on the issues," Ahearn said.

He said the code recommended by the commission does not have the force of law. He said a similar code in New York was struck down by the New York Supreme Court on the grounds that certain aspects possibly infringed upon the first amendment rights of candidates.

Ahearn, who is deputy first selectman in Bolton, said "In my 11 years in politics, I have always run clean campaigns. Slurs upon a person's race, age, creed, sex, or national origin, or the use of the 'dirty trick' are despicable political weapons. I have been the victim of a few questionable 'tricks' in the past and I know that some politicians will stoop to any level to win an election."

"As far as I am concerned no election or public office means that much to me that I would compromise my integrity or sacrifice my self-respect," Ahearn said.

He expressed confidence that Williams and Matsikas feel the same way. "The key issue is the inadequacy of the incumbent, and I think that we are in total agreement on that point," Ahearn said.

The incumbent is Republican Dorothy Miller, also of Bolton.

Scientists study porpoise reaction

BOSTON (UPI) — Porpoises, for unclear reasons, like to hang around with tuna in the ocean.

Curving and spinning in and out of the water, the porpoises unwittingly guide fishermen to the schools of tuna and become caught and killed themselves when the huge animals are cast into the water and drawn around the tuna.

But the porpoises may be getting smart.

A public outcry helped bring about the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972, which ordered the tuna industry to greatly reduce the number of porpoises accidentally caught in the tuna nets. The annual toll is down from several hundred thousand a few years ago to the tens of thousands now.

Some scientists think the porpoises may be as responsive as new fishing practices for that change.

Some amateur sea lovers and professional marine scientists — it's not always easy to tell the difference — are studying that question aboard a vintage three-masted sailing ship.

The Boston-based team is spending August and September watching porpoises near the Galapagos Islands in the Pacific to test the idea that the porpoises have learned to flee when they recognize the sound of a tuna boat.

The ship they're using is about the size of a tuna boat but is wooden and uses wind rather than motor power. Called the r-v (for research vessel) Regina Maris, the three-masted barkentine was built in 1908 in Denmark and went through a succession of owners and different uses before it was bought in Greece by the Ocean Research and Education Society of Boston.

The society is tiny and young by conservation group standards. It was formed in 1975 and has about 200 members.

Dr. George Nichols Jr., head of the group, is leading the Galapagos study. The ship carries six scientists, 12 crew members and 11 students who will learn marine biology and navigation by the stars.

Nichols was interviewed just before departing for Panama, from where the Regina Maris is sailing for the clump of islands on the equator west of Ecuador.

"There's almost nothing available on porpoise behavior in schools in the open ocean," Nichols said.

"We're going to stay with the schools as long as we can and learn their daily life."

The Galapagos porpoises are important for the study because their area hasn't been fished yet. In October, the Regina Maris will move to the Pacific coast of Central America, where porpoises have more tuna boat experience.

The scientists will compare how the different schools react to the presence of the Regina Maris, both when it's silent and when an auxiliary propeller is running.

It should be no great trick for the porpoises to recognize the propeller, said Nichols, who gave up a career as a research scientist at Harvard Medical School to take up ocean study.

Porpoises, like bats, have built-in sonar systems. The clicking noise that tourists can hear a porpoise making at the aquarium is a sound which the porpoise sends out to listen for its echo. The sound of the echo tells the porpoise how far away an object is and whether its surface is hard or soft.

PZC expects to adopt plan; will make revisions in laws

COVENTRY — In its annual report, the Planning and Zoning Commission/Inland Wetlands Agency, said the commission expects to begin implementing it through zone changes and significant revisions of the zoning and subdivision regulations.

The commission also said that the Inland Wetlands map and regulations are also in need of modification.

During the past year the commission worked extensively with the town planner on the formulation of a Plan of Development for the town. As of July 1, detailed sections on residential, commercial, industrial and governmental land use and sections on open space and natural resources were prepared.

The commission said these are undergoing final review before they will be presented to a public hearing and are eventually adopted.

During the year the commission took action on 13 subdivisions, approving 46 potential building lots. It also revoked the permit granted to Barak Homes Inc. for the Arrowhead Ridge Apartment complex because the applicant had made no attempt to fulfill the approval conditions.

The commission also approved a site development plan for the Savings Bank of Tolland for a new branch bank at the corner of Main Street and Boston Turnpike.

In its summary of services, the commission said it met more than 40 times during the year. Of these, 24 were regular meetings and there were 13 special meetings plus field trips. The report also said many hours were spent in preparation for the meetings.

The commission also took action on referrals from the Town Council and the Sewer Authority approved four regulation changes and denied one application for a change of regulations.

The commission also serves as the Inland-Wetlands Agency. It is responsible for regulating commercial, industrial, residential and other land use activities.

Its approval is necessary, as the wetlands agency, for zone changes, subdivisions, earth removals, site development plans, special permit applications and inland wetland proposals.

The commission also has the legal responsibility to review a municipal land purchase and sales and all municipal development proposals.

The commission said the full-time positions of town planner, planning secretary, and part-time zoning wetlands agent, are considered essential to the fulfillment of the legislative, regulatory, and administrative functions of the commission.

Dwyer names campaign heads

VERNON — Mayor Frank McCoy of Vernon has been named as honorary chairman for the campaign of Edmund F. Dwyer of Coventry who is seeking election as sheriff of Tolland County on the Republican ticket.

Frank Bisson will be county coordinator responsible for the activities of the coordinators. Dwyer said he will be naming the coordinators for the 13 county towns soon.

Ermen Pallanc of Union, a former U.S. marshal, will serve as special administrative coordinator working closely with Dwyer throughout the county.

Others active in the Dwyer campaign are Maurice Miller, treasurer; Donald Eden, media coordinator, and Jeanette McCoy, schedule coordinator. The latter three are from Vernon.

Dwyer, a career veteran of almost 40 years in law enforcement work, and former chief of the Vernon Police Department, will be running against incumbent Democrat Frank Curran of Stafford Springs.

East Hartford advances in Little League action

By CHARLES MAYNARD Herald Reporter NEWBURGH, N.Y. — Just as little Dave Goslin is convincing people that he's for real, the East Hartford Eastern All-Stars are making believers out of everyone.

Their latest conquest took place in the Eastern Regionals Wednesday afternoon when they upended Delaware, 6-1, behind Dave Kravies' most in tournament play.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Boston's Jerry Remy summed it up best: "It was the craziest inning I've seen in a long time."

With the help of three California errors in the ninth, the Boston Red Sox scored twice to beat the Angels 4-2 Wednesday night.

"We've been on the short end of a couple weird innings," second baseman Remy said, "but this one was the weirdest of them all."

Angels Manager Jim Fregosi said it was no way to play a ballgame. "I don't relish the thought of that inning at all," Fregosi said. "When you make three errors and the other team scores two runs on hits, it's not the way the game is supposed to be played."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Detroit's Jack Billingham, given up for dead by the Cincinnati Reds in the off-season, won his 13th game — and eighth in succession — Wednesday night in pitching the Tigers to a 2-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Detroit Manager Ralph Houk said, "The reason we went after him so hard is we thought he would pitch better on grass than he did on turf."

But Billingham, 35, who has tossed four shutouts during his eight-game winning streak, attributes his renaissance to a new body — from the shoulders up.

"I've got a lot of confidence now and the biggest part of that game is mental," said Billingham, obtained by the Tigers this March. "I've said

Jets to stress youth, only one man over 30

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Jets could conceivably be a much better team this year but finish worse off than their 3-11 record of 1977.

The Jets, who seem to do more rebuilding than the urban renewal department, continue to clean house and will open with just one player — guard Randy Rasmussen — over age 30.

Walt Michaels, in his second year as head coach, has put together respectable offensive and defensive lines, assembled one of the most impressive receiving corps in the NFL and has built his offense around quarterback Richard Todd, who was brilliant at times last season before suffering a hobbling knee injury.

But question marks remain in several key areas — running back, linebacker and cornerback — and despite the new balanced 16-game schedule, the Jets have been handed the toughest schedule in the NFL.

"We're going to be better this year simply because our young guys will be one year older and one year more experienced," Michaels said. "They will be more mature. They will be reacting naturally to situations rather than having to think, and that's what you look for."

"We had all the hustle and all the energy last season. This year we have to channel that in the right direction and make it more meaningful. We're starting to develop players at key positions and those players are now entering their second and third years."

"We're the kind of team that has to continually stay with it. Eventually we'll get to the point where we suddenly rise up off the floor."

Todd is the key offensive. He was superb at times last year before a knee sprain limited his mobility. He completed better than 55 per cent of his passes before being hurt in the eighth game but hit only 39 per cent over the last four. Todd had the best passing day in the NFL in 1977 when he threw for 396 yards in a one-point loss to Oakland.

"I think we'll be much improved," said Todd. "Everybody's been through it before. It's not so much

His practice sessions since taking over the Rams were a good case in point. Allen ran them as long as five hours attempting to put in a new system and impose his style of play on what for the most part was a collection of veteran players.

"The Rams don't consider themselves coachy guys. True, they never made it to the Super Bowl, but they have won the NFC Western Division title five straight times. They could see two-and-a-half or even three-hour practice sessions, but five?"

Predictably, they began grumbling.

But that in itself didn't cause Allen's premature departure.

Gardening

By Frank Atwood

Lily growers from British Columbia and Holland, as well as many who live in the United States, have visited the lily garden maintained by Warren Summers of Tolland this summer in search of new varieties. Mr. Summers, as relaxation from his work as a United Technologies engineer, hybridizes lilies.

Nothing is more exciting, says Mr. Summers, "than seeing new seedlings come into bloom. Some day, and perhaps soon, he hopes to introduce a new variety, produced through his careful cross-breeding that he can be sure has outstanding quality." The new lily, when it appears, must have vigor, disease resistance, good flower form and color. It must be "a good garden lily."

Once officially named and then reproduced in quantity by a commercial grower so that many bulbs will be available, the new lily will be ready for introduction, to be listed in nursery catalogues and sold either to home gardeners or commercial growers.

The new lily is likely to be pink or white, or perhaps a combination of these colors. Both pink and white are "difficult" to achieve in lily breeding, says Mr. Summers, but he has chosen to do most of his breeding work with these colors. There are many pink and white lilies now in his Tolland garden but he wants his first introduction to be truly outstanding. It may take a few more years, but he feels he already has some of the best pink lilies in the country.

A city boy from New Britain, Warren Summers had no training or experience in horticulture when he became interested in lilies. He had studied electrical engineering and played football at the university of Connecticut. He had married a girl he knew at New Britain High School and they had bought a home in the country. Taking his wife, Linda, for a drive, Mr. Summers glimpsed a colorful flower garden at a West Willington home, braked the car to a sudden stop and turned into the drive. It was the home of the late Donald Hargrove who grew lilies as a hobby. Finding a willing listener, Mr. Hargrove talked about lilies for the next four hours. In the fall he gave Mr. Summers some of the seed produced by his own cross breeding. As a beginner, Mr. Summers also bought some bulbs when they were offered for sale in the fall, and in 1975 had his first stems of lilies ready for show. He won a blue ribbon with one of these stems at the New England Regional Lily Group show in Worcester and was hooked.

Elvis death anniversary bring carnal atmosphere

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — They came from neighboring Alabama and from as far away as Algeria. Some were crying, some were angry, and some drooped with heat prostration, but all wanted to honor the memory of Elvis Presley. More than 10,000 of Presley's faithful — most of them women — braved 90-degree heat and legions of memorabilia hawkers to reflect for a few moments at the famed rock 'n' roller's grave, beside a bubbling fountain on the grounds of Graceland Mansion where he died a year ago Wednesday. Hundreds of floral arrangements ringed the immaculately kept lawn and gravesite at Presley's mansion in a colorful tribute to the King.

Happy birthday guru Dimple of Indian spiritual master Sri Chinmoy want to be sure his guru's birthday is properly celebrated, so they'll work on it for the next 11 days.

They kicked off a marathon party Wednesday on the steps of New York's City Hall, with Mayor Edward Koch on hand to present a special award to Chinmoy, who conducts daily meditation sessions for delegates at the United Nations. The party will feature almost non-stop meditation sessions, several hundred songs and plays written by Chinmoy, and a 47-mile marathon — a mile for each year — on the guru's 47th birthday, Aug. 27.

Rock singer Alice Cooper may be going into the sheet metal business. Cooper, a leader in the fight to restore the giant Hollywood sign on a hillside above movie town, contributed $7,000 to the campaign and temporarily changed his name to "Cooper," saying he was dropping an "O" as a memorial to the sign's storm-torn letters.

One of gratitude, or something, the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce says it will give Cooper 15,000 square feet of sheet metal, cut up in 9-inch squares, remains of the old sign. What is Cooper supposed to do with all that scrap metal? The chamber didn't say and neither did he.

Black Panther Chief Huey Newton is riddled over a New Times magazine article about him. He says the piece, written by Paul Avery and Kate Coleman, is "filled with lies, police gossip and innuendo," and he wants a whole lot more than a retraction. He wants $6.25 million in damages and he's suing in Oakland, Calif., to get it. Newton is awaiting his own day in court, where he'll face a variety of charges, including assault and murder.

Getting together It took some special staging Wednesday to get Franklin Delano Roosevelt and wife Eleanor together for a picture. The famed former first couple are being portrayed by John Anderson and Eileen Heckart in an eight-hour television mini-series called "Back Stairs at the White House." It's based on a book by Lillian Rodgers Parks and her mother, Maggie Rodgers, who served as White House maids through eight administrations.

Carrie Fisher is in New York rehearsing Sarah Kernochan's "Sleeparound Town." Pearl Bailey will appear Sept. 3 with bubbly Louis Bellson at Grossinger's in upstate New York. Marthe Keller is in Paris to dub "Fedora" for director Billy Wilder, and to prepare for her next film, "Lulu." Elderly learning disco

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Toes tap and fingertips snap — proof that if the spirit's willing, the body won't hesitate to follow, even for the elderly at a nursing home on Cleveland's West Side. About 50 residents, whose average age is 79, participate in the program. And, work schedules of staff members have been arranged so most of them can be with the residents during the half-hour morning sessions.

China seeks student exchange program with U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a policy change American officials call highly significant, China has informed the United States it wants to go ahead soon with a large U.S.-Chinese student exchange program. It was learned today. State Department officials said the exact timing and numbers have not been determined, but the Chinese "are thinking in terms of hundreds of their students coming to this country."

Strike spawns new newspapers

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first newspaper born during this year's newspaper strike hit newsstands in New York today. The morning tabloid, with an ambitious press run of 400,000 copies, was the winner of a rush to give birth to a newspaper to slake reader thirst and make an interim buck. Its top news story was the strike itself. "Go to Unions: It's Your Fault" said 3.4 million copies daily. That was the circulation of three Manhattan dailies closed by a pressmen's strike that entered its second week amid predictions it will last until October. The new papers will face a problem. They will be up against another paper that was born a year and a half ago, attained a circulation of 50,000 and then, with the strike called on Aug. 9, cranked its output up to 300,000 daily and says it has been selling out. The new tabloid will cost 25 cents. The established competitor, The News World, standard size, sells for 10 cents. It is published by News World Communications, Inc., whose funding comes from businesses operated by members of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church. Generally overlooked in New York newspaper strikes is the fact that there is a fourth general-circulation daily in the city, the Staten Island Advance, which is now serene in its 60th year of publication with a feeling of security — it has never been struck. It has a circulation of 75,000 weekdays, 85,000 Sundays, in Richmond, one of the city's five boroughs. Other entries expected in the newspaper market include: A revival of the New York Standard, published by Leonard Saffir during the long 1983 newspaper strike. Saffir said he's waiting to see if the strike will be prolonged before going ahead.

Califano to face contempt charge

NEW Secretary Joseph Califano appears before House Investigations and Oversight subcommittee Wednesday. He was later cited for contempt for refusing to turn over drug company records. (UPI photo)

Califano to face contempt charge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Most of the members of the committee are trying to avoid having you share a cell with cigarette smokers and other nefarious characters in the local hoosegow," Rep. Jim Santini told HEW Secretary Joseph Califano.

That got a big laugh before Santini, D-Nev., and a bare majority of the House investigations subcommittee voted Wednesday to hold Califano in contempt of Congress. But the $5 vote on a classic clash between the executive and legislative branches of government left Califano a long way from jail.

The contempt resolution — approved after Califano refused to turn over subpoenaed HEW files on the manufacture and possible overpricing of generic drugs — requires approval by the full House Committee on Education and the House itself before he could be sentenced up to a year in jail and fined $1,000. The Commerce Committee will not even take up the resolution until after it returns from a legislative recess Sept. 6. By then, Califano could have a change of heart.

Brain cells magnified 125X.

NEWS OF HEALTH

The brain represents only 2 percent of total body weight, yet it consumes 20 percent of the oxygen and 65 percent of the glucose available to the circulation to the entire body.

Dr. Charatan's article, "Acute Confusion in the Elderly," appeared recently in Health Practitioner magazine in New York. The doctor is chief of psychiatry at the Jewish Institute for Geriatric Care, New Hyde Park, N.Y.

"With diabetes mellitus as common in the elderly," says Dr. Charatan, "it is essential to carry out a blood sugar examination in every case of acute confusion. Acute confusion, responsible for a major or minor surgery is not uncommon. Eye operations are notorious for this."

But most elderly patients who become acutely confused because of a physical illness, says the physician, are completely unaware of the correction and removal of the underlying cause.

ABOUT half the cases of acute confusion in the elderly, according to Dr. Charatan, are due to causes outside the brain. Among the most common are cardiac failure, pulmonary disease, anemia, and liver failure.
