

Nurses Show MD Case History

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — The daily care routine of a muscular dystrophy patient was the highlight of the annual meeting of the Manchester Public Health Nursing Association held recently.

Joey Dumas, 16, a muscular dystrophy victim for most of his life, was guest of honor, along with his mother and grandmother, at the luncheon meeting at the Manchester Country Club.

The presentation showed how Ms. Monroe prepares Joey to go to Regional Occupational Training Center every morning, beginning with a complete bed bath. The slides showed the application of two body braces necessary to support his limp body, and the intricate system used to move Joey from his bed to a wheelchair by means of slings slipped over his body.

The slings are fastened to a hydraulic lift mechanism by chains. When Nurse Monroe pumps the hydraulic lift, Joey is hoisted off the bed and swung onto the nearby wheelchair.

Joey is then wheeled to the kitchen table where he is fed his breakfast. His teeth are brushed, and if it's a chilly day, the nurse puts his sweater on, then wheels him to the front door to wait for the ramped bus that picks him up to go to school.

Joey's grandmother took care of him until he was seven when the MPHNA was called in. Ms. Monroe said that MPHNA care has made it possible for Joey to remain at home. Joey's mother lost her left hand in an industrial accident several years ago, which has seriously restricted her manual abilities.

The nurse's duties do not end when Joey is dressed and ready to go. She makes his bed and puts his room in order before she leaves.

MPHNA Director Lois Lewis said that the agency has been working with Child & Family Services in a counseling program with teen-age parents. She also said that the public health nursing consortium involving East Hartford, Glastonbury, South Windsor, Rockville and Manchester public health nursing agencies would be providing evening and weekend services this week.

A certificate of appreciation was awarded to Mrs. Margaret Boyle for her many years of service to the MPHNA board and "to the people of Manchester."

Mrs. Darden Hasielti was re-elected president of the MPHNA board. Also re-elected were Max Goodstine, treasurer; David Garaventa, assistant treasurer; and Mrs. Patricia Cook, recording secretary.

New officers elected were Mrs. Mary Carter, vice president, and Mrs. Mary Briggs, corresponding secretary.

Piqued Committee to Stay On

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter
MANCHESTER — Spurred on by their impatience with the town administration and delays in receiving long-awaited reports, the town's Water Study Committee agreed Thursday night to keep meeting until it can make a recommendation for improvements to the town's water system.

He said Carter's biggest objection was that 25 percent of benefits would go to persons with yearly incomes of $50,000 or more.

At the outset of the meeting, Reinborn said he had reconsidered his recommendations on disbanding the committee and said he would like the committee to continue and take on the job as a "watchdog" over the town's water problems.

White House Occupants Buchwald's Jibe Targets

By CHARLIE MAYNARD
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — Even if he doesn't have Dick Nixon to kick around, that hasn't stopped syndicated columnist Art Buchwald from needing the man in the White House.

Buchwald once said that there's nothing he could write about a politician which would offend anyone. And seeing how his column is printed in over 500 newspapers throughout the world, one can see that he's right.

From then on it was up against the establishment and Buchwald has lampooned every President from Kennedy to Carter.

Buchwald took time to explain why there is a leadership crisis in Washington today and why, at least to him, the reasoning seemed simple.

There are 14 million people over the age of 18 in the country, he said. There are 99 million registered voters and of this group, 38 million are under the age of 35. Therefore, they are ineligible to run for the presidency, as are the one million foreign-born residents.

That leaves us with 60 million people, he deduced. But half of them are women, and the country isn't ready for a woman president for at least two years.

That leaves them out. Three million are afraid to fly ("and you can't have a president who's afraid to fly," he said), two million have wives who don't want to move to Washington, another two million are being audited by the IRS, and 12 million are mentioned in Elizabeth Ray's books which leaves us with 7 million candidates.

However, he said, of the 7 million, there were 6,999,998 men treated by a psychiatrist.

"That left us in '76," he said, "with a peanut farmer from Georgia and a guy who played football without a helmet."

"People ask me if I'm a Republican or Democrat," he told a capacity audience at the East Hartford High School next door on Thursday night. "I'm neither. I'm against whoever is in power."

Buchwald's talk was sponsored by the East Hartford Fine Arts Commission and the Manchester Community College Cultural Program, the first time the two organizations teamed up to provide a program.

The columnist kept the audience buckled up and immediately dispelled rumors that he disliked Jimmy Carter.

"I have great respect for Jimmy Carter," he deadpanned. "I worship the very quicksand he walks on."

Still don't believe him? Well, how about his comment that Carter's policy of carrying his own luggage is not just a publicity stunt for the press.

"No, it's not an affliction," he said. "For months on the campaign trail, he traveled all alone on Eastern Airlines and he had this fear of losing his luggage."

Need further proof? "Carter has his fire hose chats to be close to the people," Buchwald said. "You know, another president has had fire hose chats. Ford tried it, but the fire went out."

From the face of it, life has been kind to New Yorkborn Art Buchwald. He left his glamorous life at the University of Southern California for an equally glamorous life in Paris where "the streets are paved with mattresses."

In 1952, he began writing for the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune and 10 years later he returned to the states after his column was syndicated.

But don't think Buchwald saves all his ammunition for Carter. He dishes it out to other members and agencies of the Washington establishment.

• Sen. William Scott of Virginia: "The 'New Times' said that he's the dumbest senator in Washington. That magazine has a circulation of 40."

• Sen. William Scott of Virginia: "The report, which made him the dumbest senator in Washington."

• Bert Lance: "Bert was a good banker. He did banking with the Evil Knievel did for the space program."

• The Pentagon: "I once made up a story on how the Pentagon is agreed to participate in a conference. It can't be shot down. That's why I got a call from the Defense Department and they said I had violated national security."

• Miss Lillian: "I don't think she meant anything by the remark about Italians. Ella has to pay the price. If she invited Billy, she would have gotten worse."

• The scientists who urged the ban on saccharin: "They shouldn't develop a substitute for sugar. They need a stronger rat. You can't keep doing experiments on weak rats. They get sick every time they get too fat."

Let's hope Art Buchwald stays around forever to lance the Washington establishment.

"I'm for gun registration," Art Buchwald tells an audience at the East Hartford High School. "My neighbor has a gun and he can't even mow his lawn straight." The columnist delighted the Washington establishment and his life in Europe. (Herald photo by Strempler)

Two Charged In Robbery

EAST HARTFORD — Police arrested two Hartford men in connection with a Thursday night robbery of the Imperial Package Store, 315 Main St., East Hartford.

Police said the two men, one carrying a knife and the other a gun, entered the store just before closing and held up the lone clerk. They brought the clerk into the back of the store, tied him up, and at gunpoint demanded to know where the money was.

Gift Police Car Draws Criticism

EAST WINDSOR (UPI) — Two East Windsor police commissioners are saying they fear a conflict of interest, have asked for details about the standard practice of the police chief receiving a free luxury car.

Reginald Bancroft and Elizabeth Roman said Thursday they wanted extensive information on the unwritten agreement between East Windsor and a local car dealership which also happens to be the town's second largest taxpayer.

Waddell PTA Shows Pattern for Growth

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — October is PTA membership drive month and Waddell School PTA is a prime example of what can be done to spur interest and participation in the traditional school organization.

When other PTA's are having trouble getting any involvement by parents and teachers, Waddell has been increasing its membership by 10 percent yearly getting 100 percent teacher participation and has a big agenda of varied programs and activities.

For those reasons and others Waddell PTA was named the most outstanding local PTA in Connecticut by the National Parent Teacher Association for the 1977-78 school year.

The 10 percent increase in membership and the 100 percent participation by teachers were cited in the documents sent to the state PTA for the 1976-77 school, but the increase was at least that much again last year. According to James Morancey, Morancey and his wife Eveleen served as co-presidents of the Waddell PTA for the past two award-winning years.

The local organization was cited by the State PTA and was recommended for the national award. The official membership sent to the state documents last year was 247. This year it is up to 275 in a school with about 500 students.

The Moranceys were the only local Connecticut PTA leaders represented at the PTA National Convention last June in Atlanta, Ga. Waddell from the national PTA president, Grace Baisinger.

Morancey said he believes the national award is the first ever received by a Manchester PTA and possibly the first by a town east of the Connecticut River.

The programs sponsored by the Waddell PTA have included a talent show, an annual Halloween Party, a drug program to which both parents and students were invited, vandalism programs, programs on the Heimlich maneuver and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, after school sports and sports nights for parents and children.

Fund-raisers such as flea markets, cake and craft sales have been held to raise money for new stage curtains, additions to the library and other school projects.

Waddell PTA also publishes a yearly pamphlet to describe its program objectives and general information about school events for the year, a pamphlet and report with photos at the end of the year and a monthly newsletter.

Waddell parents were chiefly responsible for a policy change by the Board of Education last January which limited the use of private cars for field trips. The parents were concerned about the safety of the children and insurance protection for the drivers and met with the Board of Education on several occasions.

Mrs. Morancey said she believes the secret of the success of the Waddell parents group is a strong board willing to work with the co-presidents. She praised her husband as an excellent leader but was reluctant to take credit for all the legwork she does during the day for the PTA.

Mrs. Morancey was fine arts chairman for the PTA for one year before she and her husband were asked to be co-presidents the following year.

She credited the many parents of the Waddell School children who are willing to help out and are not afraid to speak out for a cause as the main reason for the organization's success.

Mrs. Morancey said she thinks Waddell has always had a fairly active PTA. The organization celebrated its 25th anniversary last year.

The Moranceys' involvement has also spread into participation in the Manchester Council of Parent Teacher Associations, which is made up of all the PTA's in the public schools.

Morancey is currently president of that organization after serving actively last year as co-chairman of the council's active budget study committee. Morancey is still vice president of the Waddell PTA and Mrs. Morancey is representative from Waddell to the PTA Council.

Asked why they give so much time to the schools, the Moranceys say simply, "We do it for the children."

Candidates Speak at Forum

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

VERNON — All of the area candidates for the November elections want to see state spending cut back but they're not sure how it can be done without cutting back on services.

Eight candidates spoke Thursday night at a "Meet the Candidates" night sponsored by the Vernon League of Women Voters with Joyce Taylor as moderator.

The candidates want to see more equitable aid to the towns for education; more property tax relief for the elderly; the limiting of hiring of new employees by the state; the elimination of executive assistant positions, among other things.

Republican candidate for the 5th Senatorial District, Andrew Repko, who, in the past, served in the General Assembly and the Senate, for a period of 14 years, said he wants to go back because he sees so much that has been neglected, especially in the small towns.

He said equalization of education is one of his top priorities and he feels equalized funding can't be done properly without identifying goals in education to make sure the taxpayers are getting the most education for their money.

His Democratic opponent, Michael Skelley, said he originally became involved in politics because he was dissatisfied with the system.

He feels education equalization should be the number one priority to be considered in the next session of the legislature.

He also sees another concern, vocational education. He feels more opportunities should be provided for students in the area of vocational training.

He also feels that state-required programs should have the funding to implement them, that government programs shouldn't be renewed routinely each year but should be reevaluated and eliminated if they are not necessary.

Republican incumbent Dorothy Miller, representing the 5th District, which includes a section of Vernon, is seeking her seventh term in the legislature.

She said while serving she has sponsored many bills that have improved the quality of life for residents of her district. These included such bills as tax relief for the elderly, the bill on ethics, and one requiring first aid training for all ambulance drivers.

She said in the next session she would like to see fewer bills submitted noting she feels there is needless duplication.

She said she would like to see the Guaranteed Tax Base bill revised based on a sliding scale so poor towns would get more than the richer towns.

Nancy Osborn, Republican candidate for state representative from Vernon's 56th District, said she sees the need for property tax relief for the elderly and proposed a method for doing so, based on income.

She also doesn't feel the tax on children's clothing should be on until age 16, not age 10 as it is now. "We're going to have to find ways to cut state spending too," she said.

She thinks it might be good to prepare a two-year budget and review it each year.

Chester Morgan, Democratic incumbent from the 56th District, said he attended every session and voted on every issue. He said one bill he is most proud of was the one he introduced and was passed, that will make all voting booths accessible to the handicapped by July 1980.

He wants to see a continued review of government spending; increased educational opportunities in the form of vocational education; continued support for the needs of the senior citizens and improved and expanded recreational facilities.

Kathleen O'Leary McGuire, as she wants to be known, is seeking election on the Republican ticket for representative from the 55th District which also includes a part of Vernon.

She cautioned that this coming year "We had better pay attention to spending, we're stuck with a 14.4 percent increase in the budget and only an eight percent increase in revenues," she said.

She said, "The system of budgeting now used is mind boggling, and I think dishonest. If you and I used these accounting methods we'd go bankrupt because we wouldn't have the taxpayers to bail us out," she said.

"We've been bad and it's about time we started to pay attention to what's going on and what we can do about it," she said.

Terry Bertinson, Democratic incumbent in the 55th District, said she has great personal satisfaction in the program of equalizing aid to education and said she will continue to work for a fairer distribution of the cost of education.

She feels there is always room for improvement in efficiency in government but said she won't jump on the band wagon where easy slogans replace hard issues.

Riders Rally Behind Singing Bus Driver

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — A chorus of community leaders is rallying behind Benford "Benjie" Stelmacher, the singing bus driver who says he just wants his job back and make "the happy bus happy again."

Stelmacher, 25, was fired by the state-owned Connecticut Transit Bus Co. last week for allegedly stealing $8 in fares on his commuter bus run.

Hartford's Human Relations Commission Thursday told him it had already collected about 100 signatures of sympathetic passengers who want to hear his voice bellowing cheers to them along the route again.

Other passengers have asked Gov. Ella Grasso to intervene on the driver's behalf.

A coalition of black ministers have asked to meet with the company to show support for the entertainer-bus driver who also preaches the gospel on Sunday in the Mount Olive Baptist Church. But a group spokesman said the firm refused to discuss Stelmacher's dismissal with them.

Bar tender Jimmy Coney at the nearby Marble Pillar said Stelmacher often rushed in to get change for his trip.

"I'm moved and I'm touched," said Stelmacher when the city's Human Relations Commission told him it had received the signatures, and he walked out of the meeting with tear-filled eyes.

"People keep calling," the father of two said, looking shyly down at the floor. "They tell me, 'Keep your chin up Benjie. We know you didn't do it.'"

The commission will represent him when the state Human Rights Commission holds a hearing Nov. 6.

"The company said it was comparable to driving a bus while drinking," said Arthur Johnson, executive director of the city commission. "But fellow drivers allege white drivers in the same incidents were not fired."

Stelmacher, who once said he always wanted to be a bus driver, denied stealing a penny, and denied being friendly by giving change to passengers who didn't have the exact 50-cent fare.

He said he often cashed the bills passengers gave him so he could give change to other commuters. Occasionally, when he didn't have time to get change, he would forget to turn the bills in and leave the money on the bus, he said.

Schiff Declares Candidacy

HAMDEN, Conn. (UPI) — Connecticut tax maverick Irwin Schiff says he'll test the political waters by trying for the governor's office as a write-in candidate.

The 50-year-old Hamden insurance actuary, who has gained public notice for his controversial stand against the federal income tax, has said he plans to run as an independent.

"At first, it was just kind of a joke, but the more I thought about running for governor, the more it seemed feasible," he said.

Sounding an already popular campaign theme, Schiff pledged to trim state taxes and roll back spending, "by at least 10 percent."

He added one way he would slash spending would be to re-negotiate or eliminate pensions for public employees.

"We're underfunding a future obligation. It's a ticking time bomb and the biggest ripoff of taxpayers' money," he said.

"If I'm elected governor, I'll take a salary, but I won't take a pension," he said. He also called on state legislators to forego their pensions.

This is why Child & Family Services periodically offers a six-session series of group meetings to help people find support as they restructure their lives.

Child & Family Services' social worker, Linda Van Dine, will be leading the next series which begins

Wednesday, Nov. 15 and meets weekly from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The sessions will focus on feelings around the separation process, personal needs and goals, legal and financial issues, changing social situations. Kennedy Sees Controls if Carter Plan Fails

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — The president may have to take a serious look at wage and price controls if President Carter's voluntary anti-inflation program fails, according to Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Kennedy's observation came Thursday during a campaign stop in Connecticut, where he lent the magic of his name to several Democratic candidates.

At a brief news conference, the Massachusetts Democrat said he hopes the president's inflation fighting program works, because he's not particularly thrilled at the prospect of mandatory wage and price controls.

"I do think the recommendations of the president are a constructive step," Kennedy said. "They should be enforced, and they should be followed."

Kennedy referred to the president's anti-inflation strategy as the "last best effort" this country has before implementation of more drastic measures.

"If this doesn't work, we're going to have to think very seriously about them (wage and price controls)," the senator said.

Kennedy had particularly kind words for President Carter's Middle East Peacekeeping efforts at the Camp David summit.

"We hope there will be similar successes in the domestic areas," he said.

When asked if he harbored any presidential ambitions for 1980, Kennedy would only say, "The president I expect to run. I expect to support him."

Kennedy flew into a rain-soaked Tweed-New Haven Airport Thursday afternoon to continue a 20-year-old tradition begun by his two late brothers — campaigning for Connecticut Democrats.

In 1958, then Sen. John F. Kennedy came to the state. Two years later, he was greeted by 40,000 cheering supporters in Waterbury, who braved freezing temperatures 3 a.m. to catch a glimpse of him.

Four days later, John Kennedy was elected president.

Every election year since, one of the Kennedy brothers has been in the air. "I came to Connecticut, because I love Ella Grasso."

"It may be raining today, but when you elect Ella Grasso the sun is going to shine all over Connecticut," he said.

Kennedy is the next to last on a long list of Democratic "big names" Mrs. Grasso has brought to Connecticut to campaign for her.

The president's wife, mother and vice president have visited Connecticut for Mrs. Grasso, who faces Rep. Ronald Sarasin, R-Conn., in the Nov. 7 election. President Carter plans to stump for the incumbent Saturday in Hartford.

Meat Veto

HARTFORD (UPI) — Rep. William Cotter, D-Conn., is urging President Carter to veto a recently passed meat import act he says will escalate inflation.

The 1st District congressman said the act is inflationary because it curbs Carter's authority to suspend quotas and increase imports when more meat supplies are needed to meet demand.

Sarasin Says Grasso Ignores Street Crime

FARMINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial hopeful Ronald Sarasin says Gov. Grasso is guilty of "criminal negligence" for not providing law enforcement officials with the tools they need to fight crime.

Escalating his "war against crime," Sarasin told the Connecticut Chiefs of Police Thursday his Democratic opponent has taken a casual attitude toward Connecticut's growing crime rate.

The Republican said Connecticut needs "a first rate crime laboratory" for local police forces and an expanded state police investigation unit to flush out the criminal elements that have infiltrated legalized gambling.

"But, the three term congressman wanted to make it clear he does not blame policemen for the rise in crime. He blames Mrs. Grasso."

"It's certainly not the fault of the officer on the street," Sarasin told the gathering at the Farmington Country Club. "We must start giving those in the battlefield of crime some of the essential tools and support."

Sarasin listed a number of tough anti-crime bills that failed to pass the Legislature last session. He suggested they would have passed if Mrs. Grasso had pushed for them.

"At such a time, to do nothing amounts to almost criminal negligence," he said.

Mrs. Grasso did not attend the police chiefs meetings, sending her running mate William O'Neill instead. O'Neill, who spoke nearly an hour before Sarasin, criticized the GOP candidate without mentioning his name.

"I'm sick and tired of hearing some candidates for public office decide to grab some issue that is emotional, whether it's welfare or crime on the street," the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor said.

Capital Fare

By ANDREW TULLY

WASHINGTON — By this time, the hully boys in the Kremlin must be having their 32d thought about how to approach a Polish fact of life named Karol Wojtyla, unexpectedly elevated to a new job as Pope John Paul II.

Poland, where the new, 58-year-old Pope was a cardinal and archbishop of Krakow, is of course a Communist country, member of the Warsaw Pact, and all that jazz. For the Russians, Polish jokes won't do any more. They have to deal with the prospect that the election of Karol Wojtyla could make Stalin's question, "How many divisions has the Pope?" obsolete.

Pope John Paul II has a lot of divisions in Eastern Europe, the Kremlin's buffer against Western democracies. According to church publications, they amount to more than 50 million Roman Catholics—21 million in Poland, 11 million in Czechoslovakia, six million in Hungary, 1.6 million in East Germany, and 1.1 in Rumania.

The first non-Italian Pope in 456 years this is a shot in the arm to those Catholics, repressed for more than 30 years by their Communist rulers. "It has given them new status," says a veteran State Department diplomat who has served in Eastern Europe. "I'm not talking rebellion, but of a new awakening of spirit that will make Catholics in Communist states a little harder to deal with."

And the Rev. Pope is just the ticket to give the Kremlin pause. He has lived under the totalitarisms, as a forced laborer for the Nazis, and as a parish priest who had to tread carefully under the Reds. He is a widely-esteemed intellectual, equipped with the political sophistication so necessary in living side-by-side with Communism without yielding ground in the matter of faith and morals.

Eastern European clerics still probably won't dare make any big waves. But it was significant that Polish Ambassador Romuald Spasowski, attended a special "Mass on the Election of the Pope in Washington's St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Guidelines Not Widely Known

During a political campaign the words "bombardment" aptly describes the amount of information presented to citizens by various candidates.

The information takes the form of letters, political advertisements using both electronic media and personal appearances at various functions.

People in the newspaper business are not exempt from being "bombarded" with political information. Just the opposite in most cases, newspaper persons usually end up with a far greater amount of information than the average citizen.

It may seem to many people when politicians make statements they know no set of guidelines or rules. The idea of lack of control over their own game is in election of Karol Wojtyla. It has pulled off a political coup of international dimensions in creating a new hero not only for Catholics but for all believers in human liberties—Protestants, Jews, and atheists.

As a Pope, Cardinal Wojtyla was the perfect choice. Catholics and non-Catholics alike throughout the world have had a special affection for the Catholics of Eastern Europe. Known as the "church of silence," those Catholics, under men like Pope John Paul II, survived the Cold War by sheer tenacity — and emerged stronger than ever.

It is easy to spend human lives in a rebellion doomed to failure. It is a lot harder to do as Karol Wojtyla and his Eastern European counterparts did — maintain a dialog with their Communist rulers in order to quietly win civil rights concessions for their flocks.

So lift a glass for the Cardinals. They gave freedom lovers everywhere something to celebrate. In America, it may also be the week that delivers the coup de grace to the Polish "joke."

Turn the last one to leave please out of the lights? That bit of gallows would-be humor, applied a while back to the plights of Detroit, Cleveland and other problem-belt U.S. cities, a gross exaggeration.

As we heard today, however, it is considerably less so. Rhodesia is experiencing a population drain that, if it continues at the present rate, suggests virtual depopulation within a foreseeable future.

Impelled by worsening racial warfare and a weakening economy, more than a thousand Rhodesians per month have been packing up and pulling out of late.

That is white Rhodesians we are talking about. The Rhodesian government officially put their numbers today at some 280,000, down from a peak of 270,000 when the British campaign was severed 13 years ago. But that perhaps should charitably be described as wishful thinking.

The working taxpayer is burned by inflation and the practicing politicians are beginning to take notice.

In Rhodesia's case, giving or taking 10 thousand white in the population count is vital with blacks numbering an estimated at 6.7 million.

All this is apropos of the U.S. visit of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, invited by a conservative senate group to put his case before an American public opinion and admitted reluctantly by the administration.

The United States does not recognize his breakaway regime and, pledged under U.N. resolutions not to traffic with its members, has now gotten itself censured by the Security Council.

The Rhodesian situation is exquisitely complicated. But to simplify it to an extreme, the U.S. and Britain, making a case for the least violent settlement of central and southern Africa's racial conflicts, want an "all parties" agreement on Rhodesia's future, including in guerrillas based in neighboring black American countries who are waging the increasingly effective terrorist campaign against Rhodesian whites.

Smith, who not so long ago was vowing that not in a thousand years would there be black rule in Rhodesia, now heads a transitional government with black representation, supposedly preparing for an eventual black takeover. The regime does not include the major guerrilla groups; however, and its critics translate "transition" as arranging for continued white domination.

But according to Smith, his government now meets Anglo-U.S. specifications. "I've done my part," he has restated to U.S. audiences, "what more do they want?"
Not a very good question from the official American view. A better one from the public's point of view might be why Americans, official or otherwise, should be much concerned at all about such a small and distant people.

The answer is that Rhodesia teeters on the brink of a racial disaster which, if not forestalled, would dwarf the horrors of the Congo so many years back and present the nations of the West with an excruciating dilemma. Could they nevertheless stand by in the event of a full-scale black uprising that might mean extermination of the white population?

In most instances, political candidates do not follow an exact set of guidelines.

The problem is only they and a few close associates know the guidelines, the general public does not.

As newspaper persons are exposed to candidates it becomes apparent to them what the guidelines are and how they are followed.

In our years of covering political campaigns on the local, state and national levels, the guidelines remain pretty much the same.

Some of the guidelines used by politicians follow:
—When making a statement, never use two words when you can use two sentences or even better, two paragraphs.

Never be simple. Always extremely complex. That way voters will not be able to understand and think the candidate is smarter than they are and in turn, will vote for a smart man.
—As in the case of potential presidential candidates, always make sure the words in your campaign is extremely well organized even if it is not. By doing this, a candidate is assured of some sympathy when the whole campaign falls apart.

After all, the campaign was well organized, it must have been some other factor which led to his defeat.
—If a candidate is totally unful and apparently incompetent, he will stay away from situations such as debates, public appearances and situations where he would have to speak.

Never be simple. Always extremely complex. That way voters will not be able to understand and think the candidate is smarter than they are and in turn, will vote for a smart man.

So voters who think there are no guidelines, must remember that there are.
An old adage states, "You can't tell the players without a scorecard."
In the case of politics, you just have to know what the scorecard is.

Smith, very well aware of the dilemma, is employing the deepening danger for Rhodesian whites for purposes of diplomatic blackmail. He is in effect defying the West either to accept his unacceptable policies and aid his regime, or to assume responsibility for a central African holocaust.

The painful point to consider is that black when Smith was pleading a white Rhodesia forever, his present povesities might have been sufficient to head off open warfare and prepare the way to the gradual development of a multiracial community.

In today's grimly changed situation, they are too little and quite possibly disastrously too late.

Report Calls For Medical Studies

By AL ROSSITER JR.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many medical techniques and procedures widely used in the United States have not been adequately evaluated for safety and effectiveness, according to a new report by Congress' Office of Technology Assessment.

Each year, the report said, hundreds and perhaps thousands of new technologies enter the health care system and yet it has been estimated that only 10 to 20 percent are subjected to formal evaluation.

Federal law requires that new drugs and medical devices be evaluated for safety and efficacy before they can be used, but there is no similar requirement for medical procedures such as operations or new diagnostic techniques.

Many of these new procedures and tools have contributed to substantial improvement in the health of Americans over the years, the OTA said in reporting the results of a study requested by the State Committee on Human Resources.

"However, concerns have arisen about the possible negative aspects of the pervasive use of technology in medical care," the report said. "Evidence indicates that many technologies are not adequately assessed before they enjoy widespread use."

Never answer a question directly. In certain instances, always quote some obscure formula for reducing taxes or spending. You won't have to know what it entails, because the voters won't know either.

If you are faced with a choice between doing something which will be in the long-term interests of the public and something which will please a large campaign constituency or a voting block, always choose the latter.

Sunday Liquor Sales Opposed

To the editor:
I wholeheartedly agree with Frank Lupien's letter in The Herald on Oct. 20 concerning the sale of alcoholic liquors on Sunday.

It is bad enough that we have to put up with all the vulgar influences that have crept into our town the past few years when we really don't have to.

Recent ordinances against massage parlors have not been very effective.

The only way to get rid of these undesirable elements is to have them closed permanently. Other towns in our country have done so.

I sincerely believe that the majority of people in Manchester don't approve of these elements, but for some reason do not speak out against them.

When you vote Nov. 7, please vote no on the sale of liquor on Sunday.

Let's try to keep anymore undesirable elements from coming into our town and make it the way it used to be.

Joyner Criticizes HUD Interference

MANCHESTER—The Republican candidate in the 12th Assembly District Thursday spoke against interference in Manchester by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Walter Joyner, the GOP candidate in the 12th District, also said the town should take legal action to seek full return of Community Development funds withheld by HUD.

"We live in this town by choice. Why can't we govern ourselves by our own choice on local issues?" Joyner asked.

He referred to the present HUD withholding of $73,000 in Community Development funds the town is supposed to receive. Joyner said HUD holds the money in front of the town as an incentive and then asks the town to meet certain requirements.

"Why must we be coerced by the offer of part of our own withheld tax dollars as a reward for doing their bidding?" he said. The town receives all its tax dollars used for such programs because some of the money is used to pay for administrative costs, he said.

Save the Whales

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two modern-day adventurers who set sail a week ago from Hartford on a canoe trip to Vancouver, Canada, have brought their "Save the Whales" campaign to the United Nations.

Canoeists William Davis, 32, and Mark Beauchamp, 24, were greeted at the East River pier Thursday by Bernardo Zuleta of Bogota, Colombia, U.N. representative to the U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea.

The men presented Zuleta with petitions asking the United Nations to establish an international treaty to save the whales.

ZBA Takes First Step In Housing for Elderly

By CHRIS BLAKE
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — The proposed conversion of the former St. Mary's School into 55 units of elderly housing moved a step closer Thursday night when the Zoning Board of Appeals granted St. Mary's Church and the Greenwich Development Partnership eight variances.

The church and the developers will now take their case before the Planning and Zoning Commission to request a special permit use.

The school — which the Rev. James J. Nock, St. Mary's Church pastor, called "an institution in East Hartford" — was opened in 1930 and was closed in 1973.

Father Nock said the school was losing $53,000 a year when the parish members voted to close it.

Since the time the school was closed, the building has been used for parish bingo, dances, roller skating, and for a parish office, Father Nock said.

He said it costs the parish $22,000 a year to maintain the building. In the past, Father Nock said the building has been plagued by some vandalism. Two years ago, 22 glass windows were broken and were replaced by a more resilient plexiglass, he said.

Conversion Brings Heated Objection

By CHRIS BLAKE
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — Eight variances were granted to St. Mary's Church and the Greenwich Development Partnership for conversion of St. Mary's School, 1451 Main St., into 55 units of elderly housing despite the heated objections of John Bonsignor Jr. of Amherst, Mass.

Bonsignor represented his father, John, and his mother, who live at 14 Stanley St. Their home abuts the property of St. Mary's School.

Bonsignor said his parents have lived at the same address for over 40 years. His father is 85 and his mother is 79 and both are involved in parish and senior citizen activities.

Although both have been members of St. Mary's parish for 50 years, they opposed the conversion because of the proposed entrance and exits plans for traffic.

Bonsignor said there is 10 feet between the school building and his father's property line. He said traffic coming out of the driveway into Stanley Street would have to make a sharp and difficult turn.

Bonsignor's father has said that several cars have either scraped the side of the school building or hit the fence on his property coming out of the driveway.

The original plans, Bonsignor pointed out, showed traffic entrance and exit coming out of Main Street. A possible loop was proposed for turning around.

"My parents have been asked to cave in on the problem by the parish council and they want to," he said. "But there are some serious problems with the side yard variance."

He said an alternative the board should consider is to change the traffic pattern in land acquisition.

In rebuttal, Attorney Francis C. Vignati, who represented the church and the developers, said the traffic plans are "undecided at this point."

The firm has hired a traffic expert to study the situation and come up with the best plan.
