Plans Change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a last-minute switch, President Carter has decided on a more flexible guideline for price increases contained in his new anti-inflation program, officials said today.

The alteration may present some additional problems for Carter in his campaign to convince business, labor and the general public to cooperate. He goes on national television and radio at 10 p.m. Tuesday to outline plans for taming the inflationary spiral.

For the past seven weeks, administration officials have been telling businessmen, labor leaders and the press that Carter's voluntary guidelines would involve an average 7 percent ceiling for wages next year and 5 1/4 percent for prices.

But some confusion developed during administration explanations concerning the prices side of that equation.

So officials have been spending the past two days attempting a clarification.

Fights Project

Michael Dworkin, who had challenged the J.C. Penney Co.'s building in Manchester, now plans an environmental suit against the Buckland Commons project. See page 2.

Study Conflict

BEIRUT (UPI) — Prime Minister Selim al Hoss and a special government committee today began a study of the roots of the Lebanese conflict as a prelude to promoting a truce, but cease-fire violations undermined the difficulties ahead.

Hoss and other cabinet ministers also planned to draw up a timetable for implementation of the resolutions of a recent Arab foreign minister's parley which sketched the broad lines of a peace plan for war-torn Lebanon.

The resolutions called for collection of weapons from the country's militias, strengthening of the central government and "balanced" restructuring of the Lebanese army.

The Park and Cemetery Departments in Manchester may be combined eventually after the retirement of the present park Superintendent. See page 12.

Hearing Reset

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A court hearing for the two remaining defendants charged in an alleged plot to steal a nuclear submarine was postponed today until Nov. 3.

Edward J. Mendenhall, 24, of Rochester, N.Y., and James W. Cosgrove, 26, of Geneva, N.Y., appeared before U.S. District Judge John F. Nangle, who allowed the postponement because a grand jury looking into the case has not yet returned any indictments.

Donald L. Wolff, court-appointed attorney for Mendenhall, said the grand jury is scheduled to meet on Nov. 1 and Nov. 2, and if no indictment is handed down by then, the 30-day limit for such action will have passed.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed Monday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which scored the worst one-week loss in its 93-year history last week, was ahead 0.17 to 838.18 shortly after the opening bell. The Dow lost 59.08 points last week, eclipsing the previous record of 51.78 points given up in the five days ended Nov. 2, 1973 during the Arab oil embargo.

Peace Pact Draft Gets Egypt Favor

By United Press International
Egypt today took a favorable but qualified view of the draft of a historic peace treaty with Israel that could officially end three decades of hostility between the two nations.

Moshe Dayan, Israel's chief treaty negotiator and foreign minister, was presenting the draft text to the Israeli cabinet today in Jerusalem for its approval.

Dayan, on arrival from Washington Sunday with Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, said the two sides were "closer together" but emphasized "there are a number of areas where even now we do not have an agreement."

Israeli and Egyptian negotiators announced in Washington Sunday they had resolved all the "principal issues" of a treaty under which Israel would withdraw from the Sinai and Egypt would allow economic and cultural ties with the Jewish nation.

A cautiously worded Egyptian statement issued in Cairo today was largely favorable to the draft treaty and high on praise for President Carter for his role in eliminating differences between Israel and Egypt.

"Egypt holds that some points in the draft might require further study to make it ready for signing," Presidential Press Secretary said.

Nassar praised President Carter's intervention with the Israeli and Egyptian negotiators late last week to bring tentative agreement on the draft.

The spokesman thus implied that Egypt's reaction to the draft was largely favorable.

"Egypt must pay tribute to the wonderful and honest effort made by President Carter who held a lengthy meeting with the Egyptian delegation Saturday morning to push the process toward agreement and to overcome some difficulties and differences," Nassar said.

If the Israeli Cabinet and Sadat approve the text as expected, Dayan said the negotiators would have to return to Washington this week for further negotiations to reach a finalized peace treaty.

It appeared Israel and Egypt had resolved what had become the major stumbling block — whether a peace treaty would include the Jewish nation's withdrawal from the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip.

The influential Al Ahrām newspaper said Egypt won its point by "completely and specifically" linking the treaty to progress in solving the West Bank problem.

According to Al Ahrām, the draft states that "this treaty represents an agreement between Egypt and Israel within the framework of reaching an overall agreement for realizing peace in the Middle East. This is linked to bringing about concrete progress regarding the West Bank and Gaza."

Al Ahrām said that once the draft is approved by the Egyptian and

Israeli governments, negotiators will turn their attention to drafting four supplements to the treaty.

These will include a military document dealing with the timetable of Israeli withdrawal from Sinai, a diplomatic document dealing with the establishment of Egyptian-Israeli diplomatic relations, and two economic and cultural annexes.

Partial Israeli withdrawal from about 60 percent of the Sinai desert will be completed in less than the nine months called for by the Camp David framework, and total withdrawal will be affected in less than three years, the newspaper said.

Rec Director Won't Coach

By GREG PEARSON

Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — The town's recreation director has decided not to coach the boys' swim team at Manchester High School, because of a dispute about his taking the job.

In a letter received today by Dick Cobb, director of athletics, Mel Siebold said he will not take the boys' swim coach position.

Siebold had accepted the job earlier this month after obtaining approval from Town Manager Bob Weiss. Weiss sent a memorandum to members of the Town Board of Directors, and no objections were raised. Objections later came from the Advisory Recreation and Park Commission.

Weiss and Siebold agreed to some changes for Siebold's daily schedule so he could handle the coaching jobs and the daily duties of the recreation director position.

These included Siebold coming to work a half-hour earlier, taking only a half-hour for lunch and making up extra time evenings and weekends.

The swim team job would have been from 3 to 5 p.m. daily from November through March.

Siebold is an active member and is national ranked in masters competition. He also has had previous coaching experience in the sport.

The town's Advisory Recreation and Park Commission first mentioned concern about Siebold taking the coaching position at an Oct. 3 meeting.

Members question whether he could continue to handle the duties of the recreation director job and wondered why he could have enough free time to also take the coaching job.

The commission met again Oct. 19 to discuss the matter. Weiss and Siebold both attended that session.

Siebold pointed to the dispute as the main reason for his leaving the swim coach job.

"I feel that coaching boys' swim team will only cause problems for all concerned. This group would continue to be vocal and cause problems for me and the town manager," Siebold wrote in his letter to Cobb.

He said that he would offer to help the new coach in any way he can.

"It would have been fun," he concluded, referring to the swim coach job.

Weiss did not want to comment this morning on Siebold's decision. Siebold and Joel Janenda, chairman of the Rec and Park Commission, could not be reached for comment.

Pope Asks World To Advance Peace

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II urged world leaders today to seek not only the well-being of their own citizens but to promote cooperation of all peoples in the interests of human progress and a lasting peace. He said the Roman Catholic church can help them achieve this goal.

The former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Poland issued the appeal during a meeting with the 125 delegations from nations and international organization that attended his inauguration Mass in St. Peter's Square.

The new pontiff, urging world leaders to open their borders wide to religion, also held a series of separate audiences with monarchs, presidents and premiers, including the leader of his native Poland.

"Certainly men of state and their qualified aides have as their first priority their own nations and the well being of their citizens," the pope told the delegations in French.

"But one certainty imposes itself more and more and you are the first ones to be convinced of it: that there cannot be real human progress and durable peace without a courageous, loyal and unselfish search for cooperation and unity among all people," he said.

"In this regard the church encourages all initiatives that can be taken, all plans that can be accomplished both bilateral and multilateral.

"The church, continuing its specific aim of sending mankind down the right path, believes it can contribute its share — thanks to spiritual love — to this burden of unity and to a humanization more profound than ever in the family of man and in his history," the 58-year-old pontiff said.

John Paul II spoke to the delegations jointly after meeting privately in formal audience with delegations led by heads of state or their wives.

After the joint meeting, the pope held a second, informal, meeting with President Henryk Jablonski of Poland and the Polish delegation, Vatican officials said.

John Paul II — the first Polish pope in history, the first non-Italian in 455 years and the first from a communist-ruled nation — gave a virtuoso multilingual performance Sunday, addressing an estimated 1 billion people in 40 nations, a quarter of the globe's population.

The pope, 58 and formerly Archbishop Karol Wojtyla of Krakow, spoke in 11 languages: Polish, Italian, English, French, Spanish, Portuguese, German, Russian, Ukrainian, Lithuanian and Czech at the homily during his inaugural mass.

He was interrupted by thunderous applause 45 times as 300,000 people, 5,000 of them from Poland, packed St. Peter's Square for the three-hour ceremony that began in chilly winds and ended in a blaze of autumn sunshine.

said he would return to Washington Tuesday even if an agreement is not reached.

"I have to go back to the United States and Secretary Gromyko has to get ready for a trip," Vance said. "I've got to get back home. I've been away a long time."

Gromyko was asked whether there would be another round of SALT talks soon should the current negotiations fail to reach an accord.

"This is rather ... presumably, yes," he said. "Why not have another round?"

Vance and Gromyko were asked whether a SALT-II agreement would be completed before the end of the year.

"The most precise answer must be that the time may come," Gromyko said. He was asked whether it would be soon.

"What do you mean by soon?" Gromyko asked. "It all depends upon what you mean by soon."

The talks opened in the Kremlin on Sunday.

U.S. and Soviets Close to Treaty

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said today the United States and Soviet Union are "closer to agreement" on a strategic arms limitation pact after three rounds of negotiation in the Kremlin.

"We are closer to agreement today than we were at the end of the (SALT) talks in Washington," Vance said as he and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko prepared to attend a luncheon after the morning session.

"These talks have been very useful and very constructive. The problems remain. As I said before, it's brick by brick."

Gromyko smiled and added, "Yes, it's a jump by jump."

Gromyko also confirmed that Vance would be meeting Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev "later in the day." "Yes," he said. "The secretary will be meeting the secretary."

Both Gromyko and Vance hedged when they were asked whether an agreement could come out of the current round of SALT talks. Vance

'Bentleyitis' Now Cured

MANCHESTER — A gathering of about 350 students, parents, teachers, principals, school and town officials and other "friends of Bentley" School participated in rededication ceremonies Sunday afternoon at the Hollister Street school.

The ceremony was the culmination of efforts of many community persons over the past five years to renovate the 57-year-old school. The renovations of all the classrooms and facilities at the school were completed late last summer.

Patrick Brown of the parents renovation committee involved in the planning from the beginning up to Sunday's program said Sunday that "Bentleyitis has been cured." He was referring to the many problems, delays and revisions of the Bentley project over the past few years. The original bond issue for the school renovations, which also included an addition at first, was passed by voters three years ago.

The project was pared down several times because of school officials' revisions in the school population projections. The final cost of the renovations was listed as $535,000 by architect Richard Mankey.

Bentley principal Douglas Townsend served as master of ceremonies Sunday. He made special mention of school secretary Lorita McVey who has been secretary at Bentley, almost continuously since 1934.

Paul Greenbert, past chairman of the Board of Education's building committee was given special thanks by School Superintendent James P. Kennedy and others for his efforts on the Bentley project.

School Board Chairman John Yavis emphasized the strong parent input on the project. Others on the renovations committee with Brown were Harriet Duff, Sue Moore, Nancy Taylor, Carol Flynn and Diane Willette.

Also speaking at the ceremonies were Allan Thomas, past chairman of the Board of Education, Greenberg and Arthur Hiling, retired superintendent of schools.

The sixth grade class from Bentley sang a canon about the renovations project being "finally finished" and other musical selections.

Suspended Policeman Complains

EAST HARTFORD - Officer Harold Cassidy filed a grievance with the Personnel Appeals Board because of an eight-day, loss of pay suspension which Police Chief Clarence A. Drumm handed him recently.

Drumm made three charges against Cassidy in connection with an incident which occurred about a month ago. Although Drumm refused to discuss the particulars of the incident, he said he charged Cassidy with dereliction of duty, falsifying a report and insubordination.

A police hearing was held on the matter, according to a procedure which allows an officer to appeal a disciplinary action by the chief. He was found guilty.

Drumm imposed an eight-day suspension without pay and ordered him back after the suspension for retraining, which Drumm called "positive punishment."

Drumm said the suspension cannot be acted on until the Personnel Appeals Board hands down its ruling. The board is scheduled to meet Nov. 9.

Neither Cassidy nor the union representative who is handling the grievance could be reached for comment this morning.

The grievance is the second filed by police personnel in the last month. The board ruled last week in favor of Drumm's policy of not allowing an officer more than two of the officer's three earned days off in a row.

Officer Christine Myers had requested the three earned days in a row to allow her to marry fellow officer Gerald Myers.

The two got married, although Drumm denied the request for an earned day off. Mrs. Myers got another officer to work for her instead and the wedding went on as planned.

Flooding Into Miami

Cuba Frees Prisoners

MIAMI (UPI) - Although blind, crippled and suffering the effects of 47 years in prison, Cuban freedom fighter Tony Cuesta's spirit is undaunted. Cuesta, 51, was the best known of the 47 freed political prisoners who arrived in Miami Saturday to a joyous welcome from the Cuban exile community and a tearful reunion with relatives.

"The most important thing for me to do now that I am free is to work for the release of the people we left behind," Cuesta told a gathering in the heart of Miami's Little Havana section. "I want to help get the other prisoners out. And I want to live quietly." Cuesta was captured during a 1966 raid in which he was injured. The trickle of freed political prisoners emigrating to the United States has the potential of turning into a flood as President Fidel Castro has already freed between 12,000 and 14,000 political prisoners. I hope it is possible to free the rest of the political prisoners by the end of the year," Castro said at a news conference Saturday in Havana.

Cuba has given the United States at least five more lists of prisoners and former prisoners who can leave the island if the American government accepts them. Several prominent exiles in Miami said many of the inmates had been jailed for trying to escape from the island. "I do this for humanitarian reasons and a gesture of goodwill," Castro said.

However, the United States' insistence on implementation of human rights in Cuba before restoration of diplomatic relations almost certainly influenced Castro's decision. A minority factor in the exile community - people who still hold out hope of one day liberating Cuba - has opposed talks with Castro, fearing they will pave the way for new trade and tourist travel between the United States and Cuba, further frustrating their overthrow efforts.

Eugenio Zaldivar, 33, one of Cuesta's raiders who arrived in Miami on the freedom flight Saturday, said he supports a dialogue with Castro "if the basis is political prisoners and the reunification of the family. I won't talk about lifting the blockade or other things."

The emotion of the moment pushed aside political questions at the reception for the 47 prisoners and 34 members of their families. The crowd sang the Cuban national anthem, but a 30-foot-high American flag formed the backdrop for the ceremony as the returning prisoners waved the welcome.

There are no words to describe how you feel after seeing your brother after 12 years," Zaldivar's sister said. Some fathers - like Emilio Lopez Centellas - met their children for the first time. "I have a father at last," 20-year-old Jorge Centellas said as the two embraced.

Dworkin To Fight Buckland Project

MANCHESTER - A local environmentalist who unsuccessfully challenged the J.C. Penney Co.'s building in town now plans similar action against the proposed Buckland Commons development.

Michael Dworkin, who owns a pharmacy in town and long has been active in environmental matters, has said that he will challenge the proposed project in Buckland that would include commercial and residential development.

Dworkin was the primary backer of a suit against the J.C. Penney Co.'s catalog distribution center in Manchester. He challenged that project because the state failed to prepare a proper environmental study of the project.

Superior Court Judge T. Clark Hull ruled last December, however, that the state's action was proper. Construction of the J.C. Penney building began this spring despite a federal environmental suit also filed by Dworkin. That case, which raises concerns about increased traffic and already-violated air quality standards, is still pending.

The challenge to Buckland Commons will follow a similar line. "My stand really hasn't changed much since 1973," Dworkin said in opposition to the Buckland Commons project. He spoke at the Planning and Zoning Commission hearing on the project to oppose it because of the amount of traffic and increased air pollution that would result.

Dworkin said that the area now is two to three times over federal air quality standards. Construction of the proposed project would further aggravate the problem, he said. "That would be comparable to Los Angeles during certain times of the year," Dworkin said.

Superintendent James P. Kennedy is expected to report to the board how federal laws are used to strengthen school library programs.

School Board Sets Meeting

MANCHESTER - The Board of Education will meet tonight at 8 at Bentley School, 57 Hollister St. The Bentley School held an open house and rededication ceremony Sunday in recognition of the recently completed renovation program at the school.

The board will discuss a released time schedule which will allow Manchester High School teachers to work on the school's evaluation program required for re-accreditation of the school by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Superintendent James P. Kennedy is expected to report to the board how federal laws are used to strengthen school library programs.

Grasso Suggests Change In Teacher Strike Law

EAST HARTFORD - The East Hartford Education Association has received a letter from Gov. Ella Grasso advocating changes in the present laws on school-teacher disputes.

Although not explicitly saying that the laws prohibiting teachers to strike are unfair, Gov. Grasso said "the denial of a teacher's right to strike must be accompanied by a legal mechanism that assures a just and equitable solution to these disputes."

In a prepared statement released today, EHEA said it appreciates the commitment the governor has made to this problem although the statement said, "We would wish that Gov. Grasso would recognize it is unfair to forbid teachers to strike while other workers in the economy have that right."

Mrs. Grasso's letter was in response to a letter last month from EHEA President Mark Waxenberg, who protested the jailing of striking teachers in Bridgeport.

"Why should teachers be the only group in our free society to be persecuted and incarcerated for exercising a right that other groups of workers in our society have every right to exercise," he said.

Mrs. Grasso said she has asked the Education Committee of the General Assembly to commit itself to this problem so the legislature could act upon it next year. She also pledged the cooperation of her administration.

Leaf Pickups To Begin

MANCHESTER - Now that the autumn leaves have started to fall the town will begin its annual leaf pickup program. The leaf pickup will start a week from today, George Ringstone, acting highway superintendent, said. He said an advertisement in this Friday's edition of The Herald will list the streets to be picked up during the first week of the program. The work will start in the outermost sections of town. This is about the latest start ever for the leaf pickup program, and Ringstone is hopeful that all work will be completed by the first week in December.

Break Suspect Nabbed

MANCHESTER - One of three burglary suspects discovered by police leaving the Radio Shack at 228 Spencer St. about 11 p.m. Sunday, was apprehended while attempting to flee over a fence near Interstate Highway 84. The other two apparent burglars succeeded in their escape. Alerted to the burglary, police patrol checked out the store and observed three black males leaving a rear entrance. When they saw the officer, they fled on foot, dropping some items on the ground, police said. Those items found were stereo equipment in a carton and a three-piece suit wrapped in cellophane. Arrested was Kye McFarlin, 18, of Hartford. He was charged with third-degree burglary and third-degree larceny. He was held in lieu of $5,000 bond for presentment in court today.

Pact Arbitration Starts

EAST HARTFORD - The school administration and the secretarial unit went into arbitration this morning as a three-member panel from state Department of Labor met to review a proposed contract. The contract was forced into binding arbitration when Local 438 of the Office and Professional Employees union, AFL-CIO, rejected a state fact finder's report in an Aug. 24 vote. The secretaries have been without a contract for the past two years. Key disputes in the proposed contract have centered on wages and changes in language which the administration has said it seeks to function more efficiently. The fact finder recommended a 4.5 percent increase in pay for two years with any increments the employees would be entitled to for moving up a step within each classification grade. The union sought a 10 percent wage hike for three years. The board agreed to a 6.5 percent increase, including increments, as long as the union agreed to changes in the contract language. The secretaries rejected the changes because they feared a loss of job security. However, the fact finders report said the union's concern that "positions would be improperly classified are not real" because it has the right to grieve any transfer or classification. The report recommended that language should be added to the contract insuring "that no employee shall suffer a loss in wages, as a result of the change in classification."

Rham Board Meets Tonight

HEBRON - The Regional Board of Education will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the library of Rham High School. The Rham Building Committee will meet, before the board, at 7 p.m., also in the library. The Board of Education is holding the special meeting to determine interest rates and other details of the $100,000 note for the proposed new junior high school. The board previously voted to renew the $100,000 loan for six months at an interest rate not to exceed 5.6 percent and authorized the Building Committee to proceed. The intent of the committee is to obtain the funds now and invest the money at an eight percent interest rate.

Picture Retakes

The photographer will be at Hebron Elementary School Tuesday from 9 a.m. and Gilead Hill School from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for picture retakes. Afternoon kindergarten students whose photos were not taken in September, must be brought to the school they attend, by a parent or guardian. Photographers won't be at the schools in the afternoon. Anyone having a question should contact Cymara Gaspar, 228-9562.

PZC Hearing

The Planning and Zoning Commission will conduct a public hearing and regular meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Town Office Building. The meeting will receive a report from the Conservation Commission on the Dallaire, Morency and Ellenbert subdivision and a copy of a letter from the tax collector sent to Donald Robinson. This concerns Lot 11 in the Prestige Park subdivision. The commission will also discuss an inquiry from the Zoning Board of Appeals concerning the status of the Jolley property at Amston Lake. Other items on the agenda include a request from the town sanitarian to inspect the Steiner property; Willard Miles pending plan of development for the former Caron Brothers building, Route 85, Amston; and a pending wetlands application from Donald Robinson for Lot 3 in Millstream Park plus an inquiry to the building agent concerning Lot 2 in the same park.

Grasso Says Tax Cutting Plans Are Not Realistic

NEW YORK (UPI) — Calling the tax cutting promises of her Republican challenger fiscally unrealistic, Gov. Ella Grasso predicts Connecticut won't have much extra money in the coming year.

Mrs. Grasso said Sunday in a broadcast interview new revenues will have to be pumped into court-ordered educational funding, and she still supports returning surplus money to the state's taxpayers or to cities and towns.

Appearing unusually confident, the governor also said on WCBS-TV's "Newsmakers" program she is holding a comfortable lead over her opponent Rep. Ronald Sarasin.

The program's viewing audience includes Fairfield County, Conn. — an area both she and Sarasin consider a key battleground in their Nov. 7 election.

Mrs. Grasso chastized Sarasin, a three-term congressman, for trying to jump on the Proposition 13 tax-slashing bandwagon.

He is trying to read the temper of the times," she said. "But he is using code words."

She repeated her oft-stated claim that Sarasin is being unrealistic when he says he can cut taxes in the coming year.

"Next year will not be a year for large, new spending," the governor guaranteeing that any surplus money be returned to the taxpayers. A similar proposal has been offered in Michigan.

The governor said, "I was in favor of returning the surplus to the taxpayers (earlier this year)."

The state had a $93 million surplus last year. Mrs. Grasso wanted to give $30 million of that amount back to homeowners in direct rebates.

"During the last session, the Legislature chose to use the money for urban aid."

Mrs. Grasso said she would like to see any surplus money in the future returned to Connecticut citizens or to municipalities for tax relief.

Grasso, Sarasin Bicker

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella Grasso says her Republican opponent's proposal to reduce the state's income tax by 1 percent and repeal state taxes on dividends and capital gains is "irresponsible."

Mrs. Grasso faced Rep. Ronald Sarasin at the Wadsworth Atheneum in a debate broadcast Sunday on WNBC-TV in New York. The candidates bickered mostly about taxes and spending.

Sarasin said his forthcoming position paper on taxes will call for a $100 million reduction in the 7 percent state sales tax and repeals of the state taxes on dividends paid capital gains, worth another $35 million.

"I am for cutting taxes, but I think cutting taxes in this session is irresponsible," the governor responded.

Mrs. Grasso said the state would need funds to implement the court-ordered school-financing equalization and to maintain services. Nevertheless, she said she plans to keep the tax rate stable.

"I am the governor," she said, "and I have directed the Office of Policy and Management to prepare (next year's) budget with no new spending and no tax increase."

Sarasin again charged Mrs. Grasso is "born again" to the anti-tax, anti-spending position and said last year's budget increase of 14.7 percent was the highest in the nation.

As the confrontation warmed up, Mrs. Grasso referred to Sarasin as "absurd and irresponsible" and Sarasin said Mrs. Grasso had "reached the panic point."

At another point, Mrs. Grasso brought up Sarasin's vote on the state appropriations bill in 1971 which established an income tax that was repealed before it could go into effect.

Elsie Swenson Says Grasso Irresponsible

MANCHESTER — The Republican candidate in the 13th Assembly District has said that Gov. Ella Grasso was irresponsible in signing the present state budget.

Elsie "Bix" Swenson said, "The governor has not been responsible in signing the $2.1 billion budget of the state of Connecticut."

"The increase is 14.4 percent on the spending side. We must compare this with only a seven to eight percent projected increase on the revenue side. The taxpayers may be faced with a budget gap of $200 million," Mrs. Swenson said.

She said fiscal controls are needed to avoid any tax increase in 1979.

"Every independent organization that has analyzed the state budget, including the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council and the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities, has predicted problems," she said.

"The state must have responsible budgeting to avoid future tax burdens. Playing games with figures is an attack on your pocketbook, not only for this year but for years to come," Mrs. Swenson said.

Police Keeping Watch In Governor St. Area

EAST HARTFORD — Police Chief Clarence A. Drumm has notified the school commander to "keep an eye" on Governor Street near the Center School playground because of local resident's complaint about vandalism, speeding and drinking in the area.

Russell Franks Sr. of 28 Governor St. told the Town Council last Tuesday that Governor Street "is getting to be like the north end of Hartford."

He said cars speed down the street after dark, endangering pedestrians, and youths congregate at the Center School playground at night to drink beer.

"When the youths are done, he said, they leave their bottles in the playground, the municipal parking lot or in his yard and the yards of other residents."

Franks said he has talked to Drumm and Mayor Richard H. Blackstone about the situation and "nothing's been done."

"I'm not aware of any particular problems," Drumm said last week. "There are problems in almost every school playground at night."

He said the only thing the police can do is keep an eye on the area. But, he added, "a little more parental concern would take care of a lot of the problems of the East Hartford Police Department."

He said the vandalism problem is prevalent all over town and "doesn't appear to be lessening."

"There aren't enough interested parents who keep their children out of the school yards after hours," he said.

Soviet Jets Shoot Down U.S. Types of Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet MIG-26 jets have shot down cruise-missile-like test vehicles, and the Russians also are installing anti-aircraft rockets on ships to defend against the American strategic weapon, it was reported today.

The reports also disclosed the Soviets have built a new plant, apparently aimed at expanded Production of Backfire jet bombers, which have been excluded from weapons limits in the SALT II treaty now nearing completion.

High-level Pentagon sources said the reports, based on information from U.S. spy satellites and other intelligence, were "essentially correct" although they disputed details and conclusions drawn from them.

Spokesmen from the Defense Department and CIA declined comment on the intelligence disclosures.

Details of the report were published by Aviation Week and Space Technology magazine, which linked them to recent Soviet ADI agreements reached so far.

Aviation Week said the Soviets also are installing SA-10 anti-aircraft missiles aboard ships now being built near the north coast city of Murmansk and have built a new 800,000-square-foot plant next to the present Backfire production line at Kazan, south of Moscow.

Defense Department spokesman Thomas Ross said "nothing has happened to change our view of the effectiveness of the cruise missile" against present and future Soviet air defenses.

Emphasis was put on the cruise missile when President Carter canceled the B-1 bomber last year.

Maine Endorses Indian Land Claim Settlement

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Maine's political leaders reserved the right to challenge the final version of the plan, but Sen. William D. Hathaway, D-Maine, credited with playing a key role in hammering out the compromise said "there should be no trouble at all from here on out."

The proposal calling for the federal government to provide $37 million to the Penobscot and Passamaquoddy tribes has already been backed by the tribal negotiating committee, a number of large Maine landowners and key federal officials, including a personal endorsement from President Carter.

Maine's political leaders reserved the right to challenge the final version of the plan, but Sen. William D. Hathaway, D-Maine, credited with playing a key role in hammering out the compromise said "there should be no trouble at all from here on out."

The two tribes claim more than 12.5 million acres were taken from Maine was still part of Massachusetts, without congressional approval in violation of federal law.

The tribes have still not formally voted on the settlement proposal but Indian leaders believe the plan will be accepted.

Hathaway's compromise calls for the Indians to receive a $27 million cash settlement plus an additional $10 million to buy land. The federal government will provide the state's $5 million share of the money for the land in recognition of financial support Maine has provided the tribes in the past.

The settlement proposal will be drafted as legislation and submitted to Congress once all the parties agree to its final form.

Rep. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, said he, Gov. James B. Longley and Democratic Attorney General Joseph E. Brennan still felt the state could win in court, but backed the compromise worked out by Hathaway because it will not cost the state anything and the "economic disruption" of closing land titles during a lengthy court fight will be avoided.

Financial experts had predicted economic chaos could have resulted if all the land titles in the area were tied up for several years during a court case, with 300,000 small landowners and the large landowners unable to sell their property because of the disputed ownership.

After it is finalized there should be little problem getting Congress to accept it and fund the agreement.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, was in Rome for the installation of Pope John Paul II and could not attend the meeting, but has already given his full support to Hathaway's proposal.

Hathaway said today's meeting left all sides "closer than we ever have been" to having the case settled. He said he was "happy the others are behind it and I plan on staying right on top of things to the end."

More Time Sought For Using Fund

VERNON — The Town of Vernon's deadline for using a $235,000 federal open space grant will expire the end of December and the town is working to seek an extension of time.

The town already received a one-year extension as the grant use deadline was originally set for last December. The holdup is caused because the town hasn't been able to find the required matching funds.

The town was planning on receiving two land gifts which could be used as its contribution in obtaining other open space areas it had listed on the grant application.

The town still hasn't finished the necessary work on appraisals of the gifts nor has it decided on what open space land it wants to acquire. One of the holdups was the fact that the town was without a town planner for several weeks from the time the former planner resigned to when a new one was hired.

Stanley Bray of Manchester offered the town, as a gift, the Walker Reservoir and about 8.5 acres of area around the reservoir and John McKown offered a nine-acre site off Broadway Street, that he owns.

The Bray property is in the area of the highway expansion program and therefore there has been a delay in having it appraised.

With the McKown property there has been a delay because of snags in the details in the lease.

Mayor Frank McCoy said the town has to look carefully at the available open space property. He said the estimates of the value of the land, noted in the original grant application could have changed by now.

McCoy said the town planner, George Russell, will be meeting with representatives from U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker's office and the state Department of Environmental Protection, to see if the town can get another extension.

McCoy also said he has asked the Weicker representatives to study the provisions of a state bill on open space, passed last session of the Legislature, to see if it could provide money for land acquisition.

Sheriff Loves His Job

VERNON — To Frank Curran the sheriff's job is his life. James E. Moore of Oxbow Drive, Vernon said the Democratic candidate for reelection to the position of high sheriff of Tolland County.

Moore said he can find Curran any day at his office in the Superior Court building on Broadway Street in Vernon. He said from his office he regularly monitors the work of nearly 50 staff people.

He said that many of these people are working to serve the some 5,000 civil papers filed each year in Vernon County. Others are involved in transporting 800 to 900 prisoners moved each year under the current responsibilities of the sheriff's office.

Moore said a third major responsibility of the sheriff's staff is managing the courts five days a week, year round. His people act as bailiffs, attend to jury needs, and are responsible for generally maintaining "order in the court."

Curran has lived in Tolland County all of his life. He can be reached any day at his court office by calling 672-3878. Moore urges voters to re-elect Curran in November. His Republican opponent is Edmund Dowler, former Vernon police chief.

Another Republican Criticizes Cummings

MANCHESTER — Another local Republican has criticized State Rep. Theodore Cummings, who is seeking reelection in the 12th Assembly District.

Edward Wilson, who unsuccessfully sought the GOP bid in the 14th Assembly District, issued a statement criticizing Cummings on matters ranging from the Buckland firehouse to a contribution accepted by the Democrats from a New York resident.

"The time has come for people to place their pocketbooks, their families and their homes above party labels and vote Mr. Cummings out of office," Wilson said.

"Mr. Cummings is hurting the taxpayers of Manchester with his costly, unneeded white elephant of a firehouse that we all have to pay for," he said.

Cummings has been a leading supporter of the construction and continued use by the Town of the Buckland firehouse.

The firehouse is in a section of town that the Eighth Utilities District has jurisdiction over.

Wilson once ran for the Town Board of Directors and at that time had questioned Cummings about money received from New York by the Democrats. John Figuerra, a New York resident who is a consultant to M&P Associates, developer of the proposed Buckland Commons project, has contributed to the local Democrats.

Again Wilson is questioning the contribution from outside persons.

"That's just more of the same," Cummings said of the charge. "Four years ago, they tried to pin that to me."

"My books are open. These are desperate people acting like big kids," he said.

Muldoon was released after he posted $1,000 bond. He is scheduled to appear in court Nov. 6.

Included in the presentation were slides and tapes of children who are involved in the individualized reading program at Bowers School. The children's projects and teacher materials also were on display.

Parents and teachers in Manchester interested in the subject, "Independent Reading Through Literature," will have an opportunity to attend a workshop by the three teachers later in the school year.

Easy Mortgage Money Boosts Realty Business

HARTFORD (UPI) — The real estate business is booming now that mortgages are more easy to obtain, says the head of the Connecticut Association of Realtors, Inc.

CEA President Joseph S. Stafford said that the industry is expected today at the start of the association's annual convention.

Stafford said Sunday that 1978 was "probably the best year in the history of the real estate business."

He attributed the upswing to liberal mortgage programs which have made it easier for young couples and married people to finance purchasing of a home.

Stafford said the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority's low interest loans and neighborhood revitalization programs have aided plans to pass that ease on to the 1,000 realtors, associates and guests expected today at the start of the association's annual convention.

Many Are Skeptical Of Inflation Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Businessmen, labor leaders and even some administration officials are skeptical that President Carter's much-heralded anti-inflation program, scheduled for unveiling Tuesday night, will curb soaring wages and prices.

Some say Carter will have a tougher time convincing the people of the program's validity than he did in evoking it in the first place. After several weeks of delay, Carter goes on national television and radio at 10 p.m. EDT Tuesday to outline his plans for taming the inflationary spiral through voluntary guidelines.

Barring last-minute changes, it was understood the plan would allow workers average wage gains of 7 percent a year, while price hikes would be kept under a 5.75 percent yearly ceiling.

The president is expected to say that if some companies or unions do not cooperate, then the administration is prepared to apply pressure — the power to withhold lucrative government contracts from private industry.

Carter also will promise that the government will play its part by holding down federal spending, reducing the deficit, clamping a partial freeze on federal hiring and possibly easing back on regulations that cost business millions of dollars annually.

Speeds in Parking Lot Concern Town Manager

MANCHESTER — Town Manager Robert Weiss is worried that town employees are moving too fast — at least in the Municipal Building parking area.

Weiss sent a memorandum last week to town departments and said that he has received complaints about vehicles driving too fast in the parking areas for Lincoln Center and the Municipal Building.

A road between the two lots has a posted speed limit of 10 miles per hour.

Weiss said that it is important that speed limits be obeyed because of the proximity of the Sheltered Workshop and a day care center. The workshop is in Lincoln Center and the center is in a building adjacent to the Center Congregational Church.

Fire Destroys Facility At Penney High School

EAST HARTFORD — A fire of suspicious origin Sunday evening destroyed the press box and some bleacher seats at the George J. Penney High School, Forbes Street, Fire Marshal John Armstrong reported.

He said it was "definitely a case of arson."

Armstrong said the press box, which was elevated high above the bleachers at the school football field, was gutted and all the electrical controls to the scoreboard were destroyed.

Feds Will Try to Prove ITT Influence in Chile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a trial likely to bring a quick confrontation over national security secrets, federal prosecutors are trying to prove that an ITT officer lied under oath to cover up the company's efforts to influence Chile's 1970 election.

Former CIA director John McCone, who later became an ITT director, and William Broe, also a top CIA official, testified at the 1973 Senate hearings that ITT officials offered to funnel up to $1 million through the agency to defeat Allende. The CIA officials said the offer was refused.

ITT officials were concerned about Allende because he had pledged during his campaign to expropriate the conglomerate's $150 million in Chilean properties if he were elected president. Allende eventually won the presidency, and true to his word, seized ITT's properties. He later died in a palace coup. Prosecutors say that despite denials by the ITT officers, there is clear evidence the company passed $250,000 to a campaign aide for Allende's chief foe — Jorge Alessandri — in August 1970.

Fighting Skywalk

HARTFORD (UPI) — Hundreds of Hartford residents say even though the City Council gave its go-ahead to a proposed $6 million downtown skywalk system, they will fight to halt the project.

Protesters held a demonstration in front of City Hall Tuesday, demanding that the city council rescind its approval of the project. They also charged with one count of conspiracy, one count of making false statements and one count of obstructing justice.

College Quarters Backed

The community colleges are here to stay. They have proved in 15 years that they are a welcomed addition to higher education.

They are providing many students beyond the high school level with an education necessary to make their way in the business world. And they offer credits for those students who may later plan to transfer to a four-year college.

All of which means that community colleges are no longer a temporary thing. They are for real; they are a necessary part of the educational system.

Manchester Community College has been living in temporary quarters for seven years.

It was one of two colleges at that level to open in the early 1960s. In 1965, MCC and Norwalk were the first two community colleges to be incorporated into the Connecticut Regional Community College system.

The school for several years was conducted in scattered public classrooms and other buildings in town. Then land off Wetherell Street was purchased for a permanent campus, and temporary buildings were erected there in 1971.

Today MCC operates in those same temporary buildings. They are serving some 7,000 students in buildings that were intended to accommodate 2,000.

There is no last time in classrooms, either; they are used until as late as 10 p.m. almost daily.

In addition, there are weekend courses which have proved popular — so popular that there might be some resentment of the change, particularly in that segment of the public inclined to view more numbers in their lives as increasing not so much the efficiency of service as the impersonalization.

But this, it is argued, is a small price to pay for an innovation which will speed mail delivery by giving every block in the country its own zip code.

Monetary savings aside, that alone would be quite an accomplishment for a service which at present frequently gives evidence of being unable to locate entire cities.

Reflections

Fast pitch softballers from the old Manchester Twilight Fast Pitch League are having a reunion Friday at the Army and Navy Club.

Some of the alumni from that league won't make the party; mine is a conflict of interest that date which could not be satisfactorily resolved. I'll miss the party, but I won't miss the memories.

The league played at Robertson Park — the Robertson Park that once had a brook meandering through the outfield. In reality, it is Lydall Brook, now in a culvert under Oakland Street. But it was also known as Case Brook and White Brook. Regardless, it played a big part in many softball games over there.

That league was formed right after World War II and it was successful for about a half-dozen years. It attracted many hard ball players, too.

When you pass out credits for the league, you have to start with Herb Stevenson and the Cowles brothers — Alton, Don and Truman. They got it going. Then you look for Ollie Jarvis, Cliff Magnuson, Lee Fracchia, the Polish community over north, the Italian community on the East Side, and some of the sponsoring groups like Center Motors, Lata's, Oak Grill, KoFC, Nichols-Bristol, Lee Legion, Rockville, Lee's Esso, to name only a few.

Fast pitch softballers will remember trying to get the hot around on a pitch from the late Pop Gleason; or chasing the nifty bunts put down by Rockville's Ray Ramsell, recently retired as Rockville's superintendent of schools; or a hammering homer by Hook Brennan or a Banjo Galli; the pitching of East Hartford Cop Mac McGuire, or Charlie Covey, or Mickey Rubacha, or Hippe Corvetti.

Take the sick fielding of Gray by Hook Brennan, or Tedford, or Fredrennan or Benny Golden on third, Pat Annello at short, Paul Phillips, Lee Fracchia, Richie Jarvis or Shorby Braun behind the plate.

We remember putting up the first scoreboard in left field; we remember the small crowds that grew to large crowds when lights were installed; we remember the days when only Dobby Stevenson and Bill Brainerd were the umpires, or someone was called out of the stands to work the bases.

Plenty of oddities, too. Don Gemtore racing from first to third on a single and breaking his leg sliding into third. The night the Rockville team went on a bunting spree and the opposition unable to get them out. An argument at third, no time called. And Ramsell, with one foot anchoring the bat, took a leap with the other leg, and was called out.

Have a good reunion, gang. You will, with guys like Cliff Magnuson, Ollie Jarvis, Jeff Koelsch, and a committee composed of representatives from the various teams working on it.

Pakistan Protests Set

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Nationwide protests on behalf of condemned former Prime Minister Zia ul-Haq are posing the most serious challenge yet to Pakistan's military government.

At least three persons have burned themselves to death in two weeks of anti-government protests spearheaded by Bhutto's Pakistan Peoples Party.

Thousands more have taken part in illegal and sometimes violent demonstrations. Hundreds have been arrested in recent weeks.

"This is the most significant resistance" since the military, led by Gen. Mohammed Liaqat, toppled Bhutto in a July 5, 1977, coup.

When Zia took over, he promised elections in three months. Now he says they'll be held next year.

Last month the civilian president resigned and Zia took over the presidency himself. He had to amend the constitution to do so and the move raised fears that Pakistan was in for another long spell of military rule, reminiscent of the generals' government of 1958-71, finally ended when Bhutto came to power.

As president, Zia also has the final word on whether Bhutto lives or dies, should the Supreme Court uphold the verdict.

"Zia got more flak when he assumed the presidency than he expected," a diplomat based in Islamabad said. "People got terribly upset. Until then, Zia had maintained the fiction at least that he was there to even the 1973 constitution."

Even the latest press found Zia's assumption of the presidency only as the best (choice) of a bad lot.

Bhutto was ousted last year after months of unrest following national elections won by his party by a large margin as to prompt immediate charges of rigging.

Zia is facing widespread street violence for the first time and many believe it poses a serious threat to his government.

"Bhutto remains the most popular my party wants me to contest."

— Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, explaining why she is running for India's parliament from a small southern district. Shunning charges of corruption, she is considered the certain winner and next opposition leader.

"In any case, let's eat breakfast."

— Isaac Bashevis Singer, 74, the Yiddish writer, replying to his wife after informed him that he is the 1978 winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

PZC Meeting Tonight On Subdivision Plans

COVENTRY—A public meeting to consider the application of Harold Green, for a two-lot subdivision on North River Road, will be held by the Planning and Zoning Commission tonight at 8 at the Town Hall. The group's business meeting begins at 7:30 p.m.

The PZC will also review its plan of development draft, which was brought before a public hearing earlier this month. A recent workshop called to consider resident comment indicated that little change would be made to the document, which was drawn up by Town Planner Gregory Padick in consultation with the commission.

Padick said it was necessary for the town to maintain its low-density requirements because of Coventry's soil and water table conditions. In the absence of sewers, the regulations specify one unit per acre in most residential zones and two units per acre for multifamily housing complexes.

A suggestion by resident Robert Fitch to include historic districts in the master plan was favorably received by the PZC. Other suggestions by the public were discussed but rejected, including proposals to permit trailer homes, eliminating a buffer zone on the lakertown, and easing commercial restrictions.

Sewer Authority Chairman Richard Broun had criticized the commission's plans to limit a sewer facility in the lake area to serve only existing needs. But the PZC left his portion unchanged, preferring that heavy sewerage be done only in the School Plans Explained

SOUTH WINDSOR—School officials are working to inform voters about the proposed renovation projects for the high school and Wapping School—a proposal which will come before the public in the form of a referendum question on the ballot in November.

School Superintendent Robert Goldman said he and high school officials have already spoken before numerous civic organizations and parent-teacher groups in an effort to educate the voting public as to the plans for renovation.

"We're trying to explain to people exactly what we want to do," said Goldman. "The renovation is needed, and we want people to be aware why."

The project, with its $550,000 price tag, is intended to lessen the overcrowding at the high school level. The recent closing of Wapping

Youth Post Gets Funds

SOUTH WINDSOR—Mayor Nancy Caffyn said today that South Windsor has received word that the town's application for state funds for a town youth coordinator have been approved.

According to word received Friday, the state will provide funds for half of the salary for the coordinator.

In July, the Town Council approved local funding in the area of $4,000 to hire a person who would organize and define the needs of local youth.

Mayor Caffyn said that she feels the town needs activities that will appeal to young people 15 years old and older. She said that she would like to see the position filled immediately.

Mayor Caffyn said that the Town Council will have to appoint a Youth Advisory Council, which would include young people as well as some adults.

Revision Commission

The Town Council will discuss a proposal, initiated by Mayor Nancy Caffyn, regarding the establishment of a Charter Revision Commission when it meets tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Caffyn said that there have been several questions regarding the Town Charter which she feels "should be looked into."

Mrs. Caffyn said she believes the charter should allow some method for recall of elected officials.

She said she also believes the charter should update town's ordinances.

UTC Ads Rebut Story In Fortune Magazine

HARTFORD (UPI) — United Technologies began advertising today to rebut what it calls a "distorted and outdated" article in Fortune Magazine about its F100 jet engine.

In this week's edition, Fortune calls the engine "Pratt and Whitney's problem child" and said expensive repairs have been made at the expense of the customer — the U.S. government — instead of the manufacturer.

Fortune says the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Group's F100 jet engine was rushed into production despite dangerous design flaws and performance problems.

The engine is manufactured by UT's East Hartford subsidiary, and P&W officials have estimated it accounts for about 7,000 jobs in Connecticut.

In newspaper advertisements, United Technologies labels the article as "highly misleading, distorted and outdated" and said it "paints a false picture of the F100's capabilities and accomplishments."

The article focuses on a crash of an F-15 fighter plane over the North Sea, in which both engines failed and the pilot parachuted to safety while the $15 million aircraft "smashed into the waves."

The magazine also cites flaws such as broken turbine blades, low stall recovery rates and fuel pump problems.

However, the article also quotes Air Force Gen. Alton D. Shay, chief of the Air Force Systems Command, who says the engine has shown fewer difficulties than any other modern engine at the same stage of development.

P&W spokesman Edward R. Cowles called the story "a sloppy, negative piece full of half-truths and innuendos."

Cowles said the company made a thorough inspection of the engines in the plane salvaged from the North Sea and discovered no problems that might have caused the accident.

As for the magazine's claims of engineering flaws, P&W says the problems that appeared in early models have been fixed for the most part and were a normal part of developing a new engine.

P&W argued that the development contract contemplated improvements to be made in the course of production, a normal practice in jet engine contracts with the military.

Cowles said P&W discussed the engine and its development problems with Fortune in detail before the article was written.

House Relocation
HARTFORD (UPI) — A group of architecture preservationists plan to move a 28-foot-wide house halfway across Hartford to keep the classic Victorian structure intact.

The Hartford Architecture Conservancy says Downing Cottage, built between 1875 and 1880, will be gingerly hauled through city streets before the end of November.

Chess Genius Due Back

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — American chess genius Bobby Fischer is coming back. Fischer, the "bad boy" of chess who gave up his world championship in protest in 1975, is preparing to play a $1 million exhibition match against his long-time friend, Yugoslav grandmaster Svetozar Gligoric.

Fischer, who has not played in public since winning the world title from Boris Spassky in 1972, toured Belgrade's modern Sava conference center with Gligoric Sunday to pick a conference hall where their match — the richest chess match ever — could be played.

Serbian Chess Federation President Milos Milovanovic told a news conference that six months of negotiations toward arranging the match were in the final stages. Fischer flew into Belgrade Tuesday for closing talks.

Milovanovic said the match would likely begin next March and last "a month or two" and probably in the Sava center.

"Fischer liked the conditions there," Milovanovic said. "But of course other arrangements might be made for the match to take place in another city or country."

Following his tour of the Sava center Sunday — his second inspection visit — Fischer, 35, told a reporter he found the complex "impressive and fascinating."

Both he and Gligoric said they would like their match to be televised.

Milovanovic said Fischer would prefer to play in an open room with a closed circuit TV.

He said Fischer had asked for a flat $1 million fee for participation in the match, which would be purely exhibition, not championship, play.

He said Fischer still refuses to play under the auspices of the International Chess Federation — ruling out any match against champion Anatoly Karpov who took the crown from Fischer in a rule dispute in 1975.

Milovanovic said it was Fischer himself who approached the Yugoslavs to arrange a comeback match.

It also had been expected that he would stay in the city for several more weeks — moving to a posh hotel across the street from the Cleveland Clinic — after his discharge from the hospital.

Khalid was visited Saturday by U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and Rep. Louis V. Stokes, D-Ohio.

The two — in what they termed an emotional discussion — said they asked the king about rumors that Khalid had barred blacks and Jews from caring for him at the clinic.

"This rumor has hurt him very much," Stokes said, "because he said that in his own family he had been raised by a black woman and that all of his children had been raised by a black woman and that it would never occur to his family to discriminate."

Stokes said Khalid also noted that more than 700,000 people visit Saudi Arabia annually, many of them are black and many remain in the country.

King To Leave Clinic And Visit White House

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Saudi Arabia's King Khalid, recuperating from heart surgery, will check out of the Cleveland Clinic ahead of schedule and will lunch with President Carter at the White House on Friday.

The Saudi Embassy, which announced the king's acceptance of the president's invitation, said Carter was expected to ask Khalid to support the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty negotiations.

America's major Middle East oil supplier, Saudi Arabia is considered a key to acceptance of the pact among moderate Arab states.

It was not disclosed whether the king would return to Saudi Arabia following his luncheon with the president, or go to Geneva, Switzerland, where he has another home. It is learned that many members of Khalid's entourage have made plans to travel to Bermuda after the king is released.

Khalid, 65, underwent double coronary bypass surgery Oct. 3 and had been expected to stay in the clinic for four to six weeks.

Manchester — Top scorers in the Manchester Senior Citizens pinocle group game played Oct. 19 at the Army and Navy Club are: Harold Bagot, 621; Richard Colbert, 611; Hans Fredrickson, 598; Andy Noske, 588; Francis Miner, 587; Bob Hill, 581; Paul Schuetz, 579; Rene Maire, 568; Reg. Schaller, 554.

The group will sponsor a game Thursday, Oct. 26, at 9:45 a.m. at the Army and Navy Club. Play is open to all senior citizens.

Meg Mimes Mae
The act ranged from Sophie Tucker's old "Red Hot Mama" routine, through the torrid vamp gig immortalized by Mae West and wound up in the burred helmet of a Valkyrie.

And who was handling all those roles earlier this week? None other than Britain's Princess Margaret.

The London Daily Mail Monday ran a picture of the princess, all decked out in a platinum pageboy wig, shimmering black dress and feather boa for the Mae West routine, done for 150 people in a five-act "country house play" at the Scottish estate of her friend Colin Tennant. Costars in the production — Blanca Jagger and 7-year-old daughter Jade, and the princess' pop singer boyfriend, Roddy Llewellyn.

Back to the Firehouse
Of Blue Eyes came home Sunday — or at least he came within a Hudson River span of home. Frank Sinatra didn't make it out to Hoboken, N.J., where he grew up, so some of the home folk came to Manhattan where he was giving a standing room-only concert at New York's Radio City Music Hall.

Six Hoboken firemen — Edward McDonald, Peter Calandra, John Sheehan, Michael Fitzgibbons, James Halloran and Joseph Segura — visited him backstage after the show, to hand him a plaque in memory of his father, Martin A. Sinatra, with whom they rode to the alarm and battled blazes before the first teeny-bopper ever swooned away over his son.

The Greatest Star
They've known him in the past as the heavy-weight champ. Sunday they met him as Muhammad Ali Day — aspiring matinee idol.

Hundreds jammed downtown streets Sunday in Jackson, Miss., to celebrate "Muhammad Ali Day" and "The Greatest" didn't disappoint anybody. Ali led a parade, waving and mugging for his fans.

He's in Mississippi to star in the NBC-TV movie "Freedom Road," in which he plays a freed slave who returns to the old plantation after the Civil War and eventually winds up in the U.S. Senate. His costar, on location

The one-sided article paints a false picture of the F100's capabilities and accomplishments. We want to set the record straight. That's why we are giving you these facts.

A superb safety record

America's fleets of F-15 and F-16 fighters have more than 110,000 hours of flight time, with an unexcelled safety record for modern jet fighters.

Fewer "teething troubles"

All military fighter engines have experienced problems during their development and introduction into operational service. To provide combat superiority, they must constantly push forward the frontier of engine technology. Unforeseen problems are expected... and inevitable. But the F100 has experienced fewer difficulties than any other engine at the same stage of maturity.

Unparalleled qualification tests

The F100 successfully completed the toughest development test program ever undertaken. The final qualification test required 150 hours of operation simulating the most severe in-flight service. This test included 30 hours of continuous operation at simulated flight speeds of 2.3 times the speed of sound. A combat aircraft may only spend an hour or two at this speed during its entire lifetime.

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's F100 jet engine is the most advanced military aircraft engine operating in the world today.

The F100 weighs about 3,000 pounds and produces roughly eight pounds of thrust for every pound of its weight. No other engine in the world's inventory can match the F100's thrust-to-weight ratio.

This is why the U.S. Air Force selected the F100 to power two of America's front-line fighter aircraft: the twin-engine McDonnell Douglas F-15 and the single-engine General Dynamics F-16. Thanks to the F100, both of these fighters can outperform any other aircraft they are likely to face in air-to-air combat. And that's why the F-15 holds every world time-to-climb record from sea-level to 60,000 feet.

More push per pound

Engine thrust-to-weight ratio is crucial to aircraft performance. High push-per-pound means faster acceleration and offers greater maneuverability. And these are factors that help decide who flies home after a fight.

Outstanding readiness record

The F100 has been on active duty with the U.S. Air Force since 1974. Although it is still a maturing engine, it has built an outstanding record of reliability and safety. The F100 engine, operating in the U.S. Air Force wing deployed at Bitburg, Germany, has achieved a readiness record greater than 92%, which is comparable to military engines that have been in service 20 years or longer. In a surprise inspection a few months after receiving its F-15s, the Bitburg wing passed the stringent operational readiness test with flying colors. This was a real tribute to the F100's reliability and performance.

Allies build F100

Four of America's NATO allies—Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands, and Norway—are co-producing F100 engines for their own fleets of F-16 fighters. In fact, the performance of the F100 was one of the important factors in the selection of the F-16 by these countries.

All military fighter engines have experienced problems during their development and introduction into operational service. To provide combat superiority, they must constantly push forward the frontier of engine technology. Unforeseen problems are expected... and inevitable. But the F100 has experienced fewer difficulties than any other engine at the same stage of maturity.

This test included 30 hours of continuous operation at simulated flight speeds of 2.3 times the speed of sound. A combat aircraft may only spend an hour or two at this speed during its entire lifetime.

An F100 engine costs less today than it did in 1973. In fact, we're delivering engines to the Air Force at lower costs than the target levels set in 1975. Our aggressive cost-reduction program will save American taxpayers more than $250 million during the production of the first 1,900 engines.

Stall stagnation understood

Fortune said the causes of this curious phenomenon are still not completely understood, even by some leading engine specialists. But Pratt & Whitney Aircraft and the U.S. Air Force do understand why it has occurred and what changes are needed to avoid it. All changes have been approved by the Air Force except one, which is in the works. The approved changes are now being implemented.

Ready to defend America

Our nation can rely on the excellent performance and reliability of the F100 engine. It stands ready to fulfill its mission of powering our front-line fighter force for more than a decade to come.

America has a winner in the F100 jet engine.

Dear Abby By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read your answer to RENO—a widow, 44, with two nice children, a lovely home, no debts and a steady income, who wonders where all the decent men are. (All she needs are men who want to rush in like a bull.) You assured her there were still plenty of decent men out there somewhere! Nowhere did you mention how lucky she was to have had one man, two nice children, a lovely home, no debts and a steady income (without working, probably). I'm 45, have never had a husband, will never have children, and have supported myself for 23 years. I'm struggling to stay out of debt, and pray that my income will continue to be steady.

You're a little naive, Abby. There aren't that many decent men around—if you mean by that a man who wants to get married to other than a 22-year-old who's slept around for five years.

I can't find a decent man. RENO has already had one. That's better than some of us. Plus she's had all those nice fringes. Try it without a husband. No love, home, no kids, and everyone thinks you're a lesbian because you've never married. Believe me, Abby, the widows and divorcees fare better.

J. IN CHICAGO DEAR J: Thanks. I never realized how lucky that 44-year-old widow was until you pointed it out. That reminds me of the man who complained because he had no shoes—then he met a man who had no feet.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help me. I am an alcoholic. I am also quite deaf. I have attended two Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and I couldn't hear what was being said so I didn't help me one bit.

I wrote to the A.A. main office and they suggested that I go to a certain chapter and explain my problem. Well, I did—and they started to shout at me. I know they meant well, but they sure didn't know how to deal with deaf people because shouting is not the answer. It only made me nervous. Naturally, I beat a hasty retreat.

Any suggestions? I am certain that I am not the only deaf person with this problem.

DEAF ALCOHOLIC DEAR DEAF ALCOHOLIC: Have you considered lip reading? If so, that might be your solution. You don't say where you live. Please write again and let me know. Perhaps I can put you in touch with an A.A. member who shares your problem and has a better solution.

DEAR ABBY: A man signed "Me in Malibu" wrote that he was divorced and had two children, 9 and 11. He said his ex-wife refused to let their children visit him for two weeks in the summer because he had a live-in lady friend. You told him to tell his lady friend to get lost for two weeks so the kids wouldn't see how he was living.

I highly disagree with your advice, Abby. I am 12 and my brother is 8. Our parents are divorced, and we visit my father every summer for a month. The fact that he lives with a lady has not corrupted us. She happens to be a very nice lady and she's a lot better than the one who was in your two days.

HE IS IN SCARSDALE, N.Y. (P.S. My father made me write this.)

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular. You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped 28 cent envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90232.
