

$12 Million To Buy a Lot of Schooling

With America nearing its first trillion dollar budget, $12 million may seem like, if not exactly peanuts, a minor sum in the education picture.

But what it's buying on the education scene may help shape schooling for millions of students in the 21st century. So it's important peanuts.

The $12 million, as Mary F. Berry tells it, this year funds 175 projects for innovative programs to improve teaching and learning beyond high school.

Berry is Assistant Secretary for Education, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The $12 million is from the nation's Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education.

Established by the Education Amendments Act of 1972, the Fund awards seed money to get local innovative projects off the ground. Then, local funds are expected to keep it going.

If you are a blue-collar worker, an offender or ex-offender, a black or Hispanic, a disadvantaged woman or man, a well-off adult wanting to shape up with hands-on or book learning for a new career, projects in Berry's report may include one aimed to help you.

The smorgasbord of demonstration programs funded by the new grants includes:

- To the Board of Regents, University of the State of New York, $46,812 to train college graduate ex-offenders to serve as advisors to inmates in selected New York State prisons. The ex-offenders involved must have earned college degrees while jailed.
- To University of California, Riverside, $52,000 to provide off-campus learning for handicapped students and help employees accept handicapped learners.
- To University of Kentucky, Lexington, $69,595 to set up paid internships and support services for women returning to college. Integrated will be on-campus learning, direct work experiences, and career exploration.
- To Pace Institute, Chicago, $81,598, to train inmates in how to land and hold jobs. Personnel directors and staff go into prisons to give inmates first-hand experience. Project has commitments from businesses to provide jobs for at least 50.
- To United Auto Workers, Detroit, Mich., $65,917 to design a retirement and life planning program for UAW blue collar workers. The project will push inter-generational learning within limits of the older adult's lifestyle.

Parking Ban

Manchester police have issued a parking ban for Thanksgiving morning from 6 to 10:30, the start of the five-mile road race, on Main Street from Bissell Street south to Charter Oak Street.

The parking restriction will be posted and strictly enforced. Cars will be towed, Patrol Captain Henry Minor said.

Vehicles will also not be allowed to enter Main Street from Park or Birch streets from 9:30 a.m. until after the race. Birch Street will be closed off at Spruce Street and Park Street will be closed off at Church Street. All other intersections along the road race will be closed off during the race.

The eastbound lanes of East Center Street between Porter and Main streets will be posted to traffic. The westbound lane will remain open.

Gordon Lassow, president of the Eighth Utilities District, said Town Manager Robert Weiss has suggested the district submit a bid for buying the Buckland fire house. Weiss this morning wrote to Lassow to clarify his remarks. See page 2.

He Was Right

MANCHESTER — For a town manager, it's a talent that may not be as valuable as keeping peace on a hot town issue or being able to attract new industry.

But, few can best Town Manager Robert Weiss' record for predicting the season's first snowfall.

Two months ago, he said the first snow of the year would be today. When he woke up this morning, he found early-hour flurries had proved him right again.

"He doesn't always pick the exact date, but he is usually within a day or two."

"For years I've been doing it, my batting average is better than Jim Rice's," Weiss said.

There's no science to his date-picking.

"I communicate with God early in the season," Weiss said with a laugh.

He also said he picks his first snow date before he reads the annual edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac.

The almanac, long worn to by New Englanders as a weather forecaster, also has predicted a snow fall during this week of Thanksgiving.

Payment Coming

The Town of Manchester will pay the Eighth Utilities District for money collected by the town in Buckland during the court case. See page 3.

Plan Remains

Officials from three local towns met Monday to discuss Burnham Street, but Manchester's administration still plans to recommend dead-ending of the street. See page 10.

Israel OKs Draft Treaty

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel today approved a U.S.-Egypt peace treaty with Egypt but rejected as "unacceptable" a timetable for Palestinian autonomy, leaving the talks deadlocked and possibly in need of a second summit meeting.

The Israeli Cabinet voted 15-2 at the end of a six-hour session to approve a U.S. draft treaty drawn up a month ago that ties it to an overall Middle East peace settlement. The Cabinet had earlier rejected the pact.

But the approval today did not meet Egypt's demand for a specific timetable for Palestinian autonomy on the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip, leaving the talks that began Oct. 12 still stymied and perhaps again requiring intervention by President Carter.

"The latest proposals of the government of Egypt are inconsistent with the Camp David agreements and unacceptable to Israel," Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in a prepared statement read to reporters.

Begin told reporters that Israel stood ready to sign a treaty with Egypt based on the American proposal Oct. 25.

He said both sides could start negotiations on the timetable after a treaty is signed. But Egypt wants a commitment before the signing.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Monday he would welcome another three-way meeting and an Israeli official said the Jewish nation would have no objections to such a conference.

"In negotiations there are often problems that need to be handled personally," the Israeli official said.

The Israeli Cabinet met Sunday to consider Egypt's latest peace proposals but was unable to reach a decision.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin charged the Egyptian demands for a specific timetable for Israel's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and the establishment of Palestinian autonomy there.

Sadat said 90 percent of the work for peace has been accomplished, but the problem of "linkage" — the remaining 10 percent — still needs a solution.

Asked if this meant the situation was grave, Sadat said: "Yes it is, because linkage is an essential point. It is a question of principle."

In a television interview Monday, Sadat said he would not sign an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty unless

Educators, Citizens Weigh Open Campus

By SUSAN VAUGHN Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Teachers, school board members, a parent and a store owner weighed both sides of the open campus policy at Manchester High School in an informal discussion Monday night.

The issue is under review this year by the Board of Education, which will make recommendations later in the school year on whether to retain the same policy or change it. Most of the seven teachers from the Manchester Education Association (MEA) were generally in favor of retaining the open campus, but had some suggestions for modifying it.

Toni Esposito, a Spanish teacher, was the only teacher at the meeting who was adamantly opposed to the open campus saying it contributed to a "party attitude," encourages tardiness, cigarette smoking, skipping classes and detracts from a serious attitude in school.

Also strongly in favor of closing the campus were Joan Topping, whose son attends MHS, and Carol Brown, owner of the Memorial Corner Store on Main Street.

Mrs. Topping accused the former high school administration of covering up an accident about three years ago in which her son and another boy were involved during their free period of a school day. She said former principal George Emmerling and vice principal Joseph Mazzotta covered up the accident and did not release it to the newspapers.

Mrs. Topping said a campus situation belongs at a college and is not appropriate for 14-year-olds.

Mrs. Brown told the school board of the problems she has daily with groups of students who come to her store during their free time. She said they shoplift and talk back to her when she asks them to leave.

Mrs. Brown said she has had the problem with students for years. Every time she called the school administration she was told "The times have changed." She also said she was told by Wilson E. Deakin, assistant superintendent for administration, last week that the schools are not responsible for students of the school grounds. She was advised to call the police, she said.

School Board Chairman John Yavis told Mrs. Brown "We are concerned about MHS students during the school day."

Jan Wiggins, a high school teacher, said Mrs. Brown was sympathetic with her and said "You have the same ones we have the problems with."

The teachers generally agreed that the schools should be more involved in the open campus privilege. They said the majority of those students are the level three non-college bound students. The teachers raised the problems of motivating those students in school, with afterschool jobs taking priority over school, with study skills and values of society in general.

Phil Stearns, an English teacher, said "There is nothing we can do to force students to study if they are not so inclined, even with incentives."

Several teachers expressed concern over the open campus for sophomores and suggested a probationary period on the privilege until after the first quarter, based on academic average.

Mrs. Wiggins and Lee Hay, president of the MEA and an English teacher, opposed academic criteria for the open campus privilege. Mrs. Wiggins said, "I hate to put a stigma on those who struggle to get grades." She suggested assigning a study hall to those students who take a minimum class load, to cut down on their free time.

Hay said he was probably the most strongly in favor of the open campus system. Hay said he is satisfied that the students are mature enough to handle the open campus privilege and that they have adequate study skills.

Hay said the schools today are a reflection of society. "If you are trying to equate skipping with the open campus, it doesn't matter what you do," he said, referring to various attempts at controlling students in other systems.

School board member Verna Hubbard said she was concerned with the "party atmosphere" which open campus creates and the effect it has on the student's academic progress.

Hay pointed out what he considered the benefits of the open campus: the socialization process, which he called a vital part of education.

Stearns said he noticed that the students opened up more to the teachers when the campus opened. He said it also took away the police function from the teachers.

At the close of the session, Hay said he wished more of the teachers who were in favor of closing the campus had attended the meeting.

Another parents meeting at the high school on the open campus question will be scheduled sometime in December.

Inflation Higher; Growth Rate OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation during the July-September quarter was slightly higher than previously believed, but economic growth remained on target with administration projections, the government reported today.

The worst news contained in the Commerce Department's revised report on third quarter economic developments was word that after-tax corporate profits rose just 1.2 percent — compared with an 18 percent jump during the second quarter.

The department said inflation during the third quarter, as measured by the so-called "implicit price deflator," increased 7.1 percent, a notch higher than the 7 percent gain originally reported last month.

The implicit price deflator measures inflation on an economy-wide basis while the Labor Department's monthly Consumer Price Index tracks on prices paid by consumers at retail outlets.

The Commerce Department also said the "real" Gross National Product — the total output of goods and services adjusted for inflation — increased 3.4 percent during the third quarter, unchanged from the original estimate made last month.

The 3.4 percent increase was considerably below the second quarter's 8.7 percent growth rate, but was consistent with the administration's prediction that the economy would grow at about a 3.75 percent annual rate this year.

As the government was releasing its economic indicators, Brookings Institution economist Arthur Okun was telling reporters that President Carter "is going to get the recession" next year.

Okun and several other private economists have forecast that the nation is headed for a recession in 1979 because of unchecked inflation.

Carter and Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller dispute the predictions.

Buckland Sewers

Residents Ask District To Maintain Authority

By GREG PEARSON Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER - Residents have petitioned the Eighth Utilities District to maintain the sewer authority for the Buckland Commons project and to work to prevent the proposed development.

The District Board of Directors discussed this and several other issues at its Monday night meeting, which included topics ranging from linear parks to paved roads.

The directors discussed the petition only briefly and voted just to accept the petition.

They also received a warning from attorney John LaBelle Sr., district counsel, who said, "You should be careful not to be used for somebody with an axe to grind."

Raymond Smith, a Windsor Street resident, presented a petition with 81 signatures of Buckland residents who asked the district to maintain its authority to sewers in the area where Buckland Commons is proposed. It could grant such authority to the town.

The project would be a commercial, industrial and residential area that received strong opposition from many residents of the area first proposed.

Attorney Bruce Beck, who represents Smith, told the district directors, "We think you would have a little more sympathy than the town has shown in the past."

He said the district should be able to not grant sewers if it feels such a step is suitable.

"There is a real choice here. The Eighth District could determine its own destiny," Beck said.

"We don't think you'd have any problem justifying your position," he said.

He mentioned present orders to improve town sewage treatment and said legal action might be taken if sewer authorization is granted for the Buckland Commons work.

Beck also represents Michael Dweinstein, an environmentalist who has said he will fight the Buckland Commons project on environmental grounds.

LaBelle said he received a letter Monday from Jay Giles, Manchester's director of public works, asking that the district grant the town the authority to install sewers to the Buckland Commons project.

The district directors took no action on the matter and are expected to discuss it next month.

Director Robert Bletchman agreed to form a study committee to review a request from the Hocknam River Linear Park Committee. The committee is seeking an easement to pave an area for parking on North which Street property along the river.

The committee is seeking to form a linear park along the river and would like the parking area as an access point.

Directors said they would oppose deeding the property to the committee. They also were concerned about changes to the property, such as the removal of trees or the paving of it.

The directors agreed to support work on a 911 emergency phone number and the development of a map showing the Eighth District and Town boundaries.

LaBelle told the directors that the law suit involving the Committee For One Manchester is on the trial list and will be scheduled soon. That committee, which is seeking consolidation of the town and district, has sued the district because it failed to appoint members to a consolidation committee.

The directors also voted to pay a bill for the paving of the road to the district's treatment plant. Lawrence Noone was the only one to vote against payment. He was visibly angry about the vote and said the district should wait to make sure the job was done properly before paying the bill.

The bedroom of a Main Street home was robbed while there was a noisy party going on elsewhere in the house, police said.

A burglar or burglars broke into a home at 1403 Main St. at about 7 p.m. Monday night by prying open a kitchen window and cutting the interior screen.

Stolen were $160 to $180 cash and two diamond earrings valued at between $200 and $300. The earrings are described as light blue stone surrounded by diamond chips.

Police said there was a party going on in the house at the time and the noise apparently drew the burglar owner from hearing the burglar enter and exit.

Carmen I. DiUlio, 25, of 40 Army Drive, East Hartford, was charged on a warrant with second-degree assault in an Oct. 22 incident.

Mrs. DiUlio and her husband had an argument over how much he had had to drink, police said. They argued until the husband left the room and went into the kitchen, police said.

The wife followed him, police said. She allegedly grabbed a steak knife with a six-inch blade and stabbed the husband in the left arm.

Mrs. DiUlio was charged with second-degree assault and released on a promise to appear in court Dec. 11.

Open Campus Discussion

Joseph Composeo and Peter Crombie, of the open campus policy at MHS Monday night, the meeting was one of several scheduled this year on the controversial issue. Story on another teacher during an informal discussion.

Lassow Tells Suggestion District Buy Firehouse

MANCHESTER - The president of the Eighth Utilities District Monday night that the town manager has suggested the district make a bid for the purchase of the Buckland firehouse.

But, Town Manager Robert Weiss this morning wrote to Gordon Lassow, district president, to clarify his suggestion about the firehouse sale.

The firehouse was discussed at Monday's meeting of the Eighth District Board of Directors.

At that meeting, Lassow told the directors he had talked with Weiss, who had mentioned that the district might want to make a bid for the firehouse.

The firehouse is located in Buckland, the area of town that was the subject of a court battle between the town and the district. The state Supreme Court ruled the district has the authority to fight fires in Buckland. Thus, the town-owned firehouse is in an area where it cannot fight fires.

Town officials, however, have argued that the firehouse is needed. The town, operating from that station, can provide better protection to those areas surrounding Buckland that it covers, they have said.

Weiss wrote this morning that in his conversation with Lassow, he emphasized the fact that the town has more than ample justification for the location of this firehouse.

"We have not entertained any thoughts of disposing of this facility," Weiss wrote.

Community Development Program On Agenda

MANCHESTER - The Town Board of Directors and opponents and supporters of the Community Development program all will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in Woodruff Hall, Center Congregational Church, 11 Center St.

Seven public hearings, including one on the proposed dead-end of Burnham Street, are scheduled tonight, but the Community Development program is expected to generate the most discussion.

Last week, more than 100 residents attended the board's meeting and most spoke against the program, which is run by the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development. The residents who spoke said they oppose HUD requirements the town has been asked to meet to receive the funds.

The board also may act tonight on approving receipt of the remaining $73,000 of the funds for this year. The money was released recently by HUD.

Many opponents again expressed their opposition to HUD involvement in Manchester. The Burnham Street closing was an issue at a Monday afternoon meeting in South Windsor, which is seeking to keep the road open until the J.C. Penney Co. building opens. The Town of Manchester has threatened suit if such action is taken.

The Board of Directors will make the final decision after a public hearing on the closing of one end of the street by dead-ending it past Croft Drive.

Other public hearings tonight include the following: An exchange of easements between the town and Stanley P. and Marion E. Baldyga. The exchange is needed to locate an easement for the Buckland Industrial Park.

A proposed appropriations to pay for retraining expenses through January for four Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) projects.

The board's agenda also includes consideration of funding CETA positions in the future. The town administration has recommended that several positions, previously funded through CETA, now being reduced, which would result in a loss of some other grant money. The town's CETA funding is being reduced, which would result in a loss of some other grant money. The town's CETA funding is being reduced, which would result in a loss of some other grant money.

The town is making a second attempt to hire a budget analyst because the first group of candidates did not include enough qualified persons.

"If we don't have enough suitable candidates, we often hold off and test the labor market again," Steven Werber, the town's personnel assistant, said as he explained the second attempt by the town to fill the budget analyst position.

The first attempt produced about 22 applicants, but only two or three had the experience and the qualifications the town felt necessary, Werber said.

He is now reviewing the second group of applicants, which is about the same size as the first. Werber said he is hopeful more qualified candidates will be in this group, but his early review of the applicants did not lend much support to that hope.

"So far it doesn't look all that encouraging," he said as he looked through the applications.

Almost all of the candidates have master's degrees in public administration but a few have past experience in budget analysis work.

The town is seeking someone with past experience because the analyst will be required to begin work immediately on the budget, Werber said.

The town also decided to re-recruit for the position because of an expected salary hike for the job. It was felt this would help attract more applicants.

The position was included in the mid-management review done by Richard Custer. Custer has recommended a salary range of $14,400 to $17,200 for the job.

This is an increase over the previous pay.

"We weren't competitive enough before to draw candidates. We're closer now," Werber said.

The budget analyst position has been vacant since the start of this summer when Paula Yelman left the position. She held the job for about 15 months and was the town's first budget analyst.

District To Get Paid On Taxes in Buckland

MANCHESTER - The Eighth Utilities District soon should receive the first payment from the town of tax money collected in the past two years in Buckland.

Attorney John LaBelle Sr., counsel for the district, told the district Board of Directors he has talked with Town Manager Robert Weiss and was told the town's first payment should be made soon.

In another money matter, the Eighth District has received more than $3,000 in tax payment from a property owner who is near the district borders and had not been billed for taxes by either the district or the town.

During the time of the court case to decide jurisdiction in Buckland, the town continued to collect fire service taxes in that area.

The state Supreme Court ruled, however, that the Eighth District is the fire authority in Buckland. Thus, the town must repay the district the money it collected during the court case.

Residents of Buckland then will receive rebates because the District's tax rate is lower than the Town's.

LaBelle said the town did not keep the money in a separate escrow account and has been using the collected funds as part of its general operation. Water Tested in Canton

CANTON (UPI) - The state Department of Health has expanded its testing for contaminated drinking water in the Canton landfill area after discovering significant amounts of solvent wastes in nearby wells.

State Health Commissioner Douglas Lloyd ordered the action Monday after meeting with local health authorities and representatives of the Farmington Valley Health District to discuss the problem.

He said there would be further sampling of wells over a wider area of Route 44 in Canton and sections of Avon. Five wells, supplying drinking water to homes and businesses, were ordered shut down last week.

Lloyd said the contamination was apparently due to seepage of chemicals dumped by the non-union Swift Industrial Chemical Co. The wastes, solvents and acids discovered do not present an immediate health danger, he said.

Vernon Names New Director

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

VERNON — The town of Vernon has a new director of administration. Its fourth since the town governments were consolidated 12 years ago. On recommendation of Mayor Frank McCoy the council, last night, approved the appointment of Robert W. Dotson of Hull, Mass.

Dotson has been serving as executive secretary-administrator for the Town of Hull. This appointment was by a five member Board of Selectmen and the duties are determined by that board.

In that capacity Dotson served as chief administrative officer for all town departments, boards and committees and was responsible for the general supervision of town employees, acted as purchasing agent for town departments, prepared the annual budget and coordinated grant activities.

His duties will be much the same in Vernon but he will work directly under the supervision of the mayor.

Dotson also served as town manager for Acton, Mass., a position he held for about seven years. Before being appointed as manager and before the charter change the government to the town manager form of government, Dotson served for 14 months as administrative assistant.

From 1965 to 1967 Dotson served as foreign service assistant cultural affairs officer for the U. S. Information Agency in Lima, Peru. His position was that of director of the Peruvian-North American Cultural Institute in Cuzco, Peru.

He conducted an English teaching program for 600 university and high school students. He coordinated all activities of the institute.

For about one year he served as a social caseworker for the Los Angeles Bureau of Public Assistance. This was from November 1964 to August 1965. For two years before that he served in the Peace Corps and had charge of the Food for Peace School Lunch Feeding Program in Peru.

He has a bachelor's degree from the University of California. His major fields of study were U. S. history and social sciences. He served in the U. S. Navy from 1954 to 1957. He is a full member of the International City Management Association and the Massachusetts Municipal Management Association. He speaks Spanish fluently.

Dotson replaces Stanley Roesler who left early this past summer to take a position with the Wethersfield Board of Education.

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The Police Department has adopted a new get tough policy in domestic assault cases, with the emphasis on making more arrests rather than mediating household spats.

The program was announced Monday by New Haven Mayor Frank Logue, Police Chief Edward Morrone and representatives of battered women and legal assistance groups who initiated the proposal.

Members of the Board of Education and the PTA Council gathered with representatives from the MEA to informally discuss issues affecting public education in Manchester.

The costs of new regulations, such as environmental restrictions, don't appear in the federal budget yet add to the country's up to half a million dollars.

The WPCA also decided to extend lake area sewerage beyond Daisy Road to cover Waterfront Heights at the request of Town Engineer Donald Holmes.

Septic system failures have occurred due to high water tables and small lot sizes.

Authority Chairman Richard Breatt asked the engineers to stress operation and treatment costs above construction cost so taxpayers will know how much it will be to maintain the system. The initial capital costs will be 90 percent government funded.

Breatt said as a result of the authority's resignation his group may now prepare water pollution control plans. It also has become responsible for community septic systems serving two or more units of housing.

The zoning commission in the past has differed with the Breatt on the extent to which the lake area should be sewered. Until last summer, the planners were opposed to any sewerage there in the belief that it would lead to increased density.

However, this stand has been modified to approve of a limited sewer system to cope with existing septic problems.

Official Says Inflation Is Everyone's Business

HARTFORD (UPI) — Everyone has to do their bit to fight inflation and no one is going to like it, says Barry Bosworth, director of the Federal Council on Wage and Price Stability.

"The real problem with inflation is that all of us are part of it," Bosworth told more than 100 business leaders Monday at Hartford Graduate Center.

"Everybody who comes in tells us the program is too weak as it applies to the other guy, and too strong as it applies to themselves," he said.

Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., who also addressed the group, said if he could he'd attack inflation by cutting oil imports 10 percent — despite the effects on the fuel hungry Northeast.

"I'd cut oil imports by 10 percent and let the chips fall where they may," McKinney said. "If it means my kids have to walk to school instead of drive, let them walk."

Bosworth doesn't foresee any federal wage and price controls. He said the onus of being fingered as an inflation-contributor is enough to make most businesses stabilize their prices voluntarily.

"I think if you can spot them, they'll bring their prices back down," he said. Rapid expansion of the economy is no solution, Bosworth said, because it eventually leads to a sharp increase in unemployment, and "throwing people out of work is going to be very costly."

And the "fair" alternative in government isn't always equitable if it doesn't reduce inflation, he said. Bosworth said major contributors to the problem are federal regulations imposed on local governments and industry.

The costs of new regulations, such as environmental restrictions, don't appear in the federal budget yet add to the country's

Change of Panel Name To Broaden Its Work

COVENTRY — The Sewer Authority has been redesignated the Water Pollution Control Authority by the Town Council under mandate by the state.

Both the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Conservation Commission had opted for the change in title in the hope the authority would seek nonsewer alternatives as well as municipal sewers to correct the town's pollution health problems.

In a letter to the council, Planning Commission chairman Marilyn Richardson said, "A policy which fails to consider sewer alternatives could result in some of the undesirable side effects of sewers: increased density, sprawl, and resultant environmental damage."

The council ruled it was not necessary to change the authority's name by formal action, because of the state's acceptance of sewer avoidance recommendations made by the Department of Environmental Protection.

State guidelines are currently being drawn up for local water pollution control authorities (WPCA).

At a meeting of the Coventry WPCA, engineers from Fuss and O'Neill said sewer pipes for a municipal plan could be run either along the Mill Brook or underneath Main Street.

The control group favored the latter proposal, which engineers said could save up to half a million dollars.

The WPCA also decided to extend lake area sewerage beyond Daisy Road to cover Waterfront Heights at the request of Town Engineer Donald Holmes.

Hebron Zoners Deny Variance Request

HEBRON — The Hebron Zoning Board of Appeals voted, 4-1 to deny a variance requested by Kevin P. Nicolasso, 101C Tudor Lane, Manchester.

The request was to allow construction of a dwelling closer to the land survey lines than allowed at Lot 11 at the intersection of Jones Street, Burrows Hill Road and Hope Valley Road.

Members voting against the variance were James Derby, John Rowley, John Fitzgibbons, and Robert Croston. Paul Dufour voted for it.

Reasons which the board listed for the denial were: The house was under construction before a building permit was issued; maps submitted to the Building Department were inaccurate; and the only hardship was caused by the applicant and/or the land surveyor.

Nicolasso was represented at the hearing by Attorney William Borst.

The ZBA voted unanimously that a certified plot plan, showing all boundaries of all property owners, names and locations of buildings, the proposed building in relationship to boundaries, any documents or other data should also be provided at a hearing.

The Manchester Memorial Hospital annual ball Saturday night... "Saturday Night Fever" brought out many ladies and gentlemen in their disco gowns and tuxedos, respectively.

The food was especially prepared under the guidance of Chef Cameron of the Colony, followed by music for dancing by "The Main Street Band."

We had the pleasure of joining Dr. and Mrs. Alan S. Lammey, Dr. and Mrs. John Barry Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Quatrocelli and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Smith and others.

Jack and Lil Hunter joined the festivities. Lil looking sharp as always in a black jersey dress, and their daughter, Leslie Belcher, looking equally as charming.

It was a great evening. An event I look forward to each year.

Turkey Shoot

Well, it's taken me some time, but I finally found out that when you go to a "Turkey Shoot" you really don't shoot a turkey.

My son, who has just acquired a gun and has begun trap-shooting at a club, came home the other day with a turkey.

Well, I didn't see it right away and he said, "Hey, mom, I got a turkey." I said, moaning a little, "That's great. I hope the feathers are all off."

He proudly displayed a much-defeathered turkey, frozen and in a plastic wrap... just like at the supermarket.

Hope you all have a great Thanksgiving. Remember if Aunt Sara or Cousin Marge show up with a new recipe, let me know, and we'll pass it along in "Your Neighbor's Kitchen."

Have a happy day.

Seven states carried questions that would limit state spending. Three other had questions similar to Proposition 13. Even in those states where no questions appeared on the ballot, such as Connecticut, taxation and spending limits were central issues.

Both Republican gubernatorial nominee Ronald Sarasin and incumbent Gov. Ella T. Grasso vowed there would be no state income tax during the next four years.

On the local level, spending also was a factor. In Norwich, where a $4 million bond issue question was soundly rejected, officials were attributing its defeat to fiscal concerns on the part of the voters.

It would have seemed reasonable to assume that when California voters passed Proposition 13 earlier this year, and many taxpayer groups took up the banner in their own states, that federal officials would have paid more attention than they have so far to taxes and spending.

Yet, in the closing hours of Congress last month, an absurd tax cut bill, which few, if any representatives understood when they voted on it, was passed, and signed by Carter.

When the tax cuts and the Social Security tax increases are combined, the tax breaks for many families will be practically non-existent. In fact, for some people there actually will be a tax increase. But for the wealthy, there will be sizeable tax cuts.

Apparently, the message had not filtered down from taxpayer to legislator. But now, after last week's elections, there can be no doubt about voters' deep concern over fiscal matters.

If there is no positive action on cutting spending and limiting taxes, there could be a taxpayer revolt in the offing. And the danger is that a revolt is apt to be in the form of a meat ax approach to cutting spending and taxes. The result would likely be serious disruption in essential government services.

Chamber of Commerce

The Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce deserves hearty congratulations.

The congratulations and accolades are in store for the group for being the sponsor of the successful Manchester Products Show this past weekend.

The show, presented at Manchester High School Saturday and Sunday, gave an overall view of the industrial, commercial and business environment of the community.

The Chamber of Commerce was the overall factor in making such a show a reality, and by all observations, a complete success.

Involvement and concern for a community should be one of the prime considerations for a chamber of commerce.

As evidenced by the displays and the crowds at the annual show, it is evident the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce exemplifies involvement and concern.

More than 90 exhibitors with new products and services were the core of the show and the displays proved to be just the thing to attract the crowds on both days.

Small portions of several of us have died.

The us are members of the newspaper and media fraternity and the small portions which died, died along with three newsmen who were killed in Guyana.

In recent years, death in connection with newsmen has become more of a common occurrence than it has been in the past.

The deaths of newsmen in World War II and Korea have somewhat eased with the passage of time.

The deaths and disappearances of newsmen in Vietnam are beginning to ease, although reference is made from time to time of men such as Kowichi Sawada and Sean Flynn who became victims of the southeast Asian War.

The latest victims however were not assigned to cover an armed conflict, but simply accompanied a California Congressman on a fact-finding mission on behalf of his constituents.

While the victims were not personally known to all of us, Don Harris' work was familiar because of reports he filed from Vietnam after the Communist takeover.

The three men, Harris, Bob Brown, an NBC cameraman, and San Francisco Examiner photographer Gregory Robinson became the latest victims exercising their right to a free press.

While the shock of death is somewhat lessened when it occurs in war, this recent type of senseless killing should not go unnoticed or unpublicized.

The facts behind the incident should be thoroughly investigated and brought out to those responsible should be brought to task for their actions.

By doing this, perhaps there will be no future similar incidents.

Other Editors Say

There can be no doubt about the role taxes and government spending played in the election. One would be hard pressed to find a candidate who failed to address the two issues.

Those issues, in fact, are so important that questions about limiting spending or cutting taxes appeared on the ballots in 16 states and in communities scattered around the country. The fact that governmental fiscal responsibility became the number one issue on election day reflects the growing concern of people across the country.

That concern has been called a "taxpayer revolt," but in not a revolt, on the whole, the average citizen is willing to pay his taxes providing the government taxes him fairly and spends his money wisely.

There is overwhelming evidence that government, particularly the federal government, is meeting neither of those conditions. The enormous increase in the federal bureaucracy in the last two decades, the massive waste, rising inflation and increased taxes demonstrate that elected officials have failed to collect and spend taxpayer's money properly.

Seven states carried questions that would limit state spending. Three other had questions similar to Proposition 13. Even in those states where no questions appeared on the ballot, such as Connecticut, taxation and spending limits were central issues.

Both Republican gubernatorial nominee Ronald Sarasin and incumbent Gov. Ella T. Grasso vowed there would be no state income tax during the next four years.

Legislators have been given a clear mandate. They would do well to heed the voters' directive.

New Youth Center Proposed

To the editor:
There is a problem in Manchester concerning our youth and the use of the parks.

There are also problems concerning alcohol and drug abuse.

The residents in and around the troubled areas have raised legitimate complaints and they should be dealt with.

The existing ordinance on loitering gives the police the power it needs to correct the problem. The present loitering ordinance makes it unlawful for any person to conduct "himself in such a way as to be unduly boisterous, using loud or profane language, obstructing access to said premises, or otherwise creating a nuisance to the neighborhood."

Those words seem to cover the residents complaints. The problem then appears not to be a lack of laws, but a lack of enforcement. Rewriting the law will make enforcement more successful.

The only things that the passage of this curfew amendment will accomplish will be to further antagonize the park-going youth who view this as an attack against their freedoms, and an increase of the tensions and animosities between the youth and the police.

It is time that Manchester establish an extensive youth center. One that could provide activities, sports, music, relaxation, and counseling.

One that is run by the youths, perhaps a youth board of directors with adult advisors. We are willing to spend $500,000 on our parents to give them a decent senior citizens center, can't we be willing to do the same for our children.

Nursing Home Abuses Proved

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When Ralph Nader charged recently that business is trying to make the federal government and its regulations the "whipping boy" for its own failings, his speech caused hardly a ripple.

It is not exactly news, after all, that Nader distrusts the business community. And in this era of rampant inflation, his harping on the virtues of, and need for, government regulation simply isn't very fashionable.

The problem is that just as one is about to dismiss Nader's views as outmoded, along comes some new evidence that business brings upon itself much to the federal regulatory burden it so angrily derides.

A case in point is the appalling exploitation of society's most vulnerable members, the elderly, which is all too common in one of the great growth segments of American business — the nursing home industry.

The Federal Trade Commission, which seeks to combat unfair and deceptive practices in commerce, is now in the midst of a full-scale investigation of economic abuses in the nursing home business.

And its preliminary findings indicate a crying need for more, not less, government regulation — a need that wouldn't exist if the owners and operators of some nursing homes didn't seek to take advantage of people in no position to fight back.

Some 12 million people, 70 percent of them women, now live in 24,000 nursing homes. The average resident is an 82-year-old widow with two or more chronic ailments who will stay in the home 2.4 years. One-fifth — 20 percent — of all nursing home residents never receive a single visitor.

FTC Commissioner Elizabeth Hanford Dole, in a speech outlining some of the agency's initial findings, noted the contracts signed by nursing home residents or their families are often filled with print disclaimers absolving the management of a liability for all kinds of acts and oversights. A typical admission statement:

"The facility and its management specifically disclaim liability for any act or omission of any physician, guest or intruder which results in personal injury to the patient."

Nursing home advertising may promise patients a "safe and secure environment," but — as Dole observed — "the promise is cancelled by the contract."

In many homes, patients are billed extra for essential items and services that ought to be covered by the basic rate — aspirin, crutches, soap, bed bars.

One private patient, himself a physician, was helped to take a five-minute walk down the hall and billed $20," Dole reported.

Some nursing homes obtain all drugs and supplies from pharmacies which they or another home in the chain own, and prohibit patients from buying on the open market. One Oregon facility charged 85 cents for a 22-cent pack of Kleenex. Another nursing home studied by the FTC was charging drug prices 24 percent higher than those charged by independent pharmacies.

Some homes require the family member who guarantees payment of a patient's bill to waive all rights to be informed of changes in the billing rate or in the level of patient services. Many nursing homes do not itemize monthly bills.

The litany goes on and on. "Just as the elderly provide an easy target for street crime, they also provide an easy target for white-collar crime and economy abusive practices," Dole said.

The nursing home industry, with total revenues of just $500 million in 1969, is now a $14 billion-a-year business, and still is growing. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is responsible for regulating the quality of care provided by nursing homes, but until now there has been little federal attention to the commercial aspects of the business.

That's about to change, as the FTC moves forward with its investigation and ultimately with new regulations. And when those regulations are issued, nursing home operators will have no one to blame but themselves for making them necessary.

Talks Pace Frustrate President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When it comes to the Middle East, President Carter has a lot of complaints about the peace process and the democratic process.

He is showing his frustrations and appears to be running out of patience which may not be a good leverage for pushing toward his goal.

Carter has dismissed the new stumbling blocks such as the future of the West Bank and the status of Jerusalem as "little tiny technicalities... that have absolutely no historical significance."

From his point of view that may be so. But from the standpoint of the Israelis or the million or more Arabs in the occupied lands — the differences are deep and profound, centering on the basic question of sovereignty, independence, and rights.

Looking at those ancient lands, Carter contends that future generations and "our grandchildren" will view the disagreements as insignificant. That is an interesting perspective on a land that has been in neither side would make a direct statement to the press. "Since he embarked on his gigantic diplomatic mediation effort, Carter has become more and more distrustful of secrecy and less and less dedicated to the open "public dialogue" he stressed so often at the beginning of his administration.

Furthermore, it is not just the talks that are irritating him. In his words:

"Here we work with the negotiators and the negotiators then refer their decision back to the head of state or the cabinet, the cabinet reverses themselves, reverses the negotiators on a language change or one word and in effect you get the most radical members of the governments who have a major input into the negotiating process, rather than having the heads of state there 80 yards away or so that they can mediate these issues once and for all."

So I think the follow-up to Camp David has been much more time-consuming and much more frustrating than it was when the three of us were primarily leading the discussion," meaning Carter, Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin.

Carter believes he has invested the time and the patience to achieve the minimum goal of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

Coming through loud and clear is Carter's ire that for all his presidential powers he cannot wave a magic wand and make his dream of peace in the Middle East an immediate reality.

Thought
I had a friend (I call him Paul), who was always excited to speak with Paul was always interested in what I had to say, eagerly listening to my greeting or my comments, no matter how dull or thread-bare I thought they were.

I thought one day, "how come I don't meet exciting people like Paul does. Everyone he meets is exciting." Then I began to watch him meet and talk with people I had met and talked with. He listened, really listened to them; he liked them and drew them out. People took on a glow, when they were well received, words flowed easily, their eyes glistened.

That is how my friend met, exciting people. He was exciting first, and the feeling spread.

"Nobody cares what I think," you say. First, care what other people think; be excited about them and you'll meet a lot more exciting people than you ever expected!

Housewife sells 'glass plate' for $40; worth $1,700
NILES, Ill. — The story of a small fortune, lost because a housewife had no idea her glass plate was a collector's item, recently came to light.

In a letter to J. R. MacArthur, chairman of The Bradford Exchange, world's largest trading center in collector's plates, a Madison, Wis., woman wrote: "I had a Liqueur 1965 plate... which I sold to a friend for $40. I had not heard of you at that time."

The plate she sold is actually valued at more than $1,700. Although MacArthur points out that this price is exceptionally high, he said, "In a few others may be losing hundreds or thousands of dollars by not knowing when their plates are worth."

To aid in identifying valuable plates, the Exchange issues a report that includes current prices on more than 900 plates, guides on how to look for and when to buy, and the plate evaluation checklist used by the Exchange.

Feds Seek Revision Of Old Booze Rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said today it wants to revise its 40-year-old regulations covering the way beer, wine and liquor may be advertised to American consumers.

Among other things, it wants to find out whether booze ads based on sex appeal fall under a ban against "obscene and indecent" advertising in the regulations, which date from the immediate post-Prohibition era of the mid-1930s, and whether bans on use of the word "pure" in any alcoholic beverage advertising should be lifted.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, in a notice published in today's Federal Register, also asked for comment on whether the use of "content and active" ingredients to push booze should be banned.

Although the regulations do not specifically outlaw the use of such endorsements, the bureau said its current position is that they should not be allowed because they may imply some connection between athletic prowess and drinking.

Another area which may need revising, it said, is the current ban against the use of comparative advertising. Present regulations forbid ads which are "disparaging of a competitor's product."

Comparative advertising has become more commonplace on other consumer products, the bureau noted, and can be a source of consumer information.

In the same area it asked for comment on whether "taste tests" should be allowed even if they wind up disparaging a competing brand.

Today's announcement was an "advance notice of proposed rule-making." After receiving comments on the questions it raised, the bureau will decide whether to propose new advertising rules.

"The regulations... were originally adopted in the mid-1930s and have remained basically unchanged since that time," the agency said. "Some of the provisions may be out of date due to advancement in advertising techniques and practices and due to changes in consumer education and awareness."

The bureau also said it wants to decide whether ads directed at special segments of the population — young people, for example — need to be examined.

It said the old regulations do not allow phrases such as "made from pure spring water," even when such a statement would be truthful, and also outlaw the phrases "double distilled," "triple distilled" or similar descriptions.

Mrs. Gandhi Returns To Barrage of Jeers

The welcome wasn't entirely heart-warming, but Indra Gandhi is accustomed to the vicissitudes of politics, so she kept her cool as she re-entered India's Parliament under a barrage of jeers.

The former prime minister, ousted from the political scene 20 months ago after a siege of iron-handed rule, won a Parliament seat Nov. 7, and she took it Monday in New Delhi in defiance of detractors who shouted "the evil has come!" and "The fountain, the source of corruption is here!"

Unlazed, she was sworn in before the 400 members of the house while about 70 of her supporters pounded on their desks and shouted "shame on you!" at the hecklers.

Death of Newman's Son Example of Hollywood

BY VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The death of Scott Newman, son of actor Paul Newman, from an accidental overdose of drugs and drink, is one more example of that running tragedy, the troubled children of Hollywood's stars.

Newman, 28, an occasional actor and nightclub entertainer under the name William Scott, who had been under psychological treatment, died in his sleep in a hotel room bed Monday, evidently of a combination of alcohol and the tranquilizer Valium.

He had one starring movie role, as an overheating college bully in a critically praised "Fraternity Row," filmed by a group of USC students and released commercially.

He was Newman's son by his first marriage, to Jackie Witt, which ended in divorce in 1956. Newman is now married to actress Joanne Woodward.

His father, directing a play at Kenyon College in Gambier, Ohio, flew back to California, but a spokesman said he would make no public comment.

Many stars' children have turned to drugs as an escape or in attempts to seek their own identity. Some of

Review Orchestra Offered Ambitious Program

By CHRISTINE CLEGG

Sunday afternoon at the Vernon Center Middle School, the Manchester Civic Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Jack Heller, played the first concert of its season series. The extremely ambitious program featured the monumental "Concerto for Orchestra" by Bela Bartok and the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto, Op. 35," with soloist Nicolas Danielson.

The opening number was a free transcription by Hans Krieger of a keyboard "Toccata" by Frescobaldi, organist at St. Peter's in Rome in the early 17th century. It was a pleasant warm-up, designed to get bows bowing and tongues tonguing with some degree of precision. The strings provided a warm start to the afternoon's program.

Dr. Heller evidenced a great deal of confidence in his orchestra personnel with his decision to program the Bartok work, a piece designed to display the virtuoso technique of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for whom it was commissioned. The orchestra gave it their best effort, and succeeded amazingly well on several levels. Not surprisingly, the opening passage for low strings, a hair-raiser for intonation, was tentative, although it was managed fairly successfully. Just keeping the band together with the best of their concentration that some sections were unable to untangle the elegant irregular meters which make the piece so remarkable.

The second movement, "Game of Pairs," featured pairs of wind instruments in solo passages, and the bassoons gave it a most classy start. They were followed by turn by solo oboes, clarinets, flutes, and muted trumpets. Although all of the duets were negotiated, the scherzo-like character of the movement was managed somewhat better by some pairs than others.

The finale was a challenge to a game of tag with the orchestra, since he set such a fast tempo he seemed to be daring them to keep up. The ensemble suffered, therefore, but some sections were unable to untangle the elegant irregular meters which make the piece so remarkable.

The young Mr. Danielson no doubt has a successful professional career ahead of him.

The second event of the Manchester Civic Orchestra and Choral for this season is "The Messiah" by Handel, to be presented on Dec. 10 at 4 p.m. at the Glastonbury High School.

One-Ring Circus

NEW YORK (UPI) — The one-ring circus is making a comeback on the American scene. The New York School for Circus Arts and its performing showcase, The Big Apple Circus, are attempting to revive the tradition of one-ring show devoted to close interaction between artist and audience.

For the third movement the low strings again had to lay their souls bare on some exposed intervals to which they gingerly stepped one to the next. The fourth movement gave the violas a chance to sing, and they took a beautiful turn with the line, joined later by the other strings. In both of these movements there were solo lines galore to display the fine

Vernon Council Asks Panel to Study Firehouse Site

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

VERNON — After listening to the majority of the people at a public hearing outline the need for a fire station in the Lake Street area, the Town Council Monday night turned the matter over to the Fire Study Committee.

The council recommended that the committee study, and make a recommendation, as to the type of firehouse to be built and said it should be in the Lake Street area. And then it will be referred to the Permanent Building Committee for site recommendation.

The Planning Commission has already recommended that area for locating the proposed firehouse because of the rapid residential growth in the area and because of the lack of fire hydrants.

Only two of 10 people speaking at the hearing asked to have two smaller or satellite stations built, one in the Lake Street area and one in the Skinner Road area.

However, it was the feeling of most of the Skinner Road area that the hydrants and it can be reached easily by most of the Rockville departments and they asked for a full-sized station in the Lake Street area and perhaps later a satellite station in the Skinner Road area.

Mrs. Donna Graugard of Lake Street, wife of a Hartford fireman, said the Fire Study Committee has said it won't make a hasty decision and added that the town has been faced with the problem since 1975 when a Fire Protection report recommended that the town start building a station south of Interstate 86 and recommended that it be built before completion of widening of the highway in the Dobson Road area.

She said the council still wouldn't have done anything about it until a petition, signed by some 900 people, called on the council to start moving. "We have been shuffled from committee to committee without any assurance as to what the future is to be," Mrs. Graugard said. She said

Ambush Survivor Was 'Very Lucky'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A defector from the People's Temple who survived the airport ambush that took five lives says the cult's death squad "thought they had killed me."

James Cobb Jr., who was with the visiting party fired on by temple gunmen Saturday, said he was "very lucky." He returned to San Francisco Monday after surviving the attack in which Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and four others died on a dirt airstrip as they were about to depart the cult's Jonestown settlement.

He was one of eight San Francisco Bay Area persons with relatives in the Temple who returned following the airport attack and later murdered a group of Temple leader Jim Jones and nearly 40 of his followers.

"I was on the opposite side of the trailer (carrying the gunmen) and hurrying to get people on the plane," Cobb said of the airstrip ambush.

"I saw (NBC reporter Don) Harris, the congressman, (NBC cameraman) Bob Brown, I saw them go down. I ran to the jungle 50 yards and dove into the jungle. They thought they had killed me."

"I was there two hours, and it got dark and I climbed a tree... and I was scared."

Cobb, 45, who grew up with a family that followed the People's Temple creed faithfully, said he feared they were dead in the mass murder-suicide that followed the attack on the Ryan party.

He said two brothers, three sisters and his mother were in the camp when massive shootings and poisonings took place. Himself a former People's Temple member, he had come to Guyana to try to take his relatives out.

"It wasn't mass suicide," Cobb told reporters at San Francisco International Airport following an interview with FBI agents.

Cobb said he thought Jones' motive in ordering the mass killings was, ironically, "because he didn't want to be exposed as an inhuman and a brazier. He just wanted to take everyone along with him."

Asked if he considered himself in danger, Cobb replied: "You just talked yourselves into a job" and asked Sattar and Ursin to come up with something concerning the board's five year plan for its January meeting.

Selection Joan Neath attended the meeting to explain the need for an administrative assistant—a position recommended by the Board of Selection's Personnel Committee.

Mrs. Neath said, "We need someone to manage the town without taking authority or responsibility away from the town and we need a full-time person."

She said, "The town is in a mess. We've got a lot to do. This town is continuing to grow and you have to come to grips with it."

Mrs. Neath said, "This board (selection) has uncovered a lot of things that need to be done — a lot of things to be done — things that weren't done in the past and an administrative assistant will be one way to get them done."

Mrs. Neath told the board, "You're talking about $17,000 position. We have lost ten times that amount."

She said, "The town has been passed over an innumerable number of times for grants and other things that have been offered because it 'doesn't have the manpower to take advantage of them.'"

Ursin, commenting about the position, said, "A qualified person should pay dividends."

The Board of Selection will meet tonight at 7:30 at the Community Hall. For the first time since July 1977 there is no new business.

Under old business the board will talk to Jerome Walsh, town attorney, about the capital reserve fund and the $250 reward. The board will also discuss a statement of general fixed assets, pension fund, purchase of a new car, and time slips, set a date for action on plans for the town green, hear each member's comments on legislative issues and make appointments.

BOLTON — The controversial capital reserve fund, and a deal it by Town Attorney Jerome Walsh, was discussed by the Board of Finance at its meeting Monday.

Board members had several questions about the fund that will probably be repeated tonight at the Board of Selection's meeting at 7:30 at the Community Hall. The fund is on the meeting's agenda and Attorney Walsh will be in attendance to answer questions.

Raymond Ursin was welcomed as a new member of the finance board. He replaces Jerald Hassett who recently resigned. Ursin's telephone poll appointment was ratified Monday.

The finance board discussed a letter from the selection committee to submit its five year plan. Daniel Harris, finance board chairman, said, "Our five year plan is to look at everybody else's five year plan."

Asked how Jones was able to lead his flock to self-destruction, Mrs. Neath said he used "brainwashing — and not much food — and they would go eight, 10, 15 hours a day working."

He had them under complete control, she said. She said Jones "always knew his church was going to fall apart if he was gone."

But she indicated the danger is not over. Asked if she feared for her life, Mrs. Neath said, "yes."

DEAR ABBY - I am a man in my 50s and, believe me, I find little of interest in young women. They can scarcely express themselves without the interjection of "Oh, wow," or a constant scattering of "You know." I am choosy. I give a warm, intelligent, mature woman in my own age group any time. One who's interesting, affectionate and fun to be with. Unfortunately, I've had no luck finding a woman my own age; they're either all socializing with each other, or they're completely occupied with their grand children.

DEAR SANFORD - My mail is running two to one in favor of the younger woman, but I'm coming to an opposing view:

DEAR DADDY - With your attitude, I'm surprised that you're not deluged with letters of all colors, shapes and sizes.

DEAR ABBY - Benjamin Franklin, in a letter to a young friend, pointed out the many advantages in taking an older woman for a mistress. To paraphrase Franklin, who reportedly was quite a man: "Older women are preferable to younger ones because they're more experienced, more discreet, there's no chance of children, women age from the neck down, and cats are gray in the dark, and lady- they're so grateful!"

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: To the lady who wondered why men in their 50s and 60s marry women in their 20s and 30s: Most men have not shopped for many wives, so they lack experience and expertise. Generally, they've had more experience shopping for cars.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps I can tell you why older men prefer younger women: I'm a widower, a college graduate, physically fit and financially well off. I enjoy dancing, skiing, tennis, golf, hiking, hunting, fishing, swimming, and the company of women.

More on transfer bidding

Similarly, the two-heart response shows spades and is a transfer to that suit. The transfer bid has several advantages. The first one is that the notrump bidder gets to play the hand with the opening lead. The first one is that the notrump bidder gets to play the hand with the opening lead. The first one is that the notrump bidder gets to play the hand with the opening lead.

With today's hand either North or South can make two hearts. Neither one is likely to make an overtrick. Although with South as declarer West might get off to a head start with that heart. The heart lead is not one of those leads. South is going to lose a trump, a diamond and three tricks in the black suits.
