Summit's Success In Sadat's Hands

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — The Camp David summit on the Middle East reached a decisive stage today, and sources said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has now assumed a pivotal position in determining the outcome.

Sadat joined President Carter at 10:30 a.m. EDT for the latest round of crucial talks which began Tuesday and were expected to run to midweek. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin was not present when the morning session began.

Conference sources said the success or failure of the summit is now in Sadat's hands, because it is up to him to decide whether he, as a representative of the Arab world, can accept the proposals put forth in the six and a half hours of meetings between the three world leaders.

These sources said, to date, the negotiations have focused on the future of the occupied West Bank territories and the Gaza strip, plus the future of the Palestinians. The sources said the future of the Sinai peninsula — also occupied by the Israelis — has been broached, but was not a major theme in the nearly 19 hours of talks involving the respective delegations.

If the Israeli proposals — with American modifications — prove acceptable to Sadat, it would mean a continuation of negotiations, probably on the foreign minister level.

U.S. officials are hoping the next stage of talks can get started as early as late this month, during the UN General Assembly session.

The weekend lull for rest and reflection — including a tour of the nearby Gettysburg, Pa., battlefield — gave way to substantive talks today. On Sunday afternoon, Carter, Begin and their top advisers met for 65 minutes. There was no hint as to what was discussed or the result.

As the leaders and their aides toured the Civil War battlefields in nearby Pennsylvania Sunday, Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman told reporters, "we need another two or three more days for things to crystallize."

Begin, also on the tour, told a reporter, "as you can see, it is going well," but it was not clear from the brief exchange whether he was talking about the negotiations or his personal relationship with Sadat, which appeared to be cordial and friendly.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., interviewed on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press," quoted a "pretty good source" as saying the negotiators have made little or no substantial progress.

In the first official glimpse of the meeting, White House press aide Jody Powell, who has been designated official spokesman for the conference, said "progress seems to have been made, but problems remain in important areas."

The Gettysburg tour was the first time all three leaders have emerged from the heavily guarded presidential retreat since their arrivals last Monday and Tuesday.

The Egyptian and Israeli leaders and their delegations made an elaborate show of mutual friendliness. But although they waved to the reporters, the officials gave no hint of the state of the negotiations.

Natural Gas Debate To Begin in Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The word is out from the Senate leadership: Senators may as well forget temporarily every issue but natural gas, and expect to spend long hours at their desks this week.

The House-Senate conference committee version of the natural gas price deregulation bill, set for Senate debate starting today, is the only scheduled Senate business for the week.

"We will stay on the conference report until it has been disposed of," Assistant Democratic Leader Alan Cranston said in his weekly notice to colleagues. "The leadership also alerts senators to the possibility that any and all daily sessions may well run late into the night."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert

Byrd, conceding he still lacked the votes to push the compromise through the Senate, issued a sharper warning.

"Senators are on notice that anything can happen starting Monday," the West Virginian said.

The leaders are cautioning colleagues to expect a variety of assaults on the fragile accord worked out by a House-Senate conference committee to end months of deadlock that froze action on all of President Carter's energy program of 1977.

A number of senators facing primary challenges Tuesday were expected to be absent at the outset of debate, staying home for last-minute campaigning, so the showdown on the compromise was set for Wednesday.

Both Parties Voting In Tuesday Contests

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Republicans from Manchester's 12th Assembly District will decide Tuesday whether Walter Joyner or Fred Peck will oppose State Rep. Theodore Cummings in the November election.

The statewide Democratic primary for governor and a Democratic primary in the 55th Assembly District also will be decided Tuesday.

Voting for the primaries will begin at noon and end at 8 p.m. Schools in Manchester and surrounding towns will be open Tuesday.

Republicans in four of Manchester's 10 voting districts will be eligible to vote in the primary between Joyner, the party endorsed candidate, and Peck, who is Manchester's Republican registrar of voters.

The following voting districts with their polling places in parenthesis make up the 12th Assembly District — Two (Robertson School, 45 N. School St.), Five (Buckley School, 250 Vernon St.), Seven (Waddell School, 163 Broad St.), and 10 (Manchester High School gym, Brookfield Street).

Only the 3,578 Republicans registered in those four voting districts may vote Tuesday in the Peck-Joyner primary. (Stories on both candidates appear on page four.) No Democrats or unaffiliated voters may vote in this primary.

All registered Democrats will be eligible to vote in the primary for governor. No unaffiliated or Republican voters are eligible to vote in this primary. All 10 of Manchester's polling places will be open for the Democratic primary.

They are — District One, Cheney Tech, 791 W. Middle Turnpike; District Two, Robertson School; District Three, Church of Christ, 394 Lydall St.; District Four, Martin School, 140 Dartmouth Road; District Five, Buckley School; District Six, Nathan Hale School, 160 Spruce St.; District Seven, Waddell School; District Eight, Verplanck School, 126 Olcott St.; District Nine, Keeney Street School, 179 Keeney St.; District 10, Manchester High gym.

The Democratic primary in the 55th Assembly District is a three-way race between Louie Matsikas, Dr. Edward Williams, both of Hebron, and Aloysius Ahearn of Bolton. The incumbent in the district is State Rep. Dorothy Miller, a Republican from Bolton who is seeking re-election.

The district includes Andover, Bolton, Columbia, Hebron, Marlborough and part of Vernon. All regular polling places in the district's area will be open for registered Democratic voters.

Manchester Town Clerk Edward Tomkiel said that absentee ballots for the primaries must be issued by 5 p.m. today and must be received by mail by 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Herbert Stevenson, Manchester's Democratic registrar of voters, said that any voter has moved since Aug. 29 and has not informed the registrars office of the change must vote at the polling place of his former residence.

Grasso, Killian Predict Victory

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso and Lt. Gov. Robert Killian are both predicting victory in Tuesday's historic primary and party regulars seem no more certain of the election's outcome.

Tuesday's Democratic gubernatorial primary is a first and party leaders are offering no wagers on how Connecticut's 640,000 registered Democrats will vote.

Killian, asked to take a backseat to Mrs. Grasso four years ago by the late Democratic party head John Bailey, now wants her job.

The battled between the two, who differ little on the issues, except on a state income tax, has left many Democrats undecided.

Even Mrs. Grasso's underticket, chosen at a hectic state convention which Mrs. Grasso called "open" but Killian labeled "brokered," has kept a low profile through the primary campaign.

There has also been a lack of knowledgeable comment from Democratic insiders, usually anxious to predict the outcome of an election. Pre-primary predictions have come almost exclusively from the respective camps of Mrs. Grasso and Killian.

Killian has risked all to become the first lieutenant governor to challenge a governor in the state.

Mrs. Grasso is confident that her record while serving as Connecticut's first woman governor can carry her to a second term in November.

Killian, a Hartford native with many friends in the capital region, sees the challenge to his boss as his last shot at the job he said he was wanted since his childhood.

"I've burned my bridges," he said last week. "They've been burned so well, there's not even any smoke," he quipped.

Killian is expected to return to his lucrative law firm and private business if he loses Tuesday, three days before his 59th birthday.

Mrs. Grasso, 59, has said that if the voters choose her second-in-command Tuesday she will remain in public life, a role she has known since she was elected to her first office 25 years ago.

Tentative Fire Accord Set

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Officials from the Town of Manchester and the union representing firefighters have reached a tentative two-year contract agreement. The proposal may be voted on Tuesday by both the union and the Town Board of Directors.

Neither side would offer details of the proposal since both the town and the union still have to vote approval of the package. Members of the union, Local 1579 of the International Association of Firefighters, are scheduled to vote on the proposed package Tuesday night.

If the union votes to approve the package, the Town Board of Directors, which has a regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday night, could then act on the package.

The agreement between the officials of the union and the town was reached late Friday after an all-day session with Rido Camarco, the state-appointed mediator.

The fire union, as well as the other three unions representing town employees, has been working without a contract since July 1. The two-year package would go into effect retroactively to that date.

The announcement of the tentative agreement is a breakthrough in contract negotiations, which recently have made little progress. Members of all four unions have picketed in front of the Municipal Building at times during the past two weeks in protest of the negotiation inaction.

Unions have been vocal in their complaint that the town is trying to take away some benefits that have been included in past contract agreements.

While a breakthrough, the tentative agreement does not mean that a final contract settlement has been reached. The firefighters' union or the Town Board of Directors could vote Tuesday to reject the proposal. Then, both sides would have to reconvene the negotiation sessions.

In July, officials from the town and the Municipal Employees Group Inc. reached a similar tentative agreement. That proposal, however, was rejected Aug. 3 by the MEG membership, and the two parties are still seeking a settlement.

The town and MEG representatives met again this morning in a work session before the two parties meet with the state-appointed mediator.

Frank Ciarcia, a labor agent representing the MEG union, said that both sides met to gain a clearer understanding of the other's position. "That's the first thing that you have to do when a tentative agreement is rejected," he said.

Bridgeport Teachers Ordered to Negotiate

Striking Bridgeport teachers were ordered back to the bargaining table today in advance of a contempt hearing this afternoon on the illegal six-day walkout.

Superior Court Judge James Henebery ordered the teachers to resume negotiations under the supervision of court officials and federal mediators.

Meanwhile, striking teachers in Norwalk returned to classes today after overwhelmingly approving a new contract.

Norwalk teachers met Sunday night to ratify the contract after a tentative agreement was announced at 3:30 that afternoon by Superior Court Judge Burton Jacobson.

Federation president Bruce Mellion said a standing vote was taken and of the 500 teachers attending, only "a couple dozen" voted against the agreement, believed to be a three-year contract.

Because Jacobson has imposed a news blackout on the details of negotiations, Mellion said only that contract contained improvements in money, fringe benefits and language.

"It's a good contract for the teachers," he said. "It's fair to the teachers and fair to the city."

The contract must now be approved by the school board and the town council.

The 933-member federation voted to strike Tuesday. Mellion said the union board have been in negotiation for 54 hours since then. The tentative contract was reached after 29 hours of continuous negotiation, he said.

The 1,250-member Bridgeport Education Association also voted to strike Tuesday. But angry teachers' union president Arthur Pechillo emerged from a 12 1/2 hour session at 1:30 a.m. Sunday vowing that he and his 13-member executive committee were "ready to be fined, jailed or fired."

Superior Court Judge James Henebery had issued an injunction before the strike started but he postponed a hearing until Monday, ordering the parties to negotiate a settlement. Henebery has also imposed a news blackout.

Pechillo blamed the stalemate on Bridgeport Mayor John Mandanici, calling the mayor a "tyrant" who has orchestrated the negotiations. He said the school board was nothing more than a puppet in Mandanici's hands and had offered nothing new in the lengthy talks.

The strikes have affected classes for 37,000 students in Norwalk's and 32,500 in Bridgeport.

Both the Bridgeport and Norwalk teachers' groups had said they would not interfere with voting that is scheduled at school polling places on Tuesday, in a statewide primary. The primary is highlighted by a runoff battle between Mrs. Grasso and Lt. Gov. Robert Killian, who wants her job.

A threatened job action by the 191-member Windsor Locks Teachers Association was headed off when a tentative settlement was reached about 2 a.m. today after a marathon weekend bargaining session.

Meanwhile, Hartford teachers said no agreement had been reached on their contract and said they would meet today and Tuesday to discuss what action to take.

Cost Estimate Rises For North End Sewer

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
The Town of Manchester's estimated cost for a sewer project in the North End has increased by about $120,000 — a price hike that would mean a substantial increase in the assessment of affected property owners.
Jay Giles, Manchester's director of public works, said that the increase could up the assessment of benefitting property owners from the estimated $15 per front foot to $20-$22 per front foot. The project includes the Upper Hockanum trunk sewer, which would run to Tolland Turnpike, and street sewers in the Bryan Farms area, including streets in the Baldwin-Concord roads area.
Because of the change in price for the property owners, Giles has recommended that the Town Board of Directors decide at its Tuesday meeting whether another public hearing on the project should be held.
The project was approved by the Board of Directors after a public hearing in March 1977. But, because of the price increase, another public hearing could be scheduled.
Giles said that the low bid for construction of the Upper Hockanum trunk sewer was $1,347,575, about $67,000 higher than the estimate of a year ago.
The project would be funded primarily through federal money, so the $67,000 increase would only mean about a $70,000 increase in the town's share of the expenses.
Likewise, the street sewer work in the Bryan Farms area is expected to cost $215,000 more than originally estimated. The town must pay about 25 percent of this increase or about $54,000 more than expected, Giles said.
Thus, the town's cost for the entire sanitary sewer package will be increased from $15,000 to $45,000, he said. The town pays its share of the cost for sewer projects by assessing adjacent property owners on a front foot basis.
The cost originally was estimated at $15 per front foot for property owners. With the cost increase, that cost will rise to $20-$22 per front foot, Giles said.
Stephen Penny, chairman of the Board of Directors, said that he expects the board will discuss the matter Tuesday, but he said that he could not predict whether the board will schedule another public hearing.

Cummings Asks Foes Obey Campaign Code

State Rep. Theodore Cummings of Manchester has asked that his opponent in the November election subscribe to the fair campaign practices code.
Cummings, who represents the 12th Assembly District, said that he already has agreed to follow the code, which establishes guidelines for campaigning.
He will be opposed by either Walter Joyner or Fred Peck, two Republican candidates who face each other in Tuesday's primary for the party's nomination.
"It eliminates a lot of junk and a lot of name-calling," Cummings said of the fair campaign practices code. He said that he expects to concentrate his campaign on his knowledge and past actions in the state legislature. Cummings has represented the 12th Assembly District for four years.
"I think both Republican candidates are limited in their independence and experience," he said.
Cummings also said that he is aware of what he called the frenzy in the Republican campaign against him.
The GOP reportedly believes that Cummings can be beaten because of his past work for consolidation, an unpopular issue in the Eighth District.
Funding from the state level is expected for the GOP candidate who opposes Cummings.
"That's ok with me. I'm used to waging uphill battles for what I believe is right," Cummings said.

WHEN WE NEEDED ELLA GRASSO... ELLA WAS THERE!

The Governor personally helped to convince J.C. Penney that our area could provide the location and manpower that would best meet its needs. She helped both the company and local government cut through the red tape. In short, she helped make the dream a reality.

As a result of Ella Grasso's concern, leadership, and willingness to help, hundreds of new jobs will open in our area, and because of the taxes which J.C. Penney will pay our local property tax base will be broadened. Both results will have a significant impact on the local economy.

State Race Highlights Region's Primaries

By PETER A. BROWN
United Press International
Four New England states hold primaries Tuesday, with an unprecedented and heated intra-party struggle among Connecticut Democrats highlighting what are considered otherwise generally dull contests.

Thomson, one of the nation's most conservative office holders and long favorite for a fourth term. Granite State Republicans also pick a Senate candidate for an uphill struggle among Connecticut Democrats highlighting what are considered otherwise generally dull contests.

party's gubernatorial nomination. Thomson considered trying to unseat McIntyre because of the incumbent's support of the Panama Canal treaties but decided it would be too difficult a race.

Four Democratic candidates are vying to recapture Providence City Hall from Republican Vincent Cianci, the city's first GOP mayor in more than 30 years.

There are also a number of candidates competing for the Democratic nomination — traditionally almost tantamount to election in Rhode Island — for lieutenant governor and attorney general.

Vermont Democrats, not given much of a chance of beating Snelling in November, will choose between Rep. Edwin Granai, D-Burlington, the assistant Democratic House leader who is favored for the nomination, and newspaper publisher Bernard O'Shea, who is something of a perennial candidate.

Two PZC Hearings Set, One on Disputed Drain

Manchester's Planning and Zoning Commission tonight will conduct two public hearings, including one for an inland-wetlands permit request that has divided residents in the Carter Street area.

The Town of Manchester is seeking the permit to do storm drainage work on Carter Street. It has proposed to install a pipe from an area on Carter Street so water will flow into an unnamed brook that is a tributary to Birch Mountain Brook.

The commission also will consider an old business item — a zone change on Oakland Street. Requested by Robert Weinberg — and several new business items.

The new business items include a roof sign requested for the Essex Motor Inn, a waiver or deferral of sidewalks on Hillstown Road sought by Hayden Griswold, a waiver of parkwalks for a portion of the Knollwood subdivision and a preapplication review of a subdivision on West Vernon Street.

Opinion

Everybody Remembers When

It seems not long ago that only the oldtimers could recall, with monotonous repetition, when just about everything cost less. Today, almost every individual old enough to make a purchase can remember when.

Perspectives on inflation have changed, and not for the better. Not long ago an annual inflation rate of 3 or 4 percent worried many people. Now, an inflation rate double that would look good by comparison to the 10 percent rate experienced the last couple of months.

Inflation tends to feed on itself as long as its causes are undiminished. Despite all the proper rhetoric in Washington and other power centers about inflation being "the number one problem," at the federal level there is no great push to zero in on it.

Spending other people's money is an opiate for many politicians who have succumbed to it. For them, Proposition 13 and other taxpayer protests are mere nightmares which they hope soon will blow over. They won't. In fact, as inflation undermines living standards the protests can be expected to become louder.

Inflation is one of the primary reasons for growing labor unrest. The rising cost of living has many people on edge, on both sides of the fence, and they are becoming more militant in their attitudes.

This is a time for a little more statesmanship and a little less politics-as-usual. The crisis point is still down the road, but that road is shrinking.

Tuesday, Sept. 20, 1938 it rained. It had been raining off and on for four days, and Manchester was getting its fill of rain.

But it was to get an extra heavy rainfall this day. A rainstorm started in the early hours of the morning and by 8 a.m. Center Street was almost impassable. There was heavy concentration of water under the railroad trestle on Center Street. Flooding occurred on Center Street at Roosevelt Street.

Manchester had trolleys in those days, and they were far off schedule. On Hilliard Street, west of Main Street and near the old Bon Ami plant, the underpass for the railroad there was also impassable.

Manchester Green experienced heavy rains; the buses from Rockville through Manchester and to Hartford were late. Trains — especially those east-bound through Manchester Depot Square in the North End — were delayed.

The dam at Saller's Pond broke. Another dam in Parker Village broke, and so did the dam in Hilliardville, down at Adams Street.

There were bridges out in several locations around town. Water had torn holes in the streets. Shrubs were uprooted near foundations of homes and other buildings. Charter Oak meadow was flooded.

Joyner: Desire to Serve

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
His concern about increased state spending and his desire to serve Manchester have led Walter Joyner to run again for the 12th Assembly District seat.

Two years ago, Joyner was defeated by incumbent Democratic State Rep. Theodore Cummings by about 1,000 votes. This year, he must first defeat a fellow Republican before he challenges Cummings.

Joyner, who was endorsed by the Republican Town Committee, and Fred Peck, the GOP registrar of voters, both are seeking the party's nomination in the 12th District. They will be opponents in Tuesday's primary.

"It's a desire to serve," he said of his run for the assembly seat. "This is a good town. I grew up here and went to school here. I feel I owe a debt to the community."

He has served in other ways — as a blood donor, as a consultant to the Manchester Area Conference of Churches and as a patient advocate for nursing home patients.

He wants a seat in the assembly to add to his service.

Peck, who is the republican registrar of voters, and Walter Joyner, the candidate endorsed by the GOP Town Committee, are seeking the party's nomination in the 12th Assembly District. They will be opponents in Tuesday's primary.

The winner then will challenge incumbent State Rep. Theodore Cummings for the 12th District seat. For Peck, primaries are becoming as routine as swearing in new voters. Two years ago, he entered a primary to retain his registrar's job. At that time, Marion Mercer was the endorsed candidate of the town committee. Peck, however, easily won that primary and continued as registrar.

"God hath power to help" — II Chron. 25:8

Our society today is one of physical function, material things and expansion of the mind for technical purposes of physical survival and pleasure. There is no doubt as to why today's youth is confused.

We are aware there is something more from innate knowledge, but only see and are told of the physical things. Through the years, the experience of God has diminished, but today many are trying to regain it. Being basically a spirit-body, we do have innate knowledge and things which are not related or caused by our physical being or involvement.

Anselm believed that God created all from his wisdom and being. His wisdom and Word (are) co-eternal with himself. This found to explain existence of creation. Aquinas believed in a Primal Truth and that some things are evident or capable of being evident to us and others are not. I had never looked at it this way, but in viewing this ... I realize the limitations of man's knowledge and understanding. Of course, it is limited — we are man not God. I believe that since we don't know what we are capable of, we must keep trying and seeking to fulfill what we are capable of. However, if something is too great and obstacle ... it is best not to dwell on it but go on to something else. There are infinite things we can attain and learn that we would ignore if we centered our attention on something we couldn't attain. Then we would be left with very little.

Application Withdrawn For 49-Lot Subdivision

By CHRIS BLAKE

Hartford Reporter
EAST HARTFORD — For the second time in the past four months, the developers of a proposed 49-lot subdivision of Long Hill Street have withdrawn their application before the Inland Wetlands Commission. Henry Genga, commission chairman, said today.

The subdivision plan appears on Tuesday night's Inland Wetlands Commission agenda and on Wednesday night's Planning and Zoning Commission agenda.

Ed Hoberman of H & J Builders, the developers, said today his firm withdrew because of time conflicts which some of the hired consultants had.

He said his firm had hired consultants to explain the plot and drainage plans.

Hoberman said the withdrawal has nothing to do with the new ground drainage system which the developers have proposed.

"We still feel we have designed a good plan," he said. He said the firm will re-apply in October.

The developers also withdrew a 51-lot subdivision for the same 25.85-acre tract in June after local residents had complained about potential problems with a proposed storm retention basin near school property.

This time, the developers had planned to build an inground station under a tennis court on one of the plots.

Charles Sheehan, the town engineer said he contacted the developers' engineer last Tuesday, requesting more information about the design of the storm drainage system.

In addition, Sheehan said "certain engineering parameters were not documented."

"I don't want to say that was the reason they withdrew the application, because I don't know," Sheehan said. However, Sheehan said the developers could not come up with the information he requested on storage of storm water as of last Friday.

Walter F. Forrest, chairman of the PZC, said he has heard nothing from the developers about the withdrawal. However, he said withdrawals must be made at least five days before the PZC is scheduled to meet. He said the PZC must now hear the application and would probably deny it without prejudice.

This would leave the door open for the developers to return with a new application in October.

"We really can't start building until April anyway, so a month doesn't make that much of a difference," Hoberman said.

The proposed subdivision is located in the area west of Long Hill Street and east of Alps Drive and the Langford School.

It is zoned residential and the smallest lot size under the present plan would be 15,000 square feet.

East Hartford Police Report

Police said three Hartford men were arrested Sunday night and charged with attempted second-degree larceny and conspiracy to possess burglary tools.

The three were identified as Stanley Melvin, 20, Sam Belton, 21, and Wallace Hunt, 20. Police stopped a van and found that the ignition had been pulled out. They learned that it had been taken from the Ramada Inn near East River Drive.

Bond was set at $2,500 and the men were to be presented in court today.

Police officers noticed a car in the parking lot of the George Sizer school on Deepwood Drive Saturday which led to the arrest of 19-year-old Eugene P. Bailey of 118 Burnside Ave., East Hartford.

Bailey was charged with four counts of contributing to the delinquency of juveniles and one count of possession of marijuana. Police said they found beer in the car. There were four minors in the car. Police said.

Bailey also was charged with driving an unregistered vehicle and improper use of registration.

Police reported a robbery at 144 Robin Terrace between 9:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. A bird cage and a green parakeet were stolen after thieves entered by the front porch through an unlocked door. The parakeet was valued at $25. The incident is still under investigation.

Police said David G. Pelletier, 18, of 33 Elmer St., East Hartford, was charged with fourth-degree larceny after an incident at Bradley's Department Store Saturday.

He also was charged with possession of marijuana, police said, and was released on his promise to appear in court Sept. 25.

Paul J. Cleaver, 23, of Hartford was arrested Saturday and charged with auto theft, police said.

A car had been stolen from the Ramada Inn on East River Drive and police said they found Cleaver sleeping in the car. He was to be presented today in court.

Three Hurt in Crash

Ella Reiterates Stand On State Income Tax

By CHARLIE MAYNARD
Hartford Reporter
EAST HARTFORD — Gov. Ella Grasso pressed the flesh with East Hartford supporters Sunday night and reiterated her opposition to a state income tax.

Next up was Barbara Kennelly, candidate for Secretary of State. She said that she was one of the few candidates without a primary tomorrow, but added that "Ella has one and it's important that she wins."

Also seated up front with the other contenders were General Assembly candidates Timothy Moynihan, Muriel Yacovone, Richard Willard and Marcella Fahey. The candidates were introduced by Democratic Town Chairman James Fitzgerald.

The governor was an hour and a half late but no one seemed to mind. She received warm applause the instant she stepped through the door and responded by waving cheerfully to everyone.

Gov. Grasso shared the platform with other Democratic candidates. Congressman William Cotter addressed the crowd first and asked them to throw their support behind the governor.

Driver Ed Is Subject For Board

EAST HARTFORD — The Board of Education will hold its regular meeting tonight at the Penney High School Amphitheater with input expected from parents over the dropping of driver education at the two high schools.

Included on the superintendent's suggested agenda is an audience meeting Mrs. Phyllis Cassidy of 40 Sisson St. Both Mrs. Cassidy and Mrs. Rineette Chasse of 121 Sisson St. have circulated petitions and statements asking that driver education be reinstated at both Penney and East Hartford High.

The Board of Education dropped the program in July because of budget constraints. State law has given schools the option of keeping the program in their curriculum.

"I believe that it is a very important part of our high schools," Mrs. Chasse said today. "There is a very high demand for it. Let us not sit back and wait until it is too late to bring it back into our high schools. The lessons that might be learned from it could be too costly because we cannot put a price on our children's lives, ourselves or our townspeople."

Mrs. Chasse urged other parents and citizens to attend tonight's meeting which is scheduled to begin at 7:30.

Other board business slated for the meeting includes reports from the superintendent and the listing of Board of Education objectives for this school year.

PZC Meets Tonight; Hearings Scheduled

COVENTRY — The Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) will hold two public hearings tonight at its meeting which begins at 7:30 at the Town Hall Board Room.

At 8 p.m. an application by Ralph Zahner for a seven-lot subdivision on Lewis Hill Road will be heard. The land is owned by Arthur England and others.

At 9 p.m. Alfred Heckler will present his application for a five-lot subdivision on Boston Turnpike.

The commission is expected to reach a decision on the application of John LaBelle for an eight-lot subdivision on Carpenter Road and on Broadway known as Section 2 of Coventry Woods. R.G. Snyder is the developer.

A ruling also will be made on Khalig Satari's application for a four-lot subdivision on the western side of Carpenter Road. Local conservationists have asked for the preservation of wetlands and a large swamp on the parcel's rear lot.

Town Planner Gregory Padick has prepared a final draft of a plan of development for Coventry for commission discussion tonight. A revised section of the plan deals with the Wangumbung Lake (Coventry Lake) drainage basin, which Padick describes as "overdeveloped with poor roadway and drainage systems and extensive health problems associated with filled wetland areas."

The planner says this section has "undersized and poorly constructed septic systems, shallow wells, and insufficient land area to permanently solve its problems on-site." He believes the prime determinants of water quality in this area are the smallness of the lake watershed compared to its surface area and volume, the predominately ground water supply as opposed to tributary water courses, and land uses within the lake basin. These factors, plus septic system inadequacies, Padick maintains, have led to eutrophication (early aging) of the lake.

"The study strongly suggests that if permanent solutions are not immediately implemented, Wangumbung Lake's water quality will not be suitable for most recreational use such as boating, swimming, and fishing." Therefore, he recommends strict regulation of development in the lake basin, the adoption of low-density zoning, and the creation of an undeveloped buffer around the lake shore.

Garden Club
COVENTRY — The Coventry Garden Club will meet Tuesday at noon at the home of Theresa McKay on Dooley Avenue. Hostesses will be Dol Perrell and Alice Collette. The subject for the meeting will be the East Council Flower Show slated for Sept. 16.

Council To Discuss Refuse Problems

SOUTH WINDSOR — A representative from E. P. Hayes Co. is expected to meet with the Town Council tonight to discuss problems regarding the local contract for refuse collection.

Numerous problems and numerous complaints from dissatisfied citizens have prompted Mayor Nancy Caffyn to arrange for a representative to meet with the council.

Councilman Edward Haves told the council that he has received "almost daily" complaints from citizens who have found garbage scattered by the roadside on collection day.

Some residents have complained that the contract, which stipulates that only plastic bags and standard trash containers are acceptable containers, is unreasonable and inconvenient.

One resident told the council that the pick-up is so inadequate that the "beauty of South Windsor's streets is in jeopardy."

The town's decision to enter into municipal refuse collection was based on the fact that the state EPA ordered the closing of the present landfill area because of overuse and the resulting ecological damage to the area.

Prior to the municipal collection service, 3,000 houses were using private collection and 1,500 were carrying their own refuse to the Strong Road landfill area.

Wapping Fair Draws Big Weekend Crowds

By JUDY KUEHNEL
Herald Correspondent
SOUTH WINDSOR — The Wapping Fair — an annual tradition for nearly 100 years — opened its gates Friday, and by Sunday, a record crowd of more than 10,000 people had arrived to enjoy the varied activities of the 1978 fair.

Thronging lined the parade route on Saturday, Ronald Sarasin, GOP hopeful for governor, walked the parade route. Lt. Governor Robert Killian was unable to attend as planned, however, Mrs. Killian took his place in the parade.

A gigantic float depicting "Jaws" — the only float entry in the parade — amused young and old alike, as it wheeled along through numerous bands, including South Windsor's own Golden Saints Marching Band.

The aroma of hot dogs grilling and fresh baked pizzas provided traditional fair scents, as strains of polkas, played by the "Chime Belles" orchestra in the beer tent, added a festive atmosphere.

Exhibits ranged from doll collections to hand made rugs and quilts. Gardeners submitted giant marigolds and thriving potted plants. Delicious looking canned fruits and vegetables and homemade jams and preserves lined display tables, just as in the days when Gramma and Grampa went to the Wapping Fair.

A continuous lineup of entertainment provided fairgoers, tired from strolling through the lines of displays, the chance to stop and rest and be amused. Paul Aral and his students put on a Karate exhibition on Saturday afternoon.

Doodle bug contests continued from 1:30 to 5 p.m. on Saturday. On Sunday, the Seaside Valley Riders, put on a horse show for fairgoers, followed by the Fifth Annual Five Mile Foot Race.

The fair, jointly sponsored by the Knights of Columbus and the Jaycees, closed Sunday.

Life-Saving Program Under Way For Bolton Senior Citizens

By DONNA HOLLAND
Herald Correspondent
BOLTON — The VIAL of life program is under way in Bolton and by the end of the month all senior citizens will have been given the opportunity to participate in the program.

The program is being sponsored by the Bolton Volunteer Fire Department at the request of the Senior Citizens. It consists of having a plastic tube, containing vital information about people who live in the house, taped to the inside of the refrigerator. There should be one tube for each person living in the house.

The tubes will enable emergency medical personnel to obtain necessary information in case of fire or a medical emergency.

The vials are plastic tubes that were once discarded by Manchester Memorial Hospital personnel after their sterile contents had been removed. The vials are being donated to Bolton residents by the hospital's auxiliary.

Cynthia Fagan, Bolton Volunteer Fire Department member who has been instrumental in getting the program under way, said the tubes will be distributed to senior citizens at a meeting later this month.

Mrs. Fagan said vials will also be left at the Bolton Pharmacy, Community Hall and local churches for those senior citizens unable to attend the meeting.

She said the program will continue until all Bolton residents have been given the opportunity to receive vials for every member of their family. Inserted in each tube will be a form giving each person's name, allergies to medication, current medication, physician's name, church affiliation and who to call in case of an emergency.

Mrs. Fagan is being assisted by members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Bolton Volunteer Fire Department.

Dear Fellow Democrats:

As a candidate for State Representative from the 55th District, I want you to know that I am committed to give you the active representation which we have long needed.

Through the "Country Caucus" which I have proposed, I will be organizing small town representatives into an effective lobby to establish the following priorities for our district:

1. Saving our lakes
2. Preserve and revive our village greens
3. Increase State Aid for local school districts
4. Strongly oppose a State Income Tax

With your help in the Democratic primary on September 12, I can become your standard bearer and concentrate on the campaign against my Republican opponent.

We need a strong Democrat who can win in November and become your new voice for Eastern Connecticut at the Capitol.

Termite Control Safe, Phillips Says of School

Information obtained today from the termite exterminating company which will treat for a termite infestation at Washington School shows that the chemicals to be used are completely safe, according to Paul Phillips, building committee chairman.

The new West Side Recreation Center before the gymnasium floor is installed.

Phillips said the chemical to be used by the Terminex International Co. of West Hartford is called OC-6. It is not a spray-type pesticide, but a pressure impregnated chemical which will be forced into the floor joists.

It is the same type of chemical used to treat houses while they are occupied, and has proven to be completely safe, Phillips said.

The company is the same one which has been used to service schools before.

The schools which have been treated for termites within the last five years include Green, Bowers and Bentley elementary schools and the Franklin Building and the new gymnasium at Benet Junior High School during renovations. Phillips said it is not uncommon to find termites in buildings in

A theft of money was reported from Fulling Mill, 451 Main St. Saturday morning. There was no forced entry, police said.

Yankees Share Lead Following Sweep After Four Days of Awesome Hitting

BOSTON (UPI) — It took the New York Yankees 142 games to do it, but the defending world champions have finally reached first place in the American League East. And they did it with four days of awesome contact hitting.

The Yankees pounded out 18 singles Sunday to trounce the Boston Red Sox, 7-4, enabling them to sweep the four-game series and move into first at 81½ wins.

The Yankees outscored the Red Sox 12-9 over the series and outthrew them 67-20. It was their 21st win in their last 26 games.

"I'd be lying if I said we expected to come here and do this in this park," said Willie Randolph, who had eight hits in the series. "It's tough enough just to win two here."

The Yankees regulars had 60 hits in 10 at-bats for a combined average of .397. No Boston starter lasted four innings. The Yankees led 15 men on base during the series.

Lou Piniella, one of three Yankees to collect two RBIs Sunday, had 10 hits in 17 at-bats during the sweep.

"We're not a power club," said Piniella, noting the Yankees had only two homers in the series. "We're a line-drive, contact hitting club. We played good ball, but they are as capable as we are. There are still 20 more games to go."

The Yankees jumped on starter and loser Bob Sproed, 0-2, for three runs in the first, thanks to four walks played by the rookie lefthander. Reggie Jackson knocked in one run and Graig Nettles had two RBIs in the inning.

"We were hot and they were limping," said Jackson, who drove in another run in the second with an infield hit. "We knew we needed two and here we got it. But we had everything going for us and we never failed to cash in on our opportunities."

George Scott, the Red Sox must relax over the final 20 games. "It's a matter of loosening up and going out there and trying to have some pressure on yourself. You keep watching the scoreboard and then you're in trouble."

Evans said he would be available to be the designated hitter, but said he could not play the outfield.

Custody Battles Continue

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — The lengthy and emotional custody of her sons from a Connecticut executive who wants to adopt them will continue in court Sept. 20.

Mrs. William Popp, now of Newbury Park, Calif., has filed a motion in Bridgeport Superior Court to gain custody of the youngsters from Richard Lucas of Fairfield. She is also appealing an earlier decision to the state Supreme Court.

Mrs. Popp later said she took her two sons to the agency, because she feared for their safety in the final days of the Vietnam War as communist troops approached Saigon.

The agency placed the boys with Lucas, an oil company employee working in Saigon at the time.

After Saigon fell, the mother fled South Vietnam and the next year, she married William Popp, an American pilot for Flying Tiger Airlines, in California.

In a dramatic effort to recover the children, the couple picked up the children as they waited for a school bus in Fairfield and returned to Connecticut officials threatened to file kidnapping charges against them.

However, the couple eventually agreed to return the children to Lucas and try to gain their custody through Connecticut courts.

After a seven-month trial in Bridgeport Superior Court, permanent custody of the boys, Mark and Paul, was granted to Lucas, an oil company executive. That decision is being appealed to the Connecticut Supreme Court.

Pending the outcome of the appeal, Mrs. Popp has filed a motion in Bridgeport Superior Court seeking custody of her children.

Rehearsals Begin

The Manchester Community College Chorus has begun weekly rehearsals on Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. in the music building on the main campus off Bidwell Street.

Residents of the community who are interested in music are invited to join the chorus, and may do so simply by attending a rehearsal.

The chorus, formed in 1969, is directed by Associate Professor of Music Robert C. Vator. It was composed of both faculty and community members until 1974 when students were admitted and the chorus was expanded to become a one-credit course that supplemented opportunities for music majors to perform in public.

The repertoire of the chorus is selected to include jazz and rock music as well as classical selections. The chorus will perform at several college functions each semester and will give concerts at local civic organizations and clubs.

For further information, call Vator at college extension 851 or at home at 527-4596, or call Jan Wodati at 649-7804.

Hub News Strike Likely

BOSTON (UPI) — Composing room workers at Boston's two major daily newspapers, hoping to strengthen the hand of union bargainers, have voted overwhelmingly to authorize a strike against the Globe and the Herald American.

No deadline for a walkout was set and the head of the local union said he was "optimistic" a strike can be averted if the publishers do some "hard-nosed bargaining" in the next few days.

All three major daily papers in New York have been closed since Aug. 9 by a pressmen's strike.

Henry Vitale, president of the Boston Typographical Union, said Sunday's 578-19 vote authorized the union negotiating committee to call a strike without going back to the membership.

The estimated 800 composing room workers at the Globe and Herald have been without a contract since Dec. 21.

Bargaining sessions were set for Tuesday and Wednesday. Vitale declined to predict the outcome, but he added, "I'm optimistic an agreement could be reached if the publishers will do some hard nosed bargaining with the local union. I feel the next session will be held in a different atmosphere."

Asked if the strike authorization vote would help speed a settlement, Vitale said, "I think it will. If it doesn't then we've got problems."

The two sides have been bargaining for 14 months.

Vitale said some workers at Sunday's union meeting wanted to strike immediately. "It took some convincing to tell them we better wait until we see what happens in the meetings," he said.

Vitale said the talks currently center on the "complex problem" of transferring jobs covered by the union to other employees using new equipment.

"We plan to ask to have a meeting with all of the other unions. We've sent a notice, but haven't set a date or time yet," he said.

The last newspaper strike in Boston was in 1966 and lasted for 31 days. Vitale said his union joined mailroom workers in that strike.

"I want some kind of jurisdiction to protect my people," he said. "We haven't gotten to the wage area yet. In order to reach an agreement we need conditions we can agree to. There is no sense in getting wages if we can't get conditions," he added.

"If a strike occurs, Vitale said he would ask the other unions at the two papers to honor his union picket lines.

Nicaragua War Now Full Scale

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Government troops under orders to kill guerrillas "until the last man" battled for every block in Nicaragua's second-largest city and part of the capital today in full-scale civil war in the South American nation. A third city, Masaya, was in flames.

The mounting death toll reportedly was in the hundreds in the fighting between the U.S.-trained army of President Anastasio Somoza and the Sandinista guerrillas, who last month staged a dramatic commando operation at the National Palace.

The government placed Masaya and Esteli under martial law after a Cabinet meeting of Somoza and his ministers.

A communication suspending constitutional guarantees in both cities was issued from the "bunker" — Somoza's headquarters — amid the sounds of gunfire in the capital.

In a separate communique, the government again claimed order had been re-established in Managua and Leon, the country's second-largest city, and called on Nicaraguans in those cities to go to work normally today.

"The Sandinistas are holding one block here and the Guard is on the other block," said Alonso Abunza, publisher of the Centroamericano newspaper in Leon. "Eight masked guerrillas, one of them a girl who couldn't have been more than 13 years old, came by here asking anyone to give them their pistols."

Foreign visitors said they counted at least eight bodies from gun battles in the afternoon at the only hospital still operating.

Legionnaires' Disease Reaches Peak in NYC

NEW YORK (UPI) — The number of suspected cases of Legionnaires' disease in New York City has risen to 97, but Mayor Edward Koch says officials believe the illness may have peaked.

Koch said Sunday that since the number of confirmed cases in the city's garment district outbreak remained at six — two of them fatal — "we believe it is possible that the phase has peaked."

"As with everything else in New York City, this too will pass," he told a news conference.

City and federal officials began medical detective work Sunday to pinpoint the source of the illness.

The work consists of establishing a control group to compare antibody levels with those in the affected group. Antibodies are complex proteins that indicate the presence of disease.

"We are trying to determine when did it start, where did it start and how did it start to see if we can answer some of the environmental questions," said Dr. William Foege, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Foege, who was sent to New York to assist city officials, said that if antibody levels in the control group were much higher, "one would assume there's been a source of Legionnaires' disease in that area for some time."

The number of suspected cases increased by 15 from the 72 reported Saturday. As a first step in its medical detective work, the city took water samples from water towers atop buildings in the city's garment district.

A related measure, flushing down and disinfecting streets and subway stations in the district, was ended.

The control group will consist of 200 to 300 people and many will be middle-aged since a large number of the confirmed and suspected cases have occurred among middle-aged people.

Washington (UPI) — The Justice Department no longer is trying to extradite fugitive financier Robert Vesco and instead is seeking other means to return him to the United States for prosecution, a department spokesman says.

The decision originally was revealed by Jack Anderson, whose column for today's newspapers reported the strategy change came after Vesco improperly tried to ingratiate himself with President Carter's advisers, Hamilton Jordan and Charles Kirbo, through friends in Georgia.

Although Anderson wrote, "There is no evidence that either man has a finger in Vesco's behalf," both Jordan and Kirbo have denied they had even been approached. The White House also denied any role in Vesco's case.

Anderson's column during a series of weekend briefings, and the column was revised.

Miss America 1979, Kylene J. Barker, describes herself as the "girl next door" and says Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis is her heroine.

The 21-year-old beauty queen from rural Virginia, who was crowned Saturday night, said Sunday she plans to use her position to boost a ladies' apparel shop she wants to open in Virginia or — if her prestige takes her far enough — in Palm Beach, Fla., where the wealthy shop, Mrs. Onassis is her heroine because of her innovations in fashion — Miss Barker's major at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Miss Barker graduated in June, and hopes one day to earn her masters in business administration.

Facing reporters at a news conference Sunday, the 5-foot-4-inch, 108-pound, honey blonde said she pictures herself as "a typical American citizen." Her father is a meat cutter; her mother a housewife. The former cheerleader calls herself a conservative in outlook who "probably" would vote for the Equal Rights Amendment, but has fears it might spur "a sexless society."

Miss Barker has opposed the decriminalization of marijuana because she was in junior high school where she wrote a term paper linking pot smoking to the use of harder drugs.

Miss Barker speculated she did not get her wish to be catapulted into the national limelight because she was the prettiest of the 50 contestants. Instead, she said, she thinks she won because she consistently scored high in the talent, swimsuit and evening gown preliminaries.

For her talent entry Miss Barker performed an acrobatic dance to the music of "Rocky" and "Feel So Good."

In her new role as the 58th Miss America, the Galax, Va., resident soars to a new income level. Right off, she gets a $20,000 scholarship. Then start the appearances and advertisements that run into the tens of thousands of dollars.

The four runners up in the pageant were Miss Alabama, Teresa Cheatham; Miss Florida, Carolyn Cline; Miss Ohio, Sheri Patrick; and Miss Washington, Laurie Nelson.

HARTFORD (UPI) — Andy West lost weight and suffered from a sore throat on his run from Maine to Florida, but he plans another jaunt on the West Coast to raise more money to combat muscular dystrophy.

West's benefit odyssey totaled 2,500 miles from Caribou, Maine, to Marathon, Fla. He completed his journey Sept. 2 and presented a check for $100,000 to Jerry Lewis on the Labor Day-Muscular Dystrophy Telethon.

The 29-year-old Farmington resident received a hero's welcome Saturday as he jogged 12.4 victory miles from Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks to downtown Hartford.

About 200 joggers joined him in the run of Hartford's Bushnell Park where well-wishers, including Gov. Ella Grasso, cheered the distance runner. Mrs. Grasso proclaimed the day in his honor.

West said he lost about 30 pounds in his run to Florida completed on Sept. 2 but had gained back 10 pounds last week.

He also suffered from recurring tonillitis and he was tired. But, said West, he is already planning a similar run from the Canadian border south to Mexico.

West was joined in his jog to Hartford by his three brothers and a sister and Connecticut Health Commissioner Dr. Douglas S. Lloyd.

Teachers Agree In New Orleans

By United Press International
Negotiators for the Orleans Parish school board and United Teachers of New Orleans today reached a tentative agreement to end an 11-day strike that crippled instruction to the district's 90,000 students.

A school board spokesman said schools would resume normal operation Tuesday. Officials said all substitute teachers who filled in during the strike were terminated.

Terms of the agreement were withheld.

While New Orleans' school labor problems were apparently over, teacher strikes continued to produce a not always welcome summer vacation extension for some half a million students.

Strikes and contract disputes in dozens of small towns have been settled, but major school strikes still plague students in about a dozen states and four major cities.

Negotiators for the Boston School Committee and the 5,000-member Boston Teachers Union reviewed contract proposals Sunday in an attempt to avert a threatened teachers strike this week. Classes started for public school students as scheduled last Wednesday. Teachers agreed to report to work pending the outcome of negotiations.

The 110,000 students of Chicago's city colleges have been locked out of classes for two weeks now. One student leader complained that intransigence on both sides of the picket lines will cause students to "work like dogs" once the strike ends.

Washington state — including Seattle and Tacoma — idled 90,000 students and strikes at a dozen school districts in Michigan delayed the education of 70,000 pupils. In Illinois, 38,000 students were idled in three strike districts.

Marion, Ind., schools also opened today. Teachers approved a new contract Friday and ended a 10-day strike. Strike leaders jailed for refusing to order strikers back to work were set free and judge was asked to rescind fines and jail terms imposed on the city's 332 striking teachers for contempt of court.
