The Economy At a Glance

Economic developments at-a-glance:

In Washington — President Carter announced a series of bold measures to strengthen the dollar including higher interest rates and the sale of more U.S. gold.

In New York — The stock market responded quickly and registered the largest increase ever in a single day of trading.

In Europe — The value of the dollar soared; everybody wanted to buy and nobody wanted to sell the U.S. currency; the price of gold plunged — about $20 an ounce.

In Japan — The dollar climbed; the price of coffee for American tourists dropped from $1.40 a cup to $1.33; the price of a modest hotel room dropped from $51 to $48 for Americans.

Around the world — Carter's measures were welcomed. Among foreign leaders, the only criticism was that the steps were long overdue. U.S. businessmen praised the moves, even though they mean tighter credit.

In the United States — home mortgages, a spot check by UPI shows, are already more than 10 percent, and there are predictions they could hit 11 percent as early as today. Government officials and private economists have warned the higher cost of money could produce a recession beginning some time in the second half of 1979.

Trial Ending

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The trial phase of a New Haven Superior Court challenge on the constitutionality of the state's Sunday closing laws has ended.

Judge Nicholas Cioffi said Wednesday he planned to reach a decision in the case within the next two or three weeks.

The plaintiffs have asked the court to issue an injunction forcing the stores to close on Sundays.

Strong Quake

MOSCOW (UPI) — Radio Moscow today reported a strong and potentially devastating earthquake struck a remote region of the Pamir Mountains in Soviet Central Asia late Wednesday.

Radio Moscow reported that the quake occurred at 10:49 p.m. (2:49 p.m. EST) and registered a massive 9 on the Soviet 12-point seismic scale.

Western seismic observatories in Sweden and the United States reported their instruments logged the earthquake at between 6.7 and 7.2 on the open-ended Richter scale.

Carter Action Shows Results

By United Press International
President Carter's announcement of drastic economic measures revived the stock market, resurrected American business optimism, created a born-again dollar and bucked up Carter's image on the economy.

Carter's cavalry charge rescue of a besieged American dollar Wednesday flipped the world economic picture like a pancake.

Within an hour of Carter's pledge Wednesday, the stock market — which had been losing for two weeks — took a dramatic turn upward. By nightfall, it had posted the largest gain ever in a single day.

The Wall Street buying spree sent the Dow Jones Industrial Average up 35.40 points to 827.79 points.

U.S. businessmen also welcomed the measures, even though they mean tighter credit.

Foreign leaders welcomed the Carter administration's moves to strengthen the dollar. Their only criticism was that the steps were long overdue.

Bankers and foreign exchange dealers were unanimous in their praise for Carter's measures to buck up the buck.

And they responded by bidding the dollar to one-day increases that in foreign exchange markets were "astronomical."

By day's end the dollar had gained an incredible 5.5 percent in Germany. At daybreak today the dollar posted another 5.5 percent gain as markets opened in Japan.

Investors who had gambled on a further decline of the dollar lost their shirts. Gold bugs likewise took a bath. The price of gold dropped by about $20 an ounce to about $220 before the close Wednesday.

Robert V. Roose, a partner at Brown Brothers Harriman, said "the package is as decisive and emphatic as the British actions in late 1976. It marks the end of the decline of the dollar."

Only a week ago, the dollar was the currency everyone wanted to sell and nobody wanted to buy. Now, foreign exchange dealers say dollar owners are holding onto them to get a better price. For the first time in weeks, everybody wants to buy and nobody wants to sell the U.S. currency.

Americans living overseas, who have watched the buying power of their dollar wither drastically over the last year, were delighted at Wednesday's dramatic rise, but still felt it wasn't enough.

For the American tourist in Japan, it meant the price of a cup of coffee went down about 7 cents overnight, from $1.40 to $1.33. A modest hotel room that cost $51 on Wednesday, cost $48 today.

One American housewife in Bonn noted that even with dollar's spectacular gain of 5.5 percent against the German mark Wednesday, it was still worth 19 percent less than a year ago.

And the long-term prospect, according to a number of economists, is still a U.S. recession in the next couple of years.

Otto Eckstein, of the economic forecasting firm, Data Resources, in Cambridge, Mass., said flatly: "We are changing our forecast to recession."

Other economists, including former White House adviser Alan Greenspan, said a recession was likely, but that the latest steps would ease its severity.

Higher interest rates mean that where mortgage rates are close to or at local legal ceilings, the supply of mortgage money may dry up. Where there are no ceilings, mortgage interest rates will rise.

A spot check by UPI showed most mortgage rates already are higher than 10 percent, and there are predictions some could hit 11 percent as early as today.

The latest moves to strengthen the dollar still probably are not enough to head off a 5 to 10 percent increase in crude oil prices expected when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets in December.

Begin, Vance Review Talks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met today to review progress in Middle East peace negotiations and to discuss Israeli financial needs to offset the cost of an expected Sinai withdrawal.

"We all have good hopes, my friends," Begin said at the start of the meeting with Vance and other State Department officials. Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman also were on hand for the meeting.

The smiling Israeli prime minister displayed a gift which Vance had brought to him from President Carter and Begin said, "There is no snub."

Begin referred to reports that Carter's decision not to meet with him while the two are in the same city was a kind of diplomatic snub resulting from recent harsh exchanges over Israel's decision to expand its settlements in the occupied West Bank.

"I don't know where that story got started," Vance said with a smile. The gift from Carter was a mounted color photograph of an astroid that was discovered during the Camp David summit and named "shalom."

Begin is seeking $4.5 billion in U.S. aid to help pay for the withdrawal from the Sinai desert as part of a peace treaty with Egypt.

Israeli sources estimate the cost of a 3-year withdrawal from the Sinai, captured in 1967, will run to $4.5 billion. This would be in addition to the $300-500 million Washington is ready to pay for new air bases replacing those Israel would evacuate.

But President Carter, who asked the Israelis to submit a cost estimate of the Sinai withdrawal, did not plan to see Begin although both leaders were in New York today — Begin to accept a "Family of Man" Award from New York Council of Churches and Carter to campaign for Gov. Hugh Carey.

Begin said he did not think Carter's not meeting him was a snub although both leaders were staying in hotels a few blocks apart. "I don't see why the president wants to snub me," Begin said.

But Carter last week sent a sharply worded message to Begin over the Israeli Cabinet's decision to expand settlements in the occupied West Bank and the two have differed on what was decided about Israeli settlements in the Camp David talks.

In Cairo, the semi-official Al-Ahram newspaper said the Egyptian and Israeli delegations to the peace talks in Washington have prepared a document removing the last stumbling block to a treaty by linking the Israeli-Egyptian pact to the Palestinian question.

Al-Ahram said the document was "very important" and will be called the "linkage document" because it links the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty to the West Bank and Gaza problem.

In Washington Wednesday, Dayan said the treaty with Egypt — Israel's first with an Arab state — was "almost" wrapped up and Cairo's delegate to the peace talks Osaman Baz said "we are moving."

In Baghdad, Iraq, all Arab League nations — except Egypt — ended three days of talks by rejecting the Camp David accords in their current form but left it up to a summit starting today on whether to isolate Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for his peace overtures.

In Moscow, Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat conferred Wednesday with Soviet leaders on coordinating strategy to counteract the Camp David accords which Arafat said "set the stage" for U.S. domination of the Middle East.

Inflation Continues; Wholesale Prices Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices in October soared 0.9 percent for the second consecutive month, the government reported today, dampening hopes that inflation will taper off during the remainder of 1978.

As in the past, sharply rising food costs were a main contributor to the overall increase, the Labor Department said in its latest inflation report. Food ready for sale to groceriers rose 1.7 percent, the identical advance registered in September and the biggest gain since last April.

But even more significantly, the government report showed prices at all three levels of production climbed sharply across the board. For instance, intermediate prices — those products not quite ready for sale to consumers — jumped by the largest amount in four years and crude prices posted the biggest increase since February.

The administration had been expecting inflation to ease up somewhat during the second half of the year, but those hopes have now apparently been dashed. It is only a matter of time before increases in wholesale prices show up at the retail level.

Government officials said they do not expect to see any results — statistically speaking — from President Carter's new anti-inflation drive until at least the middle of 1979.

If wholesale prices rose at the same rate over the entire year as they did in both September and October, the annual rate of increase would be 10.8 percent.

The overall index which measures wholesale prices stood at 199.7 last month, which means costs have early doubled from their 1967 level, the department said.

Over the past 12 months, consumer-ready food costs have gone up 11.9 percent and all wholesale prices have advanced 8.6 percent, the department said.

The 1.7 percent rise in food costs represented a stunning turn-around from July and August when food costs actually declined at the wholesale level.

Sharp rises were recorded for such staples as pork, fish, beef and veal, fruit, eggs and sugar.

The prices of consumer non-durable goods jumped 1.1 percent.

Zoners Table Firm's Parking Request

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — The Zoning Board of Appeals has tabled a decision on a request from the Manchester Transmission Co. for a special exception to permit parking on the premises.

About 40 persons packed the hearing room in the Municipal Building Wednesday night to support the opposition to the request presented by Attorney Lawrence Rubinow, who represented the neighborhood on Homestead Street near the transmission garage. Much of the hearing appeared to be a repetition of a hearing on a similar request from the same business held last May. An appeal of the ZBA's denial of that application is now pending in court.

The ZBA will submit two questions to the Town Council for consideration as a result of the hearing. One is, if the ZBA should grant this special exception, will it prejudice the court's decision on the appeal; the other question is, if the ZBA approves the application, would it be considered an expansion of business use. A request for business expansion which was denied last spring is being appealed.

Neighbors at the hearing objected to noise, traffic and parking problems they said are caused by the business.

Attorney Joel Janenda, who represents Malcolm Kerr, owner of Manchester Transmission Co., 161 W. Middle Turnpike, reminded the ZBA repeatedly that all Kerr wants is to be able to park cars on land adjacent to his business garage so that they needn't be parked along Homestead Street, which is the case now. His garage provides bays for only four cars at a time while other cars waiting to be worked on must be parked in the street.

Janenda cited the commercial nature of the West Middle Turnpike neighbors and the recent expansion of Vic's Pizza, directly across Homestead Street, which also has a parking lot for its customers.

Letters from Police Chief Robert D. Lannan, Town Planner Alan Lannan and Public Works Director Jay

Giles, said they had no objections to the requested parking exception, and gave recommendations for drainage and landscaping.

His client plans to pave and landscape the land in the rear of the garage where nine parking spaces are planned, according to Janenda. The plan also calls for a light barrier fence to be installed.

ZBA member J.A. Cagianello commented that if the ZBA should grant the request, there is still no guarantee there won't be cars on the street.

"If it's within our possibility, there's no question that it should be approved, but we want all things agreeable," Cagianello said.

Alan Lamson said that with the present square footage of the business, Kerr is required by law to have eight parking spaces.

In his request for denial, Rubinow inferred that if the ZBA grants this request, it would be reversing its prior decision, referring to the ZBA's May 1978 denial of Kerr's application. He quoted from Janenda's original testimony at last spring's hearing in which Janenda said, "The whole idea is to get cars off the street."

"This application is substantially the same," Rubinow said. "Connecticut law prohibits the ZBA from reversing its prior decisions."

Newspapers To Return On Sunday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Until 12 weeks ago, Sunday mornings for many New Yorkers were defined by the ritual of walking home with bulky editions of the Times and News under one arm while the other was pulled by a dog on a leash.

Sunday afternoons meant rearranging the dozen or so sections and reading them in an order that unquestionably characterized a New Yorker's priorities. Monday mornings meant leaving them piled up in neighborhood recycling centers.

Today, it looks as though the 85-day-old cod turkey withdrawal of the city's news addicts and casual readers have suffered during the third-longest newspaper strike in the city's history may be over this Sunday, just in time for the weekend ritual to begin again.

The walkout tentatively was settled Wednesday with an agreement between the Times, News and the pressmen's union.

Publishers of the two dailies said they hoped to have their papers on the stands Sunday if they are able to wrap up agreements with four other unions — the drivers, paperhandlers, machinists and auto mechanics.

The pressmen's union said it would hold a ratification vote on the 6-year pact as soon as the drivers' union reached a tentative agreement with the publishers.

Talks between the publishers and the unions were to be held today.

The tentative agreement came at 8:20 a.m. Wednesday — 12 weeks to the day after the strike began — following a grueling 22-hour bargaining session that saw the publishers accede to the union's major demands on the crucial issues of pressroom manning and job guarantees.

The settlement capped weeks of difficult and sometimes bitter negotiations. Apparently facing a united front formed by the Times, the News and the New York Post at the beginning of the strike Aug. 8, the pressmen eventually succeeded in driving a wedge between the publishers.

Restoring House Costly For P&WA, History Unit

EAST HARTFORD — Local Historical Society members will be looking for alternative plans of action in the wake of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Corp.'s decision not to renovate the 150-year-old Brewer House.

The firm said Wednesday it would be too costly to renovate the home, which is blocking expansion of the driveway to its multi-million dollar test facility.

"I'm disgusted with the whole thing," said Raymond Johnson, vice president of the East Hartford Historical Society. "I spent a lot of time with Ed Cotes, the public relation official at Pratt & Whitney, yesterday and tried to convince them that it was worth restoring the home. They just felt it was too expensive."

Johnson said the figure he got for rededicating the firm was $200,000. He said the firm has offered to give the home to the Historical Society, but it would have to be moved off Pratt & Whitney property.

"That's impossible for us," Johnson said. It would cost $70,000 to move it. "We have a yearly budget of about $5000."

Johnson, a teacher at the Langford School on Alps Drive, said the house was built in 1827 by Selden Brewer, a New York knight.

Pennington boasts a California State College, as well as an Indiana University.

Officials Learn Benefits of 911

MANCHESTER — Local officials learned some of the benefits a 911 emergency telephone system can provide and will begin gathering information about such existing systems.

The town is considering implementing such a system, which permits residents to dial 911 to contact any emergency service in town.

Police, fire, ambulance and hospital personnel — the areas that would be affected most by such a change — met Wednesday afternoon with officials from the town and the Southern New England Telephone Co. to discuss the next step to implement 911.

That next step, apparently, will be to contact towns with 911 systems and discuss how they operate it.

Town Manager Robert Weiss said that the Town and Eighth Utilities District Boards of Directors cannot act on approving a 911 system until they have cost estimates. And cost estimates cannot be provided until the town knows the system it wants to use.

Singing Bus Driver Rehired Temporarily

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut Transit Co. has agreed to put Benjie Stellmacher back on the payroll temporarily, but it says the singing bus driver won't be belting out old favorites for while at least on his commuter bus run.

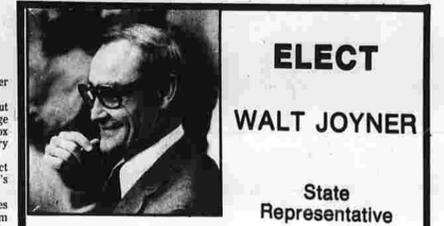

After intense public pressure a firm official wrote Gov. Ella Grasso Wednesday and said Stellmacher would be rehired temporarily, and his Oct. 19 dismissal would be reviewed.

Stanley H. Gates, the company's management president, said Stellmacher would be assigned to other unspecified duties and the firm would take "appropriate action" once its review was complete.

The company's action was a complete reversal of its prior adamant refusal to reconsider Stellmacher's dismissal for allegedly mistreating $8 in fares.

Stellmacher said Wednesday night he was unaware of the company's offer, and declined comment.

But the driver has repeatedly said he just wants his job back, and "make the happy bus happy again." Stellmacher, who also preaches as a lay minister at a local church, was fired after two company "spotters" said they saw him place some

Dog Track Plans Filed

WETHERSFIELD (UPI) — The state gaming commission has voted to accept the filing of an application by Nutmeg Club Dog Track Inc. to build Connecticut's second dog track in Ansonia.

While the dog track got the green light, the commission Wednesday held back for a second time on endorsing the sale of Hartford Jail A1.

The dog track application would be acted on until Ansonia sets a referendum date to allow voters to decide if they want the facility.

Voters in Watertown and Wolcott have already turned down proposed dog tracks and another effort to build a track in Waterbury is before the city zoning board. The state's only dog track is located in Plainfield.

Commissioner Frank Molinaro of Danbury said the people of western Connecticut "want another track and when the proper time comes, I will vote for it."

Commissioner Lester Snyder of West Hartford said he was opposed to another dog track and would vote against it.

Regarding Hartford Jail A1, the commission for the second straight week, put off approving the purchase of the gambling facility's parent firm, World Jail A1 Inc. of Tampa, Fla., for $53 million.

The AJT Realty Co. of Tulsa, Okla., owned by wealthy investor Roger Wheeler, and World Jail A1, had agreed in principle on the purchase of World's Hartford Jail A1 for $53 million.

The people who investigate all prospective investors in legalized gambling in the state, last month gave Wheeler and his firm a clean bill of health.

However, the commission last week tabled action on the sale after commission chairman Beatrice Kowalski said several absent commissioners wanted more time to study the state police reports.

Wednesday, the commission spent almost one hour in executive session to look over information apparently just obtained by the state police.

The commission then approved a motion by James Kellis to delay action on the sale until Nov. 8. "We are not questioning the reputation of the Wheeler family, in fact, they are the type of people we would like to have," said Kellis. But, he said, "peripheral information has come in that we have to look at."

Tanzania To 'Hit Back' at Amin

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere vowed today to "hit back" at Ugandan President Idi Amin whose forces invaded his country but disclosed that Tanzanian ground forces had shot down five of their own war planes by mistake.

"This man is a mwenzi (barbarian)," Nyerere said of the Ugandan leader, with whom he has been at odds since 1971. "He has killed so many people in Uganda. We must hit back at him."

Nyerere, speaking to a meeting of the ruling Revolution Party, called on the Tanzanian people to await government directives on what should be done "until we have finally gotten rid of this snake from our house."

Amin said Wednesday that his troops, backed by tanks and heavy artillery, had seized a 710-square-mile triangular chunk of northwestern Tanzania in only 25 minutes. He said it was a "retaliatory" invasion that allegedly drove Tanzanian forces from Uganda.

Nyerere explained that because of Uganda's bombing raids against Tanzania last week, Tanzanian ground forces had shot down five of their own war planes by mistake.

He said that last Friday Tanzanian air force planes strayed off course and became lost over the town of Musoma. As they turned back, Nyerere said, ground forces shot down five Tanzanian jets.

Nyerere said it was an "unfortunate but understandable incident" because the ground forces could not distinguish Tanzanian planes from Ugandan ones.

Both countries are supplied with warplanes from the Soviet Union. Nyerere said that because of Uganda's invasion of Tanzania the government has no option but to strike back at Amin.

"We have the capacity to hit back," the Tanzanian leader said. "We have a reason to hit back at him, and we have the determination to hit back at him."

Diplomatic sources said earlier that Tanzania has informed the United States and other foreign powers that it is preparing a major offensive aimed at wiping out the Ugandan armed force occupying northwestern Tanzania.

The U.S. Embassy in Dar es Salaam said five American archeologists from Brown University in Rhode Island escaped from the area of the fighting and had safely reached the town of Mwanza across Lake Victoria.

The embassy said three American missionaries in the region had been contacted and were a safe distance from the fighting. Eight other Americans could not be reached, but the embassy said "there is no cause for alarm."

The Ugandan broadcast said the captured land had become a permanent region of Uganda and its residents subordinates of Amin.

"All the Tanzanians in the captured area up to River Kagera must know that they are under the direct rule of the conqueror of the British Empire, Field Marshal Amin," the radio said.

The broadcast said Uganda "captured 710 square miles of Tanzanian land in a superonic speed of 25 minutes only — a record in world history."

The Kagera River delineates a triangular wedge of territory jutting south from the straight 100-mile border between Tanzania and Uganda.

The embassy said three American missionaries in the region had been contacted and were a safe distance from the fighting. Eight other Americans could not be reached, but the embassy said "there is no cause for alarm."

Rome Endorses Esther Clarke

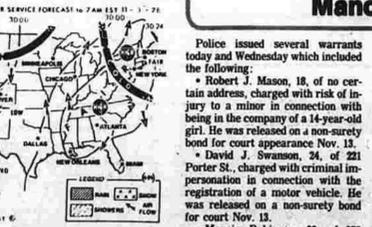

EAST HARTFORD — Lewis B. Rome, the Republican lieutenant governor candidate, has endorsed the state senate candidacy of Esther E. Clarke.

In a letter to Mrs. Clarke, Rome said "I have the greatest respect for your intelligence, capability and integrity."

He added, "The Senate needs more legislators like yourself who will be dedicated to the job of representing the people of our state."

Mrs. Clarke is running for the 3rd District seat against Democrat Marcella Fahey.

Debates in Manchester

Third District Candidates Spar

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Candidates night at Iling Junior High School Wednesday night turned into a verbal sparring match between the candidates for the Third Senatorial District, with Marcella Fahey making her strongest attacks yet on her Republican opponent, Esther Clarke.

With less than a week to go before the election, Mrs. Fahey launched into a strong defense of her stands on issues, saying that the "people of Manchester and East Hartford should know where I stand from me and not from the misrepresented and distorted information my opponent is sending around."

Mrs. Fahey referred to campaign literature mailed to the voters of the Third District by Mrs. Clarke which highlighted what Mrs. Fahey called her "alleged" stand and support for the state income tax, gay rights and school busing.

In her opening statement of the debate, which was after Mrs. Clarke's statement, asked about Mrs. Clarke's campaign: "What issues has she raised? We all know that she is opposed to almost everything. What is she for?"

Defending her positive stance on issues, Mrs. Fahey accused Mrs. Clarke of "operating on the assumption that people are small minded, that income tax, busing and gay rights will bring out the negative side of people — their hates and fears — and she is willing to be carried into office on this basis."

On the three issues which Mrs. Fahey said her opponent has "spent an inordinate amount of time harping on," she said she would not support a tax program that adds another burden to the taxpayer, would fight for the local autonomy on the busing issue and considers gay rights part of basic human and constitutional rights.

Mrs. Clarke did not have the opportunity to defend herself from Mrs. Fahey's remarks completely, but the two exchanged barbs and presented opposing stands on several issues throughout the evening.

The senatorial candidates from the Fourth District were relegated to a minor role by the fact that the incumbent David Barry was unable to attend because his wife was seriously ill. His campaign manager, Dominic Squatrito, sat in for him. Fenton P. (Pat) Futner of South Windsor, was not allowed to answer initial questions by the three-member press panel because of the equal time provision, however, he was allowed to present opening and closing statements and answer questions from the floor and final questions by the panel.

On the question from the floor of whether the candidates believe that a seven percent straight sales tax is more equitable than a progressive income tax, the candidates responded as follows: Mrs. Fahey said she would like to look at the whole picture and would like to see the costs to the taxpayer on each tax spelled out. Mrs. Clarke said she does not agree that there can be progressive income tax and that the sales tax is probably the "lesser of two evils." Futner contended that the state already has an income tax in the form of the dividends tax. Squatrito predicted there would not be much change in the tax system during the next legislature.

Mrs. Clarke reiterated her support of constitutional bans on the income tax and state spending and said she does not believe the two stands are inconsistent.

Mrs. Fahey said she refuses to put the state fiscal policy in an "irrational straight jacket," but said she does not foresee the need for an income tax.

The issue of gambling came up several times. Mrs. Fahey said she opposed any expansion of gambling in the state.

Mrs. Clarke said she is against off-track betting parlors, at least in East Hartford, and is leery of casino gambling, but thinks there might be some support for a horseracing track. Mrs. Clarke said she is not in favor of government owned and operated gambling facilities.

The possibility of revitalizing the rail line between Manchester and East Hartford was brought up by Futner, which he said could probably be done for a "relatively small amount," but still in the millions of dollars. He said, "Perhaps we should look to finishing the highways we have started." All candidates supported completin of the link between Interstate Highways 84 and 88.

Mrs. Clarke mentioned the need for the freight service on the line for the new J.C. Penney warehouse in Manchester. Mrs. Fahey suggested looking at mass transit with some new perspectives.

Squatrito suggested that "We need something to dissuade people from using their cars."

Futner's strongest stand was in favor of farm land preservation. He served as agricultural commissioner for the state from 1971 to 1974.

Squatrito said that Barry's first bill he would introduce in the incoming legislature would be the repeal of the Blue Laws.

Cummings Says Foe Has Vague Campaign

MANCHESTER — State Rep. Theodore Cummings has criticized his opponent for running a "vague and generalized" campaign.

Cummings is seeking re-election in the 12th Assembly District and is opposed by Republican Walter Joyner.

"My opponent's one-word answers to the problems of spending and taxing just are not enough," Cummings said.

He again criticized Joyner for his proposal to repeal the phase-in legislation. Cummings was one of the sponsors of the proposal, which permits the town to spread the increases in assessment from revaluation over a five-year period.

"If he does that he'll be depriving people in the next three years of the phase-in," Cummings said of Joyner's proposal to repeal. This would result in a loss of $200 to $300 in savings for most families, he said.

He also mentioned a recent poll done by Cummings. The results did not include specific numbers, just percentages, of how many persons supported or opposed each item.

"His methods are pretty unscientific and pretty vague," Cummings said in his criticism.

He said many Republicans have joined Joyner in criticizing him during the campaign.

"Their whole theme has been vague and generalized. It's been very fuzzy," he said.

Mrs. Fahey urged clean air earlier.

EAST HARTFORD — Marcella Fahey, Democratic candidate for the District State Senate seat, said Wednesday "We cannot wait until 1981 to require automobiles to meet clean air requirements."

Mrs. Fahey said the enactment by the General Assembly of a one-year delay in enforcing state emission standards is "inexcusable."

Mrs. Fahey vowed to press for an effective date of 1980, which would coincide with the commencement of state auto inspections that same year.

The statewide problem of air quality is becoming especially severe in the 3rd District, she said. "My personal travels and my many talks with citizens have reinforced my belief that increased traffic congestion seriously threatens to impair the quality of East Hartford life."

She said the elderly and those with lung and heart ailments have become "prisoners in their own homes. Residential streets have become busy highways."

Mrs. Fahey also repeated her concerns Wednesday for noise barriers and the completion of Interstate 84-86 connector.

Pupil Count Going Down

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut public school enrollment will continue its steady decline until the mid to late 1980s, the state Department of Education predicts.

However, the cost of educating each pupil probably won't decrease in proportion to school size, the department told the state Board of Education Wednesday.

The enrollment report recommends a change in the current system of school aid, usually based on pupil ratio grants.

"Most of the state's communities will be reporting fewer and fewer pupils," the study said. "It is very unlikely, however, that costs will drop in proportion to enrollment decline."

Man Guilty in Hit-Run
VERNON — An 18-year-old man pleading no contest has been convicted on charges stemming from the Sept. 25 death of a University of Connecticut coed he struck while driving a stolen car.

Stephen Currier, with no certain address, Wednesday was found guilty of misconduct with a motor vehicle and second degree larceny in Tolland County Superior Court.

He was not prosecuted on charges of evading responsibility and third degree criminal mischief.

Police said they were pursuing Currier in Mansfield when he hit Linda Rimcoski, 18, of Bristol. Currier didn't stop after he hit the woman and then struck a UConn shuttle bus.

Currier was driving a car which had been reported stolen from Williamatic, police said.

His sentencing is scheduled for Dec. 20.

State's Party Chairman Come Out of the Closet

By ANDREW NIBLEY
HARTFORD (UPI)—Most of the time, party chairmen like to perform their political magic behind the scenes. But when election time rolls around, they shed their timidity and unabashedly take center stage like a pair of professional hams.

In recent weeks, Republican state chairman Frederick Biebel and his Democratic counterpart John Dempsey Jr. have been putting out more press releases than the candidates themselves.

And the party bosses like to play hard ball.

"The Republicans are claiming they have the youth vote this year because young people like 'Razor Cut Ronnie' Sarasin," Dempsey said.

The Republican chairman said the business suit look of U.S. Rep. Ronald Sarasin, the Republican candidate for governor.

"Governor (Ella) Grasso may not look like a hairspray commercial, but she has the right priorities," said Dempsey, who served as the governor's campaign manager until he took over as state chairman in late summer.

"Young people have nothing to gain from having Ronnie Sarasin in the governor's office, just as they gained nothing from having him in Congress," Dempsey said.

Later in the day, Biebel fired a salvo for his side.

The Republican chairman said he was glad President Carter flew to Connecticut last weekend to endorse Mrs. Grasso.

"Jimmy Carter's endorsement of Mrs. Grasso is not viewed as an welcome news by Connecticut Republicans," Biebel said. "It is a case of a chief executive with an incredibly poor economic record endorsing the chief executive of a state whose administration also has resulted in stifling economic growth by record spending and taxes."

Biebel recalled that Mrs. Grasso snubbed then Gov. Robert Kiliam Carter when he came to Connecticut two years to campaign for the presidency. The governor, an avid supporter of presidential hopeful Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson at the time, declined to invite Carter to the governor's mansion.

"Mrs. Grasso's wholehearted support of Carter today invites speculation of a backroom deal," Biebel said. "The president and Mrs. Grasso should reveal to the people of Connecticut whether a federal appointment of Mrs. Grasso was discussed."

"The people of Connecticut should know whether they are electing Mrs. Grasso to one or four years," he said.

Sometimes, the party chairmen get so riled, they even go after each other.

Dempsey issued the following statement this week:

Republican State Chairman Fred Biebel is showing all the symptoms of a desperate party boss who knows his team is about to be beaten."

Dempsey pooh-poohed Biebel's notion that Mrs. Grasso will jump ship for a federal job if she is re-elected.

Biebel responded with some choice words for young Dempsey, the son of former Gov. John Dempsey.

"Gov. Ella T. Grasso and John N. Dempsey Jr., Democrat state chairman and former campaign manager for the governor's re-election bid, have worked in collusion in one of the most blatant political acts yet," Biebel announced.

Repeating a charge brought up by Democratic Lt. Gov. Robert Kiliam earlier in the year, Biebel said one of eight engineering design firms selected to work on Interstate 84 "employed Dempsey while the bid was under consideration and while he was managing Grasso's re-election campaign."

Dempsey and the governor have denied any wrongdoing.

Grasso Back in Norwich To Seek Different Help

By United Press International
 Eight months later and with no snow in sight, it was Gov. Ella Grasso who was asking for help, this time through the voting machine.

Mrs. Grasso campaigned Wednesday in Norwich reminding voters of another winter by her last February to help dig out from the worst snowstorm in a century.

"It's so nice to come here on a good day because we've come here on some terrible days," she said to a group of campaign workers in a downtown storefront.

The subtle reminder was not lost on the applauding observers from the area that was hardest hit by the Blizzard of '78.

After most of the essential digging out was performed by state highway crews, several hundred Army combat engineers with heavy duty snow removal equipment were flown from the south at the governor's request to aid in the cleanup.

Wednesday, with Rep. Christopher Dodd and state legislators looking on, Mrs. Grasso asked the workers for support and urged them "to get out the vote" next week.

Dodd said Mrs. Grasso "was far too modest about her accomplishments." He said it was only through her assistance that guaranteed federal loans were obtained "at the last minute" to keep the Capehart Corp. plant from folding.

Mrs. Grasso walked to the headquarters from the offices of the Norwich Bulletin where she met with editors who interviewed her on a number of topics.

Mrs. Grasso said the state is "doing all that can be reasonably developed" to insure against radioactive waste leaks at facilities and on highways.

She said efforts are being made to reform the state tax department and she agreed tax delinquents should be subject to public disclosure.

She favored a stronger shield law and declared, "Don't blame me," she said.

Children at the Center Road School in Vernon were treated Wednesday to a closeup look at an Air National Guard Helicopter and as a bonus the schoolyard was swept clean of leaves. The children didn't get to take a ride but they all cheered when the plane smoothly took off. Cows and turkeys in a nearby field took off in the other direction. (Herald photo by Richmond)

Sarasin Says Packaging Causes Problem for Him

By United Press International
 With the election less than a week away, Ronald Sarasin is trying to convince voters who might be put off by his manicured appearance that he really doesn't sleep in a three-piece suit.

"I don't go to bed with a necktie on," Sarasin said Wednesday, conceding his expression, which would serve him well in seven card stud, and his sculpted good looks, might be a handicap.

"I come across as a package. That bothers me. It's a problem," the GOP gubernatorial candidate said.

The three-term Republican congressman's unruffled hair and well-tailored suits exude fashion-plate formality. It's an image he would like to dispel.

For one thing, smiles don't seem to come as easily to Sarasin as they do to some politicians.

Sarasin's opponent, Gov. Ella Grasso, 59, on the other hand, affects a down-home quality. She's ruffled and "just plain folks," despite a diet and vocabulary honed at Mount Holyoke.

"I'm a relaxed person, and I really do smile—sometimes," said the 43-year-old Sarasin. He flashed a grin, then pulled a cigarette from a pack of Winston's. He smokes a pack a day.

And he points out that his background is not one of privilege.

At the University of Connecticut Law School in West Hartford, he told about 60 law students who gave him an award for his "outstanding service as a congressman," how he worked his way through school.

"When I was at law school here, I was a bartender, a good bartender," Sarasin said. "I enjoyed it. And I made bricks in a brick factory. I even worked at a gas station."

"I'm a kid who grew up on a street called Railroad Avenue in Beacon Falls, and that's hardly a prestigious address."

Candidate Expresses Concern About Funding for Education

VERNON — Katie McGuire, Republican candidate for state representative from the 55th District, said she recently attended a session sponsored by the Connecticut Board of Education and came away gravely concerned about the direction the advisory panel is taking on the issue of school equalization funding.

She said this equation will necessarily favor the cities because the population was higher for the urban areas in 1970 than it is now and the 1975 Grand List figures are higher for the suburban towns than for the cities. "Either way, the suburban loss," she said.

She said the proposed formula will incorporate not only figures concerning the numbers of dependent children but also those of the low income persons for the areas and "again the cities have the advantage," she said.

She said she disagrees with both formulas which stipulate that funds to education and yet the monies are and will be going directly to the towns.

"In the case of certain regional school districts, the increase in even the present form of funding was never realized as those districts never received a cent from the participating townships," she said.

"I feel that this method and the proposed method of the finance panel will neither resolve nor take a step forward toward the resolution of our funding for education problems," Mrs. McGuire said.

VERNON — Rockville Emblem Club 5 will meet Nov. 8 at the Elks Lodge on N. Park Street. There will be a potluck supper at 6:30 p.m. and the regular meeting will be at 8 p.m. Hostesses for the supper will be Eileen Niemann, Barbara Larson, and Elizabeth Gawlicka.

Group Forming in Bolton; To Conduct Public Forum

VERNON — A new group, the Bolton High School Positive Action Council, will conduct a public forum tonight at 8 at the Bolton Center School.

The group is made up of people who are concerned and dedicated to supporting the continuation of a quality high school in the town.

Spokesmen said they strongly believe that many reasons exist which support this position, beneficial to both students and the town as a whole. They said this must be clearly kept in view as the town carefully studies the direction of the school system.

At the meeting the committee was asked to appear and study the future of the Bolton schools, will give a status report on its findings.

Superintendent of schools, Raymond Allen, said the Board of Education has determined a list of necessary activities to be accomplished before a basic decision is made concerning the future of the school system. He said he hopes the townspeople agree that the board has embarked on a very important mission.

The possibility of closing the high school and sending the high school students to another system, has been explored but no decision has been made.

Townspeople are urged to attend tonight's meetings to express their views on the subject.

The pony has also taken part in school plays and the Andover Bicentennial pageant. When the Wagon Train came through Connecticut she joined it and traveled quite a distance, camping with the group as well.

The weight of the riders has to be limited to 100 pounds due to the size of Buttercup. The hours for the ride will be Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Money from the rides along with money from the sale of posters of the pony and her owner, and money raised from taking Polaroid shots of

Hospital Halloween Efforts Supported

Manchester Memorial Hospital should be commended for the community spirit it displayed Halloween when it opened up a portion of its radiology department to fluoroscopy treatments for evidence of foreign matter.

Only 10 children had their collections inspected and nothing dangerous was found. Nevertheless the service was valuable and the hospital should make it an annual thing.

As a hospital spokesman said, "The publicity surrounding this undertaking may just have prevented someone from doing something that would be injurious." If the hospital finds nothing dangerous in the

Some Government Officials Skeptical on Hiring Freeze

Some administration officials, including White House staffers, are skeptical about Carter's promise to impose a partial freeze on government hiring.

The freeze would limit all federal agencies to filling only half their vacancies. That, according to the White House, would abolish 20,000 jobs this year.

"I'll believe that when I see it," said a top-ranking Civil Service Commission honcho. "Nixon and Ford both made a pass at it and failed. It's almost impossible to enforce; agency heads have always gotten around it by hiring so-called consultants until the heat was off."

Moreover, Carter will be under terrific pressure from Democrats in Congress and elsewhere to take care of job-seekers sponsored by party candidates.

To the editor:
I seem to have generated a great deal of steam with my recent article. However, I have always followed the principle of admitting when I have made an error.

Mr. Beckwith and Mr. Bolduc, both firefighters from the Town of Manchester Fire Department seem to think that I have made a mistake and if I have I apologize. However, there are several things I would like to clarify before I eat crow.

Where does the fire department secure the funds to maintain itself? They say through a special Fire District tax.

Who pays the tax? Do not the residents pay this tax with their hard-earned money? So who owns the fire department together with all its assets?

Is the special tax sufficient to pay the ever-increasing expenses such as salaries, maintenance of the fire stations, maintenance of equipment and replacement and enough left to buy land and build a $350,000 fire house in Buckland?

If it is self-sufficient why did the town have to give the fire department $65,000 of revenue-sharing funds which should have been used for town improvements so that the taxpayers could be relieved of some burdens.

It would have been very easy to offer the automatic response. It's a good idea, but there is no time. We'll do it next year.

Instead hospital personnel moved fast and did an effective job on short notice.

Open Forum

The league's success can be attributed to many devoted, concerned parents, who, over the years, have assisted in many fund-raising functions such as door-to-door donation collections, bake sales, sit-down dinners, standing in the cold of the evening by the collection barrels at the games and dances.

Members of the Women's Auxiliary League of the Manchester Midget Football Association are now busy putting together the final preparations for the annual harvest dinner.

It is unfortunate that these activities may come to an end after this year. There are more than 125 boys who play football, at least 50 young ladies who do the cheerleading and from this, there are presently only three women members of the auxiliary.

The activities are too numerous and time-consuming for just three dedicated women to handle.

As a concerned husband of one of the volunteers, I would like to comment on the absolute and total lack of support given to the women's auxiliary.

It always seems that people have more pressing things to do when approached for assistance.

The equipment the boys use in the football league has been purchased with money that the auxiliary has raised through the many activities I have mentioned.

If there is no auxiliary, where will the money come from for future purchases.

The three ladies who form the 1978 auxiliary will not be back for the 1979 season.

Now there will be none.

Will the Midget Football program in the near future become a memory of Manchester's past?

Thought

If you had all the food in the world at your table, whom would you invite to eat it with you? In Luke we read— "When you give a dinner or a banquet, do not invite your friends or your brothers or your kinsman or rich neighbors, lest they also invite you in return, and you be repaid. But when you give a feast, invite the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and you will be blessed, because they cannot repay you. You will be repaid at the resurrection of the just." Dropouts By Default

By DON CRAFF
Once upon a time a beginning college student who hadn't decided on a major was allowed to drift along for a few semesters until he found himself and his interests or, in too many cases, lost interest and dropped out.

Higher education is taking a second look at these dropouts by default as the part of the institutions in which they are not generally poor college material to start with but include, in fact, some of the potentially best and brightest. Their problem is immaturity and, in the past, the absence of attention and guidance on the part of the institutions in which they have been enrolled. They have been, almost literally, lost in the campus shuffle.

A number of major institutions and the U.S. government via the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, are currently not only taking note of the situation but steps to do something about it. The Wall Street Journal reports in a campus survey.

HEW has developed a special course and textbook for undecided students which it is trying out at three schools - Ohio State University, Union College in Kentucky and East Tennessee State University.

The most favored response to the problem among school administrators is expanded counseling services and a variety of special courses, including courses on how to pick major courses.

One of the most elaborate programs is Ohio State's, where there is a special department for undecided students. From scheduled discussion sessions for dorm residents and informal bull sessions, it is hoped that clearer understanding of career aims will develop.

According to one estimate, some 20 percent of entering freshmen are undecided as to a major. A program that keeps a significant portion of them in the educational mainstream amounts to quite a salvage operation.

Old-style Tutoring
Another approach to the dropout problem is being taken at Ohio University.

The school, a liberal arts institution at Athens not to be confused with giant Ohio State at Columbus, is trying something new by borrowing something old - the tutorial system long in use at Britain's prestigious Oxford and Cambridge.

Five years old now, the Honors Tutorial College is designed to meet the needs of the especially bright student who might be turned off by the structured routine of classwork and take the dropout exit from boredom. It offers them, according to director Dr. Margaret Cohn, "a challenge, pushing them to the limits of their abilities... giving the intense one-to-one contact with faculty members."

Rather than following a routine class schedule, the tutorial students meet one-on-one with faculty members of the various disciplines.

Questions Face Voters

On Tuesday, in addition to selecting candidates of their choice, Manchester voters will also be faced with decisions concerning 12 referendum questions which will appear on the ballot.

The questions can all be answered by pulling either a yes or no lever.

The number of questions on the ballot in Manchester is the largest number of questions in any community in the state.

The first question deals with the allowance of the sale of liquor on Sunday.

The remaining questions will decide whether or not 11 proposals to change the Town Charter will go into effect.

The questions, in the order they will appear on the ballot, follow, along with a brief explanation.

This information can be used as a home guide to voting on the questions. A space is provided for the reader's choice on the questions to serve as a reminder on election day.

Question 1: Yes No
A proposal to allow Sunday liquor sales.
At present, Manchester does not permit the Sunday sale of liquor.

The question is an advisory one and the results of the vote will not be binding.

The final decision on Sunday liquor sales will be made by the Board of Directors.

However, it is expected the directors will follow the popular vote.

The proposed change would permit bars, taverns, clubs and restaurants, with proper liquor licenses, to sell alcoholic beverages on Sunday.

The question does not refer to the sale of package liquor. Package stores are prohibited by state law from opening on Sunday and the stores would not be affected by any change.

Question 2: Yes No
A proposal to change the title of the town council to town attorney.

The change is considered because of the occasional confusion resulting between the titles of town counsel and town council.

Question 3: Yes No
A proposal establishing a standard of conduct for town officials and the establishment of an Ethics Commission to monitor compliance.

The proposal, if accepted, would prohibit members of decision-making boards in the town from appearing before other such agencies for their businesses.

Question 4: Yes No
A proposal to increase pay of the members of the Town Board of Directors.

The chairman, or mayor, would receive $1,500, the secretary, $1,200 and all other members $1,000 each. If the proposal for the addition of a vice-chairman is approved, the vice-chairman would receive $1,300.

Presently, the mayor receives $750, the secretary $600 and other members $500 each.

Question 5: Yes No
A proposal calling for the election by the Board of Directors of a vice-chairman.

The vice-chairman would also be designated as deputy mayor.

The step already is taken by the Board of Directors but is not designated in the Town Charter.

Question 6: Yes No
A proposal to repeal a ban prohibiting police employees from political involvement.

State statutes do not include such a prohibition, so the Town Charter's prohibition of such activities is unenforceable.

Question 7: Yes No
A proposal that the town permit notes and bonds to be signed by two, instead of the present three designated officers.

In the past, problems have arisen when one of the designated signers is ill or out-of-town.

Question 8: Yes No
A proposal calling for the appointment of the zoning enforcement officer by the general manager rather than the building inspector and that the officer be a member of the Planning and Zoning office.

The position now works out of the Building Department but town officials have said the position is more closely associated with Planning Office work.

Question 9: Yes No
A proposal to transfer the supervision of parks and the water and sewer operations to the director of public works.

Question 10: Yes No
A proposal to switch the position of superintendent of recreation to an appointment made by the general manager.

Question 11: Yes No
A proposal to have the director of public works serve as superintendent of the Water and Sewer Department.

Questions 9, 10 and 11 are changes which would update the Town Charter with the present manner of operations within the Public Works Department.

Question 12: Yes No
A proposal calling for competitive bids for items costing more than $2,500.

At the present time, the maximum limit for not bidding is $1,000.

Hospital Asked to Join In Life Support Plans

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter
MANCHESTER — Manchester Memorial Hospital officials have been asked to prepare a proposal which would involve the hospital's cooperation on a contractual basis with the town in an Advance Life Support System, if the town approves implementation of the system.

Members of a subcommittee on cardiopulmonary resuscitation and emergency medical team services (CPR/EMT) heard a representative from East Hartford's Emergency Medical Services describe their service and its history.

Dr. Robert K. Butterfield, head of the emergency room at Manchester Memorial Hospital, has offered his professional advice to the group and helped it through its early years.

He called the type of emergency service given by paramedics "gutter type" medicine, hardly the type suitable for trained nurses that might be used in the system, as was suggested by Paul Moss, assistant administrator at Manchester Memorial. However, Dr. Butterfield said they could be part of the system.

Town Manager Robert Weiss' concern is that the townspeople are concerned with expenditures and thinks there might be a reluctance from many people to pay for an extra service.

Calling it an emotional issue, Town Director Vivian Ferguson said there are some things that people would pay for, regardless.

Weiss asked Moss to explore the possibility of the hospital providing a contractual service with the town. "If we had one fire department, there would be less emotional hangup," Weiss said.

East Hartford has only one fire department from which the town's emergency medical service is dispatched.

Manchester's two fire departments each have their own emergency medical teams but they are not fully trained paramedics.

Manchester is never been a perennial power in football. It had its share of good teams which were involved in important games. That, too, is here again.

Manchester, when it invades Simsbury Saturday afternoon at 1:30 in THE GAME, will be involved in a game that is as important as the season date is concerned. Both clubs sport 1-1 league marks and would like nothing less than gaining a toe-hold on first place.

The Silk Towners are for real. Those were some of the first words expressed by respected Hall Head Coach Frank Robinson after his Warriors were vanquished by a 34-13 count. The sentiment is also held by Simsbury Head Coach Ed Lowndes.

From what I've heard and what my scouts have said, Manchester is a real fine team, and (Bob) Walsh is a fine runner," Lowndes commented in a telephone conversation Tuesday morning.

Walsh has been the powder which has set off the Manchester arsenal. The talented tailback has exploded for 1,120 yards rushing, scored 14 touchdowns and booted 15 PATs for 99 of Manchester's total of 143 points.

"Walsh, if he gets free, will be tough to catch," Lowndes stated with respect. "He is the key man we have to stop."

Simsbury, too, has weapons at its disposal which cannot be overlooked. One asset in the Trojans' corner is they have a huge forward line, both offensively and defensively. Doug March, 6-foot-4, 215 pounds, and Steve Morris, 6-foot-5, 240-pounds, are two mammoth anchors who perform both ways. Mark Altobelli, 6-foot, 215, Jeff Boehlin, 6-foot, 215, and Mark Germano, 5-foot-11, 195, aren't exactly midgets either.

"We'll be a little bit bigger but they may be the states Lowndes. I expect them to come out and try to win."

Thirteen turnovers also found their way into that tilt. Simsbury, which underwent a coaching change and a whole lot of turmoil that year, won 28-12 and wound up with a 1-9 record. Manchester was 0-10 that year. Times, fates, circumstances, etc., do have a way of changing quickly, don't they?

The Big Game

It wasn't too long ago that Manchester High football was in the doldrums. The Indians had trouble gaining yardage let alone winning. But memories of three futility seasons are quickly fading. Good times are here again.

Chamber Exec Concerned Business Program Slow

MANCHESTER — The executive vice-president of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce is concerned that the town is moving too slowly to establish a visitation program for existing businesses.

James Breitenfeld, the Chamber's executive vice-president, discussed the issue with James Quigley, chairman of the Manchester Economic Development Commission, after this morning's meeting of the EDC.

The EDC and the town previously have supported the visitation program proposed by Breitenfeld. The program would have a representative of the town visit existing businesses on a regular basis to discuss problems and concerns of that business.

"When it is going to happen? At what point do we begin to pay attention to the business and industry we already have?" Breitenfeld asked.

The town has been considering establishing such a program for six months. It apparently was close to being started earlier this year, but the employee assigned to the program — William Tierney — resigned from his job with the town to take a position in Newark.

Now, it appears that there is no staff to handle the visitation work, and Breitenfeld is concerned. He feels the issue is one that usually is brushed over by the EDC in its meetings. The EDC has been involved primarily with future industrial development. The visitation program appears to have become a low-priority item as far as the town is concerned, he said.

"If the town is not going to do it, then let's decide who's going to do it," Breitenfeld said.

He asked Quigley for support on the issue. He is seeking a push by the EDC to provide more action on the visitation plan.

Breitenfeld feels that existing businesses, when confronted with rising taxes and operating costs, should have some personal contact from the town.

Quigley suggested a morning breakfast together that firms could attend to discuss some of their needs and problems.

Breitenfeld feels that opportunity has been provided in the past, however.

"What they (the businesses) need is somebody sitting down with them on a one-to-one basis in a rather confidential situation," he said.

The regular EDC meeting was a brief one that included a 20-minute executive session to discuss legal matters connected with the Backland Industrial Park. There still is a pending federal case involving the park and the J.C. Penney Co. project.

The EDC did vote to approve an exterior site lighting fixtures submitted by the J.C. Penney Co. The commission does reserve the right to order corrective measures if shielding or other items are inadequate.

Town Manager Robert Weiss also said that the west end of Burnham Street in Manchester should be closed off this month. Paving of the primary industrial road is almost complete.

Eagles Complete Comeback On Soccer Field with Victory

It's too bad it didn't start sooner but for East Catholic soccer, the situation is definitely wait for next year. The resurgent Eagles capped a brilliant second half of the season comeback with a 2-1 victory in their 1978 finale over Newington High yesterday at MCC's Cougar Field.

East came right back four-and-a-half minutes later as junior Mark Marciano took a through pass from halfback Harry Carr and drilled it into the cage for the equalizer.

The Eagles tallied the game-winner at 21:55 of the second half. Sophomore right wing Terry McConville took the initial drive with Marciano on the spot to collect. The rebound and boom it into the net.

Marciano and McConville each tallied 10 goals to share top honors for East while sophomore Kyle Ayer, who was switched from full-back to center forward when East was having difficulty scoring, was not far back with nine markers. The potent trio accounted for 29 of East's 35 scores. The Eagles yielded 35 goals on the other side of the ledger.

Tribe Booters Win Finale, 2-0

By LEN AUSTER

Some positive signs were exhibited as the Manchester High soccer team captured its regular season finale, 2-0, over CCIL foe in Willimantic yesterday in Willimantic.

The Silk Towners won their last two starts to wind up 11-4 and in fourth place in the league. Manchester will now sit back and wait for the State Tournament Class LL rankings and pairings to be announced. They'll be released Saturday in Hamden.

Jeff Lombardo tallied both goals, his 16th and 17th scores of the season, for the Indians. The Manchester passing game, especially in the mid-field area, was the best in recent performances but putting it in the cage continues to be a sore point.

The halfback passing was great in the first half," concurred Manchester Head Coach Dick Danielson, alluding to the work of Tim O'Brien, Walt Adams and Mike Lombardo.

"We had two or three who were going in who turned their backs and looked to pass. Our whole problem was we're hesitant to shoot," Danielson commented to Windham counterpart John McMillan. "We had six or seven good early chances against Hall and failed to convert them," he recalled a painful moment of the 1978 season and explaining in part why the trigger isn't being pulled when maybe it should.

Lombardo's initial score, in the second stanza, was at the tail end of six or seven crisp short passes. When it looked no one was going to shoot, he wheeled completely around from just outside the penalty area and drilled a cross-net grounder into the right corner.

The second marker, at 5:05 of the third period, was a conversion of a penalty kick. Whippet fullback Mark Trainor had to latch onto ball on the sure goal with the goalie out of position.

ZBA Denies Rehearing Of Bigelow St. Appeal

MANCHESTER — The Zoning Board of Appeals Wednesday denied a rehearing requested by Bigelow Street residents.

The group, opposed to a proposed property division on that street, now plans to file an appeal in Tolland County Superior Court.

The residents have opposed a proposed division into two lots of property at 26-30 Bigelow St. The entire property has 100 feet of frontage, and 75 feet of frontage is required per lot in the Residence B Zone.

Thus, the property owner, Thomas J. Crockett, has proposed a zig-zag division. This would provide 75 feet of frontage at the street line for one lot and 75 feet of frontage at the building line for the second lot.

The division was permissible under zoning regulations in effect at the time of the proposal, so the town's zoning enforcement officer ruled it legal.

Since then, the Planning and Zoning Commission has changed the regulation to eliminate measurement of frontage except at the street line unless special permission is granted.

The neighbors appealed the zoning enforcement officer's decision, but the ZBA voted 4-1 that the decision was proper based on the regulations in effect at that time.

The residents asked for a rehearing of the matter because of some new evidence — including an alleged conflict — but the ZBA Wednesday also denied that request.

Revaluation Under Way To Reflect Current Values

By DONNA HOLLAND
Herald Correspondent

BOLTON - The revaluation of all property in Bolton is currently under way by Calvin Hutchison, assessor, and United Appraisal Co. of East Hartford.

United Appraisal was awarded a $38,000 contract for the revaluation work recently. Only two companies bid for the work. The purpose of revaluation is to bring all property up to its current true and actual value.

The pricing and valuation of all land and buildings must reflect the fair market value as of Oct. 1, 1978. The final valuation shall be the fair market value as evidenced by the appraiser's report.

Hutchison said during the past ten years (since 1968) all property has been assessed at 1969 values. He said property in Bolton is currently selling at about three to four times its assessed value.

This is the first time Hutchison has been involved in a revaluation. And involved he will be. Hutchison is responsible for the revaluation and is charged with making a diligent effort to review all the work that is being done, as it is being done.

As well as checking the paper work, Hutchison will make periodic field inspections with the appraisal personnel.

Before the appraisal personnel begin their actual field work, residents will be informed of what they actually do and approximately when their homes will be visited.

All field personnel will carry suitable identification cards with a current photo that is signed by the town's chief executive officer.

Along with charges from the revaluation, Bolton will see a change in the percentage of assessment. By 1980, under state law, the percentage of assessment must be 70. Bolton now has a 65 percent assessment.

Sherwood Vernilya, United Appraisal vice-president, has met with Hutchison to discuss new street cards and summary cards that will be used.

Every parcel in town will have a street card, but those that have buildings, but not those that have buildings will be shown on the street cards.

The street cards will show land data, acreage classification, a sketch of the building, particulars of the building true value summary (replacement value or the value before the assessment ratio is applied) and an assessment summary.

There will also be a summary card that summarizes the figures on the street card. Upon completion of the revaluation, the new street cards will be on file in the assessor's office. The old street cards will be kept for reference.

There will be several changes with the new cards - they are bigger and will contain more information and there will be separate cards for residential and commercial or industrial property.

The revaluation will include all taxation and tax exempt real estate, land, buildings and improvements; all taxable personal property, except motor vehicles, off the road construction equipment, boats, livestock and farm machinery and equipment.

There are about 1,200 dwellings, 565 outbuildings, 1,350 lots, 32 commercial buildings and 10 industrial buildings in Bolton. The town, which is 15 square miles, has about 6,577.5 acres of land.

The tax exempt property includes 3 schools of 14 churches, 1 library, 1 firehouse, 1 town hall, 13 state and federal properties and 22 miscellaneous properties.

There are 27 personal property accounts for machinery, 58 for furniture and fixtures and 38 for wholesale and retail inventories.

All work pertaining to the revaluation, including completed street cards, completed owner cards, assessment notices addressed and property value summaries, must be completed by November 15, 1979.

The assessment notices mean that all owners of record (property tax) must receive a notice showing the valuation that has been placed on their property.

The new assessment will effect the Oct. 1, 1979 Grand List. The Oct. 1, 1977 Grand List was $24,941,774.

Educators Urge Continuation Of Special Summer Program

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

VERNON - Dr. Melvin Reich, associate professor of education at the University of Connecticut and Anthony Magliocco, supervisor of special education in the Vernon school system, reported at the meeting of the Education League of Education last Monday on the success of the summer special education program.

Reich, Magliocco, Ronald Kozuch, director of Continuing Education, and Dr. Albert Kerkin, assistant superintendent of schools, all recommended that the program be approved for continuation.

The primary goal of the program, which ran for six weeks for the seventh year last summer, is to maintain the academic and social strides made by special education students over the regular school year as well as providing them with additional educational skills.

The program also includes several field trips and supervised swimming as it is conducted at the Vernon Elementary School which has a swimming pool adjacent to it.

The UConn School of Education provided 28 master teachers to participate in the program and several area high school students volunteered to assist the students and staff.

Dr. Reich directs the program and Kozuch and Magliocco are co-directors. The program is supported by the Vernon Resource staff and many parents have commended on the importance and need for continuing the program.

students enrolled. Of these 61 were from Vernon and the remaining ones from neighboring towns.

Up to this past summer the project had received some state and federal funds but this past summer no funding was received. The directors said this caused many hardships, two of them being the lack of money for staff and supplies.

The lack of funding also meant that transportation could not be provided for the children and therefore the directors felt this was a factor in the voluntary drop out of some children. What can be done to assist this past summer.

However, the Vernon Resource staff and many parents have commended on the importance and need for continuing the program.

The Candidates Speak

56th District
VERNON - Chester Morgan, Democratic candidate for re-election as state representative from Vernon's 56th District, said the General Assembly has made giant strides in reforming both the structure and substance of state government in the past two years.

Morgan, who is running against Republican candidate Nancy Osborn, said, "Both the executive and judicial branches of government have been streamlined, combining in excess of 200 agencies into 22 departments and three levels of the court system into one. Both reorganizations were bold and innovative moves and I believe that we will see increased efficiency and economy."

He further said that the legislature has fine-tuned the Freedom of Information Act which allows Connecticut citizens the broadest access to governmental documents and decisions in the entire country.

He added, "Finally, the General Assembly has amended the Code of Ethics legislation for public officials and lobbyists requiring in both instances more accountability and disclosure to the public."

"If re-elected to a second term, I will continue to support progressive reform-minded measures so that Connecticut taxpayers will continue to receive the best quality governmental services for their tax dollar," Morgan said.

Republican candidate for re-election as state representative from the 56th District, said she is joining with Congressman Ronald Sarasin, Republican gubernatorial candidate, in calling for a tougher stand on crime.

"As a member of the General Assembly I have seen many outstanding bills that would have helped deter crime, die due to lack of support from the Democratic leadership," Mrs. Miller said.

She said she supported a juvenile justice reform bill which would have let the teenage "bugs" know they do not have immunity from the law just because they are under 16. She said that proposal died due to lack of Democratic support.

"I supported the 'chronic crook' bill to establish mandatory sentences for habitual offenders who commit violent crimes. The bill died even though the Democratic majority did not support it," she added.

She also said she favored the bill to provide for a merit system of judicial selection, designed to clear out the political hacks who stifle the judicial process. "This bill could not get through the Democratic controlled assembly," she said.

Mrs. Miller said she will continue to fight for these bills when she is back in Hartford. "I know that when people are afraid to walk in their own neighborhoods after dark, that it is time to take a firmer stand against crime," she said.

55th District
BOLTON - Aloysius Ahearn, Democratic candidate for state representative from the 55th District, said he is ready with a list of priorities which will help the people of the district. If he people in the district town elect him, he said his priorities are:

- Repeat of the sales tax with all elderly persons over 65.
- Reevaluation of the Vernon-Willimantic rail line as a freight carrier and eventual passenger service.
- Revising of the ADM formula so that poorer towns would get more state aid for education than the wealthy towns.
- Increase state assistance to help rural towns develop adequate law enforcement programs.
- Elimination of the party lever system of establishment of a direct primary system to elect party candidates.
- Increase job opportunities and improve business climate in Connecticut by developing greater vocational education programs.
- Re-direct Department of Environmental Protection priorities to clean up air and lake pollution.
- Institute a moratorium on further gambling activities such as casinos and more dog tracks.
- Increase number of investigators to reduce welfare fraud.
- Reduce waste and increase efficiency in government by seeking advice from the workers more than management.

Regional Education
HEBRON - The Board of Education has voted unanimously to authorize its chairman, Joseph Pelletier, to file an application for the Area Cooperative Approach to Special Education (ACASE) membership. This will permit the board to apply for regional education service center status with the State Department of Education.
