Washington School The schools now provide English tutors for the students. Under federal law, however, if the number of students speaking one foreign language in a school numbers 20, the school board must provide a formal bi-lingual education program. Kennedy said

Kennedy said he is not sure of what the requirements include, but it would probably mean the addition of at least one teaching position. Kennedy said the local board would work with the state Department of Education in providing an adequate program should it become necessary. Leo Diana, principal at Nathan Hale School, said that it is important to get the foreign students to function in the classroom. The tutor is teaching them basic English for everyday use now.

The 15 students are divided into three groups for the tutoring for one hour a day. They spend the rest of the day in their regular classrooms. The Laotian students at Nathan Hale are at all grade levels and come from ive families, Diana said. He added that the children are highly motivated to learn.

The four new students at Nathan Hale are from a family which came here less than two weeks ago. The family was soonsored by St. Bridget Church. Another family of 11 is expected to arrive soon.

Special Education Suit May Cost Town $50,000

By SUSAN VAUGHN

Herald Reporter MANCHESTER - The settlement in a federal court class action suit is expected to have a budget impact of about $50,000 on the 1979-80 school budget, according to preliminary estimates compiled by school ad-

School Superintendent James P. Kennedy just received a copy of the consent decree from the state Department of Education for the U.S. District Court action. The suit brought against the City of Hartford by a special education student will have far-reaching effects for all the school districts in the state, Kennedy said. The preliminary interpretation by the local adm nistrators is that the total cost of placing children from the Department of Children and Youth Services (DCYS) non-committed program in residential settings will have to be borne now by the local school districts. Previously DCYS paid the room and board costs of such placements and the local board paid the educational costs.

Kennedy said the decree applies only to the non committed students, or those who are the responsibility of the parents, rather than committed students who are wards of the state. It appears that there are presently 10 Manchester students in this special category affected by the court action, Kennedy said. The preliminary estimates of the additional costs to the local board is $50,000. The present cost for the non-committed students is now a little over $100,000, he said. There are about 150 children statewide affected by the decree. The local cases will be reassessed by a planning and placement team to see if other placements are possi Kennedy said the school administration will seek further clarification from an attorney on the court action. Another effect on the proposed school budget may be a

had to decide whether continue spades and force a ruff or switch to diamonds. He played a spade, which was the correct defense, and leclarer had to ruff. If declarer now had routinely drawn trump, an accurate defense would defeat the contract. Declares trump outstanding in the club suit. If East ruffed the fourth round of clubs and played a spade, South would have to ruff with his last trump. East would then get
