

News for Senior Citizens

Hello everybody! First let me explain why the column didn't appear in Saturday's paper. It was amazing that we received so many phone calls Monday asking the question. Our good friend Hal Turkington, the Herald's news editor wasn't feeling up to par and ended up in a hospital. In the confusion, our report and some others were understandably overlooked. So let's send Hal get well wishes and say a little prayer that he'll soon be back at his desk. The important thing we wanted to get to you folks Saturday was that we planned to register for a trip to Higganum, Ct. to the Camelot Dinner Theatre.

The trip included a nice nighttime buffet and then see the stage show "Guys and Dolls." The complete package is $13 and the day of the trip is Thursday, Nov. 2.

Because of the delay of this news until Monday night, we have extended registration until Tuesday afternoon of next week. We did have a few people sign up and have about 10 seats left on this bus. We will take a second bus if we can fill it.

While on the subject of trips I have a couple more to mention for you to think about. One you read in my column that Paul Ryan is taking a group for a two week trip to Ft. Lauderdale, Florida where you'll stay at the Jolly Rogers. This is a replay of last year's trip.

Now Jim Uccello has come up with a twenty-six day tour across country to California taking the southern route. This will keep you out of the snow all of January and the package among a number of sightseeing visits includes 25 meals. He'll have the complete cost and package put together within the next week or so.

He also has a thirteen day bus hop to Florida for February which includes such stops as four days at St. Petersburg Beach and three nights in Orlando. You'll visit many places to mention a few: Disney World, Showboat Dinner Theatre, Busch Gardens and many others. The trip also includes twelve meals and the complete package is $209 per couple. $492 a single and a limited number of triples at $376. For further information, call Jim at 588-5832.

Now for the happenings here at the center, we start with Friday afternoon set-back games. We had 44 players and the winners were: Ann Fisher, 138; Mina Reuther, 138; Bob Smith, 134; Martin Bakstan, 129; Mike DeSimone, 128; Helen Saimond, 127; Ed Scott, 126; Ann Demko, 125; Marjorie McLain, 122; Grace Windsor, 121; Florence Guay, 120.

Then on Monday we had 12 tables for pinchle with the following winners: Clara Henningsway, 864; Paul Schmitt, 789; Andy Noske, 764; Fox Schaller, 747; John Kluck, 745; Bill Stone, 741; John Gally, 741; Grace Windsor, 741.

hanging flower pots. Our good friend and member Russ Nettleton has volunteered to plant some nice plants in them and have them ready to help decorate our new center when we move in. So if you have any, we'd appreciate it if you would drop them off as soon as possible.

We extend our heartfelt condolences to the family of Helen Flavell of 71 Edridge St. who passed away this week. We also wish a speedy recovery to William Kent who is a patient at our local hospital.

Tomorrow you'll be treated to a nice chicken breast dinner with all the trimmings and then for fun day we hope to play some bingo. We didn't have enough last Thursday because some 135 members were away on a trip. So this time, we expect to have a pretty good turnout. Our bus and mini-bus will be running starting at 10 a.m.

Don't forget our big Holiday Fair is only about three weeks away and although we are getting many nice articles, however we still need lots more. Also Gloria could use some more help on Wednesdays to make some articles here at the center. If you'd like to help, why not plan on making a day of it. Come in the morning, stay for a nice lunch and hang in there for a couple of hours in the afternoon.

By United Press International The sagging American dollar hit new lows in Japan and Europe today, reflecting lack of faith in President Carter's anti-inflation program. Gold reached record highs.

"No one wants to hold dollars, just sell them," a dealer in Zurich said. "How do I know where it'll stop — 1.60, perhaps. It's weak against the mark because the West German trade figures are good, because President Carter's anti-inflation program is weak, and there are so many reasons," he said.

It opened in Zurich at $233.125 an ounce, up from Wednesday's new high of $230.675, and in London at $233.25 from Wednesday's high of $230.575.

In Frankfurt, the dollar opened at a new low of 1.76625 West German marks, down from Wednesday's low of 1.7830.

In Tokyo, the dollar plunged to 178.50 yen before closing the day at 179.55. Dealers there said the dollar's fall was set off by President Carter's anti-inflation message, which they said lacked immediate and concrete action that foreign exchanges and holders of dollars had anticipated.

The new rate means the dollar has lost more than half of its value since the old parity of 360 yen to the dollar was established shortly after World War II.

In Zurich the dollar opened slightly higher at 1.5140 Swiss francs against Wednesday's close of 1.51375. But the dollar fell almost immediately after the opening to 1.5065.

In London, the pound opened at $2.0525 from Wednesday's $2.0295 following the American currency's plunge on the Tokyo foreign exchange.

In Paris, the dollar opened down at 4.0950 French francs from the overnight marking of 4.1250, in Brussels at 29.8150 Belgian francs from 29.80, in Amsterdam at 1.9290 guilders from 1.9440 guilders and in Milan at 736.15 lira from 803.05 lira at Wednesday's close.

A West German dealer said of the latest decline in the dollar: "That's not the end yet — not by a long way." Traders in both Japan and Europe disputed U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal's statement Wednesday that the dollar would strengthen in value.

"I think it'll keep going down," he said. "I know where it'll stop — 1.60, perhaps. It's weak against the mark because the West German trade figures are good, because President Carter's anti-inflation program is weak, and there are so many reasons," he said.

WHAT'S NEWS

Driver Missed

HARTFORD (UPI) — A lot of Connecticut commuters missed their favorite bus driver today and they let bus company officials know about it.

Benford "Benjie" Stellmacher, whose songs cheered work-weary commuters who were headed for home aboard his bus, was accused of stealing $8 and fired. Stellmacher denies taking the money.

The Black Ministerial Alliance is so upset it planned to meet with the bus company today. The city's Human Relations Committee scheduled a news conference. And some of its regular passengers are collecting signatures on a petition asking Gov. Ella Grasso to have Stellmacher rehired.

Mrs. Grasso and the mayors of three communities have praised Stellmacher for what he did for the mass transit image by belting out songs like "Volare," "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and his own creation, "Tell it, tell it everywhere, this is the bus to Depot square."

Defends Plan
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amadou Mahtar M'bow, director general of the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, defended a controversial draft declaration on the news media today and said it had been erroneously interpreted or even purposely twisted.

M'bow spoke at the opening of the general debate of the 20th UNESCO general conference. During the coming five weeks 146 member countries will take up the principal issue of the draft declaration which in effect sanctions government supervision of news media.

Takes His Seat
WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. McGarry took his seat today as a member of the Federal Election Commission. But Neil O. Staebler kept his office as a commission member, and a federal court will decide which man will get the job.

Staebler was at his desk at 10 a.m. when FEC Chairwoman Joan Aiken called the regular commission meeting to order and welcomed McGarry, who was sworn in Wednesday to replace Staebler under a presidential recess appointment.

Sambo's Closer
EAST HARTFORD — Over charges of racism, the construction of a Sambo's Restaurant on Main Street is a step closer after the Building Department issued a permit for construction Wednesday.

Despite protests from the East Hartford Citizens Action Group and the Human Rights Commission, the company will build and restaurant. Groups locally and nationwide have said the name should be changed because it is an insult to black people.

Stock Market
NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower in moderate trading Thursday of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 2.34 points Wednesday on concern the president's anti-inflation program lacks clout, was behind 0.94 to $29.26 just minutes after the opening bell.

Declines led advances, 467 to 143, among the 849 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early Big Board volume amounted to about 1,330,000 shares.

HUD Wants More Data On Zoning

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
MANCHESTER — The town has been asked to provide more information about its zoning regulations to the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development. It has also learned that increased information will be required to receive future Revenue Sharing funds.

Both developments have occurred this week, one that has been full of communication between the town and federal agencies.

Town Manager Robert Weiss has prepared responses on the following three subjects:

- A letter from HUD asking the town to keep the office informed of zoning regulations that may impede lower-cost housing and steps the town is taking to review this and other housing matters.
- A letter from the office of the federal Revenue Sharing program saying that adherence to equal opportunity guidelines will be required to receive future Revenue Sharing funds.
- An audit of the town's Community Development program that mentioned three problems with the program's operation.

Daniel Kolesar, of Hartford's HUD office wrote to town officials this week and asked about some provisions that were included in the town's fourth-year plan for Community Development funds.

He said when HUD approved the funding it had understood that a housing study, including a review of zoning regulations, was underway.

"The Town of Manchester was to keep this office informed of the zoning impediments that may be identified and the precise steps the town will take to overcome such impediments," Kolesar wrote.

Weiss sent a copy of the town's proposed housing goals, which are now under consideration by the Town Board of Directors, to Kolesar. He also mentioned other steps, including an updating of the town's plan of development, that are included in the town's future plans.

It is unclear what effect, if any, Kolesar's request will have on the town's funding.

HUD has been withholding $373,000 of that funding until the town takes a step in the fair housing area. The town has proposed that it develop a brochure about housing in town, a step that apparently is acceptable to HUD.

The letter from the Office of Revenue Sharing was a form letter headed "Dear Chief Executive" which appears to have been sent to most communities.

The letter says the Treasury Department will adopt guidelines for equal opportunity employment as part of administering the Revenue Sharing Act.

Weiss said this is an indication of a trend by all federal departments to place certain requirements on funding to communities.

The audit of the Community Development program was received this week. Two complaints — one concerning cash flow, the other concerning the certification of lead-free paint — previously had been discussed by town officials.

The third complaint said the town's annual audit of the program has been late in the past. Weiss responded that all three problems will be corrected. Copies of all three responses have been sent to the Board of Directors.

Carter Inks Ethics Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today signed a federal ethics bill that requires public financial disclosures from the top 14,000 government officials, including the president, vice president, members of Congress and the Supreme Court.

The bill, essentially containing all the major provisions Carter sought when he first proposed it last May, marks the first time any across-the-board ethics standard has been applied to the three branches of government.

It requires a public accounting of the financial standing of senior level officials. The disclosure is designed to show potential conflicts of interest.

An official must show sources of income and gifts and list assets and liabilities and other positions held.

The system combines privacy and disclosure. For example, while an official must name individuals or firms to which a debt is owed, the size of the liability might be identified as "between $10,000 and $50,000."

White House Starts Anti-Inflation Blitz

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House is orchestrating an intense public relations blitz with just one goal — getting President Carter's new anti-inflation campaign off the ground.

The effort has several ingredients: an important new face to run the show, name-calling aimed at skeptics in this country, and timely announcements that businessmen, politicians and a majority of average Americans are rallying behind the effort.

But the program, announced by Carter Tuesday night, did little to instill confidence in overseas monetary exchange markets or on Wall Street.

The value of the dollar plunged to record lows against several foreign currencies Wednesday and the stock market, after attempting an afternoon rally, ended lower in fairly active trading.

Alfred Kahn, a 61-year-old economist who has headed the Civil Aeronautics Board for the past 16 months, was introduced as Carter's hand-picked choice to run the new program.

He will succeed Robert Strauss, who wanted to give up the job in order to concentrate on trade matters.

The blunt-spoken Kahn, who dragged his feet before accepting the job until guaranteed he would have a free hand, wasted little time in taking over.

After being introduced by Carter as "my new partner in controlling inflation in this country," Kahn laid it squarely on the line that cooperation is essential, and timely announcements that businessmen, politicians and a majority of average Americans are rallying behind the effort.

"We either demonstrate that we are an American people, or that we are just 200 million people at war with one another," he said.

The White House released a long list of business leaders, mayors, governors, and minority groups that have already lined up behind Carter's plan, and set up a series of forums across the country to promote the program and answer questions about it.

Carter's aides said the White House had logged 1,300 telephone calls by early afternoon, with "over 60 percent" in support of the program.

Officials said opponents mostly preferred mandatory wage-price controls over Carter's voluntary program or didn't want any type of standards.

New Trade Names Filed By Rub Parlor Owners

MANCHESTER — The owners of the town's two massage parlors both have filed trade names with the town clerk's office.

The owner of one of the parlors, Cleopatra's, was arrested Monday night by Manchester Police and charged with failure to file a certificate of trade name.

Paul O'Bright of 307 Grissom Road was charged with the offense. He was released on a $500 non-surety bond for presentation in court Nov. 6.

Wednesday afternoon, O'Bright filed such a certificate with the town clerk's office. It listed him as doing business as Cleopatra's, 455 Main St.

The owner of the other Main Street massage parlor filed a certificate Wednesday morning.

Rose had not been aware that it also had to register with the town until Monday night's arrest of O'Bright, he said.

Thus, it filed the trade name certificate with the town clerk early Wednesday.

O'Bright could not be reached this morning for comment.

The town has passed an ordinance regulating massage parlors in town. Police made one arrest about two weeks ago of an employee at The Body Shop.

Rose had said this morning, "We hope we can work things out."

Council Members Back Dead-End Burnham St.

EAST HARTFORD — Two Town Council members say they favor dead-ending Burnham Street and charging with the J.C. Penney industrial site in Manchester would not be able to use the street coming from Rt. 5.

Democrat George A. Dagon, the council chairman, and Republican Esther B. Clarke, the council minority leader, said they believe Burnham Street should be dead-ended just short of the Manchester town line.

I believe the street should be dead-ended, but there are two questions we're waiting for the corporation counsel to answer," Dagon said.

"One, do we have the statutory authority to do it?" he said. "And, two, what agency has the authority to do it? Is it the legislative body (the Town Council) or the mayor?"

Mayor Richard H. Blackstone has said he believes the traffic impact of J.C. Penney will be minimal, but he has not ruled out closing the road to through traffic.

"We think we can close it, because, according to state statute the town has the authority," Dagon said.

"The street is primarily there to serve the people of East Hartford who live on it," he said. "It is not designed as a thoroughfare to carry traffic from point A to point B."

"If we leave it open, it will have a negative impact on the entire length of the street," he said.

Mrs. Clarke said she had previously withheld her opinion until more information was available. Now that she has the information, Mrs. Clarke said she "would definitely favor dead-ending the street."

She said she originally brought the issue before the council in September "because it looked like we would be placed in the position of reacting rather than acting if we waited any longer."

Mrs. Clarke said the council has brought forth the information needed to make a decision on closing the road to through traffic.

In other council news, Chairman Dagon said he has invited representatives from J.C. Penney to address the council on his questions at the council's Nov. 8 meeting.

Also, Police Chief Clarence A. Drumm will attend the meeting to make a quarterly report on the progress of the 10 new police officers hired this year.

The meeting was switched from Tuesday, Nov. 7, to the next night because Nov. 7 is election night.

Town Official Criticized For Not Sending Letter

MANCHESTER — Alan Mason, human services director, was criticized Tuesday night for not sending a letter along with the town's housing assistance plan.

Carl Zinsser, a Republican member of the Board of Directors, said the board had asked the letter be sent. The letter would have said the town's housing assistance plan only outlined possible goals and are not figures that the town should be required to meet.

Zinsser, however, was angered that the letter had not been sent as the board had ordered. Mayor Stephen Penny added that he remembered the directive of the board and expected that it would be followed.

OSHA Fines State Firm In Probe of Explosion

SIMSBURY (UPI) — Federal safety officials have fined a Simsbury firm $10,000, saying the company was at fault for an explosion in its rocket making laboratory that left six women employees seriously injured.

U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration inspectors levied the maximum penalty on Ensign-Bickford Company, a spokesman for the Connecticut OSHA office said Wednesday.

The firm manufactures detonating caps for explosives. There were 10 employees in the laboratory when a vacuum pump containing explosive powder blew up Sept. 14.

"It was like flying shrapnel," said lab employee Debra Christensen, 21, of Granby.

Six women were hurt, four so severely they required lengthy hospitalization and still were not back on the job Wednesday.

The employees were working on government contracted hand-sized rockets using a "brand new technique," Miss Christensen said.

Ensign-Bickford paid the fine but said it would appeal the decision because it disagreed with the degree of responsibility" it was forced to bear.

A company official said it has revamped the procedure that led to the explosion.

Cutter Navigator Says No Warning of Crash

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Although there was a lookout on the bridge of the Coast Guard cutter Cuyahoga, the ship's navigator said there was no warning of the oncoming Argentine freighter that sank the cutter and killed 11 men in Chesapeake Bay.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Randy V. Rose told a Coast Guard board of inquiry Wednesday he saw the lights of the Santa Cruz II, but did not bear a warning from Seaman Michael Myers, the lookout, the two ships were on a collision course, and no general alarm was sounded.

Myers has not yet testified.

"I first became aware of it (the freighter) when there was a question on the bridge, some excitement of where it came from," said Rose, who was on the bridge before the accident training an officers candidate.

"I looked up and saw something off the starboard bow," he said. "I could see the running lights and I knew it was a large motor vessel of some sort."

Rose flushed and speaking in a low voice, said the ships collided "maybe a minute or two minutes" after he saw the cutter.

"I was not shining 'real brightly'."

The Cuyahoga was traveling at a short speed (11.8 knots) when it issued a short whistle blast, signaling that it was intending to pass on the right and that the freighter should steer clear.

The freighter responded with a short whistle blast, signaling that it was intending to pass about the same time a danger signal was sounded by the Santa Cruz II," Rose said.

"And from there that's when everything started to break loose," he said.

"When I heard something like, 'Oh my God, he's going to hit us,' I started to make a move toward the alarm system," he said. "I took one step and he hit us."

Capt. Donald K. Robinson, who was in the bridge, ordered the ship to move left and the engines put in reverse, "but it wasn't enough time," Rose said.

Rose, a three-year veteran who joined the Cuyahoga only 18 days before the accident, said the impact tilted the cutter 70 or 80 degrees to its left and pushed it backward several hundred feet.

Then "she just went from underneath her feet. She just disappeared," he said.

Coast Guard divers continued salvage operations Wednesday near the scene of the collision. Two helicopters and two cutters searched the surrounding beaches and waters for the five crewmen still missing.

Grange Gives Aid To Area Students

Two Manchester area girls were awarded Grange scholarships recently at the annual session of the Connecticut State Grange in Meriden.

Receiving the $500 scholarships were Jen-Mary C. Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Burns of 27 Montclair Drive, and Jo-Ann M. Bray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Bray of Coventry. Both are students at University of Connecticut. As members of the Grange, they were awarded the scholarships on the basis of their scholastic achievement and participation in Grange activities.

Airline Rush Begins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The great rush for newly available airline routes is on — master by Boeing over first-come, first-served lineup procedures — and it could go on for 60 days as federal officials sort their way through a new law.

The Civil Aeronautics Board opened its doors Wednesday morning to officials of airlines that had stationed people in line outside the CAB night and day, rain and shine, for a week in hopes of protecting their own unused non-stop routes or taking over those of competitors.

No sooner had the first line started in a second formed.

CAB and airline officials acknowledged the possibility there could be a queue on the sidewalk for weeks, despite the approach of winter, because procedures have yet to be worked out for administering the route selection procedures of the airline deregulation bill.

Representatives of 20 carriers, who had waited outside the CAB since Thursday, were replaced Wednesday by airline lawyers, some pushing handcars containing several boxes of material.

United Airlines, the nation's largest and the first in line, sought two new routes and authority to retain four Florida routes that the carrier now serves only during the winter vacation season.

As the first line was processed, the second line formed. One carrier spokesman said the line was there just in case a CAB and airline officials acknowledged the possibility there could be a queue on the sidewalk for weeks, despite the approach of winter, because procedures have yet to be worked out for administering the route selection procedures of the airline deregulation bill.

Chamber Appoints Chairmen

EAST HARTFORD — The East Hartford Chamber of Commerce has announced four committee chairmanship appointments.

The four chairmen and their committees are E. Dean Roland of Dean's Spirit Shoppe, Membership Committee; George Stewart of First Federal Savings & Loan Association, Community Development; B. David Kurland of Connecticut Bank & Trust Co., Industrial Real Estate, and Robert J. Brown of Southern New England Telephone Co., the Government Affairs Committee.

The Chamber is planning a membership drive for January under Roland's leadership. Stewart is working on seminars for the Small Business Council, and with town planners on upcoming redevelopment projects.

Kurland will be working with area Realtors and bankers to develop materials to attract new business to East Hartford.

And Brown will be working with legislators on local and state levels initiating and helping to influence legislation that will directly affect business.

The Chamber is working toward improving the quality of life in the East Hartford community and the region," said Karen Wells, executive vice president of the East Hartford Chamber of Commerce. "Our community basically consists of small businesses and our program of work is tailored specifically for the small business person."

"We will be getting input from all sectors of the community, including older business service organizations, jointly sponsored programs, seminars and events that will encourage small businesses to prosper," she said.

Sen. Brooke Returns To Repair Campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., returned to his campaign for re-election today, hoping to repair whatever damage was caused by his brush with the Senate Ethics Committee Wednesday that he was not personally responsible for delaying investigation of his finances.

Brooke said he did not know how the controversy over the financial records would affect his chances. "I don't know that I will know until the night of Nov. 7," he told reporters.

The charges that Brooke's records had been delayed or altered were made by Richard Wertheimer, who resigned as special counsel to the committee Oct. 11, saying the investigation was being thwarted by the problems in obtaining the senator's records.

When Wertheimer's letter was made public, Brooke demanded a hearing before the Ethics Committee on the charges.

When Wertheimer appeared before the panel Tuesday, he went into even greater detail about the handling of the financial records, particularly by Brooke's three lawyers.

Brooke and his attorneys made an item-by-item rebuttal, insisting overall there had been no effort to delay the investigation or mislead the committee.

D.C. Issues Gains Favor

HARTFORD (UPI) — The man pushing to have the nation's capital granted full representation in Congress has picked up support from Connecticut lawmakers.

Walter Fauntroy met with Connecticut legislative leaders from both parties Wednesday on the issue. The lawmakers pledged to push for speedy ratification of a constitutional amendment to guarantee the District of Columbia a voice in Congress.

Fauntroy has been the district's non-voting congressional representative since the seat was created in 1971.

During the summer, Congress approved a constitutional amendment that would give Washington two senators and at least one congressman. If the amendment is to become part of the U.S. Constitution, it must be ratified by Legislatures in 38 states within seven years.

The bipartisan group of Connecticut legislative leaders told Fauntroy they're convinced the amendment will be ratified in the next session, which convenes in January.

"The feeling is there's a basic feeling of inequity here," said Senate Majority Leader Joseph Lieberman of New Haven. "The issue will come up in the January and should pass by a good strong bipartisan majority."

Senate President Pro Tem Joseph Fausto, D-Hartford, Sen. Sanford Cloud, D-Hartford, and Sen. Lawrence DeNardis, R-New Haven, also predicted the constitutional amendment will fly through the legislative process.

The District of Columbia has a population larger than those of seven states and an average per capita income second only to Alaska, Fauntroy noted.

The Democrat predicted the full vote representation amendment would be ratified within two to three years.

Asked if he had his eye on one of the two Senate seats, Fauntroy replied, "I do not feel comfortable about that question. I don't want to cloud the issue."

Fauntroy, who has traveled to several states to promote passage of the amendment, said he has also received encouraging signs from legislative leaders in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Michigan.

Baptist Students Meet

TOLLAND — College students from all over New England will meet this weekend at Tolland's First Baptist Church at the annual Baptist Convention Friday through Sunday.

Participating in the weekend sessions will be Mrs. Candace Tallent, wife of the Rev. Robert Tallent, pastor of the Tolland Church, and Mike Baron, a teacher at Ellington High School.

Other participants include the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hartford, Texas, and newspaper columnist, Bill Junker, consultant on students for the Southern Baptist Convention.

Tim George, recent graduate of Harvard Divinity School, and Annette Nielsen, student at Yale's Institute of Sacred Music, will provide the music.

The convention will begin with an informal supper Friday at 7 p.m. Saturday's activities begin at 8:15 a.m. continental breakfast. Saturday afternoon will be free for sight-seeing and relaxation. The program will continue Saturday from 7 to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 8:15 a.m. to noon.

All of the services are open to the public.

This artist's sketch shows how the U.S. Envelope factory on W. Main Street in Rockville will look after its proposed conversion into apartments for the elderly. The developers are keeping the historic building's exterior intact.

Grasso Leads Ceremony On Factory Conversion

VERNON — Gov. Ella Grasso officiated at ceremonies Wednesday marking the start of the conversion of an old Rockville mill into apartments for the elderly.

The building to be converted, the former U.S. Envelope factory on W. Main Street, was recently placed on the National Register of Historic Places and now bears a small plaque stating that:

It will be converted into 114 apartments for the elderly under a $3,007,500 mortgage from the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority to the Barkan Development Corp. of Chestnut Hills, Mass., which is handling the conversion project under the name of Florence Mills Associates.

The mill was built in 1864 and, according to Barkan representative Peter Kasch, its Mansard roof is typical of a style of architecture known as Second Empire which was imported from France and became popular in this country in the 1870s. The Rockville Mill, Kasch said, is the earliest known example of the style to be found on an industrial building.

Mel Barkan, president of the development firm, said that the Rockville mill is the only National Register property which is eligible to receive Section 8 funding from the National Register of Historic Places and the Tax Reform Act of 1976 which gives certain tax incentives to historic projects.

The architect for the conversion is Peter Steffian of Steffian-Bradley Associates Inc. of Boston, Mass.

Plans are to have 103 of the units as one-bedroom apartments and 11 two-bedroom ones. The units will have a living room, dining area, kitchen, and one bath with the one-bedroom units to have 850 square feet and the others, 812 square feet.

Each will be fully equipped with a kitchen range, refrigerator and disposal, carpeting, drapery rods and shades. And there will also be laundry rooms. They are expected to be completed in about 14 months after the start of construction.

Tenants of the apartments will be able to apply for assistance under HUD's Section 8 program which provides that those who qualify need pay no more than 25 percent of their income for rent.

The mill was originally a textile mill and had replaced an earlier one that had burned. It was bought in 1988 by White Corbin & Co. for the production of envelopes and in 1988 the U.S. Envelope Co. was formed. It continued in operation until the summer of 1975 when the company decided to merge production with its Springfield, Mass. firm.

Barkan plans to preserve the exterior of the mill while converting the interior.

Other officials attending Wednesday's ceremonies included Bruce Rothenberg, executive director of the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority; Judith Payne, architectural historian of the Connecticut Historical Commission; Morgan Campbell, Vernon's mayor pro tem; Linda Cavanaugh, chief assistant of the Housing Management Branch of HUD, Hartford office; Mel A. Baran of Baran Properties, developer and contractor; and Louis Garfield, vice president of Barkan.

Zinsser Says Cummings Has Arrogant Campaign

MANCHESTER — Carl Zinsser, a Republican member of the Town Board of Directors, has criticized State Rep. Theodore Cummings with being arrogant in his campaign for re-election.

Cummings, who also is town chairman, is seeking re-election in the 12th Assembly District.

Zinsser talked of both the past and the present while making his criticisms.

"As Democratic town chairman, he created the current economic and political problems that now beset the Buckland firehouse," Zinsser said of Cummings. "Although he did not vote for or against the construction, he pulled the strings that eventually ended with the town losing a very long and expensive court battle in addition to the loss of $100,000 in tax revenues annually."

The Buckland firehouse is owned by the town but is in a section of town where the Eighth Utilities District has jurisdiction. The firehouse was built before the court decision that gave the district jurisdiction in Buckland.

Zinsser also criticized the revaluation phase-in legislation, which he said Cummings "steammrolled" through the General Assembly.

Zinsser's criticisms were made at a meeting of the Board of Directors, which he did not attend.

It has further hurt the homebuilding industry," Zinsser said in reference to the fact that new construction now does not benefit from the phase-in. Cummings has said he will amend the phase-in to correct this inequity.

Zinsser and the other two Republican directors voted against the phase-in when it was enacted.

Zinsser also commented on a contribution to local Democrats from a consultant for MAP Associates, developer of the proposed Buckland Commons.

He questioned why an out-of-state developer would contribute locally.

"But, Mr. Cummings answered this question in a quote in the press. 'I've lied a little, cheated a little, and played around a little, but the only difference is, I admit it,'" Zinsser said.

"The sad and ironic thing about Mr. Cummings' statement is that not many years ago he was asking a President of the United States to resign for the very same reasons," Zinsser said.

Joyner Supports Improved Transit

MANCHESTER — Walter Joyner, the Republican candidate in the 12th Assembly District, said Wednesday he will seek traffic improvements in Manchester.

He supports improved passenger rail service between Hartford and Manchester and repair of the bridge at Tolland Turnpike and Oakland Street.

"With the continuing expansion of the northwest area of Manchester and the adjoining parts of South Windsor, it becomes apparent that we need rail passenger service restored between Hartford and Manchester," the GOP candidate said.

Joyner said Ronald Sarasin, the Republican candidate for governor, has a 10-point transportation program to be funded with existing federal monies. One of the priority items is restoration of rail service between Hartford and Eastern Connecticut, which coincides with Joyner's proposal.

Joyner said he also will seek legislation to begin immediate construction to relieve the bottleneck at the intersection of Tolland Turnpike and Oakland Street.

"The narrow bridge at that location has been a traffic hazard for more than 20 years and corrections are long overdue," he said.

In addition to planning interstate access roads to handle business traffic, similar attention should be paid to planning for additional local and cross-town traffic that the expansion produces, Joyner said.

Cummings Says Joyner Misses Point on Issues

MANCHESTER — State Rep. Theodore Cummings Wednesday night charged his opponent with not understanding some of the issues he has talked about.

Cummings, who is seeking re-election in the 12th Assembly District, said his opponent, Walter Joyner, has talked much about controlling spending.

"Before a man can control spending, he's got to understand it," Cummings said.

He referred to a statement Joyner made that he would repeal the revaluation phase-in bill, which spread the effect of revaluation over five years for most town property owners.

"If that bill is repealed, the state spending in this town are going to get socked," Cummings said.

He also remarked that Joyner's recent statement supporting a rail line from Hartford to Manchester and improvements to the bridge at the Tolland Turnpike and Oakland Street intersection.

"Something already is being done," Cummings said of both items.

Improvements to the bridge are included in the Interstate 86 expansion plan, he said.

The rail line from Hartford to Manchester is one proposal discussed at a recent meeting of the Capitol Region Council of Governments transportation subcommittee.

Stephen Cassano, a Democratic member of the Town Board of Directors, attended that meeting to support the Manchester line. Cummings said.

Cummings, who also is Democratic town chairman, said he would support a "sensible limit" on state spending done by statute. A constitutional amendment to establish such a limit would prohibit the state from acting quickly during periods of recession, he said.

State Rep. Francis Mahoney, seeking re-election in the 13th Assembly District, also spoke briefly.

He said he is optimistic about the chances of all Democratic candidates.

He called Gov. Ella Grasso, who is seeking re-election, "a tough cookie."

He also criticized Republican talk of controlling spending. Four years ago, they made the same speeches. "Then, they tried to outbid the Democrats," Mahoney said.

Party members who attended Wednesday night's meeting at party headquarters received several pleas for more funding.

Party Treasurer Paul Phillips reported the treasury has less than $1,000, only enough to cover the next mailing.

Mary LeDuc said the party will conduct a bake sale at the Parkade Nov. 4 starting at 10 a.m.

Disease Rate Mystery?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There may never be clear-cut answers, but a noted specialist says changing life styles and better treatment for high blood pressure may be the best explanations for a decline in the heart disease death rate in the United States.

A National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute conference Wednesday was told that comparative studies suggest some Americans are consuming less cholesterol-rich foods, smoking less, exercising more and are more aware of the need to check and treat high blood pressure.

Numerous studies have indicated that each of those factors affects a person's heart attack risk.

"While nobody can prove that this series of parallel developments has produced the downturn, it's reasonable that one may be related to the other," said Dr. Jeremiah Stamler of Northwestern University, chairman of a panel reviewing population data on risk factors.

"It's clear we're doing something right in the United States," said Stamler, a specialist in preventive medicine.

Between 1968 and 1976, coronary disease death rates between 35- and 74-year old dropped 21 percent for white men; 26.3 percent for white women; 30.7 percent for non-white men; and 39.1 percent for non-white women.

But despite significant drops in cardiovascular death rates since the mid-1960s, Stamler noted that more than 900,000 Americans still die annually of heart and blood vessel disease.

Cancer Study Belittled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Industry scientists believe the public should not be alarmed by a government report that at least 20 percent of future cancer cases will be caused by on-the-job exposure to carcinogens.

The scientists contend the report, conducted by the National Cancer Institute and the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences — is seriously flawed.

At a news conference Wednesday sponsored by the American Industrial Health Council, which represents 115 companies and 60 trade associations, their scientists called the report

"irresponsible."

"A grave disservice is being done to the public by unnecessarily raising such an alarm," said Dr. Paul F. Desler, Jr., a member of the AIHC steering committee.

Secretary Joseph Califano of the Health, Education and Welfare Department announced results of the study Sept. 11 and indicated the 20 percent figure "may even be conservative."

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is reviewing the record of lengthy hearings on its proposal to stiffen criteria regarding such exposure.

Dr. David Hall, AIHC director, said the reaction "doesn't make me think our paper isn't still correct."

Hall said he was glad to see debate occur on the report because it pointed to areas where additional research is needed.

Desler said earlier estimates that 1 percent to 5 percent of cancer cases were caused by occupational exposure "have been held as realistic by most responsible government and independent scientists and cancer experts."

Young and Old Go to Capitol With Protests

By CHARLIE MAYNARD
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — Young mothers carrying children and elderly citizens carrying posters converged on the State Capitol Wednesday to protest proposed rent increases on state-owned moderate income housing projects.

The group of over 40 persons were from the four complexes in town, all part of the East Hartford Citizen Action Group. After protesting local Housing Authority officials, the group decided to go over their heads to see if Gov. Ella Grasso could do something about the rent increases.

The tenants had scheduled meetings with the governor and William Rice, commissioner of the state Department of Community Affairs (DCA), the agency which regulates all state housing complexes.

Instead, they had to settle for stand-ins while both the governor and Rice were away. The tenants met with Michael Duffy, DCA housing director, and Gov. Grasso's legal counsel, Jay Jackson. They told both men that the DCA "rubber-stamped" the rent hikes without bothering to inspect the facilities.

To emphasize their frustrations, the group brought a large cardboard rubber stamp marked "APPROVED" to present to the governor.

The tenants coalition were protesting proposed rent increases by $9 for family units and $12 to $16 in elderly units. The members came from the Daley Court, King Court, Veterans Terrace and Hutt Heights complexes.

True to Citizen Action Group form, the tenants asked Duffy to sign a coalition saying the proposed increases be cut, that there would be an inspection of the four housing projects Saturday, and that the DCA would look into the possibility of state funding to subsidize rents.

Peter Bysko, a spokesman for the Daley Court group, said, "We simply cannot afford another rent increase. Our social security and incomes do not keep pace with inflation as it is."

"Many of our elderly members receive under $200 a month," he continued. "A rent increase would leave them with barely $100 for food and other living expenses. We now come to the governor for help."

Other tenants complained of poor maintenance and improper insulation of the rooms.

Charlotte Chamberland, a tenant at Veterans Terrace, said it took nearly six weeks for exterminators to rid her apartment of roaches.

"I had roaches crawling all over my babies," she said.

"It took them six weeks to spray the apartment and it left yellow streaks on the wall."

After listening to all the complaints, Jackson said he would bring the matter to the governor's attention "as soon as possible" and said the project itself would have to be scrutinized.

"In all probability," he said, "the governor will ask me to contact DCA to make an inspection and a thorough look at the administration. We plan to give it a good, hard going-over."

The meeting lasted about 40 minutes in one of the second floor offices. Asked if he felt something was accomplished, Bysko said, "I certainly hope so. At least we got to the top, that's the main thing."

With a cardboard "rubber stamp" to symbolize their anger at routine rent hike approvals by the state, members from four East Hartford housing projects bring their protests to Gov. Grasso's legal counsel, Jay Jackson, at the State Capitol Wednesday.

Peter Bysko, right, representative of the Daley Court tenants, reads a statement asking the DCA to inspect the projects and to reduce the proposed rent increase. (Herald photo by Maynard)

Fahey Pushing Job Education

EAST HARTFORD — Marcella Fahey, Democratic candidate for the 3rd District state Senate seat, believes education for jobs must be a priority.

"The people of the 3rd Senatorial District are the heart of Connecticut's skilled work force, a proud distinction," Mrs. Fahey said.

"Yet, even here, jobs go unfilled while workers are unemployed. We must better match our labor skills to the present and future job needs," Mrs. Fahey said, "with more and better vocational training."

Mrs. Fahey said the investment "in our youth now in basic education skills is the soundest form of government spending. The investment will return to the state hundred-fold."

She said the state must continue to attract new and diverse industry in order to assure stable, economic growth.

"Young people need to develop marketable skills; it is those skills that will continue to keep Connecticut ahead of other states," Mrs. Fahey said.

Mrs. Fahey said, "The business, education and labor interests must work together. Skilled labor needs people who are proficient in reading, writing and math. Everyone will benefit from improved educational opportunities. But we must work together." "We cannot allow the average age of the skilled worker to continue to rise," Mrs. Fahey said. "This trend is unhealthy for Connecticut."

"Education for jobs includes a well-rounded education, and this is an investment in the future of our youth and our state," she said.

Employees Praised For Personnel Aid

MANCHESTER — Two employees have been praised for helping produce long-sought improvements in the town's personnel management system.

Town Manager Robert Weiss commended Larry Tardiff of the controller's office and Barbara Silver of the data processing center for their involvement in the improvements.

"I am very pleased with the results of your continuing efforts to improve our personnel management system," Weiss said in a letter to the two. "I know that this project has required a great deal of initiative and effort by both of you and the results are very gratifying."

Weiss said for many years the town has been attempting to improve the information required for an effective personnel system.

"Finally, the results are coming through," he wrote.

Area Students Get Degrees from State

Several Manchester area students will be among 86 students who will receive "external degrees" today from the Connecticut Board for State Academic Awards.

Brian Van Czarnota of South Windsor and John Thomas Wynne of East Hartford, both received bachelor of science degrees.

George M. Bolduc Jr. of Coventry, received his associate in science degree; Leonard D. Bourret of Ellington, a bachelor of arts degree; Joseph L. King of Ellington, and George E. Stuart of Bolton, associate in science degree.

Water Firm Seeks Approval to Merge

VERNON — The Rockville Water & Aqueduct Co. and the Collinsville, Terryville and Thomaston Water companies have applied to the Public Utilities Control Authority to merge with and into the Connecticut Water Co.

The merger would leave the Connecticut Water Co. as the surviving corporation and the sole subsidiary of Connecticut Water Service Inc.

The Connecticut Water firm then plans to issue three new series of its first mortgage bonds, aggregating $4.6 million principal amount, in exchange for a like principal amount of bonds of Connecticut Water Service Inc.

Sarasin Promises Tax Cuts

HARTFORD (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Ronald Sarasin says he will cut taxes by $25 million in four years and would begin by slashing top one cent from Connecticut's 7 percent sales tax.

The three-term GOP congressman Wednesday also promised to do away with the dividends tax as well as reduce the state's tax in the first year of his administration, but only if Gov. Ella Grasso leaves Connecticut in relatively sound fiscal shape.

"If she doesn't exercise control, we can't (accomplish the tax cuts as rapidly)," the Republican candidate said.

At a news conference at Connecticut Republican headquarters, Sarasin loosely outlined his tax and spending plans for the next four years. Most of his proposal focused on the first year.

Sarasin, flanked by his running mate Lewis Rome, told reporters he would move "very, very quickly" to eliminate the dividends tax and top one cent of the sales tax.

Pressed further for a timetable, he said he believed the cuts could be accomplished in the first year at a cost of $156 million to the state.

The Republican congressman also said he would eliminate the state's clothing and business services taxes "as quickly as we can." He would not be more specific.

In all, Sarasin promised, if elected, to cut taxes by $252 million in four years.

Grasso accused Sarasin of being fiscally irresponsible.

"What a joy to be able to support every tax cut," Mrs. Grasso said sarcastically.

The governor said court-ordered funding for education and state employee contracts make tax cuts unrealistic. She promised to improve essential services without new or increased taxes.

"Mrs. Grasso has spent so many years over-taxing and overspending that she no longer recognizes the ability any leader has to exercise control over spending and, therefore the taxing, that afflicts our citizens," Sarasin said.

Sarasin said his spending plan for next year includes $40 million to ensure equal educational opportunities for all Connecticut children. He also said he has planned for more than $40 million in state employee raises.

Clerk Betting Hard to Stop

WETHERSFIELD (UPI) — Gambling operators say despite their efforts it's difficult, if not impossible, to enforce the regulation forbidding parimutuel clerks from betting.

The commission is looking into ways to tighten regulations after allegations that some parimutuel clerks hold money for professional gamblers to lay on future matches or races, punch and cash their tickets, or gamble themselves while on duty.

Representatives from the state's three jai alai frontons and Plainfield dog track told the commission Wednesday that parimutuel clerks are warned they face fines or suspension if they gamble while working.

But they indicated as a practical matter, enforcement of the regulation is hard to enforce. There is also some question whether the regulation applies to off-duty clerks who may visit the gambling facilities with friends, they said.

Commissioner Lester Snyder said he was particularly concerned with a former Plainfield parimutuel clerk's testimony to the commission that he handled "thousands of dollars" for professional gamblers.

The clerk, who was suspended for 10 days, also claimed he was harassed by the management into resigning.

Allen Rapp, motel manager at Plainfield, disputed the testimony and said surveillance of the parimutuel clerks at the track would have uncovered any high rolling by the clerk.

Opinion Other Editors Say:

Can an administration whose commitment to solar power is already questioned by the windmill and woodstove crowd get away with invoking trade sanctions against an imported item that is critical to the most common use of solar power? That use, naturally, is the backyard wash line and that critical item that the administration's International Trade Commission may set a quota on is the humble but indispensable wooden clothespin.

For an answer to this dilemma, Mr. Carter need look no further than his stalled-in-Congress energy program. If fuel prices, and peak-hour electricity rates, are allowed to go up the way his program recommends, the demand for solar clothespins should take off and with it the demand for wooden clothespins. Pin the blame on Congress, not on China.

Brattleboro (Vt.) Reformers: ITC to consider its sanction against China in the context of a separate commission investigation into the plight of the domestic pin business. ITC is to be restrained, so should all the other exporting countries. But while that may be good international Realpolitik — who wants to see the Chinese cart lost over a clothespin? — it still leaves the question of whether the higher-priced domestic pin should be protected against cut-rate foreign competition that helps make the wash line a much better bargain than the electricity-wasting electric dryer.

Actually, the commission has already called for a quota on pin imports from the People's Republic of China. The ITC holds that country responsible for the fact that the four U.S. clothespin manufacturers (one in Vermont and three in Maine) have seen their sales drop by 300,000 pins between 1973 and 1977. President Carter, to his credit, rejected that recommendation, saying that China should not be singled out for the inroads in the U.S. market achieved by foreign pin makers — just over a quarter of all imports are Chinese.

Instead, Mr. Carter is asking the natural gas compromise bill in the Senate now is called something like the bill for the relief of Jose Garcia, said House Majority Leader Jim Wright (D-Texas), late one night recently as the House neared the end of its whirlwind session.

Wright was referring to the confusion over whether the titles of a flurry of bills correspond to their contents as the nation's lawmakers raced through one bill after another, like college students cramming for exams to get home for Christmas vacation.

During Congress' 34-hour all-nighter, it passed a basketful of important, and in some cases very costly, legislation. Most congressmen were anxious to finish two years of business and get home to work on their re-elections.

Energy, tax cuts, airline deregulation, the jobs bill and public works were some of the major pieces of legislation passed, but there were a slew of other bills that whipped through the legislative process.

These marathon sessions are effective for the Democratic leadership to get things passed which would be difficult to get through otherwise," said one Republican congressman. "But they're not a good way to operate."

Whedding and dealing continued as legislation was passed or killed by tired congressmen almost as quickly as it was brought up. When things on the House floor dragged, some members could be found in the cloakroom watching football and baseball games.

A few congressmen slept in their chairs, or went off to their offices for a catnap, as a much-weakened energy bill was debated in the House at 2:45 a.m. Sunday. It had passed in the Senate only an hour before, after an all-day filibuster.

One House member commented that he'd hate to be tested on the substance of all the legislation he'd voted on. Sen. S.I. Hayakawa (D-Calif.) couldn't remember why he voted against an amendment providing an extra break for the middle-income worker.

"There were so many of those little amendments coming one after another, I can't separate them in my mind," said Hayakawa. "... I don't remember anything about this amendment, so I'm afraid I can't comment on it."

Bills that had been stuck in committee for months were suddenly given life on the House floor and sent to the Senate. Amendments that had never been printed were offered at the last minute. Compromises on important pieces of legislation were agreed to in the wee hours.

There was about $12 billion worth of legislation on the suspension calendar, according to Rep. Bob Lagomarsino (R-Calif.). Bills considered this year are limited to twenty minutes of debate on either side of the House aisle and no amendments can be added.

During the wind-up session, it was not uncommon for a bill to pass in the House, go to the Senate and then be tacked on to a totally unrelated measure to ensure passage of the House bill.

An example of what went on in the final hours of the session is the public works bill which President Carter vetoed. The Senate, not wanting to lose funding for some water projects, eliminated 11 of them after they had been tacked on to the public works bill to set up training centers for the Olympics. The whole package was then sent back to the House.

Even though the House had voted not to fund the Amateur Sports Act the first time around, it was forced to accept the Senate version or jeopardize the fate of the water projects.

In this chaotic atmosphere, sleepy eye congressmen, aided by gallons of coffee, a bustling staff, and a desire to get home, passed an unusually large amount of legislation. Senate Majority Leader, Robert Byrd (D-W.Va.) said he couldn't remember a Congress that dealt with more difficult issues during his 26 year tenure on Capitol Hill.

Byrd may be right, but many citizens, no doubt, are wondering if they're getting their tax dollar's worth.

Everyone's attention was focused upon the minister as he proceeded. "The question is this — How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"

Soviets Savor Political Slogans

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's Madison Avenue of ideology has spoken.

The Central Committee of the Communist party has issued 66 new slogans to run the country by.

Slogans are as much a part of life in the Soviet Union as highway billboards and magazine advertising in the West.

And there are slogans for just about everything: local, national and international slogans.

A look at a few examples: Standard but functional: "Long live the 61st anniversary of the Great October socialist revolution."

Pointed and inspiring: "Honor and glory to a woman-mother giving the warmth of her heart to upbringing of children, deserved citizens of the socialist motherland."

Practical: "Honor and glory to rural workers, selflessly providing successful fulfillment and overfulfillment of the socialist pledges of production and selling to the state of grain, meat, and other products of agriculture."

Topical: "Peoples of the world, demand for the banning of development and production of new types and systems of the weapons of mass destruction. Resolutely come out against the plans of production of the neutron bomb."

International Greeting: "Warmest greetings to peoples of Latin America, conducting courageous struggles against oppression of imperialist monopolies, against reaction and fascism, for free, independent and democratic development of their countries." These slogans may sound ludicrous to a Westerner, but they are an integral part of propaganda in the Soviet Union.

Slogans can be found almost anywhere. The most prominent location for slogans appears to be across the tops of buildings, where topical slogans are matched to the particular industry housed inside.

Thus it is that at the central power plant in Moscow, there is a slogan marching about 500 feet along the top floor proclaiming the fact that Communism means electrification for all the country. Slogans also march across the fronts of bridges, where a driver can learn that the party gives as the party receives.

Some slogans are long and quite specific: "Peoples of the world, multiply the efforts in the struggle for the complete liquidation of the consequences of the Israeli aggression, for settlement of the fair and lasting peace for all the countries and peoples of the Middle East, against imperialist interference in the internal affairs of the Arab countries."

And some are general: "May the friendship and cooperation between the peoples of the Soviet Union and Arab countries get stronger and develop." Some are party tub-thumpers in the most traditional political sense, such as the slogan in western politics: "Long live the unity and cohesion of the Communist Parties and peoples of the countries of the socialist concord."

There are also old standard slogans that don't change each year: "Glory to work," for example, or "Workers of the World, Unite."

The one thing that unites all of the slogans is that they are official. A careful reading of the 66 indicates that the art of slogan-writing in the Soviet Union entails digesting the complexity of positions and politics and editing the thought down to a phrase that hopefully will catch everyone's eye, and mind.

And if you think the task is futile and will never work, compare it to advertising in the West. The product may be different, but the sales objective is the same.

Open Forum Citizens Concerned

To the editor: We have been having a great deal of breaking and entering at Fountain Village.

We, as staff and residents, are striving to reduce criminal activity within the confines of Fountain Village.

The police protection I do receive is excellent in quality. I feel, however, citizens must be made aware of the problems.

Officer James McCooe has presented two awareness seminars and his program on crime prevention is excellent.

I called upon Chief Robert D. Lannan with my personal concern over the matter.

Chief Lannan, Robert Weiss and Mr. McCarthy have all assured me that the 10 vacancies on the police force will be filled.

Four have already been appointed and I was told another four will possibly be appointed in January. The other two vacancies were not discussed.

They have no magic solution but I am looking for more than rhetoric to our community problem.

My real question is what may we do as a total community to stop this increasing epidemic?

Perhaps the following suggestions could be considered: imposition of a curfew, stricter legislation, lowering the age of juveniles, being tougher with first offenders and to have judges who are not "wrist slappers."

I have a million questions without answers.

I am only trying to work toward improving the quality of life in Manchester, "City of Village Charm and Not Sham."

Gambling Is Hot Issue

By DONALD H. MAY WASHINGTON (UPI) — In Florida the issue is casino gambling. In Virginia it's betting on horse races; in New Jersey, jai-alai.

Those three questions concerning gambling will be decided at the polls Nov. 7 and in several states they are exciting more interest than the candidates.

Proposition 9 in Florida, for example, has stirred more interest than the governor's race and overshadowed a proposed rewrite of the state's constitution.

The choice is approval or rejection of casino gambling along a narrow, 16-mile strip of "Gold Coast" extending from Miami Beach northward to mid-Hollywood. Tax revenues from casino operations would go to public education and law enforcement.

The promoters of the idea, "Let's help Florida Inc.," said Sanford Weiner, the man who brought casinos to Atlantic City. It claims casinos would generate $120 million a year in new tax revenue by 1986, create 80,000 new jobs and rejuvenate the area's tourist industry.

Gov. Reubin Askew, leading the anti-casino campaign, says, "It's the worst thing that could happen to Florida." Askew contends casinos will slowly choke Florida's economy, attract organized crime and ruin the state's image as a family vacation spot.

The prospective hot localities would first have to approve the location of the tracks in local referendums.

Betting is opposed as immoral by many of Virginia's church groups and several powerful politicians, including former Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr. and state Sen. Frederick T. Gray, a former attorney general.

Proponents, including the Chamber of Commerce and Virginia's $150 million horse industry, say it's about time the state that produced Triple Crown winner Secretariat gave its citizens an opportunity to see such fine Virginia thoroughbreds perform.

Reliable polls show betting is likely in Tidewater and Northern Virginia.

South Florida's pari-mutuel gambling industry has spent over $597,000 opposing casinos, fearing they would siphon off money from existing horse and dog tracks and jai-alai frontons.

Virginians are voting in a statewide referendum on whether to legalize pari-mutuel race track betting for the first time since 1892, when gambling was outlawed in a paroxysm of moral indignation.

In pari-mutuel betting is approved, the governor would be empowered to appoint a five-member racing commission. The panel's first job would be to select private investors to build two $40 million racetracks, most likely in Tidewater and Northern Virginia.

Thoughts

Do You Have the Answer? A Welsh minister beginning his Sunday morning sermon leaned over the pulpit and said these words to his congregation: "Friends, I have a question to ask. I cannot answer it. You cannot answer it. If an angel from Heaven were here, he could not answer it. If a devil from Hell were here, he could not answer it."

Everyone's attention was focused upon the minister as he proceeded. "The question is this — How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"

Coach Went Wild But Team Ignited

NEW YORK (UPI) — Detroit Pistons Coach Dick Vitale admits "you've got to be crazy" to coach in the National Basketball Association and Wednesday night he tried to prove it.

Vitale missed four games, all losses, while undergoing hospital treatment for a stomach disorder. He came back Wednesday night, was thrown out in a wild scene in the quarter, but had the satisfaction of sparking the Pistons to their first victory of the year, 110-106, over the previously unbeaten Cleveland Cavaliers.

"I coached my personality tonight," said Vitale, the first year coach from Detroit University who had to be forcibly removed by police and team assistants when he refused to leave following his second technical foul. "This is the first time I have really coached my personality in this league so far. I see too many players being protected in this league and I'm gonna fight when I feel I'm right."

"Around the league they'll start to know who Dick Vitale is. I didn't lose my head tonight. I'm just a plain fighter. I guess all you can say is, to coach in this league you've got to be crazy."

Cavs' Coach Bill Fitch didn't have much to say about his rival's antics. "Remember, I threw a chair once," said Fitch.

Bob Lanier scored 26 points against Cleveland but Detroit rookie John

Long paced a 17-1 streak that won the game for the Pistons. Trailing 71-59 with less than four minutes gone after the intermission, Long made five baskets and a free throw and the Pistons went on to grab a 76-72 lead. Long finished with 19 points while Campy Russell scored 34 for Cleveland.

Two minutes later, after Detroit increased its lead to 83-78, Vitale threw a tantrum when he picked up his second technical foul.

Elsewhere, Seattle ripped defending NBA champ Washington 121-99. Houston beat New York 106-101.

Philadelphia edged Atlanta 118-117. Kansas City downed the Jazz 114-109. New Jersey clipped Golden State 121-118. Denver beat Phoenix 108-104 and San Diego whipped Milwaukee 125-116.

Sonics 121, Bullets 92. Gus Williams scored 24 points and Lonnie Shelton added 22 to lead Seattle to a rout of Washington in the first meeting between the two teams since June for the NBA title.

Rockets 106, Knicks 101. Mike Newlin came off the bench after missing Houston's first five games and contributed 15 points and nine assists in sparking the Rockets to victory. Rudy Tomjanovich was the high scorer for Houston with 23 points and Calvin Murphy added 21.

Spencer Haywood had 24 and Marvin Webster 21 for the Knicks. Hawks 117, Bulls 117. Henry Bibby sank an 18-foot jump shot with 32 seconds to play to give Philadelphia a hard-fought win. Doug Collins led Philly with 31 points and Julius Erving added 24.

Kings 114, Jazz 109. Scott Wedman scored 22 points to pace six Kansas City players in double figures. Truck Robinson took game scoring honors for New Orleans with 37 and Pete Maravich notched 31.

Nets 121, Warriors 118. Reserve center Bob Elliott teamed with John Williamson to ignite a fourth-quarter rally that carried New Jersey past Golden State. Bernard King led New Jersey with 27 points while Wilson Washington contributed 26. The Nets had 26 points and 18 rebounds.

August 108, Suns 104. Denver reserve forward Tommy Burwell keyed a decisive 15-2 surge midway through the fourth period and George McGinnis scored 33 points and grabbed 24 rebounds as the Bulls defeated the Suns. The Bulls were high on 26 points and 18 rebounds.

Scoreboard Cowboys, Vikings In Mid-Week Tilt

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — Professional football makes another weeknight intrusion into the nation's living rooms tonight but as long as there is going to be a game, at least it ought to be a good one.

The Dallas Cowboys and Minnesota Vikings, familiar post-season foes, will match up in Texas Stadium in a crucial beginning to the second half of the NFL season.

"I don't know if you can call this a must game for us," said Vikings Coach Bud Grant. "When you are struggling every game it seems like just another week where we are trying to get our heads above water."

The Vikings go into the contest two games back of the NFC Central-leading Green Bay Packers, a club Minnesota knocked off last Sunday. And Dallas, with Tony Dorsett reactivated as a starting running back, can move into at least a temporary lead in the NFC East for the first time in six weeks.

Dallas' defense has played well of late and the Vikings' pass-minded offense is in good hands with Fran Tarkenton.

So it will be strength against strength tonight.

"Fran has had a super year," said Grant. "I don't see any difference at all in him this year. I think the last four games he has been outstanding over some players."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry agreed the Vikings seem to have jelled.

"They had some troubles early turning over some players," he said. "They got off to a bad start. But right now they look like the Vikings of old. They won a really significant game last Sunday against Green Bay."

"I'm sure they see it within their grasp to win the division. Fran is throwing the ball as well as he has ever thrown it at this point and he is the key to the Minnesota offense."

The Cowboys have gone through an important week in their season — drawing even with Washington in the race for the NFC East crown and then apparently setting an incident involving Dorsett, who was benched last Sunday for missing a practice and not letting the team know why he had missed, will be back in the starting lineup tonight.

Bruins, Stars Battle to Tie

NEW YORK (UPI) — Saying that Don Cherry and his Boston Bruins are disliked in Minnesota is like saying it's cold at the North Pole.

Last year, the Bruin Coach called the North Stars "gutless" — among other things — after Boston left wing John Williams challenged the entire Minnesota bench and got no takers. Then, prior to this season, Cherry and a couple of Bruin players did some television commercials in Minnesota saying the "new" amalgamated version of the Stars (who merged with the Cleveland Barons) wouldn't be a factor in the NHL.

In other NHL games Wednesday night, Montreal and Toronto tied 4-4, the New York Rangers blasted Colorado 6-2, St. Louis and Pittsburgh were skated to a 6-6 tie, Detroit and Adams Division, Cherry, ever a showman, does most of his show-boating for game purposes — but still hate the man in Minnesota.

Now, in the latest shot directed at the North Stars, Cherry and his players were not too complimentary when speaking of the 2-2 tie that the teams played Wednesday night.

Gates' Record Run Paces Illing Victory

Behind Gary Gates' record-setting performance, Illing Junior High boys' cross country team applied the whitewash brush to Nathaniel White Middle School of Cromwell yesterday, 15-50.

On the distaff side, the Illing girls bowed, 25-31.

Gates turned in an 8:25 clocking for the 1.65 mile layout to shatter the previous standard by 28 seconds.

Illing's Bob Sawyer (8:37), George Cappella (8:48) and Doug Potter (8:51) also bettered the previous record in sweeping the next three placements. Illing is now 5-3.

Phil Pillard, Sheila Williams and Betsy Gleba took third thru fifth placed in the girls' race for Illing.

Results: Boys — 1. Gates (I) 8:25 for 1.65 miles, 2. Sawyer (I), 3. Cappella (I), 4. Potter (I), 5. Frallicardi (I), 6. Poulin (I), 7. Hughes (I), 8. Burnham (I), 9. Tuccitto (NW), 10. Burns (NW).

Girls — 1. Swift (NW) 11:53 for 1.65 miles, 2. Taccitto (NW), 3. Pillard (I), 4. Williams (I), 5. Gleba (I), 6. Knowlton (NW), 7. Trepanier (NW), 8. Comp (I), 9. Pucini (NW), 10. Fetzer (NW).

Illing Booters Gain Win Against Windham Frosh

Finally turning things around, Illing Junior High varsity soccer team got back on the winning road with a 5-1 triumph over the Windham Frosh freshmen yesterday in Williamstam.

The Rams fell behind but got into high gear in the second quarter on two goals by John Boscarini and a third by Mike St. Laurent.

Illing continued the pressure in the second half and it paid off with tallies from Bryan Duonano, Phil Wilson and R.J. Jones.

Jim Stewarten, Brian Carr and Mary Gallagher played well offensively for the Rams, now 5-3 for the season, while Paul Peck, Scott LaBrec, Bill Corso, John Gallagher, Alex Glenn, Tony Carr and Laurie Bergeron performed well defensively.

Goalies John Paggioli and John Reagan combined on 12 saves. Illing outshot Windham, 31-13.

Tosches Wins — PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — University of Rhode Island quarterback Steve Tosches has been named one of two Yankee Conference offensive players of the week.

The senior from Stamford, Conn., won the award for his record-breaking performance during last week's loss to the University of Massachusetts. He completed 22 of 36 passes for 327 yards.

Tosches shared the award with University of Connecticut freshman quarterback Ken Switzer.

Biggest Win of Year For Bennet Booters

Bennet Junior High varsity soccer team registered its eighth shutout of the season, blanking previously unbeaten Webb of Wethersfield, 1-0, in overtime yesterday at the loser's field.

Jay Hedlund's goal with one minute left in the first extra session lifted Bennet to its eighth win in 11 starts. Tommy Woods' cross set up the winning goal.

Goalie Kirk Russell kept Bennet in the contest with several spectacular saves. Myles McCurry, Ken Marshall, Roger Greenwood, Chris Carmel, Mike Roy, Kent Stringfellow and Steve Farley played well defensively for the Bears and Hedlund, Woods, Jeff Pinks, Sean Kearns, Bill Peske, Steve Wirta, Peter Knauth and Steve Cichowski offensively.

Hockey — Washington — Released wing Dave Forbes and said he will sign with Cincinnati.

Will the NFL Hire Full-time Referees?

JUST ASK
Murray Olderman

By Murray Olderman

The National Football League could have avoided a lot of furor over officiating mistakes this season if it had had official full-time referees, led by Al Davis, to establish an official full-time complex in some mid-America location such as Kansas City. Look for a compromise that will result in the blend of full-time whistle-blowers and the current crew of part-timers.

Q. Were Pat Haden of the Los Angeles Rams and J.K. McKay of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who were both in the University of Southern California, also high school footballers? What happened to the report that Haden was coming to Tampa Bay this year? — John Berger, Sarasota, Fla.

Haden and McKay were a legendary duo at Bishop Amat High School in La Puente, Calif., with McKay catching 29 touchdown passes in 1970, a national scholastic record. His senior year, Haden lived in the McKay household. After stardom at USC, they also played one year together for the ex-USC coach John McKay, now coaches the Buccaneers. He would like to have Haden as his quarterback, but the Rams never had any intention of trading him. McKay recently got another ex-USC signal caller, Mike Rae, from Oakland.

Q. Who's your choice as the best tight end in professional football, Dave Casper of the Raiders or Russ Francis of the Patriots? — Ken Brown, Alameda, Calif.

In actual effectiveness, Casper is the more valuable performer because quarterback Ken Stabler of the Raiders looks to him more as a primary receiver in clutch situations. He has made some sensational game-winning grabs. In sheer talent, my vote would go to Francis because he's a little bigger and smoother. "Temporarily," he's not quite as tough as Casper. So the latter gets the vote for now.

Q. Can you explain the difference between a weak safety and a strong safety, and a strong linebacker and a weak linebacker? It has nothing to do with their strength, does it? — Genevieve L., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Absolutely not. The terms just describe the positioning of the players. The tight end on offense determines it. His side of the line is considered the strong side. The linebacker on defense opposite him is considered the strong-side linebacker. "My team" plays their linebackers to keep them "strong" or "weak." The strong safety also lines up on the same side as the tight end, and is generally responsible for covering him on deep passes.

Q. How come Kirk Gibson, a professional baseball player this past summer, is able to play as a wide receiver for the Michigan State football team? I thought college football was still an amateur's sport. — George M., Bay City, Mich.

It is. But that doesn't mean it's a sport for amateurs only. The NCAA relegated it in rules a couple of years ago to allow a player engaged in professional sports to compete at the varsity level in a different sport. Gibson's case is unusual because ordinarily a baseball organization that invests big money in a prospect, as the Detroit Tigers did in Gibson ($200,000), would not like him to risk injury in football. The Tigers even took out insurance on him.

Q. When Jackie Robinson broke into the major leagues he broke the color line, who was the pitcher that he faced on his first time at bat? — John Alfred, San Gabriel, Calif.

Mays Admits Under Pressure He Was the Best Ball Player

By MILT RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Willie Mays was having dinner with some friends of his the other evening when one asked him who was the best ball player he had ever seen in his 22 years in the big leagues.

Willie gave the question some thought before answering. "Bobby Bonds," he said, leaving some margin for discussion by the tentativeness in his voice.

"Why do you say that?" his friend wanted to know.

"Because he could do so many things," Willie said. "Much more than most ballplayers."

"You'd pick him over all the others you saw?"

Mays gave the matter a little more thought.

"Roberto Clemente and Cesar Cedeno were awfully good, too," he said.

Seeing Willie hedge, his dinner companion kept pressing him. "I'm asking you to be specific. Who's the best you ever saw?"

Willie Mays saw this was for real. He had tried his best to be modest and diplomatic in the face of the question, and he had been, but now that he was being pressed for his stripped-to-the-truth gut-honest feeling he felt so self-conscious about it, he couldn't keep from laughing.

"Who's the best ballplayer you ever saw?" Mays' friend put the question to him squarely to him again.

"Me," Willie said, throwing out both hands palms upward in a gesture that clearly said who else? "Who else, indeed."

Nobody I saw ever played the game

balling have members of the Baseball Writers Association of America voted for anybody unannounced. Some of them are so contrary, they'd find sufficient reason to vote against Babe Ruth if he came back and was among the eligibles again.

In fact, some of them DID pass over him when he was on the very first Hall of Fame ballot in 1936.

By Cobb, on that first ballot also, came the closest of anyone to making it unanimously when he polled 98 percent of the vote. Of the 226 writers who cast ballots that year, all but four voted for Cobb, said Jack Lang, secretary-treasurer of the BBWAA.

With 75 percent of the vote needed for election, Ruth and Honus Wagner both made it easily with 85 per cent. Among those elected players whose careers began since the Hall of Fame came into being, Bob Feller was high with 84 per cent of the vote in 1962 and the two next closest with 93 per cent were Stan Musial in 1969 and Ted Williams in 1966. DiMaggio, who came the closest of anyone to making it unanimously when he polled 98 percent of the vote. Of the 226 writers who cast ballots that year, all but four voted for Cobb, said Jack Lang, secretary-treasurer of the BBWAA.

My own feeling is nobody who ever saw Willie Mays play, and do the things he did so consistently for the New York Giants and the San Francisco Giants, could find any possible reason not to vote him into the Hall of Fame.

There's a good chance Mays may carry ex-Dodger Duke Snider in with him because both were contemporaries playing in New York and both were frequently referred to in the same context with the Yankees' Mickey Mantle.

"In all the years we played in New York, we were always compared. Mantle, Duke and me," says Willie. "Mantle already is in. I guess maybe I'm going in, and Duke should be in."

Plan to Play — LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Chris Evert and Tracy Austin announced Wednesday they will participate in the $150,000 Women's Championships of Los Angeles Feb. 12-16.

The tournament, to be held at the Forum, will be the seventh stop in an 11-city series that begins in January. A final round with $275,000 in prize money will be held in New York in March. The four top women in each tournament advance to the next round with all the winners meeting in the final.

Sixth Straight Win For Bolton Gridders

Paced by the hard running of Jeff Marineau, Glenn Sherman and Bruce Baltovich, Bolton's Saledays Tigers continued on the undefeated path last Sunday with a 34-14 decision over the Ellington Roadrunners.

Marineau gained 99 yards and tallied two touchdowns and added two points after a score. Sherman picked up 83 yards, including a 4-yard TD run while Baltovich gained 85 yards rushing and scored on a 45-yard pass from quarterback Ted Brown.

Dave Murdoch accounted for the other Bolton six-pointer when he recovered a fumble in the end zone.

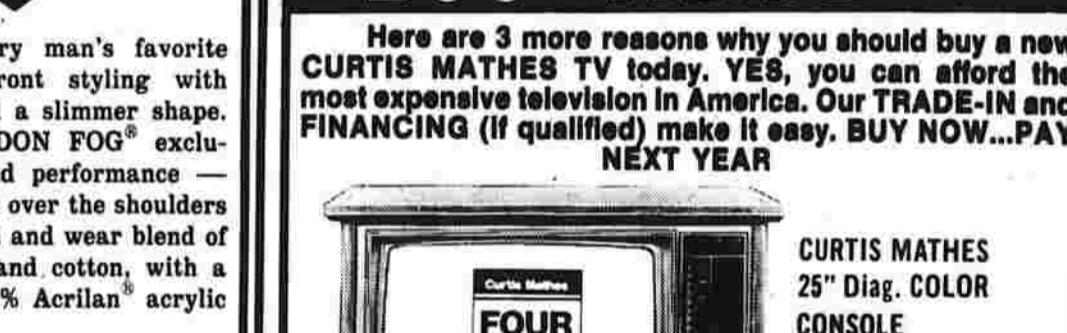

The scoring was completed on Tim Kalkus' rush for two points after a touchdown.

The winners led 8-0, 12-6, after the first two periods but Ellington tied the score at 14-14 after three.

The winning score came on Brown's toss to Baltovich. The victory was the sixth without defeat for the Tigers.

Storm Halts Ocean Cross

NEW YORK (UPI)—A storm has halted an attempt by a Connecticut marine promoter and six crewmen to set a trans-Atlantic speed record in a space-age 62-foot trimaran.

The Coast Guard said Wednesday that Al Constantine of Greenwich, Conn., 41-year-old captain of the Spirit of America, was forced to put in at Bermuda when his craft, the Spirit of America, was badly damaged in an Atlantic storm.

Constantine was trying to better the record for the fastest west-to-east Atlantic crossing of 12 days, four hours and one minute set by the schooner Atlantic in 1905.

Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Tom Osborne said Constantine's wife telephoned to report that the Spirit of America had "pulled into Bermuda this morning (Wednesday), heavily damaged."

Constantine's secretary Sandra Mitchell said she had spoken with him on the phone, and "There were blown about 200 miles south of their original course, and Bermuda was much closer place to go to than Connecticut."

She said Constantine, director of marine-commerce and development for New London, Conn., sounded exhausted and said none of his men had slept in 48 hours.

"They struck an underwater object going into Bermuda and the boat was flooded. They worked all night to keep the boat afloat. All of their electronic equipment flooded and there been about $25,000 worth of damage," she said.

Constantine told his secretary that before the storm, the sailboat had reached a maximum speed of 28 knots and covered 150 miles in a period of 12 hours.

Keep the Change

New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner was so overwhelmed at receiving the keys to the city Monday from Mayor Ed Koch, he gave away his team's World Series trophy.

The two-foot tall gold-plated trophy — on public display in City Hall since last Thursday — was destined for a permanent home at Yankee Stadium, but as Steinbrenner left, Koch's honors ceremony with Most Valuable Player Bucky Dent, a mayoral aide thanked him for letting New York display the victory symbol.

Steinbrenner's unprecedented answer: "Keep it." Asked if he meant that, he added, "I think it belongs to the city and to the people. It was a victory for the city and the people in it."

National Monument

Cincinnati Reds superstar Pete Rose is a free agent now, and the some folks are afraid he might leave town — so they're planning to turn him into a historic landmark.

Gardening

By Frank Atwood

Slender columns of a Serpentine Cactus in a greenhouse at Smith College in Northampton, Mass. It is a native of Mexico. (Photo by Atwood)

The large, well-filled greenhouses at Smith College in Northampton, Mass., were new to most of the people who visited the campus on a recent bus tour sponsored by the Connecticut Horticultural Society.

Some of us had heard that Smith invites the public in the fall, and again in the spring, to a flower show. Some of us knew that Smith had a distinguished botany department. I doubt that anyone on the bus had seen the greenhouses.

They are old. The first one was built in 1890 by Lord & Burham, and the company sent a bill which is still in the college archives for work done at the Smith Female College. Others were added during the next decade. There are courses in botany for undergraduate and graduate students.

Outdoors, nearby, there are extensive gardens and an arboretum of 160 acres. Counting trees in the arboretum, plants in the gardens and in the greenhouses, there are 5,000 species, all meticulously labelled.

Farmers' Market

We are approaching the last weekend of October and last weekend of business for the Farmers' Market at the Old State House in Hartford. It has been an undoubted success, says Sally Taylor of the Connecticut Citizen Action Group, which organized the market.

The number of producers driving their trucks to Hartford two days a week to sell vegetables and fruit, dropped after Labor Day. Several of the small growers were either teachers or students who earned money during the summer months with big gardens and now are otherwise occupied.

Other growers who had been on a waiting list were given the spaces for September and October.

The market will be run again next year, probably on the same two days, Wednesday and Saturday, Ms. Taylor said. She hopes there will be a third day each week when other small markets will be set up, perhaps in school parking lots, with three to five trucks at each.

"Woolly Bear"

Mark Abratis, business manager of The Herald, asked how the "woolly bears" forecast of winter weather should be interpreted. If the brown band around the middle of the caterpillar is wider than the black bands at both ends, does this mean a severe winter? He thought it meant a mild winter and he had seen a "woolly bear" with a very wide brown band. Some of his fellow workers said the caterpillar there will be a third day each week when other small markets will be set up, perhaps in school parking lots, with three to five trucks at each.

Division of Lydall Seeks PUCA Permit

MANCHESTER — A local firm has applied to the state Public Utilities Control Authority for permission to transport within the state for three related firms.

Lydall Express Inc. of 618 Parker St., a division of Lydall Inc., has applied to the PUCA.

It is seeking to be a contract carrier for three other divisions of Lydall — Colonial Fiber, Lydall & Foulds and Superior Ball — Edward Epstein of Lydall Express Inc. said.

The hearing on the matter by the PUCA will be held Thursday, Nov. 16 at 10 a.m. It will be in the PUCA office, which is in the State Office Building, 165 Capitol Ave., Hartford.

Any person wishing to be admitted as a party to this proceeding shall file a written petition no later than five days before the date of the hearing.

Real Estate Study

MANCHESTER — Daniel F. Reale of Daniel F. Reale Inc. Realtors, 175 Main St., has returned from a week-long course of intensive real estate studies in the Graduate Realtors Institute sponsored by the Connecticut Association of Realtors.

Reale participated in the third course of the three-course, 99 hour program which leads to the nationally recognized "Graduate Realtors Institute" (GRI) designation under the authority of the National Association of Realtors.

Homebuyer Workshop

VERNON — Seligman-Dempsey Real Estate Inc. of 150 Grove St., Vernon, will sponsor a Homebuyers Workshop Oct. 30. The workshop will be free and will be open to the public.

Anyone considering buying a home should be interested in attending. There will be an attorney and a bank mortgage officer on hand to speak and answer any questions.

There will also be real estate agents present from Seligman-Dempsey. The workshop will start at 7:30 p.m. and will be at the Grove Street offices of the agency. Refreshments will be served.

Agency representatives said statistics prove that the majority of people contemplating buying their first home are not sure what they should do first.

Joins Realty Firm

MANCHESTER — Shirley Schoenberger has joined the real estate office of Blanchard and Rossetto at 189 E. Center St. as a consultant.

Mrs. Schoenberger has been involved in sales for several years. She will specialize in residential and commercial real estate.

Mrs. Schoenberger has lived in Manchester for 10 years. She and her husband Bill have three children. They live at 54 Perkins St.

New Rogers Plant

ROGERS — Rogers Corp., which had already announced a $1 million expansion of its Chandler, Ariz., interconnection circuits operation, is now building a $1.5 million facility on four acres in Chateau Gontier, Brittany, France, for the same product lines.

The $1,000-square-foot domestic addition will be in operation late this year. The new 24,000-square-foot French plant will start up mid-1979.

Norman L. Greenman, Rogers president, said, "The projects are the result of increasing customer demand for our flexible circuits and other interconnection devices."

The French plant will supplement one in Gent, Belgium, which is currently the European source of those Rogers products for telecommunications and computer equipment.

Cheney Plans Open House

MANCHESTER — Cheney Brothers will host an open house Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Entrance will be on Elm Street.

Certain types of velvets are sold to casket manufacturers. Other types are sold to the retail trade and to dress and apparel manufacturers. Still other types are sold to the upholstery fabrics, as well as pile fabrics, are sold to jobbers and furniture manufacturers.

The public is invited to see exhibits of various products manufactured at the mill, and to view the manufacturing processes. Pamphlets will be distributed to visitors describing the tour route through five of the mills now in operation.

All state and local officials have been invited. Cheney Brothers dates back to 1838, when Ralph, Ward, Rush, and Frank Cheney, all brothers, and E. H. Arnold, all of Manchester, founded the company for manufacturing silk sewing thread.

Sewing silk was the primary product the first dozen years.

Cheney continued to expand and grew to be one of the largest manufacturers of silk textile products in the country. At its peak, Cheney Brothers employed almost 5,000 people and used about 36 acres of floor space for its operations.

In July 1956, La France Industries, a subsidiary of Gerli & Co., Inc., purchased the velvet, plush, insulating yarn, and decorative fabrics business from the J.P. Stevens Co. These operations are still being carried on. Present operations provide work for about 490 people.
