Drinking Age

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Legislature's General Law Committee today voted to raise Connecticut's drinking age from 18 to 19. The measure now goes to the House.

The bill to raise the drinking age was approved on a 9-6 vote with one abstention.

Rep. Robert Jaekle, R-Stratford, led an unsuccessful fight by Fairfield County lawmakers to amend the bill.

Jaekle proposed raising the drinking age for the purchase of liquor to 19. But his amendment would have allowed 18-year-olds to continue to buy alcohol in restaurants and bars.

More Executions

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Secret Islamic tribunals today executed the former commander of Iran's air force and three other men, ignoring international criticism of the execution of former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveyda.

Tehran radio said Amir Hossein Rabii, air force commander up to the last day of the turmoil that overthrew the Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar, confessed to his crimes and was shot by a firing squad, the radio said.

Others sentenced and executed in Tehran were Manouchehr Azmoon, former minister of religious endowments; Gen. Ali Mohammed Khajenoori, and a police officer identified only as "Belali."

Risk Reduced

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The risk of cancer-causing iodine contamination in the aftermath of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident has been greatly reduced, federal officials say.

But for the 11th consecutive day, Gov. Dick Thornburgh today warned pregnant women and little children to stay clear of a five-mile radius of the stricken nuclear power plant as a precaution.

In a brief statement Sunday night, the NRC said, "conditions at the reactor continue to improve." Thornburgh has said he will not lift the advisory for pregnant women and preschool children until the danger has completely passed.

Closer Look

MILLIGAN, Fla. (UPI) — Safety experts said they would venture into a northwest Florida swamp today for their first close-up examination of a freight train wreck that exploded in fire and noxious fumes Sunday and sent at least 5,000 rural residents to fleeing their homes. Despite the havoc, only one minor injury was reported in the accident.

The cause of the latest derailment on the ill-fated Louisville & Nashville Railroad — described by a federal official last year as "the worst railroad we know of" — will not be determined until lethal gases leaking from the jumbled tank cars can be shut off.

Strike Ending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A four-hour Pan American World Airways strike ended in a settlement, and negotiators have scheduled new talks in the Teamsters strike-lockout which entered its ninth day today.

But a third strike shutting down United Airlines, the nation's largest commercial air carrier, is deadlocked and the line's officials have stopped taking reservations through June 7.

The Teamsters and the trucking industry have agreed to resume negotiations today.

Lack of progress in the strike had the potential of causing widespread plant closings and layoffs this week.

MCC Rebounds from Fire

This is what was left Saturday afternoon of the Student Center building at Manchester Community College. The center, which also housed offices, the book store, and facilities for the food management program, was destroyed by an early morning fire. (Herald photo by Strempler)

MANCHESTER — Manchester Community College was bouncing back quickly this morning with temporary facilities found for all the activities housed in the Student Center which burned to the ground early Saturday morning.

The college is already planning to ask the State Legislature for $800,000 to $1 million for what college President Ronald H. Denison called a "lowcost, quick-build" structure to replace the burned building in the center of the main campus off Bidwell Street. Denison said this morning the new structure could be up by the fall semester.

"The rebuilding of the Student Center is of paramount importance," Denison said, but the biggest problem logistically today was feeding all the students. All of the college's eating facilities, including a snack bar and vending machines, kitchen and dining room used by the Food Service Management classes were housed in the Student Center. Also in the building were the student activities office, student press and student seats offices, nurse's office and veterans' administration offices, student lounge and eating area and the college book store.

Denison placed the value on the building at $720,000, with an additional $200,000 in equipment, all destroyed in about a half-hour by the raging fire which was fanned by 40-mile-per-hour winds.

The college auditorium will serve as cafeteria and student lounge. Free coffee and doughnuts were given out to students today. Generis Caterers will provide the food service on campus starting Tuesday, Denison said.

There was no disruption in classes for the Hotel and Food Service and the cook and baker classes. All the classroom instruction for those courses will be in the Hartford Road building and the "on-hands" instruction will most likely be moved to the Regional Occupational Center kitchen, located on a corner of the campus.

Other possibilities for the cooking facilities mentioned have been the Senior Citizens Center in Manchester and the High Street School in Glastonbury. A spokeswoman for the Glastonbury school system, however, laughed at the idea of the use of the empty school because there is no furniture in the building and the school is geared for kindergarten through Grade 3 students.

Fred A. Ramey Jr., director of the Business Careers Division of the college, said that faculty members met both Saturday and Sunday afternoons to re-schedule and re-locate classes to accommodate the food service group.

Ramey said it is likely that some of the lunches and dinners that the Food Service students had planned for the remainder of the school year can still be held in the ROTC building, thanks to the cooperation of Norman Fendell, director of the ROTC.

The offices will be relocated in either the faculty office or administration buildings for now, Denison said. Portable classrooms or trailers will be sought by MCC to house most of the offices.

"Losing the 13,000 square feet knocks us down considerably," Denison said. "It makes an already tight situation even more difficult," noting there are only 30 square feet per student on the temporary campus now. Denison said he hopes the effect of the fire will be that it will "impact positively on speeding up" the process of building a permanent campus. The first building for the permanent campus is already in the planning stages by architects, but is not scheduled for opening until 1982.

Denison praised the work of the Town Fire Department which responded with 65 firefighters from five companies including off-duty and volunteers.

The cause of the fire was still under investigation by the state fire marshal's office, but indications were that it was caused by faulty electrical wiring.

Flames, Wind-Blown Smoke Erased Building from View

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — The low gray barracks-type Student Center building, normally seen from the main road into Manchester Community College was enveloped in a huge cloud of smoke and mist during the hour just before dawn Saturday.

The 13,000-square-foot temporary structure which was the center of many college activities was consumed by a raging fire in about a half hour. Flames soared 30 feet in the air and were fanned by 40- to 50-mile-per-hour winds which kept 65 firefighters from all five Town of Manchester. Fire Department companies battling hard.

The call to the fire department from campus security guard Donald Price was received at 4:23 a.m. By 5 a.m., the flames were all but dispersed, and all that was left standing were segments of the four walls which firefighters had to keep pulling down and soaking with high power hoses.

Besides battling the high winds and the extreme heat from the fire, the firefighters had to contend with near freezing temperatures. Icicles formed on the clothes of firefighters and witnesses and on the tiny trees left standing in front of the burned out building.

The sun rising over the wooded knoll just northeast of the Student Center lent an eerie feeling to the mass of charred rubble. A blackened beam hung precariously over the Student Center sign at the former entrance and posters for the upcoming student senate elections blew in the wind, untouched by the fire three feet away. The sidewalks were rivers with water up to the curbing.

It was fortunate that the strong wind from the southwest which blew the fire across the entire building was blowing away from the rest of the similarly constructed buildings.

Several of the fire and college officials at the scene of the fire repeated the same thought: "If the wind had been going the other way, the whole campus would have gone."

John V. Gannon Jr., associate dean of student affairs, stood in his stocking hat huddled against the library building shaking his head, looked at the burning building, saying, "Why this one?" He mentioned the new skis stored in the center and recently bought by the ski club, some of which had never been used, and "they were not insured," he added. However, he said he was most concerned about the food services provided in the Student Center.

College president Ronald H. Denison and Dean of Administrative Affairs Herbert Bandes also surveyed the dismal scene at 5 a.m., trying to contemplate what it would mean for the already overcrowded campus. They were able to give an estimate of the damages at that early moment, however. Bandes said it would cost about $1 million to replace the Student Center, which is the amount the college will ask from the State Legislature for another temporary structure.

Other town officials, including

Town Manager Robert Weiss and Mayor Stephen Penny, Police Chief Robert Lannan and Patrol Captain Henry Minor were also on hand for the fire.

Fire officials said the extreme heat from the fire prevented them from entering the building when they arrived. Upon arrival, the alarm calling in all off-duty and volunteer firefighters was sounded. The alarm was sounded again once grass fires started as far away as a half mile from the flying embers.

All available firefighting equipment from companies 1, 2, 4 and 5 was used at the scene. Co. 3 and the service vehicle were used to fight the small grass fires. The Eighth District Fire Department was on standby at the town's central firehouse.

Two-and-a-half inch hoses were used and there was sufficient water available at the campus to handle the fire, according to Town Fire Chief John Rivoso.

The cause of the fire has not been determined, Rivoso said. The state fire marshal's office which was called in to investigate indicated it may have begun from overloaded electrical wiring.

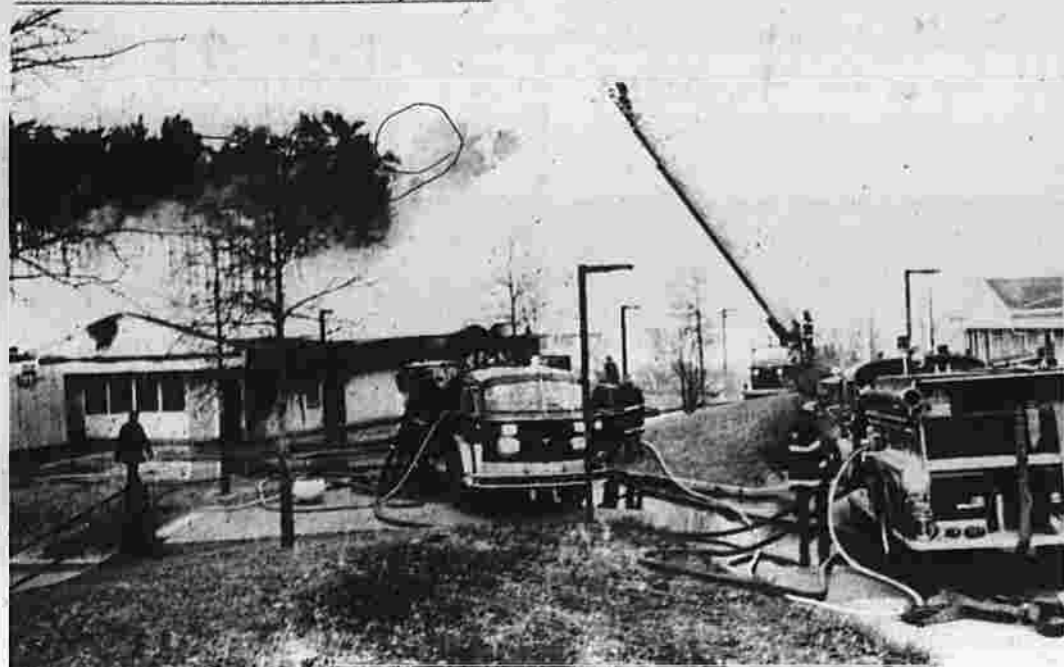

Rivoso said today he will be investigating the reason for a 5- to 10-minute delay in the fire department getting a call. He said the heat detectors in the building should have indicated to the guard that there was something wrong. The clocks in the building stopped at 4:12 a.m. and the alarm was not called in until 4:23 a.m.

There was no sprinkler system in the Student Center building.

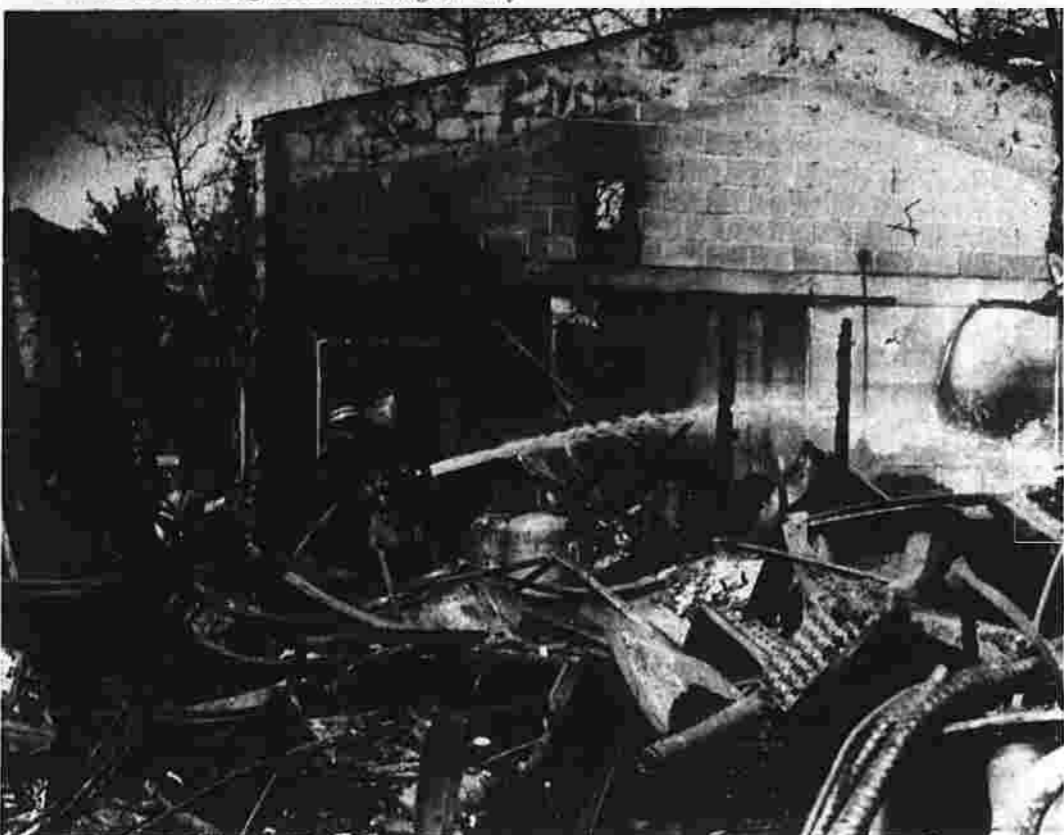

A wind-blown fire had gained a lot of headway by the time firefighters arrived at Manchester Community College Saturday morning. Fortunately the wind was blowing away from the mass of temporary buildings that make up the campus, and all were saved except the Student Center, which was destroyed. (Herald photo by Burbank)

Neighbors Help Fight Bolton Fire

BOLTON — Residents working with volunteer firemen fought a field fire for more than two hours Saturday afternoon...

The 23 firemen who responded to the call were assisted by about 30 residents from nearby Converse Road, Shady Lane, and Fiora Road.

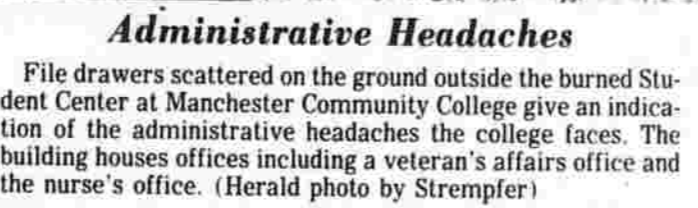

James Preuss, fire chief, said most of the firemen, working against the wind, fought the fire from Fiora Road and most of the residents, and a few firemen, fought it from Converse Road.

Preuss said, "It was an example of neighbors joining together in a time of need. Preuss said the cause of the fire is unknown."

The area surrounding the fire site is thickly settled but Preuss said that about 200 feet from the homes and the homes were not considered in danger as the fire was kept under control.

Planning, Building Ends With Center Dedication

By SUSAN VAUGHN Herald Reporter: MANCHESTER — More than five years of planning, regrouping and building concluded Sunday afternoon with the rededication of the shiny new Washington School and West Side Rec addition amidst a crowd of about 300 persons.

Students, parents, present and former teachers and principals, old and new residents of the West Side and community leaders gathered in the new gymnasium to praise the new facilities which will be used in the true sense of the "community school" concept.

Paul Greenberg, who led the building efforts during his long tenure as chairman of the Board of Education's building and sites committee, spoke of the "uniqueness and timeliness" of the shared use facilities. He said they will provide maximum use at minimum cost in a time of declining enrollments, increasing building costs and taxpayers' revolts.

Greenberg credited many persons for their roles in making the new $11.6 million school and recreation center a reality. Marilyn McCann, chairwoman of the dedication committee, and the other parents on the citizens committee who met for many months planning the additions and renovations were praised by Greenberg.

Council Eyes In Sewer Budget

VERNON — The budget for the sewage treatment plant, cut from a request of $1,129,662 to a recommendation by Mayor Frank McCoy, of $804,808, will be reviewed for Town Council action tonight at 7 in the Memorial Building.

The mayor said he didn't allow an increase in the sewage treatment plant budget because he feels that any further increase in sewer user charges cannot be tolerated "and must not occur."

The plant budget is supported by imposing sewer user charges on those residents serviced by the plant and by some out-of-town users. The charges were increased to cover the costs of running the new $16 million plant. The plant isn't in total operation but is expected to be by July.

The mayor eliminated requests for additional workers on the three shifts as it is felt that the plant needs round-the-clock supervision. He also made cuts in requests for some operating supplies and completely deleted requests for pumping station and several pieces of additional equipment in the amount of $6,200. He also reduced the utilities portion of the budget from a request of $384,700 to $380,000.

Although salaries for all departments will be considered separately, the mayor also proposes cuts in salary requests for those not working under union contracts. The total request was for $424,217. The mayor's recommendation is $273,708.

Also to be reviewed tonight is the new Capital Improvements budget for which the mayor has recommended $1,000. A capital improvements budget, prepared by former Town Planner John Lorranger, will be updated by the new planner.

The public works budget, also to be reviewed, is broken down into several categories. Supervision, with $153,927 requested and $96,899 recommended by the mayor; general maintenance, $596,297 requested and $334,873 recommended; sidewalks and curbs, $35,000 requested, $17,000 recommended; bridges, $35,760, $10,500 recommended; culverts and storm sewers, $112,000 requested and $40,000 recommended; equipment maintenance and repair, $187,758 and $143,833 recommended; snow removal, $114,100 and $92,000 recommended; refuse collection and disposal, $280,477 requested and $256,000 recommended; building inspection, $68,902 and $58,796 recommended; maintenance of general government buildings, $235,548 requested and $164,973 recommended; tree warden, $1,150 and $2,500 recommended.

85 Permits Issued: MANCHESTER — The town's Building Department issued 85 building permits during the month of March. The estimated total cost of the project is $2,294,601. The permits issued included four for single-family dwellings and two for two-family dwellings.

4 reasons why Connecticut should study Michigan's experience with a bottle bill.

Michigan is the only other urban, industrialized state to enact a bottle bill. It took effect last Fall. Here's what happened in Michigan since then.

- 1 Beer prices up 19%.
2 16-oz. soft drink prices up 20%.
3 Large size prices up 40%.
4 Further increases expected.

Postponing the effective date of Connecticut's bottle bill will give us a chance to avoid such inflationary price rises.

Here in Connecticut, a bottle bill is scheduled to take effect next January 1st. It mandates a five cent deposit on every can and bottle of beer or soft drinks sold in our state.

The Connecticut AFL/CIO agrees that postponement and study of what's happening in Michigan are sound ideas. So does the Connecticut bottling industry.
