Letters to the Editor

Thoughts

From time to time, we feel that the world is too much with us. The daily work we do seems a heavy, intolerable burden...

Modern, technological society often makes this difficult because of the factory division of labor and the divorce of the individual from the completion of the total product.

Almanac

By United Press-International Today is Jan. 27. The moon is approaching its new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn.

In 1964, Maine Sen. Margaret Smith announced her candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination. She was the first woman to seek the presidential nomination of a major American political party.

Town Administration Criticized

To the editor: I think the article Peg Martin had in the paper hit the nail on the head. Now I see Mr. Cummings says our taxes would go up three mills if it wasn't for HUD.

Andrew Tully

WASHINGTON - It's a catchy title: "Harvard Hates America." My review copy of the book arrived last October and I made a mental note to say something about it in print some day.

WASHINGTON - It's a catchy title: "Harvard Hates America." My review copy of the book arrived last October and I made a mental note to say something about it in print some day.

I think it is about time we got rid of Weiss. Look how he brought Wilbur Smith into town and put the firehouse in Buckland. Glanstonbury and Windsor Locks also refused HUD money. What do we need that Smith and Mason for?

And the young man is right. Increasingly, those in leadership positions are divorced from those they are supposed to lead.

Writes LeBoitellier: "When I inquired about the 'we' the instructor smiled. He said, 'The educated elite will run the government because we are better equipped, better able to determine the states' priorities.'"

Ordinarily, it's presumptuous to speak of morality because none of us is named God. But lack of that virtue in government officials and board rooms is one of the causes of the Republic's decay.

This Rings Bell And It Should

Death and Dying: Historical Perspectives

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of 15 articles exploring "Death and Dying: Challenge and Change." This series was written for Course by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Three and a half centuries is less than a moment in the span of human existence. In fact, for Americans, it is the entirety of our history.

Death, of course, has meaning not only to society, but to the individual as well. Among the Puritans this was especially so. For them life after death was, according to the minister Increase Sizer, potentially a place of "Everlasting Punishment" where they would "broil in that horrible fire of the wrath of God."

Deaths and Dying

In contrast, the Puritans' funerals finally became so elaborate and expensive that they, too, required controlling legislation - not to insure proper burial, but on the contrary to restrict extravagance at funerals lest families be impoverished by spending outlandish sums in honoring the dead.

eventual heavenly reward for even the holiest of earthly behavior was increasingly doubted by many - Americans, the clear alternative was to seek earthly gratification and to avoid thought of death altogether.

But life, too, was changing. The industrial and technological revolutions of the 19th and 20th centuries dramatically eroded the sense of self that any man or woman might feel.

Every segment of life - even leaving it - had been compartmentalized and turned over to specialists. From the cradle to the grave there was not a single major endeavor that could not be handled "better" - more smoothly and efficiently - by professionals.

Americans were thus lonely not only in cosmic terms, but in communal terms as well. And death, so long a part of the natural order of things, became an illogical, meaningless affront. It had to be banished. And it was.

The Author

David E. Stannard is associate professor of American studies and history at Yale University. The recipient of a John Simon Guggenheim fellowship for 1978-79, he is the editor of "Death in America" and author of "The Puritan Way of Death: A Study in Religion, Culture, and Social Change" and numerous articles on death and the family.

Questions

- 1. Why were burial laws often required in colonial America?
2. What was the purpose of Puritan funeral legislation?
3. What did most Puritans expect of their life in the next world?
4. Why did 19th century ministers feel compelled to invent reasons for people to stay alive?
5. How did industrial and technological revolutions change our experience with death?

Answers

- 1. To insure that bodies would not be left unattended.
2. To restrict the extravagance of funerals.
3. "Everlasting Punishment," and the horrible prospect of Hell.
4. Because the idea of death and its rewards had become so popular during this time.
5. They resulted in a loss of individuality and community and an increasing sense of cosmic loneliness.

Community Council Faces Juvenile Justice Issue

MANCHESTER - Juvenile justice, including the problems of runaways, school suspension, parental responsibility and the judicial process of handling youthful offenders was the top issue Manchester Community Services Council faced Thursday at its annual legislators' meeting.

Police Lt. Patricia Graves spoke of the problem of young people between 16 and 18 who leave home and even though the parents are financially responsible for them, the police can only try to find them and urge them to contact their parents.

She also asked for in-school suspension because she feels that school suspension is considered a reward by many youths. The present open campus presents problems for police, because when they see a youth walking the streets, they are not sure if he is legally in school or not. She advocated a bill to make parental responsibility unlimited for damage caused by their children's crimes to protect the victims.

"Crime is a social ill and to young people crime is a fantastic thing. Don't tell a kid that crime doesn't pay. A Rockville kid was making $275 a week selling marijuana. How can I tell him crime doesn't pay," John O'Dell, a probation officer said.

"We're creating a kind of monster with give-away programs. I'd rather give a kid money than find him a job at a gas station and tell the operator not to pay the kid, we will. Then the operator just lets the kid hang around, and destroys the youth's idea of what work is all about. In the 13 towns I cover, it's usually the influential kid that gets in trouble. Parents who are unable to tell what has happened," the probation officer said.

State Sen. David M. Barry, chairman of the special Juvenile Justice Commission, said his commission was split on whether a 14 year old should be transferable out of juvenile court to be treated as an adult, or should no age be mentioned in the bill.

"The sentiment (among his fellow legislators) is that the adult courts will treat juvenile cases more severely. I'm not sure that is the case," Barry said.

He called the proposals to transfer youths to the adult court "cosmetic," and "something to be thrown to the public so that they think we are doing something if an 11-year old can be transferred to adult court," he said.

If such a bill succeeds, youths accused of Class C felonies, which include armed robbery, assault on a police officer and thefts totaling more than $2000 will be placed in school districts are being asked to report to the General Assembly on how they can implement such a program in their schools, Barry said.

Other legislators attending the meeting were State Sen. Marcella Fahey and Rep. Walter Joyner.

The council also heard presentations on issues such as home-heating care, tenants' rights and education.

Lawyers Help Lawmakers Make Sense

By ANDREW NIBLEY
HARTFORD (UPI) - For more than a decade, Norma Kloten has had the unenviable task of turning lawmakers' ideas - sometimes submitted on scraps of paper - into bills that make enough sense to become laws.

This session, Mrs. Kloten, the director of Legislative Legal Services, and the 13 attorneys who work under her in the Legislative Commissioners Office face an avalanche of legislative proposals.

The count isn't final yet, but Mrs. Kloten says there'll be at least 3,500 bills to be drafted this year.

"We get anything from a bill with complete information to just a one-sentence statement of purpose," Mrs. Kloten said in an interview. "Sometimes, they (lawmakers) may just come in with an idea or something written on a scrap of paper."

Some have suggested Mrs. Kloten and her associates are the most powerful people in the legislative process because they draft the language of the laws.

"I wouldn't say it's power," Mrs. Kloten said with a laugh. "I call it creative writing. I mean we can't exactly put words in the legislator's mouth. We try to accomplish what he wants."

Currently, all legislative proposals are drafted by the Legislative Commissioners Office and then filed away in a computer for safekeeping. But it hasn't always been that way. In the old days, bills had to be typed up by an engrossing clerk. There's a story that floats around the Capitol about the late Bill Sheehan, a New York Times correspondent in the post-Prohibition days who had quite a reputation as a two-listed drinker.

At the story goes, Sheehan was rummaging through some proposed bills one day, while waiting for the engrossing clerk to finish his work so they could go to lunch.

Sheehan apparently stumbled upon a bill that would prevent package stores from selling liquor on Christmas and a number of other holidays.

It struck Sheehan odd that Connecti-ticut would close liquor stores on the day Christ was born, but not on the day he died. So the innovative reporter took out his pen and etched in Good Friday.

The bill went through the Legislature unscathed and ever since, Connecticut has had a law banning the sale of liquor on Good Fridays.

"Something like that could never happen today," Mrs. Kloten said, "because of the computers."

Mrs. Kloten, a West Hartford resident, has been working with the legislative commissioners since 1967 and she's seen a lot of changes in the legislative process.

"I think there's more participation by more legislators today. They're more active and better informed," she said. "When I first came here, there was a rather limited group of legislators who proposed bills."

Of the 3,500 or so bills that have or will be proposed this session, only about one in five will become law.

In it's kind of amusing to draft all those bills when so many of them will never see the light of day?

"It's part of the job," Mrs. Kloten said. "You might be sometimes. But actually, it's a very exciting and enjoyable job. It's productive work."

Unitarians Plan Talk on Society

MANCHESTER - The Rev. Arnold Westwood, minister of the Unitarian Universalist Society, East, will discuss "The Nutmeg Connections" Sunday at the Community Y, 78 N. Main St.

The minister, in his talk, will draw from a book by Don Watt, a charter member of the society, "From Heresy Toward Truth." The local society is building the last (for the moment) Unitarian Universalist church in the Nutmeg State. The Rev. Mr. Westwood will tell about some of the other ones in the state.

Trumpet music will be provided by Roland Chico and Curt Coolidge.

Stabler Not Helping Self in Latest Issue

By MILT RICHMAN
NEW YORK (UPI)—Here's the way I see the Kenny Stabler situation:

Without knowing whether he is or isn't involved in that amateriously contrived cocaine comic-opera in Gulf Shores, Ala., I do know he certainly isn't doing himself a whole lot of good with some of the statements he has been making.

When Stabler says the blame on Davis and the sports writers, he should bear in mind that he didn't throw the ball, he did it. He should also remember that when the Raiders were winning more regularly, it was he who received most of the credit and he readily accepted it. Now that they didn't have that good a season, he should be able to accept the criticism as well.

TV Dial-ogue

COLE SLAW - My sister and I are having an argument about a series Dennis Cole starred in. She says he never co-starred with Robert Vaughn. I say he never did. Can you tell me the name of the series and the star of the show that Dennis appeared in? - Kerry Adkins, Fairland, Ind.
Cole was always the bridesmaid and never the bride when it came to TV series. Among the performers he's supported are Howard Duff in "Felony Squad," an entire studio full of directors, starlets and moguls in "Bracken's World" and Rod Taylor and an antique car in "Stutz Bearcats." One person he never co-starred with is Robert Vaughn. Sis is probably thinking of another blond, David McCalmum in "The Man from U.N.C.L.E." As for Cole, he's still playing second fiddle - to Jaclyn Smith, now.
SKINNED - I recently viewed a fantastic movie entitled "Skin Game," starring James Garner and Lou Gossett. Could you please tell me what year the film was made? - GROWN KIDS - My husband and I have been having an argument about how long "All My Children" has been on the air. He says it has been less than 10 years, and I'm sure it's been more like 15 years. Could you please clear up our argument? - Lyane Steiner, Farh, B.C.

I'm beginning to feel like Solomon with all these controversies. The first bit of wisdom is never say you're sure when you're only counting on the probable odds being in your favor. According to ABC, the "Children" have been around since Jan. 5, 1970 - definitely less than 10 years.
(Send your questions to TV Dial-ogue, Pepper O'Brien, NEA, 280 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.)

HEY KIDS!

FILMETER

A capsule look at cinema

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

BRINK'S JOB, THE (PG) — Peter Falk, Peter Boyle, Gene Rowlands, Warren Oates. Crime. This is the recreation of the famous Boston armored car robbery, but if you want a rip-'em-up, cops-and-robbers film, stay home. Director William Friedkin plays this more for gentle humor and compassion. It works if you want that, but if you like action, this will bore you. GRADE: B.

CALIFORNIA SUITE (PG) — Jane Fonda, Alan Alda, Maggie Smith, Michael Caine, Walter Matthau. Comedy and drama. Neil Simon's play, like his "Plaza Suite," is a group of stories united only by the fact that they all take place in one hotel — this time, The Beverly Hills Hotel. Director Herb Ross is much more successful with the dramatic stories than with the comedies, which become embarrassing. Fonda and Smith are superb. GRADE: A (for the dramas), C (for the comedies) and, thus, B (overall).

DEER HUNTER (R) — Robert DeNiro, John Cazale, John Savage, Meryl Streep, Christopher Walken. Drama. This is a powerful, memorable look at three Pennsylvania steel workers who go off to fight in Vietnam. Director Michael Cimino has created images you may never forget. It is too long and some of it is forced, but it remains a classic film. GRADE: A.

INVASION OF THE BODY SNATCHERS (PG) — Donald Sutherland, Brooke Adams, Leonard Nimoy. Science fiction/horror. A remake — really a sequel — of the classic 1956 film. For once, a remake (or sequel) is as good as the original. This is a totally scary, but very logical and intelligent, story, and done with great taste and skill. GRADE: A.

LORD OF THE RINGS (PG) — Animated fantasy. J.R.R. Tolkien's works come to the screen, animated by Ralph Bakshi of "Fritz the Cat" fame. If you are familiar with Tolkien's creations — hobbits, black horsemen and the rest — this could be exciting. But if you're not, it's gibberish. The art work is beautiful, but the story is impossible for aliens to follow. And Caution — animated or not, it is so violent that it's not for kids. GRADE: B for Tolkien fans; D for the rest of us.

MOMENT BY MOMENT (R) — Lily Tomlin, John Travolta. Romance. "Hour By Hour" would be a better title, because this seems endless. It is the old cliché of the rich lady and the young, brash kid. It proceeds at a snail's pace and even the snail is bored. Poorly acted (except by Travolta) and directed. GRADE: C-minus.

MOVIE, MOVIE (G) — George C. Scott, Trish VanDevere, Red Buttons. Comedy, musical. Double-bill salute-cum-spoof of '30s and '40s fight films and musicals that has it all down pat, right down to the last cliché. You can still get the real thing on the late show, but this is worth a few chuckles and a tap dance down memory lane. GRADE: B. (O'Brien)

OLIVER'S STORY (PG) — Ryan O'Neal, Candice Bergen, Ray Milland. Romantic drama. This glibly written sequel to "Love Story" has a warm performance by Candice Bergen. But the plight of two rich young lovers does not tend to conjure up depth of feeling. A film with not much on its mind. GRADE: C. (Miller)

SUPERMAN (PG) — Christopher Reeve, Gene Hackman, Ned Beatty, Jackie Cooper, Margot Kidder, Valerie Perrine, Marion Brando. Adventure. Big, lavish, expensive — and designed just for fun and frolic. This story of Superman's arrival on Earth and his first anti-crime campaigns starts slowly but closes with a rush. And it is all done tongue-in-cheek, so that the whole family can find something to enjoy in it. It's not art, but it sure is entertainment. GRADE: B-plus.

TV Dial-ogue

DANDY DON — I would greatly appreciate any information you can give me on actor Don Stroud. I am very interested in his past credits, fan club and future endeavors (besides the recently filmed "Amityville Horror"). He is my favorite. R.S., Toms River, N.J.

The 41-year-old actor played his first in a long line of villains in "Games," released in 1967. It was followed by "Madigan," "What's So Bad About Feeling Good?," "Coogan's Bluff," "Bloody Mama," "Live a Little, Steal a Lot," "Von Richtofen and Brown," "Joe Kidd," "Scalawag," etc., as well as a host of TV series guest shots and TV movies. This year Stroud got to play a good guy (for the most part) as one of the Crickets in "The Buddy Holly Story." Besides "Amityville Horror," he's completed shooting on a Vietnam War film, which should be released in '79. He has no fan club that I'm aware of.

Handsome Anatol (Henry Price) seduces the shy Erika (Katherine Ciesinski) in the American opera "Vanessa," airing on great performances, Wednesday, January 31, on PBS.

An American Opera

The very first collaboration of Samuel Barber and Gian Carlo Menotti is the Pulitzer Prize-winning opera, "Vanessa." It airs Wednesday, Jan. 31 (check local listings) over PBS's "Great Performances" series.

"Vanessa," taped before a capacity audience at the 1978 Spoleto Festival, U.S.A., is a penetrating tale of a morbid love triangle, marked with unrequited love and loneliness.

For 20 years, Vanessa (Johanna Meier) has waited for her lover to return. She maintains her silent vigil in a castle nestled in the somber Scandinavian countryside; the time is 1905.

Her mother, an old and embittered woman, and shy, oppressed niece Erika (Katherine Ciesinski) share Vanessa's life and reflect her despair.

At last, a handsome young man, Anatol (Henry Price) appears. Vanessa is shocked when she realized that this isn't the man for whom she has waited so long. She orders him from her sight; her shock is compounded with the realization that Anatol is the son of her now-dead lover.

Young Erika falls prey to Anatol, although he quickly dismisses her in favor of her much older Aunt Vanessa, whom he promptly marries. Vanessa, now buoyant, leaves her estate to Erika, whose time of silent waiting has arrived.

Base stations: luxury for CBers

By Ink Dipper

It's nice to call home and tell your wife what the status of traffic is, or to find out what's on the stove for dinner. That's one of the great advantages of having a base station at home, though only about one in five CBers enjoy this easily accessible luxury.

Ed Safford, a Houston expert on electronic subjects, has written a book that CBers will find informative: "The CBer's Handy Manual of Base Stations" (TAB). It's short, only 96 pages, and to the point.

"The base station is at home in the garage, in the attic, in the cellar, or inside a closet ... even under the sink," he says. "It becomes a part of the CB system no matter where you install it." An important aspect of Safford's book is that it gives considerable advice on rooftop antennas and some unusual ways in which the mobile CB and the base station can be used jointly.

"A base station is a somewhat larger piece of gear than a mobile," he explains, "but it isn't cumbersome and it looks a little like a stereo.

It is designed to operate from the regular wall socket and can be left on for hours each day, just like a light bulb. Most important, its receiver can constantly monitor any channel you choose."

Safford points out that you can adjust the squelch control so that there will be no noise on the station until a call comes in on the monitored channel.

"Most couples agree that they will call and receive calls on a particular channel," he said in a recent interview. "Then, when he calls, you will hear him clearly when he gets close enough to home. Sometimes, in remote areas, such as on farms and ranches, base stations are used as both ends of the communications link between several callers."

Other features of a base station involve a telephone patch, a selective calling system, and a noise-limiter. Safford explains that, with a telephone patch, you can be talking to a mobile, dial a number on your telephone for the mobile, then patch the mobile in so that the mobile and the person called can converse.

"Selective dialing is used

No examination is required to operate a base station.

with some radio equipment which permits a mobile station to dial certain tones and unlock a receiving station so it will take your call," explains Safford.

"If the proper sequence of tones is not sent, the base will not respond. I think it's a great way to reach home when a need arises without having to keep the home base unit turned on all the time."

For your information, no examination is required to operate a base station. You only have to fill out the form provided by the manufacturer when you purchase the You're right if you've spotted "collegiate" as a trend for the incoming winter-spring series. Every network has one.

But you are wrong, wrong, wrong says production executive Martin Ransohoff if you tag his "Co-Ed Fever" (premiering Feb. 19 on CBS) as another ripoff of "Animal House," which is piling up box-office gold at theaters around the country.

Explains Ransohoff, "I ripped it off — and just the bare theme — from my son Steven. Its situation comedy, not farce, and though it's funny, there's also truth to it.

"Animal House," only came out last April. I've been developing my concept since the fall of 1976 and delivered it to CBS in 1977."

And the theme? "Steven was one of the first males admitted to Vassar. My mother had gone there. My ex-wife (Steven's mother) and my daughter went to Mt. Holyoke. So I began to wonder what happens when these old gothic women's colleges go co-ed."

"And another thing, I insisted on unknown young actors. I don't want any 35-year-old freshmen. The female lead, Alexa Kanin, is just turning 17. The three young men are 21. One of them, by the way, is Ed Nelson's son, Chris.

And what about Ransohoff's son Steven? Didn't he want to take a crack at co-starring in "Co-Ed Fever" since his trail-blazing inspired it?

"No." Dad insists. "Acting holds no interest for him. He's pre-law. And his twin brother, who's at Bowdoin, is pre-med."

Sybill, the first ex-wife of Richard Burton, and her present hubby, Jordan Christopher, have trekked to Hollywood because that's where their kind of work abounds. And in the process they put their spacious Central Park West apartment up for sublease. None other than Marlo Thomas — who says her commitments will keep her in the East for some months — is the winning tenant.

Marlo brought along her own accessories to personalize an already cozy living room. She uses the oversized dining table as a work surface and has covered it with an antique patchwork quilt. Then she's garnished it at spots with jars of candy nibbles. Presumably just for guests? Her slim shape indicates she never touches the stuff herself.

station and send it to the Federal Communication Commission. You will be granted a temporary license immediately after purchase to use while your permanent license is being sent to you. So, it's painless.

Safford says it doesn't make any difference whether you construct your own antenna or buy one and assemble it. "They've both got to be put in place in the location that's best, and they have to be tuned and adjusted for the best coverage and clarity. This is most important."

Safford's book does a good job of describing the technical aspects of antennas as well as finding the best base station for your needs. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
