

News for Senior Citizens

By WALLY FORTIN
Hi gang! Well, it's back to the drawing board once again and another vacation has passed. It's good to be away but sure to get back and see all the smiling faces once again.

Our staff did a super job in putting building into shape for the start of a busy season. We didn't do a whole lot of work in certain areas because there is a good chance that in a few months we could be moving. If we do, then plans are in the making to renovate this place and it's no use spending money that could be used later.

Important news at this time is to remind all you folks going to the Cape that you should get in their final payment by tomorrow as things start to happen this coming Monday. Even those going on the second bus on the 23rd should get their money in this week also.

The bus for the Cape will be leaving here at 7:30 a.m. next Monday so all going should arrive here around 7 a.m.
Actually, next week starts all the action and so in Saturday's column we'll give you the schedule.
One more thing is that we have one bus filled for the Penn Dutch trip and have a few names started on a second bus. Still time to sign up so just call in or drop by.

Speaking of trips, here's a couple of one day jaunts that should be interesting. On Oct. 5, we plan on spending the day at the Danbury Fair. Prizes will be announced later. Oct. 19, we'll go on foliage trip up through Vermont and into New Hampshire where you will get a chance to buy cigarettes and some drinking stuff. On the trip, we'll stop at the Country Kitchen in West Brattleboro for lunch. You'll have a choice of baked stuffed haddock, half broiled chicken and baked Virginia ham. The complete package for this trip is $14.

I guess that's it for now but I remind you to check out Saturday's column for next week's schedule.

Members of the Manchester 4-H Handy Crafters Club, under the leadership of Carroll Nelson of 24 Sunset St. received many awards at the recent Hartford County 4-H Fair. New Jersey Man Gets School Post

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter

The appointment of Dr. J. Gerald Fitzgibbon as assistant superintendent of schools for curriculum was announced today by Manchester School Superintendent James P. Kennedy.

The appointment, which takes effect Monday, comes after an extensive search which began earlier in the summer with about 300 applicants.

The Board of Education unanimously approved in executive session Wednesday night Dr. Kennedy's recommendation of Dr. Fitzgibbon to fill the post. The vacancy in one of the key school administrative positions was created by the resignation of Dr. Alfred B. Tychner, who left to become superintendent of schools in Middletown.

Dr. Kennedy said he interviewed five final candidates for the position before making his final recommendation of Fitzgibbon.

The 41-year-old Fitzgibbon is a native of Hartford, where he attended Hartford's Southwest Elementary School and Buckley High School. He also taught English at Weaver High School from 1963 to 1964.

After being introduced to the press today, Fitzgibbon said his appointment will be a "kind of homecoming" after 14 years away from the Hartford area.

Fitzgibbon, who goes by the first name Jerry, has had extensive teaching and administrative experience throughout the Northeast and in schools in Germany. He has a broad background in elementary education and most recently intensive secondary curriculum development work.

Fitzgibbon's salary will be Step 3 for his rank, at $29,325, plus an additional $1,000 for his doctorate. He is married and has three children.

Detailed Matters Subject of Talks

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) - President Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin resumed their crucial Middle East peace summit today, meeting together without their top advisers amid indications that detailed subjects were being addressed for the first time.

The 10:30 a.m. start of the second day of the Camp David conference was preceded by a meeting between Carter and Begin and their top advisers.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski assisted Carter, while Israeli Foreign Minister Ezer Weizman and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan counseled Begin. The meeting lasted just short of two hours.

The virtual news blackout at the presidential retreat remained in force. The White House refused to reveal the subject matter or the atmosphere as all three leaders sat down for more discussion.

However, the Israeli-American meeting, including both the top leadership and staff advisers, indicated to diplomatic observers that the summit is moving into detailed matters for the first time.

Wednesday's first meeting of the three, planned as an overview view of the problems to be solved, took place on a sun-flecked patio with the three seated around a kind of Redwood plank table that can be found in the backyard of millions of American suburban homes.

It was the U.S. intention, administration officials said, for Carter to enter the dialogue only when the conversation between the Egyptian and Israeli leaders ran into rough waters.

One official said, "I can tell you what the plan was. What I can't tell you is what the president actually did."

It was the first negotiating session between Sadat and Begin since last December, when their second meeting failed to produce any grounds for agreement on the crucial issue of the Palestinians.

The news blackout that Carter had ordered for the summit was near perfect. In one of the few leaks, House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona said the veto would "destroy the effectiveness of the President while he sits in the shadow of the summit conference."

Armed Services Committee supporters of the supercarrier veto 24-6 in favor of overriding the veto.

House Upholds Defense Veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House today upheld President Carter's veto of a defense authorization bill in a political victory for the White House that left the door open to continued disagreements on military spending.

The House action backed the president's decision to scuttle a $2 billion nuclear supercarrier Carter insisted was not needed.

Supporters of the administration appealed during debate for a vote of confidence while Carter is involved in the delicate Mideast summit.

"All of us know it's a sitting duck," said Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., of the supercarrier. "It's a $2 billion turkey. It's not going to save the world from communism and it's money down the rat-hole."

House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona said the veto would "destroy the effectiveness of the President while he sits in the shadow of the summit conference."

The judge sentenced Vladimir Kiselev to five years in prison labor camp and confiscated his property. Kiselev's wife Ludmila got a five-year suspended sentence and left the court in tears. The other co-defendants, Alva Solovoyva, received four years in a prison labor camp and confiscation of property.

Crawford fought hard throughout the two-day trial for a complete acquittal. His Soviet attorney, Leonid Popov, told the court the KGB had failed to prove its case against Crawford and insisted that he be found innocent of the charge.

But Mironov, citing six pieces of evidence including testimony from the Russian co-defendants, said the state had "completely proved its case." Ironically, four of the pieces of evidence he cited were those most heavily challenged in Crawford's presentation.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A Soviet court today convicted American and Soviet co-defendants, who pleaded guilty, and then said the state had proved its case. He made no mention of evidence from Crawford that had weakened the state's presentation.

Crawford could have been given a maximum sentence of eight years in prison followed by five years of Siberian exile.

Crawford said he was not happy with the verdict in the case, insisting even after the sentence was passed that he was innocent of charges he exchanged $8,500 for 20,000 rubles on the Moscow currency black market.

When Mironov finished reading the sentence against Crawford and the Russian co-defendants, about 20 Russians who were allowed into the trial applauded.

"I want to get out of here as soon as they give me an exit visa," Crawford said. "It usually takes about seven days, but I hope we can speed it up a few days."

He said he would go on vacation as soon as he gets out of the country.

'New Right' Leads in Raising Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) - has a long history of supporting conservative causes and candidates. The AFL-CIO, traditionally one of the leading spenders in political races, ranked no better than eighth in the list.

The leaders in order were Ronald Reagan's Citizens for the Republic ($2.1 million); the National Conservative Political Action Committee ($2 million); the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress ($1.5 million); the American Medical Political Action Committee ($1.4 million); and Gun Owners of America ($1.2 million).

The AFL-CIO raised $73,000 and the United Auto Workers was the only other union in the top 10, finishing tenth with $70,000.

The other three in the top 10 are not identified with a political philosophy. They are the National Association of Realtors political-action committee, in sixth place with $1,194,216; the National Automobile Dealers Association election-action committee, seventh with $1,096,415; and the Associated Milk Producers Committee for Thorough Agricultural Education, ninth with $715,089.

Overall, the study showed labor is still a potent political fund-raiser, with receipts totaling $18.5 million this year. This compared with corporate groups that raised $18.5 million and trade, membership and health groups that raised $18.4 million.

The figures presented by way of totaling the money raised so far of political organizations, but the top four alone raised $6.8 million.

The Republican Party was far more adept at raising money than the Democrats. The GOP brought in a total of $62.9 million - $27 million of it from the National Conservative Political Action Committee, while the Democrats could raise only $14.4 million, $8.7 million of it to the national committee.

Whether political-action committees - groups not aligned with political parties - raised $54 million, or nearly as much as the Republican Party.

"The FEC figures released today confirm the alarming trend in the growth of special-interest group political money in general, and corporate-related political money in particular," said Fred Wertheimer, senior vice president of Common Cause.

"We are rapidly heading toward a new political system of 'PAC democracy' with Congress representing the political-action committees of America instead of its citizens," he said.

10% Pay Hike Asked For Town Management

Town Manager Robert Weiss is recommending that Town of Manchester management personnel receive 10 percent pay increases. The recommendation follows a review of the nonunion management positions conducted by Richard Custer, retired manager of West Hartford.

A copy of the proposed pay plan for management positions has been sent to all affected personnel along with a brief letter from Weiss. "I will recommend that employees be placed at the step in the new pay range which is a minimum of 10 percent higher than the rate received prior to July 1, 1978," Weiss wrote.

This 10 percent hike for the management positions already has been mentioned by members of town employee unions who are negotiating contracts with the town. "If the management is worth 10 percent, we're going to go for raises, too," one town employee marching in Tuesday night's picket line said.

Weiss said, however, that the proposal to boost pay 10 percent is to resolve past inequities. Weiss said that union employees have had larger pay hikes in past years than non-union management personnel. There were some cases where supervisors were making less than those they were supervising, he said.

Police, Town Meet With Fact-Finder

Officials from the Town of Manchester and the union representing Police Department employees met for the first time Wednesday night with a state-appointed fact-finder.

The fact-finder, Gary Ginsberg, an attorney from West Haven, urged both parties to continue negotiations. Contract talks between the town and the union, the Manchester Police Union, Local 1495, have been stalled recently.

If the sides cannot agree, Ginsberg will issue recommendations for a contract. His recommendations will have to be accepted by both sides to go into effect.

Steven Werber, personnel assistant for the town, said that both sides met for more than three hours with Ginsberg Wednesday. Each side presents its facts, then must later provide him with briefs and counterbriefs supporting its case, Werber said.

Ginsberg then will have 30 days to complete his report. Gary Wood, a police union officer, said that the union Wednesday night spelled out its reasoning for its proposed wage and benefit package.

The police unions the first to proceed to fact-finding this year.

The fact-finding stage could be particularly important this year because of the recent court decision declaring the present binding arbitration procedures unconstitutional.

Two years ago, when the town negotiated with its four unions, the binding arbitration was the final step, and Ginsberg then will have 30 days to complete his report.

This was to have been discussed Wednesday night. A member of Vernon's Conservation Commission, who was to participate in the discussion, was not on hand for the meeting either.

Dr. Smith has rescheduled the meeting for Sept. 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the Municipal Building.

Termites Found in Floor Of Washington Classroom

By SUSAN VAUGHN Herald Reporter

Although students were able to enter Washington School Wednesday, there are still many unfinished facets and problems connected with the major school addition and renovations project.

The Town Building Committee was told Tuesday night that one classroom in the school cannot be used immediately because termites have been found in the floor. The termites were discovered when an opening was broken through the wall to the outside of the ground level room, said Ted MacKenzie of Custom Concept Builders of Simsbury, the general contractor for the project.

Richard Lawrence, architect for the project, said the problem with the termites is that the extent of the infestation is not known. The Building Committee suggested a termite controller be sent in immediately to make a check.

It will have to be decided then whether the entire wood floor of the room will have to be torn out, Bill Don, supervisor of school buildings said. Indications were that it is likely the entire floor will be torn out and a new cement floor poured, then covered with carpet.

The termite problem will not deter other work that has to be done on the unfinished room, MacKenzie said. The lack of the extra room will mean that a small class of about 17 second grade students will have to be temporarily placed in the new media center on the second floor, Robert Heins, Washington principal, said.

John Derrfried, job superintendent for Custom Concepts, assured the committee that the media center would be ready for the class Monday, although it will not be completely finished.

Donried also reported that the upper two floors of Washington were ready for school except for new window frames which have been delayed by the manufacturer and may not begin arriving until late October. Installation of the windows will mean a disruption for each class as they are instruction inspector, assistant park superintendent, payroll supervisor, public works coordinator, master mechanic, wastewater collection supervisor, water transport and distribution supervisor, office manager, $14,400-$17,200.

• Foreman, superintendent of communications, working foreman, $14,000-$15,400.

There also are two 42-hour per week positions —

• Deputy fire chief, $18,000-$19,800.

• Fire captain, $16,500-$18,150.

Correction

In the recipe for Sicilian Meat Roll which appeared in "Your Neighbor's Kitchen" on Wednesday, it should have read "1 1/2 pounds of ground chuck."

several layers of materials such as polyethylene, concrete, and other vapor barriers would protect the wood gym floor.

The Building Committee agreed to MacKenzie's suggestion to extend the footing drains outside the building and not make a connection into the dry well as an additional effort to alleviate the possibility of flooding.

The committee also approved a transfer of $10,000 from the unused Bentley School fund to pay for change order items at Washington School.

Both the Bentley and Washington Schools have been inspected by Town Building Inspector Francis Conti and by Fire Marshal John Rivosa and approved for occupancy.

Architect Richard Mankey for the Bentley project gained approval for $425,300 worth of stonework on the facade of the school to repair a deteriorating condition. Mankey said all the basic spaces needed for school use are ready at Bentley.

On the additions and renovations project at the Police Department, Lawrence reported that about most of the masonry work has been completed. The committee approved his request for $20,769 change order work at the police station.

CNG Refund Plan

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Connecticut Natural Gas Co. has submitted a plan to the Public Utilities Control Authority to refund $18.4 million to its customers.

The refund is the result of rate cases being settled with the company's pipeline suppliers and is in addition to $1.4 million returned to customers last month.

Under the plan, submitted Wednesday, average residential heating customers will receive $60, while average customers who do not heat with gas will receive $4.

Grasso and Killian Take Familiar Stands in Debate

By BRUNO RANNIELLO HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso and her opponent, Lt. Gov. Robert Killian, debating for the second time, Wednesday night took familiar stands over taxes and state spending, said teachers' strikes were against the law and vowed each other's support in November.

Amendments Proposed

By United Press International The two men who want to take Ella Grasso's place as Connecticut's governor have come up with separate proposals similar to California's Proposition 13 that would limit state spending by law.

Both Rep. Ronald Sarasin, the Republican nominee for governor, and Democratic Lt. Gov. Robert Killian, Wednesday proposed a constitutional amendment to limit how much the state can spend.

But Killian did not call for prohibition of a state income tax as Sarasin did.

Sarasin held an early news conference in Fairfield to unveil his latest campaign weapon — a petition drive to outlaw a state income tax and to constitutionally limit annual budget increases.

In the afternoon, Killian, who faces Mrs. Grasso in the state's first Democratic gubernatorial primary, opened the one-hour debate at Coleytown Junior High School in Westport, the two candidates told Connecticut residents they could expect no tax cuts next fiscal year.

During the debate, broadcast by scathing remarks as the two repeated their previous opposing views on taxes, mass transit and school financing six days before their Democratic gubernatorial primary.

Opening the one-hour debate at Coleytown Junior High School in Westport, the two candidates told Connecticut residents they could expect no tax cuts next fiscal year.

Asked if he could offer hope for a tax cut in the next budget, Killian replied: "The chance of a tax cut is extremely remote. There would not be an opportunity for a tax cut."

Mrs. Grasso said, "I don't think it would be realistic for us to talk in terms of a tax cut in the preparation of a budget, but we can talk in terms of containment."

Mrs. Grasso said in addition to her opposition to a state income tax, she was opposed to Killian's suggestions of a personal tax on stocks and bonds and "such intangibles" as jewelry.

Killian called the convention nominating system strikes "an anachronism" that "can no longer stand on its feet."

He said he thought there should be means of arbitration teacher strikes. Mrs. Grasso said, "So long as we tell people they do not have the right to strike, we should provide them with alternative machinery for the settlement of disputes."

Both candidates said the problem of public accessibility to the Connecticut shoreline was a touchy one.

Killian said the "conflict of private property is difficult. I don't think you can totally invade the privacy of ownership."

Killian repeated his charges that the Grasso administration favored six of eight consulting engineers who "contributed substantially to the Democratic Party" in awarding $20 million in fees on the Interstate 84 project.

Mrs. Grasso said awards have been based on merit and integrity, and legislation is being drawn up to ensure selection of awards based on the merit system.

She said she suspected "some of these contributions have gone to Bob Killian as well as Ella Grasso and to Republicans as well."

Killian said if he loses next week he would probably return to the private practice of law. I learned my political bridges rather substantially," he said. "I don't see any stroke... It's all burned out."

Mrs. Grasso said she expected to win next week "and then I'm going to ask Bob Killian to help me out; he said he would."

The winner of Tuesday's primary will face Rep. Ronald A. Sarasin, the Republican gubernatorial candidate.

The winner of Tuesday's primary will face Rep. Ronald A. Sarasin, the Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Both candidates said the problem of public accessibility to the Connecticut shoreline was a touchy one.

Killian said the "conflict of private property is difficult. I don't think you can totally invade the privacy of ownership."

Killian repeated his charges that the Grasso administration favored six of eight consulting engineers who "contributed substantially to the Democratic Party" in awarding $20 million in fees on the Interstate 84 project.

Mrs. Grasso said awards have been based on merit and integrity, and legislation is being drawn up to ensure selection of awards based on the merit system.

She said she suspected "some of these contributions have gone to Bob Killian as well as Ella Grasso and to Republicans as well."

Killian said if he loses next week he would probably return to the private practice of law. I learned my political bridges rather substantially," he said. "I don't see any stroke... It's all burned out."

Mrs. Grasso said she expected to win next week "and then I'm going to ask Bob Killian to help me out; he said he would."

Opinion

Talking Turkey on Trade

Protectionist sentiment is running high in the United States these days for one very simple reason. Despite the improvement recorded in the U.S. trade imbalance in June, the trade deficit continues to hold at an unacceptably high level, and the inroad foreign producers are making in the U.S. market means the loss of jobs at home.

Before arbitrary controls are placed on imports, thereby threatening a trade war, there is another approach American trade negotiators ought to pursue. That is to attack relentlessly protectionist devices other countries have erected against American goods.

Defaults Blamed on HEW

In testimony before a House Government Operations subcommittee, Department of Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. revealed one reason why the default rate on government-backed education loans has been so high. Until last November, the government did not send students in default bills for their obligations.

Members of the subcommittee must have been surprised to learn the government had made no sincere effort to collect the loans. The premise of them held was that the students simply were refusing to pay, or in large numbers were declaring bankruptcy to avoid their obligations.

That isn't true, either. Califano testified that fewer than one percent of those who defaulted had declared bankruptcy. With HEW finally making the effort to collect the loans, progress soon should be evident in reducing the default list.

Thoughts

Throughout the Old and New Testament we are commanded by the Lord to love one another. In Matthew an incident is recorded where Jesus was asked which was the greatest commandment. He answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind... and the second is like unto it, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Today we live in a society where couples feel free to live with one another without any commitment to love either each other or children that may result from such a relationship. Many working mothers do not have the time to show love for their husband or children. Many individuals are confused and lost, never having experienced the joy of loving or being loved.

As parents we must be sure our children know that we love and care for them. We can do this by listening with interest and respect when they talk to us; showing them we are glad to be with them; expressing sincere gratitude for work well done; disciplining when necessary, but in a loving way by being aware that

Lew Rome Offers Simple Message

By ALEX GIRELLI
City Editor

Lew Rome, a soft-spoken modest man who used to describe himself as a not highly partisan Republican, is stumping Eastern Connecticut on behalf of a GOP gubernatorial ticket he would like to have headed.

A good many Manchester Republicans would have preferred Rome at the head of the ticket, but Rome, himself, appears to have adjusted well to his role as a candidate for lieutenant governor, running with Ronald Sarasin.

The two differ more in the matter of style than in philosophy, although Rome admits there are a few points on which they do not agree completely. His is the wisdom of state-sponsored gambling which Rome feels is an undue enticement to people who can't afford to bet.

Rome is aware that he has appeal to many Democrats and is convinced that a good deal of that appeal can carry over to the Sarasin-Rome ticket.

On a recent campaign trip to Manchester, Rome stopped at The Herald office and offered his views on a few matters. He stressed Rome tends to stress where other politicians hammer away at — government economy.

He repeated his simple message:

If you don't spend it, you don't have to tax for it.

He says the Democratic gubernatorial candidates are concentrating on the wrong side of the state's fiscal problems when they debate what new taxes should be considered. "They should be talking about how to control spending," he said.

"Our revenue growth is approximately 7 1/2 percent a year. If we can control our expenditure growth to 7 1/2 percent or less, we will not have a need for any new taxes, and if fact we would be able to realize some tax reductions."

Rome is convinced the saving can be made with serious curtailment of services if the existing machinery of government is utilized instead of being added to.

The availability of the money in the coffers is the big inducement to spend it, Rome contends. He says the budget of Gov. Ella Grasso represents the second highest increase in state budgets in the nation.

Rome sees California's Proposition 13 not as a rejection of government or even as a rejection of government programs, but as an aspect of public sentiment in favor of conservation and elimination of waste in all aspects of life, including public life.

He agreed with an observation that taxes in Connecticut are high enough to discourage tourism and could be lowered, but he also feels that state does not promote itself enough.

Rome favors public transportation which he does not equate with mass transportation. Mass transportation, he agrees, is not appropriate for Connecticut because it does not have concentrated masses of population.

Public transportation, he says, can be any number of systems to serve various needs, from operating minibuses to using the existing obsolete Budd cars where feasible.

On the local Buckland fire jurisdiction dispute, Rome said the town should not have gone forward with building a firehouse in the midst of the legal controversy, he predicted that the Legislature had not seen the last of the fire jurisdiction dispute.

He says many people in Eastern Connecticut are sorry they did not vote for Robert Steele. Steele was Grasso's opponent in the last election.

In Fairfield County, he says, the people are not aware of how much spending increased under Gov. Grasso. He hopes to make them aware.

Capital Fare

In 1970, and nobody went to jail or paid a fine.

Meanwhile, you can ask whatever happened to President Carter's and Congress' promise to reorganize and reform the Postal Service. The Postal Workers Union, who figured the no-layoff clause was more important than a bigger wage increase.

Union members had the right to reject the agreement, but they had no right to threaten a strike that is prohibited by federal law.

Indeed, the unions were put under a federal court order not to strike. Unions' officers were threatened with fines and jail sentences if they failed to take "positive action" to avoid a strike.

But the ranks-and-file were going to strike anyway under official — and illegal — union strike mandates aimed at avoiding a binding arbitration.

And that's where politics made its entrance. Both Joseph Vacca, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, and American Postal Workers Union President Emmet Andrews vigorously supported the contract. They wanted that no-layoff clause.

But they also wanted to keep the job; both leaders are involved in reelection campaigns. So they vowed to abide by the strike mandates and give their imprimatur to a violation of the laws. After all, nearly 200,000 postal workers struck for eight days

Bolger Had No Choice

By ANDREW TULLY
WASHINGTON — In critical confrontations between management and labor, George Meany can be counted on to call a cat a dog and the nation's laws a joke.

Ever since negotiations were resumed between the government and postal workers, the AFL-CIO czar has been going around claiming that the new discussions are "in the true tradition of collective bargaining and trade unionism."

Your father's mistake! Postmaster General William Bolger in fact had no choice but to agree, in effect, to violate "the true tradition of collective bargaining."

Indeed, the unions were put under a federal court order not to strike. Unions' officers were threatened with fines and jail sentences if they failed to take "positive action" to avoid a strike.

to eliminate Democratic dominance in national politics.

Cohen, the moderate 38-year-old former Bangor mayor who was a member of the House Judiciary Committee that recommended impeachment of Richard Nixon, is taking on Sen. William Hathaway.

If he wins, the former basketball star who writes poetry on the side, will immediately begin popping up on lists of potential Republican candidates for national office.

Cohen, given an even shot at unseating Hathaway, is a prime example of the importance of timing. He could have taken on Sen. Edmund Muskie in 1976. But Cohen decided Muskie — who brought Maine Democrats from nowhere to parity in this more than 30 years in Maine politics — would be too tough to handle.

The pressure on Cohen to take on Hathaway this year was heavy; it has become embarrassing for the GOP in Maine, where voting Democratic leanings — the type the

Rising Stars Put Careers on Line

By PETER A. BROWN
BOSTON (UPI) — If football, as sportscasters remind us every autumn, is a game of inches, then politics is a matter of timing. Careers rise and fall while candidates make daring moves or play it safe.

A look around New England shows a number of rising political stars putting their careers on the line — some in races they probably will win, others in contests they may not.

There are also pots probably kicking themselves for not sticking their necks out — especially in Massachusetts where Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., has suddenly become vulnerable as he seeks a third term.

Some cautious candidates who chose not to seek higher office because of the incumbent's strength will probably look back on the decision as a wise move.

This year in New England four rising political stars decided to leave the safety of their offices and take the big plunge — if they win they will become national celebrities.

But if they lose — and at least one must because of the draw in Massachusetts where two young Democratic stars are taking on Brooke — it could end their political careers prematurely.

Republican Congressman William Cohen in Maine and Richard Sarasin in Connecticut are both giving up virtually certain re-election to take on Democratic incumbents in races the GOP desperately needs to win if it is

Peck Completes Campaign Slate

Fred Peck, who is seeking the Republican Party's nomination in Manchester's 12th Assembly District, has announced the remainder of his campaign committee.

Peck and Walter Joyner will compete Tuesday in a Republican Party primary for the nomination in the 12th District.

Wallace Irish Jr. was named coordinator of the Peck campaign. William Sheridan was named finance chairman.

Others named by Peck are: Peg Martin, issues and research; Roger Ouellette, absentee ballots; Mr. and Mrs. William Van Deck, headquarters management; Irene Goss, telephone chairman; and Larry Noone, voter identification program.

There is a decided Eighth Utilities District flavor to Peck's committee. Irish is deputy fire marshal, Sheridan is a former District director and Noone is a present District director.

The incumbent in the 12th District is State Rep. Theodore Cummings, who also is Democratic Town Chairman. Cummings has been a leading supporter of consolidation, which would combine the Town and District fire departments. Such a move is opposed by the Eighth District.

Free Nursery Sets Opening

"Friday School," a free nursery program for three and four-year-olds, provided by the Church of Christ, Lydall & Vernon streets, will open Sept. 22 for its fifth session. The weekly classes will meet nine times, closing Nov. 17. Another team will be held in the spring.

Telephone enrollment for Friday School will be available from Monday, Sept. 11 to Friday, Sept. 15, and may be made by calling Mrs. Margaret Wimmer, who is in charge of registration, 872-2445.

As in previous sessions, classes will be from 9 to 11 a.m. There will be four classes, with enrollment limited to eight children in each. Those who have attended previously and are still eligible are being given opportunity to pre-enroll. Openings that remain will be filled on a first-come-first-served basis.

Teachers for the four classes are Mrs. Margaret Wimmer of 117 Risley, Vernon, Mrs. Mary Ellen Wagner of 13 Daley Circle, Rockville, Mrs. Carol Martikainen of 64 Robbie Road, Tolland, and Mrs. Debbie Hanley of 48 Barry Road, Manchester. Mrs. Jackie Frasher of 78 Crisbridge Drive, Vernon, is the singing teacher.

These women are experienced pre-school teachers who volunteer their services, enabling the church to offer the program free of tuition. It is intended to help children learn to relate to their peers, to their parents, and to God.

AARP Chapter Plans Potluck

The Manchester Green Chapter 2359 of the American Association of Retired People will celebrate its third anniversary Thursday, Sept. 14, with a potluck party luncheon.

The luncheon will begin at noon and will be followed by entertainment by the Beethoven Chorus of the Old Guard under the direction of James W. McKay of 500 Porter St.

The chapter meets the second Thursday of each month in the Fellowship Hall of the Community Baptist Church, 585 E. Center St. New members and guests are welcome.

Members will be notified in the chapter's bulletin as to the kind of dish to bring and are reminded to bring their own place settings. Janet Phillips is publicity chairman and program co-chairman. Bea MacAlpine, pot luck co-chairman, should be contacted about any luncheon questions.

Schools' First Day Proceeds Smoothly

Despite some inevitable first day transportation problems, school superintendant Dr. James P. Kennedy said that Wednesday's school opening was one of the smoothest compared to past first day openings.

He commended the small vans which make door to door pickups and which run "exceptionally good."

He said the total public school enrollment was 9,041 students compared to 9,183 last year. Broken down, the enrollment shows 4,788 in elementary and 4,253 in secondary classes.

Mixed Doubles Lists 17 Teams

Seventeen teams will take part in the Recreation Department's Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament this weekend at Charter Oak Park and Robertson Park.

One-half of the defending championship team Earle Custer and Rick DeSimoone will be back with a new playing partner, Julia Brinell. Fran Lombardo, who teamed with Custer a year ago, is sidelined with a knee injury.

Top seed is the Custer-Brinell combine with Steve Hodge and his mother, Sue Hodge, seeded No. 2. Phil and Helen Valentine are No. 3 and George and Irma Bosser No. 4.

Hodge is the Men's Singles champ. Custer holds the Men's Masters title. Saturday pairings at 8: Orduz-Lane vs. Richard-Thomas; Padick-Padick vs. Bosser-Bosser; Boud-Boud vs. Finegan-Finegan; Wolf-Wolf vs. Anasdi-Parman.

Sports transactions

Football — Signed rookie linebacker Mark Nichols and signed first-year tight end Rick DeSimoone. Atlanta — Placed top wide receiver Alfred Jenkins and reserve linebacker Garth Van Napel on the injured reserve list and recalled rookie wide receiver Dennis Pearson and linebacker Ron McCartney.

Parachute Jump

A sport parachuting exhibition is scheduled as part of the halftime program at Memorial Stadium when Connecticut and Northeastern open their football schedules at Storrs Saturday at 1.

Final Meeting

The East Hartford Department of Parks and Recreation will hold a final meeting for the women's flag referees in the Re office tonight, beginning at 7:30. League rules and game schedules will be discussed and distributed. Each team must be represented.

UConn Soccer Victory May Prove Too Costly

Preliminary report is that Ross will be out about four weeks. The injury, which stunned the crowd of 4,200 into virtual silence and moved one spectator to comment, "that kid (Ross) is snake bit," puts the Huskies into a somewhat similar position as last year.

"But last year we had an inexperienced defense," corrected Morrone. "I thought we did a good job of containment." Starting UConn fullback Tony Carvahlo, a key member of the defense, went out in the first half and when he'll be back is not sure. His injury was not as serious as Ross' however.

The Huskies' first foray into Bison territory just two minutes into the first half paid off with a goal. Joe Morrone Jr. (coaches son) developed the play down the right wing. The ball came loose and Wilbert Cader from 15 yards out beat goalie Edmundo Olmuker to the lower left corner.

Ken Murphy with just under five minutes left in the first half rocketed a left-footed 35-yarder to the upper left hand corner to make it 2-0.

A beautiful 30-yard cross field lead pass by Morrone 13 minutes into the second half set up the third goal. Elvis Comrie gathered in the pass and chipped a shot over charging substitute forward goalie Henry Gillem.

Ross was injured just over a minute later with the Washington, D.C. school scoring on a Ken Davy header 46 seconds after freshman Barry Stringfellow assumed the net-minding duties. He had no chance on

Major Hoople's Football Forecast

By Major Amos B. Hoople Fearless Forecast

Egad, friends, this is the week — kaff-kaff — when the big boys start battling in earnest.

Yes, dear readers, there are enough excellent games on the field to satisfy even the zaniest football fanatics among you.

For starters, consider the sterling matchup of leading Big 8 contenders against representative Pacific 10 teams: Oklahoma, Stanford; Colorado hosting Oregon; Nebraska entertaining California, and Arizona, a newcomer to the Pac 10, visiting Kansas State.

And a pair of conference games will find UCLA at Washington in a Pacific 10 meeting, their third such encounter, and Illinois and Northwestern of the Big 10 tangling for the 72nd time.

The Oklahoma-Stanford contest will be watched with interest to see how the Sooners react after the Orange Bowl trouncing they look at the hands of the Arkansas Razorbacks.

The Washington Huskies, Rose Bowl winners, are the strong favorites to repeat as Pacific 10 champs, but the Hoople Hunch is they will get off to a rocky start at the Uclans due to a 28-25 setback.

Neighbors Illinois and Northwestern won't be challenging for Big 10 titles, but when they square off against each other it will be anybody's game.

The Pacific 8 was expanded to the Pac 10 this year with the addition of Arizona and Arizona State of the Western Athletic Conference, and the Arizona Wildcats will be out to make their first start in the new league a memorable one. We see it Arizona 21, Kansas State 12.

Both Southern California and Texas Tech will be starting a lot of young players this fall, but the Trojans of John Robinson appear to be better fortified than they were last year.

Rutgers, winners of eight of their last nine contests in the 1977, will long remember the shocking 45-7 pasting they took at the hands of Joe Paterno's forces in the '77 lid after and would like nothing better than to score a big upset. However, such is not in the cards: Penn State is just too tough. We see it Penn State 39, Rutgers 19 — a triumph!

Stated next Thursday night (Sept. 14) is the annual Manchester American Legion baseball banquet at the Legion Home at 7 o'clock. It will be a buffet supper and the public is invited. Reservations can be made until Monday by contacting Bob Donahue, 875-1472.

Beverly Moves

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Nick Beverly, a six-year NHL defenseman, was acquired on waivers Tuesday by the Los Angeles Kings from the Minnesota North Stars.

Q. Whom do you consider an all-around better player among Jim Rice, Reggie Jackson and Dave Parker? — Considering all talents — hitting, running, throwing, fielding — almost any baseball man would give the nod to Pittsburgh's Dave Parker. He doesn't have the straight-out power of the other two, but over the long haul he'll hit for better average than Rice. Jackson, who has never hit

Q. What college basketball team drew the largest attendance at home in the 1977-78 season? Also, what college basketball team drew the most attendance away from home? — West Schleyer, Cincinnati, Ohio. Kentucky, playing in its gigantic Rupp Arena, averaged about 23,335 for 16 home games, or a total of 373,367 fans — were also the biggest second-place New Mexico. The Wildcats had an attendance of 366,250 for their 32 games. However, Duke University gets the nod as the top ranking team, with 254,378 for their "away" games. But the Blue Devils also played 22 games on the road because of their small home gym.

The tipoff:

O.J. Simpson's biggest problem as a football player in '78 won't be his surgically repaired knee but surviving a fall over seasons on the green concrete at San Francisco's Candlestick Park. The artificial surface they have is a disgrace, the worst in sports, and is finally giving way to grass a year from now despite the bleats of the baseball Giants, co-tenants.

Gardening

By Frank Atwood

Buildings long used as headquarters of the Hartman Tobacco Co. in Buckland are now the base of a very large commercial vegetable operation, Baggett Farms.

Thomas Baggett Jr., of South Windsor heads a commercial vegetable enterprise that harvests 2,400 acres of crops in the Connecticut Valley. (Photo by Atwood at the Baggett Farms retail stand in Buckland.)

All the land is rented, and all is in the Connecticut River Valley. Baggett puts the total of 1,500 acres, but since two crops are grown on much of the land, he counts on harvesting a total of 2,400 acres.

Late in the afternoon, key people in the organization assemble at the office to talk over plans. What planting of sweet corn is ready for harvest? Will extra help be needed?

Much of the sweet corn is harvested by a one-row mechanical sweet corn picker. It moves down a single row of corn, cuts the stalks close to the ground, strips off the ears and discards the stalks.

Other harvesting jobs, such as picking ripe tomatoes or green beans, must be done by hand, and the number of people employed has ranged between 100 and 300. All are local people from the Hartford and Springfield areas.

Sweet corn, on most commercial farms, goes to market in burlap bags. At Baggett Farms, the ears of corn are packed, vertically, close together, in wooden crates.

There are 700 acres of sweet corn on the Baggett farms, much of it Butter and Sugar variety, with mixed yellow and white kernels. Some is Silver Queen, a late-season all-white sweet corn.

Another large crop is pickling cucumbers, known to all growers as "pickles," once raised widely in this area for the Silver Lane Pickle Company of East Hartford, now out of business.

Baggett's formal training was in accounting, but he says he has "always" been a farmer. He began with his parents in their hometown of Ridgefield, but farm land to rent in Ridgefield is now a scarce commodity, and he began to rent Connecticut Valley land in 1974.

Moore and Baggett joined forces after meeting last winter in Florida, where Moore's home is in Falmec, in an area that leads the nation in winter vegetable production. Later, Moore flew to Connecticut, where he declared that soils are he saw in the valley are "the finest in the world."

Why Not the Greatest?

Muhammad Ali talks so often about retiring from the ring, a couple of hometown folks in Louisville, Ky., have begun lining up a new job prospect for him — their own.

The group has taken out classified ads, set up an information hotline and plans to make a full-blown "Draft-All" pitch in a local weekly on Sept. 14 — the day before their favorite son goes up against Leon Spinks for the heavyweight championship in New Orleans.

Current Mayor William Stansbury's term isn't up until Dec. 1, 1981, but he's in hot water for lying about a recent trip he took. Ali backers figure "The Mouth" would be a good replacement to all.

Turning Tables

Publisher Ralph Ginzburg, who once spent eight months in a federal jail in a well-publicized pornography case, is tilting again at the powers that be — this time as the aggrieved party.

Ginzburg, who puts out a monthly magazine called American Business, says the Commerce Department is "stealing" his trademark with plans to rename its bimonthly as America's Business.

Says he, "It is the height of irony that the Commerce Department should be exploiting and undercutting my firm while at the same time it is trying so hard to promote business."

Separate But Egalite

What's a girl to do if she wants to freshen up in the middle of a hard day of politicking in the national legislature? So asks Florence d'Harcourt, one of 19 women deputies in the male-dominated French National Assembly in Paris.

Seems the menfolk have a shower room, a top barber and indoor and outdoor toilets, but the women have a separate john and nothing else. Says Madame d'Harcourt: "A modern parliament must take the feminine presence into consideration and make the same facilities accessible to all."

Altman-Halvorsen

Maryellen Halvorsen and Donald Charles Altman, both of Quincy, Mass., were married Aug. 12 at The Castle at Boston University in Boston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Halvorsen of Pompano Beach, Fla., formerly of Manchester. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Altman of Thornhill, Ont., Canada.

The Rev. Alphonse Ferreira of Boston, Mass., officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The staircase on which the couple was married was decorated with palm branches and white satin ribbons and bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon trimmed with Cluny lace and fashioned with a square neckline accented with a deep ruffle. Bishop sleeves, flounced hem. She wore a picture hat with netting gathered into a bow and flowing down the back. She carried a cascade bouquet of white lilies, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Miss Linda M. Kurkjian of Randolph, Mass., was maid of honor. Paul A. Scott of Marlboro, Mass., served as best man. Ushers were Paul J. McCarron of Metuchen, N.J., and Alan R. Bernstein of Alexandria, Va.

Harvard Doctors Say No Birth Risk in Pill

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Doctors at Harvard University's School of Public Health have concluded there are no major risks of deformities in babies born to mothers who have used oral contraceptives.

The article, entitled "Oral Contraceptives and Birth Defects," appeared today in this week's New England Journal of Medicine. Authors Dr. Kenneth Rothman and Dr. Carol Louik, members of the school's epidemiology department, reviewed birth records of 7,723 babies born in 20 greater Boston hospitals.

The researchers said among the 2,188 births to women who had not used oral contraceptives in the last three years, the malformation rate was 3.3 percent.

For the rest, born to women who had used some form of oral birth control, the rate was 3.8 percent.

Once that study was concluded, the 5,535 infants of mothers who had used the pill were then divided into two groups. One group consisted of those conceived within a month after the termination of oral contraceptive use, and those conceived after a longer interval.

In the 1,448 babies in the first group, the malformation rate was 4.3 percent, the study said. Of the remaining babies, the rate was 3.6 percent.

The comparisons grouped major congenital defects together with minor ones. When only major defects were compared, users and nonusers were similar.

Data in the study was collected from hospital charts and birth certificates recording birth defects serious enough to affect the health of the newborn. Also recorded were conditions equally spotted, like cleft deformities and skin abnormalities.

Several published studies have previously shown a small positive association between hormone use and heart defects, and between hormone use and congenital limb reduction, the report said.

However, the relationship seems limited to those infants born to mothers who kept taking hormones during the early stages of pregnancy, the researchers said.

Data in the study was collected from hospital charts and birth certificates recording birth defects serious enough to affect the health of the newborn. Also recorded were conditions equally spotted, like cleft deformities and skin abnormalities.

Faculty Says No Extra Duty At Wesleyan

MIDDLETOWN (UPI) — Faculty members at Wesleyan University have told administration representatives they will refuse to perform some extra duties in support of a four-day strike by clerks and secretaries.

The Wesleyan administration had requested that teachers perform secretarial duties, hire temporary help to fill in for striking secretaries and monitor secretaries' work attendance.

However, the executive committee of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors told administration representatives Wednesday the faculty would not comply with the requests.

University officials said Wednesday that classes and other campus activities were unaffected by picketing at eight locations by 160 members of the office and professional employees union and some student supporters.

Registration for 2,400 students was held Monday and classes began Tuesday. It is the first strike in the 147-year history of Wesleyan. No new negotiations have been scheduled in the contract dispute.

Dave Konstan, local AAUP president, said by a 126-1 vote the association decided to urge Wesleyan President Colin Campbell to see the strike resolved immediately to avoid disruptions.

Konstan said if the dispute is not settled by Tuesday, the AAUP will need again to consider several options, including suspending classes.

Winners Get Together

Winners in the first night of the Miss America competition get together backstage at Atlantic City. Administration All New For Manpower Program

HARTFORD (UPI) — The city's regional manpower program will be overseen by a new suburban watchdog, investigated by its own planning committee, supervised by a new acting city manager and run by a new administrative team.

And if one councilman has his way, a charter revision commission will be created to consider changing the form of government the program operates under.

Deputy Mayor Nicholas Carbone said Wednesday he will recommend appointment of Deputy Manager John A. Sulik to succeed City Manager James B. Daken, who said he will resign Friday due to the city's troubled CETA program.

Sulik has appointed a team to take over management of the program which faces a $1.6 million deficit. Heading the group will be Elias B. Pealer, who has been city personnel director for eight years.

The executive committee of the Hartford Area Manpower Planning Council, a federally required advisory group which has had difficulty influencing manpower decisions, voted to begin its own inquiry into breakdown of the program.

The 24 other towns for which Hartford administers the program Wednesday approved a plan to give more control to manpower planning. The plan calls for towns using manpower funds to hire a full-time worker to monitor the manpower office and represent their interests.

Several officials have discussed changing Hartford's form of government from a city manager form to a strong mayor type in the wake of the CETA troubles, claiming the city manager form is neither responsible enough to Hartford's needs nor amenable to its residents.

City Councilman William A. DiBella, a Democrat, said Wednesday he will file a resolution asking the council to create a charter revision commission to study the question.

City officials also confirmed they are considering hiring former state Finance Director Jay O. Tepper as a manpower consultant.

CETA Fund Transferred

WETHERSFIELD (UPI) — Documents transferring $400,000 from a state allocation to pay 708 employees in a federal jobs program were signed Wednesday by state and federal officials.

The fund had been requested by Gov. Ella Grasso to pay workers in the Comprehensive Employment Training Act program, which has an estimated $1.5 million deficit and is being audited by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Connecticut Labor Commissioner Peter Reilly said $400,000 from the balance of the state CETA allocation will assure paychecks for workers in Hartford and neighboring towns from Sept. 9-29.

Jury Starts Deliberations In Discotheque Fire Case

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — A jury of 10 men and two women has begun deliberations in the trial of a 26-year-old Greenwich, Conn., high school dropout charged with setting a fire that killed 24 young people in a discotheque on the New York-Connecticut border.

During 6 1/2 hours of deliberations Wednesday, the jurors had portions of the testimony in the trial of Peter Leonard, as well as the judge's charge to the jury, reread to them.

The jury recessed at 11:30 p.m. and was sequestered overnight in a White Plains motel. The panel will resume its work this morning.

During the seven-day trial that spanned two weeks, prosecutor Geoffrey Orlando sought to prove Leonard deliberately set fire to the Carol Lane bowling alley adjacent to the disco in Port Chester.

Witnesses at the trial testified the fire spread through an adjoining wall, engulfing about 300 Gulliver's patrons in a thick black smoke. Twenty-four died of asphyxiation.

Leonard is named in 4 counts of felony murder, one count each of arson and burglary, and two counts of petit larceny.

Under New York law, the jury must find Leonard guilty of arson — in any degree — to find him guilty of the 24 murder counts. The jury could convict Leonard of second- or third-degree arson only if they found he intended to set the fire.

If the panel determined Leonard did not intend to set the fire, but was reckless by leaving the scene without reporting the fire, it could declare him guilty of fourth-degree arson, the judge explained. The jury could also reduce the murder counts to manslaughter.

Leonard previously pleaded guilty and was sentenced in 1975 to 15 years to life in prison but his conviction was later overturned on grounds part of his confession to police had been coerced.

VAULTED CEILING IN ACTIVITY ROOM

CHALET HOME HAS UPSTAIRS BEDROOMS

* By W. D. FARMER

An activity room with a vaulted ceiling is the feature of this home. There are also a central fireplace and double french doors leading to a rear deck.

The U-shaped kitchen offers a step-saving design and includes plenty of cabinet and counter space, as well as a pantry. Location adjacent to the dining area makes convenient transfer from kitchen to table.

The master bedroom, on the main floor, has a separate dressing area, a private bath and a walk-in closet.

A half-bath and a laundry room with washer-dryer connections and a laundry tub complete the main floor.

The remaining two bedrooms upstairs, are approached by an open-rail stair off the foyer. Each bedroom has ample closet space and hall access to a full bath. The bedroom on the front has a unique feature with double french doors leading to a balcony.

The European style exterior is emphasized by the distinctive roof design, the rough-sawn siding and the stucco with board and batten accenting the upper floors. The flower box under the kitchen window and the upstairs balcony reinforce the European flavor.

The first floor contains 1,375 square feet and the second floor contains 515 square feet for a total of 1,890 square feet.

Dear Abby

Carrying On At The Dentist's

DEAR ABBY: I don't want to disclose my source, but I know for a fact that a certain dental nurse is having an affair and is using her boss's dental office for her rendezvous. I think she has a lot of nerve taking advantage of her boss's dental quarters in this way, and I'm sure he would have a fit if he knew about it. She has been working for him for quite some time and he trusts her. Should I tell the dentist?

WONDERING
DEAR WONDERING: When it comes to dentists, the usual advice is to "Open wide." In this case, I say, "Keep your mouth shut."

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on the letter from the wife who felt threatened by her husband's secretary when she and a girlfriend became self-appointed cheerleaders at the company's bowling games. (Very few wives attended, so the girls went to give the men moral support.) That wife should smarten up and realize that if her husband's secretary is taking her place at the bowling alley, she may be cheering him on in other areas, too. Perhaps the wife had been invited first, but refused because, "We can't afford a sister" or "Bowling is boring." I finally figured out that my husband's secretary saw him as a handsome young executive who would handle every emergency, while I saw him as the guy who spoiled my eyes, and I realized that the qualities that I loved in him when we were first married were still there, and that a baby-sitter was cheaper than a divorce. We saved our marriage by working out our problems together.

JFK Autopsies Raise Questions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Assassinations Committee dealt today with the autopsy reports its chief investigator says have "raised more questions" about the murder of President John F. Kennedy than any other single factor.

The panel, which heard from former Texas Gov. John Connally and his wife, Nellie, on Wednesday's opening round of testimony, chose today to review conflicting autopsy reports on the fatal bullet wounds. Seven expert witnesses were called.

In addition, an array of charts and photographs were utilized to explain the shots which pierced Kennedy's throat and shattered his skull. G. Robert Blakey, the panel's chief counsel and staff director, said:

"The handling of President Kennedy's treatment and autopsy — first in Texas then in Washington — by the doctors, the Warren Commission, and by the president's family... has given rise to more questions touching on his assassination than any other single factor.

"The facts of what happened and the questions that have arisen out of these facts merit the closest attention," he said.

"As far as is known," Blakey said, "no member of the (Warren) commission or its staff ever carefully examined the autopsy X-rays or photos, although Chief Justice (Earl) Warren reportedly did see them."

Doctors at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, where Kennedy was admitted after the shooting, "differed dramatically in their descriptions of the head wound," Blakey pointed out.

The Parkland doctors, said Blakey, were not even aware of a wound in the president's back and only later a bullet was found on the stretcher on which he was carried.

The Warren Commission said this bullet was the same that had struck Kennedy, exited through his throat and caused the multiple wounds to Connally, who was in a jump seat in front of Kennedy on that day in Dallas, Nov. 22, 1963.

Outlining the conflicting conclusions, Blakey noted: "One Parkland doctor described Kennedy's throat wound 'as an entry wound,' leading to conjecture that the president had been shot from the front as well as from the rear and to inevitable theories that two gunmen were responsible.

"All participants in the (second) autopsy (at Bethesda Naval Hospital) were under Naval orders — not lifted until the Select (House) Committee began its investigations — to be silent as to its results," Blakey said. "But rumors began to fly anyway, and confusing new accounts began to appear."

These erroneous news reports, in turn, fueled the conspiracy theorists. On Wednesday, the committee viewed a slow-motion track of the famous Zapruder film which captured the assassination in its gruesome entirety.

The film, taken by amateur photographer Abraham Zapruder as the presidential motorcade passed through Dealey Plaza, depicted in color the scene at the moment Kennedy and Texas Gov. John Connally were shot.

Connally, often dabbing his eyes with a handkerchief and pausing for gulps of water, in a morning session Wednesday gave his own emotional report. His wife, Idanell, filled in the moments when he blacked out.

The Connallys sat in jump seats in front of the Kennedys on that fatal drive. They agreed there were three shots from behind and to the right of the limousine — a direction pointing to the Texas School Book Depository from where Oswald is said to have fired.

But Connally insisted, as he had in the past, that he had not been struck by the same bullet that hit Kennedy in the throat — as the Warren Commission report concluded.

"I heard that shot," Connally said of the one that inflicted a non-fatal wound on the young president. He explained the speed of the bullet would have made it impossible for him to hear the shot that hit him in the shoulder, arm, wrist, lung and leg.

But he could not explain the discrepancy. "I wish I could believe that all the speculation and all the rumors could be dispelled," Connally said. "I don't believe that... Some circumstances are incapable of being solved."

Carter's Presence Felt Although He's at Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter may be out of town, but his presence is certainly being felt on Capitol Hill.

Vice President Walter Mondale did some personal lobbying at the Capitol Wednesday on behalf of the president's natural gas bill.

Carter is at Camp David for the Middle East talks, but Mondale traveled to the presidential retreat to report on the prospects for passage of the gas bill, which were said to be encouraging.

The bill would gradually lift federal price controls on natural gas by 1985. A test vote on the legislation is expected in the Senate next week.

The administration picked up a victory in its effort to hold down the price of raw sugar. The House Ways and Means Committee approved a 15-cent market price during the next five years, but refused to go along with an escalator that would have raised the price to 19.1 cents a pound during that period.

The full House worked late Wednesday night on the administration-backed foreign intelligence bill, deciding to throw out a key suggestion: to create a "secret court" to issue warrants for counterspying in this country. The vote was 224-103.

Still to be debated were the bill's proposed guidelines for protecting individual privacy and for protecting intelligence agents who act in good faith from prosecution.

Earlier, the House approved a five-year extension of the Civil Rights Commission's operating authority. The legislation also extends the agency's jurisdiction into matters of age and handicap discrimination, but would bar the commission from getting into the abortion issue.

And in the Senate, members agreed to an $11 billion cut in the budget authority Congress tentatively approved in May for fiscal 1979.

Police Kill Terrorist

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (UPI) — Police acting on a tip from a waiter rushed into a Chinese restaurant and killed a long-sought Baader-Meinhof terrorist with two quick shots as the urban guerrilla went for his gun.

Willy Peter Stoll, 28, one of the three gang leaders wanted for nine political murders across West Germany, sauntered into the Shanghai Restaurant for dinner Wednesday night, apparently confident his business-executive look would prevent recognition.

But a waiter recognized Stoll from a photograph shown on television and phoned police. Two plainclothesmen hurried to the small restaurant near the city's main railway station.

When Stoll saw the police enter and head toward him, he stuck his hand in a pocket, apparently going for a gun. The police fired first, sending frightened patrons scurrying out, police said.

At least two bullets struck Stoll and he died in an ambulance on the way to a hospital, police said.

GUIDE

The Herald

September 7, 1978

The Center Ballet Theatre

The Center Ballet Theatre begins the Fall semester September 14th. Classes are offered on a graded syllabus in beginner, intermediate, and advanced levels for children and adults. A special program in creative movement and preparation for the more technical aspects of ballet has been devised for ages 4 through 7 years.

The Center recognizes performance as a vital part of dance training, giving all students an opportunity to appear in annual full length ballets or upon acceptance to perform in the children's ballets which are sponsored throughout the area.

Students are also exposed to the professionally orientated Center Ballet Theatre company which performs extensively in Connecticut and provides a wide range of repertoire, ballets having been restaged and choreographed for the company by Frank Ohman and Teena McConnel of New York City Ballet Company, besides the company's director Joyce Karpiej who has choreographed throughout the United States and England and was formerly co-director of the Hartford Ballet Company. Before opening the Center here she choreographed for the "Nutcracker" and various other ballets.

Mrs. Karpiej received her training in England with the Royal Academy of Dancing. Later she danced professionally and eventually supplemented her dance background with a nine year professional career in ice-shows as a principal solo and adagio skater.

A limited number of scholarships will be offered to males from age 10 years to 18 years (beginners through advanced) who are interested in training at the Center, please call 528-6266 for more information.

Hartford College for Women

Beginning in October, eight non-credit courses will be offered in the fall College Sampler program at Hartford College for Women. Designed as a means for rediscovering the pleasure of learning for learning's sake, College Sampler is a series of short, inexpensive courses for men and women. This new approach to learning introduced last fall, offers adults a way to explore the surrounding environment, examine the art of dance, develop communication and language skills and recapture the personality of Hartford's past.

Depending on the needs of each program, class sessions vary in length from four to ten meetings in the form of lectures, seminars, group and panel discussions and/or field trips. Most courses meet in the evening, once a week, and range in price from $20 to $75. Instructors are faculty members from Hartford College and professionals in various fields drawn from the surrounding community.

Among the fall semester offerings are: "Landscape It Yourself," an introduction to residential landscape design; "Spanish for the Health Professions," a basic language course for medical personnel; "Understanding Dance," lectures by dance professionals and choreographers related to specific performances in the upcoming Hartford Ballet Company series at the Bushnell; "Speak for Action," a practical workshop in communication techniques for the political arena; and "Reviving Older Homes II," a follow-up to the spring lecture/discussion series on the how-to's of renovation co-sponsored by the Hartford Architecture Conservancy. A brochure describing all the programs is enclosed.

Free College Sampler brochures are available by calling Hartford College at (203) 236-1215. Students may register by mail by sending a check in the full amount, along with course name and registrant's name, address and phone number to: College Sampler, Hartford College for Women, 1265 Asylum Ave., Hartford, Conn. 06105.

Richard J. Risley Dance Studio

The Richard J. Risley Dance Studio has changed over the past 20 years.

Starting in 1957 with classes in Manchester's Orange Hall, the studio grew. However, in January 1962 until January 1965, Mr. Risley's studio was closed and his time was spent with the Army.

The new studio was opened in Coventry and has been there ever since.

With the opening of the 21st year, the many years of experience behind them, the accumulation of a professional staff of associate assistant teachers and a good start toward establishing a competition group, the studio now has two new changes. A facelift to make it one of the best equipped and most attractive studios in the area, and the establishment of a Junior Dance Company, "The Richard Risley Tap and Jazz Company" to create a facility for the students to learn more about performance, and perhaps to bring a little joy into the hearts of senior citizens, shut-ins and shows of every kind.

The goal of the studio is quality dance education for both girls and boys starting with a pre-school program to adult classes and to the advanced and professional levels.

Mr. Risley is a member of the Dance Masters of America and the Dance Teachers Club of Conn.

The Richard J. Risley Dance Studio's Competition Program did quite well this past season.

Students from the studio competed with the Dance Teachers Club of Conn. Annual Dance Pageant with students from Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Placements were as follows:
Scott Burrell — 1st place — Sr. Mr. Dance of Conn. 1978 (also Mr. Dance of N.Y.C. - 1977). Jim Wilson — 3rd place, Jr. Mr. Dance of Conn. 1978. Mark LeGrand, 5th place, Jr. Mr. Dance of Conn. 1978. Lisa White, 5th place, Jr. Miss Dance of Conn. 1978.

For three years, Richard Risley, local dance teacher, has been working to make the goal of a Mr. Dance Competition in Connecticut and nationally, become a reality.

For many years, the Dance Masters of America has conducted a pageant called Miss Dance for girls. The girls must be a winner in their chapter's contest to compete nationally.

Because he had a student who was qualified, Mr. Risley affiliated with the N.Y.C. Dance Masters #26 and entered him in their Mr. Dance which was only a local competition. The student won first place and had nowhere to go from there.

Last September, Mr. Risley, who is a member of D.M. of A and the Dance Teachers Club of Conn. Chapter #18 initiated the idea of a Mr. Dance in Connecticut to go along with the Miss Dance pageant. The board of directors and the membership of Chapter #18 approved of this. Again the student won first place.

This year at the Dance Masters of America's National Convention, a resolution was passed which was initiated by Mr. Risley and the board of directors of the Dance Teachers Club of Conn. to hold an annual competition for young men (age 16-25) which would give them the same honor and benefits the girls receive to further their dance careers in the Miss Dance contest. This motion was passed.

The first national competition for men will be held at the National Convention in 1979 in New York City. The hopes are that it will encourage more local competition and will encourage more boys to continue with dance training.

STAFF
 Bill Winger-Dennis Adams-Trudy Fawcett-Kelly Sherman

30th Year for Tyler School

Gertrude G. Tyler has been teaching the dance in Manchester for twenty-nine years, and derives great satisfaction from her occupation. "I used to take dancing lessons from you ... now I'd like to have you teach my four-year-old!" Trudy hears this sort of statement quite often, and it makes her happy to know that the "product" she sold so long ago must have been good to warrant a "repeat sale." Also when she hears of the professional dance successes of former students like Judy Williams and Roy Wierzbicki, her face lights up with pride. "But great success is not the only criterion on which I judge my teaching efforts. It makes me feel good to know that a "toe-in" child is helped by dance lessons; or a shy child is made more confident; or an awkward child attains more poise and control. So often people do not realize that dance lessons are not only for learning to dance. A primary small-town dance school is for everyone — the "toe-in," the shy, the awkward. Later on, advanced dance schools are very selective, aiming mainly at serious, professional dance goals."

Trudy is a Manchester native who started her dancing at the age of four. For two years she took lessons from Ralph McKernan (Eleanor Powell's teacher at the time). At age 6 she studied with the already well known Michael Nicholoff for four years, and when he went off to the big city to form his own ballet company, she continued with Nicholoff's assistant, Dolores Guidone. In the summers, she also studied with the Chester Hale School of Ballet in New York. It was through this contact that, at the age of sixteen, she was offered a job at Ben Marden's "Riviera." She dropped out in the mid-year of her senior year in Manchester High, to accept this opportunity for the "big time." (She later came back to finish her schooling.)

Then back to New York and the American School of Ballet, where she studied for a year under the famous George Balanchine, Anatole Obukhoff, Madame Dagnova, and others. Some old-timers will remember the beautiful Vera Zorina of ballet and movie fame. She was, at this time, the wife of Balanchine and took lessons from him in Trudy's class. He was a strict taskmaster even with his wife. To pay for lessons, Trudy worked as one of "Wally Wanger's Girls" (Chorus) in theaters, nightclubs, and was "Madame La Zonga" in the very first U.S.O. show unit formed and which toured the U.S. During her various "jobs" she worked with many interesting personalities, such as the Mills Brothers, Joe E. Lewis, Jan Murray, "Baby Rose" Marie and Bea Wain.

Marriage interrupted Trudy's dance career, until 1948 when she opened her Gertrude G. Tyler School of Dance. She is especially enthused this year because she has a new location (99 Summer St.) which is bigger and better than her past location. "There's just so much more I can do with a larger space, high ceilings and a wood floor!" she beams.

Burton Dance Studio

Lee and Beverly Burton have been in the dancing and entertainment field for more than twenty years and are well known in this area as performers, choreographers and instructors.

Residents of Vernon, the Burtons own the Burton Dance Studio in Manchester where for two decades they've been teaching tap, jazz, ballet, acrobatics and social dancing. Their students range in age from three to over 80 years old.

During most of that time they have been the resident choreographers for almost every musical produced by the Little Theatre of Manchester, and have choreographed more than 18 musicals which include "The Boy Friend," "Fiddler on the Roof," "Jacques Brel," "The Apple Tree," "Promises, Promises" and "Cabaret." They most recently completed the very successful musical "Dames at Sea" for Nutmeg Summer Playhouse at University of Connecticut. They have also coordinated various revues for area groups. They are presently working on "Company" for Little Theatre of Manchester, which will be presented in November, 1978.

Lee started his theatrical career in 1946 when he was a member of the American Theatre Association in Berlin and performed with the Armed Forces Services Branch.

Beverly began as a child performer and was a dancer on a Channel 30 television variety show and a member of a New England touring troupe.

The Burtons take lessons themselves periodically in New York and Boston, they act and dance in community theatre productions, they coordinate local revues and perform in a nightclub act for various civic groups and country clubs.

Twice they have been honored by an invitation to join the faculty of the Dance Congress in New York City. Beverly has also taught at the Dance Teachers' Club of Conn. sessions. They are active members of Dance Educators of America and Beverly is vice-president of Dance Teachers' Club of Conn. Chapter of Dance Masters of America.

Their students have won numerous awards and perform constantly in professional and semi-professional shows.

L to R Judy McLaughlin, Beth Madden, Brian Coughlin and Deirdre Coogan, area students of the Griffith Academy of Dance, who will be participating in the New England Orchestras Irish Dance Competition in November.

Priscilla Gibson School students Manchester Youth Ballet in action as seen Watkin's Furniture Co. Store window — during Explore the Arts program on Main St. this summer.

Priscilla Gibson School of Dance

The Priscilla Gibson School of Dance Arts, located at 388 Main Street, is a professionally operated school offering all forms of dance education from beginner to professional levels, and aims with each student a complete education in dance.

Miss Gibson, director of the school, a talented and accomplished dancer received her early training from her mother Rolda Gibson, a Manchester dance instructor for 25 years. Miss Gibson has studied all forms of dance under leading national recognized instructors in Ballet, Tap, Jazz, and Acrobatics, and continues to study to bring quality dance education to the school.

A well known choreographer she has choreographed productions for various organizations in the New England area, and has been guest artist and teacher throughout New England and Middle Atlantic state for individual schools and dance organizations.

An outgrowth of the school is the newly formed Manchester Youth Ballet, a non-profit company which offers young talented dancers an opportunity to appear in a performing company for civic events, school fine arts programs, as well as their own productions. The company currently consists of 15 members and has works choreographed for them by Christopher Gibson, lead dancer with the Connecticut Ballet Company, and Miss Gibson, Artistic Director.

The following students trained at the school who have gone on to further their dance education are Karen Moore now attending North Carolina School of the Arts, and recipient of scholarships to both Harkness and Joffrey Ballet Schools, Monica Smith attending Skidmore on a dance scholarship and numerous other students who while still studying at the school have attended Dance Centers throughout New England to study with many renowned teachers in all fields.

Miss Gibson is a member of Dance Masters of America Inc. Dance Teachers Club of Connecticut and National Association of Dance and Affiliated Artist.

Albano Ballet Company

The Albano Performing Arts Center announces its grand opening in its permanent home on 15 Girard Ave., Hartford. The Center incorporates the Albano Ballet & Performing Arts Academy and the Albano Ballet Co. of America, Inc.

Mr. Albano, the center's founder and artistic director, has taught dance for 20 years in the Greater Hartford area offering private and class instruction in the performing arts of ballet, drama and music with a related faculty. Such leading illuminaries in the world of dance as Paul Russell, principal with the Dance Theatre of Harlem and the Scottish Ballet Co., as well as Eileen Brady, soloist with the Stuttgart Ballet Co., Germany, have been individually trained by Mr. "A" and came out of the Greater Hartford area.

The new center offers 3 professionally equipped studios with permanent barres, floor to ceiling mirrors and Marley dance floors from England. The dressing rooms are fully equipped including showers for both men and women. The Albano Center offers music and drama studios as well as rehearsal space for rental to local area artists. The studios are air conditioned and there is ample parking on its spacious grounds.

New classes are being offered in the children's department to preschoolers and beginners in ballet, modern dance and tap. Evening classes are being offered to the beginner adult in all forms of dance, music and drama. Special electives such as Dance Theory, Elocution and Theater & Performance Techniques are offered on Saturdays.

The grand opening begins on September 18. For information, call 232-8898.

Sebastian's Music Center

Sebastian's Music Center on Talcottville Road (Rt. 83) in Vernon is celebrating its second year in the music business. Over this time, Sebastian's has placed great emphasis on musical instruction by providing a wide range of classes taught by some of the most highly trained musicians in the area.

Classes include guitar, drums and percussion, voice, piano, and all band instruments including tuba, French horn, oboe, violin, viola, and cello. The teaching staff of 18 is led by Mark Belluardo, the store manager. Mark is a guitarist and solo performer, a longtime resident of the area, and developed his art at Boston University. Like Mark, all teachers at Sebastian's are active performers and conservatory trained. Many have pursued advanced degrees.

Sebastian's also offers a fully equipped on premises, repair shop for all band and string instruments, including an electric guitar customizing service.

Owner Frank Sebastian Pappalardo, a UConn grad with a degree in music, has been repairing band instruments for seven years. He says that knowing the teacher and being able to communicate with him or her is important to learning to play an instrument. Please stop in and browse, meet the staff, and by all means, ask questions. All the supplies necessary are available here at Sebastian's, the accessories, music, and instruments for beginner, advanced and professional musicians. Our prime concern is teaching you properly.

Sebastian's Music Center on Route 83 in Vernon, one-quarter mile north of the Vernon Circle, can be reached at 872-8002.

Members of the Hartford Ballet Company will demonstrate various dance and choreographic techniques as part of "Understanding Dance," one of eight short, non-credit courses being offered in the "College Sampler" program for men and women at Hartford College for Women. Fall courses begin in October, are moderately priced and most meet in the evening. Call the college at 236-1215, extension 40, for more information.

Music a Way of Life

Music is a way of life for Kenneth Woods. His professional training began at the young age of five, when he auditioned for Dr. Moshe Paranov at the Julius Hartt School of Music, Hartford, and became Dr. Paranov's youngest piano student. At the age of nine he received a piano scholarship to further his training at Julius Hartt. He has studied with Leonard Seiber, Louis Crowder, Naretta Conci, and Anne Koscielnay.

Mr. Woods' formal training has covered a period of seventeen years and has included several other instruments, particularly organ, cello, and voice. He sang in the Hartt College Chorale and was a cellist in the Greater Hartford Youth Orchestra and the University of Connecticut Symphony.

He is well known in the Manchester-Bolton area for his devotion to music education for students of all ages and capabilities and has excelled in teaching students with special learning problems including blindness and deafness. "Ken-ny," as he is best known to many friends and students, comes from a well-known family of teachers in Manchester. His mother, Florence Glenney Woods, served as an elementary school teacher and principal for many years and is now retired. His brother Donald Woods is presently a special education teacher at Bennet Junior High. And his aunt, the late Martha Glenney Meyer was a piano teacher in town for many years.

Mr. Woods recently returned from his tenth trip to Europe where he performed in several cities in Ireland and Great Britain. The bulk of all his musical energies lies in Church music. Over the past ten years, he has directed the music programs of various churches in the Manchester-Bolton area. For two seasons he was Musical Director of the Manchester Senior Citizens Variety Show. He has sung with the Manchester Gilbert and Sullivan Workshop, Inc., served on the Board of Directors of the Manchester Civic Orchestra and Chorale for which he also play the cello, and has presented music lectures and recitals to church and civic groups. He is a graduate of the Hartt School of Music of the University of Hartford and is a member of the Connecticut State Music Teachers' Association and Music Teachers' National Association.

Kenneth Woods is now the Organist and Choir Master of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Manchester.

Betty Jane Turner's 25th Season

Dotty Gibson Perrett

Betty Jane Turner School of Dance, 40 Oak Street, Manchester, is now reopening for its 25th season of dance instruction.

Classes are offered for children and adults in tap, ballet, acrobatics, jazz, and baton. There are also classes for boys as well as the pre-school courses.

Betty Jane Turner, director and teacher is the past president of the Dance Teachers Club of Conn., a member of the Dance Masters of America Inc., the Dance Educators of America, the Professional Dance Teachers Association of New York and also a member of the Better Business Bureau of Greater Hartford Inc.

Also on the Turner faculty this year will be Laurie Darling, Karen Trishmann and Linda Thompson.

The school offers entertainment to many convalescent homes and senior citizens' affairs during the year. Each spring their dance review is held at Manchester High School.

For registration call 563-8205 or 649-0256.

Miss Dotty's many years of theater, supper club, night club and varied professional performances lend state presence to her teaching abilities. Let Miss Dotty instill poise, confidence and professional dancing ability in your child, bringing out hidden talents through dance.

Learning is an ongoing process — from the very young to the very young at heart — fulfill your ambition and have fun, too! Whether it be Tap-Ballet-Acrobatic—or Jazz! Participation in Miss Dotty's School of Dance can fill your child's life with happiness and interest in the arts.

One of the over 500 students of the School of the Hartford Ballet receives special help from School Director Enid Lynn. A Manchester native, Ms. Lynn has been recognized by the World Who's Who of Women for her extraordinary contributions to dance. The School of the Hartford Ballet offers ballet, modern and jazz classes, day and evenings, for both children and adults. Fall session of classes begins Sept. 14.

School of the Hartford Ballet

Boys eight to fifteen years old are eligible for a special scholarship audition for fall ballet classes at the School of the Hartford Ballet.

The boys-only audition will be held Saturday, Sept. 9, noon at the school's studios at 308 Farmington Avenue, Hartford.

Other scholarship auditions open to either girls or boys eight to fifteen are slated for Sept. 7, 4 p.m.; Sept. 9, 10 a.m.; and Sept. 11, 4 p.m.

The full and partial scholarships are available for promising girls and boys regardless of dance experience. However, special effort is being made to find and assist talented young men because of their minority status among ballet dancers.

Explains Enid Lynn, Director of the School of the Hartford Ballet, "Ballet needs young men and can offer exciting careers to those who are physically and artistically talented."

Fall classes at the School of the Hartford Ballet begins Sept. 14 and includes all levels of instruction — from beginner to professional level — for both children and adults.

The fall schedule includes daytime ballet classes and evening classes in ballet, modern dance and jazz.

For information about scholarship auditions or fall dance classes at the School of the Hartford Ballet, call the registrar at 525-9396.
