

Library Disparity Claimed

HARTFORD (UPI)—The kind of educational discrimination that upset the state Supreme court so much is not just a classroom phenomenon. It's happening in Connecticut libraries too.

State Librarian John Funk says there's an "enormous disparity" between the materials and services offered by the 234 public libraries around Connecticut.

In the affluent "Gold Coast" suburbs of Fairfield County, most public libraries stay open six days a week and offer a wide variety of educational services and programs. "It would be nice, but wholly impractical, to bring the rest of the state up to that level," Funk said in a recent interview.

But Funk said something should be done about the other extreme libraries in dilapidated inner-cities and in tiny, backroad rural communities.

"Quite often, we run across a situation where a library is only open two or three days a week and then, only for a couple of hours," Funk said.

Two years ago, the Supreme Court declared Connecticut's system of funding education unconstitutional because it relied too heavily on local property taxes.

The problem, in the high court's mind, was that kids in rich communities were receiving better educational opportunities than children in property-poor towns.

The library system has the same problem as the schools. Rich towns have nice libraries. Poor towns have miserable libraries.

Funk and a number of politicians believe part of the Supreme Court's decision could be met if the state agreed to upgrade the quality of some of its public libraries.

Rep. Gail Orcutt, D-New Haven, has submitted a bill that would require the state to mandate a minimum acceptable level of library service. The state would have to provide the money to see that the standard was met.

Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York have similar laws in effect.

Right now, municipalities collectively spend about $18 million on public libraries. The state and the federal government kick in another $2 million.

"Of course, we're talking about the sky. We're not talking about the road," Funk said. "We're also talking today's dollars and tomorrow's ideals."

Funk's dream of an equitable library system went much help from Gov. Ella Grasso this year. She's recommended cutting the state's library budget by 4.5 percent.

"I am hoping the Legislature will be more generous than the governor's budget department," Funk said. "But I have my doubts."

Group Claims Pac Promoting Highways

HARTFORD (UPI)—A group of environmentalists see Stanley Pac as less than an advocate for clean air. They believe the environmental protection commissioner is promoting highways rather than preventing pollution.

Not so, said Pac at an emotionally charged meeting Thursday with a coalition of anti-highway representatives in the commissioner's office.

The environmentalists said they wanted Pac to clarify "an inconsistency of statements" attributed to him on highway construction in the state.

The group accused Pac of favoring highway building over the impact of such construction on Connecticut's air quality.

Pac denied it and said his job was not as simple as either side thinks it should be.

Several representatives from the construction industry showed up at the meeting and Pac had to verbally separate individuals during several heated exchanges.

Julie Mannarino, of the Connecticut Citizen Action Group, asked Pac to tell William Heaton of the Connecticut Construction Industries Association "to shut up."

Ms. Mannarino told Pac that published statements attributed to him show "a contradiction in your department between building highways and keeping the air clean."

She accused Pac of "continuing the myth that the more highways we build the less pollution we'll have."

The coalition said Pac was inclined to build highways such as Interstate 84 in eastern Connecticut, and Interstate 291 and Route 7 in western Connecticut on behalf of special interest groups.

Chiff Noll of the Connecticut Committee of Correspondence told Pac he has approved the construction of Interstate 84, despite a Department of Transportation study that said the highway would increase pollution from 4 percent to 7 percent.

The report also said there is no adequate mass transit plan to accommodate the increased local traffic flow that would be created. Noll said.

Night Security Suggested For New Treatment Plant

By BARBARA RICHMOND
HERALD Reporter
VERNON—Charles Pitkat, superintendent of the sewer treatment plant, plans to ask the Town Council at its meeting Monday night to consider hiring night watchmen for the new treatment plant.

Pitkat said he is experiencing problems with many of the items in service at the plant. He said this is normal in any startup and especially difficult to handle when a new plant and an old plant have to be integrated for startup.

He said the plant is being operated now in two separate modes. One is strictly activated sludge and the other is activated sludge and carbon mixed slurry. He said in order to remove the sludge from the primary system there is a temporary connection between the new plant and the

Lannan Sees 911 Phone Possibility by April 1

MANCHESTER—The town could have its 911 emergency telephone system in operation by April 1, Police Chief Robert Lannan said Thursday night.

A member of the Town Board of Directors, however, said he would be pleased to have the system working by June.

Lannan and others attended Thursday's meeting of the subcommittee of the Boards of Directors of the town and the Eighth Utilities District to discuss the 911 system.

The phone system would permit Manchester to dial 911 in case of emergency. The caller would be placed in contact with a dispatcher who would notify the appropriate department of the emergency.

The system could be in operation by April, Lannan said, though he would be pleased to see the system working by June.

Another town director, John FitzPatrick, said that the April date might be optimistic. The Board of Directors will discuss the proposed system at its meeting next week.

The members asked Lannan to prepare more definitive cost estimates for the system in time for the board's March meeting.

Lannan Thursday gave an approximate figure of $20,000 for most of the initial costs related to establishing the system. This would be primarily for radio and wiring equipment needed to set up the 911 operation.

Lt. James Sweeney of the Manchester Police Department said that studies have shown the 911 system saves from 20 seconds to one minute in response time to emergencies.

Lannan also talked about some of the problems involved in installation of the system in Manchester. He said some surrounding communities are part of the Manchester telephone exchange, so some of its residents might dial the 911 number even though the system would service only Manchester.

A system would have to be established that would permit Manchester to transfer such calls to the proper out-of-town department, Lannan said.

"Certainly, no matter who called, we would take care of the emergency first and ask questions later," FitzPatrick said.

Lannan expects that someday a 911 system will be required for all communities. Now, only some have such a system.

He thinks Manchester should establish its own system now and "tailor it to our own needs" rather than wait and be mandated to set up a specific type of system.

The residents said they have serious problems with their sewage systems. They said they are located in a valley and when there is any amount of rain their shrubs get washed away and their basements have water in them.

John Linderman, representing the residents, said they are concerned with the lack of progress with having the contract, known as Contract 19, let. He said the residents filed a petition three years ago and it was initiated the project would get going last spring, and then in the fall and now it's approaching another building season.

He said some of the easements have been signed but the contract can't be let until the rest of them are taken care of. He asked the authority what it was going to do about this.

Belanger said that back in October of November the authority set a schedule which had Contract 19 ready to go to bid by Feb. 1 and the town attorney was asked to press on with getting the easements.

A Richard Lombardi, engineer for the sewer projects, said he has discussed the matter of easements with the people involved and some problems have been resolved.

Lombardi said that a sticky problem in the condemnation procedure may be the railroad right-of-way which is owned by the state. He said as soon as the last easement is granted the project could get underway in two or three months.

Belanger said that no federal funds are involved in Project 19 so the project can proceed as soon as the town is ready.

Linderman asked if no federal funds are involved would this mean it will cost the property owners more per foot.

Belanger said four projects are being worked on at this time and two have received approval for federal funding and two haven't. He said, however, that the four will be handled as a unit and the funds will be shared.

Linderman emphasized the urgency of the project noting that almost raw sewage is going into Ogden Brook because of the wet conditions in the area.

Sewer Condemnation Possible If Easements Not Obtained

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter
VERNON—The Water Pollution Control Authority, formerly the Sewer Authority, has taken a rather strong position to go to condemnation if it has trouble getting easements for sewer installation projects.

Joseph Belanger, chairman of the authority said Thursday night.

The authority members listened to residents of the Troutstream, Deerfield, and Tumblebrook drive areas who have been waiting for sewers for some three years.

The residents said they have serious problems with their sewage systems. They said they are located in a valley and when there is any amount of rain their shrubs get washed away and their basements have water in them.

Patty, Fiance Reunited, Couple Goes into Hiding

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Patricia Hearst was in hiding again today, but for the first time in five years she was neither a prisoner nor a fugitive.

This time only the privacy of the 24-year-old newspaper heiress was at stake. Her companions were her fiance and family friends and her major worry was planning her wedding.

Miss Hearst walked out of prison Thursday hand-in-hand with her fiance, Policeman Bernard Shaw. She grinned and waved the presidential commutation that set her free after 22 months at the Federal Correctional Institution at Pleasanton across San Francisco Bay.

"I'm really happy to be going home," she said. Miss Hearst, Shaw, 30, who is divorced and the father of two children, and her attorney, George Martinec, went to the home of her mother in Hillsborough where they had a reunion breakfast before leaving for an undisclosed location. Miss Hearst said she would be in today, but for the first time in five years she was neither a prisoner nor a fugitive.

Researchers Like ROTC Program

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER—The coordinator of a federally funded research project during a visit to the Regional Occupational Training Center Thursday said that he has become more and more interested in the contents of the ROTC and other similar programs at the result of on-site tours.

William D. Barley told a staff member at the ROTC that although the main thrust of the national research project was to study the relationships of the vocational rehabilitation programs to other state agencies, he has become more interested in the actual contents of the programs.

Barley and Elinor Gollay, project consultant, toured the ROTC building with Norman Fendell, director of the center. They stopped to watch the various vocational classes in operation and ask the teachers questions.

For example, in the woodworking shop, instructor Steve Rascher described how the students building utility sheds prepares them to be carpenters. Barley said that the ROTC needs to contact organizations for which they do cabinet and other woodworking projects. Rascher told them, "No, they come to us."

Dr. Gollay said that the research project, funded by the Rehabilitation Services Administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, was looking for programs particularly outstanding in quality of occupational preparation to high school students.

The project researchers were also interested in the cooperative relationship of the training facility with many outside agencies such as special education, vocational education, and the community college.

She said the Manchester facility was chosen partially because it has a wide base of support.

The ROTC is one of 11 programs throughout the nation which was chosen by a panel of experts in vocational rehabilitation. The idea of the project, Ms. Gollay said, is to end up with information which will help in setting up new programs in local communities.

The 11 facilities which were chosen reflect different approaches to the vocational rehabilitation field, she said. The researchers hope to get a number of good ideas from them and identify models for other communities to use.

Ms. Gollay said vocational rehabilitation is an area which is getting a lot more attention nationwide, but still is on the federal level. The federal agencies, "don't seem to know who should be contributing to what part of the program," she said. It leaves the local schools with an "onerous job," she added.

The ROTC program has been going on long enough, Ms. Gollay said, to serve as a study on how the program has obtained various grants and funding. The grants for special education and vocational programs are constantly shifting, Ms. Gollay said.

Dr. Gollay said that the ROTC program, which serves 100 students in 17 area towns, has been able to be creative in its programs and sources of funding because it is not under the strict state control of other institutions such as Mansfield Training Center.

The project workers are at the Research and Training Center in Mental Retardation in Lubbock, Texas. They were continuing their research with a visit to the ROTC center at the Manchester Senior Citizens Center where the students serve a noon meal, Green Lodge, where the students have recreation program with the elderly residents and discussions with staff.

Representatives of the parents association for the special education students, from the state vocational rehabilitation programs, the architect of the school, the superintendent of schools and Manchester Community College staff were also to meet with the researchers Friday.

Court Sets Sunday Law Arguments

HARTFORD (UPI)—The Connecticut Supreme Court will begin hearing oral arguments on the constitutionality of the state's controversial Sunday closing law on Feb. 13, a court official said Thursday.

Court Clerk Thomas Abraham also said "friend of the court" status has been granted to state Attorney General Carl Ajello and a representative of G. Fox and Macy's department stores.

On Nov. 13, New Haven Superior Court Judge Nicholas Claffi declared the state's "blue law" unconstitutional. Four stores appealed the decision to the Supreme Court. The state later joined the appeal.

In an eight-page decision, Claffi ruled the common day of rest statute, as amended, violated the state's constitution. He said the Legislature last spring "does not conform to constitutional standards."

Claffi said there were so many exemptions in the statute that only about 425,000 of the state's 3.5 million workers were able to take off the weekly day of rest. The law had intended to guarantee the labor force. Despite Claffi's ruling, Chief State's Attorney Austin McQuigan ordered state and local authorities to crack down on merchants who defied the statute, while the appeal to the high court was pending.

However, enforcement was so sporadic and inconsistent that G. Fox and Macy's were among a number of merchants who went to court successfully seeking injunctions barring its enforcement.

Later, a pair of Superior Court judges ruled McQuigan could no longer have merchants arrested for staying open Sundays.

Although no one seems to know exactly why the common day of rest statute has come to be known as the "blue law," there are a number of likely explanations.

One is that they were originally bound in blue paper; another says it was because they were written by the colonists on blue paper; or perhaps because blue was a color associated with the still-remembered Puritans who held the reins of power in the colony.

Under the law struck down by Claffi, small stores with less than 5,000 square feet, drug stores or businesses owned by individuals who worship the Sabbath on a day other than Sunday, shops providing essential services, theaters, gas stations, restaurants and businesses with less than five employees.

The law included a provision that allowed all stores to stay open on the Sundays between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

It was Connecticut's third attempt at a constitutional blue law. In 1975, a lower court judge struck down a similar law, saying it was vague and arbitrary. The Legislature passed a new Sunday closing law, but that was also quickly declared unconstitutional by another court judge.

The scholarships are awarded on the basis of merit, to students who will be college juniors in the forthcoming academic year and have an outstanding potential for leadership in government. Each scholarship covers eligible expenses for tuition and fees, books, and room and board, to a maximum of $5,000 annually for as many as four years.

Supreme Court to Hear Blue Law Case

HARTFORD (UPI)—The constitutionality of Connecticut's on-again-off-again Sunday closing law will be tested in the state Supreme Court this week.

A "friend of the court" status has been granted to state Attorney General Carl Ajello and a representative of G. Fox and Macy's department stores. Court Clerk Thomas Abraham said Thursday.

On Nov. 13, New Haven Superior Court Judge Nicholas Claffi struck down the state's "blue law" which forbids most businesses from operating on Sundays.

Claffi said there were so many exemptions in the statute that only about 425,000 of the state's 3.5 million workers were able to take off the weekly day of rest. The law had intended to guarantee the labor force.

Despite Claffi's ruling, Chief State's Attorney Austin McQuigan ordered state and local authorities to crack down on merchants who defied the statute while the appeal to the high court was pending.

However, enforcement was so sporadic and inconsistent that G. Fox and Macy's were among a number of merchants who went to court successfully seeking injunctions barring its enforcement.

Later, a pair of Superior Court judges ruled McQuigan could no longer have merchants arrested for staying open Sundays.

Although no one seems to know exactly why the common day of rest statute has come to be known as the "blue law," there are a number of likely explanations.

One is that they were originally bound in blue paper; another says it was because they were written by the colonists on blue paper; or perhaps because blue was a color associated with the still-remembered Puritans who held the reins of power in the colony.

Under the law struck down by Claffi, small stores with less than 5,000 square feet, drug stores or businesses owned by individuals who worship the Sabbath on a day other than Sunday, shops providing essential services, theaters, gas stations, restaurants and businesses with less than five employees.

The law included a provision that allowed all stores to stay open on the Sundays between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

It was Connecticut's third attempt at a constitutional blue law. In 1975, a lower court judge struck down a similar law, saying it was vague and arbitrary. The Legislature passed a new Sunday closing law, but that was also quickly declared unconstitutional by another court judge.

Robert W. Bryce, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bryce of 12 Irving St., Manchester, has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at New Hampshire College.

HUD Opponents Like Blackstone's Stand

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD—Manchester is in the midst of a debate about town participation in the federal Community Development program, and some opponents of that program are pointing to East Hartford's mayor as an absentee hero.

They admire the stand Richard Blackstone has taken against federal requirements—a stand that has led to East Hartford not receiving past Community Development funds. Manchester residents have said they would like such a position taken by their town officials.

Blackstone has opposed figures proposed by the federal government for low-income housing and expected-to-reside totals in East Hartford. Such figures are part of the application for the Community Development program.

He has said the federal numbers are too high. That stand recently drew criticism from members of the East Hartford Citizens Action Group (EHCAG). President Alvin Lewis said, "Mayor Blackstone and the town administration are not amenable to poor people."

Member Patricia Totten said, "What he (Blackstone) is saying to us is 'We don't want more poor people and they don't want to come here anyway.' But that's not true."

Despite the EHCAG criticism, Blackstone believes his stand is a popular one among residents in his town, and he also feels the loss of past Community Development funds has not hindered his community.

Some Manchester residents are seeking a two-year ban on town participation in the Community Development program. They have said federal requirements to receive the funding are too restrictive.

Blackstone has never sought such a ban. He has said the federal numbers are too high. That stand recently drew criticism from members of the East Hartford Citizens Action Group (EHCAG).

Former Peace Corps Director Lectures at UConn on Feb. 8

The first woman, who also was the first black person, to serve as director of the Peace Corps, will deliver a free public lecture Feb. 8 at the University of Connecticut.

Dr. Carolyn R. Payton, a psychologist, will participate in the first of a series of colloquia titled, "The Family and the State: Crosscultural Comparisons." The former Peace Corps director, who speaks at 3:30 p.m. in Room 203 of the H.R. Menthel Building, will discuss "Women and Development."

Prior to her appointment by President Carter as director of the Peace Corps, Payton was a faculty member in psychology at Howard University. She also served as a Peace Corps country director in the eastern Caribbean from 1966-1969.

The following day, Feb. 9, Payton will participate in a reception for former Peace Corps volunteers in Room 187 (Faculty lounge) of the Psychology Building from 4 to 6 p.m.

The UofC University's Studies Program is coordinating the series and co-sponsoring this lecture with the UofC Department of Psychology and the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology.

Other sponsors of the series include the university's departments of Anthropology, Human Development and Family Relations, Political Science, and Sociology; the UofC Undergraduate International Studies Program, and the American University Field Service Committee.

Guidance Counselors Scheduled to Retire

This Wednesday marked the conclusion of more than forty years of service by two of MHS's guidance counselors. Mrs. Grace Kunz and Mr. Donald Brooks.

Mrs. Kunz began working at the high school when it first opened in 1936. She was initially in the Social Studies and business departments, and was manager of the yearbook for a few years.

Mrs. Kunz was instrumental in organizing and starting the Alternated Education Program at MHS, and was also responsible for tutoring services

Tests Examined

Among the "Manchester High News" to be found in last week's World was a short, two-paragraph article lamenting the decline and fall of exam exemption, that is, excusal from semester exams contingent on an "A" average for underclassmen and a "B" average for seniors. I am sure that the author had nothing but good intentions in mind when he wrote the piece, but his choice of words leaves much to be desired. There are also significant flaws in his proposal that I am certain he didn't consider.

First of all, the purpose of midterms and finals is not torture, but to see how much you retain over the course of a semester. Second, exams are mandatory at most colleges and universities. Exam exemption is unheard of, and a course's final examination is often the only basis for a grade in that course.

A student accustomed to previewing a semester's worth of material for comprehensive exams at high school will be a severe disadvantage at college.

Students with A's and B's in their courses, in fact, probably benefit more from midterms and finals than do average students.

Students Enter Contest

Manchester High's creative ability has once again been put to the test. January 12th marked the deadline for interested students to submit their creative writing to the annual Connecticut Regional Scholastic Creative Writing Contest.

This contest is conducted nationally by Scholastic Magazine and sponsored by the Hartford Courant. In addition to the writing section of the contest, the program also includes art and photography awards.

The contest consists of a junior and senior division, made up of 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th, 11th, and 12th grades respectively.

The categories that applicants have to choose from are short story, short-short story, poetry, article, humor, dramatic script, and original song. Although each category has certain rules to follow, such as the number of words or lines, or performance time in the case of the song, the topics for writing within each category are unlimited.

The judging for the contest is done by a panel of judges consisting of authors, educators, and editors. Articles are read twice by each judge. They then decide for which writing should be passed on to further judging according to originality and quality of expression in the article.

Manchester High School was able to submit a total of one hundred pieces of writing. A limit of five entries per grade level was set for the contest and MHS has twenty English teachers on its staff. For those teachers whose total number of entries exceeded the limit, their extra entries were given to teachers having less than five.

Manchester High School has an established record of doing well overall in this writing contest. Last year eleven prizes were awarded to MHS students, the largest number awarded to any school in Connecticut.

In fact MHS has led the list of the number of awards going to any one school, public or parochial, since 1970. The poetry category has in the past produced the most winners for Manchester High.

Winners for the contest will be announced in late February. An awards ceremony is held for those that receive prizes, at the University of Hartford. Hopefully several MHS students will be there to receive awards for their entries. And with the prominent reputation of quality writing at Manchester High School has established, it is almost guaranteed to once again receive the greatest number of awards for its creative talent. — Joanne Weiss

Violence Questioned

In our times, with soaring crime rates, and the ignoring of aggressive acts, the statement "America is a violent nation, born of violence, bred by violence, and it will perish by violence, unless there are necessary changes," is quite valid. Many factors contribute to this problem, and there is no simple solution.

We must first deal with the fact that society teaches us that violence is acceptable. It is dictated to us through both positive and negative rewards, that there is nothing wrong with being violent.

Our childhood years are the years when we are the most impressionable. The largest contributors to our violent attitudes and actions are our parents.

In everything we do as children we are trying to imitate our parents. This is how we learn constructive things, such as walking and talking, but it is also where we see destructive violent actions. Naturally if we see our parents yelling at each other we interpret this as an acceptable action.

Since we imitate our parents so closely, if we see them hitting us, their children, we assume that this is the right thing to do. Many confessed child-beaters had parents who beat them.

In addition to the information about violence from our parents, we obtain many of our condoning attitudes toward violence through sports. We admire the aggressive players, and most especially the winners, no matter how the winners win.

In watching a football game, we cheer when someone gets tackled "good and hard." Many people spend money to watch daredevils like Evel Knievel jump over perilous obstacles, in hopes that something goes wrong. We encourage winning, at almost all costs.

In a somewhat similar manner the news media teaches us to accept violence. In the presentation of the news, television dehumanizes rape, murder, assault, and other such violent crimes. If we hear, for example, that forty people died from the explosion of a fire bomb in Northern Ireland, it has little effect on us. Not only does this happen in regard to news from other countries, it happens when we hear that five people died in a hit-and-run car accident. Somehow the media has convinced us that these violent acts don't really happen.

Besides the news media, television programs show us violence as a desirable, acceptable behavior. The television aimed at children, cartoons, are very violent.

In these cartoons the characters are able to hold bombs that are exploding, or fall off of one thousand foot cliffs without getting hurt.

Private Label Items Leading Revolution

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—There's a revolution afoot at the retail level of business—more and more big chains are offering health and beauty aids under private labels at reduced prices.

The consumer, hit by inflation, is trying to stretch the household budget and has become more price-conscious than ever.

The quality of the private label item is as good or better than the same national brand which must sell at a higher price due to the cost of advertising.

The man who offers these conclusions is Lawrence Weisberg, president of Iodent Company, which he said, is the largest independent manufacturer of private labels.

"Hypothetically," he said, "take an item that sells under a national brand and at $1. You can sell the same item—totally equivalent—under a private label at 60 cents."

"For national brands, one-third to 60 percent of the sales dollar is spent in advertising. I know of one big company that has spent $15 million to market a new shampoo. This is an item that sells for $1.50. How long will it take them to break even?"

Weisberg, 54, Chicago-born, began his business career as an accountant after graduation from the University of Illinois. He went to Iodent as controller in the early 1950s and 13 years later became president. He is now a merchandiser on the wholesale level and does a lot of traveling to drum up business and visit Iodent plants at Elizabethton, Tenn., and Walnut, Calif., near Los Angeles. The company is headquartered at Bloomfield Hills, near Detroit, where Weisberg makes his home. A result of expanding business, another plant is under construction at Hightstown, N.J.

Iodent has its own laboratories to make sure the private brand products measure up to the nationally advertised brands and also uses independent laboratories to double-check quality.

"The consumer must have faith in the private brand or she will not buy" he said.

Exams Over But...

If you are a student, you are most likely relieved because the dreaded exams are finally over and done with. This feeling of absolute complacency is quickly swept from your mind as your thoughts turn to the ominous results of the read exams.

You cringe, and your body shivers when you think of how you did in relation to how you could have done. Your mind fills with "if only's"; "if only I had studied more for this and less for that," "if only I had paid attention the first day of school," "if only I hadn't taken this class in the first place," "if only I had dropped out and taken Mr. Brown up on that offer to shovel coal manure full time," "if only..."

Face it—if some of those thoughts had been running through your head, you're afflicted. You've got the second semester blues. The fact is, you didn't study enough! You didn't pay attention to Mr. Brown when he said to take that class! The blues are curable, but you must face reality, hard as it may be. You are here in Manchester, City of Villains in Charms. You are attending high school, and you've still got quite a ways to go before you can sit down and relax.

If you're still not sure whether you've got the "blues" or not, you might ask yourself the following questions: Is my head filled with regrets and remorse? Has depression set in yet? Do I feel drained—physically, emotionally, and mentally?

Do I feel like giving up and dropping out?

Now matter how great the pressure feels, you shouldn't throw the towel in yet. A second chance remains for each and every one of you. Sure, it's all too easy to give up. Just call it a year. Seniors did this long ago. Hopefully, however, you're feeling a bit of panic, which can also be known as "motivation."

The year is half over! The first semester ended last Friday. If you are college-bound junior, then you have less than ninety days to get those grades up and heighten your chances of actually being "college-bound" come this time next year... you'd better get to work.

Fortunately, your still time, and it will really look impressive to MIT and Harvard when they see how your grades just skyrocketed at the end of your junior year. "What a tremendous capacity for improvement this student has! What motivation!" So hit the books, juniors—you're too young to give up now.

The seniors are a different case altogether. This group of MHS "elite" can easily be recognized by any stranger who chances to walk down the hall. Now that the first semester is over, they no longer carry books (no magazines).

Occasionally one or two of the more studious twelfth-graders will be seen clutching a pen or pencil, trying to remember how to use it correctly, but this is usually accompanied by a word-search or a crossword puzzle in the other hand. Well, I have news for the seniors. They haven't graduated yet, although they seem to think they have. Physically, they're still attending Manchester High, but mentally... well...

Lastly, (no insult intended) there are the sophomores. Luckily for them, their grades this year are not weighed heavily by colleges and/or prospective employers. Youth is on their side. If all else fails, they can easily fall back on the standard sophomore excuse for poor grades—"they're still adjusting to life at the high school!" Some juniors and seniors seem to utilize this excuse throughout their sordid high school careers, not to mention later on in college. Oh, well, everyone's different. Some people just take longer to adjust.

At any rate, the second semester stretches out before you, like a clean slate. You're not down the homestretch yet. Time still remains to better yourself, if that's any consolation (I expect that's not). This goes for seniors, also.

A little cultural improvement never hurt anyone. Give it a try!—Patty Shirer

Thespians Preparing

The International Thespian Society is planning a very active season this year.

The group, formed of qualified theatre enthusiasts, is at present working on two projects.

The first is the traditional dental play that tours elementary schools. This year two plays have been presented in mid-February. It is designed to promote Dental Health Week, and relay the importance of good dental habits.

The second project, which is still in the planning stages, is a Thespian sponsored production at Hilling Jr. High. Hilling is without a drama club this year and "Thespians" has offered to provide for the need.

The play selected is called "Meet Me in St. Louis," and will be directed by Randeef Trabitz. Thespians plan to furnish leadership for technical crews that will inspire Jr. High participation. — Randeef Trabitz

Lewis: New Science Head

Ernest Lewis was appointed Science Department Head recently after the retirement of Lawrence Perry. Upon retiring, Mr. Perry left a very important position open, and Lewis seems to be just the right person to fill the void.

Lewis has taught both chemistry and biology over the past 25 years. In these courses he has taught in all these areas and can relate to almost every student.

Lewis, who is the former advisor of the National Honor Society says he will now become a part-time administrator along with his teaching job. Mr. Lewis enjoys teaching and is very deserving of this new position. The student body and faculty wish him the best of luck. — Bette Sheldon

- Lower the maximum deposit which may be required.
- Require companies to give a copy of regulations to all customers who are asked to pay security deposits.
- Security deposits may not exceed three-twelfths of a year's estimated billings. A customer must be told whether a security deposit is required within five days after the request for service.
- Security deposits may be required from a new customer if positive responses are not provided to at least three of six standardized questions regarding employment, length of time at present address, lease or ownership of residence, bank accounts, credit references and other sources of income.
- Security deposits may be required from a prospective customer if the company has terminated the customer's utility service in the past two years for fraud or failure to make payments; if the customer has had a delinquent account for three consecutive months or two consecutive billing cycles; if the customer has an outstanding delinquent account.

Don Graff Carter's Plan Termed Honest

Credit the Carter administration with one budget-making plus: honesty. The spending plan as finally unveiled for 1980 is pretty much what advance word it was going to be.

There is no need to wait, however, to see what budget provisions are the most controversial. These have been apparent for months and the debate, both within and without Congress, is already underway on the projected increased in military expenditures and the cuts in public services.

WASHINGTON - Rep. Bill Cotter (D-Hartford) began the new session of the 96th Congress promising to reevaluate the Social Security financing system and offering an alternative to the steep tax increases many Americans felt in their first 1979 paycheck.

District Questions Use Of Revenue Sharing Fund

MANCHESTER—A letter sent by an attorney representing the Eighth District Board of Directors, first said he was "not privy to" the letter and suggested the matter be tabled and discussed later if the town directors felt the letter was not a proper one.

Then, the six-member subcommittee started discussing its next agenda item, proposed sewer rate changes.

Shortly after this discussion started, Bletchman spoke again about the revenue sharing fund and said it had been sent out in connection with an Eighth District Board of Directors meeting. Bletchman asked then that the matter of the town's use of revenue sharing funds be pursued by the district's attorney.

After the meeting, Bletchman offered no reason for why he had not mentioned the previous action that had led to LaBelle's sending the letter.

District officials have said in the past that revenue sharing funds received by the town should not be used by the Town Fire Department because the department only services part of the town.

The town, however, has consulted federal officials and been told that only the revenues from the Town Fire Department taxes are calculated when figuring the town's revenue sharing grant. Revenues from the Eighth District Fire Department are not included in the formula.

Thus, the town feels its use of the money is proper.

The changes in the sewer rates also were discussed.

The Eighth Utilities District will be affected by the change, which no longer provides discounts for larger users.

District residents had been lumped into one group, so the district had received the large-user discount in the past. The change, which is being phased in over two years, will increase the sewer charge for the district.

The district's three members of the subcommittee—Bletchman, Samuel Longest and Willard Marvin—offered no reason for why the proposed rates for 1979-80 are established.

The subcommittee will meet again Wednesday, Feb. 28 at 8 p.m. at the district firehouse.

Lease Being Drawn Up For Firehouse Museum

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — The Cheney Historical Commission is preparing a lease between the town and the Connecticut Firemen's Historical Society, a non-profit group, which will permit the society to take over the Pine Street firehouse and use it as a museum.

Thursday the commission voted unanimously at a public meeting to go into executive session to discuss terms and price of the lease with representatives of the society. Commissioner William FitzGerald moved for the executive session with approval from Town Manager Robert Weiss, who was at the meeting. FitzGerald said he acted on verbal advice from Assistant Town Attorney Kevin M. O'Brien.

In the public session which followed, FitzGerald announced that the terms and wording of the lease were discussed in the executive session. Items which will be discussed between the town attorney and the commission before it is approved.

The firehouse, which was abandoned in 1966, is the site the society favors for its depository of some 3,000 items which, at present, have no place for storage or display. According to Arthur Selick, society president, firefighting memorabilia is stored in basements and attics all over the state. There are many items that have also been either lost or taken out of state because there is no central place to collect them. He referred to a hand pump that came originally from New London which is now part of a collection in Scotland, Ark.

Using a scale model of the old hose and ladder Co. No. 1 firehouse built by Manchester Police Sgt. Larry Smith, Selick and commission members could jointly study the possibilities and physical advantages of the building to be used as a firemen's museum.

Selick said although the building is wooden, the installed sprinkler system is what makes it acceptable for museum use.

He told the commission the society has applied for a $50,000 grant which has been authorized by the State Commerce Department. He said it is reported that matching funds will be available.

FitzGerald said that applications for the $35,000 renovation consultant's job have been reviewed and final personal interviews will be scheduled beginning next week.

Commissioner Nathan Gostinelli said that a restaurant usage of the building was not in keeping with the historic district.

Weinstein Criticizes Penny

MANCHESTER — Richard Weinstein, Republican town chairman, has criticized Mayor Stephen Penny for recent remarks he made about the petition effort involving the Community Development Program.

Weinstein said he was disappointed in Penny's classification of those who signed the petitions as "disaffected persons."

The petition seeks a two-year ban on town participation in the federal Community Development Program.

The referendum petition exemplifies citizens exercising their constitutional rights, and I am shocked and surprised that the mayor would revert to name-calling," Weinstein said.

The newly elected GOP chairman said the petitioning effort crossed party lines just as it has divided the six Democratic directors.

"To suggest that the referendum movement was an effort sponsored by the Republican Town Committee is factually untrue. But, it is fair to say that the Republican Party does support the right of citizens to speak out and have their voices heard through referendum on HUD or any other issue," he said.

HUD is the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, which oversees the Community Development Program.

Weinstein also criticized the Democratic directors' proposal that they would stop funding for project if the referendum for the two-year ban is approved.

"Threats that projects will be terminated and not completed are inconsistent with previous statements made by the Democratic majority," he said.

The Democrats have said they will withdraw from the program if future requirements of the program are unreasonable.

"Therefore, the issue should be whether or not HUD demands are unreasonable and not the threat of incomplete projects," Weinstein said.

"It is like someone who submits to blackmail and is afraid to stop because the truth might be revealed." The Republican Town Committee is not afraid of the truth. It is the majority of the citizens of Manchester who long for the federal tax dollars from HUD with the inevitable attached strings, then the will of the majority should be heeded," Weinstein said.

Penny could not be reached for comment this morning.

Tough Road Meetings For Local Hoop Fives

By LEN AUSTRER
Herald Sports Editor

Putting an end to two streaks will be the quest of East Catholic and Manchester High in cage action tonight. Cheney Tech, too, will attempt to pull out of a downward slide.

The Eagles, coming off an impressive 81-55 win over dangerous Prince Tech, once again tries to stop South Catholic's recent domination of them in a big HCC battle at the University of Hartford at 8 o'clock. South has won the last nine meetings, including an 84-69 duke Jan. 5, and has taken a 20-18 edge in the series.

Manchester has dropped four out of its last five and is in danger of slipping out of the CCLL playoff picture. The Indians, 6-7 in league play and 6-8 overall, will try to right themselves against Hall High in West Hartford, also in an 8 o'clock start. Hall, too, is 6-7 in CCLL encounters and 8-7 overall. The Indians took the first meeting, 75-58, with the Warriors minus one starter due to vacation.

Cheney, which has lost two players — Steve Anderson and Mike Kenyon — as well as games, also has a road engagement at Portland High as it tries to right itself. The Beavers are 3-9 in the CCLL 3-11 overall, while Portland is 7-4, 8-5. The Highlanders annexed the first meeting, 60-46.

The area slate tonight lists 9-4, 11-4 Penney High at home receiving 1-22 Enfield High and 1-12 East Hartford High at 7-6, 7-7 Windham High in CCLL tilts. In the Central Valley Hebron and 7-5, 8-4 Coventry High is at 8-2, 10-2 Bacon Academy in Colchester in CCLL bouts.

East is 3-4 in the Hartford County Conference, 9-6 overall, and has all but secured the fourth and final CCLL playoff spot. What the Eagles want the most of all, though, is to cut the losing streak to the arch-rival Rebels.

One weapon East Coach Jim Penders hopes to use against South's 6-foot-10 John Pinone, who tossed in 32 points and had a then career-high 29 rebounds in the first meeting, is 3-foot-6's sophomore Russ Radant.

"Is he ready? We'll find out," Penders replied. "Russ has made great strides in the last month. He's done everything we've asked and he's had enough varsity time so he won't be in awe of Pinone."

"Maybe with him in there maybe the officials will see some of the off the ball stuff John does," added the Eagle second-year coach, who in the past has voiced displeasure with Pinone's physical work under the boards without heed. "With someone 6-foot-2, 6-foot-3, you don't see them go flying into Row when they get pushed."

Penders is concerned that Mark Pagan might not be up to 100 percent.

Hot-Shooting East Rolls over Aquinas

Canning 48 percent of its shots from the floor, East Catholic trounced St. Thomas Aquinas, 73-38, in HCC girls' basketball action last night in New Britain.

The triumph boosted the Eagles' conference mark to 6-2 and aggregate docket to 12-3. The Saints slip to 2-12 overall with the setback.

East raced to a 19-9 lead after the first quarter and continued its hot shooting in the second stanza, moving to a 38-23 halage at the half.

The Eagles put the contest away in the third canto as they outscored Aquinas, 17-6, to forge a 55-29 advantage leading into the stretch run.

Laurie Barry, Trish O'Connell and Peggy Laneri combined for 12 of the 18 assists credited to East while Sue Daley and Monica Murphy controlled the backboards with 24 rebounds. At the defensive end, Karen Lucier and Kathy Sheehan were standouts, forcing numerous turnovers.

East Coach Donna Ridel was pleased by her club's first half performance. "It was the first time in four games the team had executed well with both crisp passing and a tenacious defense," she remarked.

Murphy led all scorers for East with a career and school-record total of 29 points, hitting 14 times from the field and 1 for 6 from the charity stripe. Ellen Petkaitis damped in 10 hoops for 20 markers in the winning effort for East.

Kathy Bassola had 18 points to lead Aquinas.

East closes out its regular season with two big HCC matchups. The Eagles host Northwest Catholic Thursday night before visiting South Catholic next Saturday night in Hartford. South and Northwest currently share the HCC lead.

East Catholic (7-3) Lucier 2 0-0, Murphy 14 8-29, Daley 14 4-8, Laneri 1 5-7, Barry 2 0-4, O'Connell 1 0-2, Sheehan 0 0-0, Petkaitis 10 20, Johnson 1 0-2, Walsh 0 0-2, Cunningham 0 0-0, Harvey 0 0-0, Inagliore 0 0-0, Totals 33 7-19

Haas Shares Lead, Enjoys Excitement

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Jay Haas exuberance is refreshing.

The 25-year-old native of Belleville, Ill., shot a 4-under-par 68 at tough Pebble Beach Thursday to share the first-round lead in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Golf Tournament with Mike McCullough and Graham Marsh, who played the easier Cypress Point course.

While McCullough, 33, has not won a tournament in eight years, and Marsh, who is 35 and has won only once in three, kept their emotions to themselves. Haas fairly bubbled. "I like the excitement that goes with being a leader, especially in a tournament like the Crosby where so many people come out and everyone seems to know what's going on," Haas said. "I don't know if I can keep on top because there are three rounds left and anything can happen."

Tom Watson, who won five tournaments last year as well as Vardon Trophy honors, opened with a 72 at Cypress Point. He is trying to become the first player ever to win three consecutive Crosby titles.

U.S. Open champ Andy North was at 71, Arnold Palmer, who played with former President Gerald Ford, was at 74 and Lee Trevino was at 75.

Dandridge Standout, Bullets Down Spurs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bobby Dandridge is fast becoming the type of player that can turn a night of adversity into one of prosperity. And Thursday night he did just that in leading the injury-riddled Washington Bullets past the San Antonio Spurs.

"Bobby wanted it," Washington Coach Dick Motta said after Dandridge's 26 second-half and 36 overall points gave the Bullets a 123-112 victory. "He just took over. It was a helluva win for us. Very gratifying."

The Bullets got 23 points from a rookie Kevin Grevey, who suffered a leg cramp in the first quarter, and were forced to use an injured Wes Unseld more than they wanted to.

But Dandridge led the second-half drive to the victory, scoring 15 of the 32 Bullets points in the fourth quarter.

"Once we started coming back I thought it would be a shame to lose it," said Dandridge, who is finally being recognized as a star forward.

While Motta was reveling in the glory of the victory, San Antonio Coach Doug Moe was boiling — at the officials.

"To put it mildly, the San Antonio coach said, 'we got screwed.' If we've got a referee like that we'd win every game. It was one of the most one-sided refereed games I've ever seen. It was atrocious."

Elvin Hayes added 30 points for the Philadelphia over Chicago, the Bulls fourth straight defeat.

Bird Fouled Out But Club Winner

NEW YORK (UPI) — It had to happen sometime, and Thursday night, Larry Bird finally did it.

For the first time in his college career, the senior All-America, who has already been drafted by the Boston Celtics, fouled out. And he did it after missing the first end of a one-and-one free throw that left Indiana State down, 83-81, in 19 seconds left to play.

It looked like the second-ranked Swamores needed a miracle. And, according to Coach Bob Hodges, they got one as reserve forward Bob Heaton buried in a 40-foot shot at the buzzer to send the game into overtime and Indiana State went on to a 91-80 victory over New Mexico State.

Ironically, Hodges had said the day before that he'd rather be lucky than good.

"I have to be honest with 3 seconds to go and them shooting a free throw. I had to pray," said Hodges. "I think we just saw a miracle."

New Mexico State rallied from a 51-39 halftime deficit to take an 83-81 lead with 30 seconds left in regulation. After Bird fouled out with 37 points and 17 rebounds, Aggie Greg Webb missed a free throw with 3 seconds left and the Swamores rebounded to set up Heaton's bomb.

After exchanging baskets in the overtime, Brad Miley converted a three-point play with two minutes aiming to cut Indiana State on top for good. It took 30 seconds to get the shot.

Albert Slah Jones scored 25 points to lead New Mexico.

In other games involving top teams, No. 1 Notre Dame dominated Xavier, 86-57. No. 2 UCLA shaved Oregon, 63-58. Texas was upset by Arkansas, 68-58. Michigan State surprised seventh-ranked Ohio State, 84-72, in overtime. Illinois topped Minnesota, 67-57. Temple trounced Hofstra, 92-70. Weber State defeated Northwestern, 88-85.

Cauthen Woes Mount As Drought Continues

By MILTON RICHMAN NEW YORK (UPI) - The split took place last week in the Santa Anita parking lot.

Both parties went to great pains trying to convince everyone it wasn't a complete breakup, not a final one, anyway.

"Good luck, pal," Lenny Goodman said to Steve Cauthen, the 18-year-old jockey for whom he has had an honestly warm fatherly feeling from the first time they met two years ago.

"I wish you the best, too," the Kid told Goodman, who had been his agent since the fall of 1976 and had provided him with horses that earned more than $11 million.

Cauthen was Jockey of the Year in 1977 and didn't do badly at all the first half of last year either. Since then, though, he has ridden an almost incredible total of 109 straight losses.

Second in the junior men's division was Bobby Beauchamp, of Los Angeles, with 53.52 points and 18 ordinals.

TV Set Banished By Rhody Family

NARRAGANSETT, R.I. (UPI) — Like many other American families, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carter were concerned about the affect their television was having on their minds. So they did something about it.

The television set was banished to a closet last October. "There are many times now when this house is perfectly silent — you can hear it, and it's great," Mrs. Joan Carter said Wednesday.

She said the family's 19-inch television set was sent into exile when she and her husband were trying to discuss college plans with one of their eight children.

They were interrupted four times by disagreements over the channel selector.

The Carters said the drastic decision followed several months of concern over the values being beamed into their house.

Carter said a typical situation comedy "totally distorts the picture of family life — the father is always a complete boob and the mother is good and quiet and baking in the kitchen."

"Nobody is leading — everybody is doing his own thing," he said. "I just don't think our kids should be getting social messages through a box." Mrs. Carter agreed.

She said the decision wasn't met with applause. Six-year-old Charlie, the youngest, "fell down on the floor and cried."

Joanne, 12, stalked out of the room, slamming the door behind her, while a misty-eyed Michelle watched the set wheeled away.

Jane, a high school sophomore with a penchant for soap operas, wasn't sure how she'd cope. "I just couldn't imagine what it was going to be like without a TV — I thought it was coming to die or something," she said. "I really liked 'One Life to Live' and 'Happy Days'."

"Can you imagine no 'Happy Days'?" Michelle, a sixth grader, says she now reads a lot more, even on weekends. "Friends keeps her posted on the adventures of 'The Incredible Hulk.'"

"I minded it at the beginning, but now it seems like we never had it," she said of the silenced set. Even Mrs. Carter admits she had problem moments at first. "I didn't think I was going to live when the Patriots played the Cowboys."

The solution was radio. Mrs. Carter listened to the same news handling show at the same time. Carter, also a sports fan, said he now goes to University of Rhode Island football games in person and took the entire family to a neighbor's house for the Super Bowl. They had so much fun they stayed for dinner.

Mrs. Carter said her children are now rediscovering the family piano and even her husband, a busy business executive, is spending more time either outside or reading books and newspapers.

"The children can also sneak a peak at the television if they're at someone else's house."

"We just don't want our lives to depend on it," Mrs. Carter said.

Custody Battle Resolved

By KENNETH R. CLARK

Oh That Jet Lag!

Shunga Ali Hankerson is only 2 years old, but he's going to be a jet-setter without a peer from now on. He's the son of singer Gladys Knight and estranged husband Barry Hankerson — and the object of a bitter dispute in the couples divorce.

Hankerson lives in Detroit — Miss Knight in Las Vegas. Hankerson says since she moved to the casino capital she's refused to let him see the boy, Detroit Judge William Leo Cahalan settled the matter this week, ruling young Shunga be flown from Las Vegas to Detroit to visit his daddy — every other night.

Hankerson, the worst part is over — and I get to see my child in its every other night.

'Satellites' Unjam Cities

By United Press International
Governments are luckier than people when it comes to satellite cities. They can pick up and leave.

The intense overpopulation of many capital cities has led to the creation of "satellite" outskirt towns to take over legislative functions.

Planners hope by moving the capital, they can also encourage people with government jobs to move to less densely populated areas, and check the overcrowding.

The best known example is Brasilia. It was born from the interior jungles of Brazil and occupied as the new capital in 1960 to hasten national development and shift the population burden from Rio de Janeiro, until then the governmental and cultural heart of the country.

Already there are almost a million people in Brasilia, and almost as many complaints about the capital.

Another example is New Delhi. It was born from the interior of India and occupied as the new capital in 1911 to hasten national development and shift the population burden from Calcutta, until then the governmental and cultural heart of the country.

Families Seek Details On Offer by Dentists

MANCHESTER — Since the Town Health Department's announcement that town dentists have volunteered their services to low income families, 18 individuals and six families have contacted the health department for further information and application, according to Dr. Alice Turk, town health director.

She said Thursday that her staff would have to begin right away to set up a schedule for interviewing and issuing temporary identification cards until permanent ones can be printed.

The response comes after an announcement that 34 of the 50 dentists who are members of the Manchester Dental Society volunteered their services to low income families in town who do not qualify for welfare assistance, yet cannot afford family dental care at the usual fees.

Lists of participating dentists will be given to applicants with the issuance of their identification cards.

According to Phyllis Galich, head of the Manchester Public Health Nursing Association's geriatric program, this program is a boon to the elderly who are in desperate need of dental care, but whose incomes do not allow for the usual dental fees charged. She said there are about 10,000 individuals receiving Social Security Income checks sent to their homes within the 6640 postal zip code.

Further information about the dental care program may be obtained from the Town Health Department by calling 647-3173.
